When the lord chiefe baron had finished this discourse of the manner of the earles death, with the circumstances, and had satisfied the court and auditorie concerning the qualitie of the prison where the earle had remained, sir Christopher Hatton knight hir maiesties vicechamberlaine, who (as it séemed) had béene specially imploied by hir maiestie among others of hir priuie councell in the loking into and examining of the treasons aforesaid, aswell in the person of the earle as of others, and at the time of the earles commitment from his house in S. Martins to the Tower of London, sent vnto him from hir maiestie to put the earle in mind of hir maiesties manifold graces and fauors in former times conferred vpon him, proceeding from the spring of hir maiesties princelie and bountifull nature, and not of his deseruings, and to aduise him to deliuer the truth of the matters so clearelie appearing against him, either by his letters priuatlie to hir maiestie, or by speech to maister vicechamberlaine, who signified also vnto him, that if he would determine to take that course, he should not onlie not be committed to the Tower, but should find grace & fauor at hir maiesties hands, in the mitigation of such punishment as the law might late vpon him.

Sir Christopher Hatton reuealeth to the court and auditorie the gratious dealing of hir maiestie with the said earle, no such fauour deserning.

*To this petition let all true harted Englishmen late, Amen.

And here M. vicechamberlaine repeated at length the effect of hir maiesties message at that time sent to the earle, begining first with the remembrance of his practise vndertaken for the conueieng awaie of the Scotish quéene about the time of the last rebellion (as hath béene declared in the beginning of this tract) and that he confessing the offense being capitall, hir maiestie neuertheless was pleased to alter the course of his triall by the iustice of hir lawes, and suffered the same to receiue a slight and easie punishment by waie of mulct or fine of fiue thousand marks, whereof before this his imprisonment (as it is credible reported) there was not one penie paid, or his land touched with anie extent for the paiment thereof, which offense was by hir maiestie not onelie most gratiouslie forgiuen, but also most christianlie forgotten, receiuing him not long after to the place of honor that his ancestours had inioied for manie yeares before him, and gaue him such entrance into hir princelie fauour and good opinion, that no man of his qualitie receiued greater countenance and comfort at hir maiesties hands than he; insomuch that in all exercises of recreation, vsed by hir maiestie, the earle was alwaies called to be one: and whensoeuer hir maiestie shewed hir selfe abroad in publike, she gaue to him the honor of the best and highest seruices about hir person, more often than to all the noble men of the court.

The arrinall and intertainment of the deputies for the estates of the low countries.

The names of the said deputies for the estates.

The quéenes maiestie mitigateth the punishment which the law should haue awarded against the earle.

The quéenes maiesties nature is to saue hir enimies, O that they could change their nature, and loue hir highnesse again!

But the remembrance of these most gratious and more more than extraordinarie fauours and benefits receiued, nor the hope giuen vnto him by maister vicechamberlaine of hir maiesties disposition of mercie towards him, nor the consideration of the depth and weight of his treasons against hir maiestie, hir estate, hir crowne and dignitie, with the danger thereby like to fall vpon him by the course of hir highnes lawes, to the vtter ruine and subuersion of him and his house (standing now at hir maiesties mercie) could once moue his heart to that naturall and dutifull care of hir maiesties safetie that he ought to haue borne towards hir, and the most worthilie had merited at his hands, or anie remorse or compassion of himselfe and his posteritie: but resting vpon termes of his innocencie, hauing (as you maie perceiue) conueied awaie all those that he thought could or would anie waie accuse him, he made choise rather to go to the Tower, abide the hazard of hir maiesties high indignation, and the extremitie of the law for his offenses.

The earle standeth vpon termes of his innocencie, all the world seeing cause to the contrarie.

All which was a notable augur of his fall, and that God by his iust iudgement had for his sinnes and ingratitude taken from him his spirit of grace, and deliuered him ouer to the enimie of his soule, who brought him to that most dreadfull & horrible end, whereunto he is come: * from the which, God of his mercie defend all christian people, and preserue the quenes maiestie from the treasons of hir subiects, that she maie liue in all happinesse, to see the ruine of hir enimies abroad and at home, and that she, and we hir true and louing subiects, maie be alwaies thankfull to God for all his blessings bestowed vpon vs by hir, the onlie mainteiner of his holie gospell among vs.

*To this petition let all true harted Englishmen saie, Amen.

The arriuall and intertainment of the deputies for the estates of the low countries.

On the six & twentith of June arriued at London deputies for the estates of the netherlands, or low countries, who were lodged about the Tower street, & had their diet for the time of their abode here, verie worshipfullie appointed (all at the charges of hir maiestie) in the Clothworkers hall in Pinchenlane, nere to the said Tower street. These on the nine & twentith of June, being the feast of the apostles Peter & Paule repaired to the court, then at Greenewich, where by vertue of their commissions from the vnited countries, they presented to hir maiestie the souereingtie of those countries, to wit of Brabant, but the commission (for the siege) of Antuerpe not full authorised, of Guelder, of Flanders, of Holland, of Zeland, of Vtrecht, and of Friseland. For Brabant, Jaques de Grise great bailie of Bruges councellour of the Franks. For Guelder, Rutger of Barsold, gentleman. For Flanders, Noell de Garsie lord of Schonewalle. For Holland, John Wanderdoest, lord of Mortwicke, Iosse de Menin pensionarie of Dordreght, John of old Barneuelt pensionarie of Rotradame, and D. Francis Paolso. For Zeland, Jacob Dales councellor and pensionarie of Tergoest. For Vtrecht, Paulus Buis doctor of the lawes. For Friseland, I. Fritzma, gentleman: H. Ansona president of Friseland: and Lads Jangema, gentleman. All these falling on their knees to fore hir maiestie, and so remaining for a long space, one of them, to wit, Iosse de Menin councellor and pensionarie of Dordreght, one of the commissioners for Holland, made to hir maiestie this oration in French as followeth.

The names of the said deputies for the states.

The said deputies oration in French to hir maiestie at Greenwich.

MAdame, les estats des prouinces vnies des pais bas, remercient treshumblement vostre maiesté de la bonné affection & faueur, quel à pleu de monstrer audits pais en leur necessites, & confermer per tant de tesmoignaiges euidens; & encores dernierement, quand apres l'execrable assasmat comme en la personne de feu monsir le prince d'Orenges, il à pleu a vostre maiesté faire entendre audits estats per son ambassadeur le sire Dauison, le soing qu'icelle auoit a nostre defense & obseruation, & aussy par le sire de Grise, le grand desplaisir que vostre maiesté auoit conceu, de voir l'esdits estats frustres de l'esperance quelle auoient fondeé sur le traicte de France. Mais que le soin que vostre maiesté a tousiours en de nostre bien & conseruation n'estoit pour cela en rien diminué, aine quel s'augmentoit, plustost a mesure quel la necessité de nos affaires le requiert, dont ledits pais en general, & chacun d'eulx en particulier demeurerent perpetuellement tresobliges a vostre maiesté, pour le recognoistre auec tout fidelité & obeisance.

Et comme ledits estats considerent Madame, que depues le deces endit sire prince d'Orenges, ils ont faict perte de plusieurs de leurs places & bonne villes; & que pour la conseruation desdits pais il leur est besoing d'vng prince & sire souuerain, qui les puisse garentir & defendre contre la tyranné & inique oppression des Espaignols & leurs adherés, qui s'efforcent de plus en plus par leurs sinistres armes & tous aultres moyens, de destruire & ruiner lesdits pais, de fonds en comble & reduire ce pouure peuple en vne seruitude perpetuelié, pire que des Indies souls l'insupportable ioug de la detestable inquisition d'Espaigne. Considerans aussy que les corps des villes & communaultes desdits pais ont vne fermé afience, que vostre maiesté ne les vouldra veoir perir au gre de leurs ennemys, qui leur font ceste lõgue & cruelle guerre, a toute oultrance laquelle les estats desdits pais bas (ensuiuant leur deuoir & obligation quels ont a leurs bourgois & ycitogens) ont estes constraincts de soustenir, repoulser, & destourner, pour la tyranné & seruitude manifest qu'on taschat d'introduire & imposer au pouure peuple, & pour conseruer leur liberté, droits, priuileges, & franchises, auec l'exercise de la vray religion chrestienné, dont vostre maiesté porte a bon droit le tiltre de protectrice & defenderesse, contre laquelle lesdits ennemys & leurs associes, ont & faict tant de ligues, dresse tant de cauteleuzes, embushes, & trahisons, & ne cessent encore tout les iours de praticquer & machiner contre la personne de vostre maiesté, & au preiudice du reque & transquillite de ses royaulmes & estats, laquelle le bon Dieu a preserue iusques á present, pour le bien de la chrestienté, & sustentation de ses eglises.

Sy est ce Madame, que pour ces causes, & raisons, & aultres bonnes considerations, lesdits estats ont prins par ensemble vne bonné & fermé resolution, de prendre leurs recours a vostre maiesté, veu que cest vne chose ordinaire a tous peuples & nations oppressées, de recourir en leurs calamites & oppressions, pour support & faueur contre leurs ennemys, aulx roys & princes voisme, & singulierement a ceulx qui sont douez a magnanimité, pieté, iustice, & aultres vertus royalles, & a cest effect nous ont lesdits estats depute vers vostre maiesté, pour presenter a icelle la principaulté, souuerainté, & iuste dominatiõ desdits prouinces, soubs certaines bonnes & equitables condicions, concernantes principallement la conseruation de l'exercise de la religion reformée, & de leurs ancienne priuileges, libertes, franchises & vsances, & l'administration du faict de la guerre, police, & iustice esdits pais.

Et combien que lesdits pais ayent beaucoup souffert par ces longues & continuelles guerres, & que l'ennemy se soit empare de plusieurs villes & places fortes esdits pais, toutes fois, oultre ce qu'es pais de Brabant, Gueldre, Flandre, Malins, & Oueriſſel, ſe mainteinent encores maintes bonnes villes & places contre l'effort de l'ennemy, ſy eſt ce que les pais d'Holland, Zeeland, Vtrecht, & Friſe ſont encores, graces a Dieu, en leur entier, ou il y a beaucoup de grandes & fortes villes, & places belles, riuieres, profondes, ports & haures de mer, deſquelles voſtre maieſté & ſes ſucceſſeurs pourront tirer pluſieurs bons ſeruices, fruicts, & commodites dont il n'eſt de faire yci plus long recit. Seulement que ceſte cy entre aultres merite bien vne conſideration ſpeciale que la coniunction deſdits pais d'Holland, Zeeland, Friſe, & des villes de l'Eſcluze, & Oſteynd en Flādres auec les royaulmes de voſtre maieſté, emporte quant & ſoy l'empire abſolut de la grand mer occeane, & par conſequence vne aſſeurance & felicité perpetuelle pour les ſubiects de voſtre ſereniſſime maieſté. La quelle nous ſupplions treſhūblemēt que ſon bon plaiſir ſoit de nous accorder leſdits points ou conditions, & ce en ſuiuant, vouloir accepter pour ſoy & ſes ſucceſſeurs legittimes en la couronne d'Angleterre protecteurs de la religion reformée, la iuſtice principaute & ſeigneurie ſouueraine deſdits pais & conſequemment du recepuoir les peuples deſdits pais, comme vous treſhumbles & treſobeiſſants ſubiects ſoubs la protection & ſauuegarde perpetuelle de voſtre maieſté, peuples certeinement autant fidelles, aymant leurs princes & ſeigneurs (a parler & ſans iactance) que nul aultre de la chreſtienté.

Ce faiſant Madame, vous conſerueres tant de belles egliſes, qu'il a pleu a Dieu en ce dernier temps aſſembler eſdits pais a preſent en beaucoup de lieux fort affliges, & eſbranles & deliureres leſdits pais & peuples (nagueres auant l'inique maiſon des Eſpaignols) tant riches & floriſſans, pour la grande commodité de la mer, ports, haures, riuieres, traffiqs, & manifactures dont ils ſont doues de nature. Vous les deliureres (dis ie Madame) de ruine & perpetuelle ſeruitude de corps & ame, qui ſera vng œuure vrayement roial & treſexcellent, agreable a Dieu, profitable a toute chreſtienté, digne de louange immortelle, coreſpondant a la magnanimité & vertus heroicques de voſtre maieſté, & conioinct auec l'aſſeurance & proſperites des royalmes & ſubiects d'icelle. Et ſurce preſentons a voſtre maieſté leſdits articles ou conditions, en reuerence, prians le grand Roy des roys de preſeruer voſtre maieſté de ſes ennemys, l'accroiſtre en gloire & felicité, & l'auoir en ſa ſeinte garde à perpetuité.

Faict par Ioſſe de Menin, concelier & penſionaire de Derdreght. An. 1585. 29 de Iune, A Greenwich.

The foreſaid oration in Engliſh.

MAdam, the ſtates of the vnited prouinces of the low countries moſt humblie thanke your maieſtie for the good affection & fauor, which it pleaſed you to ſhew to the ſaid countries in their neceſſitie, & to confirme the ſame with ſo manie euident teſtimonies; & that laſtlie, after the execrable aſſault committed vpon the perſon of the late prince of Orange, at what time it pleaſed your maieſtie to let the ſaid ſtates vnderſtand by your ambaſſador maiſter Dauiſon, what care you had of our defenſe and preſeruation, and alſo by ſegneur de Criſt, the great diſpleaſure which your maieſtie conceiued, to ſée the ſtates fruſtrated of the hope which they had founded vpon the treatie of France. But ſince the care which your maieſtie hath alwaies had ouer our good and conſeruation is not thereby anie whit diminiſhed, but hath more plentifullie increaſed, according as the neceſſitie of our affaires required; for which the ſaid countrie in generall, and euerie of vs in particular remaine perpetuallie bound to your maieſtie, and acknowledge the ſame with all fidelitie and obeiſance.

The queenes maieſties moſt gratious fauor acknowledged.

And as the ſaid ſtates (Madam) do conſider that ſince the deceaſe of the prince of Orange they haue ſuſteined the loſſe of diuerſe of their holds and good townes; and that for the preſeruation of the ſaid countrie it is needfull for them to haue a prince and ſouereigne ruler, which may warrant and defend them againſt the tyrannie and vniuſt oppreſſion of the Spaniards and their adherents, which daillie more and more inforce themſelues by their ſiniſter power and all other meanes to deſtroie and ouerthrow the ſaid countries, and reduce this poore people in perpetuall ſeruitude, worſe than that of the Indians vnder the importable yoke of the deteſtable inquiſition of Spaine. Conſidering alſo that the bodie of the townes and communalties of the aforeſaid countries haue a firme hope, that your maieſtie will not ſée them periſh according to the deſire of their enimies, which make this long and cruell warre, all which outrages the ſtates of the ſaid low countries (following the diligence and band which they owe to their burgeſſes and citizens) are to ſuſteine, repell, and to turne from them, by reaſon of the manifeſt tyrannie & ſeruitude which the Spaniards attempt to bring in & to laie vpon the poore people) thereby to preſerue their liberties, rights, priuileges, and franchiſes, with the exerciſe of the true chriſtian religion, whereof your maieſtie by good right carrieth the title of protectrice and defendreſſe, againſt which the ſaid enimies and their aſſociats alreadie haue and ſtill do make manie leagues, deuiſe manie ſubtilties, treaſons, and ambuſhes, not ceaſing daillie to practiſe and imagine them againſt the perſon of your maieſtie, and to the preiudice of the reſt of your realme and ſtates, whome the good God hath preſerued vntill this preſent, for the wealth of the chriſtians, and ſuſtentation of their churches.

The diſtreſſed ſtate of the low countries after the death of the prince of Orange.

The hope that the low countrie people haue in hir highnes helpe.

Spaniſh diſloiall mynde vnpayable.

Wherefore (Madam) it is ſo, that for theſe cauſes, reaſons, & other conſiderations, the ſaid ſtates haue aſſembled and concluded vpon a good and firme reſolution to haue recourſe vnto your maieſtie, ſith it is an ordinarie matter amongſt all people and oppreſſed nations, in their calamities and oppreſſions to craue ſupport and fauour againſt their enimies, of kings and princes neere vnto them, but eſpeciallie of thoſe who be indued with magnanimitie, pietie, iuſtice, and other princelie vertues, to which effect the ſtates haue appointed vs to come vnto your maieſtie to preſent vnto the ſame the principalitie, ſouereignitie, and iuſt gouernment of the ſaid prouinces vnder certeine good and equall conditions, chieflie concerning the preſeruation of the exerciſe of the reformed religion, and of the ancient priuileges, liberties, franchiſes, and cuſtoms, and part of the adminiſtration of the affaires, policie, and iuſtice of the warres in the ſaid countrie.

The cauſe whie the deputies for the ſtates came into England, and their ſute vnto hir highneſſe expreſſed.

The gouernment & principalitie of the low countries preſented to the queenes maieſtie.

And although that theſe countries haue ſuſteined much hurt by theſe long and continuall warres, and that the enimie hath taken diuers ſtrong places and forts in the ſame countries: yet there is beſides the ſame in the countries of Brabant, Gelderland, Flanders, Malmes, & Dueriet, manie good townes and places, which defend themſelues againſt the force of the enimie, and the countries of Holland, Zeland, Vtricht, and Friſe be yet (thanks be to God) entire and whole: in which there be manie great and ſtrong townes and places, faire riuers, and déepe ports and hauens of the ſea, out of which your maieſtie and your ſucceſſors may receiue diuers good ſeruices, fruits, and commodities, whereof it is néedleſſe here to make anie long recitall. Dwelle this Manie good townes and places yet remaining in the low countries defenſible againſt the enimie.

The writing of the low countries to the realmes of England, &c: how beneficiall.

Protection of the reformed religion a part of their ſute.

The loialtie and faithfulneſſe of the low countrie people commended.

Benefits like to inſue vpon the ſaid protection vndertaken of hir highneſſe.

The ſaid deputies doo preſent certeine articles and conditions to hir maieſtie concerning their ſute.

Tukeld and weblie hanged for publiſhing of ſeditious bookes.

Five or rather ſix people ſlain by the fall of a wall in London neere vnto Downegate.

this amongst other matters deserueth good and especiall consideration, that the vniting of those countries of Holland, Zeland, Frise, and the townes of Sluze and Ostend in Flanders, vnto the realmes of your maiestie importeth so much as the absolute gouernement of the great ocean sea, and by consequence, an assurance and perpetuall felicitie for the subiects of your worthie maiestie. Which we most humblie beseech, that it will please the same to condescend vnto vs in the said points and conditions, and in that which followeth, which is, that you will for you and your lawfull successors in the crowne of England be protectors of the reformed religion, as the principall iusticer and soueregne gouernor of the said countries: and consequentlie to receiue the people of the same, as your most humble and most obedient subiects vnder the protection and continuall safegard of your maiestie; they being a people assuredlie so faithfull and louing to their princes and lords (be it spoken without vaunting) as anie other nation is throughout christendome.

In doing whereof (Madam) you shall preserue manie goodlie churches, which it hath pleased God to assemble in these latter times in the same countries, at this present in manie places grieuouslie afflicted, and you shall deliuer the same countrie and people (of late before the vniust deeds of the house of Spaine) verie rich and flourishing, through the great commoditie of the sea, ports, hauens, riuers, trafike, and merchandize, whereof they be naturallie indued. You shall I saie (Madam) deliuer them from ruine and perpetuall bondage of bodie and soule, being a worke right roiall and most magnificent, acceptable to God, profitable to all christiantie, worthie immortall commendation, answerable to the magnanimitie, and heroicall vertues of your maiestie, and ioined with the assurance and prosperitie of your dominions and subiects. Wherevpon we present vnto your maiestie the said articles and conditions, reuerentlie praieng the King of kings to preserue your maiestie from your enimies, to increase your glorie and felicitie, and for euer to keepe you in his holie protection.

¶ This oration ended and the summe thereof considered, it pleased the quéenes maiestie, by direction of hir wise and politike councell, to incline hir hart (alwaies pitifull and replenished with commiseration) to the ease and releefe of the said oppressed people. And bicause hir owne subiects should not be vtterlie vnacquainted with hir highnesse doings in that case, there was published by authoritie a booke thereof as in due place hereafter followeth.

On sundaie the fourth of Julie, Charles lord Howard, late lord chamberleine was made lord admerall, and Henrie lord Hunsdon was made lord chamberleine of houshold. On the fift date of Julie Thomas Awfeld a seminarie priest, and Thomas Weblie diar, were arreigned at the sessions hall in the Old bailie, found guiltie, condemned, and had iudgement as fellons to be hanged: for publishing of bookes conteining false, seditious, and slanderous matter, to the defamation of our soueregne ladie the quéene, and to the excitation of insurrection and rebellion, as more at large appeareth in their indictments. These were on the next morrow, to wit, the first of Julie, executed at Tiborne accordinglie. On thursdaie the sixteenth of Julie, by the sudden fall of a bricke wall in Thames street of London, neere vnto Downegate, fiue persons were ouerwhelmed and slaine, to wit, a man & his wife (the wife being great with child) and two children, the one their own, the other a nurse child, and a poore man that liued by charitie, hauing no knowne dwelling place. On the same sixteenth of Julie was sir Francis Russell knight, lord Russell, third sonne to Francis Russell earle of Bedford, slaine with a dag in the borders of Scotland beside Berwike, by a Scot borne in those parts, as they met vpon a true daie, as more at large appeareth in the historie of Scotland. On the next morrow, to wit, the seuentéenth of Julie, Francis Russell earle of Bedford, knight of the garter, and one of hir maiesties priuie councell, father to the late named sir Francis, lord Russell slaine on the borders of Scotland, deceassed, and was honorablie buried at Cheinies in Bedfordshire on the eight of September next following.

On the three and twentith of Julie certeine souldiers were pressed in the seuerall wards of the citie of London, which souldiers being furnished for the warres, and clothed in red cotes, all at the charges of the companies and citizens, set forth toward the seas on the thirteenth of August, and were transported ouer into Holland, Zeland, &c: as other the like souldiers out of other parts of the realme before had béene, to serue for the defense of the low countries vnder generall Norris, and other approued captens. On the fourth daie of August, betwixt the hours of foure and fiue of the clocke in the morning, at the end of the towne called Notingham in Kent, eight miles from London, in a lane not farre from the houses, the ground began to sinke, three great elmes being swallowed vp, the tops falling downward into a hole with the rootes vpward, turning round in the falling, and driuen into the earth past mans sight, to the wonderfull amazement of manie honest men of the same towne, being beholders of this strange sight: and before ten of the clocke that present day, the ground & trees were sonke so low, that neither the one or other might be discerned, the hole or vaut being sometimes filled with water, and otherwhiles neither bottome, trées, or water maie be perceiued: the compasse of this hole is about foure score yards, and being sounded with a lead and line of fiftie fadams, cannot therewith find or féele anie bottome. Ten yards distant from this place, there is another péece of ground sonke in like maner, which parcell of ground falleth still into the high waie to the great feare of that whole towne, but especiallie to the inhabitants of a house not far distant from the aforesaid places.

On the fiftéenth daie of September, to the number of two & thirtie seminaries, massing priests and others, late prisoners in the tower of London, Marshalsée, Kings bench, and other places, were imbarked in the Marie Martine of Colchester, on the southside of the Thames right ouer against S. Katharines, to be transported ouer into the coasts of Normandie, to be banished this realme for euer, by vertue of a commission from hir maiestie, before specified in pag. 1379.

A copie of the certificat written and directed into England by the said banished men.

Whereas vpon your honors commission directed vnto Anthonie Hall, and Thomas Stockar, for the transporting of vs whose names are vnder written, into the coasts of Normandie, who accordinglie tooke vs into a barke called the Marie Martine of Colchester, on the south side of the Thames, right ouer that part of saint Katharines next to London bridge, the fiftéenth day of September 1585, according to the computation of England: our will is to testifie vnto your good honors, that they the said Anthonie Hall & Thomas Stockar haue generallie so well vsed vs in all respects,

The vniting of the low countries to the realmes of England, &c: how beneficiall.

Protection of the reformed religion a part of their suite.

The loialtie and faithfulnesse of the low countrie people commended.

Benefits like to insue vpon the said protection vndertaken of hir highnesse.

The said deputies doo present certeine articles and conditions to hir maiestie concerning their suite.

Tukeld and Weblie hanged for publishing of seditious bookes.

Fiue or rather six people slain by the fall of a wall in London neere vnto Downegate.

Earle of Bedford and the lord Russell his sonne deceased.

Souldiers sent to aid the low countries of Holland, Zeland, &c.

Ground and trées sonke and swallowed vp in Kent eight miles from London.

Seminaries and massing priests banished.

Note in this certificat an acknowledgment of verie great English courtesie to the seminaries in their transportation.

The distressed state of the low countries after the death of the prince of Orange.

The hope that the low countrie people had in hir highnesse helpe.

Spanishlewnitude insupportable.

The cause why the deputies for the states came into England, and their suite vnto hir highnesse expressed.

The gouernment & principalitie of the low countries presented to the quéenes maiestie.

Manie good townes and places yet remaining in the low countries defensible against the enimie.

respects, that we can not but acknowledge our selues much beholding (as much as in them laie) to so courteous & louing officers. Neuertheleſſe comming along the sea, and meeting with hir maiesties admerall in the downes, who promising that we should not be disturbed in our course into the prouince of Normandie, according to your honors said commission, we had not from him departed two leagues, when as a Flushinger with his people suddenlie entred vpon vs, being peaceablie stowed vnder the hatches, and in our quiet rest, with their swords drawne, their calleiuers and their matches fired in their hands, to our great terror & discomfort, the most of vs being verie sore sea sicke, expecting at that instant nothing but either the rigorous dint of sword, or bullet of calleiuer. Howbeit parlee being had by our said commissioners with them, they departed, after which time we considering the generall danger on the seas, besought with one consent your honors commissioners to set vs on land at Calice: but they in no wise yelding thereunto, at last by reason of our importunitie in such danger & weakenesse, yelded to set vs on shore at Bullogne, partlie by reason of the feare we were then put in, & partlie for that we feared afterward more vnreasonable measure; but specialtie the greatest number of vs so sore sicke, that verie tedious vnto vs it seemed to beare so long and dangerous a passage. In witnes whereof to this our certificat we haue all subscribed our names the nineteenth of September 1585. W. Gimlets, R. Fen: Io. Nele: Christopher Small, &c.

The seminaries suddenlie assaulted and in danger of death by a Flushinger as they were passing ouer sea.

The seminaries are set on shore at Bullogne through their owne importunitie.

¶ We haue heard before that certeine souldiers out of diuers parts of this realme were transported ouer the seas into Holland and Zeland, &c: with such conuenient and seruiceable furniture, as might be presupposed necessarie for defense: whom we will leaue vpon their gard, and more clearelie to set forth the reasons of their transportation, we do mesne heere, as we promised before page 1413, when we came to due place, to deliuer a booke published by authoritie concerning that argument, the title and substance whereof in all points agreeable with the printed copie first extant, doth orderlie follow.

A declaration of the causes mooving the queene of England to giue aid to the defense of the people afflicted and oppressed in the low countries.

Kings and princes soueregnes, are to yeeld account of their actions onelie to almightie God, the king of kings.

ALthough kings and princes soueregnes, owing their homage and seruice onelie vnto the almightie God the king of all kings, are in that respect not bound to yeeld account or render the reasons of their actions to anie others but to God their onelie soueregne Lord: yet (though amongst the most ancient and christian monarchs the same Lord God hauing committed to vs the soueregntie of this realme of England and other our dominions, which we hold immediatlie of the same almightie Lord, and so thereby accountable onelie to his diuine Maiestie) we are notwithstanding this our prerogatiue at this time specialtie moued, for diuerse reasons hereafter briefle remembred, to publish not onelie vnto our owne naturall louing subiects, but also to all others our neighbors, specialtie to such princes & states as are our confederats, or haue for their subiects cause of commerce with our countries and people, what our intention is at this time, and vpon what iust and reasonable grounds we are moued to giue aid vnto our nert neighbours the naturall people of the low countries, being by long warres and persecutions of strange nations there, lamentablie afflicted, and in present danger to be brought into a perpetuall seruitude.

Naturall causes of the ancient continuall traffike betwixt the people of England & them of the low countries.

First, it is to be vnderstood (which percase is not perfectlie knowne to a great number of persons) that there hath beene, time out of mind, euen by the naturall situation of those low countries and our realme of England, one directlie opposit to the other, and by reason of the readie crossing of the seas, and multitude of large and commodious hauens respectiuelie on both sides, a continuall traffike and commerce betwixt the people of England, and the naturall people of those low countries, and so continued in all ancient times, when the seuerall prouinces thereof, as Flanders, Holland, and Zeland, and other countries to them adioining, were ruled and possessed by seuerall lords, and not vnited togither, as of late yeares they haue beene by intermarriages, and at length by concurrences of manie and sundrie titles haue also beene reduced to be vnder the gouernement of their lords that succeeded to the dukedome of Burgundie: whereby there hath beene in former ages manie special aliances and confederations, not onelie betwixt the kings of England our progenitors and the lords of the said countries of Flanders, Holland, Zeland, and their adherents: but also betwixt the verie naturall subiects of both countries, as the prelats, noblemen, citizens, burgesses, and other communalties of the great cities and port townes of either countrie reciprocallie, by speciall obligations and stipulations vnder their seales interchangeablie, for maintenance both of commerce and intercourse of merchants, & also of speciall mutuall amitie to be obserued betwixt the people and inhabitants of both parties as well ecclesiasticall as secular: and verie expresse prouision in such treaties conteined for mutuall fauours, affections, and all other friendlie offices to be vsed and prosecuted by the people of the one nation towards the other. By which mutuall bonds, there hath continued perpetuall vnions of the peoples hearts togither, and so by waie of continuall interconrses, from age to age the same mutuall loue hath beene inuiolablie kept and exercised, as it had beene by the worke of nature, and neuer vtterlie dissolued, nor yet for anie long time discontinued, howsoeuer the kings, and the lords of the countries sometimes (though verie rarelie) haue beene at difference by sinister meanes of some other princes their neighbours, enuieng the felicitie of these two countries.

Confederations both betwixt the kings of England and lords of the low countries, and also the subiects of both countries.

The people of both the countries bound by speciall obligations interchangeablie, for mutuall fauours, and friendlie offices.

And for maintenance and testimonie of these naturall vnions of the peoples of these kingdoms and countries in perpetuall amitie, there are extant sundrie authentike treaties and transactions for mutuall commerce, intercourse and streict amitie of ancient times: as for example, some verie solemnelie accorded in the times of king Henrie the first our progenitor, and Philip the second duke of Burgundie, and inheritour to the countie of Flanders by the ladie Margaret his grandmother, which was aboue one hundred & fortie yeares past, & the same also renewed by the noble duke Charles his son, father to the king of Spaines grandmother, and husband to the ladie Margaret sister to our great grandfather king Edward the fourth: and after that, of new ofttimes renewed by our most noble & sage grandfather king Henrie the seuenth, and the archduke Philip grandfather to the king of Spaine now being: and in latter times, often renewed betwixt our father of noble memorie king Henrie the eight, and Charles the fift emperor of Almaine, father also to the present king of Spaine.

Treaties extant of ancient time, betwixt the kings of England and the dukes of Burgundie, for the commerce betwixt their countries.

Conuentions for the subiects of either side, to shew mutuall fauours one to the other.

In all which treaties, transactions, and confederations of amitie and mutuall commerce, it was also at all times specialtie and principallie conteined in

The destruction of the nobilitie, and the people of the countries by the Spanish gouernement.

The lamentable violent death of the countie of Egmond, the glorie of those countries.

The riches townes and strengths with the wealth thereof possessed by the Spaniards.

in expresse words, by conuentions, concords, and conclusions, that the naturall people, and subiects of either side, should shew mutuall fauours and duties one to the other, and should safelie, freelie and securelie commerce togither in euerie their countries; and so hath the same mutuall and naturall concourse and commerce beene without interruption continued in manie ages, farre aboue the like example of anie other countries in christendome, to the honour and strength of the princes, and to the singular great benefit and inriching of their people: vntill of late yeares that the king of Spaine departing out of his low countries into Spaine, hath beene (as it is to be thought) counselled by his councellors of Spaine, to appoint Spaniards, forrenners and strangers of strange bloud, men more exercised in warres than in peaceable gouernement, and some of them notablie delighted in bloud, as hath appeared by their actions, to be the chiefest gouernours of all his said low countries, contrarie to the ancient lawes and customes thereof, hauing great plentie of noble, valiant and faithfull persons naturallie borne, and such as the emperour Charles, and the king himselfe had to their great honours vsed in their seruice, able to haue beene imploied in the rule of those countries.

But these Spaniards, being meere strangers, hauing no naturall regard in their gouernement to the maintenance of those countries and people in their ancient and naturall maner of peaceable liuing, as the most noble and wise emperor Charles; yea and as his sonne king Philip himselfe had, whilest he remained in those countries, and vsed the counsels of the states and naturall of the countries, not violating the ancient liberties of the countries: but contrariwise, these Spaniards being exalted to absolute gouernement, by ambition, and for priuat lucre haue violentlie broken the ancient lawes and liberties of all the countries, and in a tyrannous sort haue banished, killed and destroied without order of law, within the space of few moneths, manie of the most ancient and principall persons of the naturall nobilitie that were most worthie of gouernement. And howsoeuer in the beginning of these cruell persecutions, the pretense therof was for maintenance of the Romish religion: yet they spared not to depriue verie manie catholikes and ecclesiasticall persons of their franchises and priuileges: and of the chiefest that were executed of the nobilitie, none was in the whole countrie more affected to that religion than was the noble and valiant countie of Egmond, the verie glorie of that countrie, who neither for his singular victories in the seruice of the king of Spaine can be forgotten in the true histories, nor yet for the crueltie vsed for his destruction, to be but for euer lamented in the harts of the naturall people of that countrie.

And further more, to bring these whole countries in seruitude to Spaine, these forren gouernours haue by long intestine warre, with multitude of Spaniards, and with some few Italians and Almains, made the greater part of the said countries (which with their riches by common estimation answered the emperour Charles equallie to his Indies) in a maner desolat, and haue also lamentablie destroied by sword, famine, and other cruell maners of death, a great part of the naturall people, & now the rich townes and strong places being desolate of their naturall inhabitants, are held and kept chiefflie with force by the Spaniards. All which pitifull miseries and horrible calamities of these most rich countries and people, are of all their neighbours at this daie, euen of such as in ancient time haue beene at frequent discord with them through naturall compassion verie greatlie pitied, which appeared especiallie this present yeare, when the French king pretended to haue receiued them to his protection, had not (as the states of the countrie & their deputies were answered) that certeine vntimelie and vnlooked for complots of the house of Guise, stirred and maintened by monie out of Spaine, disturbed the good and generall peace of France, and thereby urged the king to forbeare from the resolution he had made, not onlie to aid the oppressed people of the low countries against the Spaniards, but also to haue accepted them as his owne subiects. But in verie truth, howsoeuer they were pitied, and in a sort for a time comforted & kept in hope in France by the French king, who also hath oftentimes earnestlie solicited vs as queene of England, both by message and writting to be carefull of their defense: yet in respect that they were otherwise more streictlie knit in ancient friendship to this realme than to anie other countrie, we are sure that they could be pitied of none for this long time with more cause and griefe generallie, than of our subiects of this our realme of England, being their most ancient alies and familiar neighbours: and that in such manner, as this our realme of England and those countries haue beene by common language of long time resembled and termed as man and wife.

And for these vrgent causes and manie others, we haue by manie freendlie messages and ambassadors, by manie letters and writings to the said king of Spaine our brother and alie, declared our compassion of this so cruell and cruell vsage of his naturall and loiall people by sundrie his martiall gouernors and other his men of warre, all strangers to these his countries. And furthermore, as a good louing sister to him, and a naturall good neighbour to his lowe countries and people, we haue often, and often againe most friendlie warned him, that if he did not otherwise by his wisedome and princelie clemencie restreine the tyrannie of his gouernours and crueltie of his men of warre, we feared that the people of his countries should be forced for safetie of their liues, and for continuance of their natiue countrie in the former state of their liberties, to seeke the protection of some other forreine lord, or rather to yeeld themselues wholie to the souereignetie of some mightie prince, as by the ancient lawes of their countries, and by speciall priuileges granted by some of the lords and dukes of the countries to the people, they do pretend and affirme, that in such cases of generall iniustice, and vpon such violent breaking of their priuileges they are free from their former homages, and at libertie to make choise of anie other prince to be their prince and head.

The proofe whereof by examples past is to be seene & read in the ancient histories of diuerse alterations, of the lords and ladies of the countries of Brabant, Flanders, Holland, and Zeland, and other countries to them vnited by the states and people of the countries; and that by some such alterations, as the stories do testifie, Philip the duke of Burgundie came to his title, from which the king of Spaines interest is deriued: but the further discussion hereof, we leaue to the view of the monuments and records of the countries. And now, for the purposes to staie them from yeelding themselues in anie like sort to the souereignetie of anie other strange prince, certeine yeeres past, vpon the earnest request of sundrie of the greatest persons of degree in those countries, and most obedient subiects to the king, such as were the duke of Arcot, and the marquesse of Hauerie yet liuing, and of such others as had principall offices in those countries in the time of the emperour Charles, we yeelded at their importunat requests, to grant them

Naturall causes of the ancient continuall traffike betwixt the people of England & them of the low countries.

Confederations both betwixt the kings of England and lords of the low countries, and also the subiects of both countries.

The people of both the countries bound by speciall obligations interchangeablie, for mutuall fauours and friendlie offices.

Treaties expressed of ancient time, betwixt the kings of England and the dukes of Burgundie, for the commerce betwixt their countries.

Conuentions for the subiects of either side, to shew mutuall fauors one to the other.

Spaniards and strangers latelie appointed gouernors in the low countries, to the violation of the liberties of the countrie.

The destruction of the nobilitie, and the people of the countries by the Spanish gouernement.

The lamentable violent death of the countie of Egmond, the glorie of those countries.

The rich townes and strengths with the wealth therein possessed by the Spaniards.

The French kings offers to haue aided and receiued to his subiection the oppressed people of the low countries.

The queene of Englands continuall freendlie aduises to the king of Spaine for restreining of the tyrannie of his gouernors.

The queene of Englands means vsed to staie the states of the lowe countries frō yeelding their subiection to anie other forreine prince.

them pres of monie, onelie to continue them as his subiects, and to maintcine themselues in their iust defense against the violence and cruelties of the Spaniards their oppressours, thereby staieng them from yelding their subiection to anie other prince from the said king of Spaine: and during the time of that our aid giuen to them, and their staie in their obedience to the king of Spaine, we did frelie acquaint the same king with our actions, and did still continue our frendlie aduises to him, to moue him to command his gouernours and men of warre, not to vse such insolent cruelties against his people, as might make them to despaire of his fauours, and seke some other lord.

And in these kind of persuasions and actions we continued manie yeres, not onelie for compassion of the miserable state of the countries, but of a naturall disposition to haue the ancient conditions of streict amitie and commerce for our kingdoms and people to continue with the states and the people of the said dukedome of Burgundie and the appendents, and namelie with our next neighbours the countries of Flanders, Holland and Zeland. For we did manifestlie se, if the nation of Spaine should make a conquest of those countries, as was and yet is apparantlie intended, and plant themselues there as they haue done in Naples and other countries, adding thereto the late examples of the violent hostile enterprise of a power of Spaniards, being sent within these few yeares by the king of Spaine and the pope into our realme of Ireland, with an intent manifestlie confessed by the capteins, that those numbers were sent aforehand to seize vpon some strength there, to the intent with other great forces to pursue a conquest thereof: we did (we saie againe) manifestlie se in what danger our selfe, our countries and people might shortlie be, if in conuenient time we did not spedilie otherwise regard to preuent or staie the same. And yet notwithstanding our said often requests and aduises giuen to the king of Spaine, manifestlie for his owne weale and honor, we found him by his councell of Spaine so vnwilling in anie sort to incline to our frendlie counsell, that his gouernours and chefeteins in his low countries increased their cruelties towards his owne afflicted people, and his officers in Spaine offered dailie greater iniuries to ours, resorting thither for traffike: yea, they of his councell in Spaine would not permit our expresse messenger with our letters to come to the king their masters presence: a matter verie strange, and against the law of nations.

The enterprise of the Spaniards in Ireland sent by the king of Spaine and the pope.

The refusall of the quenes messenger, and hir letters to the king of Spaine.

And the cause of this our writing and sending to the king, proceeded of matter that was worthie to be knowne to the king, and not vnmet now also to be declared to the world, to shew both our good disposition towards the king in imparting to him our greefes, and to let it appeare how euill we haue bene vsed by his ministers, as in some part may appeare by this that followeth. Although we could not haue these manie yeares past anie of our seruants, whom we sent at sundrie times as our ambassadours to the king our good brother (as was meet) suffered to continue there without manie iniuries and indignities offered to their families, and diuerse times to their owne persons by the greatest of his councellours, so as they were constreined to leaue their places, and some expelled and in a sort banished the countrie, without cause giuen by them, or notified to vs: yet we, minding to continue verie good frendship with the king, as his good sister, did of long time and manie yeares giue fauourable allowance to all that came as his ambassadours to vs, sauing onelie vpon manifest dangerous practises attempted by two of them to trouble our estate, whereof the one was Girald Desses, a verie turbulent spirited person, and altogither vnskilfull and vnapt to deale in princes affaires being in amitie, as at his returne into Spaine he was so there also reputed: the other and last was Barnardin de Mendoza, one whome we did accept and vse with great fauour a long time, as was manifestlie sene in our court, and we thinke cannot be denied by himselfe: but yet of late yeares (we know not by what direction) we found him to be a secret great fauourer to sundrie our euill disposed and seditious subiects, not onelie to such as lurked in our realme, but also to such as fled the same, being notorioustie condemned as open rebels & traitours, with whome by his letters, messages, and secret counsels he did in the end deuise how with a power of men, partlie to come out of Spaine, partlie out of the low countries, whereof he gaue them great comfort in the kings name, an inuasion might be made into our realme, setting downe in writing the manner how the same should be done, with what numbers of men and ships, and vpon what coasts, ports, and places of our realme by speciall name, and who the persons should be in our realme of no small account, that should fauour this inuasion, and take part with the inuadours, with manie other circumstances declaring his full set purpose and labours taken, to trouble vs and our realme verie dangerouslie, as hath bene most clerelie proued and confessed by such as were in that confederacie with him, whereof some are fled and now do frequent his companie in France, and some were taken, who confessed at great length by writing the whole course here in held by the said ambassadour, as was manifestlie of late time published to the world vpon Francis Throgmortons principall traitours examination.

The iust causes of dismissing of Barnardin Mendoza out of England.

Two turbulent spirited persons (Spaniards) doing what they could to set all English in a tumult.

See the voluntarie confession of F. Throgmorton in pages 1370, 1373.

And when we found manifestlie this ambassadour so dangerous an instrument, or rather a head to a rebellion and inuasion; and that for a yeare or more together he neuer brought to vs anie letter from the king his master, notwithstanding our often request made to him that he would by some letter from the king to vs, let it appeare that it was the kings will that he should deale with vs in his masters name in sundrie things that he propounded to vs as his ambassadour, which we did iudge to be contrarie to the king his masters will: we did finallie cause him to be charged with these dangerous practises, and made it patent to him how, and by whome, with manie other circumstances we knew it, and therefore caused him in verie gentle sort to be content within some reasonable time to depart out of our realme, the rather for his owne safetie, as one in verie ded mortallie hated of our people: for the which we granted him fauourable conduct, both to the sea and ouer the sea: and therevpon we did spedilie send a seruant of ours into Spaine with our letters to the king, onelie to certifie him of this accident, and to make the whole matter aparant vnto him: and this was the messenger afore mentioned, that might not be suffered to deliuer our message or our letters to the king.

The contrarious dealing of hir maiestie with Mendoza (a man mortallie hated) departing out of England.

And beside these indignities, it is most manifest how his ministers also haue both heretofore manie times, and now latelie practised here in England by meanes of certeine rebels, to haue procured sundrie inuasions of our realme, by their forces out of Spaine and the low countries: verie hard recompenses (we may saie) for so manie our good offices. Herevpon we hope no reasonable person can blame vs, if we haue disposed our selues to change this our former course, and more carefullie to loke to the safetie of our selfe and our people: and finding our owne dangers in ded verie great and imminent, we haue

bene

bæne the more vrgentlie prouoked to attempt and accelerat some good remedie, for that besides manie other aduises giuen vs both at home & from abrode, in due time to withstand these dangers, we haue found the generall disposition of all our owne faithfull people verie readie in this case, and earnest in offering to vs both in parlements and otherwise, their seruices with their bodies and bloud, and their aids with their lands and goods, to withstand and preuent this present common danger to our realme and themselues, euidentlie seene and feared by the subuerting and roting vp of the ancient nation of these low countries, and by planting the Spanish nation and men of war, enimies to our countries, there so neere vnto vs.

The queene of Englads procuring for the recouerie of Scotland from the seruitude wherein the house of Guise meant to haue brought it.

And besides these occasions and considerations, we did also call to our remembrance our former fortunat proceeding by Gods speciall fauor, in the beginning of our reigne, in remedieng of a like mischefe that was intended against vs in Scotland by certeine Frenchmen, who then were directed onelie by the house of Guise, by colour of the marriage of their neece the queene of Scots with the Dolphin of France, in like maner as the offrings of the said house haue euen now latelie sought to atteine to the like inordinate power in France: a matter of some consequence for our selues to consider; although we hope the king our good brother professing sincere friendship towards vs, as we professe the like to him, will moderate this aspiring greatnesse of his bloud be ouerruled, nor we (minding to continue perfect friendship with the king & his bloud) be by the said house of Guise & their faction disquieted or disturbed in our countries. But now to returne to this like example of Scotland aforesaid. When the French had in like maner (as the Spaniards haue now of long time attempted in the low countries) sought by force to haue subdued the people there, and brought them into a seruitude to the crowne of France, and also by the ambitious desires of the said house of Guise, to haue proceeded to a warre by waie of Scotland, for the conquest of our crowne for their neece the queene of Scots (a matter most manifest to the common knowledge of the world) it pleased almightie God, as it remaineth in good memorie to our honor and comfort, to further our intention and honorable and iust actions at that time in such sort, as by our aiding then of the nation of Scotland being sore oppressed with the French, and vniuersallie requiring our aid, we procured to that realme (though to our great cost) a full deliuerance of the force of strangers and danger of seruitude, and restored peace to the whole countrie, which hath continued there euer since manie yeres, sauing that at some time of parcialities of certeine of the noble men, as hath bæne vsuall in that countrie, in the minoritie of the yong king, there haue risen some inward troubles, which for the most part we haue in fauor of the king and his gouernors vsed meanes to pacifie: so as at this daie such is the quietnesse in Scotland, as the king our deare brother & cousine, by name James the first, a prince of great hope for manie good princelie respects, reigneth there in honor and loue of his people, and in verie good and perfect amitie with vs and our countrie. And so our actions at that time came to so good successe by the goodnesse of God, as both our owne realme, and that of Scotland, hath euer since remained in better amitie and peace than can be remembred these manie hundred yeares before; and yet nothing hereby done by vs, nor anie cause iustlie giuen: but that also the French kings that haue since succeeded, which haue bæne three in number, and all brethren, haue made and concluded diuerse treaties for good peace with vs, which presentlie continue in force on both parties, notwithstanding our foresaid actions attempted, for removing out of Scotland of the said French forces, so transported by the onelie direction of the house of Guise.

The realme of Scotland restored to the ancient freedome, and so possessed by the present king by the meanes onelie of the queene of England.

See the testimonie confession of F. Throgmorton in pages 1370, 1373.

The courteous dealing of hir maiestie with Mendoza (a man mortallie hated) departing out of England.

And therefore, to conclude for the declaration of our present intention at this time, we hope it shall of all persons abroad be well interpreted, as we know it will be of such as are not led by parcialitie, that vpon the often and continuall lamentable requests made to vs by the vniuersall states of the countries of Holland, Zeland, Guelders, and other prouinces with them vnited (being desperat of the king of Spaines fauours) for our succours to be yeelded to them, onelie for their defense against the Spaniards and other strangers, and therewith finding manifestlie by our often and importunat requests and aduises giuen to the king of Spaine, no hope of relefe of these their miseries, but rather an increase thereof by dailie conquests of their townes and slaughter of their people (though in verie truth we cannot impute the increase of anie late cruelties to the person of him that now hath the title of generall gouernor, shewing his naturall disposition more inclinable to mercie and clemencie, than it seemeth he can direct the hearts of the Spaniards vnder him, that haue bæne so long trained in shedding of bloud vnder the former Spanish gouernors) and ioining thereunto our owne danger at hand, by the ouerthrow and destruction of our neighbours, and accesse and planting of the great forces of the Spaniards so neere to our countries, with precedent arguments of manie troublesome attempts against our realme: we did therefore by good aduise and after long deliberation determine, to send certeine companies of souldiors to aid the naturall people of those countries, onelie to defend them and their townes from sacking and desolation, & thereby to procure them safetie, to the honor of God, whome they desire to serue sincerelie as christian people according to his holie word, and to inioie their ancient liberties for them and their posteritie, and so consequentlie to preserue and continue the lawfull and ancient commerce betwixt our people and those countries and ours.

The conclusion of the causes of sending of certeine companies of English souldiors to the defense of the oppressed people of the low countries, and to withstand the attempts against this realme.

And so we hope our intention herein, and our subsequent actions will be by Gods fauour both honorablie interpreted of all persons (sauing of the oppressors themselues, and their partizans) in that we meane not hereby, either for ambition or malice (the two roots of all iniustice) to make anie particular profit hereof to our selfe or to our people; onelie desiring at this time to obteine by Gods fauour for the countries, a deliuerance of them from warre by the Spaniards and forraines: a restitution of their ancient liberties and gouernement by some christian peace, and thereby a suertie for our selues and our realme to be free from inuading neighbors; and our people to inioie in those countries their lawfull commerce and intercourse of friendship & merchandize, according to the ancient vsage and treaties of intercourse, made betwixt our progenitors and the lords and earles of those countries, and betwixt our people and the people of those countries.

Three speciall things reasonablie desired by the queene of England.
1. The end of warres with restitution of the low countries to their ancient liberties.
2. Suertie fro invasion of hir owne realme.
3. And renewing of the mutuall traffike betweene the countries.

And though our further intention also is, or maie be, to take into our gard some few townes vpon the sea side next opposite to our realme, which otherwise might be in danger to be taken by the strangers, enimies of the countrie: yet therein considering we haue no meaning at this time to take and reteine the same to our owne proper vse: we hope that all persons will thinke it agreeable with good reason and princelie policie, that we should haue the gard

The causes of taking some townes into hir maiesties custodie.

and

and vse of some such places for sure accesse and recesse of our people and souldiors in safetie, and for furniture of them with vittels and other things requisit and necessarie, whilest it shall be needfull for them to continue in those countries for the aiding thereof in these their great calamities, miseries, and imminent danger, and vntill the countries may be deliuered of such strange forces as do now oppresse them, and recouer their ancient lawfull liberties and maner of gouernement, to liue in peace as they haue heretofore done, and do now most earnestlie in lamentable manner desire to do, which are the verie onelie true ends of all our actions now intended: howsoeuer malicious tongs maie vtter their cankred conceits to the contrarie, as at this daie the world aboundeth with such blasphemous reports in writings and infamous libels, as in no age the diuell hath more abounded with notable spirits replenished with all wickednesse to vtter his rage against professors of christian religion. But thereof we leaue the reuenge to God the searcher of hearts, hoping that he beholding the sinceritie of our heart, will grant good successe to our intentions, whereby a christian peace may insue to his diuine honor, and comfort to all them that loue peace trulie, and will seeke it sincerelie.

An addition to the declaration, touching the slanders published of hir maiestie.

The summe of a slanderous pamphlet published in the Italian tong against the queenes maiestie.

After we had finished our declaration, there came to our hands a pamphlet written in Italian, printed at Milan, intituled Nuouo auuiso, directed to the archbishop of Milan, conteining a report of the expugnation of Antwerp by the prince of Parma: by the which we found our selfe most maliciouslie charged with two notable crimes, no lesse hatefull to the world, than most repugnant and contrarie to our owne naturall inclination. The one with ingratitude towards the king of Spaine, who (as the author saith) saued our life being iustlie by sentence adiudged to death in our sisters time: the other, that there were some persons procured to be corrupted with great promises, and that with our intelligence, as the reporter addeth in a parenthesis in these words (as it was said) that the life of the prince of Parma should be taken awaie. And for the better prouing and countenancing of this horrible lie, it is further added in the said pamphlet, that it pleased the Lord God to discouer this, and bring two of the wicked persons to iustice. Now, knowing how men are maliciouslie bent in this declining age of the world, both to iudge, speake, and write maliciouslie, falslie, and vnreuerentlie of princes: and holding nothing so deere vnto vs, as the conseruation of our reputation and honor to be blameless: we found it verie expedient, not to suffer two such horrible imputations to passe vnder silence; lest for lacke of answer, it might argue a kind of guiltinesse, and did therefore thinke, that what might be alledged by vs for our iustification in that behalfe, might most aptlie be ioined vnto this former declaration now to be published, to laie open before the world, the maner and ground of our proceeding in the causes of the low countries.

The quenes maiestie is gelous ouer the conseruation of hir reputation.

An answer to the first point of the said pamphlet, clearing hir highnes of ingratitude.

And for answer of the first point wherewith we are charged, touching our ingratitude towards the king of Spaine; as we do most willinglie acknowledge that we were beholding vnto him in the time of our late sister, which we then did acknowledge verie thankefullie, and haue sought manie waies since in like sort to requite, as in our former declaration by our actions maie appeare: so do we vtterlie denie as a most manifest vntruth, that euer he was the cause of the saning of our life as a person by course of iustice sentenced vnto death, who euer carried our selfe towards our said sister in dutifull sort, as our loialtie was neuer called in question, much lesse anie sentence of death pronounced against vs: a matter such, as in respect of the ordinarie course of proceeding, as by processe in law, by place of triall, by the iudge that should pronounce such sentence, and other necessarie circumstances in like cases vsu all, especiallie against one of our qualitie, as it could not but haue beene publikelie knowne, if anie such thing had beene put in execution. This then being true, we leaue to the world to iudge how maliciouslie and iniuriouslie the author of the said pamphlet dealeth with vs, in charging vs by so notable an vntruth, with a vice that of all other we do most hate and abhorre. And therefore by the manifest vntruth of this imputation, men not transported with passion maie easilie discerne what vntruth is conteined in the second, by the which we are charged to haue beene acquainted with an intended attempt against the life of the said prince: a matter, if anie such thing should haue beene by vs intended, must haue proceeded either of a misliking we had of his person, or that the prosecution of the warres in the low countries was so committed vnto him, as no other might prosecute the same but he.

The second point of the pamphlet answered to the first sanctification of anie thing is reasonable.

The earle of Leicesters passing ouer into the low countries.

And first for his person, we could neuer learne that he hath at anie time, by act or speach, done anie thing that might iustlie breed a mislike in vs towards him, much lesse a hatred against his person in so high a degree, as to be either priuie or assenting to the taking awaie of his life. Besides, he is one of whom we haue euer had an honorable conceit, in respect of those singular rare parts we alwaies haue noted in him, which hath wone vnto him as great reputation, as anie man this daie liuing carrieth of his degree and qualitie: and so haue we alwaies deliuered out by speach vnto the world, when anie occasion hath beene offered to make mention of him.

The collection of the earles of Leicester by Fr. Thin 1585.

Now touching the prosecution committed vnto him of the warres in the low countries, as all men of iudgement know, that the taking awaie of his life carrieth no likelihood that the same shall worke anie end of the said prosecution: so is it manifestlie knowne, that no man hath dealt more honorablie than the said prince, either in dulie obseruing of his promise, or extending grace and mercie, where merit and desert hath craued the same: and therefore no greater impietie by anie could be wrought, nor nothing more preiudiciall to our selfe (so long as the king shall continue the prosecution of the cause in that forcible sort he now doth) than to be an instrument to take him awaie from thense by such violent meanes, that hath dealt in a more honorable and gratious sort in the charge committed vnto him, than anie other that hath euer gone before him, or is likelie to succeed after him.

The prosecution of the warres in the low countries is not like to cease, though the prince of Parma were dead.

Now therefore how vnlikelie it is, that we hauing neither cause to mislike of his person, nor that the prosecution of the warres should cease by losse of him, should be either author, or anie waie assenting to so horrible a fact, we referre to the iudgement of such as looke into causes, not with the eies of their affection; but do measure and weigh things according to honor and reason. Besides, it is likelie if it had beene true that we had bin anie waie chargeable (as the author reporteth) the confessions of the parties executed (importing such matter as by him is alledged) would haue beene both produced and published: for malice leaueth nothing vnsearched, that

This being dulie pondered, all the world maie iudge how vnlikelie hir highnesse is slandered.

The nature of malice compla-maie

maie nourish the venem of that humor.

In a sentence or few words.

The best course therefore that both we and all other princes can hold in this unfortunat age that ouerfloweth with numbers of malignant spirits, is through the grace and goodnesse of almightie God, to direct our course in such sort, as they maie rather shew their wils through malice, than with iust cause bydesert, to saie ill, or deface princes either by speach or writing: assuring our selues, that besides the punishment that such wicked and infamous libellors shall receiue at the hands of the almightie for deprauing of princes and lawfull magistrats, who are God ministers; they both are and alwaies shall be thought by all good men, unworthie to liue vpon the face of the earth.

The reward that wicked and infamous libellors shall reape at the hands of God and men.

Giuen at Richmount the first of October, 1585. and the 27 yeare of the reigne of our souereigne ladie the queene, to be published.

In the moneths of Nouember and December, manie horsses and men were shipped at the Tower wharfe to be transported ouer into the low countries. And on the first of December the right honorable lord Robert Dudleie earle of Leicester, lord lieutenant generall (after he had taken his leaue of hir maiestie & the court) with his traine entred the towne of Colchester in Esser, where the maior & his brethren, all in scarlet gownes, with multitudes of people met him, and so with great solemnitie entred the towne, where he lodged that night, and on the next morrow set forward to Harwich, into the which towne he was accordinglie received and interteined.

The earle of Leicesters passing ouer into the low countries.

The second point of the pamphlet answered to the full satisfaction of anie that is reasonable.

A discourse of the earles of Leicester by succession.

The collection of the earles of Leicester by Fr. Thin 1585.

THis going of Robert Sutton of Dudleie the sonne of John Dudleie duke of Northumberland into the low countries, hath occasioned my pen to treat somewhat of the earles of Leicester. Wherefore sith there hath beene (some hundred yeares past) some noble persons indued with that honorable title of the erldome of Leicester before & since the conquest; therefore determining to make some mention of them, being a thing not common, and so much the more worthie of continuance to posteritie: I saie, that if any shall thinke this discourse ouer briefe, and slender mention of such honorable persons, of their worthie exploits, of their antiquitie, of their descents and succession; let him for the present satisfie himselfe with this whatsoeuer it now be, vntill it shall please God to giue better abilitie & more time, to deliuer to the world the whole discourse of their liues, which I haue alreadie roughlie hewen out of the rocke in a booke purposelie intreating thereof in English, as I haue done of the other earles of this realme.

The proseeution of the warres in the low countries is not like to cease, though the prince of Parma were dead.

But here before I come to deliuer the names of these earles, it shall not be amisse to note the opinion of the best antiquaries of our age, and of such other persons, as for their rare knowledge and singular care in deliuering a truth to the world of matters belonging to antiquitie, deseruing singular commendation and aduancement. These antiquaries (I saie) of our time are led by some authoritie, (but by more reason) to suppose, that before Edward the Confessors time, there were not anie earles in England of such state and maiestie by creation of a lineall descent, as they now and manie yeares since be, and haue beene; but that they were onelie lords of those places, whereof they were intituled, as members vnder him that was principall king of that prouince, and onelie called Comites (as in those daies there were Duces and Comites, not of anie title of honor of place, but by vertue of their office) by reason that they were Companions appointed to associat the duke, capteine or leader of the men at arms. To which opinion I do most willingly for this time consent, as well for that it standeth with reason; as for that in all charters before the conquest, such as were witnesses to anie such deed, did onlie subscribe their name of duke and earle, without anie name of place, or title of honor, by reason of that place. As for example appeareth in a charter dated the fourtéenth yeare of king Edgar, and in the yeare of our Lord nine hundred three score and nine, in which amongst other things he gaue Howell to Westminster church: whereunto were witnesses besides the clergie, Alfer dux, Marcher dux, Oslac dux, Birnoth dux, Ofred dux, Fordwine dux, &c. And if it be obiected, that vpon the diuision of the land into prouinces or shires by Alured, that then there were creations of seuerall noblemen of such seuerall places; I will not much contend therein: but yet I saie that then they were not such as had permanent succession of those titles of honour to their heires, but were remoueable at the princes pleasure, as it is at this daie in the shiriffe of euerie shire, being the deputie of euerie such earle as his name doth well prooue, being Vicecomes. Yet since the time of Edward the Confessor (and as I suppose) somewhat aboue that, in the time of Canutus there were earles and lords of special places and titles of honour: but I as yet not hauing anie certeintie to set downe therein, will onelie deliuer that which I haue seene in an ancient pedegree written about the conquest time touching the earles of Leicester; not deciding what kind of earles they were either inheritable of that honor, or remoueable at the princes pleasure; but leauing the same to others, who either will or can better that which I haue done: wherefore thus I begin with those earles of Leicester.

Leofricus, the first of that name, was honored with the title of the earledome of Leicester in the daies of Ethelbald king of Mercia, which Ethelbald was slaine about the yeare of our redemption seauen hundred fortie and nine. Leofrike 1. Anonymus. M.S.

Algarus, the first of that name, sonne of the said Leofrike was earle of Leicester, and liued in the time of Offa the great, Kenulphus, Kenelmus, Ceolwlfus, Bernulfus, Ludicanus, and Witlafius kings of Mercia, which last king began his reigne ouer that prouince, in the yeare of Christ eight hundred twentie and six; during whose reigne this Algarus died, and was buried at Crowland. Algarus 1.

Algarus, the second of that name, by some called Alfricus the second, sonne of Algarus the first, liued vnder the gouernement of Burred king of Mercia, which Burred was expelled by the Danes, in the two and twentith yeare of his reigne, being the yeare of our Lord eight hundred seauentie and two; which Algarus was killed by the Danes, Hengwar and Hubba, in the yeare that the sonne of God was borne of the virgin eight hundred seuentie and three, at Strelingham or Skrekingham in Kesticuen, and buried at Crowland. Algarus 2.

Leofrike, the second of that name, the sonne of Algarus the second, liued in the time of Alured or Alfred, and of Edward the elder kings of the West saxons, which Edward began his reigne about the yeare that the word became flesh nine hundred. Leofrike 2.

Leofwine the sonne of Leofrike the second, was earle of Leicester, and liued vnder the reigne of Athelstane, Edmund, Eldred, Edwine, and Edgar, Leofwine.

This being duelie pondered, all the world maie see how vniustlie hir highnesse is slandered.

The nature of malice comprikings of England, of which kings the said Edgar began his reigne, in the yere that the sonne of God tooke on him the forme of man nine hundred fiftie and nine, vnder whose reigne this Leofwine departed this life, leauing behind him three sonnes, Leofrike, Edwine, and Norman, whereof Edwine was slaine by the Welchmen, and Norman was killed (with Edricus de Streonia) by Canutus the Dane king of England, Scotland, Denmarke, and Norweie.

Leofrike 3. Leofrike, the third of that name, the sonne of Leofwine, was the most famous man of his time, as well for gouernement, as for building of monasteries; he was earle of Chester, Leicester, and Couentrie, or rather (to speake better) earle of Mercia, which conteined those three prouinces, and manie more; he liued in the daies of Edward the second, Ethelred, Edmund, Canutus, Harold Harefoot, Hardeknute, and Edward the third, commonlie called Edward the Confessor, being all kings before the conquest. This man was of great yeares, and died at his manor of Bromleie, in the yeare of Christ one thousand fiftie and six, being ten yeares before the conquest, and was buried in Couentrie, in the abbeie which he founded; he maried Godiua, by whome he had Algarus.

Algarus 3. Algarus the third of that name sonne of Leofrike, succeeding his fathers inheritance, had by Edward the Confessor further added vnto it the earldome of Orford, for which becomming verie proud, he often aduanced himselfe against the prince, by occasion whereof he was manie times banished, but restored againe to the earledome of Leicester by Edward the Confessor: he liued in the time of Edward the Confessor, and of Harold the sonne of Godwine, earle of Kent, and constable of Douer castle. He is appointed by manie authors to haue manie children, as Edwine earle of Mercia: Morkarus earle of Northumberland: Siwardus, or rather Siwardus, earle of Southampton at the time of the conquest: Algitha the wife of Harold the sonne of Godwine, as saith Henrie Knighton, lib. 1. cap. 2. and Lucia first maried to Iuon Taillbois, by whom she had no issue: after maried to Roger the sonne of Girald Romare, by whom she had issue William Romare heire to his father, and earle of Lincoln. And thirdlie she was married to Ranulph the second of that name earle of Chester, by whom she had issue Ranulph the third of that name, earle of Chester.

Morkar. Morkar was earle of Leicester and Lincolne at the time of the conquest, as appeareth by a booke carried about in the hands of all men, composed of all the nobilitie since the conquest: which booke within some lines after, doth also name one Simon Siluester to be earle of Leicester at the time of the conquest, by which of necessitie there must be two earles of Leicester at the time of the conquest, or else there appeareth a great contradiction in that booke; so that which waie so euer it be taken, the booke is imperfect, for it is impossible to haue two earles of one seignioric at one time, which was at the time of the conquest to be liuing, as that booke maketh them both. To which two if you please we will with like error, and with as much authoritie adde the third person, which is earle Edwine, whome some also will needs haue to be earle of Leicester, and that with some shew of reason, for that he was earle of Mercia, which conteined Leicestershire, Lincolneshire, and manie other shires of England. But of all these three to make choise of him which was the truest, I must imbrace Simon Siluester, who I suppose came to that title after the death of Algarus, by the gift of Edward the Confessor. And that there was one Simon earle of Leicester in the Conquerors time, it is so manifest as it needeth no proofe. For the charter of Robert Mellent the first created earle of Leicester, after the time of the conqueror, in the reigne of Henrie the first, reciting one Simon to be earle of Leicester, and predecessour to the said Robert Beaumont or Mellent, doth sufficientlie auouch the same: which Simon was earle of Leicester all the time of the Conqueror and William Rufus, as the said booke of the nobilitie saieth. Now this Simon being before the conquest intituled to that honor, the one of the nobilitie amongst others which called in William Conqueror, and tooke his part against Harold (for the duke of Normandie had not beene of power to subdue England but that he was mostlie aided by the nobilitie of this Ile, and partlie by the Flemings and other nations) was after permitted by the Conqueror and by his sonne William Rufus quietlie to enjoy all such lands and honors as he possessed at anie time before the inuasion of the Normane bastard, vntill the death of the said Simon, which happened about one hundred and ten, or neere there vnto. After the death of which Simon the earledome of Leicester was bestowed vpon Robert Mellent, as hereafter followeth.

Robert Beaumont or Mellent. Robert Beaumont or Mellent, so called because he was earle of Mellent in Normandie; in the right of his mother Adelina sister and heire to Hugh earle of Mellent, was sonne to Roger of Beaumont lord of Ponte Odonar in Normandie, to the which Robert Henrie the first gaue the earldome of Leicester, in the yeare of our Lord one thousand one hundred & three, as appeareth by his charter of the foundation of the abbeie of Leicester, of whom thus writeth Knighton: Iste (meaning Robert earle of Mellent) venit in Angliam cum Williamo Conquestore, cui datus est comitatus Leicestriæ. This Robert built the church of saint Maries in the castle of Leicester, which was destroied in the time of the former war, wherin he placed secular canons, and gaue vnto them lands, rents, and possessions. In which charter and gift of those lands, he maketh mention of Henrie earle of Warwike his brother, and of Margaret wife of the said Henrie. He died in the yere of Christ one thousand one hundred and eightéene, being about the eightéenth of Henrie the first; he married Isabell the daughter of Hugh the great earle of Vermondois, by whom he had issue Gualeran earle of Mellent, and Robert le Bosue earle of Leicester, which Isabell the wife of this Robert the first earle of Leicester, was sister to Ralfe Perona earle of Vermondois, of whom writeth Robertus Montensis these words: Porro Robertus consul de Mellent sapientissimus in rebus secularibus vsque in Ierusalem dzgentium, & regis Henrici familiaris consiliarius luce, mundana caruit: cui successerunt filij sui Gualeranus in Normania factus comes Mellent, & Robertus in Anglia factus comes Leicestriæ. Beside which it appeareth that Robert earle of Mellent had a daughter married to Hugh Montfort, for thus writeth the same Robert Montensis: Eodum anno (which was the yeare of Christ, one thousand one hundred twentie and three, and the three and twentith of king Henrie the first) Hugo de Monteforti perfecerat quoddam castellum validissimum in eodem loco, quod cum rex interrogaret, noluit dare monitu vxoris suæ sororis Gualerani comitis Mellis, qui iam discordia propalata a rege decessit: quod castrum rex obsidione cœpit. And in the yeare following, the said Gualerane, Hugh Montfort, and Hugh Fitzgeruase were taken by William Tankeruille the kings chamberleine, the seuenth kalends of Aprill, touching which Gualerane earle of Mellent this also writeth the same Montensis, in the twelfe yeare of king Henrie the second, being the yeare of Christ one thousand one hundred three score and six: Gualeranus comes Mellenti factus monachus prædi-

pratelli obijt, & succesſit ei filius eius Robertus, natus ex ſorore Ebroicenſis, duxit autem idem Robertus filiam Reynaldi comitis Cornubie.

Robert de Bolſue.

Robert de Bolſue, or rather Boſue, ſo ſurnamed becauſe of his crookebacke, was earle of Leiceſter after the death of his Father, he built the monaſterie of Luffeld in Northamptonſhire, within the foreſt of Wichwood, otherwiſe called Whithelwood, as appeareth by this charter.

The charter of Robert earle of Leiceſter, about the building of the monaſterie of Luffeld.

Robertus comes Legeceſtrie, Radulpho pincerna & omnibus baronibus ſuis ſalutem. Sciatis me dediſſe ſeruo meo Malgerio monacho in eleemoſynã parcam landam, quæ eſt inter Lunbreodam & Cepeleiam, ad manſiones & oratorium ibidem faciendum, & de alia terra de Cernelia tantum ad ædificandum, quantum ego conuenienter conſiderabo per conſilium amicorum meorum. Et hoc feci pro anima regis Anglorum Willielmi, & Matildæ reginæ, & Rogeri de Bellomonte & Adelinæ vxoris ſuæ; & pro anima patris mei Roberti & fratris mei Gualerani. Teſtibus Willielmo de Diua, Galfrido de Turuill, &c. Et hoc feci per conſilium & laudẽ comitis de Guarenna & Nigelli de Albineto, & Gualerani fratris mei comitis de Mellent.

Robert Beaumont or Mellent.

This monaſterie was of the order of Benedictines vnder the gouernment of a prior, whereof one John was appointed by king Henrie, as maie appeare by this writ. Henricus, &c. Vicecomitibus, &c. Præcipio quòd manuteneatis Iohannem priorem meum de Luffeld, quem ibi priorem feci & inſtitui, &c. Teſte Iohanne decano de Sarum apud Vdeſtoc. By which appereth, that though the foundation were ſometime of the earles of Leiceſter, that yet the preſentation was at that time in the king: which earle about the ſecond of K. Stephan, hired the erle Theobald to take his part. For thus writeth Robertus Montenſis; Comes Theobaldus nepos Henrici (which was king Henrie the firſt) conductus à Roberto comite Leiceſtriæ obſedit pontem ſancti Petri & cœpit eum ſuper Rogerum de Toneio. After which this Robert de Bolſue, by the conſent of Alexander biſhop of Lincolne, did in the yeare of our redemption, one thouſand one hundred fortie and three, being the eight yeare of the reigne of king Stephan, build the monaſterie called Sancta Maria de pratis, in the honor of the aſſumption of the virgine Marie, and of the lands, poſſeſſions, rents and churches of the ſaid ſecular chanons in the caſtle of Leiceſter. With manie other lands of his owne gift, he did richlie endow that church, which he remoued out of the caſtle, & placed in the medowes without the caſtle wals, changing them into regular chanons. In which monaſterie by the conſent of his wife, he toke on him the habit of religious, and at his firſt entrance into that houſe gaue to the monks the manor of Stratton, in which religious monaſterie he continued by the ſpace of fiftéene yeares, where he ended his life in the yeare of Chriſt (as ſaith Henrie Knighton) one thouſand one hundred three ſcore and ſeuen, being the thirteenth of Henrie the ſecond: but (as others ſaie) in the yeare one thouſand one hundred three ſcore and nine, being the fiftéenth of the ſame king, and was buried on the right ſide of the quére of the ſame church. Beſides which this Robert founded the abbeie of Gerondine which he replenished with monkes: and at the requeſt of his wife, and with hir helpe, he erected the monaſterie of Eaton furniſhed with nuns. He married Amicia the daughter of Raſe Montfort, by whom he had iſſue Robert de Blanchmaines, beſides which ſonne (as it ſeemeth by Robert Montenſ.) he had a daughter maried to Raſe Toneio. For thus writeth that author in the eight yeare of Henrie the ſecond; Radulphus de Toneo moritur, relicto paruulo filio ex filia Roberti comitis Leiceſtriæ. This Amicia, wife to this earle Robert, did by the conſent of hir huſband become a nun in the foreſaid monaſterie of Eaton. Moreouer this earle was right heire to the honor of Britoll in Normandie, as appeareth by the ſame Montenſis, who in the eightéenth yeare of king Henrie the firſt, as farre as my memorie ſerueth (as I am now driuen to truſt therevnto) writeth in this ſort: Mortuo Willielmo de Paceo abſq; liberis, redditum eſt caſtrũ Pacei Roberto filio Roberti comitis Leiceſtriæ, quia pertinebat ad honorem Britollij, vnde ipſe erat legitimus hæres ex parte matris ſuæ.

Robert Blanchmains.

Robert oue le Blanchmains, or Robert with the white and faire hand, ſucceeding his father, was the third earle of Leiceſter of that line and name after the conqueſt, he founded the hoſpitall of Brackeleie, and indowed the ſame with poſſeſſions, where the hart of the ſaid Robert de Mellent did in the time of Richard the ſecond (in whoſe reigne Henrie Knighton that affirmeth this did liue) remaine ſound and whole, preſerued in a veſſell of lead with ſalt. This man going to Jeruſalem died in his returne homeward at Durace in Græce, where he was buried in the yere of our redemption one thouſand one hundred foure ſcore and ten, being about the ſecond yeare of king Richard the firſt. For the hautineſſe of this Robert kicking againſt king Henrie the ſecond, the walles of the citie of Leiceſter were raſed to the ground: ſith the ſaid Robert leauing the father, and taking part with king Henrie the ſonne, was in armes againſt the king: touching which thus writeth Geruaſius Dorobern. in the yere of Chriſt one thouſand one hundred three ſcore and fourtéene. Circa feſtũ ſanctæ Lucie miſſus eſt in Angliam iunior Robertus comes Leiceſtriæ, & cum eo nonnulla Flandrenſium milia, & a comite Hugone ſunt recepti. Capto autẽ de facile caſtello de Haganeth in Leiceſtriam tẽderẽt in territorio ſancti Edmundi menſe Octobri, occurrerunt eis milites regni Reginaldũ Cornubiæ comitẽ, & comitẽ de Arundel ſequentes, à quibus perterritus cum Flãdrenſib. ſuis, comes Rodbertus fugã iniit, ſed captus eſt ipſe & vxor ſua, & Fãldrenſium tria milia vel amplius trucidati perierunt. Thus much this author liuing in that time, wherevnto Robertus Montenſis addeth, that he with his wife was committed to priſon. Moreouer, this Robert earle of Leiceſter animated the monks of Canturburie to ſtand ſtiffe to the mainteinance of their priuilege againſt Baldwine archbiſhop of Canturburie, and ſaid vnto them (when they came from the preſence of Richard the firſt, greatlie offended with them for their contumacie) By the faith I owe to God I giue you this counſell, laie all your care vpon the Lord, and he will nouriſh you, and all things are to be loſt and ſpent for God and the libertie of the church. This earle married Petronella or Parnel the daughter of Hugh Grantmill; with whom he receiued the honor of Hinkleie, together with the ſtewardſhip of England, by the gift of the ſaid Hugh, which woman did build the bodie of the great church of Leiceſter, & is buried in the quére of the ſaid church before the high altar. This woman wreathed a cord of the haire of hir head, which ſhe tied to an other longer rope, which did draw vp and let downe a lampe tied to the cord made of hir haire, which was extant and kept in the daies of king Richard the ſecond (as ſaith the ſaid author) for a monument and remembrance of hir. He had iſſue Robert Fitzpernell, William the leprous which built the hoſpitall of ſaint Leonards in Leiceſter, Robert biſhop of S. Andrews in Scotland: Amicia married to Simon Montfort, and Margaret married to Saier de Quincio earle of Wincheſter.

Robert Fitzpernell.

Robert Fitzpernell, so surnamed after his mother, was the fourth & last earle of Leicester of that line & name. He went into the holie land with king Richard the first, where after that he had ouerthrowne, and (as saith Henrie of Leicester) valiantlie slaine the Souldan at the tilt, he returned home into England, where he died issuelesse, in the yeare of Christ, one thousand two hundred and foure, and was buried in the abbeie of Leicester: after whose death the whole inheritance (because his brother William was a leper and his brother Robert a bishop, and both dieng without issue) was diuided betweene his two sisters Amicia and Margaret, the eldest being married to Simon Montfort, and the second to Saier de Quincie, as is before touched.

Simon Montfort.

Simon de Montfort, who came into England in the twelfe yeare of king John, being the yeare of our redemption one thousand two hundred and ten, was in the right of his wife earle of Leicester: for hauing the moitie of the countie of Leicester, and of the honor of Hinkeleie, he was made earle of Leicester, and by right of inheritance to him and to his heires, the high steward of England. And Saier de Quincie with the other moitie of the countie of Leicester, was created earle of Winchester. After which the said Simon for disobedience towards the king, was disherited, and banished the realme with his children; and the earldome of Leicester, with the honor of Hinkeleie, was giuen to Rafe or Randulph earle of Chester. This Simon had issue, Almaricus, and Simon. Amicia (by Tilius called Arnæ) wife to this banished Simon, was after hir husbands death (as saith the same Tilius) maried to the lord of Barres, by whome she had issue William de Barres. He died suddenlie, in the yeare of Christ one thousand two hundred and ninetéene.

Randulph Bohune.

Randulph Bohune, aliàs Blondeuille the first earle of Chester, after the conquest, was earle of Leicester, who inioied the same by all probabilitie during his life: though some seeme not to consent thereunto, for that they find him not so called by anie other historiographer, who onelie terme him earle of Chester, Lincolne, and Huntington: he died without issue in the yeare of our redemption, one thousand two hundred thirtie and two, being the seuentéenth yeare of king Henrie the third.

Simon de Montfort.

Simon de Montfort second sonne to the foresaid Simon banished into France, found meanes to purchase all the right that his brother Almaricus being the elder, had to the earldome of Leicester: who being in right, and so intituled, earle of Leicester, but neuer in possession thereof, procured the king to grant the same to his brother Simon. In witnesse whereof, the said Almaricus writeth to Henrie the third on this sort.

The letter of Almaricus to king Henrie the third, requesting to inuest Simon his brother in the earldome of Leicester.

EXcellentissimo domino suo Henrico, Dei gratia illustri Anglorum regi, Almaricus comes Montisfortis & Leicestriæ, salutem, &c. Vestræ regiæ maiestati multotiens supplicaui, &c: vt mihi terram meam & ius meum in Anglia, quod bonæ memoriæ pater meus de vestro tenuit, & tenebat, dum decessit, pacificè ac quietè mihi vestro militi reddatis. Quod quia dominatio vestra non placuit huc vsque facere, adhuc vestræ M. supplico humilitate qua possum, quatenus hac vice mihi vobis seruire parato, reddere dignemini terram. Et si hoc vobis non placuerit, ego ad pedes vestræ dominationis transmitto Simonem fratrem meum, qui de domino rege Franciæ nihil tenet, cui si eam reddiderit s, me pro bene pagato tenerem. Datum Parisijs mense Februario.

Upon which letters, as after shall appeare, king Henrie gaue the earldome of Leicester to the said Simon, second brother of the said Almaricus, to whome by right of inheritance the same did belong by the law of England. But here before I talke anie further of this man, I thinke it not amisse, to note what other authors haue set downe touching the pedegrée of this Simon. Wherein Nicholas Gill the Frenchman, and Tilius, with Polydor the Italian haue erred, as I prooue by our histories, and especiallie by Henrie Knighton that liued some hundred yeares before anie of them all thée, and so best able to know a truth; both in respect that he liued nérer to the age of this Simon, and for that the monks of his house wrote the storie of those persons which were patrons of that monasterie, whereof he was a member. For all religious persons did, with great care, kéepe in memorie by record the succession of their patrons: for which cause I doo most willinglie follow Knighton, and leaue all the other; not forbearing yet to set downe what the Frenchmen write.

Nicholas Gill nameth this Simon to be the son of Almaricus, thus speaking in his annals of France, vnder the title of Lewis the ninth, in the yeare of Christ one thousand two hundred thirtie and eight: fol. 110 En celle annee messire Simon de Montfort, qui fitz estoit de Amaulry conte de Montfort, qui estoit mort a Rome au retourne de oulter mere, per la crainte de la royne de saint Louys, qui lauoit prins en hayne senfuit en Angliterre deuers le roy Henrye, & le recent honorablement, & luy dona sa soir in mariage. Thus he maketh this Simon the son of Almaricus. Then commeth Tilius to amend vp the matter, and he maketh this Simon the sonne of an other Simon; the sonne of that Simon that maried Amicia the heire of Robert Fitzpernell, in whose right he was earle of Leicester, and so maketh thrée Simons in descent earles of Leicester. Which possiblie cannot be in my iudgement. For it is not possible betweene the death of that Simon and of this Simon, to haue one other Simon meane betweene them: for there could not be anie time therefore, from the death of that Simon first earle of Leicester, sith the first Simon came not manie yeares into England before that this last Simon was made earle of Leicester, about the seuentéenth yeare of Henrie the seuenth; by mine account. But this matter shall be more plentifullie examined by me hereafter, in the liues of the earles of Leicester more largelie written, sith my meaning is onelie now by the waie, to giue a note of the contrarieties of histories of the English to the French, and of the French among themselues: and so to the matter.

This Simon, after the death of his father, and agreement with his elder brother, came into England (as some saie) if that booke be trulie copied which is caried about of the nobilitie created since the conquest, in the thirteenth yeare of the reigne of king Henrie the third, which was the yeare of Christ one thousand two hundred twentie & eight: shortlie after which, he maried Elenor the sister of Henrie the third, and daughter to king John. Then the booke going further saith, that in the fourtéenth yeare of Henrie the third, which was the yeare of Christ one thousand two hundred twentie and nine, he was made earle of Leicester and high steward of England. But trulie, sauing correction, I cannot see how that can be so. For first I cannot agrée with Nicholas Gill, who saith that he came into England in in the yeare one thousand two hundred thirtie and eight: nor with the said booke of noble men which saith, that it was in the yeare of Christ one thousand two hundred twentie and eight, nor that he maried the kings sister in the yeare one thousand two hundred twentie and nine. For as Nicholas Triuet and most authors in written hand consent, William Marshall the yonger (which had before maried the said Elenor; for being his widow, the was maried to Simon Montfort) died in the yeare 1231, so that before this time, Simon Montfort could not marie this Elenor, and hir mariage to Marshall was in the yeare 1234, as saith the anonymall author that wrote the historie of England in English rime, setting downe the same mariage in this sort:

The yoonger William Marshall
That earle marshall was,
Wedded this kings sister,
As God gaue the case:
As in the yeare of grace twelue hundred
And twentie foure thereto:
Sith sir Simon de Montfort, Espoused hir also.

Next after this, he could not in the fourteenth yeare of Henrie the third be made earle of Leicester: for Randulph de Bohune earle of Chester was then liuing. And therefore I gather out of an old written chronicle belonging to the house of Euesham, that this Simon, hauing maried Elenor the kings sister, about the yeare of Christ one thousand two hundred thirtie and eight, as hath Matthew Paris, being the twentith yeare of Henrie the third, after the death of earle Marshall, was also after the death of Randulph Bohune (which died in the said yeare one thousand two hundred thirtie & two, being the seuenteenth yeare of king Henrie the third) and somewhat before this mariage created earle of Leicester, about the one and twentith yeare of king Henrie the third, in the yeare of Christ one thousand two hundred thirtie and seuen: so that there is seuen yeares full ods betweene this account, and the booke of the nobilitie. But perhaps some will saie, to be thus curious is but to contend for moneshine in the water; for what auaileth such exact calculations of time, so that they agree in substance of matter? Wherefore of this enough at this time, if truth maie not be suffered, which for the most part purchaseth hatred: and so againe to that which must follow of this Simon Montfort. Touching the marieng of this Simon, thus writeth Ioannes Londonienſis, in the yeare of Christ one thousand two hundred thirtie and eight: Eodem anno ex Ailionoram filiam ſuam comitiſſam de Penbroke nuptui dedit Simon de Monteforti, propter quod omnes comites & barones plurimùm indignabantur: vnde totum regnum fuit commotum. Eodem anno Simon de Monteforti iuit Romam, impetrare vt matrimonium confirmaretur inter ipſum & ſororem regis H. quod ſine læſione conſcienciæ contraxerat, votum cum fecerat ſolenne coram Eadmundo archiepiſcopo Cantuarienſi de continentia ſeruanda. Besides which aduancement by this mariage of the kings sister, this Simon Montfort was also by the said Henrie the third made high Steward of England and earle of Leicester, whereby he recouered his mothers inheritance in England, all which the king fullie granted vnto him, except the patronage of the abbeie of Leicester and the priorie of Kenelworth. This Simon being called the yonger, or Simon the second (who should not haue beene so named if there had beene three Simons in descent earles of Leicester) maried (as before is touched) Elenor the sister of Henrie the third, which had vowed chastitie, or (as the order then was) had taken vpon hir the mantle and the ring by the hands of Edmund archbishop of Canturburie. Afterwards in the yeare of Christ one thousand two hundred fortie and eight, as hath the same Iohn of London, he was sent into Gascoine with a great armie against Gastine the sonne of the countesse of Biard, being then a capitall enimie vnto the king of England. And shortlie following in the yeare of Christ 1252, being greeuouslie accused for his misgouernement of that countrie, he was for his tyrannie remoued from the same. Whereupon some few yeares after, this Simon being so (as before is said) by the king thus aduanced, did like an vnthankful Frenchman moue warre and rebellion against the same Henrie the third, which was called The barons war, whereof there is liberall discourse in all our chronicles, set downe in the reigne of the same king. During which warres at the battell of Euesham, in the yeare of Christ one thousand two hundred sixtie and fiue, being the nine & fortith yeare of the long reigne of this king Henrie the third, this Simon was iustlie slaine for his wicked insurrection, in taking vpon him to correct and rule the king and kingdome. He had issue Henrie his eldest sonne, slaine with his father at the foresaid battell of Euesham; Guido Montfort, who forsaking England and going into France, was stipendarie to the French king; Simon de Montfort who fled likewise into France, and renounced all his title to the earledome of Leicester, being content with a yearelie stipend; Henrie Montfort who being treasuror of Yorke, did after the death of his father (accompanieng his brethren) depart out of England into France, and continued a student at Paris: which foure brethren had one sister named Elenor (after hir mother) maried to Lewline prince of Wales, in the time of Edward the first as our chronicles dow speake. But Tilius the Frenchman, purposelie writing the pedegrees of the Montforts, saith that she was first maried to Peter de Courtneie lord of Colwche, and after to Henrie lord of Sallie, speaking nothing at all of the prince of Wales. After the death of this Simon de Montfort slaine at Euesham, king Henrie the third gaue the earledome of Leicester, with the honour of Hinkeleie, and the stewardship of England to Edmund his sonne, falselie surnamed Crokebacke, as most authors do agree.

Edmund Plantagenet, second son to Henrie the third, was made earle of Leicester by the gift of his father, with the castell of Kenelworth, in the fiftith yeare of the said Henrie, being the yeare of our redemption one thousand two hundred sixtie and six, hauing also besides the same earledome of Leicester the earledome of Lancaster: which Edmund, Triuet further calleth the earle of Holderneſſe. He about the three and fiftith yeare of king Henrie the third, being the yeare of our redemption one thousand two hundred sixtie & nine, on the eight daie of Aprill, married Auelina the daughter of the earle of Albemerle, who was heire to hir fathers & mothers inheritance, in whose right the said Edmund should haue had the earledome of Deuonshire, and the ile of Wight: but the preuenting the death of hir husband, and dieng in his life time, had neuer possession of those places. After the death of which Auelina, this Edmund maried Blanch queene of Nauarra, and widow to Henrie king of that prouince, by whome he had issue three sonnes, Thomas earle of Lancaster, Henrie lord of Monmouth, and John. This Edmund founded the nunrie of the minories without Aldgate of London, in the one and twentith yeare of king Edward the first, being the yeare of Christ one thousand two hundred ninetie and three, in which yeare the said Edmund and his wife were banished out of the French kings dominions. He died at Baion in Gascoine, & was buried at Westminster, on the north side of the high altar (whose toome is yet extant) in the fiue & twentith of Edward the third, being the yeare of our redemption a thousand two hundred ninetie seauen with this epitaph:

Edmund Plantagenet.

Icy gist Emond fitz le roy Henrie le tierce d' Angleter, a qui aime Deieux fait mercye.

Thomas Plantagenet. Thomas Plantagenet, earle of Lancaster, Leicester, Derbie, Lincolne and Sarum, the greatest earle of England, as well for birth as dignitie, rebelling against Edward the second, was beheaded in the foureteenth of the said king Edward the second, being about the yere of our Lord one thousand three hundred twentie and one, at Pomfret, and was there buried by the religious men in his owne church toward the south, neere to the high altar. He maried Alice the daughter and heire of Henrie Lacie earle of Lincolne and Sarisburie, lord of Pomfret and of Halton, but had no issue by hir.

Henrie Plantagenet commonlie called Henrie of Monmouth. Henrie Plantagenet, lord of Monmouth, brother to Thomas last before slaine, in the foureteenth of Edward the second, was after the death of his brother receiued into title and honour of the earldome of Leicester, he maried Mawd the daughter & heire of sir Patrike Chaworth knight, by whome he had issue Henrie, after made duke of Lancaster, surnamed Torticoll. He died in the yeare of Christ one thousand three hundred fortie and fiue, and was buried in the monasterie of the chanons at Leicester.

Henrie Plantagenet. Henrie Plantagenet, surnamed Torticoll or Crokeneke, sonne to Henrie of Monmouth, sonne to Edmund commonlie (as before) but falselie surnamed Crokebacke, was earle of Derbie, Leicester, and duke of Lancaster. He died the fiue & thirtith yeare of king Edward the third, being the yeare of our redemption one thousand three hundred sixtie and one, at London, and was buried at Leicester in the collegiat church which he had builded, with a deane, twelue chanons, prebendaries, manie vicars and other ministers accordinglie answerable to the offices of that house. This man was glorious in fortune, and in his youth full of honour, in matter of chiualrie a valiant souldior and a wise councellor, a liberall prince, and a courteous supporter of iustice. He married Isabell the daughter of Henrie lord Beaumont, and had issue two daughters, Mawd married to William duke of Bauaria, earle of Henalt, Zeland and Holland, who after became mad, and Blanch maried to John of Gaunt.

John of Gaunt. John of Gaunt, fourth sonne to Edward the third, was by his wife Blanch, earle of Leicester, as heire to hir father, so that he was in his owne right, and in the right of his wife, duke of Acquitaine and Lancaster, earle of Leicester, Derbie, Sarisburie, and Lincolne, of whome is more spoken in my discourse of the dukes of England pag. 1230, and of the protectors of England set downe before in the time of Edward the first pag. 1069.

Henrie Bolingbroke. Henrie Bolingbroke, sonne of John of Gaunt, by his first wife Blanch, was duke of Lancaster & Hereford, earle of Derbie, Leicester & Lincolne, being after king of England, by the name of king Henrie the fourth. From whose atteining to the crowne, vntill this Robert Sutton or Dudleie earle of Leicester (by whome I haue béene occasioned to make this discourse of these earles of Leicester in this place) I do not remember of anie that hath béene indued with that title of honor to himselfe or to his heires.

Robert Sutton alias Dudleie created earle of Leicester, &c: see pag. 1207. Robert Sutton alias Dudleie, knight of the most honourable order of the garter, baron of Denbigh, was created earle of Leicester in the first yeare of queene Elisabeth, being the yeare of our redemption one thousand fiue hundred sixtie and foure, whose manner of creation I will omit, because it is alreadie set downe in the said yeare of Christ one thousand fiue hundred sixtie and foure. And thus much touching the earles of Leicesters in generall, and touching Robert Sutton in especiall, whose honourable interteinment in the lowe countries (whereinto he entered in this yeare of Christ one thousand fiue hundred eightie and fiue) deseruing not to be forgotten, doth follow in this sort.

John Stow. Robert earle of Leicester transported ouer sea to Flushing. On the eight daie of December, the said earle accompanied with the earle of Esser, the lord North, the lord Awdeleie, sir William Russell, sir Thomas Sherleie, sir Arthur Basset, sir Walter Waller, sir Garuise Clifton, and other knights, capteins and souldiours, with his traine, to the number of fiftie sailes of ships & hoies, set forward towards Flushing, with sound of trumpets and drums, shouts, and prairs of the people, to happie and fortunate successe. On the tenth daie he arriued at Flushing, where with his whole traine (garded in his owne person by fiftie archers with bowes and arrowes, fiftie halberds, and fiftie gunners) he was with the interteinment of souldiours, and shot of the towne, and his noble companie before him, interteined by sir Philip Sidneie, gouernour vnder hir maiestie of the same towne, by Graue Morris second sonne to the deceased prince of Orange, by hir maiesties ambassador ligier there, and by the states of the towne passing honourablie interteined with ringing of bels, and making of bonfiers after their maner, which is to fix great pitcht barrels on the tops of high poles, and then to fire them. He was there feasted and lodged in the ambassadors house, where, according to his accustomed disposition, he demeaned himselfe so humblie (as he likewise did in all places where he came) that he purchased to himselfe no lesse loue & good liking than among the English:

The earles arriuall at Flushing and his interteinment.

Quippe loco positus sublimi, pectore miti,
Mansueto ac humili cunctis fit amabilis ille.

He taketh towards Middleborough. On the next daie after a sermon had in the publike church, and dinner ended, he tooke shipping and sailed toward Middleborough. Halfe waie betwixt Middleborough & Flushing standeth the strong skonce of Ramekens, garnished with Englishmen, at the which he with some of his especiall traine landed and viewed the same, who returning againe to their ships, were presented on the top of the wals, in the front of the sea with fiftie pikemen verie brauelie furnished, hauing their English ancient displaied with triumph of shot, sound of trumpets & drums, neere two houres togither. In the which honorable triumphs, the whole fleet hauing good wind and faire wether, sailed along to Midleborough, where on the shore side at the landing place were, vnder nine ancients displaied with great store of shot, the best states of the countrie attending my lords landing.

The skonce at Ramekens garnished with English.

His interteinment at Middleborough.

Ouer the gates by the port was painted the red crosse of England, hir maiesties armes, and the states, through which gates the earle and his traine entering, he was thus from his landing to his lodging garded through a lane of musket shot with the ancients borne before him, with trumpets & drums verie roiallie, almost a quarter of a mile. In the middle of the market place was the English ancient aduanced, and deliuered vnto him, with the which and the rest borne before him he came to his lodging, where at the intreatie of the states, he staid more than two houres at the gate, to see the soldiors marching and their strengths; after which, because it was neere vnto night, he entered, and made his dinner and supper all one. Three of those nine ancients were new. In the first were hir maiesties and the emperors armes quartered. In the second the earle earle of Leicesters and the Prince of Oranges armes togither. In the third were the seuen prouinces yelded vnto hir maiestie, all verie excellentlie emblasoned.

Three ancients excellentlie emblazoned.

In a large table hanged ouer the gate of the English house in Middleborough, were emblasoned the armes of hir maiestie alone aboue the rest, next vnder that the lord lieutenant his armes on the one side at large; hard by the which was set out the armes of the states and their houses: all which artificiallie by a chaine were linked togither, & fastened to the English armes, vnder which was written at the foot of this frame, Quos Deus coniunxit, homo non separet. Thus with great ioie and continuall triumph was he interteined on their Christmas eues eue, after the Romish computation, which they in Zeland and Holland obserue in that order.

On Christmas eue, the states of the towne in the states house, which standeth in the middest of the towne or market place, feasted him sumptuouslie. In the first course of which feast thorough out the table was nothing but boiled meats, most excellent and deintie. In the second course was all roast meats that could be thought, pigs serued in on their fat, and wild fowle part in the fethers. In the third course was all kind of baked meats, as fowles in pies with their heads and tailes vnpluckt, all beset with pendants of hir maiesties, the lord lieutenants, the countries, and diuerse English mens armes on the same. The fourth and last course was a rare banket of incredible workmanship, as a castell of christall, founded vpon a rocke of pearle, about the which flowed siluer streames, in which laie fowles, fishes, and beasts of all kinds, some hurt, some slaine, and some gasping for breath; on the top of the which was a faire virgin ladie leaning, and giuing hir hands ouer the castell to succour them, verie wonderfullie wrought. There was wine in abundance, musike of all sorts, varietie of all things, and wonderfull welcomes. This feast began at eleuen of the clocke before noone, and continued till fiue in the afternoone.

The next daie being their Christmas daie, the earle to requite the states cost, inuited them all, whome he feasted verie roiallie after the English fashion. On saint Stephans daie he feasted the widow princesse of Orange, with hir second sonne countie Horris, and their traines, so sumptuouslie as beseemed his and their honors. Here dispatching his weightie affaires he continued seauen daies, after which he determined to saile towards Dort, which by iudgement of the countrie is not past ten houres sailing at the most. On the seuentæenth of December (after the account of England) with faire wind and weather, the whole fleet of Dutch hoies hoised vp saile toward Dort; but on the sudden, being onward on their iournie, the aire was so ouercast with mists, that they knew not how to saile for succour, neither backewards nor forwards. The reason was this. The riuer they had to saile thorough, was none other but an ouerflowne countrie, full of old foundations of houses, churches, and castels, so that the cleerest aire did no more than safegard the hoies from danger.

On the twentith daie my lord with some other landed at Williamstat, or Ragonhill, where he dined, and after dinner went abrode againe. On the one and twentith of December, diuerse ships of men of warre, and others, with the states of Dort in them met our fleet on the water, where betwirt their ships & ours was at the meeting of the earle great triumphs with shot, in which came manie small scouts of succour, to hasten the traines to shore, where in good time they entered Dort, verie roiallie and triumphantlie. On the port, to gard his person was set his owne gard of archers, shot, and halberds: and ouer the gate of enterance was hir maiesties, the earles, and the states armes emblasoned. When he was landed, and conducted by the states, he passed from the port thorough a lane of musket shot, all Dutch, braue and well appointed, with eight ancients displaied before him; in the middest whereof was the English ancient aduanced, whense with eight hundred shot he was brought to his lodging. After whose enterance they and the great shot continued triumphing an houre and more. Here he continued a daie and two nights, with singular interteinement, and reioising of the people. Ouer the court gate were on the wall at the entering written certeine Latine verses, signifieng the state of the low countries, to this effect in English:

The widow countrie wailing in hir losse,
Subiect to soldiors, and a strangers crosse,
By weeping hir misfortune, sits here alone,
To thinke of hir pleasures past and gone,
But after France and Spaine haue doone their woorst,
Hir helpelesse yoong ones, are by England nurst:
Blest be that virgine queene, that sent this good,
And blest be he that comes to saue our blood,
Whome to our soules a buckler we maie call,
And to our countrie, we crie welcome all.

On the three and twentith of December, the earle tooke scouts to passe to Rotherodame, by a pleasant riuer of fresh water, verie narow, where the botes or scouts are some by men, some by horses dragged along the riuer, verie pleasant, speedie, and easie. But yet in this passage the night being cleere, suddenlie there arose so great a tempest, that it put the small vessels in verie great danger; but after one houre the weather wared calme, and the night cleere, onelie a Dutch capteine and three or foure of his men were drowned. Toward night he drew neere to the towne of Rotherodame, where on the water he was met with three barges of pleasure, in euerie of which was twelue sailers, the first all in blew vierkens and venecians with red caps, and whole cypres white satyre like. In the second, twelue all in buffe. In the third twelue all in shag thrummed like verie braue, with their oares red and white: in these boats were great store of fire works, & rockets, to cast into the citie: and at the sterne of euerie one were cressets which towards night were lighted, and on the water made an excellent shew.

Thus with trumpets sounding all the waie, was he brought to Rotherodame by water to his lodging in the midle of the towne. On the other side of them, on the banks stood ranks of soldiors, all with musket shot, betwirt euerie foure of them was placed a torch, or cressets burning: and thus triumphantlie he entered his lodging, where the states accompanied him to supper that night. Here the inhabitants were ioifull of the Englishmens comming, praising God therefore, and making much of the traine, insomuch that euerie man dined in his hostes house of free cost. The townesmen had made verie memorable in the middle of the market place the whole proportion of Erasmus in a pulpit, as though he were preaching, holding a booke of the paraphrasis on the gospels in his hand, vnder whome was written Erasmus Rotherodame.

On the three and twentith of December, the earle made hast towards Delph, being from thense accompanied with the states, his barges of pleasure, and whatsoeuer was thought honorable. They came late to Delph, somewhat darke, but lighted by cressets along the narrow riuer, on the which manie rockets and fire works were vsed. On the landing port stood great store of musket shot (with manie new ancients) like a lane, for him to passe thorough

He entreth into Dort, how magnifically he was receiued, and what time he abode there.

Verses written ouer the court gate.

A Dutch capteine with three or foure of his men drowned in a fresh riuer.

The lord lieutenant commeth to Rotherodame by water, and the maner of his triumphant enterance therinto.

Diet of free cost.

A counterfeit of Erasmus.

The maner of the lord lieutenants entring into Delph.

rough as is commonlie vsed in the countrie, all which brought him to his lodging, which was the house where the prince of Orange was slaine. Ouer the gate of which house were certeine Latine verses written, conteining a gratulation & welcomming of the earle thither, testified with a consent of all degrees and professions: the same verses being thus:

He lodgeth in the house where the prince of Orange was slaine.

Salue perpetuùm comes illustrissime salue,
O bene quàm diuûm nomine gratus ades!
Te nihil est gratum magis, optatúmque tuendæ
Auspicium fidei, quàm patriæque venis!
Hinc tibi gratantur læti (sacer ordo) senatus,
Et memor officij cætera turba sui,
Spe meliore animi recreantur, gaudia toto
Pectore concipiunt pressa dolore diu,
Irrita quæ superi nolunt fore cassáque facta,
At magis inque dies accumulata volunt,
Reginam incolumem téque illustrissime seruent,
Sospite qua tecum patric sospes erit.
Dedecus infandum, probra turpia multa sequuntur,
Est mala cui nequam mens animúsque malus.

The lord lieutenant feasteth and is feasted.

On the fiue and twentith daie the earle was feasted of the states verie roiallie, and on the next morrow the earle feasted them, amongst whome was (besides the states and countie Morris) the princesse of Des, with a companie of honorable ladies and gentlewomen: at the table was Dutch musike of all kinds, orations in Dutch and Latine, with infinite welcoms. And it is to be noted, that the further the earle went vp into Holland, the brauer the countrie was, and the better his lordship was beloued, as appeared by his more excellent intertein-

The countrie of Holland commended.

The lord lieutenant remoueth to Donhage, and his entrance therinto.

ment. Here he staied the fiue and twentith and six and twentith daies, and then on the seuen and twentith he remoued to Donhage, where he determined to keepe his standing court. In the euening the earle by cressetlight, torches, & deuises of fire worke verie strange, entred into the towne of Donhage with a verie princelie traine of our Englishmen, with an hundred and fiftie of his gard, besides all or most of the states of Rotherodam & Delph, with those of Donhage that met him on the water with musket shot verie manie, and great triumphing. At the entrance of my lord by water on the riuer met him certeine fishermen, which represented Peter, James, and John at their herbour: by them Christ walking on the water, who commanded them to cast out their nets the second time (according to that of saint Matthew) they drew in abundance, wherewith they made shew of presentment to the erle, for the which with thanks he passed by. Further on the riuer sat the representation of Mars and Bellona, who vttered speeches vnto him as he passed, at that present.

The first shew at Donhage of fishermen.

The second shew of poeticall gods.

At his landing met him a troope of horsemen, furnished and trapped antikelie in colours, before whome hauing fetcht manie courses, because the street waxed narrow, they rode awaie. At the entrance of the faireſt street, being also somewhat narrow, there was on ech side of the same gallozie, raised a mans height, ech against other, all hong with blacke baies, on both which gallozies on ech side stood fifténe virgins all clad in white, with branches of palme or bor weathed about war candles light in their hands, euerie of which did reuerence vnto the earle; these stood a speares length distant ech from other. Betwixt euerie one hong a looking glasse, and betwixt euerie glasse vpon a pretie antike pearch stood a war candle burning, and at ech end of the gallozie stood a champion and a blacke More, the one supporting the armes of England, and the other the armes of Holland. This shew was verie proper, but these had no speeches. All the waie as the earle passed through, were artificiallie made gates raised of

The third shew of horsses antikelie trapt and furnished.

The fourth shew of virgins in white araie.

ragged staues, and vpon euerie snag stood a small war candle burning, by which hong the armes of diuerse craftsmen of the towne. The street all the waie was hong with broad clothes, vpon the which were placed store of red roses on sheetes of paper painted. At the next turning he was interteined with this shew. Ouer a gate vpon a verie high scaffold was a conceiued battell fought betweene the English soldiors and the Spaniards, the English men still prevailing, vnder the which was written thus much in effect: furthermore, these lines in the Latine tong, alluding to England, anciently called Britaine, were written in open sight as followeth:

The first shew of ragged staues with other deuises.

The first shew of conceiued battell betweene the English and the Spanish.

Such be our fortune, as this dooth foreshoo,
To vs freedome, to England fame also.

Maris terrarúmque sidus, BRITANIA.
Aequa Romanorum olim imperio,
Luxit salus, affulsit Constantinus,
Qui adsertor libertatis, instaurator
Christianæ pietatis:
Da & nobis fidam vicinámque dextram.
Faxit Deus optimus maximus,
Vt reginæ auspicijs, Dudlæi ductibus,
Militis tui viribus,
Iugo seruitutis excusso, belli nimbis discussis,
Ex infœlicissimis fœlicissimi Belgæ simus,
Sacro tecum arctóque vinclo iuncti!

Passing still forward, was a loftie scaffold verie faire builded, with hir maiesties armes at large placed, on the top stood seauen virgins, representing the seuen prouinces, euerie virgin holding a speare, and the armes at large emblasoned, which prouince she did signifie; in the middest of whom stood Minerua armed, incompassed about the bodie with the armes of England, vpon whome all the rest seemed to relie, as most euidentlie appeared by their verse:

The fourth shew of seuen virgins representing the seuen prouinces.

Adsis ô nostrúmque leues regina laborem.

All which were represented vnto hir maiestie by Necessitie an old champion. The next was on the like scaffold, seuen persons presented the seauen liberall sciences in their kinds, yéelded to the earle by desert: out of euerie window hong lanthorns and candles, and euerie street was furnished with cressets, torches, and links light: one deuise that hong in the middest of the street conteined eight and thirtie lanthorns, and seuerall lights comelie burning: a verie pretie sight. Besides this, against my lords gate, a barbar had on a wall placed three score or more basons of bright copper, & in the middest of euerie one a war candle burning was placed, in the middest of all was painted a rose and crowne: this made a faire shew, and was a pretie deuise. Under the red rose was written these verses following:

The right shew of seuen persons representing the seuen liberall sciences.

Floreat hæc semper rosa, cuius odore reuixit
Belgia languescens, regina dite potita.

Ouer the entrance of the court gate, was placed aloft vpon a scaffold, as if it had béene in a cloud or skie, Arthur of Britaine, whome they compared to the earle; within were hoboies, cornets, and diuers kinds of musike. And thus they brought him to his lodging triumphantlie, and after he was entred in a great hall of that house, they discharged such volées of shot as was wonderfull to heare. In the night they vsed fireworks of rockets, squibs, wheeles, and balles of fire, with a dragon that continued casting out of fire an houre, wonderfull artificiallie made.

The next daie, on the riuer adioining to my lords lodging, they deuised a running as it were at the tilt in botes, which was thus. From ech end of the riuer came a bote running with six oars, in the sterne of which on the top stood a man armed in a red wastcote, with a staffe in his rest, hauing a but end of corke; now eche meeting other with their staues, both fell into the water, where spare botes were readie to succour them, for awaie went their horsses. This sport with freth men they continued till the earle was wearie of it, in pitieng the poore case of the men.

On the third daie of Januarie the earle with three hundred horsses in their furniture, verie brauely with his retinue entred Leidon, where by the waie he was met by the best of the towne, first by twelue burgomaisters, clad in long blacke gownes, and on their shoulders was the townes name, written in verie large letters of siluer: next them followed other twelue of the cheefest burgesses, and then manie on horsse backe, all in blacke veluet. At his entrance into the towne, all ouer his head, and downe to the ground on eche side, was hanged with saie of diuerse colours to his lodging, which was a great waie; himselfe with a canopie carried ouer his head was brought to his seat, against the which was a stage, on the which stood two men like poets, who presented these seuerall shewes that follow. It is to be noted, that eight yeares before this, they were besieged, and therefore now presented their extremities, which at that time they were driuen into. They brought therefore a faire woman on the stage verie brauelie apparelled, & the represented the towne, hir they assalted by Spaniards, with false fiers of great & small shot a long time in order of battell, and then retiring continued their siege; here they laie so long that vittels waxed scarse, and then they presented after the poets of what this shew had passed. Famine attired accordinglie then breathed into the woman; after which they presented men rending dogges and cats aliue in sunder, and fed on them, and souldiors robbing women of their children.

Sickneese now possesseth hir and pestilence, and this they presented in abrupt burials of townesmen on heapes; and lastlie with a braue buriall of a captaine, who was borne ouer the stage with dead matches, howling trumpets, wrapt up ancients, trailed pikes, drawne peeces; and after he was put into the ground, and bid farewell with a volee of great and small shot. The Spaniards pitieng hir, writ and sent letters by diuerse messengers, all which she read and refused, without returne of answer: now hope possesseth hir, and therefore they toke another waie. Now she commanded a light to be set on the highest steeple in the towne, to signifie vnto the prince of Orange that laie in Delph, how they hoped for succor; who againe, by deuise of a doue sent them promise of aid, by which doue they promised to attend the good houre, and so the shew ended.

Now came Gods prouidence, vpon whome the towne relied, and she learned: Gods prouidence in the dead of the night ouerthrew a peece of the wall and bawmure of six and twentie poles. Which the enimie hearing; and fearing the prince and his power to be entred for their aid, they fled, whome when the towne had in pursute, they put all they ouertoke to the sword, the rest escaped by flight, and so with the woman, as it were now at libertie that presented the towne, they marched awaie merilie with great triumph. At the last they brought in a woman verie braue, armed as the other was, hir they besieged with a Spaniard, intised with a Frenchman, and flattered with an Italian twise, the Spaniard put by, she fled the stage, and leaping off hastilie hid hir selfe vnder the earls cloke, whom he shadowed, and the Spaniard threatning marched awaie. The earle led hir to his lodging, wherein to be entred with shot. On the scaffold were written these verses, in effect as followeth in English:

We Flemings being banished, now wailing here,
We are as they in Babilon, by the water clere
Bicause we wold not worship idols, but Gods word,
And might not sing our praise vnto the Lord,
Are we driuen out as now dooth appeare,
But our deliuerance is now verie neare,
For God hath looked vpon our miserableneese,
And sent vs a prince whom he will blesse,
Which praised be God as it dooth beseeme,
Who hath deliuered vs from dangerous case,
And humbled the hart of such a noble queene,
As hath sent vs a gouernor now in this space,
Laieng his hand to the warres through his grace
And his arme mightilie, the which vs defend,
Thus praised may he be world without end,
Which sendeth such a prince aboue all that liueth,
And one that gouerns to gods honor he now giueth.

These verses seeme to be made by no metrician: perhaps they were deuised by some of Leidon.

So passing on to my lords lodging, on the doore of the entring were written these verses following:

Pro auspicijs illustrissimi & generosissimi comitis Roberti Dudlæi, regiæ maiestati apud Anglos à consilijs, & gubernatoris Belgiæ, &c: ad Holandos consolatio.

Inter Iberiadum furias & tigridis iras,
Oppressi fletum comprimitote viri,
Nos licèt innumeris hostilia bella periclis
Assiduè infestent, mille necésque trahant,
Nostra tamen Domini rebus fiducia si sit
In Domino, miseris expediet facilè.
Nicanor Lestrij generis viribus malè nostras
Ceruices pulsat, barbara verba vomens:
Viribus at Leicestranis iugulabitur ille,
En Machabæus adest, qui Nicanora premat,
Auspicio Christi, qui in vitam funera vertit,
Qui fidei vindex, qui mala nostra leuat.
En generose comes, Dauidis pia facta sequutus,
Iusticiæ exerce iura seuera tuæ:
Et tibi sit præsens magnum qui temperat orbem,
Vt pede victrici colla teras Goliæ.

Verses written vpon the doore of the lord lieutenants lodging

On the daie after his comming to the towne, he was banketted, at which banket were orations and deuises manie. On the fift of Januarie hee came backe from Leidon vnto Donhage. The tenth he mustred part of his horssemen, to the number of fiue hundred or more, and then pointed them into seuerall garisons, and to seuerall gouernors, the earle of Essex was that daie made generall of the horsses. The eleuenth daie hee came from Donhage to Leidon. The twelfe daie a generall fast was proclamed through Holland, Gelderland, and Friseland, which was kept with great zeale. The lord lieutenant spent that daie till night with preaching, reading, and singing of psalmes; neither he or anie of his eating anie thing. The nineteenth of Januarie he came from Leidon to Donhage, where in his time of abode, he rode to a little fisher towne two miles from the Hage, named Skeueling, which towne doth bound on the maine seas. In this towne he was presented with these verses:

Like as the sea goddesse Thetis had ingendred,
The valiant Achilles to the Greeks defence,
So hath now this English Thetis, who all praise de-Sent vs this Achilles to our Assistence, (serued
Wherefore we yeeld him all due reuerence.

The lord lieutenant returneth backe from Leidon to Donhage.

A generall fast proclamed and deuoutlie obserued.

The lord lieutenant rideth to Skeueling, and is presented with a few English verses.

These words were written in the great hall at Donhage, conteining terms of honor & welwishing: Beatus qui facit opus Domini fideliter. ¶ Inclyto principi Roberto Dudlæo comiti Leicestriæ, inter magnates maximè pio, prudenti, forti, Dei permissu a regina misso, præfecto ac gubernatori Belgarum, prosperum hunc optatúmque aduentum toto lætitiæ sinu gratulamur, ecclesiæ & reipublicæ salutem optamus, fœderati ordinis Belgij, addicti celsitudini eius. ¶ Deus cæpit, Deus dirigat.

Titles of honor ascribed to the lord lieutenant, with a reioising at his comming.

The foure and twentith of Januarie, the prince of Portugall came to Donhage. The fiue and twentith tith my lord was installed and swoorne, and likewise all the states swoorne to the quæne. The maner of the installing was thus. At Donhage is a maruellous faire hall, at the vpper end whereof are fiue or six large steppes ascending, which do reach to a faire chamber, at the vpper end whereof on high was placed a cloth of estate, in the midst of which were the armes of England, and against them my lord was seated, on ech side of him two steps descending sat twelue of the principall states, and below them sat the residue, to the number of twentie right before my lord, but foure or fiue steps descending. On the right hand of my lord did stand the prince of Portugall, next him the lord Norleie, next master Norris gouernor of Munster, next sir William Russell, & sir Robert Germin, with diuers men of great account. On the left hand of my lord did stand the Graue Norris, next the earle of Essex, sir William Stanleie, sir Robert Stapleton, and sir Thomas Parrat, with diuers other of great account. Thus being placed, a Dutch man made a large oration in Dutch, declaring the causes of the matter in hand, with thanks to the quænes maiestie and the lord lieutenant.

The estates swoorne to the quæne of England.

The earle of Leicester installed at Donhage, with the maner and order thereof.

Persons of honor and worship.

The couenants betwæn the quænes maiestie and the estates, read in Latine and deliuered to and fro.

Then was read in Latine the couenants betwæne the states, the quæne and my lord: this done the couenants were deliuered to my lord, which he deliuered to the states, and the states deliuered an other to him: then was my lord demanded to vow the same by oth, who holding his hand to heauen did swear to the couenants. The like did the states, holding vp their hands, vow to performe. Then againe were the states swoorne to the quæne and my lord hir lieutenant in those affaires. This done my lord gaue to them seuerall thanks, and they seuerallie did giue to him the like, which being done, my lord passed through to his chamber, the trumpets all sounding before him. This daie my lord feasted all the states most sumptuouslie, so that they had their fill both in their bellies and heads. This daie after dinner the souldiers of the towne, which were three ancients, came into the court furnished, and did there shew themselues with drum and fiffe, at night were aboue an hundred fiers burnt about my lords house.

The souldiers of the towne shew themselues in martiall maner.

On the foure and twentith of Januarie, the countie Norris came to my lord lieutenant, and was receiued in good sort. The same eight and twentith and last of Januarie companies mustered by Thomas Digs, muster-master generall in Guelder, Friseland and Holland, were as followeth. Master Norris colonell gentleman, two hundred foure score and ten: coronell Morgan, two hundred foure score and ten: capteine Wotton, one hundred thirtie and six: capteine Powle, one hundred and seuentæne: capteine Baskerfield, foure score: capteine Yorke, foure score and six: capteine Hunings, one hundred and eleuen: capteine Udall, three score and seuentæne: capteine Powell, foure score and fouretæne: capteine Hart, three score and eight: capteine Price, one hundred twentie and three: capteine Wilson, one hundred fourtie and fiue: capteine Blunt, one hundred twentie and seuen: capteine Burros, one hundred and ten: capteine Yarston, one hundred twentie and foure: captaine Shaw, foure score and foure: capteine Enge, three score and nine: capteine sir Walter Waller, one hundred thirtie and seuen. The second of Februarie capteine Willoughbie died at Hage, and was there honorablie buried. On the third of Februarie all the yeomen of the gard toke their oth, whom remitting to the conscience of their charge, we purpose now to touch the peremptorie authoritie committed to the said lord lieutenant, by common consent of the states; and so by degrees to descend to other occurrents concerning these netherlands.

Captaines with their companies that mustered.

The death of capteine Willoughbie.

A placard conteining the authoritie giuen by the states of the low countries, vnto the mightie prince, Robert earle of Leicester, baron of Denbigh, &c: for the gouernment of the said low countries: translated out of Dutch into English, as followeth.

THe generall states of the vnited prouinces of the low countries, to all those which shall see or heare these present writings, health and dilection. Euen as it hath pleased hir maiestie of England mercifullie to send ouer into these countries the high and mightie prince and lord, lord Robert earle of Leicester, baron of Denbigh, and one of the priuie councell, knight of the noble order of the garter, and not onlie to admit and institute his excellencie as chæfe head aboue all militarie souldiers on horse or foote, which hir maiestie hath sent or shall send ouer hereafter into these countries; & to the end to assist vs with counsell, aid & aduise, according to his great experience, policie and wisedome in the direction of publike affaires of the land, as well touching the feates of warre, as other waies, in conseruation of all that which most tendeth to the profit of the foresaid land, to bring backe and reduce the same into such good order and rule as it hath bene in times past, to the end that so much the better and orderlie he maie resist the force and tyrannie of our enimies, and to frustrate all his practises: but also besides this to honor and inrich his foresaid excellencie with greater authoritie, might and commandement, aboue all hir maiesties admerals and viceadmerals, and ships of war, to command them all, & to emploie them to the seruice of these countries, and in such order as his excellencie shall find nædfull for the same countrie; and that his excellencie following hir maiesties commandement, desirous to shew the effect of the good will and affection which he beareth to these affairs, and to the preseruation of the same, and also of the true christian religion, and hath imploied himselfe so willinglie in the foresaid matters, that his excellencie for that onlie cause hath left and abandoned his natiue countrie and goods, and transported himselfe hitherward amongst vs: so that hir maiestie and his excellencie could neuer haue done or shewed vnto vs a greater benefit than this.

Note what a title and stile of excellencie the estates giue to the earle their gouernor, and the honorable service to him appointed.

An acknowledgement and performace of duetie and allegiance inioined to all persons of the low countries (vnder paine of punishment) to the lord lieutenant.

All pretense of ignorance cut off, least the course of obedience might be hindered.

The good will and affection of the lord lieutenant to performe the premisses signified and by good protestified.

Therefore are we resolued, with good and ripe deliberation, to certifie all men by these presents, that we haue desired, accepted, and authorised the foresaid mightie & honorable prince, lord Robert earle of Leicester, &c: to be our gouernor and generall capteine ouer all the vnited prouinces, and associat cities and members of the same. And we giue vnto his excellencie, besides the authoritie of hir maiestie giuen vnto him, the highest and supreame commandement, and absolute authoritie aboue, and in all matters of warfare by sea and by land, to execute and administrat the same to the resistance of the enimie, euen as his excellencie shall thinke most commodious to the preseruation of those countries: and so further, to doo all such things as apperteine to the office of a generall capteine. And furthermore, we commit the administration and vse of policie & iustice ouer the foresaid vnited prouinces, and associat cities and members of the same into his hands, to execute and administrat the same with such power and authoritie, as haue had in times past all the other gouernors of these low countries before him; and especiallie, as haue bene exercised, and lawfullie administred in the time of Charles the fift; reserued Councellors for matters of state elected by the lord lieutenant.

The states agnise the peremptorie authoritie put into the lord lieutenants hands in respect of his gouernment.

Like authoritie giuen to the lord lieutenant, as other gouernors his predecessors haue had in the low countries.

serued onelie the lawes and priuileges of the foresaid countries: also with especiall power to collect profits and receiue, and administrat all the contributions which are agreed and condescended, or shall hereafter be consented or agreed, to the maintenance of the warres: and also, that which is or shall be deliuered hereafter into his excellencies hands: and this all according to the vertue of other letters and missiues written more at large touching the same agreement. All which former charge and commission, his excellencie through our earnest desire hath accepted, and hath deliuered solemne oth and assurance into our hands, first of all, for the preseruation of the true christian religion, and maintenance of the priuileges and rights of these lands and prouinces, members, and cities of the same.

We therefore ordeine and command all gouernors of prouinces and cities, all admerals and vicenors of prouinces and cities, all admerals and vicenors of prouinces and cities, all admerals and vicen

the had brought vnder, and vnder this was written these verses in legible Latine letters or characters:

Iustitia infestos frænat pietate tyrannos,
Sic tuus aduentus cuncta Roberte mala.

A crowne, the frame whereof was adorned with roses.

Passing further into a faire market place, there was a piller of great height, on the top whereof was a crowne, and about the foote of the crowne roses set, and these eight verses were written about the piller:

Elisabeth regina auanis quæ regibus orta est,
Hunc dedit atroci qui nos tueatur ab hoste,
Ergo ducem iuuenis meritò venerare Jenéxque,
Munere quando Dei Geticum nympha ista fugabit.
Pyramidum Pharia silent miracula gentes,
Quámq; vetus molem duxit ad astra Rhodos,
Iam tibi dux vilem pro tempore ponimus, at hâc
Aurea si possem concclibrandus'eris.

The beare & ragged staffe, with certeine verses concerning peace.

Ouer the entrance of the palace or lodging for the earle, there was set a beare with a ragged staffe, and these verses written vnder concerning the peace:

Venisti ô auibus tandem fœlicibus heros,
Regia quem nobis munere nympha dedit:
Virgo Calidonias ad sidera nota per oras,
Vltima spes fessis præsidiúmque viris:
Reddere te sine quis patriæ Saturnia regna
Posset, & armisoni pellere tela dei?
Vera etenim de te si dux oracula fantur,
Hæc Dudlæe teget nos sine Marte rosa:
Pacificè rege, regnis lætantibus, heros,
Pacifico quis non principe lætus erit?

A shew made by the souldiours according to military skill.

In all the streetes of this towne, where through the earle passed, were planted souldiours in most braue furniture, and he being placed in a window right against the market place, the same souldiours there ranged themselues first in a ring, then marching into a square; and after passing in verie good forme, the night for the most part being spent with fire workes and shewes most braue. In one of the shewes a picture of a woman signifieng enuie, was burnt. On the fourth of March, the L. lieutenant saw the earle of Essex cornell, and sir William Russell cornell, musker and traine by Harlem to the number of two hundred horse. And on the second daie after, he was feasted and banketed. The tenth of March he came from Harlem to Amsterdam, and by the waie was met with diuerse men of warre well shipped, which brought him by a long riuer that went into the towne, ouer the which riuer were three strong bridges placed full of armed souldiours, & on the first bridge was planted ten or twelue peeces of ordinance, which all after his honor was passed shot off, the souldiors on euerie bridge discharging by volees in most braue maner.

The L. lieutenants going to Amsterdam, with the maner of his receiuing.

Being past the bridge, he was met with two great pageants or shewes, in this manner. Two boats were made in monstrous greatnesse; on the one the shape or likenesse of a horsse swimming, on the other the likenesse of a fish, on each of them a man riding, signifieng the god Neptune: both these, one on the one side, and the other on the other side, did accompanie him to his landing, which was at the market place, where were planted great numbers of armed men with shot. Right before him where he landed was a faire scaffold, whereon were placed armed men fighting, the one companie ouercomming and the other flieng. Ouer them, on the same scaffold kneeled an old man, holding vp his hands towards heauen, and on each side of him, one other supporting or staieng vp his hands. Which signified that Iosua and the Israelits preuailed, and ouerthrew the Philistines, so long as Moses did praie for them with his hands erected towards heauen; but when his hands were downe, the children of Israell had the worst: and so now through the praier of good men, God had at length sent them succour and releese.

Two pageants & what they represented.

The state of the people represented in a shew of comparison.

Vnder this were written these coupled verses:

Ad Dominum qui confugiunt cum fœdere pansis
Innocuis palmis, manet hos victoria læta.

Spanish tyrannie ouercome, with poesies signifieng.

Passing further, there was an other scaffold, whereon was placed one seeming to be in great distresse, a tyrant being readie to kill him; but by the aid of Elisabeth queene of England, he was shelded, defended and deliuered, and the enimie repelled & driuen awaie; aboue the which were these verses:

Eia age magne, veni ô Anglorum ductor, & altos
Ingredere & celebres cape quos spodemus honores.

On the one side was written this that followeth:

Iustitia & æquitas maximè
Reddunt diuturnum imperium.

On the other side was written this that followeth:

Fides sacra beatissimum humani generis bonum est.

Ouer all was written this that followeth:

Maximè vbi ancipiti filo pia causa tremiscit,
Ex insperato sæpè redemptor adest.

The queenes aid to the low countries represented.

Passing further, on an other scaffold was placed the likenesse of a queene most sumptuouslie apparelled, and on both sides of hir was hanged all sorts of armour and munition for the wars, and ouer hir head these verses concerning aid & succour were written:

Vt sacra Iosiæ dextra olim restituisti,
Sic ope reginæ Belgas Deus optime serua.

In the afternoone of that daie, all the souldiours of the towne with fiue ancients mustered before his lodging most brauelie, and all the night following was passed in fire works, & bonfiers, with other triumphes. The thirteenth of March he was sumptuouslie banketed by the burgesses of the towne. This towne of Amsterdam is a towne greatlie frequented with merchants of all sorts and countries, which causeth the same to haue such store of shipping as is wonderfull: for they lie as groues before the towne. In this towne haue bene manie Anabaptists, which within this twentie yeares did great mischeefe, not onelie with their lewd seats, but also by their wicked acts: as first by burning their houses, then running naked about the towne, after by rising in armes against the other inhabitants: but they were ouercome, taken, condemned & hanged. This towne is of a wonderfull strength, the wall whereof is so passing faire, that it is great pleasure to behold it, and to walke on it. Without the wall is a ditch of great breadth. This last yeare, to wit, one thousand fiue hundred eightie and fiue, the burgesses augmented the towne, in making a mud wall ten or twelue score yards round about the citie, with such a ditch, bulworke, &c: as is not to be wished to haue a towne better fortified, lacking nothing that may set it out for strength: the countrie round about this towne being of such kind of moisture, that it is past reason to haue a place to batter it, or to plant anie ordinance against it. There is a great arme of the sea two miles ouer, on the one side of the towne the wals be strong, the ditches great, the victels innumerable, plentie of people, ordinance sufficient, water good store, and all other things that might make the towne strong. ¶ Heere leauing the lord lieutenant for a while, we will giue a little leape to actions of manhood against the enimie, and then returne to the matter whense we haue made digression. Wherfore touching the valor of captein Skinke, a man of singular seruice, this report doth flie of him, agreeing with a note sent to the lord lieutenant, then residing at Amsterdam.

1586

Amsterdam a towne of great concourse and commerce.

Anabaptists a sect heretical and pernicious.

Amsterdam a towne not impugnable.

A note from one of Skinkes men to his maister at Deuentr.

The said cornell went of late with his horsse-men to Nuce, and thense toke both footmen and horsse-men to the enterprise by him intended against the towne of Warle, which they toke by sallie, in the morning

A note concerning the magnanimitie and valor of captein (otherwise called cornell) Skinke.

The Spaniards make against cornell Skinke in three parts.

In what places the Spaniards lie deuided.

The lord lieutenants comming to Vtricht and his receiuing there.

A gold ring presented to the lord lieutenant.

morning earlie, meaning to haue taken the castle, but failed. The duke of Bauiers men with those of the countrie, gathred togither to the number of three thousand, but colonell Skinke salied forth & charging them, ouerthrew their force, slaieng about one thousand. Within three daies after they assembled againe to the number of six thousand bours well armed with ensignes displaied, and with them eight hundred of the said dukes soldiers, and two hundred horsses of the knights and gentlemen of that countrie, with intent to rescue the castell. Skinke salied againe forth of the towne with two hundred and fiftie horsse, leauing the rest therein, bicause of the citizens and those in the castell, and if he had not made this salie he had beene in danger to haue beene taken or slaine, but he issued and ouerthrew the said forces, and slue about three thousand, amongst the which were thirtie of the chiefest gentlemen of the countrie, and he with his men went backe to the towne, himselfe was shot in this conflict, and lost diuerse of his best men. The castell and countrie was in maner neere ouercome, had not the Spanish forces hastned that waies, vpon the comming of which, Skinke was forced to giue place being void of hope to be relieued, and in his retract spoiled and burnt the countrie.

The Spaniards make a conflict colonell Skinke in three parts.

The Spaniards made to him in three parts, the one passing ouer by the Keisers weart with eight companies of horsse, and fortie ensignes of footmen, towards Ketwich, Dortmont and Onnar. The second led countie Charles of Mansfeld, consisting of six companies of horssemen, & fiftéene companies of footmen, which came from Graue toward the Rhene at the becke to passe ouer, and so to hinder our comming forth of the towne. The third was led by Uerding out of Friseland with six companies of horssemen, and pessants of that countrie about Reckling-honson, and to the third of those were againe gathered the third time the gentlemen and pessants of that countrie: & ioined to the duke of Bauiers men by Arnberch. If the said aids had not come, the cantred had beene subdued, so by Gods prouidence, he and his people are returned, not without some small losse, to Uendelo againe. The first part being the Spaniards lie yet in the land of Marke and Westualia, Uerding lieth still in the stitch of Mounster about the towne of Haltern on the riuer Lipo. Countie Charles Mansfield abideth in the land of Cleue about Santenburch & Seulberke. The speech was they meant to beliege Nuce, but Skinke feareth more Bericke, he hath procured those within Nuce one moneths paie in monie and cloth, and they were well prouided of powder and munition, so as there is least feare of that place, in it are one thousand good footmen and two hundred horsse.

In what places the Spaniards lie diuided.

Thus much touching colonell Skinke, and his enimies, whom I will leaue to their successes allotted by the Lord of hosts, and come backe againe to the lord lieutenant, who on the one and twentith of March came from Amsterdam to a castle called Mullen, foure miles from Norden, and there did dine, and from thense he came to Norden to supper and to bed. On the two and twentith of March he came from Norden to Utricht, where as his receiuing was nothing inferior to most of the rest before written. Three or foure thousand souldiors on foot, marching a mile out of the towne met him, and then marched before him to the towne; at the entrance whereof, the burgesses of the towne met him, one of them making vnto him a long oration in their language. Comming into the towne, the ordinance was discharged, and at the entrance of the market place, there was a woman placed on a high scaffold, which held in hir hand a gold ring, offering it vnto him, with certeine posies therein written. Passing further, there was placed on a scaffold seuen yong men, holding in their hands seuen cotes or armes of the seuen vnited prouinces, and vnder them were written verses of conuenient deuises. Passing further, there was placed on a scaffold, sitting in a chaire, a woman representing the quéenes maiestie of England, before was the picture or likenesse of a yellow lion, hauing a fore foot, who looking on hir séemed to complaine, & she caused hir handmaiden to dresse the lions foot, and vnder hir were written verses agréable to the spectacle. From thense he passed to his lodging, and all the night following (as also manie other nights) was spent in fier works, bonfiers and shewes of maruellous ioie.

Diuers shews and representations to the purpose.

Out of Utricht and other places thereabout, there met the earle foure miles from Utricht on a plaine, or heath, twelue hundred horse, most part of which were Englishmen, so well mounted as might be, at which time they trained themselues in good order before him in maner of skirmish, and so brought him to Utricht. On the six and twentith of March the earle of Esser went to Leger with his horsemen, where he began a new worke. The eight and twentith of March the earle was feasted by Graue Norris, on the which daie in the morning there was charge giuen to all the English souldiors in the towne, that they should march from thense to Liege, which for that they wanted their paie they refused and raised a mutinie, for the which one of capteine Polles men was taken and put in ward; whereupon the rest of his followers seeing this, came to the gaole, burst the locks of the doores, and tooke out the prisoner, for the which there were fiue apprehended, and three of them were hanged on the nine and twentith of March, the more to terrifie the rest. On the eight & twentith of March was also hanged the secretarie to the countie Hollocke, which secretarie was a counsellor principall to the betraieng of the towne of Graue. The thirtith of March the earle feasted the nobilitie and burgesses of Utricht, where there wanted nothing that might fill their bellies or heads.

Twelue hundred horse met the lord lieutenant vpon a heath.

The earle of Esser goeth to Leger.

A mutinie among the souldiors with other outragious disorder procuring execution by death.

Countie Hollocks secretarie hanged.

The people of this towne haue shewed themselues greatlie to fauor our Englishmen, for there came to the towne from the Leger 300 or 400 souldiors so sicke and poore, that it was wonder to see their miserie, and the townesmen not onelie receiued them, but also relieued them with meat, drinke, and cloths, giuing them for the most part new shirts and other necessarie apparell, loking so vnto them for their health, that whereas for the most part they were in great danger of death, few or none of them at that time perished. In this towne was builded by the duke of Alua one castle inuincible, which by the Spaniards was long kept, till at length, either werie of their abode, or desiring souereigntie, they set their forces against the towne, and the towne also bent against them; so that after much hurt was done to the towne by beating downe of their houses & churches, and killing the townesmen, the castle vpon composition was yeelded to the towne, the Spaniards issuing out of it: which being done the townesmen did beat downe the castle to the ground, reseruing the wall of the towne on which part the castle had beene planted: in which place where this castle stood is now a horse faier or market kept, and execution is there done.

Utricht people commended for their great kindnes shewed to the Englishmen.

A castle of defense builded by the duke of Alua ruinated and beaten downe.

On the first or second of Aprill, generall Norris tooke the sconse called Lite. On the fourth of Aprill was a sore conflict betweene the malecontents and the English, the enimies being foure thousand, were vanquished by generall Norris with one thousand men, whereof he lost a great number, and slue twelue hundred Spaniards. This gentleman no lesse fortu-nat than victorious, deſerueth a far better remembrance, than my barren wit can frame: and requiſit it were that he ſhould be mentioned in ſtorie, conſidering that he hath obiected himſelfe againſt manie deadlie dangers, which it hath pleaſed God, by directing his policie, to driue to proſperous euents: as appeareth by a letter ſent to the lord lieutenant, the tenor whereof inſueth.

The sconse of Lite taken by generall Norris.

A copie of a letter ſent by generall Norris from his road by Rawſton, neere Graue, on the ſixt of Aprill.

Exploits of colonell Norris reported out of a letter directed to the L. lieutenant.

¶ May it pleſe your excellencie to be aduertiſed, that finding the wind to be contrarie, we being to intrench our ſelues this laſt night within one houres march to Graue, the which the enimie finding, came with a reſolute mind before we had ended our worke, and put vs from the place, where we had not aboue three hundred Engliſhmen, and hauing ſent for the reſt being eight hundred or thereabout, to come with all ſpéd to vs: but in the meane time the enimie did ſo ouercharge vs, and with freſh men hauing then in place aboue three thouſand that were faſtened on vs, after that we had bidden and driuen a braue charge, to leaue the place, and meeting with the reſt of our Engliſhmen, in one halfe mile retract we turned and forced them to quite the place, and had the killing of them aboue one Engliſh mile; and then by meanes of a ſudden raine that fell, and the wearineſſe of our ſouldiors, we made a retract, in the which I dare aſſure your excellencie we loſt not aboue ten men: but the ſouldiors vpon the retract threw awaie much of their armor. In this companie, there is my ſelfe hurt, capteine Burrowes, and capteine Price, and diuerſe other gentlemen that did ſerue moſt trulie. I dare aſſure your lordſhip that there was not ſéene a better daies ſeruice in this countrie than this, and your honor ſhall doo well to ſignifie by your honors letters partlie to all the townes of Holland, that the enimie hath loſt a great companie of braue men, and moſt of their leaders, that which your excellencie ſhall find moſt true. I find, that your excellencie is not to make account of anie other nation than your owne: for after the firſt retract, there would verie few Dutchmen turne backe with vs: but your excellencie ſhould doo well to take no knowledge of it. And if the raw ſouldiors would haue béene commanded, we might haue kept the place that we came to intrench our ſelues in, but for want thereof, we did retract to Marbnanble. Aſſure your honor that I will to the vttermoſt of my power doo your honor what I maie, to the hazzarding of my life to doo your excellencie honor and ſeruice, as knoweth the almightie, to whoſe tuition I commit your excellencie. From the rode in my bed, before Rawſton, the firſt of Aprill.

This ſeemed to be a poſtſcript.

¶ I muſt ſignifie to your honor that countie Hollocke, countie Philip, my brother Henrie, & diuers other gentlemen did ſerue this daie moſt brauelie. Hauing taken counſell, we fullie mind to retire to Maſcumble, where if it pleaſe your excellencie to ſend vs three hundred horſes, and putting the reſt of the horſes in gariſons in the townes thereabout, and ſend vs the reſt of the footmen, we ſhall haue a daie with them againe, within theſe ten daies, doubt not.

Your excellencies moſt humble to command, Generall Norris.

Thus you ſée a great diſcomfiture giuen to the enimie, and the ſame with little loſſe on the Engliſh partie: wherby we are to gather, conſidering the inequalitie of the number, as appeareth by the clauſe of the ſaid letter, that the ouerthrow giuen to the enimie did ſpeciallie proceed from God, who as he is called the Lord of hoſts, ſo is it his good pleaſure to proſper the attempts of thoſe that fight in his feare, and put not their truſt in an arme of fleſh, neither in bands of footmen, nor troops of horſemen. And now ſéeing we haue made ſo good an entrance into the name of Norris, enobled by famous feats of armes, we count it an eclipſing of his renowme, to neglect the declaration of other enterpriſes and atchiuements, no leſſe tending to the inlargement of his honor, than to the reproofe of the reporter if they ſhould be concealed.

The winning of the ſconſe called Bolt.

Touching the maner therefore of the winning of the ſconſe called Bolt by generall Norris the ſecond of Aprill, thus it was. Marching thither, he ſummoned it with a trumpet, but they within with moſt reuiling words denied to yéeld, which the generall perceiuing, ſent fiftie or threeſcore ſouldiors in little ſkips with muſkits to view the ſconſe, for that it ſtood ſo as none could come to it but by water. Theſe men did ſo plie the lowe holes with ſhot, that they made the enimie kéepe in his head: which theſe men perceiuing, did go nére, ſtill ſhooting ſo till they came to the fort, which with ſpéd they ſcaled, and put ſtraw in the lowe holes, ſetting fire on it, which they within perceiuing, did not reſiſt, and ſo this ſtrong fort was ſuppreſſed without anie ſhot of cannon, or ſlaieng anie one man, and hurting but foure. And ſo they marched toward Graue, leauing ſufficient to kéepe it. Now concerning the maner of the conflict done by generall Norris againſt the Spaniards nére Graue, thus it was.

A conflict betweene generall Norris and the Spaniards.

The whole companie of Engliſh and Dutch, marching within ſix miles of Graue, ſtaied, ſauing three hundred Engliſh, which marched within one Engliſh mile of Graue, or thereabout, there meaning to inſconſe themſelues, which they put in practiſe. But the enimie well knowing their ſtrength and intent, ſet out three companies: the firſt being a thouſand Spaniards naturall, all for the moſt part old ſouldiors, & a great ſort leaders. Theſe thouſand thinking to haue cut the Engliſh in péeces, ſet forth firſt, which the Engliſhmen perceiuing, ſent for the other forces which marched apace; but the enimie purſuing his enterpriſe charged our men, & at length draue them from the trench alreadie in part made, and cauſed a retire on our ſide halfe an Engliſh mile, where they met the reſt of our forces, which turned them backe. So they marched togither and incountered with a great ſort of freſh Spaniards, which were come to the ſkirmiſh, and by the great power of God by force of armes they draue the enimie from them, and purſued them to their owne ſconſe, and by the waie they atteined a péece of ordinance of the enimie, prepared for to deſtroie our men, but yet they could doo nothing, they were ſo ioined togither in fight. So the Engliſh had the killing of them the halfe mile that they retired, and an Engliſh mile more, where a freſh ſupplie of the enimie was made; ſo our men were forced to retire againe in ſome diſorder, with ſmall loſſe of anie men. But the enimie was ſo wearie, & ſo danted with theſe conflicts that they followed but a little way, and left their purſuing, ſo that the ſpoile, honor, and gaine on our ſide obteined, there were of the enimies (as was thought) three thouſand braue ſouldiors, of our ſide onelie eight hundred Engliſh, and three hundred Dutch, countie Hollocke & countie Philip in perſon ſerued moſt valiantlie, but their men did ſmall good. Generall Norris was hurt in the face with a pike, as thruſt through the cheéke, and further into the ſide, there was hurt capteine Burrows and capteine Price, who with the generall fought moſt braulie, this was done the firſt of Aprill. This conflict flict being done, our men cut the great riuer of Vase in diuers places, and in despite of the enimies shot, sent six and thirtie ships or small vessels into Graue, although they passed one of their sconses, and a little from Graue by a dort or pillage that shot most vehementlie to them, yet they passed through to the towne, and returned without anie great losse. Vnderstand that these ships did not go by the riuer but by the land, for the water ouerfloweth the land in some places twelue foot at least.

The enimie purſued to their owne ſconſe.

The huge number of the aduerſe part, and the ſmall of our ſide.

The enimies bite their fingers for anger, note why.

Since about the sixteenth of this moneth there passed to the towne two & twentie more of those ships, and in their passage had but foure or fiue men slaine, and twentie hurt, although the enimie shot most vehementlie vpon them, and sent out to take them three ships well appointed, which in fight our men sonke one of them, and tooke the other two, bringing them to our companie. There was slaine of the enimies, and drowned of naturall Spaniards fortie or fiftie. Now do our men meane to pursue them no more neither by land which they determined, hauing made a sconse within two arrowes shot of their great sconse, and determined to go nere and assaile their sconse: yet now they purpose to staie a good wind, that their ships of war maie come downe to the riuer, and beat at their sconse: at which time I iudge our men at land will not be idle, for the piles that the enimie made ouer the riuer, are by violence of water driuen awaie, and the water greatlie sonke on the land, so that the little vessels can not well flote as they did on the land.

The winning of the sconse called Bek.

It is reported, that when they in the sconse saw they could not command our ships, they bit their fingers, with signe of wonderfull anger. Now Graue is sufficientlie victualled for ten moneths at least, that the strength of the towne, the courage of the souldiors, and the store of victuals do make them of the towne to assure the erle in spite of the enimies violence, though they be let alone without helpe this yeare, they will almost warrant the towne, vpon the battell by Rawlton against the Spaniards. They that laie before Graue, I meane our enimies, sent a letter to the prince of Parma, that of our side were slaine six or seuen hundred of braue gentlemen that came now with the earle out of England: but saie they, we haue lost a great manie braue men, and sent to the prince the number. The prince writ againe, that he could not but be sorie for the death of so manie braue men, but he was glad our men had tasted of the same cup; & this letter was also taken of our men presentlie. The prince let it be knowne that our men for the most part were slaine, whereupon in all places there were bonfires made for ioie.

The enimies bite their fingers for anger, note why.

A conflict betweene generall Norris and the Spaniards.

Furthermore, one thing worthie the noting doth yet remaine, that is, that sone after the fight done against the Spaniards by Rawlton, our men went to Battenburrow a most braue house for beautie, quantitie, and strength, for the Vase runneth by it & a great riuer on the other side it; but our men laieng the cannon to the gates of it, made a breach, which being perceiued of the enimie they yelded. There were thirtie or more Italians, the rest boures and peasants of the countrie; the Italians went awaie, their liues and ransoms spared, but the boures are kept to be ransomed: in it were thirtie women which also were kept. Thus wonderfullie hath God blessed vs, that without slaughter on our part to be accounted, these victories are atteined with so small a companie as was looked for of vs, but God hath preserued vs. Thus now will we conclude and shut vp these exploits with the names of the great men of account that were slaine at the battell by Rawlton, as was noted in a letter sent to the prince of Parma, by Francisco de Ceresota alyer the eight of Aprill, the letter being intercepted, don Iohn de Pauilla dornell generall, don Iohn de Castilo, don Pedro Ramares de Albano, capteine Flolis, capteine Cedran, don Iohn Calagiron, Mignell de Cardona. There were slaine in all by that note six hundred. Slaine, hurt, and (in the retire) disarmed, of our companie as followeth, 161 slaine or taken, thirtie three hurt, fiue hundred fourescore & ninetene disarmed.

The enimie pursued to their owne sconse.

The huge number of the aduerse part, and the small of our side.

Persons of name on the enimies part slaine, with other souldiors, some taken, hurt, and disarmed.

The eighteenth of Aprill th earle went from Vtricht to Ammerford, where through his sudden comming the towne was not so fullie prouided for his interteinment as other places had bene: but there wanted no good will in the townsmen as appeared, for he and all his traine did find the people to their power readie to fauor them, and to do them all the good and pleasure they could. This towne is double walled, first with stone, and then with mud, and also double ditched. The nineteenth of Aprill the earle went to Newchirch foure English miles from Ammerford to see the Leger of our horse and foot there. The twentith of Aprill he came from Ammerford to Vtricht againe.

The three and twentith of Aprill, the earle of Leicester being lieutenant, and gouernour generall of hir maiesties forces in the low countries of the vnited prouinces (as is afore said) and making his residence at that time in Vtricht (a great and goodlie towne vpon the frontiers of Holland) kept most honourablie the feast of S. George therein, the proceedings whereof being so princelie performed to the honor of our nation, in the view of so manie thousand strangers, I could not chuse (hauing gotten the true and faithfull description, by one William Seager alias Portcullis an officer of armes in that seruice) to make some breefe remembrance of the maner thereof in this booke, to wit. The streets of Vtricht being large and faire, were rankt and set with eight ensignes of burgers richlie appointed, wearing scarffes knit like roses white and red vpon their armes, betweene whome from the court of my lord vnto the cathedrall church called the Dome, the proceeding was on horsebacke. First rid the trumpetors apparelled in scarlet, laid with siluer lace, sounding their trumpets most roiallie, their bannerols being displaied and richlie limmed with my lords armes. Then followed the gentlemen, capteins, colonels, and hir maiesties sworne men, to the number of a fortie horse, richlie adorned in cloth of gold, siluer, and silkes, of all colours. After came six knights, foure barons, with the councell of estates, the right honourable earle of Esser accompanied the bishop of Cullen prince elector; and the prince of Portingall rid by himselfe: next proceeded the capteine of the gard, the tresuror and controllor of the houshold, bearing their white staues. After whom followed two gentlemen vshers, and Portcullis herald in a rich cote of armes of England.

S. Georges feast solemnlie obserued at Vtricht.

Then came my lord most princelike, inuested in his robes of the order, garded by the principall burgers of the towne, which offered themselues to that seruice, besides his owne gard, which were a fiftie halberds in scarlet clokes, garded with purple and white veluet. He being thus honourablie brought vnto the church, after due reuerence done vnto the quenes maiesties state, which was there erected on the right hand, he tooke his owne stall on the left, by certeine degrees lower. Then began praiers, and a sermon made by maister Knewstubs my lords chapleine, after which my lord proceeded to the offering; first for hir maiestie, & then for himselfe, the which he performed with such decorum & princelie behauiour, that all generallie spake most honourablie of him.

L. lieutenant inuested in the robes of order.

These solemnities being done, his lordship returned as he came, leauing behind him the earle of Esser and certeine gentlemen to accompanie the princes and the ladies of the court. His court was a faire and large house, belonging in times past to the knights of the Rhodes, in which was a verie great hall richlie hong with tapisserie: at the vpper end whereof was a most sumptuous cloth and chaire of estate for the quænes maiestie, with hir armes and stile thereon, and before it a table couered with all things so requisit as if in person she had bæne there; on the left hand almost at the tables end was my lords trencher and stoole, for he would haue no chaire. The tables being couered, and all degrees assembled, my lord before the state of hir maiestie knighted a Dutch gentleman, called sir Martin Skinke, for his manifold seruices done to his countrie, the which done, the vshers marshalled the feast. At the table on the right side of the hall sat the yong prince of Portingall, the prince Elector and his wife, the princesse Simeie, the earle of Esser, the Graue Morris and his ladie, & betwæne euerie ladie was an English lord or knight placed. On the left side sat the states and chæfe burgers of the towne, and the grand prior of Amerford (who came to sæ the feast) was by my lords appointment placed vppermost at that table. Then began the trumpets to sound in the seruice which was most princelike & abundant, serued on the knæ, carued and tasted to hir maiesties trencher.

Martin Skinke knighted, who promised Portcullis to shew him seauentie ensignes that he had now in the field.

The side tables being furnished all in siluer plate, & attended on by gentlemen, sundrie sorts of musikes continued the interim of the first course, which done and auoided, the trumpets sounded in for the second, which was all baked meats of beasts, and foules; the beasts as lions, dragons, leopards, and such like, bearing veins of arms, & the foules, as pecocks, swans, phesants, turkie cocks and others in their naturall fethers, spred as in their greatest pride, which sight was both rare and magnificent. This seruice being placed on hir maiesties bord, the beasts on one side, and foules on the other, the lion lieng couchant at hir highnesse trencher; the vshers cried, A hall, which being made with much a do (by reason of the multitude) they brought vp betwæne them, with thræ reuerences to the state, Portcullis herald, inuested with the armes of England, who in Latine, French and English pronounced the quænes maiesties vsuall stile of England, France & Ireland, defendresse of the faith, &c: crieng thræ times, Largesse.

A sumptuous feast and full of deuises.

Then began the trumpets to sound, and the Dutchmen to carouse, to the health of hir maiestie, the welfare of my lord, and to the prosperities of the vnited prouinces, and nothing wanted wherein either state, magnificence, or ioy might be expressed. To be bræfe, the feast ended, and tables voided, there was dansing, bawting, and tumbling, with the forces of Hercules, which gaue great delight to the strangers, for they had not sæne it before, and thus they passed the time till euensong, and then departed. At supper being all assembled againe, great was the feast, and plentifull the chære; and after supper began the bariers betwæne chalengers and defendants men of armes, wherein the earle of Esser behaued himselfe so towardlie, that he gaue all men great hope of his noble forwardnesse in armes. The bariers done, and either part retired with equall praise (though not with equall blowes) there was a most sumptuous banket prepared of sugar meats for the men of armes, and the ladies: which being finished, my lord wishing them all good rest toke his leaue, and so this honourable feast broke vp about twelue of the clocke at midnight.

The earle of Esser commended for chiualrie.

About this time our men woone Knowles sconse, a strong thing, and presentlie after they woone Ample sconse: and Skinks pursuing a companie of Spaniards, slue a thirtie, and toke a fourscore and ten. The fourth of Maie all the horsemen at Newarke were viewed, and the gard perteining to the L. lieutenant were sent to kæpe the towne from spoile, where they toke prisoners to the number of thræscore and ten boures, which had slaine diuerse of our gentlemen. The same fourth of Maie countie Hollocke put (in despite of the enimie) thræ hundred men into Pame, and about that time capteine Skinke builded a sconse in Clæueland and manned it. About this time they of Graue shot fire bals out of the towne, which lighted in the great sconse of the enimie, and set all the powder on fire, where through not onelie the said sconse was laid flat, but also all the men therein were blowne vp: also the enimie about the same time, making a breach in the base towne of Graue, entered the same, but was repelled, and thræ hundred of his men slaine.

Seruice against the enimie by Skinks.

The tenth of Maie, our English capteins and soldiors toke eleuen barkes and hoies, and drowned seauen that issued out to skirmish with them. The twelfe of Maie Skinks toke in an Iland of inuincible strength in the Roine, and there hath made a mightie sconse. The foureteenth of Maie, our men lieng at Nemingam sconse, there reuolted to vs out of the towne two hoies. The fiftenth the enimie issued out of the sconse, but was retired, and lost their Lope sconse. The sixtenth, the lord lieutenant passed from Armew to the campe at Nemingam, this daie the castell of Lenon was yelded to vs, he being there in person; this daie came fiue hoies more to our men from Nemingam. The eightenth of Maie came news to our campe, that the enimie entering Graue, lost fiue hundred men. The same day at night the enimie issued forth of the sconse to kæpe our men a worke, but our men retired them streight, and there came a bote from the towne to the sconse, in despite of our men, in repelling of which, the canon from the towne shot at our men, and slue two lieutenants, and fiue or six souldiors, the capteine of the sconse was sore hurt, so was the lieutenant with an arrow, and two or thræ other souldiors.

Diuerse exploits done to and fro.

The twentith of Maie earlie in the morning was the sconse yelded to our men, the souldiors passing awaie as souldiors. There was in the same sconse seauen score and seauentæne braue men, especiallie well furnished; there was in the same sound a most braue pæce of ordinance and two lesser pæces, there was two canons comming to the sconse, which were turned to Barriks house. ¶ Thus far hauing noted out of a booke penned by Henrie Archer, one of the gard to the right honourable the earle of Leicester, lieutenant generall in those parts, I leaue with hartie praier his honors happie and prosperous successe, and returne to other accidents such as in the meane time happened.

On the one and twentith daie of Januarie, two Seminarie præsts (before arreigned and condemned) were drawne to Tiburne, and there hanged, bowelled, and quartered. Also on the same daie, a wench was burnt in Smithfield, for poisoning of hir aunt and mistresse, and also attempting to haue don the like to hir vncle. On the second daie of Februarie, or feast of the purification of our blessed ladie, doctor John Whitegift archbishop of Canturburie, William lord Cobham lord warden of the fiue ports and Thomas lord Buckhurst, were chosen & taken to be of hir maiesties priuie councell: the two first to wit, the archbishop & the lord Cobham, were sworne the same daie, and the third on the next morrow; who being persons worthie that place, both in respect of their deserts for their former good cariage in the commonwealth, & for the gifts of nature & learning wherewith they are richlie adorned, haue occasioned Francis Thin to make the like discourse of the archbishops of Canturburie and the lord Cobhams, with the lord wardens of the fiue ports, as he hath before done in this chronicle of most of the other principall officers of the realme.

Seminarie præsts executed at Tiburne.

A wench burnt in Smithfield.

Archbishop of Canturburie, lord Cobham, & lord Buckhurst of the priuie councell.

The liues of the archbishops of Canturburie, written by Francis Thin, in the yere of our redemption 1586.

POsthumus Labienus (good reader) when he wrot the Roman histories in Greeke, craued pardon of the reader. Whereupon Cato the elder did scoffinglie saie; Truelie he had beene to be pardoned, if he had written in Greeke as one compelled thereunto by the decree of the Amphictiones; the which like matter also found in Aulus Gellius lib. 9. cap. 8. and spoken of Aulus Labienus, is the same historie vnder other names. For Gellius reciteth that Albinus, who was consull with Lucius Lucullus did write the deeds of the Romans in the Greeke tong; in the beginning of whose historie he hath set downe, that none ought to be angrie with him, although that he hath not written eloquentlie in those bookes. For being a Roman borne in Latium a part of Italie, the Greeke tong was but a stranger vnto him. Which worke when Marcus Cato had read, and happened on this excuse of Aulus Labienus, he reprehendinglie said; Art not thou Aulus a great trifler, which haddest rather craue pardon for a fault committed, than to be without the committing of a fault, sith we are accustomed onelie to craue pardon when we erre unwittinglie, or offend by compulsion of others? Whereunto Cato further added: Te quis perpulit vt id committeres, quod priusquam faceres, peteres vt ignosceretur? Thus much out of Gellius. Whereby it appeareth, that in Plutarch reciting this saieng of Cato, the name of Posthumus Albinus is there to be placed; for these two Aulus Posthumus Albinus, and L. Lucinius Lucullus were consuls at the time when Cato persuaded that warre should be denounced vnto the rebelling Carthaginians: so that the same storie recited vnder the name of Posthumus, Aulus, and Albinus is all but one thing, done to and by one man, hauing diuerse names. Which historie I haue not vouched, to the end that I would craue fauor for writing the doings of other persons in a tong wherein I am skilleſſe; because it deserueth not anie pardon, that one should heedlesse and headlong both wittinglie and wilfullie run into that for which he must after craue pardon. But I haue set downe the same, to the intent that the wise sentence of Cato may not be forgotten, saieng that where we offend by ignorance or by compulsion, that there we may lawfullie craue pardon therefore. Which words of so graue, so wise, and so reuerend a person incorageth me to craue pardon, if I haue offended in the discourse of these liues of the bishops of Canturburie (consecrated to thy fauourable acceptance) because I haue beene moued and induced to the writing of them in a short space, by the intreatie of such of my friends, which vpon the inserting of this now archbishop of Canturburie, with the lords Cobham and Buckhurst (worthilie sworne of hir maiesties priuie councell) in the new augmented chronicle of Holinshed, haue with manie good speeches animated me vnder the bands and duties of amitie (than which a greater law or burthen can not be laid vpon anie man) to enter into this discourse of the archbishops, being a thing neuer written before in our vulgar tong. Whereunto although I am most vnapt amongest great numbers in this land, as well for the matter and stile, as for the shortnesse of time which I had therefore (all which might feare a better man than my selfe, to withdraw his pen from laieng abroad his imperfections) yet I hope that courtesie accompanied with a mild disposition of nature will fauorablie imbrace my good meaning, and beare with all other imperfections in the penning thereof, both because nothing is so exactlie handled, but that some Zoilus will some waie or other repine at it, and also because the reason which I haue before aleaged, and Cato hath warranted, is a sufficient defense for me, without offense, to craue pardon for the vnaduised entring into anie such vndertaken action, & a iust cause to moue thee not to mislike of this or anie thing which we doo at the entreatie of our neere and deere friends, vnworthie of anie deniall. In discoursing of which archbishops, I determine not to dispute of the antiquitie of the christianitie of this realme, neither of the state of christianitie infected with the Pelagian heresie (being streitened within the borders of Wales) nor yet of the hatefull paganisme, with which all the rest of the parts of this Ile now called England was ouerspred; which Augustine the monke of Rome (not the doctor of the church and bishop of Hippo in Affrica) found here when he came first into this Iland, but onelie naked-lie to shew the time, the order, the succession, the deeds and names, with the honor and offices of the archbishops and metropolitans of the same see of Canturburie. Wherefore, for this time I doo in this homelie sort enter into the matter, taken (in some part) out of Matthew Parker, who learnedlie in Latine wrote the liues of seuentie bishops of that place, as here doth presentlie follow.

Diuerse exploits done to and fro.

Augustine.

Augustine the monke, in the foureteenth yeare of Maurice the emperor, being the yeare of our redemption fiue hundred ninetie and six, as hath William Thorne monke of Canturburie (though some attribute his comming to the yeare fiue hundred ninetie and nine, but not so rightlie as I suppose) being about one hundred and fiftie yeares after the landing of the Saxons in this Iland, was sent by Gregorie the first of that name bishop of Rome into England, which Augustine first arriued in Kent at a place called Rekesburgh, and after christened Ethelbert king of Kent, who gaue to him a house at Stablegate, as hath Thomas Spot, deliuering that matter in these words: Et concessit (which was Ethelbert king of Kent) eis locum habitationis in ciuitate Dorobernia situatum, videlicet in parochia sancti Alphegi ex opposito regia strata versus aquilonem, per quam murus palatij archiepiscopalis in longitudine se extendit. In quo loco sanctus August. cum suis domesticis vsque ad conuersionem regum hospitatus est. Illa tamen qua per viam extiterant sarcinis onusta loco prædicto longo post tempore stabulata sunt, ob quam causam vsque hodiernum diem situs ille Stablegate vocatus est. Fuerat enim tunc quasi oratorium pro familia regis vt ibi adorarent, & dijs suis libamina immolarent, &c. And a little after that also he thus saith; Anno Domini 597 Augustinus cum suis socijs illo in loco conversans vitam cœpit imitari apostolicam, and that king Ethelbert with his people was christened on Whitsundaie.

Thomas Spot.

This done, Augustine was the sixteenth kalends of December made archbishop of the Englishmen by Etherius bishop of Arras in France, to whome Gregorie the first of that name bishop of Rome did send the archbishops pall. Whereupon Augustine placed his archbishops see at Canturburie, and was the first archbishop that sat there: for in the yeare of Christ fiue hundred ninetie and eight, king Ethelbert remouing his palace from Canturburie vnto Reculuer, gaue his palace which he had in Canturburie to the said Augustine and his successors, that the metropolitan see might remaine there, which palace he turned into the palace in which the said Augustine dwelt, being the palace which after remained to his successors archbishops of Canturburie; besides which this Augustine ordeined for the metropolitan chaire, a certeine old church built by the Romans consecrated to our Sauior; which church is at this daie called Christs church in Canturburie, for difference of the other Christs church beside Aldgate in London. Moreouer, this Augustine, as saith William Thorne, did dedicat a church in Canturburie called saint Pancrace. Touching which, because that Matthew Parker hath not fullie made mention therof by the name of saint Pancrace, although he speake therof as of the abbeie of saint Augustines and monasterie dedicated to Peter & Paule; I shall not spare to set downe the words of the said William Spot, which were written after this manner: Erat autem non longè ab ipsa ciuitate ad orientem quasi medio itinere inter ecclesiam sancti Martini & muros ciuitatis phanum siue idolum situm, vbi rex Ethelbertus secundùm ritum suæ gentis solebat orare, & cum nobilibus suis dæmonijs & non Deo sacrificare. Quod phanũ ab inquinamentis & sordibus gentilium purgauit (which was Augustine) & simulachro quod in eo erat confracto, synogogam mutauit in ecclesiam, & eam in nomine sancti Pancracij martyris dedicauit, & hæc est prima ecclesia ab Augustino dedicata.

Thomas Spot.

A little after the which he further more saith thus: Hijs námque gestis, Augustinus prædicti sancti Pancracij ecclesiam à rege obtinuit vnà cum terra adiacente: in cuius fundo prædictus rex suggestione sancti patris Augustini ecclesiam in honore apostolorum Petri & Pauli à fundamentis construxit: & in eadem ecclesia rex sibi & successoribus suis Cantuariæ regibus sepulturam elegit. In hac & ecclesia Augustinus se & successores suos Cantuariæ archiepis. statuit sepeliri: hæc igitur ecclesia vsque ad hodiernũ diẽ monasteriũ Petri & Pauli, sanctiq; Augustini ab omnibus terræ incolis appellatur. Thus much that old booke written, as some haue noted (for the title therof) by William Thorne, or William de Spina: although for mine owne part (grounding my selfe vpon Matthew Parker, who verbatim hath inserted much of this matter into his booke) I suppose that it was rather written by Thomas Spot or Sprot, than by William Thorne, being both of them monks of Canturburie; and therefore sith the one continued the historie of the other, I haue vouched it sometime by the one name, and sometime by the other.

This Augustine (as saith that booke) died the seuenth kalends of June, in the yeere of our redemption fiue hundred and fiue, being about two moneths, two weekes, and two daies after the death of pope Gregorie, after that he had béene bishop eight yéers, fiue weekes, and three daies, as saith an ancient and goodlie booke of saint Augustines: but as saith Matthew Parker, he died in the yeare of our Lord God, fiue hundred and eleuen, after that he had remained fiue and ten yeares in that sée; or but ten yeares, as the said Thorne will haue it, whose bodie was buried and laid without the doores in the porch of the said monasterie of saint Peter and saint Paule, the same church being not yet perfect nor dedicated. But as soone as the same church had receiued his dedication, his bodie was translated into the north porch thereof, and there was honorablie buried; which porch (saith the said booke of Thorne) was in that part of the old church, where in his time did stand the chapell of the virgine Marie; and in the same also were all the other succeeding bishops of Canturburie accustomed to be buried, vntill the time of Theodorus the archbishop, who with the other bishops were inforced to be buried in the church, because the said porch could not hold anie more dead bodies. Upon the tome of which Augustine was this epitaph ingrauen. ¶ Hic requiescit diuus Augustinus Dorobernensis archiepiscopus, qui olim huc à beato Gregorio Romanæ vrbis pontifice directus, & à Deo operatione miraculorum suffultus, & Ethelbertum regem, & gentem illius ab idolorum cultu ad fidem Christi perduxit.

Laurence borne at Rome, and of great learning, was chosen successor to Augustine by the said Augustine whilest he yet liued. He laboured by his letters to reduce the Britons, Scots and Irish to true christianitie and obseruation of Easter. He (as saith Matthew Parker) built a church to the virgine Marie (whereof more shall follow) in the monasterie of saint Peter and Paule, which yet he did not consecrate, but left the same to be performed by his successor Melitus. There hath béene an opinion amongst the monks, that all the archbishops of Canturburie, from the time of Augustine the first bishop vntill Stigand, or rather Thomas Becket, were monkes: but that is refelled, in respect that this Laurence was a priest, as Matthew Parker auoucheth out of Bede lib. 1. cap. 27. Touching which bishops to be monkes thus speaketh a booke of the monasterie of S. Augustines: Hoc discernens (Ethelbert king of Kent, who sent Melitus bishop of London and after bishop of Canturburie to Rome to haue licence to place monkes in that monasterie) permisit vt ipsi prædicatores nostri monachi monachorum sibi associarent gregem, & eorum vitam sanctis moribus exornarent, vnde diuino nutu tam consono regis voto & ordinum monachorum accidit in posterum, vt in archiepiscoporum Cantuarien sis ecclesiæ successione, omnes fermè ab aduentu Augustini vsque ad Thomam martyrem, qui in numero 39 fuerunt, per 568 annos intermedios, monachi fuerunt. This Laurence died that yeare in which Eadbald king of Kent imbraced the faith of Christ, which he had till that time detested, after the death of his father Ethelbert, or rather the next yeare (as some haue) but others plainlie affirme that he died in the yeare of Christ six hundred and nineteene, the fourth nones of Februarie, being the second yeare of Rufinian abbat of saint Augustines, and the third yere of Eadbald king of Kent. But againe to the church of the virgine Marie within the monasterie before said, as the said Thorne writeth with these words: In isto monasterio ecclesiam in honorẽ sanctæ Dei genetricis ob facinorum suorum expiationem fundauit (king Ethelbald after his christening) & ipsam ecclesiam manerio de Northborne regaliter dotauit. Quod manerium est 30 aratrorum vt in codicillo eius apparet, quod monasteriũ huic monasterio ita liberè contulit sicut pater suus aut ipse vnquam liberiùs tenuerunt. Ista autem ecclesia beatæ virginis à principio fuit posita ad orientem monasterij, & erat cœmiterium fratrum inter ipsam ecclesiam & monasterium. Sed post dilatato monasterio fuit ista ecclesia penitùs prostrata, & ibi superadificata crypta sicut nunc apparet. Now although it maie seeme to come out of order to speake anie more of this Laurence archbishop of Canturburie, sith I haue alreadie made mention of the daie and yere of his death, yet I thinke it not amisse, rather here than not at all, to set downe the words of a famous booke (which Matthew bishop of Canturburie neuer saw) of Augustines, the goodliest monument that I haue beheld belonging to anie house of religion, touching the same Laurence: which words I am the willinger to write, although they be somewhat long, because I will not defraud the author of the true telling of his owne tale, nor posteritie of the spreading by print the part of that booke, which otherwise perhaps might neuer more come to light: thus therefore

speaketh

speaketh that booke. An. Dom. 613. Laurentius archiepiscopus, qui non solùm de Anglis nouæ quæ tunc erat ecclesiæ curam gerebat, sed & veterum Britaniæ incolarum necnon & Scotorum, qui Hiberniam insulam Britaniæ proximam incolunt, populis pastoralem curam impendere intendebat, à suæ prædicationis solicitudine ad suam sedem Dorobernensis ecclesiæ regressus, præsentis monasterij ecclesiam consecrauit, & præsente rege cum confluis turbis corpus Augustini transtulit in eandem ecclesiam consecratam, corpus verò sancti Letardi episcopi Syluanectẽsis in Gallijs, cuius metropolis est Remẽsis, necnon & corpus Bertæ vxoris Ethelberti in porticu sancti Martini sepeliuit, horum enim corpora extra ecclesiam prius fuerunt sepulta, eo quòd tempore obitus eorum ecclesia nondum fuèrat consecrata. Et nota quòd ista porticus quæ vocatur sancti Martini, fuit ex parte australi ecclesiæ tunc consecratæ. Quod tamen in eodem loco vbi nunc est altare sancti Iohannis non fuerat idem sancti Martini porticus, patet per Bedam li. 2. cap. 4. vbi eandem ecclesiam inter alia describit in hunc modum. Habet (inquit) hæc ecclesia viz. apostolorum Petri & Pauli in medio pene sui altare, in honorẽ Gregorij papæ dedicatum. Dato igitur quòd altare Gregorij quod nunc est, fuit in medio pene eiusdem ecclesiæ primitùs ab eodem Laurentio dedicata (quæ multo fuerat arctior quàm est ecclesia nostra moderna, sicut in locis sequentibus sibi aptis temporibus Wulfrici, Scotlandi, & Widonis abbatũ qui ecclesiam dilatauerunt erit manifestiùs explanatum) sequitur idem Martini altare siue porticum, quamuis in eadem parte ecclesiæ fuerat, non tamen in eodem loco quo nunc est altare sancti Iohannis vbi Berta fuerat regina sepulta verisimiliter extitisse. But now leauing this matter of that author, and returning to the death of Laurence, we saie that there was this epitaph fixed vpon his grauestone, placed next vnto the bodie of saint Augustine as here followeth:

Porticus ecclesiæ sancti Augustini Cantuariensis.

Porticus sancti Martini in ecclesia sancti Augustini Cantuariensis.

Hic sacra Laurenti sunt signa tui monumenti,
Tu quoque iucundus pater antistesque secundus,
Pro populo Christi scapulas dorsúmque dedisti,
Artubus hinc laceris multa vibice mederis.

Laurence.

Melitus.

Melitus borne of a noble familie, and an abbat of Rome, being sent by Gregorie into England to aid Augustine in the haruest of the Saxons conuersion, in the yeare of our redemption six hundred and one, was in the yeare six hundred and foure by Augustine made bishop of London; he went to Rome in the fourth yeare of his bishoprike, being about the yeare of our Lord six hundred and eight; he was expelled his bishoprike by the sonnes of Sigebert or Sebba, in the yeare of Christ six hundred and eightæne, and fled into France; but he was called out of banishment by Laurentius bishop of Canturburie in the yeare of Christ six hundred and ninetæne, in which the said Laurence died, after whose death, this Melitus was made archbishop of Canturburie; he died the eight kalends of Maie about the yeare of Christ six hundred twentie and foure, in the eight yeare of king Eadbald, and was buried in the porch of the monasterie of Peter and Paule, after that he had gouerned the sée of Canturburie fiue yeares, as hath William Thorne: though Polydor Virgil will affoord him but foure yeares: vpon the graue stone of which Melitus was this epitaph set:

Polyd. lib. 4. Angl. histor.

Summus pontificum flos tertius & mel apricum,
Hic titulis clara redditis mellitè sub ara:
Laudibus æternis te prædicat vrbs Dorobernis,
Cui semel ardenti restas virtute potenti.

In which epitaph this bishop is called Mel, alluding to the vertue of his name, which was Melitus, in English signifieng honnied, or made of honnie.

Iustus.

Iustus was first created bishop of Rochester in the life of Augustine the first archbishop of Canturburie; who not long inioieng the sée of Rochester, was with Melitus in the yeare of Christ six hundred and eightæne, fleing the persecution of the christians in Kent, when he passed ouer into France, but after returning home in the yeare of Christ six hundred and ninetæne, this Iustus was againe restored to his sée of Rochester, where he remained so long as Melitus liued: after whose death, he was about the yeare of Christ six hundred twentie and foure remoued to the arch chaire of Canturburie; where he ordeined Paulinus to be archbishop of Yorke, in the yeare of Christ six hundred twentie and fiue, though some haue six hundred fourescore and seuen. This bishop Iustus departed this world the fourth ides of Nouember, in the yeare that the world became flesh, six hundred threescore and foure, and about the nineteenth yeare of king Eabbald, and was buried in the church of the apostles Peter and Paule with his predecessors. On the grauestone of which Iustus was this epitaph set:

Istud habet tustum, meritis & nomine Iustum,
Quarto iure datus cum cesit pontificatus:
Pro meritis Iusti, sancta grauitate venusti,
Gratia diuinam diuina dat hic medicinam.

Honorius.

Honorius by birth a Romane, was chosen archbishop of Canturburie at Rome, and was consecrated at Lincolne by Paulinus archbishop of Yorke, in the church which the same Paulinus there built, and receiued his pall from Honorius the first of that name bishop of Rome: he diuided his prouince into parishes, appointing inferior ministers vnto them: he made Paulinus fleing out of the kingdome of the Northumbers bishop of Rochester, he died in the twelfe yeare of Ercombertus king of Kent, in the yeare that God became man six hundred fiftie and foure, or rather six hundred fiftie and three, the last daie of Februarie, as hath Matthew Parker, but of September as others haue, & was buried with his predecessors in the north part of the monasterie of saint Peter and Paule, after whose death the bishoprike was void by the space of one yeare & six moneths, whose epitaph was on this sort:

Honorius archbishop of Canturburie.

Quintus honor memori, versu memoraris honori,
Digne sepultura, quem non teret vlla litura:
Ardet in obscuro tua lux vitramine puro (demit.
Sic scelus omne premit, fugit vmbras, nebula

Deusdedit.

Deusdedit, or Adeodatus, descended of the Westsaxons, who in his mother tong was called Frithona, was consecrated archbishop of Canturburie by Ithamar bishop of Rochester. This Deusdedit, died in the yeare of our redemption six hundred threescore and foure, or rather six hundred threescore and three, the daie before the ides of Iulie, after that he had bene bishop nine yeares, foure moneths and twelue daies, being buried with his predecessors in the porch of the monasterie of saint Peter and Paule in Canturburie, being the last archbishop that was buried in that place: this man doth Polydor call Theodatus, which is all one in signification with the other Deusdedit, or Adeodatus: but that the one is compounded of the Latine, and the other of the Greeke, both signifieng in English, a person giuen by God: the epitaph of which Adeodatus was after this maner, according to antike inuention greatlie then vsed, & alluding to his name of Deusdedit in the second & third word of the 1. verse:

Alme Deusdedit, cui sexta vocatio cedit,
Signas hunc lapidem, lapidi signatus eidem:
Prodit ab hac vrna virtute salus diuturna,
Qua melioratur, quicúnque dolore grauatur.

After whose death the bishoprike was void fiue yeares eight moneths & fiftæne daies, during which time none administred the same bishoprike, though Matthew Parker will haue the vacancie of the bishoprike to continue a longer time, about the date of ten yeares or more.

Theodorus.

Theodorus archbishop of Canturburie was chosen ten in this sort. The sée of Canturburie being long time void of a pastor, Wigard the priest a learned Englishman was sent to Rome by Egbert king of Kent, and Oswie king of Northumberland, to be ordeined archbishop of that sée. After his coming to Rome, this Wigard and most of his companie died of a grieuous plague there, before he was created bishop: whereupon, about the yeare of Christ six hundred threescore and eight, as hath Matthew Parker, but six hundred three score & nine, as others haue, Vitilianus the pope made Theodorus, a Grecian borne archbishop of Canturburie, and sent him into England: who arriued here (as hath William Thorne) in the yeare of Christ six hundred threescore and ten, the sixt kalends of June, being threescore & three yeares of age, hauing legantine power ouer England, Scotland, and Ireland. This man brought with him into England a large librarie of Greeke and Latine bookes: who about the yeare six hundred three score and eightéene, deposed Wilfrid archbishop of Yorke, a man notablie learned in poetrie, arithmetike, astronomie, musike, and in the Greeke and Latine toongs, as hath William Malmesburie.

An. Do. 668. Matth. Parker, In vita Theo. & venit Cantuar. anno 2. postquam consecratus est 6. kalend. Iunias ij.

Chron. Wincelcombe.

This Theodor in the yeare that the world became flesh six hundred & fourescore, diuided the prouince of Canturburie into fiue dioceses, & appointed gouernors thereof: he held two synods, the one at Hereford, and the other at Cliffe at Ho besides Rochester, as hath Matthew Parker. Besides which, as it appeareth by William Thorne and Beda (or else the historie of Rochester hath mistaken Cliffe for Hedfield, or Hethfield, if these two synods were all one) by Florilegus, and the Saxon chronicles of Merton, and of Peterborow (as that worthie antiquarie M. William Lambert hath well noted) that Honorius held a synod at Hedfield in the yeare of Christ six hundred and fourescore, to keepe backe the heresie of Eutiches begun in Constantinople, & first ordeined the vse of singing throughout England, which before was vsed onlie in Kent. He wrote manie bookes, namelie, Summam pœnitentialem, Patrum canones, Ordinationes cleri, De fide contra Eutichem, and manie others: he consecrated Erkenwald bishop of London, and Eadhed, Bosa, and Eata bishops of Yorke. He died the nineteenth daie of September in the third yeare of the vacancie of the kingdome of Kent, after the death of king Edricus, falling in the yeare that the second person of the trinitie tooke on him the forme of a seruant, six hundred foure-score and ten, being fourescore and eight yeares of age, after that he had gouerned that sée one & twentie yeares, three moneths, and foure and twentie daies, being buried in the church of Peter & Paule at Canturburie, but not in the porch thereof, as his other predecessors were: for Deusdedit was the last of those which were buried in that place, whose writing on his graue I find to haue béene verie much: but because that worthie booke & monument of saint Augustine hath not fullie set it downe, as it hath donesome other epitaphs, I will onelie deliuer so much of that epitaph as is come to my knowledge, concerning the said archbishop in this sort:

Beda lib. 4. cap. 17.

Matth. Parker in vita Theodori.

Hic sacer in tumba pausat cum corpore præsul,
Quem nunc Theodorum lingua Pelasga vocat:
Princeps pontificum, fœlix summúsque sacerdos,
Limpida discipulis dogmata disseruit.

After which there lacked a great number of verses, which should haue hanged herevpon, but they not appearing, the latter part and conclusion of his epitaph was there deliuered in this maner:

Námq; diem nonam decimam September habebat
Cùm carnis claustrum spiritus effugeret:
Alma nouæ scandens fœlix consortia vitæ,
Ciuibus angelicis iunctus in arce poli.

Touching which archbishop, I thinke it not amisse to deliuer to the world, what an ancient anonymall chronicler hath written concerning his erection of schooles of learning at Crékelade, which is supposed to be the mother of the vniuersitie of Oxford, the words of which author are these.

Theodorus archiepiscopus Cantuarienſis per omnes chronicas commendatur Luciferos radios rationis vna cum Adriano abbate orbi Britannico infulsisse, & insulam quondam nutriculam tyrannorum in familiare philosophiæ domicilium contulisse. Horum vtique rationis euidentia memoria reducitur modernorum per illam villulam quæ lacus Græcorum, Anglicè Grekeslade à Theodori disciplina vbi scholas primitùs tenuit nũcupatur. In illa enim lacu refulsit quasi sol Theodorus à sole iusticiæ illustratus. Thus much that author, which I suppose that the archbishop of Canturburie Parker had not séene, when he maketh Theodorus (vnlesse my memorie faile) to be author of the vniuersitie of Cambridge.

Brightwaldus an Englishman borne. This man hath Polydor falslie shewed to be the first archbishop of Canturburie that was an Englishman, making the rest to be Italians and Romans, wherein he hath doublie erred (as saith Matthew Parker) for Deusdedit the second bishop before this man was of the Westsaxons, and Theodore next before this man was borne in Tharsis of Cilicia, in which error of Polydor, William Thorne was drowned long before him. This man was sometime abbat of Raculfe now called Reculuer, besides the north mouth of the riuer Gentade néere the Ile of Tenet, he was chosen archbishop in the second yeare of Withred king of Kent, in the yeare of our redemption six hundred ninetie and two, and ordeined bishop in the yeare six hundred ninetie & three, in the third kalends of Julie, being consecrated by Gwdwine metropolitane of France, as hath William Thorne and Beda. Sergius the first of that name, bishop of Rome granted vnto him by his bull the full primasie ouer all the English churches. When this bishop entered the sée of Canturburie, there reigned in Kent two brothers, Wilred or rather Withred, and Swinfard, which Withred built the church of saint Martins in Douer where they became monks, and indowed it with great possessions.

Brightwaldus. Polydor. l. 4.

Genlade.

691. William Thorne.

Withredus & Swihardus.

Touching which thus writeth the same booke of S. Augustine: Withredus monasterium sancti Martini apud Douerià fundauit, vt testatur Gulielmus Malsmeburie, & secundum aliquos in eodem loco 22 canonicos instituit seculares, sed propter illorum execrabilem vitam, rex Anglorum Henricus 2, concilio Theobaldi archiepiscopi Cantuarienſis in monachorum ordinem idem monasterium transtulit, & ibidem nouam ecclesiam construens 13, monachos de ecclesia Christi Cantuarienſis introduxit. Brightwaldus died in the fift ides of Januarie, in the sixt yeare of Edbert king of Kent, in the yeare of Christ seauen hundred thirtie and one, and was buried in the church of Canturburie, after that he had gouerned the same chaire eight and thirtie yeares, three moneths, and foure téene daies, whose epitaph was written as hereafter followeth:

Matth. Park. Beda li. 5. ca. 24. 37 ann. 6. mens. 14 dies.

Stat sua laus feretro Brithwaldus, stat sua metro,
Sed minor est metri laus omnis laude feretri,
Laude frequentandus pater hic & glorificandus,
Si prece flectatur dat ei qui danda precatur.

Tatwinus or Tadwinus in Saxon Tatpine, whome some call Cadwine or Scadwine by the corruption ruption and ignorance of writers, was borne in Mercia, a monke of the order of S. Benet in the abbeie of Bpe. dune, Bzuidune, or Bzenton, although some others saie that he was not of the profession of a monke. Bede doth constantlie affirme that he was consecrate (in the first yeare of Gregorie the third bishop of Rome) in Canturburie by Daniell bishop of Winchester, Ingwald bishop of London, Aldwine bishop of Lichfield, and Adulfe bishop of Rochester. Controuersie falling betweene him and the bishop of Yorke, concerning the honours of their bishoprikes, this Tadwine went to Rome about the yeare of Christ 733, where he receiued the pall of pope Gregorie: to this archbishops time doth Bede continue his historie. Tatwine died after that he had beene archbishop of Canturburie three yeares, in the yeare of our redemption 734, or (as hath William Thorne) the last daie of Julie, seauen hundred thirtie and fiue, being the tenth of Edbert king of Kent, and was buried in the church of Canturburie, with this superscription written vpon his graue stone:

Tatwinus.

Pontificis glebe, Tacwini Cantia præbe,
Thura, deus, laudes, e cuius dogmate gaudes:
Huius doctrina caruisti mente ferina,
Et per eum Christi portare iugum didicisti.

Nothelmus borne at London, archpriest of the church of London, and bishop of the same, was aduanced to the metropolitane see of Canturburie, in the yeare of Christ 736, in the fift yeare (as hath Matthew Parker) of pope Gregorie the third, & was consecrated at Rome, where he receiued his pall. He was a great helpe vnto Bede for the increase of the historie of Bede, written of the church of England: he was (as saith Gulielmus Spina) three yeares and more in the bishoprike of Canturburie, and died in the fiftéenth yeare of Edbert king of Kent, in the yeare of Christ seuen hundred and fortie, the sixtéenth kalends of Nouember, and was buried with his predecessors, hauing this remembrance ingrauen vpon his sepulture:

Hîc scrobe Nothelmus iacet archiepiscopus almus
Cuius vita bono non est indigna patrono:
Cunctis iste bonis par in bonitate patronis,
Protegit hic iustos vigili munimine custos.

Cuthert, borne of a famous familie of the English nation, was first bishop of Hereford in Mercia, and then in the yeare of our redemption 740, being the ninth yeare of Pope Gregorie the third, made bishop of Canturburie, who in the time of Ethelbald king of Mercia, called a synod at Cliffe beside Rochester. In this synod was present king Ethelbald of Mercia, Cuthert archbishop of Cantur. Totta, Hunita, & Padda bishops of Mercia, Aldwines bishop of Lindseie, Sigga bishop of the south Sarons. This archbishop procured Edbert king of Kent by publike edict, to change the place of buriall of the archbishops, which were before accustomed to be buried in the monasterie of saint Augustines of that citie, to the metropolitane church of Canturburie, in which church he was buried by subtiltie before the monks knew of his death; who thinking to haue his bodie to their church, and finding him buried before they came, did afterwards assemble with armes (as saith Spot) to fet awaie this bodie of his successor Bzegwine, to burie it in their monasterie: but when they saw it was alreadie buried, they departed in anger deceiued of their hope. Capgraue saith that he was buried in the church (neere vnto the great church) which was built in the honor of saint John, which he therefore built to be a place for christenings, to examine causes of iudgement, to correct euils, and to burie the archbishops: which church of saint John manie ages after did Lanfranke repaire. Which translating of the buriall of the archbishops to Canturburie, happening in the time of Aldhumus the tenth abbat of that house, which died in the yeare of Christ seauen hundred and sixtie, and the fiue & thirtith of Edbert king of Kent, occasioned the monks finding fault with his default in that action, to set these verses (for the memoriall) vpon a stone of his buriall, made in the monasterie of saint Augustines:

Fert memor abbatis Aldhumi nil probitatis,
Pontificum pausam cassat tutans malè causam:
Prisca premens iura dū Cuthertus tumulatur,
Fulta sepultura sanctis per eum reprobatur.

Before the death of which abbat, that is in the yeare of Christ seauen hundred fortie and eight, being the three and twentith of the reigne of the same Edbert king of Kent, this archbishop Cuthert, after that he had sat seauentéene yeares, departed the world, and was buried (as is before said) out of the monasterie of S. Augustines from his predecessors.

Begwinus borne of worshipfull parents of the Sarons bloud, in the countrie of old Saronie in Germanie, came into England, & was here made a denizen: who being vnwillinglie made archbishop of Canturburie about the yeare of Christ seuen hundred fiftie and eight, or seauen hundred fiftie and nine as some haue, confirmed the burieng of the archbishops in the place which Cuthert had before appointed. He sat in that chaire three yeares, and then surrendered his soule vnto God, whose death was not knowne, till that he had béene buried three daies before in the church of S. John besides his predecessor Cuthert, about whose time was Stretburg, Winchester, London, Yorke, and Doncaster, with manie other places much consumed by lightening.

Lambertus or Iambertus, or rather Ieanbeyche, and Geanboyche, being abbat of S. Augustines, was made archbishop of Canturburie, the seauenth ides of Januarie, in the yeare of Christ seauen hundred sixtie and two, who hauing the pall giuen him, was made archbishop of Canturburie by pope Paulinus or Paule, the first of that name, in the yeare of Christ seauen hundred sixtie and foure. In this mans time Offa king of Mercia found means to translate the archbishops see from Canturburie to Lichfield, (when Eadulphus the bishop thereof had a pall giuen him by pope Adrian) for the grieuous displeasures which Offa conceiued against the Kentish, but especiallie for that this bishop would haue aided (as saith Matthew Paris in his chronicle of saint Albons) Charles the great determining to inuade England, touching which matter thus writeth Matthew Parker, shewing what bishops were subiect to the metropolike see of Mercia, and what bishoprikes were vnder the metropolitane see of Canturburie: his words be these.

Eadulfo igitur Lichfeldensi episcopo archiepiscopalem celsitudinem administranti subijciebantur hij Merciorum episcopi, Denebertus Wigornensis, Werebertus Legecestrensis, Eadulfus Sunacestrensis, Wulmardus Herefordensis, necnon & orientalium Anglorum episcopi viz. Harardus Helmanensis, & Tidferth Domucensis. Sedi verò Cantuarensi, Londonensis, Wintoniensis, Roffensis, Sireburnensis, antistites, dum Lambertus sedit, tantùm superfuerunt, etsi neque sumptui neque labori pepercit, vt sedem suam pristinæ dignitati restitueret. Quidam verò referunt cùm legati ab Adriano papa in Angliam missi concilium apud Calcuch (or rather Calchith) in prouincia Northumbrorum tenuissent anno 787, ibi Lambertum archiepiscopatus prafatam partem episcopo Lichfeldensi remisisse. This man after that he had gouerned his famed archbishoprike about seuentéene yeares, or rather two and twentie yeares, perceiuing his end to draw neere, and desirous to vndo all such decrees as his predecessors had made touching

ing

Ex archiuis.

W. Malmf. lib. 1. De reg. gestis. Roff. histor. Henricus Vetnaurudunensis. Edmerus.

ing the place of the buriall of the archbishops, and to bring that to his ancient place, commanded that his bodie (when he was dead) should be carried vnto the monasterie of saint Augustines, and there to be buried with his former predecessors, which was easilie performed; and therefore was honorablie buried in the chapter house of saint Augustines, with this epitaph heere vnder written in forme following:

Gemma sacerdotum decus à tellure remotum,
Clauditur hac fossa, Iambertus pulvis & ossa,
Sub hac mole cinis sed laus tua nescia finis,
Incola nunc cœli, populo succurre fideli.

Athelardus. Athelardus was first abbat of Maldune, then bishop of Winchester, in the yeare of our redemption seuen hundred ninetie and three, in the yeare of the reigne of Offa surnamed the great king of Mercia thirtie and fiue, and in the one and twentith yeare of the gouernement of pope Adrian. This bishop of Canturburie going to Rome, obteined of pope Leo the fourth of that name, to haue the whole metropolitan iurisdiction reduced vnto the church of Canturburie from Lichfield, in behalfe whereof Kenulfe king of Mercia wrote vnto the pope, whereunto the pope answered. The tenor of both which letters Matthew Parker hath set downe in his booke of the liues of the bishops of the see of Canturburie. In this mans time, as hath Matthew Parker noted, Simon Dunel. Pagani (which were the Danes and Norwegians) portu Egfredi regis vastato, monasterium Doni annis prædarunt. During the regiment of this bishop, in the yeare of Christ seuen hundred ninetie and eight, manie houses and multitudes of men were consumed in London, by a sudden chance of fire. After which he died in the yeare of Christ eight hundred and six, and was buried in Christs church in Canturburie, and not in the monasterie of S. Augustines; from which time there was neuer anie controuersie nor quarell moued by the monks of S. Augustines for the not burieng of the archbishops in their abbeie, as there had manie times beene before.

Wulfredus. Wulfredus being first a monke of Canturburie, was elected and aduanced to the dignitie of the archbishoprike of Canturburie at Rome, by pope Leo, the fourth of that name, who also consecrated and indued him with the pall, in the third yeare of Kenulfus king of Mercia, being the yeare of the incarnation of Christ eight hundred and six. This man in the ninth yeare of his bishoprike went vnto Rome, and was accompanied with Wibert bishop of Shirburne. Whilest this man was archbishop, a great plague was in the church of Canturburie, which consumed & killed all the monks except fiue. Besides which, at the request of this bishop, Kenulfe king of Mercia, at the dedication of the abbeie of Winchcombe, which he had built from the ground, set the king of Kent at libertie, being his prisoner; who after departing this world was buried in Christs church at Canturburie.

W. Malms. Io. Capgra. Tho. Sporus.

Ex archiuis. Rosse. hist.

Theologildus. Theologildus, or Flegildus, or Feogildus, or Fleologildus, as most books haue, being first abbat of Canturburie, was after aduanced to the archiepiscopall dignitie of the metropolitan see of all England, who because he died suddenlie, is not placed in the catalog of the archbishops, being buried in Christs church of Canturburie, as saith Gernasius, before the altar of saint Michaell towards the south.

Ex archiuis. Gernas. Dorobor.

Celnothus. Asser. Mene. Rosse. histor. Celnothus, or Ceolnothus, otherwise called Ciathredus, or Swithredus, deane of the church of Canturburie, was aduanced to that bishoprike by pope Gregorie, of whome he receiued the pall. He was buried in the church of Canturburie, dedicated to our sauior Jesus Christ, after that he had ruled that chaire eight and thirtie, or as others haue, fortie yeres. In the foure and twentith yeare of this bishop, and the yeare of Christ eight hundred fiftie and fiue, a great armie of the Danes did winter in Shepeie. In the nine and twentith yere of his gouernement, being about the yeare of saluation eight hundred and three score, the greater part of the Danes by deceit went to Winchester, tooke it, & leuelled it with the ground. Shortlie after which, Swithine the bishop thereof being an old man departed this life. The Yeare that this Celnothus died, the bishops see of the east Angles, which was at Domne or Dunwich, was translated to Eltham; the cause whereof is set downe by William of Malmsburie in this manner: Tempore (saith he) Bedicani regis Merciorum, & Egricti regis Westsaxonum, Humbrictus & Wilredus fuerunt episcopi orientalium Anglorum. Sed eodem Ludecano & antecessore eius Burredo inuadentibus prouinciam, etiam episcopis necessariorum copia sublata fuit. Et quidem, vtrique reges intra regionem prouincialium incursu extincti sunt. Cessarunt autem episcopatus, & ex duobus unus factus, sedem apud Elteham villam non adeo magnam accepit. Thus much he, and thus much I touching the time of Ceolnothus the archbishop of Canturburie, which giueth some cause of wonder to me, that nothing is found written (for anie thing I can learne) of him gouerning that see so long as he did.

Athelredus. Athelredus first being a monke of Canturburie, was after bishop of Winchester, and from thense by the liberalitie of king Ethelred, aduanced to the metropolitane miter of all England. Of whose doing (saith Matthew Parker) this onelie is found written, that in the yeare that the word descended from the bosome of the Father into the wombe of the mother, eight hundred seuentie and two, the seuenth ides of June, being Whitsundaie, he consecrated Werfred bishop of the Wicces, after the death of Alewine. This Athelred after that he had possessed the honor of archbishop of Canturburie eightéene yeares, died an old man, ouerwome with sickenesse, being buried in Christs church of Canturburie with his predecessors.

Plegmundus. Plegmundus by kindred a Mercian, being chosen archbishop of Canturburie, was sacred at Rome by pope Formosus, of whom he receiued the pall with full power of a metropolitan. This man did first in the ile Cestria (which of the inhabitants is called Plegmundesham) liue an heremits life manie yeres, after which he was schoolemaster to king Alfred or Alured, of whose doing thus writeth Matthew Parker. An. Dom. 905. Plegmundus Cant. archiepiscopus, vnà cum rege magnificè cognomento Eduardo seniore, concilium magnum episcoporum, abbatum, fidelium, procerum & populorum in prouincia Gewisarum (id est in illa parte Angliæ quæ in plaga australi sita est fluminis Thamesis) cõuocauit. Fuerat enim illa regio iam 7 annos præ hostium vi & impetu furioso episcoporum sollicitudine & cura pastorali destituta: vnde salubriter constitutum fuit in hac synodo, vt pro duobus episcopis, quorum vnus Wintoniæ, alter Sireburniæ sedẽ habuit, quúmq; crearentur antistites ne grex domini pastorum cura orbatus luporum lanienæ & voracitati subijceretur. Quorum antistitum sedes hoc nominè appellantur, Wintonia, Sireburnia, Wellia, Cridium, & Petrocium, quod est iuxta Wellenses aquilonares, ad flumen Heremoth (or rather Yellmuth) posita villula. Celebrato itáque concilio, & canonica electione facta, constituit Plegmundus archiepiscopus in sede Wintoniensi Brithestanum: in Wellensi Athelmum (qui post Plegmundum factus est archiepiscopus Dorobernensis) bernensis) in Cridiensi Radulphum: in Sireburnensi Wolstanum: & in Petrociensi Athelstanum. Sed & in alijs prouincijs ordinauit duos episcopos, australibus Saxonibus (quorum antistites sedem habuerunt Ciceſtriæ) virum idoneum Burnegum præfecit, Mercijs verò Kenulphum ad ciuitatem Dorcestriæ: hij omnes vno die Doroberniæ ab archiepiscopo Plegmundo consecrati sunt. Non multò post, facta parochiarum distributione, superfuerunt episcopo Wintoniensi prouinciæ Hamptoniensis, Sutherensis, & Wilcensis cum insula Vecta. Prætereà Eduardo rege adhuc viuente Wilcensis pagus suum habuit episcopum, cuius sedes Rameſberiæ fuit, Sireburnensis verò episcopus habebat Summersetam, Wellensis Dorcestriam & Barkeriam, Cridiensis prouinciam Deuonienſem, Petrociensis Cornubiensem patriam. Thus much Matthew Parker, which I haue thought good here to insert, that thereby the state of the clergie, the number of bishops with their dioceſes might appeare in the life of this Plegmund, who ordeined them out (as you see) of the dioceſes of other bishoprikes. This being thus ordered, this Plegmund did by the kings appointment go with others to Rome, to pacifie the popes displeasure. Now after the death of this archbishop, his bodie was buried in Christs church of Canturburie.

Plegmundus, Chron eccles. Cantuar. Asser. Mene. Gerua. Dorobernen. W. Malms.

Gewisse ex Saxon. antiquitatib. petenda.

Ex archiuis W. Malmſ. Ex modo erigendis episcopatum Wiceu. vide tractatum amplum de episcopis Wilton. & Bathon.

Roſſ. hiſt.

Athelmus being first abbat of Glastenburie, then bishop of Wels, and laſtlie archbishop of Canturburie, of whom we can saie but little, onelie this we set downe out of Matthew Parker, that he laid the first foundation of the abbie of Malmsburie. But for that it is somewhat dissonant from that which I haue read in other authors touching the same, who make Adhelme the inlarger of Malmsburie to be bishop of Shirburne, I will set downe what others haue written thereof. Malmsburie, saie they, was founded by one Medulph a Scot, of whom it was first called Medulphesburie, but of so small reuenues (though Lesleus bishop of Rosse lib. 4. pa. 167. saie that Medulphus cœnobium magnificum extruxit in ciuitate Malmſburienſi, &c.) that the monks were not able to liue thereof, whereof Adhelme being abbat, it was in his time greatlie aduanced. He was a learned man & first made abbat of Malmsburie, in the yere of Christ six hundred three score & fifténe by Eleutherius then bishop of the west Saxons. This Adhelme the twentith of Inas king of the west Saxons, was made bishop of Shirburne, whereby it appeareth that Adhelme who first inlarged or laid the first foundation of the abbie of Malmsburie was some hundred and almost thirtie yeres before this Athelme the first bishop that euer was of Wels, and after the bishop of Canturburie: for this bishop of Wels liued in the yeare nine hundred and six, and the other in the yeare six hundred three score and fifténe, the one in the daies of Inas king of west Saxons, which began his reigne in the yeare of Christ six hundred foure score and seuen, and the other in the reigne of Edward the elder, which began his kingdome in the yere of our saluation nine hundred. But it maie be that the first Adhelme bishop of Shireburne inlarged that house, and that the same being manie yeres after destroied by the Danes, had a new foundation thereof laid by this Athelmus archbishop of Canturburie: thus this touching that & so againe to Athelmus. This archbishop of Canturburie did crowne king Athelstane, who began his reigne in the yeare of Christ nine hundred twentie and foure, which king did build three coining houses at Canturburie, whereof one was for himselfe, the other for the archbishop, and the third for the abbat of S. Augustines. Besides which also he built three like houses at Rochester, two for himselfe, and one for the bishop. Of such like houses likewise he built eight at London, six at Winchester, two at Lewes, two at Hastings, one at Chichester, two at Hampton, two at Warham, two at Exceſter, two at Shaftsburie, and one in euerie other towne.

Athelmus.

Tho. Spot.

Wolfelmus the fourth bishop of Wels was aduanced vnto the archbishoprike of Canturburie, of whom as yet I cannot find anie thing, neither when he was made or by whom, howlong he sate, when he died, or where buried, but onelie that William of Malmsburie giueth him thirténe, and the historie of Couentrie foure téne yeres of gouernment. But I find such diuersitie of the yeare amongst authors, in their accounts of the yeares of their first comming to the see, and continuing therein, that I thinke it impossible to reckon them.

Wolfelmus. Chron. Well. & Bath. W. Malmſ.

Odo, surnamed Seuerus, or the seuere person, otherwise called Odosogodus, which being Latine Saxon, signifieth in English, Odosogood, was borne in the prouince of the east Angles, of an honorable stocke of Danes, which were pagans, who did vnworthilie disherit him, because in his youth he became a christian. This man forsaking his countrie fled to the seruice of Ethelmus a duke vnder Edward the elder, by whom he was committed to tutors to learne the Greeke and Latine speeches; whereupon he became singular in verse and prose. Shortlie after his baptisme he was made subdeacon, and then within few yeres following became a priest. Before his priesthood he was a souldior, in which he continued likewise after that he was bishop, thrise seruing the king in his wars: for being aduanced to the bishoprike of Shireburne or Sarisburie, by the gift of king Athelstane, he was in the wars with him against Aulafe the Dane. After the death of Athelstane he was made bishop of Canturburie by king Edmund, brother and successor to Athelstane, and receiued his pall from Agapetus the second, then pope of Rome. He crowned Eadred or Eldred king of England in the yeare of Christ one hundred fortie and six: which bishop in the yeare of Christ nine hundred and fortie made such peace betweene Aulafe the Norwegian, hauing spoiled England and gotten Yorke, Vt Aulafus totã Angliæ insulam ad borealem plagam via regia (quæ Watlingstreet dicitur) sua ditioni subiectam teneret: Eadmundus verò australis eiusdem-callis parte contentus pacificè frueretur, quique superuiueret regni totius regimen obtineret. This bishop inforced Edwin to forsake his concubines, banishing them all from the church, and one of them from the kingdome into Ireland. He made his nephue Oswald bishop of Worcester, and after translated him to Yorke. He gouerned the see of Canturburie manie yeares, and died in the reigne of Edwin king of England, being buried in that Christs church which belonged to his owne see, the forme of whose towne standing on the south side of the altar of that church, was made in maner of a pyramide. After his death, Elsinus bishop of Winchester by monie obteined of king Edgar the bishoprike of Canturburie; but this Elsine going to Rome to be consecrated, miserablie died in the waie with extreame cold on his feet, which could neuer receiue anie heat although they bowelled their horses and put his feet in their warme bellies: which some saie happened to him by the iust iudgement of God, because he had before obteined this bishoprike by simonie, & reprochfullie spurned the towne of this Odo Seuerus and greeuouslie railed vpon him. After the death of this Elsinus, Wythelmus a monke of Glastenburie, as I haue read in the historie of Wels, and the seuenth bishop of that see of Wels, was chosen to the archbishoprike of Canturburie. But (as saith saith Matthew Parker, Quia rebelles correctionis verbere omnino non cohiberet. He was by king Edgar commanded to returne to his forsaken bishoprike of Wels, in whose place of Canturburie (by the iudgement of all men) saint Dunstan was thought meet to succéed.

Odo Seuerus. Ex archiuis. Roſſ. hiſt. Io. Capgra. W. Malmſ. Edmerus. Fabianus. Mat. Par's. in vita Dunſtan. Lond. liber. W. Malmſ. Roſſ. hiſt. Chron. Well. & Bath.

Dunstan. Dunstan the three and twentith archbishop of Canturburie, after the account of Matthew Parker, this man was borne (in the yeare of our redemption nine hundred twentie and foure, being the first yere of king Athelstane, in the countrie of the west Saxons) of noble parents on both sides, whose father was called Herston, and his mother Kinedcida; he was instructed in his youth in the liberall sciences in Glascon or Glastenburie. For as saith Matthew Parker, Nondum cœtus monasticus illã ecclesiam occupauit, abbatísque nomen penitus erat incognitum, sed artium professores regij alebantur stipendijs. Si quis autem ab hominum consuetudine ad solitariã vitam se vellet abducere, modo solus, modo paucioribus consociatus, patria relicta, capta in aliena regione oportunitate viuendi, vixit peregrinus. Qua occasione Hibernenses quidam nobiles habitandi locum a ciuili turba multitudinéque seiunctum Glasconia delegerunt. Ibi adolescentes nobiles ingenuis artibus mercede instruxerunt, inter quos Dunstanus in illa iuuenili institutione cæteris instructior ad eas artes, musicam & pingendi atque sculpendi scientiam adiecit. After which he serued his vncle Adelme, or Athelme archbishop of Canturburie, from whom he came to the seruice of king Athelstane his nére kinsman, whom the king the more fauored because he could plaie and sing well of and to the harpe. After this (for that as séemeth his harpe could plaie alone) he was banished the court, who departing from thense was laid in wait for, bound and cast into a durtie puddle: but in the end comming to Elphegus his vncle also being then bishop of Winchester, by whose counsell he was made a monke, he was executor to Algiua a woman borne of kinglie bloud, who by this Dunstans persuasion made hir will in this sort: Iesum Christum rerum mearum hæredem facio, te (meaning Dunstan) eiusdem hæreditatis tutorẽ constituo, vt quicquid ipsum cognoueris velle, tui arbitrij sit effectu mancipare. After whose death Dunstan distributed hir moueables amongst the poore, and appointed hir liuings and lands to houses of religion, for of that inheritance he builded fiue monasteries. Then when king Athelstane was dead, he came to the court and grew in fauour with king Edmund: but after falling in his disgrace he was banished from him, wherewith not wholie ouerthrowne, he recobteined the kings fauour, Deinde loca in quibus Dunstanus natus, genitus, enutritus, educatus, aut versatus sit, king Edmund, Dunstano ad cœnobia extruenda dedit, whereupon (as saith Matthew Parker) Dũstanus sui ordinis monachorum copiosa collecta multitudine, cœnobiũ quod tunc solùm in Anglia fuit, repleuit, ipse eorum dux ac magister abbatis nomine primus in Anglia appellatus est. But here I must with reuerence saie thus much, that if Matthew Parkers writing, that this Dunstan was the first that was named an abbat in England, be not to be taken and ment that he was the first that was named abbat of the house of Glastenburie, or that was named abbat after the destruction of monasteries and religion by the Danes, it can not be true. For besides manie abbats of diuers religious houses named by Bede, manie hundred yeares before this Dunstan, the same Matthew Parker himselfe doth name diuers archbishops of Canturburie before this Dunstan to haue bene abbats of sundrie places, as Lambert abbat of saint Augustines in Canturburie, Theologild or Fleogild abbat of Canturburie, & Athelmus abbat of Glastenburie, &c. This Dunstan ruled all things vnder king Edred or Eldred, which began his reigne in the yere of Christ nine hundred fortie and six. After the death of which king, Dunstan was by his successor king Edwin the third time banished the court: whereupon he went vnto his monasterie of Glastenburie, but not setling himselfe there, was banished the realme by the king, whose anger still increased against him in the end, by meanes wherof he went into France. After the death of Edwin, Edgar his brother, made king in the yeare of Christ nine hundred fiftie and nine, did call a councell at Bzanford, vndid the acts of Edwin, called home Dunstan, and whether he would or no made him first bishop of Worcester, then bishop of London, both which he held at one time, and within two yeares after, archbishop of Canturburie. To this Dunstan were almost all the bishops of England of kin, or alied in bloud by one meanes or other. For as saith Matthew Parker, Erant tunc temporis plures & digniores episcopi consanguinitate inter se copulati. Odo enim Cantuarienſis & Osketellus Eboracenſis archiepiscopi propinqui fuerunt, his duobus Oswaldus consanguineus. Dunstani ex altera parte cognatio fuit cum Adelmo Cantuar. archiepiscopo, Elphego caluo Wintonienſi, & Elphego iuniore abbate, qui postea etiam Wintonienſis episcopus fuit: tum Wulfino Sirebornienſi episcopo, qui prius abbas Westmonasterienſis fuerat. His cognationibus iuncti se invicẽ potiundis episcopatibus tanquam proprijs hæreditatibus iuuerunt. Itaque regem acriter hortatur Dunstanus, vt Oswaldus prædecessoris sui Odonis fratruelis, & Ethelwaldus Abindoniæ abbas, episcopi crearentur. Oswaldum ilico consecrauit Dunstanus Wigornienſem episcopum, an. Dom. 960, annóque sequenti mortuo Brithelmo Ethelwaldum Wint. episcopum Which Dunstan bishop of Canturburie annointed Edward king of England after the death of Edgar, in the yeare of Christ nine hundred three score and fiftéen. He assembled a councell at Kirkling in the prouince of the east Angles, in the yeare of saluation nine hundred three score and seuentéene, and after this called an other at Calne in Wiltshire, in which was concluded a full banishment of secular and maried priests, and introducing of monkes into their places, which order hath euer since continued for the space of six hundred thirtie and foure yeres in England, vntill about the six and twentith yeare of king Henrie the eight, in the yere of our redemption one thousand fiue hundred thirtie and foure, much about which all religious houses were dissolued and their order of life reiected. After this, Dunstan crowned Egelred king of England in the yeare of our Lord nine hundred three score and eighténe, or rather nine hundred three score and seuenténe, he sate at Canturburie seuen and twentie yeares, died the fouretenth kalends of Julie, and was buried at Canturburie, as writeth Geruasius Dorobernensis in these words out of Edmerus: Sanè via vna, quam curuatura cryptæ ipsius ad occidentem vergentem concipiebat, vsque ad locum quietis beati Dunstani tendebatur. Ipse námque sanctissimus pater ante ipsos gradus in magna profunditate terræ iacebat humatus, tumba super eum in modum pyramidis grandi sublimique structura, habente ad caput sancti altare matutinale, &c.

Ethelgarus succéded Dunstan in the archbishoprike of Canturburie, he was first made abbat of the new monasterie of Winchester, by Ethelwald bishop of Winchester, after which he was made bishop of Seolseie in Sussex. But after that the Iland was spoiled by the Danes, he was aduanced to the metropolitike sée of Canturburie, of whose doings by reason of the iniurie of the time, for now the Danes troubled all the realme, nothing is found, but that he died and was buried in Christs church in Canturburie, after that he had bene archbishop one yeare and three moneths.

Siricius, being first a monke of Glastenburie, was in succession of time by saint Dunstan made abbat Ofbernus. W. Malms. Io. Capgr. Ofbernus. Simon Dunel. Mat. Parker. in vita Dunstan ex vetustissima Dunstani legenda. Simon Dunel. Roger Houed. Simon Dunel. Ethelgarus. Siricius.

abbat of saint Augustines in Canturburie; after which, he was vnder the same Dunstan, indued with the bishoprike of Winchester, and at length in the yeare of our redemption eight hundred fourescore and nine, or as some haue, nine hundred fourescore and eleuen, in the time of king Ethelred, or Egelred; he was aduanced to the archbishops see of Canturburie, where (as saith William Malmesburie, and the historie of Couentrie) he continued fiue yeares: he was buried (after his death) in Christs church of Canturburie, to which place he gaue his bookes, being as Matthew Parker saith, verie good.

W. Thorne.

Stephan. Birchinton.

Alricius or Alfricus, who proceeded likewise out of the monasterie of Glastenburie, was first abbat of Abindon, after bishop of Wilton, and at length created archbishop of Canturburie, and receiued the pall of pope John, about the yeare of Christ nine hundred fourescore & sixteene: who after that he had ten years as some saie, & but six yeares as Malmesburie & Couentrie writeth, godlie and valiantlie defended the church of Canturburie from the inuasion and spoile of the Danes, departed this life, in the yeare of our redemption one thousand and six, in the reigne of king Ethelred, and was first buried at Abindon, and then remoued to his owne church of Canturburie.

Alricius, Hist. Petriburgensis.

Chro. Steph. Birchinton.

Elphegus or Alphege, issuing forth of the monasterie of Glastenburie, was first made abbat of Bath, who being borne of honorable parents, passed his youth in the monasterie of Hirst, whereof he was [illegible] religious person: then he went to Bath, and there built him a cabin, in which he liued to himselfe; after which, he was by Dunstan consecrated bishop of Winchester, and then archbishop of Canturburie, receiuing his pall at Rome. In the end, this Elphegus being seuen moneths imprisoned, was by the Danes led to Grænewich, and there beheaded, about the yeare of Christ one thousand and twelue: during the time that Swaine had the gouernment of England. He was buried in Paules church at London: but after, by the commandement of Canutus the Dane king of England, he was remoued to Canturburie, and there his bodie lieth honorablie interred, after that he had gouerned six yeares, as hath W. Malmesburie.

Elphegus.

Simon Dunel.

Roger Houed.

Simon Dunel.

Liuingus, surnamed Elfanus, being the tenth bishop of Wels, was elected to the see of Canturburie, & installed therein, who after seuen moneths imprisonment by the Danes as was Elphegus, being deliuered, did (beholding the miserie of his people) flie into banishment: but Swanus being dead, & Ethelred reigning, he returned home, & after the death of Ethelred, crowned king Edmund Ironside at London, who being slaine by treason of Edrike (as most write) this Liuingus did at London crowne Canutus, & so in the end of his life obteined some quiet. This bishop after that he had bene archbishop of Canturburie seuen yeares, and had beautified that church with manie gifts, departed the world, in the yeare that the world became flesh one thousand and twentie, being the second yeare of Canutus the Dane, and was buried in Christs church at Canturburie.

Liuingus.

W. Malsm. de pont.

Gemeticus de gestis regum.

Ste. Birchinton.

Agelnothus, Egelnotus, Athelnothus or Aethelnothus, diuerslie called of diuerse writers, was surnamed the Good, being the sonne of the noble earle Agelmare. This man (after that the chanons of Canturburie in the persecution of the Danes, being of greater number than the monks, had after the manner of other churches made their chiefe to be called a deane) was first made deane of Canturburie: after being chosen to that bishoprike he went to Rome, in the yeare that the word descended from the bosome of the father one thousand & twentie (being the second yeare of the absolute reigne of Canutus) and receiued the pall of pope Benedict.

Agelnothus, Egelnotus, Athelnothus de Canturbur. loco.

Matth. West.

In this mans time, the same Canutus went to Rome about Easter, where he obteined of the pope, That the English schole of Rome should be free from all tax; That all his subiects English and Danes in their pilgrimage or other trauell, should be free from toll of passage from place to place: and lastlie, That the archbishops of England should haue their pall freelie without anie monie: wherof the said Canutus writeth to this Agelnothus and others thus.

The letter of Canutus to his bishops of England touching those things.

Canutus rex totius Angliæ, & Denemarchiæ, Noruegiæ, & partis Swanorum, Agelnotho metropolitano, & Alfrico Eboracensi archiepiscopo, omnibúsque episcopis & primatibus, & toti genti Anglorum, tam nobilibus quàm plebeis salutem, &c. Then a little after followeth: Conquestus sum iterum coram domino papa, & mihi valdè displicere dixi, quòd mei archiepiscopi interim angariebantur immensitate pecuniarum quæ ab eis expetebantur, dum pro pallio accipiendo secundum morem apostolicam sedem expeterent: decreturúmque est ne id deinceps fiat. Cuncta enim, quæ a domino papa, & imperatore, & à rege Rodulpho, cæteríque principibus, per quorum terras nobis transitus est ad Romam, pro mea gentis vtilitate postulabam, libenter annuerunt, & concessa etiam sacramento confirmarunt, sub testimonio quatuor archiepiscoporum, & 20 episcoporum, & innumeræ multitudinis ducum & nobilium quæ aderat, &c.

After the returne of Agelnothus from Rome, he stored the church, which before that time laid waste since the persecution of the Danes was done. This bishop instructed Canutus in good learnings, and crowned two of his sonnes, Harold, and Hardeknute; and then after that he had bene bishop eighteene yeares, died in the fourth kalends of November, being buried in Christs church in Canturburie.

Edsinus, Elsinus, or Eadsinus, a secular priest, was first chaplen to king Harold, by whome he was promoted to the bishoprike of Winchester: then after the Death of Harold the King, and of Agelnoth the bishop of Canturburie, he was elected archbishop of Canturburie, and receiued his pall of pope Alexander (as some haue, or rather of Benedictus, as others will) in the time of Hardeknute, or rather of Harold, about the yeare of Christ one thousand thirtie and eight. This man by reason of sickenesse not able to discharge the burden of his bishoprike, committed the same to one Siward abbat of Abindon, and after bishop of Rochester: which Edsinus the bishop, did with his councell helpe Edward the confessor, banished into Normandie, to the kingdome of England, with whome he was verie familiar; because he crowned that king at Winchester. After which, when with great sickenesse he had eleuen yeares ruled the see by his vnkind and vnthankfull deputie Siward (whome he labored to make his successor, notwithstanding that Siward would scarselie vouchsafe to find him things necessarie) he died the fift kalends of November, rather famished by the said Siward, than of other death, and was buried in Christs church in Canturburie: which Edsinus was accustomed in his writings thus to subscribe his name: Ego Eadsinus archiepiscopus ecclesiæ Christi subscripsi.

Edsinus. Ste. Brichinton.

Wil. Malsm. de pont.

Robert, by nation a Norman of the monasterie of Gematicens came into England by the calling of king Edward the Confessor, who dearelie loued him for the friendship which he shewed to the same

W. Malsm. Robert a Norman.

Edward whilest he was brought vp in Normandie, and for the fauor that William duke of Normandie did beare to this Robert. For which cause, king Edward the first made him bishop of London, & then bishop of Canturburie, about the yeare of Christ one thousand fortie and nine. He accused (to the king) Emma the kings mother of adulterie, and caused Godwine earle of Kent to be banished; but after that she was purged by the Ordall (a manner of triall in those daies by consecrated fier, in going bare foote ouer nine hot burning shares) and earle Godwine was restored by the labor of the nobilitie; this Robert was banished, as after shall appeare. For the king asking pardon, that he had so rashlie accused his mother of adulterie with Aldwine bishop of Winchester, was for his penance beaten with rods by the bishop, and receiued three blowes of his mother: in remembrance of which purgation, the quéene and the bishop gaue nine mannors to the monasterie of saint Swithins in Winchester, which the king confirmed, with an inlargement of a further gift of other two mannors, called Meones, and Portland to the said monasterie. Whereupon the archbishop finding himselfe so disgraced and growne into the hatred of the people, did voluntarilie banish himselfe out of the kingdome of England, and at length dieng in Normandie, was buried in the monasterie of Gemeticum, from whense he came.

Stigandus. Walt. Couen. Matth. Paris. Ioronal. hist. Wil. Malmſ. Thom. Spot.

Stigandus chapleine to Edward the Confessor, who was aduanced to manie honors, but whether for his vertue or by his subtiltie, in abusing the gentle disposition of Edward the Confessor, I know not, but certeine it is, that he did not obteine them by reson of his learning, for he was altogither vnlearned or vnlettered. Notwithstanding which, it was no impediment vnto him to ascend the top of the archiepiscopall dignitie of Canturburie by these degrées. First he was bishop of Helmam amongst the east Angles, then bishop of Winchester and Chichester, & then lastlie, in the tenth yeare of the said K. Edward, being the third yeare of pope Leo the third, and the yeare of our saluation one thousand fiftie and three, aduanced to the archbishoprike of Canturburie, during the life of the last before exiled bishop Robert, liuing then in Normandie. Who hauing thus atteined the highest spirituall honor, did not yet leaue the bishoprike of Winchester, for which cause he was termed a simoniake, couetous, a theefe, an inuador of other mens possessions, and for that cause could neuer obteine the pall of the true pope of Rome. Wherefore in the end he got one of the schismaticall bishops of that sée called Benedict, to inuest him with the pall. Which Stigandus remaining archbishop of Canturburie at the conquest, so wrought, partlie by policie, and partlie by force, as may be seene in manie chronicles, that he and Egelsinus the abbat of saint Augustines in Canturburie, the two chiefest lords in Kent, obteined of William Conqueror at Swainescombe in Kent, that the same prouince should for euer keepe their accustomed lawes and liberties; which granted, they deliuered the whole shire & castle of Douer to William Conqueror: notwithstanding all which, and that William Conqueror did outwardlie seeme to honor him, yet he would not be crowned of this Stigandus.

1067, or 1068, as some haue.

After which, William Conqueror, about the second yeare of his reigne, going into Normandie, caried this Stigand with him, and would not suffer him to depart his sight, rather for feare of his subtiltie, than for anie credit he gaue to his fidelitie: whom though he neuer trusted nor loued, yet the king would alwaies call him by the name of father, and rise to méete him in all assemblies. In the end, the king dissembling the matter no longer, but laieng all the fault vpon pope Alexander, did in the yeare of our redemption one thousand three score and nine, falling in part of the fourth yeare of William Conqueror, find meanes to haue him deposed. For the said Alexander, sending Hermanfredus bishop of Redimence, with John and Peter priests cardinals into England, in the octaues of Easter, they so handled Stigand, that inforcing him to flie hither and thither, sometime into Scotland with Alexander bishop of Lincolne, and sometime into Elie to hide himselfe; they at length in a councell holden at Winchester deposed him, and his brother Agelmar bishop of the east Angls, in the yeare of our redemption one thousand three score and ten, being part of the fourth yeare of the said William Conqueror. Whereupon, Stigandus being spoiled of all his goods, was committed to perpetuall prison, where he was hardlie kept from anie food and other things, till he would confesse where his treasure was: but he rather choosing to be famished than to shew it, hauing before with an oth denied it, did in the end most miserablie depart the world, after that he had béene archbishop seuentéene yeares. But when he was dead, there was a keie found about his necke, which after led the king to innumerable treasure, hidden by him in diuerse places.

Roger Cest. Ioronal. hist. Walt. Couen. Wil. Malmſ. Radulph. de Diceto. Rog. De Cest. Roff. hist. Wil. Thorne. Florilegus. Hist. Eccles.

Lanfranke. Ioronal. hist. Chron Saxo. Cant. Sigebert Gemblacens. Wil. Gemite. Roff. hist. Wil. Malmſ. Ioronal. hist. Walt. Couen. Reg. de Cest. Roff. hist. Chro. Saxo. Cant.

Lanfranke an Italian Lombard, being from his youth brought vp in learning, came into Normandie, allured thither by the fame of Herluine abbat of Bec: who going towards that place, was in a wood robbed and fast bound, but after being let loose he came to Bec, where he professed and taught logike to releeue his pouertie, being first made a monke, and after prior of the same abbeie; whom, when William the bastard duke of Normandie did affect, he was made abbat of Cane, being further in following time also by the said William (when he was king of England) made archbishop of Canturburie, and consecrated at Canturburie the fourth kalends of September (in the fourth yeare of the said William Conqueror, being in the yeare of our redemption one thousand three score and ten) of these bishops, William of London, Siward of Rochester, Walkeline of Winchester, Remigius of Dorcester, Herfastus of Helmham, or Thetford, Stigerard of Seolseie, Hermon of Shireburne, and Giso of Wels. This Lanfranke thus installed, Thomas archbishop of Yorke came to Canturburie vnto him to be consecrated: but vpon some termes of contention vsed betwéene them, Thomas departed vnsacred, whereof he complained to William Conqueror. But after, Lanfranke so cunninglie handled the matter, that Thomas by the kings especiall edict sware obedience vnto him. Shortlie after this, Lanfranke of Canturburie, & Thomas of Yorke, with Remigius of Lincolne bishops, went to Rome, to receiue their pals of pope Alexander the third: where Lanfranke obteined two pals, one of loue, and another of office and honor. During whose abode at Rome, Thomas the archbishop of Yorke began afresh to complaine of his subiection to Canturburie: but the pope referred the deciding of that matter to the king & the nobilitie of the realme; which in the yeare of our redemption one thousand three score and twelue, being the sixt yeare of William Conqueror, deemed the same at Windsore, the tenor of the same sentence being set downe in the life of this Lanfranke by Matth. Parker, at what time also (saith Gerualius) the pope granted him Totius Angliæ, Walliæ, & Britanniæ (secundum morum antiquorum) primatum.

This Lanfranke in a Councell at Winchester ordeined that no canon should haue anie wife: as by by these words appeareth set downe by Matthew Parker, Statuit inter alia, vt nullus canonicus vxorem haberet, extra vrbem in vicis & castellis sacerdotes non compellendos vxores dimittere, prohibendos autem ne matrimonium protraherent qui iam sunt cœlibes. Tum episcopis iniunctum est, ne quos aussint presbyteros vel diaconos ordinare nisi cœlibatum professos. He kept an other synod at London for remouing of bishops sees to greater cities. In this mans time there was without the citie of Canturburie in the east part a church of S. Martins, where was a bishops see, whereof the bishop alwaies remained at or within the shire, and was in all things deputie to the archbishop, who did continuallie frequent the court. This vnderbishop being alwaies a monke, had the charge of the monks of Canturburie, and did come to celebrate the solemnities in the metropolitane church, which done he returned home, who with the prior of Christs church (whom they called deane) did with like attire and habit obteine place in all synods. Which order of deputie bishop continued vntill the time of the Normans gouernment, at what time the last bishop of that place was called Godwin, who being dead, Lanfranke denied to make anie other bishop of the church of S. Martins, because two bishops ought not to be in one citie, when in truth he was not a bishop in the citie but out of the citie in the countrie. Wherfore Lanfranke appointed in his place a clearke of his, and created him to the title of an archdeacon, whereof the archbishop repented him before he died. This archbishop was at the councell of Rone in Normandie appointed by William conqueror, in the eighth yeare of his reigne, wherein manie things were decreed touching the state of England, and Lanfranke at that time recouered manie things against Odo bishop of Baieux and erle of Kent, which he vnjustlie withheld from the bishoprike of Canturburie. Beside which he recouered also to his see fiue and twentie manors. To this man did Scotlandus (as hath Geruas. Dorobernensis & Guido abbats of S. Augustine) sweare obedience. For which great contention was betweene the monks of that house and the bishop of Canturburie, who repared the church of Canturburie being partlie verie ruinous, and partlie burnt. Moreouer, he built two hospitals, the one at Harbaldowne and the other at saint Johns, whereof the one was for lepers, and the other for sicke & weake persons, to which he gaue of the treasure of the archbishoprike yearelie one hundred & fortie pounds. Besides which he built the church of S. Gregories, wherein he placed canons to serue such as were sicke and weake, building an other church neere to the lepers, where they might serue God and be buried. Wherevnto maie be added (as saith Geruasius) that he built the bishops palace at Canturburie. He gaue yearelie fiue hundred pounds in almes to the poore, and in a famine sent to London and fed one thousand people. The old church of Rochester being downe, he built the same anew, giuing great gifts vnto it, he gaue one thousand marks to the white monks, & purchased the manor of Redburne. And though he had the dailie gouernement of the common wealth, yet he gaue himselfe mostlie to diuinitie, wherein he was procured by his father Herebald, and his mother Rosa to be instructed. He corrected the old and new testaments corrupted by the transcribers, he wrot bitterlie against Berengarius touching the sacrament, he made commentaries vpon Paules epistles, and the psalter, and euerie yeare wrot manie other works. In the third yeare of his bishoprike he consecrated Peter bishop of Lichfield or Chester at Colchester, and in the yeare following made Patrike bishop of Dublin (in Ireland) at London. In which yeare also he consecrated Hernestus monke of Canturburie bishop of Rochester, & further, made Gundulph monke of Canturburie bishop of Rochester after the death of Hernestus. In the eigth yeare of his bishoprike, in a councell held at London he deposed Ailnod abbat of Glastenburie. In the eightenth yeare of his gouernment he crowned William Rufus, consecrated Godfreie bishop of Chichester, John bishop of Welles, and Guido abbat of saint Augustines. Sometime after which he was by William Rufus banished, who as he was going to Rome, hearing of the death of the same Rufus, returned to his bishoprike, where when he had sitten nineteene, or (as saith Geruasius) twentie yeares, he died (as he had long desired) of a feuer, the fourth kalends of June, in the yere of Christ 1088, after which the see was void foure yeares (as hath M. Parker) but Per quinquennium as writeth Geruasius. Of which Lanfranke Sigebertus Gemblacensis setteth downe these verses, composed by Anselme his successor:

Archiepiscopi nec diuitias nec honores,
Sole sub vndecima geminos subeunte dieta,
Lanfrancus subijt sed curis atque labore,
Fœlicis vitæ sibi ponitur vltima meta,
Natus in Italia Papiensi de regione,
Ciuibus egregijs & honesta conditione, (sis
Monachus atq; prior Becci fuit hinc Cadomen-
Abbas, post præsul primatus Cantuariensis.
Totius Anglorum fuit ecclesiæ reparator,
Et Normanorum nihilominus auxiliator,
Cuius doctrinam pars maxima senserat orbis,
Et commune fuit viduis solamen & orbis,
Claudis, contractis, leprosis, dæmoniosis,
Surdis & cæcis nec non etiam vitiosis,
Post exhortamen non spreuit ferre leuamen,
Hic dum vixit erat spes omnibus atq; leuamen.
Regum rex æterne Deus rerumq; creator,
Sis sibi perpetuus defensor & auxiliator,
Virgo redemptoris mundi sanctissima mater
Illum conserua ne spiritus arcteriatur,
Omnes electi precibus meritisq; iuuate,
Lanfrancum vestris & vobis consociate,
Vos quoq; qui vitam gratanter adhuc retinetis,
Et spem venturæ donec superestis habetis,
Hortor & admoneo, quòd eidem subueniatis,
Et quod feceritis post mortem percipiatis,
Nam qui propter eum supplex & sedulus orat,
Pro semet supplex & sedulus ipse laborat.

In reading these verses the superstition of the time is to be remembred.

Anselmus borne in Augusta a citie of Burgundie, situat at the foot of the Alps, was descended of worthie parents, his father being called Gundulphus, and his mother Yeneberga. This man moued with the fame of Lanfranke, came to the abbeie of Bec in Normandie, where he was made a monke, in the twentie and seuenth yeare of his age, succeeding Lanfranke in the place of the prior of Bec, who shortlie after the decease of Helwine the abbat of Bec, was also substitute in his place, continuing abbat fiftéene yeares. After being called into England by Hugh erle of Chester (extreamlie sicke) he was in the end made archbishop of Canturburie by William Rufus, though afterwards he would haue vndone his gift to Anselme loth to lose so great reuenues as he receiued by the vacancie of the see. This Anselme thus departing with the abbeie of Bec, was consecrated archbishop by Walkeline bishop of Winchester. After which, sharplie admonishing the king for spoiling of churches, he grew in the kings displeasure, and could not obteine licence to go to Rome for his pall, sith (as he said) there ought none of his subiects to be in subiection to pope Urbanus. For which cause a councell being called at Rokingham by the king, the nobles, and the clergie, Anselmus. Roger de Cestria. Matth. Paris. Roff. histor. Ioronal. histor. Eadmerus.

Anſelme ſtood in defenſe of the pope, and the others reſiſted againſt his authoritie. Wherupon in the end all the biſhops, except the biſhop of Rochester, forſooke their obedience to Anſelme, ſome of them onelie affirming that they denied obedience vnto him in things which he commanded on the behalfe of pope Urban, and not otherwiſe. Which Anſelme vnderſtanding, craued leaue to depart to Rome, but could not obteine it: but notwithſtanding all which, a peace was after made betweene the king and him, vntill Whitſuntide. But the biſhop not finding this protection ſufficient, he was ſpoiled of his goods and lands, and greeuouſlie moleſted by the kings officers, wherwith not moued, he did yet receiue Urban for pope, which king Rufus and the cleargie of England in that ſchiſme of the popedome would neuer doo, for which cauſe he obteined the pall of the ſaid Urban, by the means of Walter biſhop of Alba, who brought that pall from Rome to Canturburie. The doing whereof cauſed William Rufus ſecretlie to labor with the pope, to haue Anſelme by ſome means or other to be altogither withdrawne from England, in which he preuailed not. Wherupon William Rufus returning from the wars, fell at diſſention with Anſelme, who now had libertie either to tarrie in England, and not to appeale from the king to the pope, or elſe to depart the realme, and to giue anſwere thereof within eleuen daies, wherof the archbiſhop receiued the laſt, and ſaid that he would depart England. Then the archbiſhop departing from the king (who yet ſaid he would not refuſe his bleſſing) went to Canturburie, where he tarried foure teene daies: after which, as he was taking ſhip at Douer, he was by one William the kings clerke, & the people there, ſpoiled of all he had, & ſo ſent naked ouer the ſeas into France. The archbiſhop thus departed, the king ſeized all he had, and vndid all his decrees. In the end, Anſelme paſſing to the pope, was well interteined by him at Rome, whither came the ſame William that ſpoiled him, as the kings ambaſſador, and obteined a reſpect of hearing Anſelme cauſe, vntill the feaſt of Michaelmas following; during which time both the pope and the king died.

Annal eccleſiæ Auguſtinæ.

Eadmerus.

This Rufus feeling the ſweet that came vnto him by ſpirituall liuings, whereof he reteined manie in his hands, would ieſt with theſe words, that Panis Chriſti panis pinguis eſt, The bread of Chriſt is ſweet and fat bread. After the death of Rufus, Anſelme was called home by king Henrie the firſt, and reſtored to his biſhoprike, with all other things to him belonging; for the king did greatlie fauor him, as may appeare by this deed, which is in Saxon, the tenor whereof we haue here ſet downe in Saxon, and the Latin out of Matthew Parker, being both ſet downe in the ſame booke of the biſhops of his ſee. Wherin is two things to be noted, firſt the ſimplicitie and good meaning of that age, that in ſo few words did conueie ſo great matters, not leauing contention for lawyers to wrangle vpon, contrarie to the cuſtome of our age, who make their charters exceſſiue long, & yet not ſo ſtrong as they were in times paſt. The other is the maner of ſealing vſed by the kings in thoſe daies: for the kings ſeale which is now hanged at the end of all patents, in this ancient grant is faſtened to a little part of parchment drawen out & cut from the left ſide of this charter. For in times paſt the kings did not vſe to ſet to their ſeales to anie grant, till Edward the Confeſſors time, which firſt brought that order into England (if my memorie faile not, & therefore I haue not miſtaken the words of Ingulfus for this Edward his charter) for the more witneſſe of the truth, to be ſealed with wax, which yet it ſeemed the following princes did vſe but at pleaſure, for I haue ſeene an ancient deed of William Conqueror part in Saxon, and part in Latine, without date, in which the king gaue to Guiſo biſhop of Wels the manor of Banewell in Somerſetſhire, which Harold had taken from them, whereunto was neuer anie ſeale but the ſubſcription of the king and the nobilitie, written in Saxon characters, the nams whereof I thinke good (though it concerne not the biſhops of Canturburie, for antiquities ſake, and becauſe that ſome of theſe names haue yet a being) to ſet downe in this ſort: Ego Gulielmus dux, Waltheof dux, Robertus frater regis, Rotgerus princeps, Gualterus Gaſebtard, Serlo de Burci, Rotgerus Derundell, Richardus filius regis, Gualterus Flæmine, Wurſtan, Baldwinus de Waranbeicge, Otheltard Aelfgardethorne, William de Waluile, Bundi Stallere, Robert Stallere, Robert de Yle, Rotgerus pincerna, Hardineg Wulfutard, Brightine, &c. And ſo to the charter of Henrie the firſt made to Anſelme.

Gerual. in vita Eduardi Con.

The Saxon charter of king Henrie the firſt, for the reſtoring of Anſelme his priuileges.

H. Angle-landes kynning gret. Huge de Boclande & P. Baynarde. & ealle myne picnæſer en lundune. Ic pille & be beode þ ealle Anſelmes mænn þe he hefð on lundune and ealle hir oðre mænn, þe cumeð and apeðhr into þære buph. þ hi beon ſpa ſacleaſe or eallen ſcpunen ſpa Landſpanc Apcebircop hir mænn betſt hærde on myn æſ faðer tyme. & hapigeð þ ge heom naht ne myr heoden. t. Hug. Comite de Ceſtria. ap. peſtmonſt.

The ſame charter in Latine.

H. rex Anglorum Hugoni de Bocland & Willihelmo Baignard, & omnibus miniſtris meis Londoniæ ſalutem. Præcipio & volo vt omnes homines Anſelmi Cantuarienſis archiepiſcopi, quos in Londonia habet, & omnes ſui in ea villa euntes & redeuntes, ita quietè de omnibus conſuetudinibus ſint, ſicut vnquam Lanfrancus archiepiſcopus ſuos in ea meliùs & quietiùs habuit tempore patris mei, & videte ne eis vllam iniuriam faciatis. Teſte Hugone comite de Ceſtria apud Weſtmonſter.

Aurea hiſtor. pars 2. W. Malm.

After this, Anſelme called a ſynod at London, in which he depoſed for ſimonie and other euils, Guido abbat of Wimondham, and Edwine abbat of Ramſeie ſimoniaks; and theſe other abbats, Geſferie of Peterborow, Heimo of * Ceruelle, Egelrike of Pideton, bicauſe they were not ordeined in the cleargie, with Richard of Elie, and Robert of S. Edmunds, for other defaults & exceſſe. In which councell alſo amongſt manie other lawes conteining ſix and twentie chapters, for the cleargie were theſe: That clearks ſhould weare garments of one colour, and ſuch ſhoes as were appointed cap. 10. That abbats ſhould not make anie knights that might eat or drinke in that houſe with the monks cap. 17. That the bodies of the dead ſhould not be buried out of their paroch church cap. 24. And that none with raſh noueltie ſhould attribute to dead bodies, to wels, or other places (which we haue knowne to haue often happened) anie reuerence of holines without the biſhops authoritie ca. 25. And that none ſhould exerciſe that moſt lothſome buſines, in which hitherto men were wont to be ſold like brute beaſts, cap. 26. The which conſtitutions of this ſynod of London Giraldus biſhop of Yorke could not make his people to obeie, neither yet would manie other parts of the realme obeie the ſame, eſpeciallie ſuch as following the kings order had diſpoſed of their eccleſiaſticall liuing, as the king had done for the inueſting of biſhops. Againſt which Anſelme did greatlie ſtand, and would not conſecrate ſuch biſhops, the which Girald archbiſhop of Yorke alwaies did, at the 1103 * Herteſeie as ſome ſuppoſe.

Abbats did make knights

Burialls in paroch churches.

request and pleasure of the king, who appointing a place and day for them to be consecrated by him, thither came William bishop of Winchester to receiue his benediction, but he in the end not meaning to take the same consecration at Giralds hands, deliuered his staffe and ring againe to the king, of whome he had receiued it: whereupon the king banished him, and sent William Warlwast ambassador to the pope about that matter, whereof is more spoken by Holinshed in the reigne of king Henrie the first.

Giraldus Cambrensis. de Gestis. Ang. histor.

This Anselme comming from Rome, together with William Warlwast, was forbidden by the said Warlwast (from the king) to enter England, vnlesse he would without anie subiection to the pope obserue all the customes of England brought in by William Conqueror and William Rufus his predecessors: whereunto Anselme disagreeing, remained three years at Lions with the archbishop Hugh. But after that he was reconciled to the king by means of the countesse of Adela his sister, whome Anselme came to visit in hir sickenesse, who going into Normandie to the king (then in subduing the same) did so effectuallie worke with him, that Anselme was restored, and this peace made betweene them; that all such bishops as were before inuested by the king, and excommunicated by pope Paschall should be absolued and keepe their bishoprikes, and that neither the king nor anie other laie man hereafter should doo the like againe. Whereupon Anselme returned into England, and was restored to his bishoprike, and to all the commodities receiued by the king in the time of his banishment. After the kings returne to England, there was by the king a councell kept at London, in which the inuestiture of bishops was wholie giuen to the king. This Anselme bestowed much on the decking and reparing of the church of Canturburie, and instituting the monasterie of the monks of Chester first built by Hugh earle of that prouince, ouer which monasterie he made Richard his chapleine abbat. This archbishop was verie diligent in writing, of whose doing there are extant three hundred sixtie and seauen epistles, he compiled diuerse treatises, first: De veritate. 2 De libertate arbitrij. 3 De casu diaboli. 4 De grammatico & discipulo. 5 Monologion. He wrote also a booke called Sententiarum prologion, a booke De incarnatione verbi, and manie other bookes, as one intituled Cur Deus homo, an other De conceptu virginali, and also De orationibus contemplatiuis, and lastlie De processione spiritus sancti. Who thus spending his time to helpe other, did, two years after his last comming into England, fall sicke of an ague at saint Edmundsburie, and hastened to come to Canturburie, where keeping his bed a long time he at length departed this life the eleuenth kalends of Maie, in the yeare of our redemption one thousand one hundred and nine, the seauentie and six of his age, and the sixteenth of his bishoprike, being buried at the head of Lanfranke his predecessor.

Walt. Coment. Sim. Dunel. Matth. Paris.

Will. Malms. Rosf. histor.

Aurea histor. 2. pars.

Chron. Rober.

Aurea histor. pars 2. W. Malms.

1103 * Yertsete as some suppose.

Edmerus.

Rodulphus.

Rodulphus borne in Normandie a Benedictine monke, was sometime the scholer of Lanfranke in the abbeie of Cane. This man being first made abbat of Sagos, was from thense by Anselme lead into England, and made bishop of Rochester, whose aduancement to the see of Canturburie was after this manner. Henrie the first holding manie spirituall liuings in his hand, and the nobilitie complaining thereof, he was in the end ouercome by their petition, to subiect them vnto pastors and gouernours, for which cause he appointed Faricius abbat of Abindon to the see of Canturburie, a man doubtlesse of great wisdome and grauitie. But manie of the nobilitie being against it, they would haue had the king to promote one of his secular clearks and chapleins to that dignitie. Against whom it was obiected that none had possessed that see, but such as were monks, except Stigandus, whose unhappie end did shew the punishment of the breach of that monkish succession, wherefore by all mens voices, & the kings changing of his mind touching Faricius, this Rodulphus was made archbishop of Canturburie, and consecrated by William bishop of Winchester, the fiftéenth yeare of pope Paschalis, and the fourtéenth of king Henrie the first, being about the yeare of our redemption one thousand one hundred and fourtéene, and the fift kalends of Julie next following receiued the pall at Canturburie sent from pope Paschall by one Anselme abbat of S. Sabina, nephue of the other Anselme archbishop of Canturburie. In which daie of receiuing the pall, he consecrated Theolfus bishop of Worcester. In this bishops time the most bishops of England were Normans.

But this was not so as may before appeare.

Matth. Paris. Radulph de Diceto.

Now Rodulphus being old, sickly, full of the palsie and of the gowt, was hard to be pleased, and somewhat became vnthankefull to the king which had preferred him. For whereas the bishop of Salisburie was readie apparelled and prepared to haue executed the solemnities of the marriage (which belonged to the bishop of Canturburie) betweene Adelicia and king Henrie the first at Windsore, this Radulph commanded him to leaue off the same, and committed the doing thereof to the bishop of Winchester. Besides which, when the king was at Berkeleie in the Easter, and came to London at Whitsuntide, and sat crowned in his throne, that daie the quéene was to be crowned, this Radulph saieng the diuine seruice that daie (leauing his masse in the middle) did come vnto the king, whome Thomas archbishop of Yorke had crowned when he came to the kingdome, because Anselme was banished and out of the realme. Against which archbishop of Canturburie the king rose vp to receiue him with curtesie: but the bishop notwithstanding boldlie asked the king who crowned him, whereunto the king answered, that he cared not, and therefore did not remember it. Whereto Radulphus replied, Who soeuer did the same did not rightlie doo it, wherfore either leaue you off your crowne, or I will leaue off my masse. But the king nothing troubled therwith, did answer him; If as thou saiest this crowne be not well put vpon my head, doo thou that which thou thinkest is rightlie doon. With which words the bishop came nearer, and lifting vp his hand to take the crowne from the kings head. The nobilitie (as the king was about to loose the lace which tied the crowne fast vnder his chin) with one voice cried out against the bishop, and greatlie laboured him not to take off the kings crowne in this solemne coronation of the quéene. With whose acclamations Radulphus being quieted he went forward with his masse, beginning at this verse Gloria in excelsis Deo. Which fact of Radulphus doone at this vnseasonable time, the cleargie and nobilitie did so hate, that they agréed (as hath Matthew Parker) neuer to haue anie monks to be bishops of Canturburie, whereunto the king assented, and by law established it. But this decree did not long hold, for the two following bishops were monks, and the third being Becket, was the first canon after Stigand that was consecrated bishop of Canturburie.

Roger being sometime chancellor of England.

Ioronall hist.

In the time of this Rodulphus was the question of obedience moued betweene him & the archbishop of Yorke. For Thurstan bishop of Yorke at the first would not sweare obedience to this Radulphus, for which cause Radulphus in his old age went vnto Rome; but the pope giuing a doubtfull sentence, the archbishop of Canturburie shewed the same vnto king Henrie the first at his returne into England.

Matth. Paris. Ioronal. histor. Aurea histor. 2. pars. W. Malms. Chron. Cœnob. Martini. Roger de Cestria. Rosf. histor. Ex archiuis.

Matth. Paris. Simon Dunel. Ioranal. hist. Radulph. de Diceto. Gisburnensis. Roger de Chestria. Roff. hist. Ex archiuis. Edmerus. Ex archiuis. Gisburn. Matth. Paris.

Wherevpon Thurstan was forbidden to enter into England; but the pope excommunicating both the king and Rodulphus, compelled them to receiue Thurstan into Yorkshire with this condition, that he should not medle out of his diocesse of Yorke, and professe his due obedience to the sée of Canturburie. At length Rodulphus hauing the palsie three yeares departed the world (after that he had béene bishop of Canturburie eight yeares, or as others saie nine yeares) the thirteenth kalends of Nouember, in the yeare of our redemption one thousand one hundred twentie and two, being about the two and twentith yeare of the reigne of that learned king Henrie the first (which for the same was surnamed Beauclerke, or faire, or skillfull clerke) and was buried at Canturburie. This bishop was of speech courteous, noted of no notable crime, but ouer much giuen to mirth and iesting, for which he was surnamed the iester or trifler.

William Corbell.

1121

William Corbell or Corbois, whome Matthew Parker maketh the six and thirtith bishop in succession, and some call Gulielmum de Turbine, was first a secular clerke, then a monke of the order of saint Benet, and after that, prior of saint Oswith of Chich, who in the two and twentith yeare of the reigne of Henrie Beauclerke, and the third of pope Calixtus, was by Henrie the first made bishop of Canturburie on Candlemas daie, and consecrated of William bishop of Winchester, the bishoprike of London being then vacant. This done, this William goeth to Rome for his pall, at what time Thurstan thinking it now time to moue Calixtus about the subiection of the sée of Yorke to Canturburie, did yet find no grace at Rome therefore, because the pope vtterlie remoued from himselfe the deciding thereof; albeit the Saxon chronicle of Peterborow doth saie that gold and siluer did end this quarell. Wherefore William of Canturburie and Thurstan of Yorke comming home togither, saluted the king then in Normandie, and so entred England. After this he consecrated John his archdeacon of Canturburie into the bishoprike of Rochester, in the three and twentith yeare of the reigne of king Henrie the third, being the yeare of Christ one thousand one hundred twentie and three, as hath Rob. Montensis, at what time also he blessed Godfreie the kings chancellor to be bishop of Bath at London.

Chro. Sigisb. Gemblacens.

1126

In the fourth yeare of his consecration he did hold a synod in the monasterie of saint Peters at London; which synod was called Synodus Willielmi, or Williams synod. In this bishops time Paules church and a great part of London was burnt; for the citie was consumed by fire from saint Clement of the Danes without Temple barre to London bridge, in the yeare of our redemption one thousand one hundred and thirtie, being the thirtith yeare of the reigne of king Henrie the first, and the eight yeare of the consecration of this bishop. At what time also the church of Canturburie was consumed with the like flame and fell downe, which this William, being legat of the apostolike sée, did againe build vp, and dedicated it in the same yeere of our Lord one thousand one hundred and thirtie, being the thirtith yeare of Henry the first, the fourth nones of Maie, as hath Geruasius Dorobornensis, with great & honorable preparation in the presence of the king and quéene of England, and of Dauid king of Scots, with the nobilitie and prelats of both realmes, as hath Geruasius. Unto which church then consecrated king Henrie the first gaue the church of saint Martins of Douer and the archbishop yearelie gaue ten pounds. This bishop William was so faint-harted, that he almost died because he was ouercome by Henrie de Blesles (bishop of Winchester and brother to king Stephan (which built the hospitall of the holie crosse nére Winchester) in the legantine power which the said William secretlie laboured to obteine. For first Henrie going to Rome, this William followed to resist him; but Henrie so preuailed, that being made a cardinall, he succéeded William being dead in the office of Legat. This William declared his inconstancie in crowning king Stephan, contrarie to his oth made to Maud the empresse, who being feared by the terror of his conscience, let fall the holt when he celebrated the masse at the coronation of the same Stephan. After which, this bishop for sorrow falling sicke, died the eleuenth kalends of December, about the yeare of our Lord one thousand one hundred thirtie and seauen, hauing gouerned that sée fiftéene yeares and nine moneths, being buried in the church of Canturburie; after whose departure the sée was void one yeare, two moneths, and fourtéene daies.

1136 Matthew Parker ex Pol. crat. Roger de Chestria Ioranal. hist.

Theobald.

Theobald, whose originall is not knowen, was of a Benedictine monke made abbat of Bec, after which in the second yeare of king Stephan, in the yeare of our redemption one thousand one hundred thirtie and eight, in a councell at London (assembled by Albert bishop of Yorkia the popes legat in England) he was chosen archbishop of Canturburie by the suffragans of that sée, and consecrated by the said Albert; after which he sent twelue monks to the new church of Douer, & offred them Alcelme sacrist of the church of Canturburie. In which moneth being Januarie this Theobald with great pompe went to Rome, and receiued the pall of pope Innocent the second of that name, of whome he also obteined this title to be called Legatus natus, which was euer after attributed to his successors, whereby they were from that time forward termed Legati nati, which title they haue kept vntill our time, so long as the pope had anie authoritie in England. This Theobald was but meanlie learned, but well qualited, and of mild conditions, whereby he was both acceptable to the king and to the nobilitie, of whom thus writeth Geruasius: Hic Theobaldus 37 ab Augustino Cantuariensem ecclesiam adeptus, cùm esset natura simplex & aliquantulum literatus, asciuit clericos scholares quorum consilio suo impetu quolibet ducebatur. Post annos verò quinque minùs quàm deceret considerata ratione Ieremiã priorem, qui eum elegerat, deposuit, etiam post appellationem, aliúmque substituit. Ieremias autem tàm de sua iustitia causæ quàm de Romani pontificis æquitate confidens ad sedem apostolicam accessit, & de sua restitutione literas obtinuit. Restitutus itaque in prioratum, apostolica authoritate post modicũ cessit, ne archiepiscopus causa sua aliqua cæteris inferret grauamina. Huiusmodi depositio prioris anteà pænes nos facta non est, &c. Successore autem suo Waltero ad episcopatum Cicestrensis ecclesiæ vocato, substitutus est in prioratum Cantuar. ecclesiæ Walterus Paruus archiepiscopi capellanus.

Theobald. Roff. histor. Ex archiuis. Gualt. Cornut. Matt. Paris. Gembl.

The like matter of the depolition of Walter Paruus Geruasius pursueth in the historie, with the originall how the archbishops of Canturburie got the prerogatiue to make and depose the prior of Canturburie, being a thing which came by mere vsurpation in this sort. In the wars in the time of king Stephan, in the yeare of Christ one thousand one hundred & fiftie, Geruasius reciteth, that Walter the prior of Canturburie, séeking helpe of this bishop Theobald to succor his house in distresse, submitted all the things & gouernment of the same to the archbishop, at the first refusing it; but in the end, accepting therof, with much importunitie he placed a monke called Dericus to haue the ouersight of all the things within dores and without, who should therefore yéeld account to the bishop, at what time first began the euill and trouble. For that which was then attempted for necessities cause for their benefit, fit, turned after to their hinderance, because the bishop vsing all things with extremitie; the prior appealed him to Rome, which Theobald despised, imprisoned the monks (whereby they could not follow the appeale) and tooke from them all their writings and priuileges. But in the end the matter was compounded with quiet in some part betweene the bishop and the prior, who at length by the flattering words of the archbishop, which the prior beleeued, did in the end surrender his priorie to the archbishop. And when the prior amongst other words of his resignation said to the bishop; I resigne my priorie, (at what time manie supposed, that the archbishop would haue replied; And I restore thee to the same) this bishop contrarie thereunto said; And I depose thee from the same, further commanding the prior, that he should follow him to London, where he should receiue full restitution. Whereupon the prior despising the aduise of his brethren, came with some of the ancients of his house to the bishop at Lambeth, who being called aside as though they should talke of the restitution of the prior, with the archbishop, the bishops seruants tooke this Walter so deposed, and led him to Glocester, commanding the abbat of that house in the archbishops name that he should not suffer him to depart thense, or to go forth. Whereupon the prior remained there in a prison during the life of this Theobald archbishop, who consecrated Walter archdeacon of Canturburie bishop of Rochester, chosen by the monks of Canturburie by his appointment, from whense euer after the archbishops of Canturburie were patrons of the church of Rochester, as saith Matthew Parker: but Geruasius preweth their authoritie in that see long before, for thus he writeth. Obijt (which was an. Dom. 1147) Ascelinus Roffensis episcopus, anno episcopatus sui sexto, nono kalendis Februarij, cui successit Walterus archidiaconus Cantuarienſis, frater Theobaldi Cantuarienſis archiepiſcopi, qui ſecundùm antiquam conſuetudinem, in capitulo Cantuariæ electus eſt à monachis Roffenſibus. Cuius electionis primam habuit vocem Hugo abbas ſancti Auguſtini, eò quòd apud eccleſiam Roffenſem monachicum ſuſceperat habitum; ad prafatam verò abbathiam tranſlatus cum monachis Roueceſtriæ coram Theobaldo Cantuarienſe archiepiſcopo (ad quem ſpectat de iure antiquo epiſcopatus ipſius donatio) in capitulo Cantuar. in præſentia totius conuentus Cantuar. cleri & populi multitudine, vt prædictum eſt, ipſum elegit Walterum. Qui more anteceſſorũ ſuorum iurauit ſuper quatuor euangelia, ſe fideliter obſeruaturum dignitatem Cantuar. eccleſiæ, quam habebat in eccleſia Roffenſi. Eſt autem eccleſiæ Cantuarienſ. conſuetudo ab antiquis temporibus conſtituta, & à pijs patribus obtenta, quòd epiſcopus Roffenſis debeat eligi in capitulo Cantuarienſ. ex dono archiepiſcopi & electione conuentus Roffenſis eccleſiæ. Facta autem electione debet electus iurare ſuper quatuor euangelia fidelitatẽ eccleſiæ Cantuarienſ. & archiepiſcopo. Et quod non debeat Roffenſ. epiſcopus operam dare, vel conſentire vt eccleſia Cantuarienſ. priuetur honore vel dignitate, quã habeat in eccleſia Roffenſ. Et quòd debeat baculus paſtoralis epiſcopi Roffenſis defuncti à monachis Roffenſibus ad altare Chriſti Cantuarienſ. deferri. Et quòd vacante Cantuarien. eccleſiæ ſede vel abſente archiepiſcopo, debeat epiſcopus Roffenſis in Cantuar. eccleſia epiſcopalia miniſtrare, ſicut proprius & primatus Cantuarienſis eccleſiæ capellanus, ſi tamen a conuentu Cantuarienſis fuerit vocatus. Hac igitur facta fidelitate conſecratus eſt Walterus ab ipſo fratre ſuo Theobaldo archiepiſcopo Cantuarienſi. Quo conſecrato, archiepiſcopus archidiaconatum Cantuar. cuidam Rogerio dedit de ponte epiſcopi, qui & ipſe Cant. eccleſiæ fidelitatem iurauit ſicut archidiaconi facere conſueuerunt. Thus much Geruasius a monke of Canturburie in defense of the honor and priuileges of the see of Canturburie. After which this Theobald receiuing an oth of obedience of the said Roger archdeacon of Canturburie, he blessed him into the bishoprike of Yorke and made Thomas Becket, commonlie called saint Thomas of Canturburie, archdeacon of Canturburie in his place, procuring him also to be the kings chancellor.

Ex archiuis.

Gulielmus archiepiscopus (as hath Geruasius) fundauit ecclesiam sancti Martini monachorum de Doura.

In the third yeare of the consecration of this archbishop, pope Eugenius held a councell at Rhemes, whereunto Theobald was called. Wherefore Henrie bishop of Winchester the popes legat (who in authoritie of superioritie of that office did often contend with the said Theobald for the archbishoprike of Canturburie, was Legatus natus, and the other as I maie terme him, but Legatus datus, the first for euer, the second but for a time) did subtillie vse the matter both with the king and the pope, that the one should call him to the councell, and that the other should forbid him to depart out of his realme; to the end that if he obeied his spirituall pastor, he might fall into the censures of the church; & if he obeied not his temporall lord, that he might fall into the ciuill punishment and be banished the realme, whereupon he was commanded to staie in England, and all the ports stopt that he might not passe forth. But he rather fearing the displesure of the pope than the king, scaped the hands of such wardens, passed the sea and went to the councell. Which councell being ended, as hath Geruasius, the bishop returning home, was honourablie receiued by the couent of Canturburie; whereof when the king had intelligence, being then at London, he grew so angrie, that he came with all speed to Canturburie, where manie words of heat passing betweene them, more than were conuenient or tending to peace, at length the bishop was by the king commanded to depart the realme: who after a few daies respite, passed the seas at Douer, and went into France, where he remained a certein time, and was called backe to saint Omers by the queene, and William de Ypre, that the kings messengers might more easily come vnto him, at what place he consecrated Gilbert elect bishop of Hereford the nones of September, by the helpe and assistance of the outlandish bishops, which were Thidrike bishop of Amiens, and Nicholas bishop of Cambraie. Now the bishop thus banished, for requitall thereof, interdicted the king: but after leauing saint Omers he came to Graueling, entred the sea, returned into England, came into Northfolke, and landed at Gosford in the lands of Hugh Bigod, whom the said earle meeting receiued with great honour: in which countrie he interdicted the land, and would not be remoued from that sentence, vntill the bishops Robert of London, Hilarie of Chichester, and William of Norwich, with diuers other noble men came vnto him to Framelingham castle in Northfolke, belonging to the earle Bigod, where at length a peace was concluded betweene the king and him, the interdict was released, and the bishop with great honor & ioie came to Canturburie. Where hearing how the monks of S. Augustines had contemned his interdict, and thereof complained to the pope, he trusting to a sure staffe of the popes fauor, did aggraue the sentence against those monks, whom he excommunicated with Silueſter their prior, & William surnamed the Deuill, kinsman to abbat Hugh of that house, after deposing the same Silueſter in the yeare of Christ one thousand one hundred fortie and eight.

At length, such was the fauour of this Theobald in England, as he at Wallingford or rather at Winchester, as hath Geruasius, reconciled king Stephan & Henrie Fitzempresse, contending for the crowne of England in the yeare of Christ one thousand one hundred fiftie and three. After comming home, he required a little summe of monie of fiftie shillings and seuen pence of the monks of saint Augustines Pro dotatione Geruas. Tho. Spot.

Robertus abbas S. Michaelis.

Theobald. Roff. histor. Ex archiuis. Gualt. Couent. Matt. Paris. Gembl.

Histor. eccles. Cantuar.

1147 Beginning the yeare at Christmas.

dotatione chrismatis, which the monks denied. Whereupon Theobald laid the censures of the church on them, whereby the matter was by appellation deferred to the pope, who wrot to Henrie bishop of Winchester and Robert bishop of Hereford, to define the cause; which they did, in giuing sentence against the monks. Things thus quieted in England, there was a councell held at Rome, whither went these bishops, Theobald of Canturburie, Walter of Rochester, Simon of Worcester, Roger of Couentrie, and Robert of Excester, with so manie abbats called thither. After this, Theobald called a synod at London, in the yeare of our Lord one thousand one hundred fiftie & two, being the seuentæenth of king Stephan, and the fouretæenth of his consecration, in which councell was present king Stephan and his sonne Eustace, whom he required to be made king, to which (being by the pope forbidden) they would not by anie meanes assent. Which was so brought to passe by the means, as saith Geruasius, of one Thomas a clearke borne at London, whose father was Gilbert, and his mother Mawd. Wherefore the king and his sonne thutting them vp close, with threats and feare obteined that which they could not doo with fauour and authoritie, for manie of them were therby brought to yeld to the kings mind. But Theobald priuilie stealing from the place, got a boate wherein he was carried to the Thames mouth into the sea, where he entered a ship at Douer, and passed ouer the seas, whereupon the king did banish him and seized on all his substance. In this councell were manie kinds of friuolous appeales to Rome forbidden, which Henrie bishop of Winchester had procured; to which Henrie, Lucius the pope, as master Lambard hath noted out of the chronicle of Rochester, did send a pall, determining to haue made him a new archbishop, assigning seuen bishops to be vnder his subiection: but as it seemeth, the same tooke no great effect. For which doing of Henrie, there was great contention betweene Theobald and him, for Canturburie would vse his ordinarie authoritie ouer his suffragan Winchester, and he would extend his legantine power ouer his metropolitan Canturburie, by which meanes were manie appeales made to Rome. After the death of king Stephan, Theobald was called out of exile, and was in greater fauour with Henrie the second, than euer he was with Stephan; and yet Thurstan, or rather his successor William archbishop of Yorke, did priuilie attempt to crowne king Henrie, which he would not suffer, admitting none thervnto but Theobald, as appeareth by these letters.

Gervas. Chronic. Robert. Walt. Couent. Chro. Petrob. This Thomas is supposed to be Thomas Becket. Annal. eccle. August. Cant. Wil. Nubrigen.

Henricus rex Angliæ & dux Normaniæ & Aquitaniæ, & comes Anb. Theobaldo Cant. archiepiscopo salutem. Super hoc quod mihi mandastis, quòd audieritis me coronandum ad natale ab archiepiscopo Eborac. apud Lincoln. in prouincia vestra, sciatis quòd nullo modo me ibi coronabit, nec alibi contra dignitatē vestram. Ibi enim me coronabit, sicut mandastis, Lincoln. episcopus, si præsentiam vestram habere non potero, quam multùm desiderarem. Sed hac vice parco labori vestro, & cùm dominus Lincoln. episcopus possit modo supplere vices vestras, nolo quòd ad me veniendo tanto labore vexemini. Et hoc pro certo sciatis, quòd nec in his nec in alijs quàm diu coronam portabo, vestram offendam gratiam nec diuinam dignitatem. Teste T. cancellario nostro, apud Notingham.

Which William attempting the matter at Rome was, after that the king had repelled him, poisoned vpon his returne into England, the king being Sigisb. Gembl. after crowned in the yere of Christ one thousand one hundred fiftie & fiue, by Theobald, in the seuentæenth yeare of the gouernment of his archbishoprike. About this time was Canturburie and Rochester almost all burnt with the church of Yorke. Theobald being now verie old died in the yere of our redemption one thousand one hundred three score and one, the fouretæenth kalends of Maie, as saith Geruasius, after that he had bæne bishop two and twentie yeares, and was buried in Christs church in Canturburie, after whose death the church was void one yeare one moneth and fouretæne daies.

Thomas Becket borne in London, the sonne of Gilbert Becket, was taught and brought vp at Merton colledge, from which he went to Paris, was after a iustice of England, then in seruice with Theobald archbishop of Canturburie, after which he went into Italie to learn the ciuill law, who returning home, was made archdeacon of Canturburie by Theobald, in the yeare of our Lord one thousand one hundred fiftie and foure, master and ruler of Beuerleie, and parson of Bromfield, of whom Matthew Parker thus writeth: Deuotus semper fuit diuo Albano à quo cepit primos redditus scilicet ecclesiā de Bramfeld. From whense he was aduanced to the chancellorship of England, in the yeare of our Lord one thousand one hundred fiftie and foure, who going to the court being a deacon, left off his clerklie apparell and attired himselfe after the fashion of such as serued the prince. He was a good souldior both for the church and the kingdome, for the miter and for the crowne: he being the first Englishman after the conquest, which possessed that see, was made archbishop of Canturburie at Westminster by the kings edict, and consent of all the clergie, except as some saie, Thomas bishop of London: but Geruas. saith, Mentiuntur planè qui dicunt Londonien sem electioni Thomæ archiepiscopo restitisse, quia sedes illa Londonij illis diebus vacauit & postea vsque ad natiuitatē Domini; in the yere of our redemption one thousand one hundred three score and two, in the seuenth yeare of Henrie the second, and the second of pope Alexander the third, about the fortith of his age as hath Geruasius, and was made priest, (for he was before but a deacon) by Walter bishop of Rochester on Whitsun eeue, and the next daie consecrated bishop of Canturburie by Henrie bishop of Winchester, of whom in this treatise I will set downe the words of Geruasius Dorobern: touching his death, leauing the rest of his life for other place. Anno gratiæ 1170 Thomas in fine quidem anni martyrio coronatus est, dies enim natalis Domini erat in sexta feria, sancti Stephani in sabato, sancti Iohannis in die dominica, sanctorum innocentium feria secunda; feria verò tertia sanctus Thomas passus est dum monachi vesperas cantarent in choro, quod in anno sequenti videlicet 1171, esse non potuit, &c. Qui asserit sanctum Thomam martyrizatum anno 1170, annum incipit & terminat in Annuntiatione, qui autem dicit eum passum esse anno gratiæ 1171, annum præcedit alterius & anticipat trium mensium spatio. Of which Thomas Becket, and of all other the archbishops of Canturburie, which were chancellors of England, I will here in this booke speake but little, referring the discourse of all the rest of their doings to my large booke of the liues of the chancellors, where the liues of these archbishops shall be liberallie penned, and for this man at this time refer thee to the collections of the chancellors set downe in Holinshed, pag. 1274.

Thomas Becket. Ex archiuis. Roff. infis. Houeden. Wal. Couen. Roff. infis. Ioronal. antiq. Rog. de Cestr. Matt. Paris. Florileg. Hecebeens. Ioronal. antiq.

Richard archbishop of Canturburie was chosen to to that see in this order. One Robert abbat of Bec, elected archbishop, being desirous to liue quietlie, and fearing troubles to follow, did willinglie refuse that place. After which the king laboured Odo the prior and the monks of Canturburie, to chuse a quiet man, and not such a troublesome person as Thomas Becket was counted to be. For which cause he named to them the bishop of Baion, as hath Gerualius. Whereunto the prior answered the king, that they would doo according to his request, and therefore did chuse this Richard a Benedictine monke prior of the monasterie of S. Martins of Douer, who by Henrie the second was admitted to the archbishoprike of Canturburie, whose consecration when all things were prepared therefore, was withstood by the young king Henrie, writing his letters to this effect to Odo prior of Canturburie.

The letters of yoong king Henrie to the prior of Canturburie.

Enricus Dei gratia rex Angliæ, & dux*
H
Normanniæ, & comes Andegauiæ, regis*
Hērici filius, charo & fideli suo O. priori Cantuar. ecclesiæ, & vniuerso conuentui salutem & dilectionem. Ex certa quorundam relatione reperimus, quòd in ecclesia vestra, & etiam in prouincialibus ecclesijs, personas quasdam minùs congruas pater meus instituere attemptet. Et quoniam absque assensu nostro id nequaquam fieri debet, qui ratione regiæ vnctionis regnum & totius regni curam suscepimus, super hoc Romanam sedem in multorum præsentiam appellauimus, & appellationem factam venerabilibus patribus nostris, & amicis Albert. & Theod. cardinalibus apostolicæ sedis legatis scripto & nuntio nostro denuntiauimus, qui sicut viri prudentes appellationi detulerunt. Hanc etiam ipsam appellationem fidelibus nostris London. Exoniens. & Wigorn. episcopis scripto nostro denuntiauimus, & quemadmodum appellauimus iteratò sub testimonio vestro appellamus, &c.

Whereupon the bishops being in some doubt what to doo, sith most fauored the election of this Richard, and some fauored the appeale: yet at length he was at Auinion consecrated by pope Alexander the third with these words; Tibi Richarde tuisque successoribus Cantuarien sis ecclesiæ, primatum ita plenè concedimus, sicut à Lanfranco & Anselmo, alijsque ipsorum prædecessoribus quondam Cant. episcop. fuisse possessum constat. A little after which, this archbishop returned into England with his pall and leguntine power of the pope of Rome, swearing fealtie to the king, Saluo ordine suo This man would confirme the election of the bishop at the will of the prior, without lawful inquisition in the kings chamber. When he came to Glocester, in saint Oswalds church (which was subiect to the bishop of Yorke) the clerks of Roger then bishop of Yorke would not be subiect vnto him: whereby dissention arose betweene them. He kept a councell at Westminster, in which, the same Roger bishop of Yorke would not be present; but complained and renewed the quarell of bearing vp his crosse in the prouince of Canturburie: further affirming, that the bishops of Lincolne, Excester, Worcester, and Hereford, ought to be at his obedience; as manie other archbishops before that time had made chalenge.

In the fift yeare of his consecration, he ordeined three archdeaconries in his diocesse of Canturburie, where before there was but one. Hugonius a legat comming into England called a councell at Westminster, in which, about contention betweene the bishop of Yorke and this Richard, for sitting on the right side of the legat; the archbishop of Yorke was well beaten, his rochet torne, and he feigne to complaine to the king. Which being for that time turned to a iest, yet in the end, the matter was after composed and appeased betweene the two bishops for fiue yeares. Whereupon, by oth they bound themselues to stand to the arbitrement of the bishops of France and of Rome. This man, after the death of king Henrie the sonne (as saith Matthew Parker, though Gerualius maketh king Henrie liuing much after, in the yeare of Christ one thousand one hundred three score and seuenténe, leauing the gouernement of his bishoprike to Gilbert bishop of London, did go ambassador for the king of England into Sicilie, with the kings daughter Ione, to be maried to William king of that Ile: who in returning, did in the same yeare depose William Watermill abbat of Peterborow, being the yeare of Christ one thousand one hundred seauentie and six. After, in the yeare one thousand one hundred seuentie and seuen, this Richard refusing to consecrate Roger before elected abbat of S. Augustines in Canturburie, because that Roger would not sweare such absolute profession of obedience to the archbishop, as the archbishop would haue inforced him vnto; this Roger went to Rome, made his church tributarie & feodarie to the pope, with whome he wrought all he could to bring the bishop of Canturburie in his disgrace. Which in the end he did so effectually, that the pope (to vse Gerualius Dorobernensis words) did in Contumeliam archiepiscopi, grant to the said Roger episcopall iurisdiction, with the miter, staffe, and ring, ensignes belonging to a bishoprike.

Much about fiue yeares after, that is in the yeare of our Lord one thousand one hundred eightie and two, as hath Gerualius, Walter bishop of Rochester died in the moneth of Julie, in the fiue and thirtith yeare of his bishoprike: who being buried, this archbishop did seize vpon his townes and possessions, with the church of Rochester, as of right he might doo during the vacancie of the see, and further accursed all such as did breake the ancient prerogatiue of the church of Canturburie, or diminish their dignitie. Notwithstanding which Randolph Præfectus Angliæ, cheefe gouernour of England (being that man as I suppose which was called Ranulph Glanuile cheefe iustice of England, and liuing at this time) did resist without the kings consent. Wherfore the archbishop sent letters to the king, being in the affaires beyond the seas, concerning the same, and receiued this answer, that he should doo all things as he had beene accustomed, and at his pleasure place a bishop in the vacant see; whereupon this archbishop appointed his clearke Walerane, archdeacon of Baion to the bishoprike of Rochester. This bishop after that he had gouerned ten yeares and eight moneths, riding from Wrotham, in the yeare of our redemption one thousand one hundred seauentie and foure, as hath Gerualius Dorobernensis (but he faileth in his account by the transcribers fault, for I thinke it should be one thousand one hundred eightie and foure) besides Rochester, was in the waie striken with such an extreame cold and sickneesse of mind, that he could scarse come to Hawling, where lieng downe vpon his bed vehementlie troubled with the collicke, he died in the night of the next daie, being the fourteenth kalends of March, whose bodie was caried to Canturburie, and honourablie buried in the chapell or oratorie of S. Marie. In the time of this archbishop, in the yeare one thousand one hundred seuentie and seauen, was the church of Canturburie burnt; and Florileg. Ex archiuis.

Gerualius Iorolanens.

Gisburnens. Radulphus de Diceto.

Matthew Paris in hist. minor.

Houeden.

Matthew Paris in hist. minor.

Ex archiuis. Geruas. Doro.

and in the yeare one thousand one hundred seuentie eight, was the church of Rochester with the whole citie consumed with fire: besides which, in the said yeare 1177, were monks brought into Waltham abbeie built by king Herald, and the secular preests expelled by king Henrie the second.

Baldwine. Ex archiuis.

Baldwine, borne at Excester in Deuonshire of an vnknowne father, being brought vp at learning, did keepe a schoole himselfe. After which he was made an archleuit or archdeacon, being termed the light of the people, which office he voluntarilie forsaking, became a Charterhouse monke, from whense he became abbat of Ford in Deuonshire, then bishop of Worcester, and lastlie chosen archbishop of Canturburie. About whose election was no small stirre, as well amongst the laitie and cleargie of England, as amongst the cleargie of Rome, the pope hauing before made void the election of the abbat of Bath, sometime prior of Canturburie to that archbishoprike, in the yeare of Christ one thousand one hundred eightie and foure, which contention of election continued about nine moneths. After which, the matter was declared vnto the pope, who sent him the pall, and he was aduanced to the see of Canturburie, the fouretæenth kalends of June, in the yeare of Christ one thousand one hundred eightie and fiue, the one and thirtith of Henrie the second. Betweene which archbishop and the monks of Canturburie was much contention for the building of saint Stephans church in Hakington beside Canturburie, wherof is large discourse in the life of the said Baldwine, written by Geruasius Dorobernensis, Matthew Parker, and by William Lambert esquier (a rare antiquarie) in his perambulation of Kent.

Radul. Niger.

Geruasius.

After the death of Honorius prior of Canturburie (which made all the said stirre, in withstanding Baldwine for the church of S. Stephans, and appeling the bishop at Gillingham to the popes audience in the yeare of Christ one thousand one hundred eightie and six, at what time the bishop was taking his iourneie from Gillingham to Canturburie) Roger succeeded this Honorius in the same prioric, by the authoritie and fauor of the king, and of this archbishop, in the fourth yeare of his consecration, who so hated the monks of Canturburie, that in following time he draue them out of the monasterie of the Trinitie, and by the kings authoritie placed secular clearkes therein. Of which matter Geruasius maketh so long and large a discourse, as almost halfe the first part of his historie is nothing but of the same bishop (vsing his legantine & metropolitane power ouer all the parts of Wales, which neuer anie of his predecessors did before, as appeareth by Matthew Parker.) He did in the yeare of Christ one thousand one hundred eightie & eight, being about the foure and thirtith of king Henrie the second, take his iorneie into those parts, on whome attended Giraldus Cambrensis that writ the historie of that voiage of Baldwine, and dedicated it to Stephan archbishop of Canturburie, beginning his booke with this note thereof. Anno ab incarnatione Domini 1188 apostolatus apicem regente Vrbano 3. imperante Romæ Alemmanorum rege Friderico, Constantinopolitano Isaco, regnante in Francia Philippo Lodouici filio, in Anglia Henrico 2. in Sicilia verò Willi. in Hungaria Bela, in Palestina Guidone, anno vz. quo Saladinus tam Aegyptiorum quàm Damascenorum princeps occulto Dei iudicio, sed nunquam iniusto, publico bello certamine potitus, Hierusalorum regnum obtinuit, vir venerabilis, & tam literatura quàm religione Cantuariorum archipræsul Baldwinus in salutifera crucis obsequium ab Anglia in Walliam tendens, apud Herefordiæ fines Cambriam intrauit. In reciting of all which kings of Europe, and others, Giraldus hath forgotten the kings of Scots and Denmarke.

Ex annal. Gilb. Matth. Paris.

This Baldwine interdicted the prouinces of John earle of Dorset and Sommerset, sonne to Henrie the second, for the mariage of Isabell the daughter of the earle of Glocester his kinswoman in the third degree. Wherof earle John complaining to Iohn the cardinall, latelie as legat arriued in England, appealed him to the pope, the cardinall confirming the same appeale, and vndoing the interdict. This archbishop went with king Richard the first Anno Dom. one thousand one hundred ninetie and one to the warres of Hierusalem, where he died at Acon, after that he had bene bishop of Canturburie six yeares eleuen moneths and fiue daies. There he made his will, and gaue all he had to the soldiors, committing the same to be disposed by Hubert bishop of Salisburie, which went thither with him also at the same time. After his death and honourable burieng, and in the kings absence, the monks of Canturburie in the yeare of Christ one thousand one hundred nintie and two, expelled Olbert of Brittow (whome king Richard by the counsell and helpe of Baldwine had made prior of the monasterie of the trinitie of Canturburie a little before, in the yeare of Christ one thousand one hundred ninetie and one) and railed against the said archbishop Baldwine, calling him (bicause he was mild of nature) slouthfull and lukewarme, the same bishop being also by pope Urban reprehended by these words: Vrb. pp. seruus seruorum Dei, monacho feruentissimo, abbati callido, episcopo tepido, archiepiscopo remisso, ex quo monachi affirmant quòd melior monachus simplex quàm abbas, melior abbas quàm episcopus, melior episcopus quàm archiepiscopus fuerit. Touching whome in like sort thus writeth Geruasius Dorobernensis, that his words semper erant quasi simplicia, & ipsa pauca & ambigua

Reginald.

Reginald archbishop of Canturburie being thervnto onelie chosen, was neuer installed, nor receiued anie consecration therefore, bicause he died shortlie after his election to that place, who yet deserueth to be remembred, & that the rather bicause the monks did chose him against the kings mind. In doing whereof before his full election, there arose great and long stormes and troubles about the same. For the king, the cleargie, and the other nobilitie, were desirous to haue one William de Monte regali to be chosen & aduanced to that place. But the monks reiecting their petition, and following their owne mind, did elect this Reginald, who was the fourth bishop of Bath & Wels, after the vniting of those places into one bishoprike. This Reginald borne in Lombardie, being about the foure & twentith yeare of his age, was by king Henrie the sonne of Henrie the second made bishop of Bath (in the yeare of our redemption 1173, falling the nineteenth yeare of the same Henrie the second) by the name of Reinalt fitz Joseline: he died fiftæne daies after his election to the see of Canturburie (going from thense to Bath) at Dogmersfield in Hampshire, whose bodie was on Christmas daie caried to Bath, & there buried in the third yeare of Richard the first, being about the yeare of Christ 1191. At this time Hugh bishop of Chester and Couentrie, put out the monks of Couentrie, & brought in secular clearks: but after his death the monks were restored to their old home.

Anony. M. S.

Matth. Parker.

Roff. histor.

Hubert Walter.

Hubert Walter, or Walter Hubert, being borne in Westerham in Northfolke, was brought vp vnder Reginald or Randulph Glandfield procurator or chæfe iustice of all England. This man hauing obteined the deanrie of Yorke, then the bishoprike of Salisburie, did after that go to Jerusalem with Richard the second, and was made archbishop of Canturburie about the yeare of Christ 1193, receiuing the pall from pope Celestine, in the yeare of Christ one thousand one hundred ninetie & foure, being the fift yeare of Geruasius. Houeden. Tho. Sprot. Wil. Nouburg.

of the ransomed king Richard the first, beside which he was chancellor and cheefe iustice of England, and at London did consecrate Herebert archdeacon of Canturburie bishop of Salisburie. This Hubert had charge, or was maister ouer the kings wards, by the kings especiall grant. Who in the end, after that he had sat seauentéene yeares, as hath the historie of Couentrie, comming to his manor of Tenham, did there fall sicke, and shortlie died within foure daies, being buried at Canturburie in the south wall of the quier, in the yeare of our redemption one thousand two hundred and three, the ides of Julie being the same yeare, falling in the seuenth yeare of king John, after whose death it séemeth that sée was void about two yeares.

Hubert made iustice of England an. 1193 and dieng an. 1205, he could scarse gouerne fortie yeares.

Stephan Langton archbishop of Canturburie was chosen after this maner. The monks of Canturburie did in the night chuse one Reginald their subprior, and vnknowen to the king did inthronize the elect in all spéed, sending him with their letters to the pope, taking an oth of him before his departure, that he should not discouer his election to anie, or beare himselfe as elected, without the licence of the monks. But he as soone as he came into Flanders, forgetting himselfe, opened the matter. Whervpon the monks came to the king, craued pardon, and asked leaue to chuse an other; whereto the king consenting, did with manie faire spéeches moue them to chuse Iohn Gréie bishop of Norwich. Wherevnto when they had agréed, the king sent for Gréie then souereigne at Yorke about the kings affairs, & led him honorablie to Canturburie, where in the presence of the king & the people he was pronounced in the metropolitane church to be rightlie and lawfullie chosen archbishop of Canturburie, and the monks forthwith did place him in the archbishops sée. The knowledge of which inconstancie of the monks comming to pope Innocent, he commanded the monks vnder the power of binding and lowsing to chuse a third person, which was called Stephan Langton borne in England, but bred vp in forren countries, & to make void both the former elections, which the monks did accordinglie. Wherevpon the suffragans of the prouince of Canturburie, chalenging the election of their metropolitan, or at the least to ioine with the monks in chusing of the archbishop, opposed themselues against the monks, which comming before the pope, he presentlie gaue sentence in behalfe of the monks. With which secretlie against their willes the monks at Rome (which were there to defend their cause against their bishops) chose Stephan Langton with secret murmuring, although onelie Elias de Brantfield the monke that then defended the cause of John Gréie would not by anie meanes assent therevnto, secretlie departing into England. By force of which election, Stephan Langton the fiftéenth kalends of Julie receiued his consecration of the pope at Viterbie; with whome the pope sending the monks backe againe into England wrote flattering letters vnto king John, to appease him for the reprobation of John Gréie and the election of Stephan Langton, whom the pope required the king to receiue with all courtesie. But the king stomaching the maner therof, with the matter, and the man, banished all the monks which had béene at Rome, & expelled all the other monks which remained at Canturburie out of their celles, whereof insued great trouble to king John and the kingdome, as in the English historie may more at large appeare. For the king reiecting this Langton brought vp in Paris, and chancellor of that vniuersitie familiar with the French king & cardinall of Chrysogon, wrote vnto the pope about the said Langton. Wherevpon Ioannes Florentinus legat of the pope came into England, onelie attended vpon with three horsses, whereof the one was lame and led by hand; which legat afterwards keeping a councell at Reding, but doing no good in the cause, did in hast depart England, when he had filled his purse with monie. Much about which time the friers minors came first into England, going barefoot, whose apparell was grisell garments girded with cords full of knots. After this, the pope séeing all things to go contrarie to that he had iudged, wrot againe to king John to receiue Langton, further directing his bulles to William bishop of London, Eustace bishop of Elie, and to Maugerius bishop of Worcester, that if they could not persuade the king therevnto, that then they should interdict the land: which they after did when the king would not agree therevnto. Which done, they with Joseline bishop of Bath, and Giles bishop of Hereford fled the realme for their labor. Therewith the king more grieuouslie moued, seized all their lands and goods, and caused the monks to flie out of the relme; by which act the people rebell, the nobles forsake the king, and the kingdome is wholie in an vprore. At length the pope himselfe hearing thereof, did thunder an interdict against the king by name, and the bishops of England, committing the diuulging thereof to the said bishops of London, Elie, and Worcester, liuing then beyond the seas, who not willing to plaie that part, posted the same ouer to certeine bishops in England, which fearing the king, durst not obeie the pope. Yet the land and king being interdicted, king John subdued Wales, conquered Ireland, reduced the Scots to quiet, forbad anie causes to be caried to Rome, subdued his rebelles, lent the emperor a great summe of monie, & feared not Stephan Langton or the pope. Wherevpon Philip the French king was persuaded to warre vpon king John, which he denied, till he should sée no amendment in the king of England. At length Stephan Langton (finding succor and helpe) came into England with his complices, and shewed that the king was remoued from his kingdome. For the auoiding whereof the king was by Pandulph the legat brought to vnequall conditions, and submitted his kingdome to the pope for a thousand marks (whereof the wiser sort haue made some question) and receiued the crowne againe of Pandulph, whereby the realme was quieted, the pope satisfied, the king freed, Langton restored, and the interdict released. But after when Langton saw how these things were carried, he did greatlie lament and with déepe sorrow greeue thereat, when he beheld king John to giue vp his crowne and scepter to Pandulph. For comming to the altar, he could not withhold himselfe, but openlie shewed how greatlie he was offended therewith; and therefore euer after became a louing father to his countrie, in such sort, that the first seuen yeares was a tragedie of the kingdome, and this time which followeth will be but a comedie of his gouernement in the sée of Canturburie. For now contention falling betweene the king and his barons, the pope tooke the kings part, and Stephan Langton ioined with the barons. Wherevpon the pope (when he could not at the request of the king bridle the barons) did excommunicat them as traitors to the king, which sentence he committed to be published by Stephan Langton. But he going to the generall councell answered the bishop of Winchester and Pandulph (the popes legat) that brought that excommunication, that he would first in person talke with the pope about it: wherupon they suspended Langton from his bishoprike, & excommunicated the barons from the church. For which cause Langton going to Rome, was there by the abbat

Chro. cænobij Martini.

of

of Bellew, Thomas of Huntington, and Geffreie of Crawcomb knights, accused of that which he had done in England, how he had set the barons against the king, & would not execute the popes excommunication. With which Langton being ouercome, without anie excuse craued to be absolued from the former suspension. Wherevnto the pope would not agree, but doubled the same, and sent vnto the suffragans of Canturburie to denounce it ouer all England; yet in the end, by the wise carriage of himselfe he was absolued with this condition, that he should stand to the popes iudgement touching the controuersies betweene the king and the barons, & that he should not returne into England before the same were ended. After this the king would againe haue remoued Langton from his see, which he could not doo, no not with the helpe of the pope, because the cardinals did resist it. During which troubles king John departed this life; and Stephan Langton after his death held a councell at Osneie, in which one was crucified and hanged that said he was Christ, and two women were condemned, the one because she said she was the virgin Marie, and the other Marie Magdalen.

Mart. Paris.

1216

Aurea lector. Matthew Paris.

This archbishop translated the bodie of Thomas Becket from a marble tombe, to a rich shrine decked with gold and siluer, whereto was a wonderfull concourse of people, for all which this Langton found baie and horsemeat during the time of that solemnitie. At which time also in places of the citie, conduits and pipes of purpose made therefore, did abundantlie run with wine. The charge of which translation could not be againe recouered by foure of the bishops of Canturburie that followed. Before which time this Langton carried some of the relikes of this saint Thomas to Rome. This archbishop procured the customes of England called Magna charta to be made, to end all controuersie betweene the king and the barons. When the realme was in quiet, he held a councell at Westminster, in which he made a sermon vpon this text: In Deo sperauit cor meum, & refloruit caro mea. When he had so begun his sermon, a certeine countrie man in the companie with a lowd voice said; By Gods death thou liest, for neither thy hart trusted in God, neither doth thy flesh flourish or spring againe: which person being apprehended by the rest of the companie, was plucked out of the church, and receiued worthie punishment therefore. A little before his death, he made his brother Simon archdeacon of Canturburie, whom the pope reiected, and would not admit to the bishoprike of Yorke, wherevnto he was chosen. This Langton gouerned the see of Canturburie two and twentie yeares, and died at his manor of Slindon in Sussex the seuenth ides of Julie, being carried to Canturburie the daie before the nones of the same, and buried in saint Michaels chapell. He did write manie things learnedlie and eloquentlie, he diuided the bible into chapters as the church now vseth it, he writ the life and historie of Richard the first. In the time of this man the burrow of Southworke with the church of saint Paries was burnt, the same fire going ouer London bridge as far as the Tower and the Vintrie: of whom thus writeth Nicholas Triuet; Hic super totam bibliam fecit postillas, & eam per capitula (quibus nunc vtuntur moderni) distinxit, qui dum Parisijs in theologia regeret, factus est ecclesiæ Grisogoni presbyter cardinalis, deinde factus archiepiscopus, inter alia bona quæ fecit, pulchram aulam quæ est in palatio Cantuariæ ædificauit.

Others saie 21 yeares, and died as hath Trinet, an. 1228. being 12 Hen. the third.

Richard the great.

Richard surnamed the great came to the bishoprike by this meanes. The monks hauing leaue of king Henrie the third to chuse an archbishop, did make choise of one Walter de Hemesham or rather Euesham, the third nones of August, whom they presented to the king, which by the aduise of the clergie did ouerthrow the said Walter so by the monks elected and erected, because he was defamed for manie things; wherevpon he runneth to Rome: but the kings ambassadors & the bishops messengers, comming thither first, did preuent him. But before that these ambassadors, which were the bishops of Chester and Couentrie, finding the pope and the cardinals somewhat vntoward towards the king of England, did in the end obteine of the pope (by ministring pecuniarie aid vnto him, and promising a tenth out of England, Wales, & Ireland, for the maintenance of his warres against Frederike the emperor) that he sentenced the matter against the said Walter, auoided his election, and reserued to himselfe the prouision and disposing of the church of Canturburie. Wherevpon they (fearing that the pope would chuse one at his owne pleasure, as Innocent his predecessor had done Stephan Langton) with all speed obteined from king Henrie letters to the pope to confirme their promise, and that he should promote Richard chancellor of Lincolne, a man famous for good life and learning, to the archbishoprike of Canturburie. Wherevnto the pope agreed, and writ to haue the said Richard placed in the archbishops chaire: by reason of which precept, this Richard the great was consecrated (without anie pall) at Canturburie by Henrie bishop of Rochester, in the feast of the Trinitie, at what time the king was also present; and the said Richard did then consecrate the bishops of London and Elie. This done the pope sendeth for the performance of the promise of the tenth of England, Wales, and Ireland: wherevnto the king (against his will, but in respect of his promise) seemed by silence to agree; but the barons flatlie denied the same, and the bishops by procrastination demanded three or foure daies respit to giue answer therevnto, who in the end for feare of the popes curse consented, whereby it was fullie paid by all men; except onlie Ranulph earle of Chester, who did resist & would not suffer it to be paid in his prouince, whom yet the pope did not excommunicate.

Ste. Birchin.

1229 as some haue.

This archbishop assembled a synod at Westminster, where he made good lawes, and as he was by nature gentle, so was he seuere in defending the liberties of his church. For against Hubert of Borow (constable of Douer castle, chefe iustice of England and earle of Kent, being in great fauour with Henrie the third, who also made Richard as some name him the sonne of the said Hubert knight) he thundered out excommunication, because he could not find other remedie at the kings hand for the iniurie which the said Hubert had done against him, in deteining from the said bishop the castle of Tunbridge, the towne therof with the lands therto belonging, and the other possessions of the earle of Clare; which during the minoritie of the said earle, did of right apperteine to the see of Canturburie. This was the first time, as some haue, that such reuenge by waie of excommunication was taken vp and laid vpon those which did withhold anie of the possessions of the clergie. At length the archbishop goeth to Rome, hoping thereby to right his cause, against whom the king sendeth Roger de Cantelew with other ambassadors to the pope, at what time the archbishop not onlie complained of Hubert, but also that the king had the suffragan of the said archbishop to sit in his exchekier, and to heare ciuill and criminall causes. Wherevpon the pope moued with the dignitie of the archbishops calling, the reuerence of the mans personage, with his eloquence, wisedome and learning gaue sentence in behalfe of the said Richard against the other, wherevpon they returned home vtterlie confused. After which the bishop

March Paris in H. 3. anno & minori.

Thomas Becket did excommunicate such as either infringed the churches liberties, or detained anie of his possessions.

Canteleye.

1235 as hath Trinet.

shop being three daies on his iorneie towards England, and now extreme werie and full of paine, did end his daies in the towne of saint Gemma, with whom & by whose death there also died all that which was done at Rome in the former matter. This archbishop did write in his life manie most learned bookes, which were De fide & legibus, De sacramẽtis, De vniuerso, &c.

Seph. Brigandon. S. Edmund.

Saint Edmund (which name I vse for antiquitie and difference sake) archbishop of Canturburie, commonlie called S. Edmund of Abington, after the place where he was borne, came to that bishoprike in this order. The monks had chosen Rafe Neuill bishop of Chichester, being for his fidelitie in great fauour with K. Henrie the third, and his chancellor, whom they presented vnto the king, well accepting thereof, and without delaie granting vnto him the administration of the temporalties of the archbishoprike. But the pope inquiring of Simon Langton (archdeacon of Canturburie brother vnto the archbishop of Canturburie, Stephan Langton) of the state and behauiour of this elect Rafe Neuill: this Simon either an enimie to the king or him, or else to both, being led with hope to obteine the archbishoprike for himselfe, did priuilie and subtillie persuade the pope, that he was vnlearned, light of behauiour, inconstant, hot in speech, a courtier, following a courtlie kind of life, and further, of so subtill and craftie wit, and also well beloued of the king, that he managed all the affaires of the king and kingdome: for which cause, if he were archbishop of Canturburie, he would with the consent of the king and the people, find meanes, that England should shake off the yoke of the pope and tribute to Rome, which king John had confirmed to pope Innocent, being a thing which the pope had the more cause greatlie to feare; for that before this time, Stephan Langton (archbishop of Canturburie) had once appealed from the grant of that tribute, the forme of whose appeale he reduced into writing, being at this daie extant to be seene of all men.

Matth. Paris Caron. maiori & minori. Hoiilegus.

Ste. Brichin.

1229 as some haue.

Wherevpon the pope, moued by the words of Simon, did without cause shewed therefore, frustrat the election of Rafe-Neuill (when the monks came to Rome to haue the same confirmed) and granted power to the monks to chose another; by reason whereof they elected John their subprior, to whome in the end the king gaue full assent. But when the letters of his election were exhibited to the pope, this John was deliuered to the cardinals to be examined of his doctrine, who three daies after informed the pope that they found not anie default in him. All which notwithstanding, he was repelled, and his election voided by reason of his age, which was not sufficient to weld so great a charge. Wherefore in respect thereof, the pope persuaded him to remoue his election, which without delaie he did, obeieng the popes will, & with obteined licence departed into England.

Matth. Paris in hist. maiori & minori.

These two elections thus frustrat, the third time the monks chose John Blund then studieng in Oxford, whome the king also admitted, who had as good successe at the popes hand as the others before had: for the pope did also reiect this man, because that being familiar with Peter de Roches bishop of Winchester, he had receiued two thousand marks of him, which as it was suspected he corrupted the monks of Canturburie to make that election of him: and moreouer, that he kept two benefices appointed for cure of soules, against the order of the ancient councels. For which cause, the monks of Canturburie that were present at Rome, were required by the pope, that they would by his voice now the fourth time chose Edmund, canon & treasuror of the church of Salisburie, a godlie and learned man, to be their archbishop of Canturburie, which yet they would not doo in hast, as after shall appeare. Which Edmund being borne at Abington in Barkeshire, had to his father one Edward, and to his mother Mabell, both of them surnamed the rich, because they had at Abington so greatlie increased their substance by merchandize: who procured this their sonne to be trained in learning at Oxford, distant about fiue miles from Abington, where he increasing in learning, gaue himselfe to diuinitie, when he came to mans estate; and entring into the profession of a clearke or spirituall man, he did vse to preach in the adioining shires of Oxford, Glocester, and Worcester. After this, he was made a canon of Salisburie, about which time his father, with his wiues consent, became a monke in Euesham. But although this Edmund were wise, learned, vertuous, & honored; yet would not the monks at Rome vpon the popes consent chose him, vnlesse they might also haue the kings fauor therein, and the assent of the rest of their monks at home. Wherefore the pope did secretlie send the pall to this Edmund, sith those monks durst not openlie gainesaie the election. But for what cause the pope so desired it, we know not by the course of the histories: for this Edmund was sent, vnknowne, and a mere stranger vnto the pope. But be it as be maie, it is most true, that he receiued his consecration at Canturburie by Roger, surnamed the Blacke bishop of Lincolne, being in the yeare of our redemption one thousand two hundred thirtie and foure, falling in part of the eighteenth & nineteenth yeare of king Henrie the third; at what time he put on his pall at the masse time, which he did celebrat in the presence of the king, thirteene bishops, and a great number of other people, who being thus installed in the see of Canturburie, did first succor the common-wealth, troubled with intestine & euill councell. For he persuaded the king to remoue from him Peter bishop of Winchester, and Peter de Riuallis ambitious persons, and authors of ciuill discords; and himselfe with the bishops of Chester and Rochester went into Wales, and made peace betweene the king of England, Leolin prince of Wales, and Richard earle Marshall: whereof the two last had ioined their powers, and prepared wars against the first. Besides which, he restored the earls of the kingdome which were fallen from the crowne, to the kings new fauour, and to their old honors: vpon which, the king commanded Peter de Roches to get him home to his bishoprike of Winchester, and cast Peter de Riualis out of the court, threatning him, that if he did not take holie orders, that he would plucke forth his eies with his owne hands: but this peace so by the bishop made was after broken.

Ex archiuis. Chron. sancti Albani. Abbreuiat. Rich. Ciceff. Polycratic.

Ex archiuis.

Matth. Paris hist. maiori & minori.

1239 as hath Iohannes Londen, 4. no. of Aprill.

This archbishop held a synod at London, in the which were made thirtie and six prouinciall lawes. After this, there fell dissention betweene the king & this archbishop, because he withstood the mariage of Elenor (sister to the king, and widow to William Marshall earle of Penbroke, hauing as was said, vowed chastitie) to Simon Montfort earle of Leicester: for which cause the king sent secretlie to the pope to haue a legat come into England to bridle this archbishop, and such as tooke his part. Wherevpon the pope sent one cardinall Otho hither into England, whome the king met at the sea side, receiued with humilitie, bowing his head to the cardinals knee, and after brought him into the inner parts of the realme: which legat making his gaine here in England, bestowed all the vacant spirituall liuings vpon that flocke which he had brought with him.

Matt. Par. calleth him Willielmum Marisciallum comitem Glocestr. in Hibernia mortuum, which cannot be. For William Marshall neither died in Ireland, nor was earle of Glocester: for it was Rich. Marshall erle of Penbroke that died in Ireland.

him. Wherewith saint Edmund being moued, did reprehend the king, both for the comming of the legat, and the vexing of the realme, which the legat reuenged as a great iniurie done vnto him. In the meane time, Simon Montford obteined a dispensation from the pope for the mariage, with a like dispensation for the vow that Elenor had made, and with commandement to Otho that he should pronounce sentence in behalfe of the mariage; all which he performed, and so the mariage was consummat.

This Otho remaining still in England, held a councell at London at the west end of Paules church, where the old contention for place of the right side of the legat was againe renewed by the bishops of Canturburie & Yorke, who falling to extreame chiding, the legat to appease the matter, shewing forth the popes bull, said: Videtis hic depictum Christum crucifixum, eique à dextris Paulum & à sinistris Petrum astare, inter quos nunquam mota est de Christi dextris aut sinistris occupandis contentio, etsi ambo sunt in gloria æquali. Veruntamen propter Petri clauigeri dignitatem & apostolatus principatum, meritò à dextris crucis eius imago collocanda videtur. With which persuading example the archbishops being pacified, the bishop of Yorke tooke the left hand.

Verb. Matth. Paris in chro. maiori.

About this time did this Edmund archbishop of Canturburie consecrat Robert Grosted bishop of Lincolne, of whom an ecclesiastike writeth thus: Sub hac tempora Hugone Wellensi episcopo Lincoln. mortuo, electus est à capitulo Robertus cognomento Grosted, id est caput crassum, vir humili quidem stirpe satus, sed virtute, prudẽtia, doctrináque insigni. But this opinion of that writer, that he was but meanelie borne cannot be so, if that pedegree be true (which for manie reasons I am not lead to thinke ouer sound, I speake vnder correction of better antiquaries) which I haue seene of the said Grosted, taken out (with the armes as hath beene most constantlie affirmed vnto me) of the old portalle of the said Grosted; who being the yonger brother of a second house, and but meanelie mainteined, might occasion others to write that he was borne of meane parentage; when in deed it appeareth by that pedegree remaining within my custodie at the writing of this same, that his right name was Robert Copleie, and surnamed Grosted of his great head. For this Robert is there made a yonger sonne of Rafe Copleie the kings seruant, yonger sonne of Thomas Copleie, sonne of Adam Copleie, sonne of Thomas Copleie, sonne of Rafe Copleie, sonne of Hugh Copleie, sonne of Adam Copleie, which was slaine at the besieging of Yorke, in the time of William the Conqueror. This Edmund the archbishop of Canturburie reiected Richard of Wendouer chosen by the voices of the monks of that house to be bishop of Rochester, and would not consecrat or admit the said Richard. Wherupon the monks appealed and went to Rome, whom this archbishop followed. At what time Otho the legat (supposing that he had now opportunitie to reuenge himselfe of this Edmund, who had so much before withstood him) did forbid the archbishop to take shipping, or to enter into that tourneie: but he would not obeie the legat, because the authoritie of the legat was taken awaie by the popes countermand.

Grosted bishop of Lincolne of what descent he was.

Ioh. Lond. saith 1237 Edmundus archiepisc. Cantuar. pro quibusdam negotijs ecclesiam suam contingentibus Romam adiuit.

The bishop now at Rome, not onelie complained of the monks of Rochester, but also of the legat Otho, and of Henrie the third; but the pope reiecting all his speeches, did iudiciallie confirme the election of Richard of Wendouer to the bishoprike of Rochester, which notwithstanding this archbishop Edmund had pronounced to be void: for which sentence being on their behalfe so pronounced on the feast of saint Cuthbert, that daie was made a double feast in the church of Rochester. This done, the pope not yet satisfied, did moreouer reuoke a sentence giuen by this archbishop against Hugh earle of Arundell; for recompense of both which supposed wrongs, the one to Wendouer, the other to the earle, Edmund was appointed to paie one thousand marks vnto either partie, wherupon being so impouerished, he returneth home with greefe. But a new contention did receiue him at his comming home into England by the legat aforesaid, which added further trouble vnto him. For whereas the monks of Canturburie had chosen them a prior without his knowledge, this Edmund did excommunicat them; which the legat did release, and confirmed the other election, which the said Edmund did againe vndoo, punished the stubburne monks, and interdicted their church: for which cause sith the archbishop should seeme to haue the vpper hand, Otho the legat commeth to Canturburie, thinking to haue disgraced the bishop: but hearing the cause againe, he remooued the prior, chastened the monks, bound some of them to perpetuall penance, and made some others of them to be tied to a streicter kind of life.

Hugh. Alsum.

After this, the archbishop granted eight hundred marks at the councell holden at Reading by legat Otho, to helpe the popes wars against the emperor, although he had manie times in manie councels stiflie gainesaid the same. In the time also of whose gouernement, the church of Paules in London was dedicat vnder the name of the cathedrall church of saint Paule by Roger bishop of London, in the presence of the king, the noble men, and the bishops: at the doing whereof, the bishop of London with the deane and chapter of that church, did make a solemne and sumptuous feast. This thus spoken, it resteth now to draw to some end of the doings of this archbishop, whose actions be stretched longer than at the first I meant, & than this short discourse of the archbishops doth require: but sith I cannot leaue him so, I must now go forward otherwise than I would. You heard before that he complained to the pope against the king for manie euill things done by him, whereof the chiefest was, that he ouerlong kept in his hands the void metropolitan, cathedrall, and conuentuall churches. For the reformation whereof, he obteined of the pope, that if the king did not in six weeks prouide therefore, that the archbishop should haue the presentation: which decree of the pope obteined by Edmund through great summes of monie, the king procured of the pope to be reuoked. In which matter Polydor in the sixteenth booke of his English historie hath fallie deceiued manie, whileft he saith, that saint Edmund obteined this grant (for presentations to void spirituall liuings) of king Henrie himselfe, and that the same was some while kept, vntill that the king finding the want of the gaine which grew thereby, did reuoke that which he had before granted. And to the intent it maie be seene that this is not fallie fathered vpon Polydor, I will set downe his owne words. Huic malo (meaning the presentations by the king to vacant spirituall liuings) Edmundus occurrendum iudicans; à rege impetrauit, vt huiusce rei curandæ munus solus Cantuariensis archiepiscopus obiret, quo per hunc modum episcopatus atque cœnobia rectoribus orbata & melius gubernarentur, & citius dignis decernerentur præpositis. Verùm cùm aliquandiu ita seruatum esset, & Henricus animaduerteret non esse in rem suam quòd paulo ante concessit, illud statim reuocauit, & sacerdotiorum vacantiũ vectigalia quoad antea fecerat capere rursum cœpit.

It may be that here goeth the first ground that if parsons did not attend to spirituall things within sir weeks, the bishops might present by lapse.

In the end this Edmund thus crossed with so manie mishaps, and lamenting his countrie and church ouerred with so manie euils, himselfe to be so much ouerreached by the deceipts of others, and his metropolitane power to be restreined by the doings of the couetous legat, he goeth to the king, rebuketh him therefore, in that he would permit these things in his owne

Matth. Paris chron. ma

Polyd hist. lib

Aaron Rich.

owne realme, and with abundance of teares saith vnto him, that he should neuer see his face. Wherfore being wearie of his life, and not minding to see those things whereof he could not abide to heare; he voluntarilie banished himselfe from the realme & his frends, who passing the sea, came to Pontineacke in France, where dailie praieng for his countrie of England to be deliuered from subiection and thraldome, he there lead a sorrowfull life for a certeine space. At length, what by sickenesse, and what by abstinence, he fell into a consumption, and then into a sharpe feuer; after which being remoued for recouerie of his helth from Pontineacke to Soises, he surrendered his life to God the sixteenth kalends of December, after that he had gouerned the see of Canturburie about the space of eight yeeres, or rather seuen yeares (as hath the historie of Couentrie) whose bowels being by the physicians taken out of his bodie, were buried at Soises, and his bodie at Pontineacke, after that honorable sort that belongeth to an archbishop: after whose death the see of Canturburie was void three yeares and more. About six yeares after whose death, pope Innocent the third did canonize him a saint: and his bodie in the yeare following was translated by Lodouike king of France, being three yeares after put into a new sepulchre garnished with gold, siluer, and christall. In this bishops time was the sitterhood of saint Katharins beside the Tower of London, builded by Elenor daughter of the earle of Prouance, and wife to king Henrie the third, which house is at this daie (Anno Domini 1586) standing, and vnder the gouernment of Rafe Rokesbie esquire, maister of the requests, and maister of the said house of saint Katharins. This archbishop Edmund (as hath Gesner out of Leland) had a brother called Robert le Rich, flourishing in the yeare of Christ one thousand two hundred and fortie, which wrote a booke of the life of this bishop Edmund, and one other booke called Exegesin in canonem diui Augustini.

Matth. Paris. mon. minor.

1241 S. Edmund Land being as Polydor saith the fiue and fortith yeare of Henrie the third.

1240 And the foure and twentith of Henrie the third.

Trust. Iordan. mon. Paris. Ludegus. Reboens. Ioh. Lond. appointeth his canonization in the yeare 1246

And by translation to the yeare of Christ 1248

Bonifice the six and fortith archbishop after Matthew Parker, but the fiue and fortith after Polydor, quæne Elenors vncle, and the sonne of Peter earle of Sauoie, was chosen by the monks of Canturburie vnto that see, wholie against their minds, for they had rather haue reiected than receiued a stranger by birth, vnknowen for conditions, vnacquainted with the state of their church, & so neere to the king by mariage. But the king taking the thing to be well and lawfullie done by the monks, sent his election in parchment to the pope, vnder his seale, & the seales of the bishops and abbats, as a thing done by their generall & voluntarie consent; though manie of them did the same for feare of the kings displeasure. By meanes whereof Bonifice (being noblie borne, tall of person, and indued with a certeine comlinesse in his countenance, but in other respects far unmet for the place) was consecrated at Lions, where the pope then was; whereof some of the monks ashamed that they had chosen so vnmeet a man, forsooke the church of Canturburie, and bound themselues to perpetuall penance in the streict order (as hath Matthew Parker) of the charterhouse monks. These things thus done, shortlie after Peter erle of Sauoie commeth vnto London, and built the Sauoie without Temple bar, calling it after the name of his honor, which house was afterward the dukes of Lancaster John of Gant, and in the end was by Henrie the seuenth most statelie built vp, as it now standeth, with places of releife for the poore.

Tyrrel Angl. hist. lib. 16.

It maie be that here grew the first ground that if parrons did not present to spirituall liuings within sir weeks, that the bishops might present by lapse.

He was consecrated (as Matthew saith) John of London in the yeare of Christ 1243 who comming into England was at Canturburie on all Saints daie installed in the presence of the king, of the quæne, and of manie other of the nobilitie, in the yeare 1248

These things thus done, Robert Passelew (who was wholie employed in augmenting and keeping the kings treasure, and for that cause deare vnto the king) was chosen bishop of Chichester by the canons (of that cathedrall church) studieng to please the king. The which election the archbishop Bonifice tooke in euill part, who calling togither the bishops of his prouince, did seriouslie examine this Passelew by the bishop of Lincolne, vpon certeine difficult questions proponed vnto him; but he either not well answering, or the archbishop Bonifice not well liking his answer, this Robert was repelled, and one Richard Witz or Witz substituted in his place without the kings knowledge. In which hurlie burlie Martine the popes procurator expecting the same commoditie, did by the power of his buls bestow the benefit of the vacant liuings, which this Richard had forsaken, being aduanced to Chichester. But the king not suffering so great a reproch to be vsed towards him, did forbid this Richard Witz to enter into his baronie and secular possessions. Shortlie after which, this Bonifice archbishop of Canturburie with the bishops of Worcester and Hereford (which were suspected and hated of the English, in that they attributed so much to the pope) did go to Rome without the kings priuitie. The cause of whose going Bonifice alledged to be the debt of fiftæne thousand marks, wherewith his bishoprike was charged, the greatnesse of which debt could not be paid but by the popes helpe: but at his departure he made a great masse of monie of the Kentishmen, and especiallie of woods which he sold, with which he sailed into France, and to the people called Allobrogi, to subdue a certeine knight which had stolne awaie the daughter and heire of Reimond earle of Prouance, to the intent for to haue maried hir. For whose ouerthrow a great summe of monie was heaped togither in England by this archbishop, although he seemed to haue obteined the same vnder the pretense to free his church of Canturburie from the excessiue debts wherin it was left by his predecessors. At length this Bonifice comming to the pope, required of him that he might reteine with the bishoprike of Canturburie the bishoprike of Valentia in Prouance, with manie other such commodious and rich churches which he had gotten in that iourneie.

This man was vtterlie condemned of all the clergie for vnsatiable extortions.

1245

About this time was a generall councell holden at Lions, wherevnto the king and the prelats of England were cited, in the ninth of March, with day giuen vnto them vntill the eight kalends of June. In which meane time, the king sent to the pope one Laurence of S. Martins the kings chapleine, for the absence of certeine prelats from that councell, and to complaine to the pope of the iniuries which the archbishop had done vnto him. The first the pope granted, but in the second he stood against the king with the archbishop. After this approcheth the daie of the councell at Lions, whither came the pope and the clergie; at whose first comming the popes conclaue or parlor (as some haue) or rather his whole house as others haue, was burnt: in the same, & as manie affirmed, was with fire consumed that charter in which king John did by force of the legat Pandulph subiect and make tributarie the kingdome of England to pope Innocent. This councell of Lions now ended, Bonifacius obteined the popes buls to all the clergie of his prouince to this effect: Vt ex illius prouincia beneficiorum vacantium vectigalibus septennio proximo ad illud as alienum dissoluendum, quod in translatione Thomæ quam Stephanus fecerat, Cantuarien sis ecclesia contraxerat, 10000 marcarum colligere posset, præter duo milia marcarum annuatim ei ab ecclesia Cantuarien si soluendarum. Which when the king knew, he said: What maruell is it if Bonifacius bishop of Canturburie, whome I haue aduanced to so great dignitie, do now procure from the court of Rome such discommodities to my kingdome? But although the king did at the first a little resist the grant, yet in the end he would neither trouble the pope nor the archbishop, but being ouercome with intreatie, yelded vnto the same.

1246

1252 Boniface being now returned out of Prouance, visited his dioceses and suffragans, in which there were great troubles betweene him & Fulco bishop of London, and betweene him and the prior of great saint Bartholomews, manie blowes passing from one to another. Wherby the prior was sore hurt, resisting the visitation of the archbishop. Which doings of those his suffragans, occasioned him to excommunicat all those whomsoeuer, or by what name soeuer they were called, that attempted to hinder his enterprise; from which onelie the king, the queene, erle Richard, the countesse and their children were exempted. But Ethelmer the elect of Winchester, the kings brother by the mothers side, did appeale from that sentence, and in his diocesse declared the same to be void. With which Boniface being nothing dismaied, did againe pronounce the same excommunication at Oxford, and began afresh another visitati-

1253 on, which was called the tumultuous visitation; for comming to Lincolne, he would after the death of the bishop, of his owne authoritie bestow the vacant prebends & churches, and excommunicat all such as withstood him. Against which Lupus archdeacon Annal eccles August Cant. 1255 of Lincolne repined, and resisted him with an appellation vnto the pope, at what time this Boniface did not onelie excommunicat him, but did also pursue and afflict him in all that he might. Whereupon this William not knowing in what place to hide himselfe, went to Rome to the pope, who absolued and defended him from Boniface, with hope of restitution of the right of his church. But he being ouerwome with three yeres trauell in the same, in the end died in his iornie returning into England. The monks of Canturburie seeing the warlike & priestlie demeanor of this Boniface in his visitation, obteined a bull from the pope, that he should not visit, suspend, nor trouble their church. Which letters being brought to Boniface then being in the monasterie of saint Albans, he hurled the same into the fire, burned them, and excommunicated the bringers thereof; who needed not (as it seemeth) to feare anie thing whatsoeuer he did. For when complaints were made against him to the king and the pope, the first would doo nothing, because he was his wiues vncle; and the other did beare with him, for the nobilitie of his birth, being in a countrie neere adioining vnto him.

After this, being againe troubled in England by his visitations and other meanes, he goeth into Prouance, by wars and force to deliuer his brother Thomas sometime earle of Sauoie, imprisoned by the citizens of Merwine: where neither profiting by his owne or the popes excommunication, he returned home fowlie disgraced, after the prodigall expense of all his riches in that iornie. Much about this time king Henrie borrowed monie of the pope, & laid his kingdome to pledge: which rash deed withdrew the harts of the people from the king, because that the same bond was with trouble and charge after redeemed out of the popes hand. During these things, Boniface did dedicat the cathedrall church of 1256 Salisburie on the feast of saint Michaell, and Hugh Balsham sometime prior of Elie, and founder of saint Peters college in Cambridge, was consecrated bishop of Elie; and Magna Charta was established for the liberties of England, the breach whereof caused the barons to rebell. Whereupon Boniface departed the realme to his countrie of Sauoie, leauing Hugh Mortimer in his place, a man skilfull to gather monie. At this time pope Urban did void the two elections of the couent of Winchester, and did at Rome consecrat John of Oxford chancellor of Yorke to the bishoprike of that see, who had before paid 6000 marks to the pope, & as much to Iordan the popes chancellor before he was sacred; all which notwithstanding he by oth promised his subiection to Boniface bishop of Canturburie. Boniface, after he had beene foure yeers beyond the sea, returned to Canturburie; but before his comming thither obteined licence with condition of the barons, that he should not raise any new turmoiles, or procure anie troubles in England. Who in his absence out of the realme, commanded Walter Gifford chosen bishop of Bath to be consecrated by the bishop of Paris, and Walter de Lauilla chosen bishop of Salisburie to be consecrated by the bishop next to that place being the bishop of Winchester. Annal. eccles. Cantuar. Ste. Birchint. de archiepis. Cantuar.

Now when the troublesome estate of the common-wealth was passed, the king gaue his mind to compound the controuersies which Bonifacius had sowed in the church: wherefore those bralles which he had with the bishop of Rochester, with the bishop and church of London, with the prior of great saint Bartholomews in London, with the churches of Lincolne, Salisburie, and Canturburie, were extinguished by the kings meanes. For by law the bishop recouered the fees and seruices of the church of Rochester, in place of which seruices the said church should yearelie paie twelue marks; and moreouer, obteined all the right in the church of Lincolne during the vacancie of the see, except in eight churches in the citie of Lincolne, which were exempted and reserued to the disposition of the chapter. Which being done, the archbishop agreed with Richard earle of Glocester for his knights seruices belonging to the church of Canturburie for the manors of Tunbridge, Brasted, Werlstone, Horsmond, and Helestone; and also for the earles order, place, and stipend at the inthronization of the archbishop. Besides all which, being great matters to compasse, this Boniface deliuered his church from the full debt of 22000 marks laid vpon the same, by the immoderat expenses of his predecessors, Stephan, Richard the great, and Edmund; and at length finished the noble hall of the archbishops palace of Canturburie, begun by his predecessor Hubert, or (as Nicholas Triuet hath noted) by Stephan Langton. Gerual. Dorob. in mappa mundi. Ste. Birchint.

After the dispatch of these things, he celebrated a prouinciall synod at London by the commandement of pope Urban; and becomming more holie towards his end, he went with the other bishops to the king, requesting him that being mindfull of the decaie of his kingdome, by ecclesiasticall liuings bestowed vpon strangers, he would hereafter prefer learned and godlie men of his owne nation: to whom the king answered that he would willinglie doo it. Wherefore I thinke it meet that you which are a stranger and vnlearned, and also my brother Ethelmer bishop of Winchester, whom I haue preferred to such dignities onlie for kindreds sake, should first giue example to others, and forsake your churches, and I will prouide other learned men to serue in them. Which answer of the king so perswaded this Boniface, that he alwaies after liued a wearisome life in England. Wherfore perceiuing himselfe to be misliked of the king and the people, he desired to returne into his countrie. And thereupon first felling and selling the woods, letting out the archbishoprike, taking great fines of his tenants, and making a great masse of monie of the clergie of his prouince, he went with the curse of all men vnto Sauoie, where, in the castle of S. Helens, after that he had gouerned the see six and twentie yeares, six moneths and sixteene daies from his consecration, being 29 yeares from his first election, he died, the the fiftéenth kalends of August. Before which he founded & indued with lands an hospitall at Maidstone in the honor of saint Peter and Paule, being commonlie called the hospitall of the new worke, which William Courtneie archbishop of Canturburie did after change into a college of secular priests. In the time of this bishop, the palace of Westminster was almost consumed with fire. The citizens of Norwich in hatred of the monks burnt their cathedrall church with the palace. There was so great dearth of vittels, that the parents in manie places were compelled to eat their children, and a bushell of wheat was sold for twelue and sometime for sixtéene shillings. The prouision for the vniuersitie of Oxford was about this time confirmed, of whom further in these words writeth Mat. Parker.

1270 The 54 yeare of Henrie the 3 which Iohn London referreth to the yere of Christ 1267.

Annal. eccles. Cantuar. Ste. Brichint. de archiepisc. Cantuar.

*His Bonifacius vt moribus gestisque peregrinus, sic nomine ipso & appellatione reliquis omnibus tam prioribus quàm eum sequentibus archiepiscopis dissimilis fuit. Id quod Radulphus de Diceto ecclesiæ quondam Paulinæ London. decanus, vir in Anglicana historia peritissimus, qui ad Hubertum archiepiscopum scribens, ex illa tam longa archiepiscoporum Cantuariens. tot annis ducta serie, mirari se ait, ne duos vnquam vno eodémque nomine appellari. Quod quidem vsque ad Huberti tempora, vt ipse annotauit verum fuit. Nos verò qui 70 archiepiscoporum vitas in hoc opere descripsimus, multo magis mirari debemus, & animaduertendum esse duximus, præterquam quòd & hic Bonifacius, & quatuor post eum archiepiscopi nominibus à cæteris distincti & discriminati fuerunt, ex illo toto 70 numero, ne mediam partem coniunctam archiepiscopalem sedē tot annis occupasse, quot hic noster septuagesimus solus ad hunc annum 1572 tenuit.

Math. Parker.

Robert de Kilwarbie.

Robert de Kilwarbie was made archbishop of Canturburie: for a little before the death of king Henrie the third, the king licenced the monks of Canturburie to chuse William de Chillenden their subprior to be their archbishop. Who went to Rome to be sacred by pope Gregorie the tenth: but at his cōming thither the pope compelled him to renounce his election, whereupon the pope of his owne authoritie, without consent of the monks, pronounced Robert Kilwarbie to be bishop of Canturburie through the fulnesse of his authoritie. Which Robert being borne in England was brought vp at Paris, where receiuing the degrées belonging to the sciences, came into England and was made a frior Minor, whereof in the end he became the prouinciall head, which office (as the popes collector) he possessed eleuen yeares. After the pope had thus made Kilwarbie archbishop, the monks of Canturburie (least they should seeme to lose their right in election because the pope had appointed one against their wils) did also chuse the said Robert Kilwarbie, and sent the said William their subprior (renouncing his election) with the prior of Douer and the officiall of Canturburie, in the name of the whole couent of Canturburie, to salute the new elected bishop. This Kilwarbie was consecrated at Canturburie on a sundaie in Lent, being the fourth kalends of March by William or rather Walter Gifford bishop of Bath, because the bishop of London was sicke. In the daie of whose consecration the prior of Canturburie required of this Robert three thousand marks; which the couent had spent in the election of William de Chillenden, sith the pope promised to the said William, that the next archbishop should paie the same vnto the couent. The archbishop Robert moued herewith, began to enquire of the conditions of the man, to the end to haue cause to remoue him: which the prior vnderstanding, found meanes that the couent remitted thirtéene hundred marks of the said summe: which moued the archbishop to cease anie further to trouble him. His consecration being ended he came to London, and with the nobilitie (at the new Temple) made Edward the first (then in Syria) king of England, appointing treasurors and officers of the exchéker to kéepe the reuenues of the realme to the kings vse. In the time of this Kilwarbie there was on saint Nicholas éue an earthquake, thunder, lightning, a fierie dragon, a comet, and an extreame tempest, which feared all the English people. In which tempest the kings iustices, whilest they went to their tribunall seats, at Westminster were so feared, that they were inforced to staie and sit at the new crosse, now called Charing crosse; or rather in that place where now standeth that ancient crosse which was made manie yeares after this third yeare of king Edward the first. For the crosse now standing was made by the same Edward, as a remembrance of the death of his wife quéene Elenor the daughter of Alphonse king of Spaine (as were also the crosses of Cheape, Waltham, Dunstable, Stamford and Grantham) vnlesse that there stood a stone crosse, the which was after plucked downe by Edward the first, in whose place anew he built the now standing crosse. This archbishop did renew & shortlie conclude in fiue articles, all the old statutes made by his predecessors, and now almost out of vse, concerning the court of Canturburie kept in the Bow church of London. He compounded the contention betweéne the monks and citizens of Canturburie, he visited all his prouince, in which visitation by his metropolitan authoritie he visited both the vniuersities, and did subtilie at Oxford dispute of diuinitie, philosophie and logike: in which arts he did reprehend and refell manie opinions and sentences of the Oxford men as not probable. Whose opinions Iohn Peckham that followed him in the bishoprike, did (in a synod of the clergie) condemne as vaine and foolish doings of sophisters, being hereticall and varieng from the christian faith. In this yeare by gathering a great sum of the prouincials of the frier Minors, he built the faire monasterie of the frier Minors, of an old tower of London set in the west part of the citie, the relikes of which west tower were before this granted by William the Norman to the bishop of London, to build the chancell (of Paules church) destroied by fire. After which he was called to Rome by pope Nicholas the third, made cardinall of Hostia, & bishop Portua, and procured by the pope to grant that another frier Minor of his order might succéed him at Canturburie. But shortlie after that he was come to Rome, and had receiued these dignities, he toke a grieuous disease, whereof he died at Viterbo, where he was honorablie buried.

1275 In the third yeare of Edward the first.

1278 In the 1ut yeare of Edward the first.

1272 And the 56 of Henrie the third.

Ex archiuis.

Gerual. Dorob. in mappa mundi. Ste. Brichint.

Iohn Peckham.

1279 In the seuenth yeare of Edward the first.

John Peckham in the yeare of Christ one thousand two hundred three score and eightéene (when Kilwarbie left Canturburie, was consecrated by the pope in the court of Rome, against the will of the monks and consent of the suffragans of the prouince of Canturburie) whereof neither were called to that consecration: for the monks had chosen Robert Burnell bishop of Bath and the kings chancellor, whome the pope reiected. This Peckham being thus made archbishop, would be called by none other name than frier John, who was borne in Sussex of obscure parents, being of a child brought vp in the monasterie of Lewes; after which, he studied at Oxford, where he was made a frier Minor, attéining at length to be made prouinciall of the same order. Then he went to Paris to studie diuinitie, from whense he went to Lions, where he was made a chanon: which place and dignitie, as a thing of right belonging to the church of Canturburie, the archbishop of that sée did long inioie, and kéepe in their hands, till the time of Henrie the fift. When this Peckham was at Lions, he studied the ciuill law, and greatlie increaſing therein, went to the vniverſities of Italie, where he remained ſometime. At length he went to the court of Rome, in which he handled and pleaded the cauſes with ſuch ſkill, that he by the pope was preferred to be the hearer & iudge of the cauſes of the popes palace. This Peckham writing to the biſhop of Lincolne, doth in his letters ſaie, that he publikelie read in Paris, in England, and in the court of Rome. He held a councell at Lambeth, during which councell, the archbiſhop of Yorke as he went to the king, would haue caried vp his croſſe in the prouince of Canturburie; but by the policie of Peckham, who had in all his prouince vnder paine of excommunication, commanded that none ſhould miniſter food to the archbiſhop of Yorke and his people, the croſſe was laid downe, or elſe they muſt haue ſtarued.

Ex de Ickham. Walt. Gifborn. Steph. Brichin. Ex archiuis.

Vide in ſuo regiſtr. fol. 217.

1280 In the ninth yeare of Edward the firſt. Florilegus.

In this councell, he did excommunicat all ſuch as would be exempted from his viſitation, amongſt whom (as ringleaders) were the abbats of Weſtminſter, ſaint Albons, ſaint Edmunds, and Waltham appealing long to the pope, with whom the reſt ioined; but not able to abide the archbiſhops authoritie and power, they left their appeale and ſubmitted themſelues vnto him: which councell being ended, he viſited all his prouince. He went into Wales, and at Snowden ſought to appeaſe the warres betweene Edward the firſt, and Leoline the prince of Wales: but when he could doo no good therein (ſith they were determined to die, rather than to be ſo hardlie dealt withall by the kings iuſtices and bailiffes, as they complained that they were) he returned into England, and did excommunicat them, as breakers of the kings peace. But before he went into Wales, fearing that he ſhould be there ſtaied by force, and not returne when he would, he appointed Robert Burnell biſhop of Bath, before repelled from the ſee of Canturburie, to be his vicar generall and diſpoſer of his prouince in his abſence: but in the end, the king ſubdued the Welſh, and the barons of that countrie came to his parlement at Northampton, where they ſware homage vnto him.

Florilegus. 1281 In the tenth yeare of Edward the firſt. Florilegus. 1282 In the eleuenth yeare of Edward the firſt. Ex archiuis. Hiſt. Camb. Of the welſh hiſtorie. fo. 338. 339, and ſo to fol. 371. Tho. Walſing.

This parlement being doone, the archbiſhop did againe more diligentlie than before viſit his prouince; in which viſitation, determining for euer to baniſh all Iews: he wrot to the biſhop of Lincolne that he ſhould ouerthrow all their ſynagogs, which decree by the kings meanes was ſomewhat mitigated, & the Iewes were permitted to haue one temple in the publike place of the citie, in which they might celebrat their ceremonies: whereof a great number were taken from them. At this time, the archbiſhop reiected and would not confirme Richard More profeſſor of diuinitie, and choſen biſhoop of Wincheſter, and John Kirkbie the kings chapleine, choſen to be biſhop of Lichfield, becauſe they had manie benefices. Wherupon they appealing to the pope, after the vaine ſpenſe of much monie, and long time thereabouts, were faine to leaue the matter, and againſt their wils to ſtand to the ſentence pronounced againſt them, in the behalfe of the archbiſhop Peckham. So that they being reiected from theſe biſhoprikes, one John Pontiſar was in place of the one by the pope made biſhop of Wincheſter, which greuouſlie infeſted the monks of that citie, and increaſed the liuings and rites of that biſhoprike with the ſpoiles of the ſame, as appeareth by the monuments of that church.

1283 Walt Gesb. Petr. de Ickh. Ex archiuis. fo. 242.

This Peckham was (as is proued by this which followeth) a ſeuere puniſher of euils; for being no leſſe bitter to thoſe which were not reſident on their cures, than to ſuch as had manie cures; he by publike edict admoniſhed and compelled the biſhop of Lichfield (a ſtranger, and ignorant in the Engliſh tong, and therefore remaining out of his dioceſſe) that he ſhould (vnder paine of being diſplaced) returne to his biſhoprike there to be reſident: who comming to the archbiſhop to excuſe himſelfe, was ſharpelie rebuked, becauſe he might through his reſidence vpon his biſhoprike, feed the bodies of the poore with almes and liberalitie, although he could not feed the ſoules of his ſheepe with preaching and literature. When this Peckham came to the college of Woluerhampton in the dioceſſe of Lichfield, (whoſe patronage belonged to the church of Canturburie) to viſit the ſame, he was excluded and forbidden it by the chanons vpon their priuilege of exemption: but the archbiſhop depriued Iohn Theodoſius de Camilla (who proſecuted this cauſe at Rome) of two parſonages or rectories (which he had in England) for non reſidence: during the time that the ſaid John was in theſe affaires at Rome.

1284 In the twelfe yeare of Edward the firſt. Ex archiuis.

At this time, this archbiſhop did confeſſe in his letters written to the queene, that he had ſpent more than two thouſand marks on the reparing of the buildings in his manors, ſaieng beſides, expreſſlie in the regiſter, that in the yeare of Chriſt one thouſand two hundred foureſcore and foure, he did expend about three thouſand marks in neceſſarie buildings: who as he ſharpelie puniſhed the non reſidents, ſo he did with no leſſe ſeueritie puniſh adulterie.

In regiſt. fo. 45. fol. 114.

For whileſt he viſited the dioceſſe of Chicheſter, he there puniſhed Roger Ham a prieſt by one yeares penance to be performed vpon his oth, who ſpent that time in pilgrimages to Rome, to Cullen, & to Compoſtella, being depriued of all his ſpirituall reuenues, which the biſhop cauſed to be giuen to the vſe of the poore. In his viſitation alſo of his dioceſſe of Saliſburie it was found, that Oſborne Giffard knight had taken two nuns out of the monaſterie of Wilton, whome the archbiſhop did firſt excommunicat, and then releaſed vnder hard conditions. Firſt that he ſhould not all his life after enter into anie monaſterie of nuns, or vſe the companie of anie nun: then, that he being naked, ſhould be beaten with rods in the pariſh church of Wilton, & receiue the like publike puniſhment, both in the market, and the pariſh church of Shaftſburie, whereunto were added the faſt of manie moneths: beſides this, that he ſhould be diſgraded from the order of knighthood, and neuer after weare gilt ſpurs, ſword, armour, ſaddle, or gilt trapings: & moreouer, that he ſhould not weare anie coloured garments but one lie of ruſſet, furred with lambe or ſheepe ſkins, that he ſhould not weare anie ſhirt three yeers after his puniſhment, that he ſhould not returne to the order before he had paſſed three yeares in the Holieland; and eſpeciallie, that he ſhould procure the nuns to be ſent to the monaſterie to receiue the like puniſhment: all which, this Oſborne Giffard bound himſelfe by oth to performe, the biſhop of Saliſburie appointing him a forme of faſt therefore.

1285 In the thirteenth yeare of Edward the firſt. Ex archiuis.

About this time there was a certeine contention betweene the biſhop of Lincolne and the vniverſitie of Oxenford, touching the iuriſdiction of the biſhop ouer the ſcholers of the ſame vniverſitie. Concerning which, thus writeth Matthew Parker: De qua (meaning that controuerſie) Iohannes Cantuar. cùm ſcholariũ tum cauſam vacillare, nec iure ſtare poſſe intellexerat, ſcholaribus reſcripſit: Si in iure contenderent, vincèos aſſuperari neceſſe eſt, præſertim cum his quibus niterentur priuilegijs, à iuriſdictione epiſcopali iure communi ſtabilita eximi nequaquam potuiſſent. Wherupon in the yeare of our redemption one thouſand two hundred foureſcore and eight, the ſaid John Peckham hauing ouerſeene Oxfordſhire, did in that viſitation alſo come vnto 1286 In the fourteenth yeare of Edward the firſt. Ex archiuis fo. 142.

Drenford, and visited the same by his metropolitane power: In qua visitatione quasdam philosophicas opiniones, quas errores & à Roberto Kilwarby (his predecessor in the bishoprike of Canturb.) antea reprehensos docuit, & tanquam hæreses & a fide christiana abhorrentes e suggestu Latinè refellit. Inter has vna erat, in homine esse tantummodo formam vnam, &c. Of which matter Matthew Parker maketh a great discourse, declaring a contention betweene one Richard Knapwell doctor and frier preacher, one Hugh de Manchester prouinciall of that order, and this John Peckham archbishop, about those questions, which being but frierlie wrangelings, I let passe as needles to spend time, labor, and paper therevpon. This archbishop Peckham kept a councell of the bishops, in which he made fiue seuerall lawes. In whose gouernement of the see of Canturburie hapned such a cheape of corne, that wheat was sold for three pence the bushell: but shortlie after, by the space of fortie yeares following, there was contrarilie such a dearth, as a bushell of wheat was sold for two shillings. Now after that this man had bene archbishop thirtene yeares, perceiuing his end to draw neere, he made his will, and appointed Nicholas of Knouile or Knowle, person of Maidstone, and Simon de Greile, to be his executors. These men after the death of Walter Reinolds, in the vacancie of the archbishoprike, being called to account for the goods of the testator, by the prior of Canturburie, the same was at that time Ex inuentario præter legata in specie relicta, to haue exceeded fiue thousand three hundred and fiue pounds, seuentene shillings, and two pence, quad: of English monie, notwithstanding his great gifts vnto the cardinals, and seuen hundred threescore and ten marks to be distributed to the poore inhabiting in his manors, and the liberall aduancement of manie of his kinred, some being knights, and some being gentlemen, whereof their posterities at this daie remaine in my sweet countrie of Kent, and in other shires of England. This archbishop, after that he had possessed the see of Canturburie (as before I said) thirtene yeares, foure and twentie weeks, and two daies, departed this life in Januarie, and was buried in Christs church of Canturburie.

1290 In the nineteenth yeare of Edward the first.

Ex archiuis.

Ex inuentario eius archiepiscopi scilicet in diuersis & particularibus monasteriis mortui.

In regist. Chro. Roff.

Robert Winchelseie. Steph. Brichinton.

Robert Winchelseie, when he was yet a child, was brought vp at Canturburie in the rudiments of grammar, being of so faire complexion, of so good wit, and of so mild disposition, that in his childhood it was a common prophesie, to saie that he should be bishop of Canturburie. After his childish yeares thus spent at schoole, he went to Paris, where he was made maister of arts, and then applied himselfe to diuinitie eight yeares, after which, by vniuersall consent he was made ruler of the vniuersitie of Paris. Then comming into England, vpon proofe of his learning at Oxford, he receiued the degree of a doctor, and at length by generall voice was aduanced to be chancellor of that vniuersitie; to which offices in following time, was also added the archdeaconrie of Essex, and a prebendarishp in Paules church of London. This Winchelsie not yet satisfied, he was in the end by the assent of all men, made archbishop of Canturburie (as some haue) in the yeare of Christ one thousand two hundred fourescore and twelue, who going to Rome to be consecrated, was there had in such great admiration for his learning and vertuous conditions, as the pope would then haue made him a cardinall, and still reteined him vnder his protection. But he alleging necessarie causes to remaine in England, had leaue to depart after his consecration. In the meane time, king Edward the first demanded of the cleargie of Westminster a great masse of monie towards the charges of the war: the bishops demand a daie for answere, which was giuen vnto them, being but a verie short time. During which time William Montfort, deane of Paules, being in perfect health, and comming to the king to intreat for mitigation of so great a summe as he demanded of the clergie; and beginning his tale before the king, did there suddenlie fall downe dead. But the king nothing troubled therwith, at the daie appointed, sent John de Hauering knight to the prelats assembled at Westminster, who with a lowd voice said; If any man will gainsaie the kings demand, let him come forth, that being knowne he maie be iudged guiltie, as a disturber of the kings peace. Wherewith the prelats being astonied, did in the end condescend to the kings request, the same grant being after great cause of dissention betweene the king and the clergie. About which time Winchelsie returning from Rome into England, went to the king into Wales, then occupied in the wars of those countries; where, after his fealtie made to the king for his temporalties, he did excommunicat Madocke Leoline that raised this war against the king: which sentence he commanded to be declared throughout all the parts of Wales. At length the same tumult being pacified, the archbishop returned home, and held a synod at London. The synod ended (in the fift of Nouember, in the presence of this archbishop, sitting in Bow church) he causing the lawes to be read openlie, which he had made for the iudges and officers of the court of the arches: which done, he came to Canturburie, and there was inthronized, consecrating on the same daie John of Monmouth professor of diuinitie bishop of Landaffe in Wales. These things thus passing, Edward the first being in the wars of the low countrie, did (when Roger bishop of Couentrie and Lichfield was dead) procure one Walter of Langton to be chosen bishop, who was consecrated at the kings request beyond the seas, by the cardinall of Alba, saving all rights belonging to the bishoprike of Canturburie.

Florileg.

1295 In the three and twentith yeare of Edward the first. Walsingh. Florileg.

Ex archiuis.

Florileg.

The king after the subduing of his enimies, demanded releefe of the clergie, but they denied it, for that they could not grant anie thing to the king without the popes consent. For which this bishop with the rest, standing in contention with the king, he put him and them wholie out of his protection: whereupon the clergie well considering of the same, submitted themselues, and chose the archbishop of Yorke, the bishops of Durham, Elie, and Sarisburie, with others, to deale in those affaires, to whome they committed power to seeke remedie, both to satisfie the pope, and the king: who thereupon consulting togither, agreed to laie downe in the church the fift part of the ecclesiasticall goods, for the vrgent & necessarie defense of the church of England. But this archbishop vtterlie misliking the same, would not anie waie change his mind; for which cause being turned out of his house, no man would scarse giue him lodging: but he not esteeming thereof, vsed this protestation, that he would doo nothing the more for that; further affirming that all they were excommunicat which gaue anie thing against the popes will and authoritie. For which cause the bishops vncerteine what to doo in this extremitie, for doubt of both swords, brake off their councell, and that the rather, because that this archbishop Robert departing from the same councell, admonished euerie man to looke to his owne soule.

Chron. Ianæ Albani. W. Thorne.

1284 In the twelfe yeare of Edward the first.

1285 In the thirteenth yeare of Edward the first. Ex archiuis.

1286 In the fourteenth yeare of Edward the first. Ex archiuis fo. 142.

1294 In the two & twentith yeare of Edward the first.

Walsingh.

Floril. Walsingh.

Steph. Brich.

At length yet in the end, the clergie going to the king, offered him sometime the fourth part, and sometime the fift part of their goods, thereby hoping to receiue their temporalties, and to be againe vnder his protection. At what time the king (for that present, by reason of hast of warres in France, thinking it good to dissemble the dealing of the archbishop

Walter Gisb.

1296 In the foure and twentith yeare of Edward the first.

bishop) did in a parlement at Westminster receiue the archbishop into fauor, and restored to him all that he had taken from him. Wherevpon the king taking with him this Robert Winchelseie, his sonne prince Edward, & the erle of Warwike, came into Westminster hall, where he commanded the people to assemble, to the end to make a full pacification with them before his departure into France. Before whome the king made a lamentable speech, and excused himselfe of the taxes laid on his people, as a thing whereunto he was inforced by the necessitie of the warres; promising to repaie all such summes, if he returned in safetie from the present warres: and if he did not see England againe, he earnestlie desired them, that they would then crowne his sonne Edward in his fathers seat. With which words the archbishop pitifullie weeping did so pacifie the minds of the people, that they with one voice both held vp their hands, and promised their faith vnto the king to performe all his demands. But the earles and barons which were to go with him into Flanders, refused the same, vnlesse the king would confirme Magna Charta, & Charta de foresta, both which the king vnwillinglie granted to performe. Shortlie after this archbishop was accused by the king of treason, in aiding & counselling such as rebelled against him, whilest he was in the warres of Scotland, amongst whome was the earle Marshall, who for satisfaction thereof made the king his heire. This treason did the bishop confesse, and on his knees craued pardon therfore; but the king remitting the matter to the pope, the archbishop was by the pope suspended from his office, and then banished England: but after by Edward the second, comming to his crowne, restored, in the first yeare of his reigne, with all the commodities which were withheld from him during the time of his banishment, being so great a summe to him, that his calamitie was by that meanes vnto him great commoditie. For thereby he became the richest archbishop of all his predecessors, for which cause he would with this saieng comfort himselfe in his banishment, accompanied with other greefes:

Nihil nocebit aduersitas vbi nulla iniquitas dominatur.

But as he at this time seemeth to be in all prosperitie by reason of this exceeding wealth: so yet now and not before came the cause of this archbishops greefe and mourning, in that king Edward the second, against the minds of all men, did recall into England Piers de Gauestone the Gascoine, which hated all the cleargie and nobilitie, and was banished into Ireland by king Edward the first. For this Piers at his comming to the king, imprisoned Walter the bishop of Couentrie by the kings commandement. Wherevpon the archbishop would not in the parlement suffer anie thing to be done by the cleargie of his prouince, vntill the bishop of Couentrie were deliuered out of prison. After this (the king being offended with the archbishop) he kept a prouinciall councell in London, in which the order of the knights of the Temple were destroied. In which yeare also Henrie king of Almaine being created emperor, receiued three crownes in this order: one of siluer at Aquisgrane, an other of iron at Millane, and the third of gold at Rome. Besides which in the same yeare this archbishop required of the king to haue sir John Heron knight (prisoner in the Tower of London, for the murther of Robert Grace) to be iudged in the spirituall court as a clearke, whereunto the king did giue consent. After which the said knight being receiued by the deputie of the bishop of London, to purge the suspicion of the said murther, was quitted thereof by the sentence of that bishop: but vpon further examination, that act was reuoked by this archbishop, the sentence made void, he found guiltie of the murther, and inioined to doo penance therefore.

1305 1306 In the one & twentith and foure & twentith yeare of Edward the first. Walsing. Florilegus. 1307 1308 1309 Adam. Merim. Walsing. 1310 The fourth of Edward the second. Memoriale historiarum. Adam. Meri.

About the yeare following, there was contention betweene the couent and prior of Lewes, and the bishop of Norwich in the kings court (concerning the right of a patronage) by the space of seuen years, which at length obteined this end. The prior and the couent did present one Reginald Bedaling to the parish church of Feurell, whome the bishop did pronounce to be vnmeet therefore, and would not admit him. Wherevpon grew a suit at the common law, and the bishop pleaded that he could not admit a man vnmeet for that place: which answer caused the kings iudges to write vnto this archbishop, to certifie them of the validitie or vnworthinesse of the clearke. Wherevpon the archbishop approued the bishop of Norwichs fact, in writing thus to the iudges: Inuenimus quòd R. B. in breui mentionatus, est inhabilis ad omne beneficium ecclesiasticum. Which returne caused the iudges to giue sentence against the prior. This archbishop was so seuere in executing his archiepiscopall iurisdiction, that he would not spare anie of the nobilitie, for he banished John earle Warren (vpon his oth) from the companie and presence of an harlot (which he kept openlie in his house) after that he had rashlie turned awaie his wife: and when he perceiued that the same would not helpe, he by publike edict cited the earle and the children gotten in that adulterie to a synod, where the earle was againe interdicted, as well for periurie and for adulterie, as for ouermuch vnlawfull familiaritie with that strumpet. And as he was to some seuere in respect of vice, so to his prince he bare as faithfull dutie: for he dearelie in the beginning loued Edward the second, from whome by parlement he remoued the Spensers, and such other euill flatterers as were about him, procuring them to be banished; being moreouer a rare man, & of great almes. Wherfore I will set downe the words of that reuerend father and worthie antiquarie Matthew Parker touching him, for the example of the cleargie proportionablie as their liuings now will beare, to be so great almesmen as he was. Thus therefore archbishop Parker writeth of this Robert Winchelseie. 1311 The 4. of Edward the second. Walsingham. Meremouth.

Vitia, quæ in hoc archiepiscopo deprehensa sunt, non tam hominis quàm temporis propria fuerunt. Nam pro ecclesiæ libertatibus cum papa, & pro regni iuribus cum baronibus aduersus regē fuit, in quarū vtraque causa Salamonis dictum verum expertus est; Indignationem principis morti comparandam esse. Beneficia ecclesiastica nunquam nisi doctis contulit, precibus atque gratia nobilium fretos & ambientes semper repulit, iuuenibus literarum studiosis ad academias missis annua alimēta decreuit, in eleemosynis & largitione quotidiana omnes ante se & sequentes archiepiscopos anteire dicendus est, pauperibus ostiatim mendicantibus præter quotidianas ex fragmentis largitiones, quolibet die dominico & feria quinta pro eleemosyna habēda ad loca vbi degebat venientibus panes frumentarios quadrante valentes dari præcepit. Horum panum numerus tempore caritatis annonæ quatuor, tempore copiæ trium millium fuit, his in illis festis solennioribus 150 denarios, totidem pauperibus in pecunijs numerandos addidit. Infirmis præterea senióue confectis, puerperis, & eiusmodi egenis prodire ad eleemosynas petendas non valentibus, mitti singulos panes cum modica carnium aut piscium iuxta diei varietatem quantitate iussit. Subleuabat insuper eos qui à secunda fortuna casu ad inopiam detrusi, quosque pudor a mēdicitate prohibebat, quibus & vestes & pecunias misit. Memorial. hist. Step. Brichin.

misit. In mensa fuit inter cōuiuas, lætus, affabilis, iucundus. Detractatores, adulatores, & scurras à sua hilaritate & epulis seiunxit; à quibus & à cohortio cū in secretiora & interiora loca se abduxisset, precibus primùm deinde studijs incubuit.

After that this bishop was (as is before said) returned out of exile, he liued by the space of six yeares in great fauor with king Edward the second, who (when he perceiued that the king had againe admitted the Spensers hated of all men, and that he reiected the companie of good men) fell into a great sickenesse, and ended his daies at Otford (after that he had béene bishop much about nineteene yeares) the fift ides of Maie, from whense he was conueied to Canturburie, and buried nére vnto the altar of S. Gregorie at the south wall, whose tombe was cast downe because the people did frequent thereunto, and worship him as a saint: who at his death gaue the library with the vestments and other few goods of his (which were left) to the church of Canturburie.

1313 In the first yeare of Edward the second. Ste. Brichin.

Archiui.

Walter Reinolds.

Walter Reinolds, chapleine to Edward the first, parson of Wimberton, treasuror and chancellor of England, was made archbishop of Canturburie by the popes appointment, and that worthie person Thomas Cobham prebendarie of Pawle, and deane of Salisburie, elected by the monks of Canturburie was reiected; of the time of whose death finding no mention in Matthew Parker, I will set downe what is to be séene in his epitaph, written in the wall of the north side of the quier of the church of Canturburie, where he is buried, being couered with the image of a bishop carued out of marble stone, which writing is this: Hic iacet Walterus Reinold prius episcopus Wigornensis & Angliæ cancellarius, tandem archiepiscopus istius ecclesiæ, qui obijt 16 die mensis Nouembris, anno Gratiæ 1327, cuius animæ propitietur Deus.

1313 In the first yeare of Edward the second. Evesham. Wolmich m. Adam Merim.

Walsingham. Meirmouth.

Simon Mepham.

Simon Mepham, archbishop of Canturburie, touching whose election we must saie thus much. After the death of Walter Reinold, the archiepiscopall authoritie and chéefe gouernment of ecclesiasticall things remained with the prior and couent of Canturburie, who committed all the iurisdiction ouer the prouince of Canturburie, to their fellowmonke Gefferie de Eton. About the doing whereof there was much contention betwéene them and the bishop of London; but in the end, as I gather by the processe thereof, the monks obteined the better hand or at the least lost nothing in the cause. At which time one Henrie, prior of Canturburie, Vir (as saith Matthew Parker) vt existimari conuenit, minùs rerū vsu quàm sano iure prudens, did in the vacancie of the bishoprike administer all the iurisdiction whatsoeuer belonging to the said church, except the consecration of bishops. Which when he could not dow with his authoritie, he sent to the bishop of London, and inioined him, that he with the suffragans assembled at a certeine daie at Canturburie, should consecrate the elect bishops of Menenia and Bangor, whome he had confirmed by his authoritie, and to whom he had giuen his letter sealed with the couent seale, in witnesse and truth of that their consecration.

Archiui ex processu elect. Sim. Mepham.

Memorial. hist. Step. Brichin.

1320 In the 14 of Edward the second.

The authoritie of the couent thus acknowledged in the vacancie of the church of Canturburie, they writ letters to the king to demand licence to chuse a new bishop; which obteined, they elected to their father, and to the honor of a patriarch, Simon Mepham borne in Kent, professor of diuinitie, chanon of Chichester, prebendarie of the church of Landaffe, and parson of Dunkall, a man in that age knowen to be singularlie learned, according to the doctrine then professed: whose election being by the king approued, Henrie the prior of Canturburie sent messengers vnto Auinion, where the pope remained, to haue the same confirmed, at what time the pope consecrated the said Simon at Auinion; which being obteined, he presentlie returned home: and first of all by his charter (which I haue séene, and Matthew Parker hath set downe) appointed Richard de Solburie his procurator to receiue the commodities of his prebend in the church of Lions, and to bestow all nédfull charges vpon his manor of Quincracke in the diocse of Lions in France. After this he crowned Philip wife to Edward the third, then he kept a councell at London: In quo iura quædam vt à seruilibus operibus in diebus parasceues animarum, & conceptionis cessaretur, & de iurisdictione & bannorum matrimonialium editione condidit. Inter quæ Oxoniense illud de appellationibus à definitiuis tantùm sententijs interponendis decretum tanquam iniquum sustulit. Besides which, in this councell, by the consent of the clergie, all they were excommunicated which killed Walter Stapleton bishop of Excester and tresuror of England, or but once consented to his death. Which doth most vnskilfullie attribute to John Stratford the next archbishop, whilest also forgetting himselfe, he maketh this Simon Mepham to be a person ouermerie and plesant, as hath Matthew Parker. These things thus done, Roger bishop of Salisburie, and John bishop of Bath died. Whereupon the pope created John de Wimble, a man both vnlearned and vncomlie, bishop of Sarum, by pretext of his power of prouision for bishoprikes. But Simon the archbishop had confirmed & consecrated Rafe de Scrobsburie or Shrewsburie chosen bishop of Bath, before the pope had intelligence of the vacancie of that church, which Rafe being cited to Rome, and vexed with long delaies, at length returned home with full confirmation from the holie father. At length contention falling betwéene this archbishop and the monks of Canturburie about a visitation, the monks appealed to the pope, who sending Letherius de Concreto by the name of a nuncio or messenger (for before all legats were vtterlie forbidden to come into England) to determine this cause, he gaue sentence against the bishop, & condemned him in seauen hundred pounds. Whereupon the archbishop being conuicted, did more foolishlie attempt greater things, & being foiled by the weaker, would néedscontend with the stronger. For determining to visit the prouince of Canturburie after the manner of his predecessors, there was a parlement called by the king; in the beginning of which, his visitation being begun, there was a councell of the clergie celebrated at London vnder the archbishop, from which councell they departed, despising the archbishop, and yéelding to nothing the king required. The councell ended, the bishop did afresh begin his metropolitan visitation, from which John Grandison, then bishop of Excester did appeale to the pope at the least, by that meanes to delaie the visitation, which Grandison was borne in Kent and familiar with this archbishop Simon Mepham, whose iurisdiction he either feared or despised, and therefore resisted him, although not by right, yet by such power as he could, in appealing him to the pope. Wherefore, when Simon Mepham in that visitation had quietlie passed ouer the diocesse of Rochester, Chichester, Salisburie, Bath and Wels, he would also haue entred into the diocesse of Excester: but John the bishop of that citie did with strong heart resist him; & when the archbishop determined to cope with him also by strength, the matter was brought vnto the king; the bishop was called backe by the kings letters, & shamefullie departed out of that countrie, without setting end to his visitation. By which and other repulses, as he returned home he fell into a deadlie ague at Magfield, and yéelded his life the twelfe of October, after that he had sitten fiue yéers, Murimuth. Walsing.

Polydor erreth.

Murimuth. Walsing.

1324 In the third yeare of Edward the third. Murimuth.

1331 In the fift of Edward the third.

1332 In the first of Edward the third. Contention betwéene the bishop of Canturburie and Excester, that the first would visit the diocesse of the second.

Ste. Brichint.

1333 In the 7 of Edward the third.

six moneths, and twelue daies in the chaire of the see of Canturburie. In setting end to which archbishop I must not forget (for the honor of my sweet countrie of Kent) a thing so rare, and perhaps neuer like to be seene againe; that this archbishop being himselfe a Kentishman, had at one time vnder him six of his suffragans to be of the same shire: so that Kent did at one time bring forth seauen bishops, whereof the one was this archbishop Simon, the other six were the foresaid John Grandison bishop of Excester, Stephan Graueseend bishop of London, Henrie Borwash or de Burgesse bishop of Lincolne, chancellor and tresuror of England, Thomas Cobham bishop of Worcester, Richard Swinefield bishop of Hereford, & Haimon bishop of Rochester. The bodie of this Simon Meepham was on the 7 kalends of November caried to Canturburie, & buried in a marble tome, on the north part of the chapell of S. Anselme somtime bishop of Canturburie.

Matth Parker.

John Stratford.

John Stratford, when he was yet but yong, gaue himselfe to the canon and ciuill law, after which he was made archdeacon of Lincolne, then deane of the arches, by Walter Reinolds archbishop of Canturburie, next of the priuie councell, and secretarie to Edward the second, and in following time made bishop of Winchester. He was chancellor to Edward the third, and then made bishop of the arch see of Canturburie, and protector of the realme in the absence of Edward the third. This John after that he had bin bishop 15 yeares, fell into a deadlie disease at Magfield and there died, being buried at Canturburie at the high altar in the south part, with an honorable tome of alabaster at the steps of the altar of saint Dunstan.

Ex epistola Rich. Dunel.

1348 In the 22 of Edward the third.

John Offord.

John Offord sonne of the earle of Suffolke, did studie the ciuill and canon law at Cambridge, who being after made deane of Lincolne was admitted to the kings councell, and inuested with the honor of chancellor of England, from whense in following time he was aduanced to the see of Canturburie, who waiting for the pall six moneths & six daies, died in the great pestilence in the moneth of Maie, or (as hath Matthew Parker) the seuenth of June one thousand three hundred and fiftie, being the foure and twentith yeare of the reigne of king Edward the third. The bodie of which archbishop was the next morning secretlie brought to Canturburie, and buried without anie archiepiscopall maiestie in the north wall of the wall of Thomas Becket.

1350 as some haue, but rather 1349 being the 23 of Edward the first, as others haue.

Thomas Bradwardine.

Thomas Bradwardine (chosen by the monks of Canturburie to succéd John Stratford, and being repelled to bring in the foresaid John Offord or Offord) was borne at Hatfield in Sussex, who studieng diuinitie, was by John Stratford bishop of Canturburie brought to be the kings confessor, in which office without anie reward or honor he remained with the king in all his warres. Which Bradwardine being of a zelous mind, would not feare to rebuke the king if he at anie time saw him depart from equitie: which the king did not take in euill part, but alwaies loued the man, who although he might obteine anie thing of the king, yet would hardlie be brought to this euill, that he would at one time kéepe both his canonrie in Lincolne, and his chancellorship of London. Wherbyit appeareth, that he was not onelie vertuouslie giuen from couetousnesse, but also so mild conditioned, that he was neuer offended because he was reiected at his first election from the see of Canturburie, & Offord placed in the same: for which cause after the death of Offord, the monks did rechose him to be their archbishop of Canturburie; whereunto the king did with much intretie agrée, being loth to lose the companie of so good a man. After which, this Bradwardine coming to Auinion to be consecrated, the same was celebrated by Bertrand the cardinall, in the companie of all the other cardinals. At the time of which feast of consecration, Hugo the cardinall of Tull: the popes kinsman, a person puffed vp with vaine pride, beholding the simple and mild countenance of this new archbishop, did in mockerie of him bring into the place an abiect & base wretch sitting on an asse, requiring to be made an archbishop. For which his foolish act being bitterlie rebuked & tawnted, he did with shame depart as a person noted of extreme follie. The solemnities of this consecration ended, & the pope & cardinals saluted, this Bradwardine returneth into England, first receiuing his temporaltie of the king: which being had, he goeth forthwith to Lambeth to rest himselfe after his long iornie, where remaining in the bishop of Rochesters house called the place, some certeine wéeks, he fell into an ague, whereof he shortlie after died, fiue wéeks and foure daies after his consecration, being before that he was inthronized at Canturburie. After which he was buried at Canturburie in the chapell of Anselme, by whose death the church of Canturburie was thrise vacant in one yéere. This man, amongst manie other works which he wrot, made one great and learned booke intituled, De causa Dei contra Pelagium, which booke is at this daie extant, and (as maister Lambert noteth in his perambulation of Kent) among the names of the archbishops of Canturburie; he built the Blacke friers in London.

Simon Islep was first made a canon of Paules, iudge of the arches vnder John Stratford archbishop of Canturburie, then chancellor, secretarie and kéeper of the priuie seale to king Edward the third, and lastlie by the monks of Canturburie chosen to the archbishoprike of that citie. But the pope admitted him as a person rather placed in that see by his owne collation, than by the monks election: whereof the buls were published in Bow church of London the fourth daie of October. After which, in December next, he was consecrated in Paules church by Rafe Stratford bishop of London, in the presence of William Edinton bishop of Winchester. treasuror, and John Thorlbie bishop of saint Dauies chancellor of England. This done, he sent Michaell Northburge a doctor of the law to Rome to bring his pall, and appointed Roger Dorking to be his procurator to receiue the commodities of his canonrie at Lions, which the archbishops of Canturburie held. The pall being brought into England, he receiued the same from the hands of the bishop of Winchester in the manor house of Esher, being (for auoiding of further charge) inthronized at Canturburie with a small feast. But as he was a verie sparing man in all things, so therewithall he was ouer seuere in most things; for he visited his dioceese of Canturburie with great animaduersion. Contrarie whereunto he slenderlie passed ouer the dioceese of Rochester and Chicester, which was ascribed to his moderation and lenitie. But after comming home to his seat, calling the offendors before him, they found no lenitie but all seueritie in him: which caused John Buckingham bishop of Lincolne to defend his dioceese from the visitation of this archbishop, by the bulles of pope Clement obteined at Auinion; but the same priuilege was after reuoked at Rome, by the instigation of this archbishop. For the scholers of the vniuersitie of Oxford chosing one William de Palmorine to be their chancellor, sent him to the bishop of Lincolne (in whose dioceese Oxford then was) to be confirmed. But he by manie delaies was by the bishop turned ouer to an other time: for which, this William complained to the archbishop, which appointed a daie to Simon Islep.

1349 In the three and twentith yeare of Edward the third Esher.

1350 In the 24 yeare of Edward the third

Palmorine.

Steph. Birch.

the bishop of Lincolne to confirme the chancellor or to appeare before him. During which time the archbishop committed the hearing of the cause to his chancellor John Caulton and to the deane of Wels, at which daie the elect chancellor of Oxford with the scholers appearing, and the bishop of Lincolne making default, the chancellor of Canturburie lawfullie proceeding in that matter, pronounced him to be lawfullie elected; upon which sentence the archbishop confirmed him and sent him to Oxford, writing to the vniuersitie to obeie him. Which greeuing the bishop of Lincolne, he forthwith appealed to the pope, but the archbishop reiecting his appeale, called him to his owne iudgement seat, as a contemner of the archiepiscopall authoritie: but the bishop of Lincolne not appearing, the archbishop interdicted all his churches and lands. In the end, manie things being in this controuersie alleaged before the pope, the priuilege of the bishop of Lincolne was reuoked, and he inforced to giue place to the archbishop. After which, this Simon called Andrew Ufford archdeacon of Middlesex, administrator of the goods of John Ufford the archbishop of Canturburie, into law for the buildings which the said John Ufford had left ruinous in the bishoprike of Canturburie, and recouered of him eleuen hundred pounds fiue & thirtie shillings two pence halfepenie farthing, which he bestowed in reparing of the palace of Canturburie: Idémque (as saith that worthie antiquarie Matthew Parker) totum manerium de Wrotham demolitus, ædificia (quæ Iohannes Vfford Maidenstoniæ inchoauit) ex demolitis tignis, lapidibus, & cæmento traductis absoluit.

Adam Murimuth.

1351 In the fiue & twentith yeare of Edward the third.

In this fiue and twentith yeare of Edward the third, there was a new contention betweene the two archbishops of Yorke and of Canturburie, for the bearing of their crosses, whereof we will speake more in another worke of the bishops of Yorke. These things thus passed, a heauie discord fell betweene the scholers and townesmen of the vniuersitie of Oxford, which of them should beare the chiefest rule in the towne, in which after that it was come to weapons and diuers slaine on both parts, the scholers were driuen to forsake the towne. The bishop of Lincolne, vnder whose iurisdiction Oxford was, determining to punish the townesmen, did both interdict them and the towne: but after somewhat abating the same, he onlie gaue commandement to all the priests of the parishes, that if anie of the townesmen did come in whilest they were at diuine seruice, or were present at the diuine seruice, they should cease from the same, so long as anie of the townesmen were in the church. Whereunto this archbishop added a further paine of excommunication. But the scholers being dispersed hither and thither, and the king sorrowing to heare of the death that happened therby, called the controuersie into his owne hands. Which being heard, and the townesmen punished, he released the offense to the scholers, with this condition, that they should returne to the vniuersitie, and there fall againe to their studie: the whole substance whereof, the king would haue this archbishop to declare vnto them. And to the end that the scholers might hereafter be free from all violence to be offered vnto them by the townesmen, he condemned them to paie two hundred & fiftie pounds for damages vnto the scholers: and further bound them vnder a great paine, neuer after to hurt anie of the same scholers. Whereupon the whole gouernment of the towne was committed by the king to the chancellor of the vniuersitie (vtterlie excluding anie of the townesmen therein) to whose determination the iudgement and knowledge of the assise and measure of bread, wine, drinke, & of all other measures & weights were granted. Besides which generall amends, euerie particular scholer was left to his priuate reuenge by action, for anie iniurie done vnto him by anie of the townesmen.

Sedition betweene the scholers and townesmen of Oxford.

1354 In the eight and twentith yeare of Edward the third.

Robert Auesb. Walsingh.

About this time, Edward prince of Wales, after the death of the bishop of saint Assaph, did chalenge to himselfe the liuings of the bishoprike during the vacancie of the said see: but this archbishop contending with the prince, & prouing by ancient custome and by the witnesse of the clergie, that the same of right belonged to Canturburie, in the end obteined the same. Much about which time Elisabeth a noble woman, after the death of John earle of Kent hir husband, became a nun, in which profession when she had remained certeine yeares she fell in loue with one Eustace Abricourts, a Henower, which earnest affection of hirs inforced hir to depart out of the monasterie, and to be married vnto him against hir vow, in the morning before daie light without anie banes asking. Whereof when this archbishop had knowledge, he punished and bound them yearelie to assigne a liuing vnto two chaplains: and besides, that they should a long time be inioined the penance of fasting & praier without dissoluing the bands of matrimonie. This archbishop did build a famous college in Oxford called Canturburie college, to which he appropriated the rectories of Magfeld and Pagham; further granting the churches of Monktowne and Estreie to the monks of Canturburie, and for two hundred and fortie markes did release to the earle of Arundell six and twentie bucks and does, which the same earle of Arundell should yerelie paie to the church of Canturburie, for which act he was euillie thought of by diuers of the couent. In his iorneie as he went to Magfeld, he fell with his horse into a poole, in which whilst his horse and he did strugle togither to get forth, and that the archbishop would haue recouered himselfe, he was all to tumbled and wet in the mire, and so came throughlie wet to Magfeld, where he fell into a heauie sleepe before that he had put off his apparell, whereby falling into a palsie, he died there at Magfeld, in the seuentæenth yeare of his bishoprike, after that he had sitten at Canturburie sixtæene yeares, foure moneths, and twelue daies, and was buried at Canturburie in the middle of the bodie of the church, with a tombe wheron is a faire marble stone yet standing, hauing this epitaph in brasse ingrauen about a mitred bishop of plate, placed in the same hard marble stone:

1362 In the six and thirtith yere of Edward the third.

Archiui.

John sonne of Edmund of Woodstoke erle of Kent, who after the said Edmund was earle of Kent, and died without issue, and the earledome came to Ione his sister.

Hospes sanctorum, decus & pie Christe tuorum,
Cœtibus ipsorū prece iungas hunc precor horum,
Simon Isleppe oriens, vir bina lege probatus,
Vt nascens moriens, sic nunc iacet ante locatus,
Arcem qui tenuit, hic quondam pontificatus,
Clero quique fuit, regno toti quoque gratus,
Mil. tricenteno sexageno quoque seno,
Eius septeno pastoratus quoque deno,
Hic kal. Maÿ seno rupto carnis nece fræno,
Flos cadit e feno, cœlo peto qui sit ameno,
Princeps pastorum fac Simon apostolorum,
Simon vt iste chorum per eos vt attingat eorum.

At his death he bequeathed one thousand shéepe to the monasterie of Canturburie, his golden garment with a rich cope and siluer vessell, which was six dozzen of siluer dishes, so manie salts, twelue siluer basons with his armes: commanding further that he should be buried without anie assemblie of the people, auoiding in all things much magnificence or great cost. Of whom there be onlie extant two prouinciall constitutions to be holden in his time.

1366 In the fortith yeare of Edward the third.

Simon Langham was archbishop of Canturburie, and chosen after this maner. When Simon Islep was dead, the monks of Canturburie required red to haue William Edinton bishop of Winchester chancellor and treasuror of England to be their archbishop; but he denied their election. Whereupon at the kings request, pope Urban the fift did translate Simon Langham sometime abbat of Westminster, chancellor and treasuror of England, to the see of Canturburie by the waie and title of prouision. After which, he was made a cardinall also, who as he sat at his collation at after dinner, was suddenlie stricken with a palsie and lost his speach: and liuing foure or fiue daies after, died on the daie of Marie Magdalen: whose bodie was buried at Donezere nere Auinion amongst the Carthusians in a new church, which he builded from the foundation. After which, in processe of time as he had before ordeined, his bones were brought into England to Westminster, where is a statelie tombe made ouer him; he sat archbishop two yeares and somewhat more.

Simon Langham.

Steph. Brichinton. Catalo. episco. Elienſ.

Io. Maluerne. Monach. Wigorn. in continu. Randulph. 1376, or rather 1368.

William Witlesey, the kinsman of Simon Islep archbishop of Canturburie, by whome he was not onelie liberallie brought vp in learning, but also promoted to diuerse honors; who in his yong yeares followed the studie of the lawes by the persuasion of his vncle therein; proceeding doctor of both lawes, and being procurator for all his vncles affaires at Rome. After which, he was aduanced to be vicar generall, and officiall to the said Simon Islep, then likewise was he made deane of the arches, hauing thereunto also adioined the archdeaconrie of Huntington, & the rectories of Croidon & Cliffe. From these degrees he was raised to the bishoprike of Rochester, then to Worcester, next to London, and lastlie was translated by Urban the fift to the archbishoprike of Canturburie, the fift ides of October (when Simon Langham was made cardinall and went to the popes court) hauing in the Hilarie terme next following his temporalties restored to him at Westminster. At this time there were certeine Englishmen in Rome well seene in the ciuill and canon lawes, amongst which there were foure especiallie noted therefore, which were Thomas Paxton, Robert Stratton, John Shepdam, and Simon Sudburie, being afterward bishop of Canturburie: to these men which were of great authoritie in the church of Rome, did this archbishop giue authoritie procuratiue, to require of the pope and to send vnto him the pall, which was giuen him at Lambeth in the kalends of Aprill by William Wickham bishop of Winchester.

Steph. Brich. Ex archiuis.

1368 In the two & fortith yeare of Edward the third.

The sixteenth daie of June following, he was inthronised at Canturburie without anie shew or pompe, therein following the example of his predecessor Simon Islep. The next yeare he held a synod in Paules church of London the one and twentith of Januarie, in which he made an eloquent, learned, and Latine sermon. In which this synod, Robert Thorpe, John Kneuet, & Thomas Ludlo the kings iustices, did in the kings name demand a tenth for three yeares of the cleargie, towards his charges in warres. But after much talke thereabouts, they hardlie granted the tenth for two yeares. After which, the king not contented therewith, John of Gaunt duke of Lancaster the kings son, the earle of Arundell, the erle of Warwike, and the lord Guy Brian entring into the synod, required instantlie that three yeares tenth might be granted, to answer the charge whereat the king had béene in his continuall warres for the glorie of his countrie. Which tenth the cleargie might well paie, and ought not to denie, because they were free and not troubled with anie personall labor of those warres: vpon the which (without contradiction of anie) the whole tenth was granted. In which yeare also, pope Urban the fift did sharplie command this William the archbishop, that he should dissolue all vnions of ecclesiasticall benefices, with their impropriations made to monasteries, and not permit anie to be made hereafter. But this precept was soone forgotten by the popes death, and neuer after renewed.

1369 In the three and fortith yeare of Edward the third Steph. Brich.

1370 In the foure and fortith yeare of Edward the third.

In the time of this archbishop, the monasterie of the Carthusians began in London, at the charges of Michaell Northburge bishop of that citie, and Walter Mannie or Mennie knight, about the yeare of Christ one thousand three hundred and fiftie, being the foure and twentith yeare of Edward the third; and was in the yeare one thousand three hundred threescore and ten, being the foure and fortith yeare of the said Edward the third, finished by the said Walter Mennie. This done, the king remoueth all spirituall officers, placing temporall men in their roomes: but their gouernment being found far worse than that of the spiritualtie (as was by some, fauoring and following the cleargie, put into the kings mind) they were restored to their former offices. The king held a parlement, during which there was a synod of the cleargie kept at London in Pauls church the foure and twentith daie of Aprill, to which were sent by the king, Robert Thorp chancellor (perhaps the same Robert Thorp, which before is called the kings iustice) and sir Richard Scrope treasuror (whome a learned man somewhat miscalling, doth name Thomas Scrope) both succeeding after the cleargie was remoued. These men required a subsidie of fiftie thousand pounds, to be granted by the cleargie, to such the kings excessiue charges of the warres. But the cleargie shewed that the church was drawne drie by the infinit charge of those warres, and that therefore they were not able to giue anie more, for which cause the kings messenger went awaie that daie, who a few daies following, returned with a more prepared tale, but profited not anie whit the better thereby.

Charterhouse built in London.

1371 In the fiue & fortith yeare of Edward the third.

Polychro. continuat. Ex archiuis.

Whereupon this archbishop William, following the minds of the king and the nobilitie, did proroge the synod from Paules church to the chapell of the Sauoie the duke of Lancasters house, commanding euerie one to be there present. And although manie were absent at the time appointed, yet by the laboring of the duke of Lancaster and of the nobilitie, but especiallie by the speeches of Edward the kings sonne called the Blacke prince (who promised to procure of his father manie liberties to the cleargie) they which were present condescended to the paiment of fiftie thousand pounds. This done, the archbishop William increasing in yeares, was so weake and sickelie of bodie, that he did nothing for the space of two yeares, but rested sicke at home. But in the first yeare of his translation by the kings procurement, he called a synod in the church of Pauls in London, where going vp into the pulpit he made a Latine sermon vpon this theame: Veritas liberauit nos. Which when he had ended, he was throughinfirmitie inforced to depart the synod, and in his place to substitute the bishop of London. In which synod there was a subsidie required of the cleargie for the king: but they complained that they were so impouerished and weakened but few yeares past, by their charges to the king, and that the more also, because they were no lesse euerie yeare called vpon by the king than by the pope, that they were not able to succor them, vnlesse his intollerable yoke might be taken from their necks; and that they might with more ease relieue the kings necessitie: with which condition, a yearelie tenth was granted to the king. But William Courtneie then bishop of Hereford, being afterward archbishop of Canturburie, vsing the nobilitie of his kinred, for he was 1374 In the eight and fortith yeare of Edward the third.

soone

sonne to the earle of Deuonshire, did stoutlie offer himselfe in the middest of the senat, and said with a lowd voice, that neither he nor the cleargie of his diocesse would giue anie thing, before the king had remedied those calamities, which the cleargie had so long suffered. The synod thus passed ouer, there were ambassadors sent from the king to the pope, to deale with him, that he should not hereafter make anie prouision or reseruation of the void benefices, that such as were bishops, should fullie inioie the cathedrall and conuentuall churches after the old maner and custome, be confirmed of their metropolitan: and besides, that they should further open to the pope the greeues wherewith the church of England was ouercharged. To whome the pope gaue answer inclosed in writing; whereunto the king would haue written againe by the opinion of the cleargie and of the nobilitie, intreating the pope that he would determine of his requests, but they did not. Whereupon this answer receiued from the pope, it was decreed in parlement, that the cathedrall churches should freelie enioie their elections, and that the king should not by anie meanes hinder the same with his power or praier vnto the pope: but that he should to the vttermost further them with his helpe and authoritie. Which necessarie statute did after but little profit, nor was long kept, although at the first beginning it was receiued in the example of Thomas Arundell chosen bishop of Elie: whose election this William the archbishop did confirme the first kalends of Aprill in his chapell at Otford, consecrating him on the same daie. In which yeare, the fift ides of October, the archbishop being of great yeares and fallen into great sicknes died at Lambeth, when he had gouerned six yeares, eight moneths, and fourteene daies, and was buried in the bodie of the church of Canturburie betweene two pillers, against the tombe of Simon Islep, whereof at this daie I cannot perceiue anie monument of him. In whose life, and at whose request, the vniuersitie of Oxford was by pope Urban the fourth exempted from the iurisdiction of the bishop of Lincolne, and such free power giuen to the scholers to choose their chancellor, that the chancellor forthwith vpon his election, might & did execute his office, without the further admission or confirmation of anie other.

Charterhouse built in London.

1371 In the fiue & fortith yeare of Edward the third.

1375 Math. Parker. 1374 Hist. Elien. epis.

Polychro. continuat. Ex archiuis.

Oxford exempted from power of the Bishop of Lincolne.

Simon Sudburie made archbishop in this sort. After the death of William Witeslete the archbishop, the monks chose a certeine English cardinall at Rome, that had forsaken his countrie; which the king receiued with such displeasure, that he tooke aduise for the banishment of them, aswell out of the kingdome, as out of the monasterie. But pope Gregorie the 11, to reconcile the king and the monks, reiected that election; and by the kings consent gaue the archbishoprike to Simon Sudburie then bishop of London, who by proper name was called Tibold, receiuing that surname of his parents, and the other name of Sudburie from the place of his birth; his fathers name being Nigellus Tibold, of Sudburie in Suffolke, borne of gentlemanlie familie in the parish of saint George. This Simon Sudburie from his youth was brought vp in learning, by means whereof he receiued the degree to be doctor of the lawes, which he studied in France and Italie, being sometime domesticall chapleine to pope Innocent the sixt, and (as saith Matthew Parker) Causarum in Romana rota auditor. By which Innocent he was made chancellor of Salisburie by waie of prouision, but after the death of Michaell Norburgh, by like prouision of the pope, made bishop of London, and in the end attained to be bishop of Canturburie, receiuing (for that last translation to Canturburie) his bulls at London the first of June. This archbishop a worthie and liberall person, and a man of great fame, was most wickedlie vpon Tower hill, with manie other great estates, beheaded by those execrable Kentish rebels, Wat Tiler, and his wicked followers. This bishop doing manie good deeds, repared the wals (fallen downe for age) about Canturburie, and first built the west gate thereof, with a college of secular clearks at Sudburie, inriching the same with inheritances when he was bishop of London, and before that he was aduanced to the archbishops see of Canturburie.

Simon Sudburie.

Steph. Brichin. Walsingh.

1374 In the eight and fortith yeare of Edward the third.

1375 In the nine and fortith yeare of Edward the third.

1381 In the fourth yeare of Richard the second. Archiui. Ste. Brichinton.

William Courtneie, borne of a noble house of the Courtneies, being the sonne of Hugh Courtneie earle of Deuonshire, did in his youth aplie the ciuill & canon law, and so became a clerke, obteining three prebends in the three churches, of Bath, Excester, and Yorke. After this, in the reigne of Edward the third, and the rule of Simon Islep bishop of Canturburie, he was made bishop of Hereford, from whense he was translated to London, after that Simon Sudburie was remoued from that see to Canturburie, and from London, following the said Simon, he was after the death of that Simon Sudburie aduanced to the see of Canturburie, being translated thither by Urban the first, through the authoritie of his prouision, not knowing that the monks of Canturburie had chosen him thereunto: who being thus translated, the pope by like prouision gaue the bishoprike of London vnto Robert Braibrooke, the bull of translation of which Courtneie to Canturburie, being publikelie read the ninth of Januarie in Christs church of Canturburie. After which, receiuing his temporalties of the king, and doing his homage therefore, he went to Lambeth, whither came a monke vnto him, sent from the prior and couent of Canturburie, with the archbishops crosse, who the twelft of Januarie deliuered it vnto the archbishop, sitting in his chapell, with these words: Pater reuerende, nuntius sum summi regis, qui te rogat, mandat, & præcipit, vt ecclesiam suam regendam suscipias, eámque diligas & protegas. In cuius signum nuntij, summi regis vexillum tibi trado ferendum. Which when the archbishop had receiued of the prior, he cast this doubt, whether it were lawfull for him to beare his crosse, before that he had receiued the pall from the pope or no: and vpon that question arose another doubt, which was about the coronation of the queene, belonging to the archbishop, whether he might also do it before he had the pall: of which wonderfull doubt he desired not to be resolued of the lawyers, but of the monks of Canturburie, who easilie dissolued the same, alleging custome therefore, and bringing forth example of others which had vsed the same. And although the archbishop thus persuaded, went with his crosse borne before him; yet he did it not but subtilie, with this caution, that the same was not borne in contempt of the church of Rome: and so on twelft daie after, he crowned the queene at Westminster. The next spring following, he dispatched Thomas Cheineie a worthie knight vnto the pope, to whom and to John Trefnault an Englishman, and maister of the popes palace, he gaue power as his procurators to demand the pall of pope Urban: which obteined, Thomas Cheineie returned, brought the pall, and first gaue it to the bishop of London; who the first of Maie in a great assemblie of people, did with accustomed pompe and solemnitie deliuer the same to the archbishop, sitting in the chapell of his manor of Croidon. These things thus solemnelie done, he first in the administration of his bishoprike did by ecclesiasticall censure appeale the bailiffes of Canturburie by laie power, chalenging the punishment of adulterie, and such like crimes belonging to the clergie; 1381 In the fourth yeare of Richard the second.

William Courtneie.

Verba archiui.

1382 In the fift yeare of Richard the second.

he held a synod in the Frier preachers of London, in which he damned manie of the assertions of Iohn Wickliffe as hereticall and full of errors; whose opinions had not onelie entered into the learneder sort, but also into manie of the common people, and compelled Robert Rig chancellor of Oxford, and Thomas Brigwell professor of diuinitie, being suspected of Wickliffes doctrine, to recant and abiure the same. At what time also by publike sentence, he condemned of heresie, Nicholas Hereford, Philip Repinton, professors of diuinitie, and Iohn Ashton maister of arts, because they would not be remoued from Wickliffes opinions: but they appealed to the pope from that sentence, all which notwithstanding, the archbishop (reiecting their appeale) did then excommunicat them. At what time the doctrine of Wickliffe began here to be commanded to be denounced heretical, and the followers thereof to be called heretikes, by the appointment of this bishop at Oxford and at London: for the king ioining himselfe to this spirituall seueritie, gaue authoritie by his letters written to the archbishop, to his suffragans, and to the chancellor of Oxford, to apprehend and imprison all such as were suspected for those opinions: by which means there was great crueltie shewed to such as professed the euangelicall doctrine, and were followers of Wickliffe. Besides which there was also another synod of the cleargie held at Oxford, in which a subsidie was granted to the king by the demand of the lord Hugh Segraue the kings treasuror: at what time the said Nicholas Hereford, Philip Repinton, and Iohn Ashton by oth renounced the opinions of Wickliffe, and were absolued from the excommunication. But Iohn Wickliffe (as hath Matthew Parker, deseruing well for his great skill and trauell in furthering the renewing of antiquities for the benefit of his countrie) hiding himselfe here and there, and auoiding the persecutions, was at length on saint Thomas daie taken with the palsie; who continuing some long time in sickenesse, vntill the feast of saint Siluester, constantlie died in those opinions, which he had dispersed abroad. This archbishop did excommunicat one Richard Ilmonger of Ailesford in Kent, because he brake the liberties of the church (as they were then termed) in that he punished such offenses, as were of right to be corrected by the prelats. But he humblie requiring to be absolued, by oth promised neuer to breake the iurisdiction of the church, and to receiue what punishment so euer the archbishop would laie vpon him for his rashnesse. Whereupon he had penance inioined, first that he should at Westmalling on three market daies be beaten with cudgels in the assemblie of the people, & that done, receiue the like punishment at Maidstone, and at Canturburie, in which last punishment he should go barefot into the church, and offer a taper of wax of fiue pounds weight to the tome of S. Thomas, all which if he did not performe, that then he should run into the danger of his former excommunication. The archbishop which before had molested the Wickliffeans fell now at variance with the erle of Arundell, whose seruants had emptied a poole of the archbishops in his manor of Southmalling, in the diocesse of Chichester, taking awaie the fish thereof. With which the archbishop greatlie moued, commanded the bishop of Chichester to excommunicat the theeues, whom he termed sacrilegers and spoilers of the church of Canturburie, whereupon the earle went to the king, & required that he would take the matter into his hands, whereby he might auoid the execution of that excommunication. For which cause the archbishop wrote to the bishop of Chichester to reuoke the same sentence, when he vnderstood that the king had taken the matter to himselfe. Not long after there was a parlement held at Cambridge in the Carmelit friers, at what time also in the church of saint Maries, there was a synod celebrat by the procurement of the king, who had a tenth granted vnto him on this condition, that himselfe before the kalends of October next should passe with an armie into France. In this yeare sir Iohn Triuet the kings chiefe iustice fell from his horse, and brake his intrals. After this the archbishop determined to make a metropolitane visitation in his prouince: wherefore without contradiction he visited the diocesse of Rochester, Chichester, Bath and Wels. But when he came to Excester, and had begun his visitation, he prorogued the same from daie to daie, from place to place, suspending and hindering the iurisdiction aswell of the bishops as of all other prelats of the diocesse, by his metropolitane iurisdiction, as Simon Mepham his predecessor would haue done before. The bishop of Excester offended therewith, gaue commandement through all his diocesse, that they should not obeie the archbishop in his visitation, and that they should not demand anie ordinarie law or right in anie cause belonging to the clergie, to be ministred vnto them of him or his inferior prelats; further excommunicating all others that did the contrarie: which prohibition and excommunication the archbishop did vndoo by contrarie edict. Whereupon the bishop of Excester did foure times appeale vnto Rome, and fixed his appellations in writing vpon the church doores of Excester. But the archbishop after one sort reiecting them all, went forth in his visitation, citing the bishop by certeine edicts to answer to certeine articles laid against him. Whereupon one of the bishop of Excester his seruants did in the towne of Topsham, or Torsham, take Peter Hill the archbishops messenger, made him eat and swallow downe the parchment and sealed wax, wherein was comprehended the archbishops mandat to cite the bishop of Excester. For the apprehension of whom and punishment whereof (as though they had beene rebels) the king wrote to Edward Courtneie earle of Deuonshire, and others, that they should serch them out, and forthwith lead them to the archbishop. Which being so done, they were in this sort punished by the archbishops appointment; first, that they should in the churches of Canturburie, S. Paules of London, and of Excester (on certeine appointed festiuall daies therefore) go in their shirts before the crosse, in the time of procession, with burning tapers in their hands; then that they should sustein and nourish a preest dailie to saie masse at the tome of the earle of Deuonshire; and lastlie, that euerie one of them should paie twentie shillings to repare the wals of Excester; of the execution whereof the deans of Canturburie London, and Excester, should certifie the archbishop vnder their seales.

This done, the archbishop proceeded in the affairs of his bishoprike, and remoued both from his place and order William Bid doctor of law, aduocat of the arches: bicause he had counselled the bishop of Excester against the dignitie of the church of Canturburie. During which, the bishop of Excester did still pursue his appeale to the pope against the archbishop; but when he saw his cause both inferior and weaker, and that the king fauoured the archbishop, he left his appeale and submitted himselfe to his metropolitane; and acknowledging his rashnes against the archbishops, craued pardon and obteined it. At which time also the bishop of Salisburie did take the like courage vpon him, when he was to be visited, determining to resist the archbishop: but he as a man more temperat, thought to proceed more warilie 1388 In the three yeare of Richard the second.

Matt. Parker.

Of these articles and for all the proces, see Registr. Courtneie. fol. 25. Tho. Walsing. Henrie Knighton canon of Leicester.

1383 In the first yeare of Richard the second.

Ex archiuis.

Richard Fitzallen earle of Arundell.

Registr. Courtneie. fol 80.

The bishop of Excester refuseth the archbishops visitation.

Archbishop of Canturburie visiteth the diocesse of Salisburie.

warelie therein according to law, than the bishop of Excester did. For when he supposed that the archbishop was onelie supported (for his strength of visitation) by the power of pope Urban: this bishop of Salisburie after the death of Urban, procured from his successor pope Boniface a priuilege for himselfe and his dioceses, that they should not be visited by the authoritie of Urban, supposing that the archiepiscopall and metropolitane dignitie had not beene of value, vnlesse it had beene vnderpropped by the buls of pope Urban. But the archbishop being more skilfull in the law, more grounded by vse and experience and more fauoured both in the English and Romane court, did (when the bishop of Salisburie came to him vnto Croidon, thinking to be exempted by the popes priuilege from visitation, by shewing pope Boniface his buls) by a decree gaue forth that he would visit the bishop of Salisburie by his metropolitane authoritie: further by edict commanding the bishop of Salisburie to obeie his visitation, and at a certeine daie to appeare in the church of his bishoprike of Salisburie. At which daie the bishop of Salisburie so trusting to the hornes of his weake bull, was absent, often appealing from the archbishop, and complaining of the iniurie that he did vnto him, and to his dioceſians. But the archbishop neither fearing nor forbearing the contumacie of this man (with such like moderation as he did the resistance of the bishop of Excester) forthwith excommunicated the bishop of Salisburie, and further accused him of periurie and contempt, bicause that he had departed by appellation and buls of priuileges, from that subiection which he sware to the see of Canturburie at the time of his consecration. Wherupon the bishop of Salisburie (feared with this continuall seueritie, and the example of his brother in function the bishop of Excester) was receiued againe into fauour, as appeareth by these words of Matthew Parker: Cùm iure succumbendum sibi fuit (which was the bishop of Salisburie) appellationibus renunciauit, & clarissimo viro comite Sarisburiensi aliisque nonnullis exhortationibus cùm se subiecisset, archiepiscopi in gratiam receptus est. Which done, the archbishop did quietlie performe the remnant of his visitation. This yeare after that the archbishop had kept the place fifteene yeares eleuen moneths & two daies, he died at Maidstone the daie before the kalends of August. In which towne (plucking downe the old worke) he founded and built a college of secular preests: besides which he renewed the church of Peham (fallen downe) to the vse of the sicke brethren, next vnto which he built foure new houses, bequeathing to the reparations of the church of Canturburie, with the cloister and wals thereof one thousand marks, and further gaue to that church an image of the Trinitie of siluer and guilt, and six apostles standing about it of the weight of an hundred and sixtie pounds, beside manie books which he left to the same house: he was buried in the church of Canturburie next to the shrine of Thomas Becket on the south side,

Thomas Arundell (the sonne of the earle of Arundell) when he was a yong man applied himselfe to diuinitie, became a spirituall man, and was made archdeacon of Canton. Who being then but a subdeacon, was made bishop of Elie, from thense remooued to Yorke, and at length by the popes prouision aduanced to Canturburie, hauing beene also chancellor of England, of whom it is written that he died for hunger: for being striken with death, he laie long and could neither speake nor swallow, whereby in the end he perished with famine. This man being bishop seauentéene yeares and one moneth, was buried in the north part of the church of Canturburie, who at his entring into the bishoprike, did build the steeple of Canturburie, and placed in the same fiue bels, consecrated More pontificio, with these names; the first was called the holie and vndiuided Trinitie; the second, the virgine Marie, the third the angell Gabriell, the fourth S. Blase, and the fift saint John the euangelist.

Bels consecrated.

Henrie Chicheleie bishop of saint Dauids, being chosen of the monks of Canturburie (by the kings licence) to the sée of Canturburie, would not yet accept the same, nor yet disagrée thereunto; but referred the whole matter to the popes determination. Wherevpon pope John the three and twentith, by waie of prouision made the said Chicheleie archbishop of Canturburie, vnder which title he entered into the bishoprike. This man was borne in Higham Feris in Northamptonshire, and was instructed in the ciuill and canon law in the new college of Oxenford built by William Wickham bishop of Winchester: after which being made doctor of both lawes, he was accepted into the archdeaconrie of Salisburie by the bishop of that sée. Which Henrie in processe of time wiselie dispatching manie affairs for the king, and performing manie ambassages, was by the kings precept aduanced to the bishoprikes first of saint Dauids, and then of Canturburie, receiuing the pall the nine and twentith of Julie by the hands of Henrie Beaufort bishop of Winchester, which done, he redeemed the halfe yeares reuenues of the sée of Canturburie due to the king during the vacancie of the bishoprike, for the summe of six hundred markes, and held a synod, in which the daie dedicated to S. John of Beuerleie was instituted to be holie or festiuall. After the synod he consecrated bishops, John Wakering to Norwich, Edmund Lacie to Hereford, and John Chandler to Salisburie.

Henrie Chicheleie.

1415

1416

S. John of Beuerleie his daie appointed holie daie.

This bishop shortlie following called another synod at London, in which there was order taken for the prouision and necessarie sustentation of scholers, as writeth the graue man Matthew Parker in these words: In hac synodo Robertus Gilbert sacræ theologiæ professor Mertonensis collegij Oxonienſ. præses, longa & diserta oratione egit, vt scholaribus, quorum in literarum studijs industria viguit, attribuantur, & ad victum interim necessaria & proponantur maturis præmia: hunc sequutus Thomas Kingston legum doctor, & aduocatus curiæ de arcubus pari facundia pro Cantabrigiensibus interceſit. Quibus suadentibus decretum est, vt ecclesiasticorum beneficiorum patroni, ea vacantia, his qui graduum dignitatibus ab academicis donata sunt, deinceps conferant, gradus & possessionis ratione iuxta beneficiorum census & valores habita. Hoc saluberrimum decretum ab artium magistris atque professoribus, qui sua multitudine reliquos in vniuersitatibus regentes superabant, cùm in scholarium congregatione de eo approbando ageretur, temerè tanquam iuuenili multitudine reiectum & repudiatum est, non alia sanè ratione quàm quòd doctoribus, aliisque, quibus ordine & loco essent inferiores, in adipiscendis beneficijs pares esse non poterant. Thus much Matthew Parker, after which in the first yeere of his consecration, this Chicheleie did hold an other synod at London, wherein amongst other things Richard Walker a priest of Worcester being giltie of witchcraft, did publikelie at Paules crosse in London doo penance therefore, and abiure the same, openlie burning his books and instruments of such arts. Then in the eight yeare of his consecration he assembled another synod at Paules in London; in which the clergie granted to the king a tenth, in consideration whereof the king bestowed on them this priuilege, that no purueior of his house should touch the goods, or enter the possessions of the clergie, with manie other things set downe by Matthew Parker, which were: Vt clerici in foro regio capitalium criminum postulati datis fideiussoribus iudicio sisti carceribus liberentur: tertiò ut

1417

Prouision for the scholers of Oxford and Cambridge.

1419

1421

Contention betweene the archbishop of Canturburie and the bishop of Salisburie, about the visitation of the archbishop.

Regist. Courtnele. fol 86.

The bishop of Excester disobeieth the archbishops visitation.

Regist. Court. fol. 146.

1395.

A college of preists founded in Maidstone.

Thomas Arundell.

1396

Thom. Gascoi. in dictionario theologico.

Archbishop of Canturburie visiteth the Diocese of Salisburie.

ot long 1388
dge in In the twelft church yeare of Richard the set by the cond.
granted before the an armie Criuet the and brake rmined to prouince:
the dio-
s. But visita-
, from he iurisprelats of iction, as aue done therewith, cesse, that s visitati-ordinarie clergie, or pre-hat did muniarie edict.
ure times lations in fer. But them all, bishop by les laid a-of Exceham, or nessenparch-ehended p of Excenishment
) the king
f Deuonn out, and ich being so the archbi-
the churand of s there-time of nds; then ceest dailie of Deuon-should paie Excester; anturburie archbishop the af-rom his , aduo-o the bi-he church of f Excester against the oth inferior the archbi-himselfe to his rashnes obteined urie did as to be
: but he ceed more warilie

presbyteri castrati felonum id est homicidarum pœna afficerentur. Tum in eadem synodo Gulielmus Tailor liberalium artium professor, qui in Wigornien. diœcesi neque sanctos neque Christum Iesum ratione humanitatis esse pro salute christiana inuocandos docuit, quoniam eadem & similia dogmata ante coram Thoma Arundel Cantuarien. archiepisc. confessus & detestatus est, tanquam in hæresim relapsus, clericali ordine atque gradu priuatus, & laicali potestati traditus est. Ad hanc autem synodum Iohannes Rikinghal Cantabrigien. vniuersitatis cancellarius quoniam abfuit, ab archiepiscopo citatus venit, qui se cum Iohanne Castel Oxonien. cancellario coniunxit, illúdque de conferendis beneficijs Cantabrigiæ vel Oxonij studentibus decretum, quod ab artium (vt diximus) professoribus ante receptum & admissum non fuit, renouari impetrauerunt. Hinc autem doctis viris concesso à synodo præmio, impuri indoctique fratres diu restiterunt. Sed Henricus quintus rex literarum studio ductus, contra petulantem fratrum instantiam, ad synodum de eo interponendo decreto scripsit, idque in parlamento postea confirmauit. So farre Matthew Parker in the life of this Henrie Chicheleie archbishop of Canturburie. Another synod was holden by this archbishop, wherein it was decreed, that none should exercise ecclesiasticall iurisdiction, vnlesse he had taken some degree of the ciuill or canon law in the vniuersities of Oxford or Cambridge. Beside which, in a synod after holden, it was enacted, that the feast of S. Frideswid should be kept holie daie. Whereunto we will adde an other like synod held at London by this archbishop, being the last except one which he kept. In this synod was question touching bearing of the charge of the bishops going to the councell of Basill by all the clergie; but the inferior prelats would not impart anie thing thereunto, for it was no charge to be laid vpon them, because that bishops and abbats had onelie places in generall councels; wherefore there was foure pence of the pound onelie leuied of all bishops and abbats to defraie the expense of such as went vnto that generall councell. To which synod thus held at London did Eugenius the pope direct his letters, wherein he declared, that he had giuen the bishopzike of Elie by waie of prouision to Lodouike archbishop of Rone. For (as saith a writer) Fuit tum Philippus Morgan senex egregiè cordatus Elien. ordine 23, qui vitam in senectute tam diuturnam produxit, vt papæ commendationem, quam tota tunc synodus execrata est, morte Lodouici qui ante eum obijt irritam frustraret. But truelie sauing correction (which I speake in reuerence to that learned booke) I suppose it was not so: for in the catalog of the bishops of Elie, Lodouike Lisburne archbishop of Rone succeeded Philip Morgan in the said bishopzike, and held the same after the death of Morgan six yeares, and so manie moneths, if the records be true which I haue seene of that see. To this archbishop did William Lindwood dedicat the archiepiscopall constitutions which he did gather togither, digest in good order, and expound with learned comments; this William Lindwood being first officiall of the court of the arches, after lord keeper of the priue seale, and at length aduanced to the bishopzike of saint Dauids.

1430 1434 1438

William Lindwood made the archiepiscopall constitutions.

Chicheleie built a college and hospitall where he was borne.

This archbishop Chicheleie, desirous to leaue some memories of charitable works, did in Higham ferries, where (as is before said) he was borne, build a statelie college, in which he placed secular clerks and prebends, indued with benefices and ecclesiasticall dignities. Beside which also in the same towne, he erected an hospitall for poore men, and procured much land and reliefe to be giuen thereunto, which after was augmented by his brethren Robert and William Chicheleie citizens of London. With the finishing of which building, the bishop did not yet rest as one satisfied therewith, for he did also in Oxford erect a famous college for learning called Allsoules college, and an other college there also called saint Barnard, which was afterward increased and augmented with liuings and lands by sir Thomas White knight citizen and maior of London, and S. Johns college. Moreouer, he repared the librarie at Canturburie, and furnished the same with books of all sorts, who during his life builded his owne towne wherein he would be buried in the church of Canturburie by the consent of the monks; and first commanded the procurators of the court of the arches to be apparelled (whilest the iudge did sit) in that attire which the bachellors of art do vse in the vniuersitie. This worthie archbishop died the twelfe daie of Aprill, in the yeare of our redemption one thousand foure hundred fortie and three, being the one and twentith yeare of the reigne of king Henrie the first, after that he gouerned the same see nine and twentie yeares and one moneth, being buried in the north part of the presbyterie or chaire of Canturburie in that towne which he had made in his life time, with this epitaph, which is there yet to be seene:

Chicheleie builded Allsoules college and saint Barnard college, now saint Johns college in Oxford.

Chicheleie repared the librarie of Canturburie, and builded his towne.

Hic iacet Henricus Chichelee legum doctor, quondam cancellarius Sarum, qui anno octauo Henrici quarti regis Anglorum ambasiator transmissus, in ciuitate Senense per manus eiusdem papæ in Meneuensem episcopum consecratus est: hic etiam Henricus anno secundo Henrici quinti in hac sancta ecclesia in archiepiscopum pastoraliter à Iohanne papa 23 ad eandem translatus est, qui obijt An. Dom. millesimo quadringentesimo quadragesimo tertio, mensis Aprilis die 12.

Cœtus sanctorum concorditer iste precetur,
Vt Deus ipsorum meritis sibi propitietur.

John Stafford, sonne of the earle Stafford, was borne at Abbatsburie in Dorsetshire, did follow the studie of the lawes, who being in the end made doctor thereof, did vse the office of an aduocat in the court of the arches, whom Henrie Chicheleie archbishop of Canturburie did substitute to be his vicar generall in spirituall causes, and hearer of matters perteining to the ecclesiasticall court: adding further to these publike functions, the deanrie of saint Martins in London, and the prebend of Merton belonging to the church of Lincolne. Whereupon this Stafford being knowne vnto king Henrie the fift, was called to the priuie councell, and had the keeping of the priuie seale. Then was he made tresuror of England, deane of Wels, and canon of the church of Salisburie, being after the death of king Henrie the fift aduanced to the bishopzike of Bath (by waie of prouision) by Martine the pope. Which done, he was chancellor of England, and by Eugenius the pope translated from Bath to the archbishopzike of Canturburie. Who receiuing the buls of his translation in the bishops house of Bath, went the next daie to the king at Eltham, where he did his homage for his temporalties, and receiued the pall the three and twentith of August sent from the said Eugenius, and deliuered vnto him by the bishop of Rochester. But because I will speake more of this man in another large booke of the liues of the chancellors of England, as I will also all other archbishops of Canturburie, which haue possessed that place, I will saie no more of him in this discourse; but that being taken with an ague in the yeare of Christ one thousand foure hundred fiftie and two, at Lambeth, he went to Maidstone, where (after that he had beene bishop eight yeares, ten moneths, and fiftene daies) he departed the world. Two daies after whose death his bodie was caried to Canturburie by the monks clothed in white, being after laid in the ground, neere to the place on which happened the martyrdome of Thomas Becket before the new chapell of the virgine Marie, about whose image and vnder whose feete are written these verses in manie

1443

John Stafford.

places

places defaced, the brasse being stollen awaie, as is yet to be seene in the church of Canturburie: which epitaph although it be vnperfect, yet I will not refuse to set it downe to perpetuate the same, least in following time it might be all spoiled, as some part thereof alredie is. About the tombe are these verses:

Aurea lux modico præsul iam conditur isto,
Ecclesiæ splendor, gloria, lumen, apex,
Stafford vt fidus Anglos sua lumina sparsit,
Regni dum celsis fungitur officijs,
Nam cancellarius fuit ac thesaurarius æquus,
Heu nequeo———

Linea dulce indicant nonulla obliterari.

———dolet,
M. quingenteno quater hunc dempto duodeno,
Hic anno Domini morte ruit celeri,
Vrbani festo, sibi Christe quies precor esto,
Defunctus mundo viuit & ille polo.
Nosce te ipsum.

Under whose feet also are these following verses placed, being a dialog betweene the grauestone and the passenger, expressing his person and honor:

Cuius fuit nunties, quem celas saxea moles?
Stafford antistes fuerat dictúsque Iohannes,
Qua sedit sede marmor quæso simul ede,
Pridem Bathoniæ regni totius, & inde
Primas egregius, pro præsule funde precatus,
Aureolam gratus hunc det de virgine natus.

John Kempe. John Kempe borne at Wie in Kent, being doctor of the law, was made archdeacon of Durham, after which, in the second yeare of Henrie Chichleie archbishop of Canturburie, he was made deane of the arches: then, as saith Matthew Parker in the life of this Kempe, Normaniæ ducatus præfectus prætorio fuit. From thense he was chosen bishop of Rochester, who sitting there three yeares, was translated to Chichester; which he casting behind also, was in the yeare following remooued to London, where when he had remained foure yeares, he was made archbishop of Yorke; and lastlie by the popes prouision and the monks election aduanced to the see of Canturburie; being also made cardinall first of the 1452 title of saint Balbine, and then of the title of saint Rufine, by which he had as manie ecclesiasticall honors and promotions as might be, vnlesse that he had beene pope. He died at Lambeth, after that he had beene bishop of Canturburie one yeare and fiue and twentie weeks, the eleuenth kalends of Aprill. 1453 1454 as saith Onuphrius. See the cardinals, pag. 1167. After which in the kalends of Aprill his bodie was caried to Canturburie, where his funerals were performed by the bishops of London and Rochester and the monks of Canturburie, and was buried betweene the archbishops seat and the tombe of John Stratford, at the south doore of the chaire. In whose funerall almes, euerie one of the church of Canturburie that was in holie orders, had thirteene shillings & foure pence giuen vnto him, and the others but six shillings and eight pence. Which his benignitie and liberalitie is recorded to none other end, but to shew that he did in these manie yeres and manie remoues to so manie honors, gather great riches, wherewith he aduanced his kinred, preferring some in Kent to the order of knighthood, and others to other dignities. Of this man shall be more spoken in my large booke of the chancellors of England, at this time concluding this discourse of him with this epitaph, being yet extant on his tombe in Canturburie: Hic iacet reuerendissimus in Christo pater & dominus Iohannes Kemp, tituli sancti Rufini sacrosanctæ Romanæ ecclesiæ presbyter cardinalis, qui obijt 20 die mensis Martij anno Domini 1453, cuius animæ, &c.

Thomas Bourchier bishop of Elie, vpon licence for that cause obteined of the king, was chosen archbishop of Canturburie by the monks the ninth kalends of Maie in the feast of saint George; the same being knowne to the pope in the kalends of June, who forthwith by his buls confirmed him in the same: of whom I haue spoken in my treatise of the cardinals, pag. 1167, who died in the yere of Christ one thousand foure hundred foure score and six, after 1454 that he had béene bishop of Canturburie two and thirtie yeres, and was buried in a sumptuous tombe of marble and alabaster, situat on the north side of the high altar of the church of Canturburie, with this epitaph: Hic iacet reuerendus in Christo pater Thomas Bourchier sacrosanctæ Romanæ ecclesiæ, tituli sancti Ciriaci in Thermis, presbyter cardinalis, archiepiscopus huius ecclesiæ, qui obijt 30 die mensis Martij, anno Dom. 1486, cuius animæ, &c. He gaue to the vniuersitie of Cambridge one hundred and twentie pounds. Thomas Bourchier.

John Worton borne at Bere in Dorsetshire, did applie his studie at Oxford, who increasing in the ciuill and canon law, was after an aduocat in the arches: then he was by Thomas Bourchier archbishop of Canturburie endowed with manie spirituall liuings, and commended to king Henrie the first, who made him of his councell. After the death of which king, he was also in like sort preferred to the councell of Edward the fourth, who made him bishop of Elie, and one of his executors. But after, being committed to the tower by Richard the third, and then deliuered to the custodie of the duke of Buckingham, from whom he fled beyond the sea, he returned to England in the first yeare of the reigne of Henrie the seuenth, and was made chancellor of England, & then archbishop of Canturburie, being translated thither from Elie by pope Innocent, in the yeare of our redemption one thousand foure 1486 hundred foure score & six. In whose first yeare of the archbishoprike he held a synod at London. Then (after that he had ruled the same archsee of Canturburie thirteene years) he died, and was buried in the place which he had builded therefore in his life time. 1499 After the death of this Worton the monks of Canturburie (by licence therefore obteined of the king) required Thomas Langton bishop of Winchester, to be their archbishop of Canturburie: but he was consumed with the pestilence (which in one yere deuoured thirtie thousand in England, amongst which 1500 was Thomas Rotheram archbishop of Yorke) before he had receiued his confirmation from the pope. After whose death, Richard Fox was aduanced to Winchester, Thomas Sauage bishop of London was translated to Yorke, and William Warham obteined the see of London. John Worton.

Henrie Deane, being a monke and ruler of the monasterie of Langton, was (when Perkin Warbecke the counterfet king & rebell, supported by the Irishmen, did seeke to inuade England, & to displace Henrie the seuenth) by especial choise therefore sent into Ireland by the said Henrie the seuenth, and made chancellor of that Iland. Who going thither with sir Edward Poinings then lord deputie, did driue Perkin Warbecke into the boggie & inaccessible parts of Ireland amongst the wild Irish, and speedilie brought the other part of the Iland to obedience. During the time of which his office in that realme, he was in his absence created bishop of Bangor for the nerenesse of that place vnto Ireland: which bishoprike he did almost restore to his full perfection, and to all such lands as manie by force and other waies had taken from it, which see being by such meanes but poore & maimed of hir liuings, caused the kings of England alwaies to endow the bishops thereof with some wealthie abbeie for the better Henrie Deane. The decaie of the bishoprike of Bangor.

better maintenance of his estate. Whereupon when the bishops of that see for more profit were absent from the bishoprike, and remained alwaies at such abbeie, neglecting the bishoprike, the gentlemen neere vnto it did by little and little chalenge & hold part of those lands to themselues, whereby in time this bishoprike became verie small, and so continued when this Henrie Deane came vnto it. But this bishop being verie wise and carefull, and one that looked further into matters than his negligent predecessors were accustomed, did find out what lands were so deteined, who held them, by what right, and how long they had so done. Whereupon in conclusion he got almost all the same lands to the see againe, by the helpe of the common people which supported him therein, for the declaration whereof I thinke it not vnfit to set downe the maner thereof, somewhat after this sort.

He restoreth the bishoprike of Bangor to the lands lost.

There is on the north part of the Ile of Mona or Mon (now called Angleseie, but falslie in Polydor made to be the Ile of Man) an Iland placed betweene the promontories of Cornetí, and that head which is called Caput sanctum, or Holie head: this Iland is in the old Brittish tong termed ynys i. Moyls Honnicit, that is, The Iland of porpasses or other beasts and sea foules, and obteining that name because of the great plentie of sea beasts and birds that were taken there. Now this Iland being sometime, and that anciently belonging to the bishoprike of Bangor, this Henrie Deane found possessed with vnrightfull owners. Whereupon, when the inhabitants would not restore the same, but did with force resist him: he setting vpon them by sea and land, did with strength recouer the same, and redeliuer it to the bishoprike of Bangor. Besides which, he bestowed great charge in that place, in reparing the church and bishops palace there: both which long before in the time of Henrie the fourth were destroied with fire by the rebell Owen Glendor. After which, this Henrie Deane was remoued from Bangor to Salisburie, who departing from that bishoprike of Bangor, did yet leaue there the miter, and the pastorall crosier to his successor Peneus, with this condition, that he should proceed in the reparing and restitution of the church of Bangor as he had alreadie begun, which was accordinglie performed by the successor.

Matt. Parker in vita Henrici Dener. pag. 346.

After that this Henrie was translated to Salisburie, he remained not long there, but was after the death of Morton aduanced to the see of Canturburie, in which yeare, pope Alexander did at Rome celebrat the yeare of iubile; which iubile and the yeare ended, the same pope sent the pall to the archbishop of Canturburie by Adrian of Castilia his secretarie, which the bishop of Lichfield and Couentrie (hauing power therefore from the pope) did deliuer vnto the bishop at Lambeth. Besides these things, there happened nothing worthie the remembrance in the time of this archbishop: who after that he had gouerned the see of Canturburie two yeares, died at Lambeth the fiftéenth daie of Februarie, from whense his bodie was brought along by the riuer of Thames (with three and thirtie mariners all clothed in blacke) vnto Feuersham in a barge, adorned after the mourning fashion, with burning torches and wax lights: which bodie was from Feuersham also by the same men with like funerall manner caried in a coffin to Canturburie, where he was buried by the same place on which Thomas Becket was killed, as the said Henrie had before appointed by his testament; in which he bequeathed a siluer image of saint John the euangelist, of one hundred fiftie and one ounces, which at this daie after fiue shillings the ounce amounteth to the summe of two and thirtie pounds fiftéene shillings: further bequeathing fiue hundred pounds towards the charges of his funerall. In the performance whereof, Thomas Wolseie (who was then his chaplen) with Richard Gardiner (another of his chaplens) both were by his executors appointed ouersées for his said buriall, which they executed verie sumptuouslie, setting this epitaph vpon him.

1500
1501
1502

Sub hoc marmore iacet corpus reuerendissimi in Christo patris & domini, domini Henrici Deane, quondam prior prioratus de Langhtona, deinde Banchorensis, ac successiue Sarum episcopi, postremò verò huius almæ ecclesiæ metropolitanus archiepiscopalis, qui diem suum clausit extremum apud Lambith, 15 die mensis Februarij, anno 1502, & suæ translationis ad hanc sedem anno secundo, cuius animæ propitietur Deus.

William Warham borne of a gentlemanlie familie in Hampshire, was brought vp in Winchester schoole, who being after sent to Oxford to a college of Wickhams foundation, did there in his adolescencie applie the ciuill law, and atteining to the degree of doctor therein, was after maister of the rolles, chancellor to Henrie the seauenth, and ambassador into Burgundie to Margaret duchesse of that countrie, about the remouing of hir from the defense of Perkine Warbecke. Next he was made bishop of London, chosen to that place (as saith a record of that see) in the yeare of Christ one thousand fiue hundred and three, and after remoued to Canturburie in the yeare one thousand fiue hundred and fiue, as a booke belonging to that bishoprike of London doth affirme. But Matthew Parker saith, that after the death of Deane he was remoued to Canturburie in the yeare of Christ one thousand fiue hundred and three, who receiuing his pall of the pope, was the ninth of March, which fell in Lent, inthronised in Canturburie, after the most statelie and pompious maner that might be, the whole order whereof was in a roll set out and printed by Matthew Parker bishop of Canturburie. william warham.

1503
1504
1532

This bishop going to Canturburie, tooke vp his lodging in the personage house of S. Stephans, belonging to Warham archdeacon of Canturburie, and brother to this archbishop: vpon which the archdeacon Warham had before bestowed great cost, which house comming afterward to sir Christopher Hales knight, who added somewhat thervnto, is now in the yere one thousand fiue hundred fourescore & six, in the possession of sir Roger Manwod knight, chiefe baron of the exchéker, who hath not onelie there built certeine almesrouses, but also greatlie augmented the said house with statelie buildings, aswell of places of necessarie offices, as also of state, and interteinement of strangers. At this house (I saie) did this archbishop rest himselfe, where he was taken with a deadlie disease, and being now verie old, did there (after he had gouerned the church of Canturburie eight and twentie years) depart this life, leauing his bodie to be caried to Canturburie, and there to be buried in a small chapell which he had built in his life time, besides that place where Thomas Becket was slaine in the church of Canturburie.

Thomas Cranmer borne in Notinghamshire, of an ancient & worshipfull familie of the Cranmers, was by licence obteined from king Henrie the eight (whose chaplen he was) chosen archbishop of Canturburie. But Clement the seuenth then pope of Rome (who much doubted the kings mind and fauor towards that see) was vncerteine what to do, either to receiue or reiect Cranmer for archbishop of Canturburie. At length, writing more mildlie to the king than he was accustomed, he besought him to defend Cranmer chosen to the see of Canturburie: but this labor succeeded with no good effect. For the Thomas Cranmer. Regist. Cranm. fol. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5.

the king minding to abolish the authoritie of the pope, did determine to nobilitat the church of Canturburie, and to restore the rights of the English prouinces without anie subiection to Rome. But yet the pope carefull of Cranmers obedience, and of the kings fidelitie to that see, easilie granted vnto Cranmer, that he should be consecrated of what three bishops he would; in which grant he inserted the old oth that the bishops made to the pope: which if he did not performe, he both excommunicated Cranmer then to be consecrated, and the bishop which should consecrat him. But he in his consecration before faithfull witnesses (as saith Matthew Parker) and publike notaries, did protest that the same oth onelie grew by a custome of Rome, and not of christian necessitie, and that he would not fall from the faith of a subiect due to his king by force of that oth; for which cause the oth being slightlie read ouer, he receiued his pall and consecration of the bishops of Lincolne, Excester, & Assaph; which done, taking an oth of due obedience to the king, he receiued his temporalities, paieng nine hundred duckets for his buls.

1533

This Cranmer thus made archbishop, did (beyond the opinion of manie) men by his authoritie enter the synod begun in the time of his predecessor Warham, and continued after his death by the monks of Canturburie, which had appointed Stokeslie bishop of London to be president thereof, during the vacancie of the bishoprike of Canturburie. At whose comming thither, the kings mariage with the ladie Katharine was againe called in question, which was, whether it be a prohibition of the diuine law vndispensable by the pope, that the brother shall not marie the wife of his brother carnallie knowne, he dieng without issue. Which matter was caried to the lower assemblie of the synod to debat: in the which, fourtéene did affirme, and seuen did denie the same conclusion. One doubted of it, and another said it was not a thing ordeined by the diuine law, yet dispensable by the pope. Amongst the superior part of the synod (in which the iudgements of the vniuersities of Bononia, Pauia, and Paris, touching that matter were recited) that controuersie moued (betweene the bishops Stokeslie of London and Fisher of Rochester) touching the same, did win all the fathers (which were two hundred and sixtéene, either personallie, or else by their procurator) ninetéene onelie excepted, to agrée to the iudgement of the vniuersities, as hath Matthew Parker.

But to the end this matter might be void of all controuersie, aswell of right as of fact: an other question did arise, whether the carnall copulation betweene prince Arthur and quéene Katharine were sufficientlie proued: but that was referred to such as were skilfull in the lawes and the canons: who all (except fiue or six) did allow the copulation, being after embraced by all the synod, except by the bishop of Bath and Wels: which done, both the parlement and the synod were for a time prorogued. After which, the king sent messengers to the ladie Katharine, to persuade hir willinglie to depart from the king, considering the determination of the vniuersities, and the opinions of the diuines and lawiers of England, and to be contented with the dower of prince Arthur. But she continuing stedfast in hir determination, answered that she would not be dissolued from that band, which was knit by the pope through the procurement of hir father Ferdinand. Which message inforced the king, considering the league betweene the pope & the emperor, more speedilie and vehementlie to abrogat the popes authoritie out of England; least they two ioining against him, the one in taking the part of his aunt, and the other in defending the dispensation granted from the see of Rome, might take occasion to molest the king of England therefore. Whereupon king Henrie the eight, to ioine in strength with some one great estat, that they two might equall the pope and the emperor, made a new league with the French king; and that the rather, because he heard that the pope and the king would méete the next summer at Marselles.

For which cause more fullie to vnderstand the mind of the French king, it was concluded betweene the legats of both nations, that the kings shuld talke together on the borders of both their realms, betweene Calis & Bullongne, for so a stronger amitie might be ioined betweene them. Which done accordinglie, K. Henrie after that he had declared some detracting dooings, & the popes delaies, would haue persuaded the French king to haue abolished the popes authoritie out of the dominions of France; and that if he could not safelie do it (being hindred by the iniurie of the time) that then he would faithfullie obserue this begun and continued league betweene them, and not ioine with the pope and emperor against him. Whereunto the French agreed, in respect of the obseruation of the league, shewing also a desire in himselfe to banish the popes authoritie, which he would performe as soone as he might, considering that the power of the confederat pope and emperor was not to be feared, so long as they two continued in this amitie. For if the pope (said he) be banished England, France, and Germanie, we shall driue him to that streict, that he must of necessitie serue as the chapleine of the emperor; which speech ended, they went to Bullongne, where they were banketted; from whense the French king brought the king of England to Calis, where the next daie the league was againe confirmed, and the French returned to Paris, and the English to London. At whose returne the parlement and synod did againe begin, in which quéene Katharine was by the law of the land separated from the king, and after by the bishops of Canturburie, London, Winchester, and Lincolne diuorsed from him at Dunstable. Whereupon the king maried the ladie Anne Bullen, mother to the most worthie quéene Elisabeth. In which yeare also, both by decree of parlement & synod, the popes authoritie was wholie banished out of England, and a question moued in the same synod, whether the bishop of Rome hath greater iurisdiction ouer England giuen to him in the scripture than anie other strange bishop hath. At what time it was agreed vpon by all the fathers in the higher synod, that the pope had not by the word of God anie authoritie in England: whereunto all the inferior synod consented in like maner, except one which doubted thereof, and foure which did attribute to the pope vniuersall power in the ecclesiasticall administration. After which, it was by the same synod decreed, that the archbishop of Canturburie should not be called the legat of the apostolike see, but in place therof should be named the primat and metropolitan of all England: of all which dooings the archbishop did certifie the king by publike instrument, written by a notarie. Whereupon it was decreed in the parlement, that no appellations should be from thenceforth made to Rome: after which, the parlement and synod were prorogued vntill the next yeare.

whether the bishop of Rome hath greater iurisdiction ouer England than any other strange bishop.

And because manie bookes were by the pontificall authoritie (being banished) printed and dispersed abroad, the synod first censured them, and determined to request the king that the bible might be turned into English, whereby it might easilie be discerned what was consonant to the word of God. Against

1535

The bible turned into English.

gainst which Stephan Gardiner bishop of Winchester, being of the kings priuie councell, did secretlie labor as much as in him did lie. But by the fauor and intreatie of queene Anne, it was obteined that the English bible should be printed, and placed in euerie church in some conuenient roome, whither the people might come to read it at their pleasure: which bible was the first time printed in Paris, at what time Edmund Boner bishop of London was then in France for the king: to which Boner the charge and ouersight thereof was committed. But these proceedings of the king tooke not such effect then, as they did in the following time of king Edward, because that the ladie Anne Bullen, who mightilie fauored these causes, was shortlie after beheaded. Upon which putting the bible in English, the higher synod of England decreed (to the end that all strife and contention might be auoided which should rise in disputation vpon diuine matters) that none of the vnlearned multitude should dispute of the catholike faith, the like whereof was by parlement established with these lawes, that the king ought to be supreame head of the church of England, that the clergie of England should be subiect to the king, that nothing hereafter vnder anie pretense should be paied out of England to the pope or to the court of Rome, that bishops should be consecrated within the realme, that all other things should be done here which were vsed to be done at Rome, and that the first fruits and tenths of ecclesiasticall benefices should for euer after be paied to the prince. At which time the popes authoritie, which had before continued in England nine hundred yeares and more, being thought inuincible, was easilie reiected and ouerthrowne. But yet all the relikes of the Romane lawes were not fullie taken awaie, vntill the time of king Edward the first, who being borne about this time, had to his godfathers, and godmother, this Cranmer archbishop of Canturburie, the duke of Northfolke, and the princesse Marie his sister the kings daughter. Now vpon these things thus by parlement established, there arose a great iar amongst the members of the Romane church, and the professors of the kings supremasie touching the same. Wherfore was assigned Thomas Cromwell, a man of great wit through much experience, to be his vicar generall, who with Thomas Cranmer, gouerned the church of England, then tossed with so doubtfull doctrine, that the Romane power could not in his time take hold thereof. At what time Cromwell was placed by the king, to sit in the conuocation house, because he suspected the fidelitie of the bishops, least they would call backe their minds, concerning the supremasie, whereto they were so hardlie drawen to consent. But afterwards, some willing to cleare themselues of that slacknesse in admitting the kings supreame power, there stepped forth Stephan Gardiner bishop of Winchester, which set forth a booke of true obedience, wherein he was most far from the pope; and attributed the chiefest power to the prince, to gouerne the church of England next vnder God. Also Tunstall, Stokesleie, and Longland, bishops of Durham, London, and Lincolne did stronglie defend the same in their publike sermons before the king. And Edmund Boner after bishop of London, but then archdeacon of Leicester, that made the preface to that booke of Gardiner, was sent to Rome as the kings ambassador, to renounce the popes authoritie, for which cause he was deare vnto the lord Cromwell, vntill that he was after made bishop of London.

That none of the vnlearned multitude should dispute of the catholike faith.

1536

Thomas Cromwell vicar generall of the king.

Boner sent to Rome to renounce the popes authoritie.

The chiefe disposing of all ecclesiasticall causes thus committed to these two, the archbishop Cranmer, and the lord Cromwell, there was one other synod called in the nones of June, in which the lord Cromwell as the kings vicar generall required to haue a place assigned vnto him, to whome the archbishop gaue the roome next vnto himselfe. In which synod also there was a booke composed by the clergie, assigning manie causes wherefore the king should not be present in generall councels of the clergie, which booke subscribed by all them, the lord Cromwell did approue by the sentence of the king. And because the abolishing of the popes authoritie grew in the time of this archbishop, it shall not be vnfit in this place to shew where this Cranmer (before he entered into the gouernement of the church, and of the common wealth) was borne, and how he was bred vp. This Thomas Cranmer therefore was borne at Arlecton, a towne in Nottinghamshire in the prouince of Yorke, of a gentlemanlie familie, for there is yet in Lincolneshire a place called at this daie of his name, Cranmer hall, which belonged to his ancestors, the ensigne and armes of which familie do shew (as saith Matthew Parker) that he came out of Normandie with the conqueror, which was proued in the reigne of king Henrie the eight by a certeine noble man of France, called also Cranmer, being with others sent ambassador hither into England, bearing the same armes, whom Thomas Cranmer the archbishop of Canturburie did inuite to a statelie banket, to the end that he might of him inquire out the originall of his gentilitie and armes: and vpon inquisition made by the heralds, it was found that they both had one root and originall of gentilitie, and that their armes were not different in anie point.

The king not to be present in the generall councels of the clergie.

The birth of Cranmer.

The armes, antiquitie, and pedegree of Cranmer.

This Thomas Cranmer the archbishop, being the sonne of Thomas Cranmer of Arlecton, and of Agnes his wife, daughter to Laurence Hatfield of Willoughbie esquier (this second Thomas being son of John Cranmer of Arlecton, and of Jane his wife, the daughter of John Marshall of Mulleham esquier; that John being the sonne of one other John Cranmer, which maried Isabell the daughter and heire of William Allenton or Arlecton, the sonne of Simon the sonne of Reginold Allenton knight) was by the especiall care of his father diligentlie brought vp in his yong yeares in learning. Whose schoole maister (by his ouer much seueritie) did in his childish age so feare and daunt his flexible and gentle mind, that all his life after he felt his memorie and readinesse of wit to be much weakened. But his father, to the end that he should not vtterlie cast awaie studie (as one that lothed not learning) did permit him to mingle hunting, hawking, shooting, riding, and other exercises of pastimes with his learning. With which when he being archbishop would recreat his mind from grauer matters, he so vsed the same, that none of his familie could manage his horsse, or hunt or hawke more cunninglie, who (although he were weake eied) would yet in bending his bow artificiallie strike a wild beast. From this his information in his yong yeares, he came to Cambridge to Jesus college, where he was made master of arts. Now because he had maried a wife, he was inforced to leaue the college, in respect that the statutes of the house did alow none to be maried. But he not yet forsaking his studie, did frequent the publick schooles, disputations and lectures in an other house of Cambridge called Buckingham college, and for that cause considering his learning and life, he had the salarie of a reader appointed him, whereby he taught for publike reward, and releeued his wiues necessitie. All which notwithstanding, because wealth did not sufficientlie abound, he was constreined to prouide food and lodging for his wife in an inne there in Cambridge called the Dolphine, for Cranmer maried his first wife.

Cranmer hath the salarie of a reader in the vniuersitie of Cambridge.

for the mistresse of that house was of kindred vnto him, to which place he did often resort for his wiues sake, which was the cause whie his enimies reported that he was vnlearned, and brought vp in an inne and not in the schooles. But the next yeare after the mariage, his wife died in childbed, after whose death he was restored to his old place in Jesus college, being then accounted so learned, as writeth Matthew Parker, that when cardinall Woolseie began to build that goodlie college at Oxford called Christes church, and determined to furnish the same with lerned men gathered out of all the realme, he required Cranmer to make one of the societie of his college. But Cranmer when he was now vpon his iorneie towards Oxford, was admonished by some of his frends that met him, that sith he had giuen ouer all other sciences, and onelie bent himselfe to diuinitie, that he ought in the same rather to follow humilitie than magnificence, and for that cause should not depart from Jesus college, as a more commodious place for his purpose. Wherefore turning backe, he was shortlie after made diuinitie lecturer, then doctor of diuinitie, and appointed one of the three, which had the examination of all such as were to take degree in the studie of diuinitie.

The king not to be present in the generall councels of the cleargie.

The birth of Cranmer.

The armes, antiquitie, and pedegree of Cranmer.

Cranmer made diuinitie lecturer in Cambridge.

These things thus passing forward, he was brought to king Henrie the eight, about the matter of the kings marriage (before spoken of) with queene Katharine. And being the kings ambassador to pope Clement the seauenth, and to the emperour Charles the fift, he was made by the pope generall penitentiarie of England, & by the king archdeacon of Canton. But when (as we said before) the affaires about the validitie of the said marriage of the king was laid vpon him, he taried at Norimberg (where he fell in companie with Osiander, and there he married his second wife) so long as the emperour was in the warres against the Turke besieging Vienna. After which, when the emperour had put the Turke to flight, and that Cranmer was to follow Cesar into Spaine, he left his wife with hir kindred in Germanie, vntill he returned into England. When he was come into England, he was vpon the death of Warham (as is before said) made archbishop of Canturburie. Then Cromwell, who was the kings vicegerent, wrote to Cranmer to call a synod, into which when Cromwell had entred, he declared that it was the kings pleasure, that all matters should be reduced to the rule of the scripture, and that all things should be taken out of the church, which were not supported by the authoritie of the word of God. Whereupon they began with the sacraments, touching which Cromwell demanded of Alexander Alesius a Scot, whome he had brought into the councell to speake his mind, what his opinion was: who concluded, that by the appointment of God there were but two sacraments, baptisme and the supper, against whome Stokesleie bishop of London did earnestlie contend, approuing seauen sacraments. Whereupon the archbishop of Yorke, the bishops of Lincolne, Bath, Chester, and Norwich did follow the opinion of Stokesleie. To answer whom Cranmer had a speech of the sacraments of humane traditions, of solelife, and other things, affirming that nothing ought to be determined in synods, but things proued by scriptures, and that such hunting after words and mens opinions, was to be left to sophisters in the schooles. To whome Fox bishop of Hereford, who was late come out of Germanie (being sent thither ambassador by the king) did ioine himselfe with the bishops of Salisburie, Elie, and Worcester. By which discourse of this synod, Cranmer and Cromwell found out who were bent to the Roman religion, & who would imbrace the contrarie.

Cranmer sent ambassador to the pope and to the emperour.

Cranmer married his second wife at Norimberg.

1537

Controuersie in the synod about the sacraments.

Cranmer married his first wife.

Cranmer hath the salarie of a reader in the vniuersitie of Cambridge.

Whereupon the king by the councell of this prelat Cranmer, tooke awaie all pilgrimages, and ouerthrew their chapels. And because authoritie was giuen to him both by synod of the cleargie, and parlement of the temporaltie for visitation and correction of the church of England, he appointed visitors throughout the realme, which should search out the state, condition, and maner of the monks and monasteries, who in the next yeare certified the effect of their inquisition. In the meane time the pope appointed a generall councell at Mantua, which occasioned the king to set forth a booke, that not the pope but the emperor and kings had authoritie to summon generall councels, and that the place was not conuenient for such as would obiect anie thing to the pope, and lastlie that it was verie dangerous for the king of England to come thither, especiallie sith the emperor and the French king were in wars, into one of whose hands he must needs fall by the popes deceits, who being cast out of England had excommunicated the king, and for reuenge had stirred vp other kings against him.

Visitors appointed throughout England.

The king setteth out a booke, that not the pope but princes ought to summon councells.

The next yeare Reginald Poole, a little before by pope Paulus the third made cardinall, was (because that he being ambassadour to the emperour, the French king, and other princes had persuaded them against king Henrie the eight) condemned of treason, and for euer banished England. After which, in the yeare following, the whole companie of professed votaries, monks, nuns, and friers, were vtterlie ouerthrowne; which so long as it indured, the pope did not despaire of recouering himselfe in England, and yet was not wholie hopelesse thereof, because that he perceiued certeine of his ceremonies to be yet obserued. For although in the next parlement Cromwell was created earle of Esser for ouerthrowing the pope and the monks; yet was the masse and ceremonies thereof, with sole life, confession, and such things made treason and banishment, the same law being called the six Articles. Against which though Cranmer and Cromwell did resist all they could, whilest the matter was handled in the parlement, yet Gardiner bishop of Winchester (of late returned from the dispatch of two weightie ambassages, the one to the emperor, the other to the French king) by fauour, policie, and power, obteined of the king to grant vnto it, against the kings mind, as saith Matthew Parker. Which might appeare by this, that when the law was made touching prects mariages, he called Cranmer vnto him, then sorrowful for himselfe, his wife, and his children; who praising his doctrine and grauitie, and declaring the causes of his consent to that law, he willed him to go home and liberallie to receiue such gelte as he would send vnto him. Whereupon the archbishop of Canturburie departing, the king called vnto him the dukes of Norfolke and Suffolke, the earle of Esser and other councellors, and spake to them verie honourablie of Cranmer. Who though he yelded to that law, yet he seemed in learning and in the thing it selfe to go beyond them all. Wherefore the king would that they should go to that reuerend father and his metropolitan, to comfort him, and bid him be of good chere. But in the meane time Cranmer fearing this law, had sent his wife into Germanie.

1538

1539

Monasteries dissolued.

The law of the six articles established.

Cranmer sendeth his wife into Germanie.

These noble men comming accordinglie to the bishop, and being by him interteined with great bankets, did according to the kings mind (to the end that they might deliuer him from all feare and care) laie before him the fauor which the king bare vnto him, the eloquence, grauitie, and learning that were in him: all which they commended, with all such words and deeds as he vsed in the parlement, shewing vnto him, that there was no cause whie he should feare those that were against his opinion, so godlie, learnedlie, and eloquentlie vttered, though it did not preuaile, sith by that dissention and contrarietie in opinion he had woone them to him. For although cardinall Wolsey by his obstinat mind did withdraw the minds of his frends; yet he in diuine matters did with his pietie, clemencie, and gentlenesse ioine his verie aduersaries vnto him. And further, that he should not mislike the king, the nobilitie, or anie other of that law, or for his owne opinion, although it were contrarie. This message being thus appointed for the comfort of Cranmer, was in the end turned to the reproch of Cromwell. For when Cromwell had said, that Cranmer was a happie man in this, that the king would neuer admit anie complaint against Cranmer were it iust or vniust; but if anie matter were against himselfe, or anie other councellor, the king would then diligentlie inquire out the matter: one of the two dukes said; No man knew better what difference was betweene Wolsey & Cranmer than Cromwell did, sith he knew them both, & was the seruant of Wolsey. With which Cromwell being touched as if it had beene some disgrace to him, answered, he neuer alowed or fauored Wolseies conditions, although he sometime were one of his familie. For when Wolsey sought the popedome, and had determined to make Cromwell his admerall, if he were chosen, he did refuse the same, and would not forsake his countrie. Which answer of Cromwell the duke affirmed by oth to be false, obiecting other reproches against Cromwell. So that this speech, which at the first began for comforts cause, did at length end in braules and deadlie enmities. But this iarring being for the present wiselie pacified by Cranmer, they arose from the table with outward faire words, but with inward fierie and grieued harts. Upon which beginnings of these small euils greater did after follow; sith those things fell out (to the destruction of Cromwell) which he onelie did by sound aduise, which was, that he procured Bonner, whome he falslie beleeued to haue abhorred the Romane ceremonies, to be promoted to the see of London. Wherfore, when by that law of the six articles manie that went vnder suerties were committed to prison and burned; the kings councell was diuided into factions, not vnknowne to the king. The chiefe of the gospellers were Cranmer archbishop of Canturburie, Charles Brandon duke of Suffolke, and Thomas Cromwell earle of Essex, which did as much as in them laie to mitigat the seueritie of that law. On the other side, the duke of Norffolke and Stephan Gardiner bishop of Winchester did vehementlie incense the king against all the gospellers. Wherevpon Bonner (when he saw the cause of the euangelicals begin to stagger) both by the said law, the kings favor, Gardiners frendship, and the dukes power, he (thinking to take the surer side) fell from Cranmer and Cromwell, and ioined himselfe with the other part euen vntill his last gaspe. Now by force of this law of the six articles, manie were touched in the dioceses of the bishops, yea in the kings court, where the nobilitie was not spared; all which the pontificals or catholikes (as they termed themselues) turned against Cranmer and Cromwell, by whose death the monks which were nourished with pensions allowed to them, did hope to returne to their cloisters. Wherevpon Cromwel was shortlie accused of treson by the other side, and was the first (sith there was no other president thereof) that was condemned without anie answer, and that iustlie, according to the saieng of Dauid, speaking, that he falleth into the pit which he made. For this Cromwell had before procured a law, that a noble man, vpon the euidence of the kings learned councell and some others, might be condemned without comming to his answer.

should

Wolsey seeketh the popedome.

1540

The councell diuided into factions for religion.

For the death of which Cromwell, Cranmer being in great griefe, did not thinke himselfe anie time free from his aduersaries; notwithstanding which he neuer changed countenance, or was the more abashed, because with his constancie and grauitie he alwaies conteined the king (almost caried awaie by the Romanists) in the defense of the gospell; in such sort, that the king would not consent to anie euill against him, but would preserue him safe when his life seemed in most danger. For when as Gardiner vged Cranmer to disputation in diuinitie, in which he affirmed by certeine paralogisms, that the constitutions of the apostles were of equall authoritie with the scripture, Cranmer disproued the same before the king (as hath Matthew Parker) that the king said in the presence of manie, that Cranmer being a beaten soldior therein was not to be wearied by nouices. Yet Gardiner the bishop of Winchester not so leauing, stirred euerie one that he could against Cranmer; because the Romane religion might be restored, if he were taken awaie. Wherfore at Canturburie in Kent manie were appointed by Gardiners procurement which should accuse Cranmer of other quarels than of heresie. At what time also in the parlement sir Iohn Gostwike a knight of Bedfordshire affirmed, that all the seed of hereticall sedition came from Cranmer.

The constancie of Cranmer.

Gardiner vrgeth Cranmer to disputation in diuinitie.

Cranmer accused of other things than of heresie.

Wherevpon some of the nobilitie and councell dealt with the king, that Cranmer might be excluded from the councell, and committed vnto the Tower, vntill further inquisition of the truth might be made of such things as were obiected against him. For so long as he sat present in the councell, euerie one there would be afraid to speake what they knew against him. Wherevpon rumors were spread, that Cranmer by the secret iudgement of the king should be condemned, & lose his hed, as Cromwell had done: which was so thought by all men as well frends as enimies, wherfore Cranmer secretlie with teares bewailed the times, though outwardlie he shewed a merie countenance. The king perceiuing whereunto tended this drift of the pontificals, (which fauored the Roman religion) after supper, for recreations cause toke barge to row vp and downe the Thames, and so commanded the stiersman to bend his course to Lambeth. Which being perceiued by some of the archbishops men which stood on the bridge, they hastened and told the archbishop thereof; who spedilie came to the bridge to salute the king either passing by, or else to receiue him on shore, and to lead him to his house. But the king commanded him to come into his bote and to sit downe by him, with whome he had long and secret talke, the watermen still houering with the bote on the riuer; amongst which talke the king complained that England was greatlie troubled with hereticall factions and diuisions since the death of Cromwell: and that it was greatlie to be feared, that if these contentions were long fostered vnder the pretense of religion, there would more inward euils grow, and ciuill warres arise. Wherfore the dissentions in religion were spedilie to be appesed. For performance wherof the nobilitie and the councell had aduised to search him out, who was the cheefe heretike and author of all these euils, who being found, should be punished and burned for the example of the residue of the multitude. At the length the king asked of Cranmer what he thought of this aduise, and of the principall heretike. Wherevnto Cranmer (although he was in great feare) answered with a good countenance

The king secretlie talketh with Cranmer in his barge.

nance, that the same councell pleased him well, being verie glad to heare thereof, because by the punishment of that archheretike the rest of the flocke of heretikes would be bridled. But with this speech he did yet with a certein fatherlie reuerence toward the king modestlie admonish the king, that he should not iudge them to be heretikes, who with the word of God striued against mens traditions. Whereunto the king said; It is rightlie spoken by you, for you are declared to vs by manie to be that archheretike of all our kingdome, who in Kent and in all your prouince dow so withstand vs, that the beleefe of the six articles established in parlement be not receiued of the common people; wherefore openlie declare vnto vs what you thinke, and what you haue done of and in the same. Cranmer replied, that he was still of the same mind which he openlie professed himselfe to be at the making of that law, and that yet he had not offended anie thing since the same was made. Then the king somewhat leauing this graue talke, merilie asked of him, whether his inner and priuie bed were free from those articles. To which Cranmer (although he knew it dangerous by that law for priests to haue wiues, and that he certeinlie vnderstood that the king knew that he was maried) answered, that he contracted that marriage before he was archbishop, when he was ambassador to the emperor & the pope in Germanie: but now because he would not offend so rigorous a law, he had not touched his wife since the making thereof, because he had presentlie sent hir vnto hir frends in Germanie. By which plaine answer he wan such fauor with the king, that the king incouraged him to be of good comfort, & that the same articles were made for his cause, & so declared to him who were his cheefe accusors. Which when Cranmer knew to be false, & deuised by the *pontificals enuie, he required that there might be inquisitors & iudges for the matter, sith he feared not the danger of the law. Whereupon the king appointed himselfe to be inquisitor for the searching out of his owne cause. But Cranmer said the same would seeme verie vniust vnto his aduersaries, that he should be appointed the censurer and examiner of his owne actions, & so required an other iudge. All which not withstanding, the king carieng that mind of Cranmer, that he would speake the truth, were it good or euill, he would appoint no other to haue the examination and determination thereof but himselfe, and so suffered him to depart home.

Whereupon Cranmer sent doctor Cooke his vicar generall in spirituall matters, and Anthonie Husseie notarie his publike scribe and messenger, to inquire out these things at Canturburie; who detracting time in the same (about some two moneths, after that they had begun) were suspected to fauor the *pontificalles. In the meane time the enimies of Cranmer requested that he might be committed to the Tower, to answer those matters of heresie laid against him. To which importunitie the king in the end granted, if it should plainlie appeare that he had offended the church or the common wealth; for now the duke of Northfolke (Cromwell being dead) and all the others being the followers of Gardener, did seeke to haue him committed to the Tower. Whereupon they determined to send him to prison the next daie. All which the king suffered, meaning yet in the end to protect him: for much about midnight the king sent from the court sir Anthonie Denie (one of the priuie chamber, an enimie to the *pontificals, & a frend to Cranmer) to Lambeth, to will Cranmer to come to the king; at what time Cranmer came accordinglie, to whome the king declared his mind in these words; All the councell are earnest with me, that sith the prouince of Canturburie and almost all England is defiled with hereticall sects, the originall whereof was come from him, and certeine learned strangers which he reteined amongst his familie, that he might be committed to publike prison during the time of the inquisition therof; which if it be not done, they cannot enter into the ground thereof with sufficient witnesses and proofes, which their desire we haue granted, but whether well or no dow you iudge, and to morrow is the daie appointed therefore. Whereupon Cranmer first gaue the king thanks, because he would giue him warning of that seuere decree; affirming further, that he did not refuse the prison, or flee the iudgment; for hauing a cleere conscience he had rather to trie the effect of iudgement than the euent of vniust suspicions: onlie he required this, that sith his doctrine and faith in matters were brought in question, that he might haue vpright & learned iudges in diuinitie appointed vnto him. Which said, the king called him foole, that he would so easilie enter prison, and giue himselfe to the iniurie of his enimies. For (said the K.) if you shall not onelie be taken from your dignitie, but also from the sight of men, and clapt in prison, manie false and periured persons may be brought forth, which will not shew themselues in your presence, or dare to speake one euill word against you. Wherefore, sith you neither prouide for your safetie or dignitie, I will prouide you shall not be ouercome by your enimies. To morrow they will call you before them, and obiect certeine heresies vnto you, and meane to send you to prison; but then you shall require, that sith you be one of the councell, that they deale with you in that sort as they themselues would be dealt withall if they were in the like danger; that is, that they would bring forth your accusors; and if you can not disproue them, that you will willinglie suffer imprisonment. And if they will not grant you this, but proceed to the execution of their determination, you shall appeale to me to haue the hearing of the matter; and then deliuer to them this token, to surcease to deale anie further with you. Wherewithall the king tooke a well known ring from his finger, gaue it to Cranmer, and sent him awaie.

The next daie in the morning messengers were sent from the councell to bring the archbishop, who brought him, but could not be admitted as then to come into the councell chamber, but staied without doores amongst the pages and others. Which being declared to doctor Buts the kings physician, he moued therewith, came to the archbishop to keepe him companie, whereby his disgrace might seeme the lesse. After which, Buts being called vnto the king, he left the bishop, and told all the order thereof to the king. What (quoth the king) is it so? Dow they so contemptuouslie handle the cheefe person of the councell? Wherewithall the king being moued, sent a messenger, to will them to let Cranmer into the councell chamber. Which being done, the councell declared vnto him, that the king and councell vnderstood by fame, that all England was infected with heresie, and drawne from the catholike faith, which euill came from him and his familie; wherefore they would commit him to the Tower, & without delaie make inquisition of the report and truth thereof. Whereunto the archbishop answering, he required the witnesses and accusors to be produced openlie, to defend himselfe: because it was sounding to iniustice, that the primat of England, and one of the councell, whose credit was neuer doubted or called in question, should be slandered by reprochfull reports, and committed to prison, to the preiudice of his cause; adding further manie reasons where-

The constancie of Cranmer.

Gardiner procureth Cranmer to disputation in diuinitie.

Cranmer accused of other things than of heresie.

The king ouerth vnto Cranmer who hee his accusers.

*Papists.

Cranmer appointed by the king to be inquisitor in his owne cause.

The king secretlie talketh with Cranmer in his barge.

*Papists.

The king protecteth Cranmer from going vnto the Tower.

*Papists.

The kings speeches to Cranmer.

Cranmer waiteth at the doore of the councell chamber.

The words of the councell to Cranmer.

Cranmers answer to the councell.

wherefore they should deale more favorablie with him. But when they could neither be woone by intretie, nor persuaded by reason, Cranmer said that he greatlie sorrowed, because he was inforced to appeale to the king from them, with whome he had so long lived in fellowship and societie of the councell, and whose equitie he alwaies hoped to find in anie danger. Wherevpon delivering to them the kings ring, he brought the matter to be determined before the king. Which done, the lord Russel, which was after created earle of Bedford, said: Did I not tell you before, that the king would never suffer Cranmer to be committed to prison, vnlesse that he were grievouslie accused of treason against his maiestie? In the end, they with Cranmer do come before the king, at what time the king did sharplie rebuke the councell, desiring greater wisedome and grauitie amongst them, in that they would permit Cranmer to be excluded from his place of the councell, and that he stood at the dore amongst a companie of seruingmen; asking moreover, if anie of them would have permitted such an iniurie: and therevpon striking his hand vpon his breast, he affirmed with an oth, that he was so much bound to Cranmer as he was not to anie other; & had made such triall of his truth and integritie, as more could not be in anie prelat towards his king; adding further, that whosoever loved him, should esteeme & loue Cranmer. Which being said, all his aduersaries were for feare silent, except the duke of Northfolke, which answered; It was not our purpose anie waie to hurt the archbishop, but that hanging the same inquisition, he should be kept in publike prison, to the end that his innocencie and the falsenesse of his accusations being knowne, he might come forth with greater credit. To which the king said; I will not have Cranmer or anie such as be deare vnto me, to be handled with this danger, or with such kind of credit: but I perceive there is certeine priuie and old hatred amongst you, stirring these tragedies, which vnlesse they be well suppressed, I will be an vmpier betweene you, and appease the same my selfe: and with those speeches the king departed angerlie. Wherevpon the councell sought favour at Cranmers hands, and so to returne vnto his friendship, whereof he was never squeimish, but remitted all displeasures.

Cranmer appealeth to the king.

Cranmer commeth for the triall of his cause before the king.

The councell seeke the favor of Cranmer.

Now, as is before touched, when doctor Cox the vicar generall in spirituall causes for Cranmer, with Anthonie Hussie his register, remained long at Canturburie about the inquirie of the archbishops behaviour; the king did priuilie send a doctor of the law, to know what they had found either for or against Cranmer. Which doctor speedilie comming to Canturburie, inquired of certeine reformed men (which Cox and Hussey did not call before them) from what fountaine all this infamie grew to Cranmer. At what time they laid all the matter vpon the priests, whose houses he caused to be searched at midnight, where were found certeine letters written by one Gardiner, as hath Matthew Parker, secretarie to Gardiner bishop of Winchester, which secretarie was after hanged for treason: in which letters was conteined all the conspiracie against Cranmer. Which when the king saw, he began more and more to leave the companie of the * pontificals, warning Cranmer of their intent, and commanded those letters of Gardiners to be read in the parlement house, but Cranmer persuaded the king to the contrarie. These things done, the * euangelicals (for so I terme them after Matthew Parker, which professed the reformed religion) began now more and more liberallie to shew themselues, being before oppressed by the Romanists or pontificals, for so in like sort after the same author I name them that defended the Roman religion and the popes doctrine. For in the parlement latlie called, Cranmer did persuade, that the law of the six articles should either be vtterlie taken awaie or mitigated. In which matter although he was promised to have bin supported by the bishops of Worcester, Chichester, and Rochester; yet by the importunat labor of Stephan Gardiner, he was forsaken & left alone, whereby his intent did not sort to his desired effect, to have it wholie taken awaie. But yet he alone standing in the matter, was for his faithfulnesse therin both commended and furthered by the king and the nobilitie, whereby he obteined some moderation thereof, and therewith notwithstanding anie thing the pontificals could do, the archbishop grew daily more & more into the kings favour. Whereby Cranmer gathering stomach, did (as he had often before) persuade that the bible might be turned into English, and distributed vnto euerie church, which Gardiner and the other catholike bishops did withstand a long time. But when the king had granted to Cranmer all moderation and determination of ecclesiasticall matters in that synod, which (as before said) began with the parlement, Cranmer afresh did vse persuasions for translating of the bible, the Lords praier, the apostles creed, and the ten commandements, into the vulgar tong or English: and further, to have portasses of the Romane vse to be abolished, that mariage should be permitted to the vicars generall of bishops, that lawes should be made for the state of the church of England, and for the granting of a subsidie to the king: wherevnto the pontificals knowing the kings mind, durst not openlie resist, but secretlie laboured what they could against it: in such sort that it was a long time doubted who should have the translating of the bible. For some would have it committed to the vniversities of Oxford and Cambridge, and others would have certeine lerned men chosen out of the synod to take the same vpon them. Then it was disputed about the maner of translating and signification of certeine words: as Dominus, whether it should be Englished the Lord or our Lord: Ecclesia, whether church or congregation: and Charitas, whether it were to be called charitie or loue. And at the end of the second commandement (Thou shalt not make anie grauen image) Gardiner and the pontificals would have added vnto it this sentence, To the intent to worship it. All which notwithstanding, the intent of Cranmer was brought to effect; for the English bible was placed in euerie church, the people had licence to read it, and power was giuen to two and thirtie of the parlement house to be named by the king, to make ecclesiasticall lawes for the church of England: where it was also decreed, that ecclesiasticall iurisdiction might be exercised by such married persons as had knowledge in the ciuill law, and had received the degree of doctor in anie of the vniversities. And the better to strengthen the euangelicals, as hath Matthew Parker, a mariage was contracted betweene king Henrie the eight, and the ladie Katharine Par (a woman much favoring the gospell) the sister of William Par marquesse of Northampton and the widow of the lord Latimer.

Cranmer increaseth in the kings favour.

The bible translated into English.

How certeine words of the bible should be Englished.

1542 High commissioners appointed for ecclesiasticall causes.

King Henrie the eight marrieth the Ladie Katharine Par.

After this, warres being had against the king of England both by the French & Scots, the king laboured the emperor, that ioining their power, they might set vpon the French. The issue of which warres (although they were both beneficiall and honorable to the king & kingdome, because Bullogne was then overthrowne and taken) yet by the emperors authoritie, Gardiner and the other pontificals did afresh creepe againe into the kings favour, who prevailing,

Letters in which is conteined a conspiracie against Cranmer.

* Papists.

* Protestants or gospellers.

1543 1544 1545 prevailing, there was persecution vsed against the euangelicals. In which perhaps (as saith Matthew Parker) if they had kept a meane, they might haue made their cause to haue seemed better with the king; but they went so farre, that they spared not the kings bed, neither could the kings mariage be clere from danger of the six Articles. For Gardiner did not onlie accuse those of the kings chamber, but also the kings wife of heresie: which deed so offended the king, that he could neuer after well awaie with Gardiner, and did commit the duke of Northfolke, with his sonne the earle of Surrie prisoners to the Tower for suspicion of treason, whereof the one which was the sonne was after beheaded, and the other remained in prison for seuen yeares, vntill the reigne of queene Marie, who deliuered him. King Henrie the eight hauing now banisht the popes authoritie, and dissolued the religious houses, died the third kalends of Februarie, and was buried at Windsor: at 1546 what time appointing sixteene persons, to whom he committed the yong king Edward, onelie two bishops, this Cranmer and Cuthert Tunstall were of that number, Gardiner at that time being out of fauour, & therefore excluded from the priuitie of the kings will. After this, on the fourth kalends of March, was king Edward the first crowned by this archbishop, at what time doctor Cox before named, and sir John Cheke, were appointed his schoolemaisters, to instruct him in the euangelicall doctrine. But in the end, to auoid further inconuenience, which might grow by reason of the multitude of gouernors appointed by king Henrie the eight to gouerne the yong king, one man by the aduise of the lord Paget was chosen in place of the rest, to take the office of protectorship vpon him, which was Edward Seimor erle of Hertford, after duke of Somerset. Who altering the forme of religion, as it was left in the time of king Henrie the eight, did take from it such ceremonies of the Romane church as king Henrie had yet left within England.

1547 At what time a parlement being called, and a synod also, Cranmer in that synod made an oration to abolish such rites as king Henrie the eight had left; and therewith found meanes in the parlement to abolish the law of the six articles. Besides which, in that parlement, the cleargie exhibited an other petition: for they considered that all the force and authoritie of the synod was not onelie diminished, but wholie broken and ouerthrowne, after that the cleargie in the word of priesthood, had promised to king Henrie the eight, that they would not decree anie thing in their synod without the kings authoritie: which power of ecclesiasticall lawes being banished, the burgesses in the parlement began to establish lawes for diuine matters, without consent or knowledge of the cleargie, and by little and little, to take awaie the immunities of the absent cleargie, and to make harder lawes wherewith to tie the spiritualtie, the which to suffer, seemed hard vnto the cleargie, sith the parlement was accustomed onelie to treat of matters touching the common-wealth, and not of the church.

Wherefore they required, that as the prelats in the higher house of parlement were ioined with the nobilitie; so in the lower house, that the prelats and procurators of the cleargie might be ioined with the burgesses togither, with them to consult of the state of the church. But the determination of that request was turned ouer vntill an other time. A little after which, all the ceremonies of the Romane church, masse, dirge, inuocation of saints and other things, with the seruice in an vnknowne tong, and the multitude of worshipped saints were taken awaie and abolished. In place whereof, the seruice in the English tong, and the most holie sacraments by Christ onelie instituted, were then set vp through England. And for the better establishing thereof visitors were sent through the realme, which so set forth the matter, that they left no relikes or suspicion of the contrarie religion: against which, yet manie of the pontificals did resist with such feruencie as they could. For Gardiner bishop of Winchester, Boner bishop of London, Tunstall bishop of Durham, and Heath bishop of Rochester toke it grieuouslie, that all relikes of Rome in generall should be so abolished, pretending that no alteration in religion ought to haue beene had during the kings minoritie. Wherevnto they did stand the faster, because the ladie Marie king Edwards sister had masse, with the appurtinances in hir house: whose example (because she was after the death of king Edward next heire to the crowne by hir fathers testament) did conteine and hold manie in the same religion.

But Gardiner, Boner, Tunstall, and Heath, persisting in their opinions, they were remooued from their bishoprikes & committed to the Tower, at what time the emperors ambassador intreated for the ladie Marie (the emperors neere kinswoman) that she might still vse the Romane seruice in hir house; which king Edward would not allow: but but burst out in teares (when Cranmer archbishop of Canturburie, and Ridleie now bishop of London in the place of Boner did require the same) and said that she should be by law restreined thereof, whereat the bishops were greatly ashamed of their request. This done, Cranmer called out of forren nations certeine diuines to read in the vniuersities of England, and to inlarge the euangelicall doctrine, which persons were Peter Martyr, and Martin Bucer: whereof the first was placed at Oxford, and the other at Cambridge, with whome in that vniuersitie Paulus Fagius another stranger did at Cambridge vse and teach the Hebrue tong. Moreouer, this archbishop did nourish beyond the seas, Tremelius, Ochinus, Alexander, and Valerand, with their wiues and children, and sent for Melancthon, and Musculus: who not permitted by their countrie to come into England, excused themselues by letters.

Cranmer thus succoring learned men, wrote a booke for the supper of the Lord. Against which, Stephan Gardiner being in the Tower, wrote another booke intituled Marcus Constantius, refuted by Peter Martyr, as hath Matthew Parker. Few yeares after, died king Edward of the ptisicke (as saith the same Matthew Parker) though Osorius (by what reason or authoritie I know not) obiecteth to doctor Haddon that he was poisoned: against which (if my memorie faile not) maister Foxe hath written in answering to Osorius after the death of the same Haddon. King Edward the first being thus dead, his sister Marie obteined the crowne, made alteration of religion, set the before imprisoned bishops at libertie, restored them vnto their see, & displaced others appointed therevnto in hir brothers time. Which bishops hauing now the sword in their hand, and full authoritie, stretched the same to the execution of their lawes, burning some, banishing others, and imprisoning the third sort: whereof, some were in life reserued vntill the gouernement of queene Elisabeth, & after aduanced to places of great honor. Amongst which that were so pursued by the pontificals Cranmer was one, who being persuaded to flie the realme, would not: affirming that if he were guiltie of treason or murther, he would imbrace and follow their counsell: but being otherwise, he would not: who being verie stout in matters of religion, did challenge a noble man to fight with him in king 1548 Visitors sent through the realme.

1549 Bishops defending the Romane religion.

Cranmer called diuerse out of forren nations.

1551 Cranmer writeth against Stephan Gardiner.

1553 Cranmer would not flie the realme.

Cranmer offereth the combat to a nobleman.

Queene Katharine Par accused of heresie.

Cranmer increaseth in the kings fauour.

The bible translated into English.

Cranmer and Cuthall appointed by king Henrie the eight to gouerne king Edward the first.

The duke of Somerset altereth religion.

How certeine words of the bible should be Englished.

1542 High commissioners appointed for ecclesiasticall causes.

King Henrie the eight marieth the Ladie Katharine Par.

Mat. Parker. pag. 398.

The inferior cleargie desire to be admitted partaker of the lower house of the parlement.

Edwards daies, because he did oppugne the ecclesiasticall ceremonies reformed by Cranmer his counsell, who had abolished the Romane sacraments.

Now when Cranmer was thus persuaded by others to flie, a certeine kind of prophesie (as it may be termed) came to his mind, in which king Henrie the eight did foreshew his death. For when Cranmer did beare the ensignes and armes of his ancestors, quartered with three cranes, the king taking awaie the cranes, placed in lieu thereof three pellicans to be borne in his armes, as a signe that he should after shed his bloud for his children: but to leaue that, let vs go forwards with the historie.

The armes of Cranmer altered.

Quæne Marie was the daie before the kalends of October crowned at Westminster by Stephan Gardiner bishop of Winchester, against all law and example (as some haue) because the same doth onelie belong vnto the metropolitane, as most ancient histories affirme: but we find manie examples to the contrarie, both in ancient & moderne times: whereof these few come to my mind. That Alredus bishop of Yorke crowned William Conqueror, Maurice bishop of London crowned Henrie the first, Peter bishop of Winchester and Joseline bishop of Bath crowned Henrie the third, and Oglethorpe bishop of Carlill crowned quæne Elisabeth. Which I speake not to impeach the priuilege and honor of that see: for it is most reason that the best should be serued with the best; and that the best subiect should doo the best honor to the best and cheefe gouernor: but I haue onelie brought in this, because that some saie, that Winchester (not hauing example therefore) did crowne quæne Marie. And yet notwithstanding (to saie the truth) these bishops did alwaies crowne the princes vpon some reasonable cause; as when the metropolitan was vnlawfullie gotten into that see, as Stigandus, who intruded himselfe thereunto; or was beyond the seas, as was Anselmus, when Mauricius bishop of London crowned Henrie the first; or as Stephan Langton was, when Peter bishop of Winchester, and the bishop of Bath crowned Henrie the third; or else in the vacancie of the archbishoprike, as when Oglethorpe crowned the worthie quæne Elisabeth.

The metropolitane onelie to crowne the prince.

But to leaue this, let vs returne to Cranmer, who was after accused, and by the iudges condemned of treason: which Cranmer tooke to be an vnkind recompense for all the kindnesse which he had bestowed vpon quæne Marie. For when hir father would haue committed hir to prison for standing in hir religion, this Cranmer pacified the king; and when she should haue bæne disherited by the testament of king Edward, he did with a long oration persuade the contrarie, although it tooke not effect. But the remembrance of hir mothers diuorce, Cranmers religion, and the subscribing of his name to the proclaming of quæne Jane, put those things out of mind. Whereupon being condemned, he with Nicholas Ridleie, and Hugh Latimer, bishops of London and Worcester, were sent to Oxford to prison. After this, quæne Marie maried king Philip at Winchester the seuenth kalends of August, and cardinall Poole (of whom we will speake more hereafter) being called hither by quæne Marie, came into England with power legantine from pope Julie the third, and in parlement released the interdict and excommunication of the land, which had continued almost twentie yeares.

Cranmer condemned of treason.

A disputation about religion in the time of quæne Marie.

In the meane time, Weston the prolocutor with manie other professors of diuinitie, came from the synod to Oxford, publikelie to dispute with Cranmer, Ridleie, and Latimer, about the carnall presence of Christ in the sacrament. But in the end the matter was so handled, that Cranmer and the others were condemned for heretikes; first by the vniuersitie, and by the synod of London: the long declaration whereof we leaue to others, who haue of purpose treated thereof, amongst whome is John Fox in his booke of the Acts and monuments of the church: for it is beside my purpose, to treat of the substance of religion, sith I am onelie political, and not ecclesiasticall; a naked writer of histories, and not a learned diuine to treat of mysteries of religion. Wherefore leauing that, let vs hasten to the hastened death of Cranmer. Cardinall Poole being the popes legat, was in honor and fauor preferred before all men, who although he sought the archbishoprike of Canturburie, and did by his legantine power take the fruits thereof from Cranmer, conuerted them to his vse by colour of sequestration, and dwelled at Lambeth: yet he would not beare himselfe as archbishop so long as Cranmer liued.

John Fox.

But Stephan Gardiner (after the fashion of court prelats) desirous to be equall in honor with cardinall Woolsey (whom he sometimes serued) priuilie labored with the pope to be cardinalated, and to haue power legantine bestowed vpon him; for the obteining whereof he conceiued a certeine hope, because pope Julie the third being dead, John Peter Caraffa, which was called the cardinall Theatin, was aduanced to the popedome: betweene whome (being now called Paule the fourth) and cardinall Poole, there was old & capitall enimitie which could not be pacified by anie meanes. Wherefore Gardiners request to be cardinall, to take awaie Pooles authoritie, and to call him to Rome, was acceptable to the pope. For which cause it was supposed, that Gardiner prolonged the life of Cranmer, to the end that Poole might not haue the bishoprike of Canturburie. In the meane time, Gardiner falling sicke of the gout, or paines of his ioints; the same grew so much, that his physicians affirmed that he could not liue. At length lieng in his bed, his bodie yelded such a lothsome sauor (as saith Matthew Parker, and John Fox) that none could scarse abide it; who dieng in that sort, did in the verie instance of death saie: I haue erred with Peter, but not wept with Peter.

Matt. Parker.

The pope and cardinall Poole enimies.

1555

When he was dead, the legat Poole appointed Bzwkes bishop of Bzistow to be the popes delegat to giue sentence vpon Cranmer, who comming to Oxford (togither with John Storie, after executed at Tiburne, and with Thomas Martin doctor of the law now liuing, associats to the said bishop by the quænes authoritie) called forth Cranmer, at what time with a long oration Bzwkes labored to bring home Cranmer to the Romane religion. But he not remoued from his maner of christian profession, & persisting in his former doctrine, was summoned to be at Rome within fourescore daies to answere before the pope; which Cranmer promised to doo if he might haue licence therefore of the quæne. But the pope, before the twentith daie was past, sent letters to king Philip and quæne Marie, to condemne Cranmer, and to commit him to the secular power. Whervpon, a little after, new authoritie was by the pope granted to Thomas Thurlebie bishop of Elie, and to Edmund Boner bishop of London, to depriue Cranmer from all præstlie and archiepiscopall dignitie, and to commit him to the secular power to be burned, which was doone the foureteenth daie of Februarie. But Cranmer yeelding to the frailtie of the flesh, lacking the comfortable letters which one was wont to write to another at the going to their death, there entered him by the persuasion of one frier John, and of the pontificals, a certeine temptation, in that they laied before him hope of life, thereby Bzwkes bishop of Bzistow appointed to giue sentence vpon Cranmer.

The pope giueth authoritie to the bishops of London and Elie to degrade Cranmer.

to

Cranmer subscribed to the Romane religion.

to auoid the terror of death, if he would by writing recant what he had before said and written touching religion. Whervnto Cranmer yelding, and they obteining the same, yet they were not contented: for when Cranmer hoped most for life, then by the decree of cardinall Poole was his death hastened. For doctor Cole came to Oxford, and preaching in S. Maries church, he there affirmed that God could not be pacified (being offended with the death of sir Thomas Moore sometime chancellor of England, and of John Fisher bishop of Rochester, who were beheaded in the time of king Henrie the eight, for mainteining the popes supremasie) but with the death and sacrifice of this Cranmer: who being brought forth of prison betweene two friers in an old gowne, was exhorted by Cole in his sermon that he should with liuelie voice confirme that recantation which he had made by writing. But he denieng that, terming the pope antichrist, and hating the bishops, was after burned in that towne; first burning his hand which made the recantation, and then standing vpright in the flame, and crauing mercie of God, to whome he committed his soule, he was consumed to ashes: a death not read before to haue happened to anie archbishop, who as he was the first that publikelie impugned by established lawes the popes authoritie in England, so was he the first metropolitane that was burned for the same.

God cannot be pacified but with the death of Cranmer.

Cranmer burned at Oxford.

After his death the see of Canturburie being now void, there was a synod called by the commandement of the king and queene; in which it was decreed that the daie wherein England was by cardinall Poole reconciled to the church of Rome, should euerie yeare be kept holie daie, and called the daie of the reconciliation of the church of Rome. But that lasted not long, sith the death and end of queene Marie set end vnto the same: besides which, because queene Marie had remitted vnto the clergie the first fruits and tenths before granted to king Henrie the eight, they granted hir a large subsidie. In which synod also manie other things were required, but not obteined. Besides which, queene Marie was of that mind (as not being satisfied in giuing those tenths to the clergie) that she also thought vpon the restitution of the houses of religion, and to bring to them the lands taken awaie in the time of king Henrie the eight: for manie supposed that they could not keepe the same with a safe conscience. Wherefore calling togither the marquesse of Winchester treasuror of England, and others of the councell, she declared vnto them how that she was daie and night troubled with the lands of those monasteries; whose restitution although it be hurtfull to the crowne, as weakening the reuenues thereof, yet she would not keepe anie other bodies goods, no not the kingdome it selfe with a troubled conscience. Wherfore she willed that cardinall Poole the popes legat, to whome this matter was by the pope committed, should be consulted therevpon, to the end that hir vexed conscience might safelie be deliuered from all care thereof. But king Henrie the eight, when he did dissolue the monasteries, by the exchange of those lands, and by other grants thereof, did so diuide the same into seuerall mens hands (a deuise proceeding from Cromwell earle of Esser, who first also sought the dissolution of those monasteries) that he had nothing so much left in his possession, as he had distributed to the noble men and others, who feeling the sweet that came thereby, would not so easilie depart with the same againe; insomuch that when the pope (as hath Matthew Parker) by the queene and cardinals procurement had thundered sentence of excommunication against all those which possessed lands belonging to monasteries, and that the same bull (as it was said) should haue beene declared in England; there was such sudden hurliburlie raised here amongst vs of all sorts, as well noble men, gentlemen, and others, yea of such as most fauored the pope, as vnlesse that bull had beene sent backe to Rome, and the sentence reuoked, it was thought the popes authoritie would haue beene againe banished England; for they plainelie said, that they would not obeie him if he touched their freholds. By reason whereof the clergie vtterlie despaired of generall restitution of the religious houses, although in some few places, monasteries and such other houses began againe to be builded, and religious persons to be brought into them; as at Westminster, great S. Bartholomews besides Smithfield in London, Greenewich, and Dartford in Kent, and others more.

Ex archiuis. The daie of the reconciliation of England to the pope kept holidaie.

Queene Marie willing to set by the houses of religion.

Noble men loth to depart with religious lands.

Reginald Poles life being with such high praise written by manie learned and eloquent Italians, and manie declamers of the vniuersitie of Venice, is set forth with such beautie, and eloquence of stile, as nothing can be more desired therein. But therwithall (as saith Matthew Parker) they fauoring him ouer much, did in their praises of him not spare the dispraise of king Henrie the eight: so that they rather seemed flattering and rhethoricall schole declamations than true commendations, worthilie deserued for vertue and vpright actions. The which is not therefore spoken by vs, because we doo enuie his commendation. For what can be more glorious vnto our kingdome, than that the Italians, who after a certeine sort glorie of the inheritance of learning and eloquence, should so highlie commend a man of our nation? But because we are chieflie to set down such things as he did being archbishop of Canturburie, we will omit whatsoeuer might else be said of him, and briefflie passe ouer his life, crauing pardon although we omit or somewhat dissent from that immoderat commendation, which other haue throwne vpon him; for mine intent is onelie plainelie to set downe things as they were done, without aggrauating, diminishing, praising, misliking, or anie waie else inferring vpon the outward action.

Reginald Poole cardinall archbishop of Canturburie.

This man (as saith Matthew Parker) Patre quidem Richardo equestris ordinis viro, Henrici septimi regis fratre consobrino, matre verò Margareta Eduardi quarti Anglorum quondam regis nepte, Georgij Clarentij ducis filia atque comitissa Sarisburiæ natus est. Of which his descent I haue alreadie spoken in my former discourse of the cardinals, pag. 1168. who by the care of his parents, perceiuing him of a deintie wit, and of a gentle behauior, was brought vp in learning in Magdalen college in Oxford, whome king Henrie the eight in his youthfull yeares did greatlie fauor, not onelie because he was kin vnto him by the father and mothers side, but also because that he hoped that his learning should beautifie the kinglie race, and might be a great helpe vnto him in the gouernement of the kingdome. Wherefore he augmented the stipends of this Poole with the deanerie of Exceter, and with other large allowances, to the end that following the studies of good letters beyond the seas, he might there learne both the depth of the sciences, and the maners and languages of those outward nations. Whervpon he goeth to Pauie a citie belonging to the dominion of Venice, where he found learned men in all sciences. In which place Poole gaue his mind to the studie of eloquence and philosophie, where he profited so much, that he was no more knowen to those strangers for the nobilitie of his birth than he was for the fame and report of his learning. Wherefore, when he was thus had in admiration in Italie, as well for his parentage as his excellencie of learning, he ioined himselfe with the magnificos and noble men of Venice, wherby vnthankefullie he departed from the loue of his countrie, and the dutie of so liberall a prince as king Henrie the eight was to him. For (as we said) when the same king determined to abolish the popes authoritie in England, he louinglie sought to call this Poole home into his countrie. But he refusing to returne, making manie delaies and excuses, the king caused Stokes bishop of London, and Tunstall bishop of Durham to write vnto him against the popes authoritie, whose works are yet extant. But Poole not mooued thereby, ioined with the Italians, famous as well for their birth as for their learning and eloquence, amongst which were Aloisius Priolus, Gaspar Contarenus, Peter Bembus, and Peter Carafa, archbishop Theatin, borne at Naples, but then for feare of the emperor fled vnto Venice, where he remained in a monasterie. To these were also ioined in one knot of amitie for likenesse of studies and maners, James Sadolet bishop of Carpentoract in France, & Cosmus Gherius bishop of Fauens; and of the commoner sort in the vniuersities of Padie & Bononia, M. Antonius Flaminius, surnamed Genua, Lampridius Cremonensis, Lazarus Bonamicus, Basilianus, & manie of that sort which seemed to excell in philosophie, Greeke, and all kind of learning: and therefore not onelie famous in Italie but through out all the other parts of Europe. All which for eloquence and flowing in the Latine tong gaue place to this Poole, as by the letters often times sent betweene them, and of late by the witnesse of the most eloquent Paulus Manutius is well proued. But if those their praises had neuer beene giuen of him, yet Poole himselfe may be a most plentifull witnesse in that matter, being importunatlie laboured by Sadolet (who had then written a learned and eloquent booke of philosophie) to deliuer his iudgement thereof. Whereunto Poole with long letters did answer, that he greatlie allowed all that he had written in philosophie: but on the other side, he did as much maruell, that a cardinall of the church of Rome would place the end and cheefe of all his studies in philosophie, which although it sometime held the price aboue all other studies and arts, yet now (as he writeth) that is cast downe by the comming of the word of God, for the which cause he compared it with these verses of Virgil:

Poole brought vp in Oxford.

Poole trauelleth the parts beyond the seas.

Insula diues opum Priami dum regna manebant,
Est in conspectu Tenedos notissima fama,
Nunc tantùm sinus statio & malefida carinis.

Wherefore sith the ethnike superstition is now ouerthrowne, diuinitie and not philosophie ought to be set before a christian man, as the cheefest hauen whervnto he should with all his sailes hasten to direct his course & rest. Which epistle of Poole if it be diligentlie compared with the answer of Sadolet, he shall find Poole (as saith Matthew Parker) to go beyond Sadolet both in argument and sweetnesse of stile. In which place the said Matthew in his booke of the liues of the bishops of Canturburie, hath also set downe these words of this Poole; Sed iuuenis ingenij facunditate cum rerũ verborúmque frequens copia ei fiue dicenti sibi scribenti succederet, Asiaticam redundantiam sequi visus est. Quam vt ex libris eius iam cernimus siue studio siue flacceſſente oratione sic tandem decoxit, vt senex in dicendo scribendóque redundantiam omnẽ & affluentiam a stilo resecuit, sæpe etiam sine vbertate, neque succo ieiunus existimetur. But leauing the commendation of his learning and eloquence, let vs returne to those things which this Poole did.

Poole refuseth to returne into England.

The liuings which Poole had in England taken from him.

When Henrie the eight had expelled the pope, and would not suffer Poole to returne into England, first this Poole was bereaued of his deanrie of Exceter, and of all other stipends which he had by the king. But he greatlie esteemed not thereof, because he was honorablie and plentifullie interteined by the clergie of Italie, with whome he liued so much the more honourablie, and with greater frendship, bicause he was banished England. For pope Paule the third being dead, Clement the seauenth succeeding, and Peter Bembus, a most familiar frend to Poole, being secretarie vnto Clement, brought Poole in continuall and great fauour of the pope, who after made him cardinall; at that time also aduancing to the purple hat Bembus, Contarenus, Sadolet, and Peter Carafa, archbishop Theatin, of which number Theatin tooke part with the French, and Poole fauoured the emperour and his imperials; a thing (as after shall appere) that brought forth vnquenchable enimitie betweene Poole and Carafa. Which choise of these cardinals was made the eleauenth kalends of Ianuarie, at what time Poole was intituled cardinall of S. Maries in Cosmeden. Now, when it was secretlie consulted at Rome to support the falling authoritie of the pope, to restreine the Lutherans in Germanie, and to banish the gospell out of England; these delegates were appointed therefore: Theatinus, this Poole, Cortesius, abbat of S. George, & Matthæus Gibertus bishop of Verona, who taking aduise among themselues, committed those things to writing which might be profitable to the common cause of the pontificals, whose said aduise and counsell touching the same, is yet extant and published in Italie. 1536

Poole protected by the pope.

But vpon the setting forth thereof, onelie Poole was admitted into the popes palace and familiaritie, bicause he stood in doubt of himselfe, and suspected some laieng of wait for him by the English. Poole being thus in the popes fauour, and framing himselfe to all the popes determinations, was after sent to the king of France, and to the low countries of Germanie, in two dangerous ambassages. In which though other causes were outwardlie pretended, yet (as hath Matthew Parker) he had giuen him in charge by the pope, that he should in the name of the church of Rome solicit the emperor & the French king to warre vpon the king of England. But king Henrie the eight wiselie auoided the same, for neither the emperor nor the French king (then in sharpe wars for the limits of their dominions) durst stir the king of England, least that he inclining to anie one part, might ouerthrow the other. At which time Poole did write to his frends and kindred in England, that they should stand fast in the Romane faith, and expect the end of his ambassage.

Poole perswadeth princes to warre vpon the king of England.

The king of England hauing knowledge of all this deuise, did (when he vnderstood of Poole his coming into France) deale with the French king by his legats, that he should send Poole into England to receiue punishment, as guiltie of treason to the king of England. But the French king denieng it, and affirming the same to be against the law of armes, to yeld the ambassador of anie man (especiallie of the pope) to receiue punishment, would not do it. And yet, bicause he would not offend the king, he did not admit the ambassage of Poole; but speedilie commanded him to depart out of his kingdome. Wherewith Poole being sore perplexed, speedilie spead himselfe into the low countries to the emperour, where he was also by the emperor repelled; bicause the king of England had a little before sentenced Poole, his mother the countesse of Salisburie, his other confederats and frends to perpetuall banishment. Wherefore this cardinall Poole hasteth to *Leige, being inuited thither by Erardus à Marchia, cardinall and bishop of that citie, where he for a time remained, but not long, for the king of England vnderstanding by his espies of his abode there, sent his ambassadors, and required of the Belgians in respect respect of the ancient leagues betweene him and the duke of Burgundie, that they would deliuer to his ambassadors his enimie, and one condemned of treason, and not suffer him to wander vp and downe amongst them. Which being opened in a publike councell, holden in the low countries, where the said Erard was present, it was declared to Pole that he should presentlie hasten himselfe to Rome through Germanie, whereby Pole departed without bringing anie of his ambassages to effect. Yet notwithstanding, after this they obtrude vnto him an other most dangerous ambassage: for when the emperour had ordered all his affaires in the low countries and in Germanie, he went into Spaine, whither by the popes commandement Pole was sent vnto them, and from thense to the French king to deale with them, to breake the league with the king of England, that they should both set vpon him, and that Pole should remaine in the low countries or on the borders of France, to expect the end thereof, in the meane time assertening the pope of all things which happened.

Poole hasteth out of France to the emperor.

*Leodium.

Pole sent by the pope into Spaine.

With this commandement cardinall Pole changing his habit, did with a few persons hasten his iorneie, and with a spedie and readie course came to the emperor then remaining at Toleto in Spaine. But the emperor which meant to keepe the king of England in league with him, gaue such audience to this cardinall Pole, that he answered, there was no time now to execute his request. And to rid him of that matter, he willed Pole to go into France, to consult thereabouts with the French king. With which answer Pole perceiuing how the emperor had shifted him awaie, obteining leane, departed from Spaine, and came to Auinion; from whense he went to his familiar James Sadolet archbishop of Carpentoract and cardinall, where for a while he rested himselfe in great safetie, vntill he might vnderstand the popes pleasure. But in the end, being called home by the pope, although his ambassage had not the desired effect: yet for that he had much trauelled in the same, the pope made him legat of Viterbo, as a reward for his paines. Wherevpon finding no better successe in such things as he attempted, he gaue them ouer, and wholie applied himselfe vnto diuinitie; wherein it seemeth he had no setled iudgement (as saith Matthew Parker) but sometime fauored the * pontificals, and sometime the * euangelicals, as may be gathered by their often comming vnto him, but especiallie by the continuall companie of Antonius Flaminius (the most excellent orator and poet that translated the psalmes of Dauid into Illyricall verses) and of Tremelius, a most learned person which turned the bible into Latine, and was conuerted from the Iewes doctrine to christianitie when he was in the house with Pole, and baptised by the said Pole and Flaminius within the walles of the house of this cardinall Pole. Besides which, his house was a receptacle of friers and monks falling from the pope and fleeing out of Italie into Germanie. Againe, when manie were accused vnto him in Viterbo, that they were Lutherans, he neuer punished them either by the inquisition or other seuere paine, but remained there certeine yeares, as a man wholie buried in studie, and one vtterlie separated from worldlie matters, of whome the same Parker writeth thus:

Verum nescio quomodo Poli castitas, in qua una virtute omnes Romæ cardinales facilè superabat, dum Viterbij contemplaretur diffamata est. Nam papæ castello vbi Polus habitabat adiunctum est monialium cœnobium sanctæ Clarę dicatum. His monialibus suis vicinis vt in castitate retinerentur, sedulò dicitur prospexisse Polus, earúmque abbatissam quæ nobilis Perusina fuit ad se vocasse sæpius. Ex quorum frequenti congressu Pasquillus Romanus qui nullius famę aut dignitati parcit, sæpiúsque vera quàm falsa narrat, Latinis Italicísque carminibus Romæ diuulgauit eam à Polo peperisse bis, primò masculinam deinde fœminam prolem. But touching that matter, this Poole heard more thereof when he was in election to be pope, as after shall appeare, when he cleered himselfe. In the meane time, whilest the warres were hot betweene Cesar and the French, Paule the third summoned a generall councell at Trent, to which he sent the cardinals Poole, Moronus, and a third to be his legats there. But the same councell did shortlie after cease, being interrupted by the heat of the warres (betweene the emperor and the French) in Heluetia, Germanie, France, and Spaine. At length those warres being intermitted for a time, the councell at Trent was againe renewed, and this Poole with the cardinals de monte and of the holie crosse were appointed the popes legats, at what time Poole did write and publish a booke of the same councell. In the end the councell being turned ouer to Bononia, the emperor found himselfe greeued therewith, & complaining thereof by Hurtaldus his orator in a little booke published to all men, he further described a forme of religion in that booke which he called the Interim: both which Poole being placed in the popes presence did with publike answer rebuke.

Poole appointed one of the popes legats in the councell of Trent.

Now when pope Paule the third was dead, the cardinals (after the maner) came into the conclaue to chuse a new pope. In which there was great contention amongest them being diuided into two parts, the one taking the part of Cesar and the other of the French king. Poole himselfe being imperiall drew vnto him all such as were on that side, & those also that were neuters, amongst whom was Alexander Farnesius, nephue of the deceased pope, whose authoritie aboue the rest was verie great, and led the chiefest part of the other cardinals to chuse Poole to the popedome. But they which followed the French causes obiected that they should beware, lest Poole hauing atteined the triple crowne, would ouermuch fauour the emperor: wherefore there was consideration to be had of the voices of the other French cardinals, which were not then come. But notwithstanding all that the French could doo, the next daie when the voices were taken out of the scrutinie, such and so great number of them was found to incline to Poole, that the French could not resist it. But Poole without cause found an other delaie, while he would not then take it vpon him; which being perceiued by the cardinall Theatin, hoping to obteine the papasie if Poole were reiected, obiected against Poole the note of ambition, heresie, and incontinencie: of ambition, in that he ouer hastilie sought the papasie; of heresie, because that in Germanie, and in the councell of Trent, he did ouer familiarlie vse the companie of the Lutherans, that he kept Flaminius in his house, and inriched him with manie prebends and ecclesiasticall dignities, and thirdlie, that being legat at Viterbo, he spared many guiltie of heresie, & punished a few with small paine, but none with death; of incontinencie, in that he had placed his daughter to be brought vp with the nuns of Rome. All which defamations, this cardinall Theatin did spred amongst the people, to the end that Poole being defamed, might not receiue the popedome. Wherevnto Poole did answer grauelie and aptlie, as he could well doo, for he alwaies caried such grauitie in his countenance, that he neuer changed the same for anie iniurie or reproch, or for anie aduerse or prosperous successe. In which his answer he declared, first that he did esteeme the charge of the popedome to be so great, that it rather moued a feare than a desire to possesse it: secondlie, that he was to be iudged free from all note or suspicion of heresie, which for the Romane religions cause had run into the hatred and offense of his king and countrie. And lastlie touching the little one which he norished in Rome, he procured hir to be daughter of an English woman which died in Rome, whom he had presented to the nuns to nourish and instruct vertuouslie, to the end that she might not aplie hir selfe to euill trades; hauing further prouided for hir a dowrie of one hundred crownes, in the publike banke of Rome, which they call Fidei montem, lest in hir age she might for need be constreined to be cast out to vncerteine mishaps. Which kind of liberalitie being knowne to be vsed by Poole to manie others, ought (as saith Matthew Parker) to be of all good men esteemed rather offices of charitie and pietie, than tokens of incontinencie. Which slanders when Poole had thus washed awaie, he was the next night chosen pope. Wherefore cardinall Farnesius, and the rest which were of that mind, spedilie run to Poole, intreating him that he will take it vpon him, and permit himselfe to be honored as the maner is, with the same honor that is due to the pope, and to be saluted by the name of the most holie father. But he excused the matter in that it was done in the night; for saith he, God doth hate darkenesse, and things well done ought to be performed in the daie: wherefore he would deferre the matter till the morrow. Which words greeuing those cardinals, they did call it most foolish delaie.

Pole refuseth the popedome.

Pole accused of heresie, ambition, and incontinencie.

Pole cleereth himselfe of all things obiected against him.

Poole the second time chosen pope.

Poole the second time refuseth the popedome.

Wherefore the next daie all things being changed, and the minds of the cardinals turned from Poole, they inclined an other waie. For when Poole was gone out of the conclaue (or place where the pope is elected) because he felt himselfe sicke, it was contumeliouslie answered by cardinall Theatin, called Caraka, to such as demanded Poole to be pope, and complained of his slacknesse, that nothing could happen more vnprofitable to that see, than to declare him pope; because that he had now shewed himselfe a blocke to all men, in that he would not accept the papasie offered, nor yet could aptlie refuse it, but suffer it so to hang in suspense. During which delaies, came the cardinall of Guise out of France, whose authoritie was greatest amongst the French cardinals. With whom Farnesius forsaking cardinall Poole did ioine himselfe, to the end to win fauour of the French. Whervpō when these two vsed the helps and voices of the other cardinals at their pleasure, the cardinall de Monte, the associate of cardinall Poole in the councell of Trent, was declared pope, and called Julius the third. After which, Poole (although of some he was accused of dastardinesse, and faint hart) did not yet laie aside the tranquillitie of his mind, or the constancie of his cōng; but set forth a booke of that delaie of chosing the pope in the conclaue, and in a most eloquent epistle did write to one Paceus a Spaniard and bishop, touching his refusall of the papasie. This new pope Julius did the more courteouslie intreat Poole, because by his delaie he obteined the popedome. Wherefore he inforced cardinall Theatin (who, as is before touched, had slandered Poole) before the open assemblie in the conclaue, to call backe that which he had said, and to aske Poole forgiuenesse. The hatred whereof conceiued by Theatin, was manifestlie shewed against Poole, when the same cardinall Theatin came to be inthronised pope. This done, Poole (growing in some mislike with the Italians, because that he would not be pope) obteining leaue of the see of Rome to depart, went to Verona to a house of Benedictine monks, of which order he was patrone at Rome, in which he determined to haue passed ouer his whole life in silence. But all Italie ringing of the death of Edward the first king of England, and of the succession of quéene Marie, the same did greatlie comfort the mind of Poole before abased, and called him againe to shew himselfe in the world. For he now hoped to haue an honorable returne into his countrie, for that he certeinlie knew that the quéene would banish the religion of hir brother, and induce the Romane ceremonies; for which cause he was fed with double hope when he was returned into England, either to obteine a most rich and honorable ecclesiasticall liuing, which in truth he did; or else to haue married the quéene, which he neuer did. To which second hope he was erected, because that quéene Marie (when he was a child vnder his mother Margaret countesse of Salisburie, sometimes daughter of George duke of Clarence) was committed to his mother (by quéene Katharine, mother to quéene Marie) to be brought vp & instructed. At what time it was supposed, as saith Matthew Parker, that quéene Katharine had in hir mind a determination to marrie them two together, to the end that the right of the kingdome might be more stronglier knit in one line of hir children, if king Henrie the eight had died without heire male. For this ladie Margaret was then the onlie liuing heire which might pretend anie title to the crowne, by reason of the house of Yorke. Wherefore being now onlie a deacon (from whense by the popes licence he might easilie be disgraded) he conceiued a hope in his mind to marrie the quéene, and obteine the kingdome. But sauing correction of that author, which I speake with all reuerence, vnto so learned an antiquarie and graue person, I suppose that cardinall Poole did, or at least might thinke himselfe hopeles to marrie the one, or to be lord of the other. For although the pope might disgrade him, and that there might be some such meaning in quéene Katharine and the countesse of Salisburie, when quéene Marie and cardinall Poole were verie yong, and that for the reason before rehearsed; yet me thinketh it somewhat strange that a man so spent in yeares, being continent all his life, giuen to contemplation, a spare and leane bodie withered to nothing, more like a ghost than a man, should in his old age, heat failing, nature decaieng, his lims weake, & his mind studious, should plaie the wanton, or follow the delights of loue and mariage. Besides which, vnderstanding that king Philip should marrie quéene Marie, and that the onelie drift of the emperor, as after shall appeare, was to staie the cardinals comming into England, vntill the mariage was done, he would not haue staid his iorneie to hurt himselfe, but would haue found meanes to haue stopped the emperors deuise & authoritie by the popes excommunication, and so to haue proceeded on his iorneie into England, if he had meant to marrie quéene Marie. And is it likelie that he was so ambitious of honor, in atteining of a kingdome, for which a man would violate all lawes, as that he would for obteining thereof marrie quéene Marie, when he had refused a greater honor in earth, as the world stood at that time, than the wearing of a kings crowne, that is the wearing of a triple diademe, and obteining of the popes authoritie, by which he might haue kept his spirituall function, & haue ruled the quéene of England, and all the other princes of Europe? Or would he for honors sake go against his profession, enter into mariage, returne to the world as a laie man, and submit himselfe to the cares of a kingdome, which might haue had the greatest honor on earth without doing anie of these things? Or can not princes or great persons be brought vp together, but that their childish loue must end in doting mariage? But admit that this hot humor should so contrarie to my reason

1553

Poole hoped to marrie quéene Marie.

Poole by publike booke defendeth his refusall of the popedome.

The slanderers of Poole aske him forgiuenesse.

reason haue taken place in him, how might he hope that quæne Marie, a woman of great zeale in hir kind (and desiring mariage for hope of issue) would seeke to marrie with so weake an old man, and a man of the church: whereof I doo not remember that I haue read anie example.

But leauing my yoong iudgement and lesse experience in the affaires and policies of obteining and keeping of kingdooms; let vs allow that determination and hope to be in cardinall Poole, and follow on the historie as it is in some part set downe by others. Cardinall Poole harbouring this double hope, either of the kingdome, or of some great ecclesiasticall liuing; and being called home by quæne Maries letters, and receiuing legantine power from the pope, set forth to come into England. But the emperor did greatlie withstand those conceipts of Poole, whilest he both vnderstood his deuise, and further determined to marie his sonne and heire Philip to quæne Marie, thereby to make his part stronger against the Frenchmen. Whereupon the emperor consulted with cardinall Dandine the popes ambassador, sent to compound a peace betweene the emperor Charles the fift, and Francis the first the French king. At what time the emperor earnestlie desired the cardinall to staie Poole from comming out of Italie: with which persuasion, Dandine spædilie sent one Francis Commendune with letters vnto Poole, in which he persuaded him not yet to take his iourneie into England: because that legacie was taken in hand without the emperors knowledge: and the Englishmen, especiallie the Londoners, did as yet in some part hate the name of the pope and his legats; adding further, that they were not yet to haue anie legantine power amongst them, vntill by persuasions they were made apt therefore.

When cardinall Poole had receiued these letters in the monasterie before said, he determined not to go anie further before he knew the popes pleasure. But the bishop of Rome, because he would not haue the emperors part against the French increased by that mariage, called home Dandine (in that respect that he was by his letters the staie of Poole) to the end that Poole might be legat into England, to the emperor and to the French king, for to establish the peace betweene them. Wherefore Poole armed with double legantine power, taketh his iourneie; and when he came to Trent, sent his messengers to the emperor, and to the French king, to let them vnderstand of this legation of his departure out of Italie, and of his comming vnto them. The which message was so vnfortunat to Cesars attempts, that he sent the lord John Mendoza (being a little entered into another iourneie) with all spæd to meet cardinall Poole with letters. In which the emperor declared that it would be verie acceptable vnto him, if he did staie there, and come no further, vntill the emperor had dispatched some weightie affaires, which might be hindered by that legation; and then (if need were) the emperor would accept of him: but if he would neds come forward, the emperor was willing that he should go to Liege; but there (of necessitie) he must remaine, vntill he were sent for by the emperor.

Poole hauing receiued these letters, returned to Dilinga a towne not far from Trent, where he aduertiseth the pope of all that was done, and sendeth expostulating letters to the emperor, shewing what a heinous thing it was to haue the popes ambassador (comming for peace and religions cause) to be staied in the middest of Germanie (with great shame and contempt of the pope) in the eies of all heretikes, and that especiallie by the emperors commandement. Notwithstanding which letter, Poole could not obteine anie leaue to passe further into the low countries, before the mariage was ended, and by parlement ratified betweene king Philip & quæne Marie. For the emperor knew how much the quæne had made of cardinall Poole from his youth, and for which cause he thought that he would be a hinderance to that mariage, and therefore must seeke to haue that impediment auoided.

But because king Philip (whose comming was earnestlie looked for in England) was not yet alanded in that nation out of Spaine, and so that mariage not consummated: cardinall Poole did verie hardlie obteine licence to come to the emperor to Buruels: where yet there was a condition of abode limited him, vntill king Philip was arriued and maried in England. During which time, he dealt (but all in vaine) for establishing of a peace betweene the emperor and the French king, for the long and inueterat hatred betweene them could not be so suddenlie appeased. This done, Matthew Parker goeth forward with the historie thus, writing: Itaque Philippi & Mariæ congressu, omnibus cæremonijs peractis, & absolutis nuptijs, cùm Polus iam nihil impedire suam in Angliam profectionem amplius posse existimaret, cúmque spe regni frustratus, tamen in sacerdotalis culminis possessione sibi esse videretur, occultis invidijs apud reginam & Philippum, necnon Cæsarem atque papam, pene subplantatus, & à legatione reuocatus est.

Whereupon Poole being thus maimed of authoritie, had no cause now to come into England, but onelie to see the quæne; who was offended that Poole was so long kept backe. Wherefore when she vnderstood the cause of his staie, she sent ambassadors to the emperor, to giue him leaue to come into England, and wrote also to Poole to hasten him hither; which he did by the emperors licence, but he was first admonished by such as fauored the gospell, to haue care of the church of England. Well, at length he commeth into this realme, more accompanied and attended on by Italians than English, where he admitted few into his societie, but such as did earnestlie defend the church of Rome. Now this cardinall hauing legantine power, and so admitted by the king and quæne, the crosse and other ensignes of the popes authoritie were borne before him: at what time there was a parlement held at Westminster, whither Poole being most honorablie brought, Stephan Gardiner bishop of Winchester and chancellor of England made an oration to the people of his acceptable comming.

This done, cardinall Poole made a long oration in his mother tong; wherein these things were conteined, being the substance and order thereof: which is, That he gaue great thanks to the noble men & the people, because by their great benefit (after the abrogation of all the lawes which tended to his banishment) he was restored home vnto his countrie. Wherfore he thought it his part, both in respect of his dutie and thankfulnes, so to recompense this desert, that where of late they had by schisme fallen from the apostolicall see, and by that means from the vnitie of the church, and so banished themselues from the kingdome of God; that he through the authoritie giuen to him by the pope the vicar of Christ, had reduced them to the see of Rome as to their celestiall inheritance. That the chiefest cause why he was made legat, was to restore the nobilitie and glorie of this Ile, whereof (before all other prouinces) the church of Rome had principall care and consideration, because that this was the peculiar and proper praise thereof, that it first of all other nations did wholie embrace the faith of Christ. That the Britains although they were subiect to strangers and to the

Pole hoped to marrie quæne Marie.

The emperor withstandeth cardinall Pole.

Cardinall Pole staied in the low countries.

Cardinall Pole commeth into England.

Cardinall Pole maketh an oration in the parlement house.

the Romane emperors, yet when they had receiued the christian faith, they did spread it ouer all the Iland, not as other nations did, by little and little, but almost at one and the selfe same moment. That although the Saxons had banished the faith of Christ, with the inhabitants of those parts of the Iland which professed it: yet God so loued this place and the Ile, that the light of the gospell did also at length lighten their minds blinded with superstition. That the glorie and nobilitie of this Iland ought to be imputed to the glorie, prouidence, and benefit of and from God: but yet the meane and waie whereby this nobilitie and glorie was gotten, was first and alwaies shewed & opened vnto vs from the church of Rome. That we haue alwaies since that time remained in the vnitie of the Romane faith, that our subiection to the church of Rome hath bene most ancient, and that the same hath with great reuerence and dutie bene obserued by the kings of this realme, as appeareth by the examples of king Offa and Adulphus, who with great charges thought Rome (although by long iourneies) to be visited, because they had first receiued the seeds of truth from them. That Charles the great, when he ordeined the vniuersitie of Paris, called out of England Alcuine the great and eloquent diuine to laie the foundation of all learning at Paris. That pope Adrian the fourth was an Englishman, who first conuerted Norwaie to the christian faith; and that he, led with the loue of his countrie, gaue the gouernement of Ireland which belonged to the pope, to Henrie the second, king of England. That he would ouerpasse not onelie the infinit multitude of benefits, which the English had receiued before other nations from the church of Rome, but also the calamities and reproches which it hath receiued from the time wherein it fell from that see. And therefore that he would onelie laie before their eies Asia, Greece, and Germanie, latelie dispersed into so manie factions, and diuers religions, with the ruins and afflictions which had happened vnto them since they fell from the Romane faith. That the cause of falling from that see in them, was auarice the root of all euill; but in England onelie the cause was the lust and riot of one man, who although he obteined great riches by that change, yet he not onelie consumed them to nothing; but was also brought far in debt. That the church of Rome might with extreame force and the helpe of other nations haue subdued England; but she had rather wait the daie and time from God, which suddenlie happened, and was at hand, after that churches were spoiled, altars ouerthrowne, all holie things prophaned, and vtter despaire of recouerie thereof. For religion, which laie buried in the queenes breff, as it were fire quenched, or a sparke raked vp in the ashes, did now become a great flame, and lighten all England. That she being disherited, reiected, weake, and beset with most strong enimies for the right of the crowne, yet being a virgin, did from heauen obteine victorie beyond mans expectation, and got power to gouerne, thereby to vnite England to the Romane vnitie. That strength did grow for the confirmation of that matter, by the mariage with the catholike prince the emperors sonne with the queene of England; which emperor of all the princes christian, had bestowed most trauell in ioining togither the dispersed church; in which though it had not his happie and wished successe, by means of the turmoiles of the wars: yet that remained to be performed by his peacefull sonne king Philip, which his father had begun for the vnitie of that church, in building the house of God, after the example of Dauid and Salomon. To the ioining and establishing of which vnitie, there was two powers giuen by God, which were like vnto two swords, that is the ciuill or temporall, and the ecclesiasticall, whereof the one belongeth to kings to vse against rebels and stubburne persons, in punishing them by death, banishment, and other temporall paines; the other sword is the celestiall keies, which conteineth the binding or absoluing to and from eternall paines, which onelie belongeth to the pope and court of Rome, the vicar of Christ in earth. In the end he concluded with the authoritie granted vnto him by the pope, to reconcile England to the Romane faith: and therefore it was his dutie to impart it vnto such as might receiue it. But they were such as were not capable thereof, by reason of the established lawes made in their schisme from the court of Rome, which were impediments thereunto; wherefore the same were first to be abrogated, and that done, the blessing of the church of Rome (which neuer shutteth hir lap against such as returne vnto hir) was there at hand as it were of a dere mother to be bestowed vpon hir children.

Two swords, ciuill & ecclesiasticall.

Pope Adrian an Englishman.

This oration did Poole vtter with such eloquence and art, that it wrapt all such as were dedicate to the Romane ceremonies into such an admiration of him, as that they openlie said they were new borne that daie, although there were some in the same parlement (as saith Matthew Parker) which spake against the receiuing of the popes authoritie. But by the kings and queenes furtherance and power ioined with the multitude of voices, the authoritie of the pope was by speciall law established: a thing neuer done before in England. Which done, the cardinall absolued the queene and realme, and united them to the church of Rome: which absolution Gardiner bishop of Winchester and chancellor of England, did declare at Paules crosse the next sundaie in a sermon there made. Of which returne of England to the church of Rome there was great reioising in the citie of Rome; and (as hath Matthew Parker) Amplissimus annus Iubileus à Iulio tertio papa promulgatus. Whereupon the king and queene of England sent Thomas Thurlbie bishop of Elie, Anthonie Browne knight, Vicount Montague, and Edward Kernen or Kerne knight, ambassadors to Rome, to declare the same subiection of the church of England. But when these ambassadors were on their waie, they receiued intelligence of the death of pope Julie, to whom Marcellus did succeed, who died the twentith daie after that he had receiued the popedome. Wherfore these ambassadors did make some delaie in their iournie, vntill their ambassage were renewed in the name of the new pope, which was Peter the cardinall Theatin (of whom we spake before) called Paule the fourth, being a great enimie both to the emperor & Poole, and so studious of the French causes, that when fiue yeres truce was taken betweene the emperor and the French king, he procured (by the helpe of the cardinall of Lorraine) that the same should be vndone.

To this pope therefore did the legats of England offer obedience in the name of the kingdome. But Poole which vnderstood the old displeasure, which this pope did beare vnto him, and doubting some danger that might thereby happen vnto him, did diligentlie labor with the king and queene, when the ambassadors were returned home, that he might obteine the bishoprike of Canturburie, after that Cranmer were executed for heresie, least that his legantine power being taken from him, he should be called backe to Rome, and be euillie intreated of the pope, who had fined and imprisoned manie of the cardinals which were imperialists. Now we said before, that Stephan Gardiner bishop of Winchester, knowing the dislike that was betweene this

Poole laboreth to be archbishop of Canturburie.

pope

Two swords, ciuill & ecclesiasticall.

pope and cardinall Poole, did seeke to obteine the honour of a cardinall, and the legantine power by secret drifts, & therfore laboured that Poole should not burne Cranmer, so long as Gardiner liued. But in this seeking for these honours, Gardiner died, and Cranmer was burnt. After which the king & quæne did earnestlie desire of the pope, that Poole might be inuested with the archbishoprike of Canturburie, for the common consideration of the cause of England, (latelie by the comming of Poole conuerted to the Romane faith) did somwhat mitigate the displeasure which the pope conceiued against this cardinall Poole. Wherfore the pope in the assemblie of the cardinals did (by cardinall Moronus, who was then called the protector of England in the Romane court) not onelie nominat Poole to be archbishop of Canturburie, but did highlie praise the man. And bicause Poole had not as yet receiued the order of priesthod, but was onelie a deacon, he receiued of pope Paule vnder the pretext of prouision, this generall title of the generall administrator of the bishoprike and prouince of Canturburie, vntill that he were made preest, which being had, the pope determined that the same title should cease and passe into the name of archbishop, and in the meane time gaue in the same bull of prouision, full authoritie, that Poole should lawfullie reteine with the archbishoprike, all benefices, dignities, and all pensions whatsoeuer, issuing out of ecclesiasticall liuings, for the maintenance of his honour of archbishop, cardinall, and legat.

1555

After this, he being made preest in the conuent church of the Franciscane friers of Grænewich the two and twentith daie of March, he was by the popes authoritie consecrated archbishop of Canturburie by Nicholas Heath archbishop of Yorke, in the presence of the bishops of London, Elie, Worcester, Lincolne, Rochester, and saint Assaph; Poole swearing obedience to the pope, as other his predecessors had done: which oth he tooke during the time of the masse, in the sight of the king, the quæne, and manie other councellors. Three daies after, which was the daie of the annuntiation of the virgin Marie, being accompanied with Edmund Boner bishop of London, the earle of Penbroke, and sir Edward Hastings knight of the garter, he went most honourablie vnto the parish church of the arches or Bow in London (Vbi primò as saith Matthew Parker pontificia sacra fecit) with the ensignes of his cardinalship and legantine power, manie generall aduocats and procurators going before him. After whose comming into the said church, he placed himselfe attired in his cardinals weed, in a gilden seat, set about with golden carpets and cushins, at what time masse was celebrated by the bishop of Worcester, with vnaccustomed pompe. During which, Thurlebie bishop of Elie was present, to whom a certeine papall writing with the pall was giuen by Dauid Powell archdeacon of Derbie, which being receiued the bishops all mitred and clad in their pontificalibus, did put the pall vpon the shoulders of Poole with the accustomed speech and ceremonies: which done, the cardinall goeth into the pulpit, where he discoursed of the signification, vse, originall, and matter of the same pall, but verie slenderlie, as was by manie supposed. These things thus done, the archbishop tooke possession of his see, and was installed (without the accustomed shew and magnificence by his procurator Robert Collins his commissarie of Canturburie, the fift kalends of Aprill. After this to put in vre the authoritie giuen him by the pope for the maintenance of his estate, he taketh the profits of the bishoprike of Winchester, during the vacancie of that see; which when White bishop of Lincolne did desire, bicause that he was borne in that diocesse and was sometime maister of Wickham college in Winchester, he promised to giue to the cardinall a thousand pounds English during his life, & one yere after; and so obteined the bishoprike of Winchester as hath Matthew Paris, for which couenants bicause they sauoured of simonie, both they were to be absolued by the pope. Now when quæne Marie (as we said before in Cranmer) had remitted vnto the clergie the first fruits and tenths, which were before granted to king Henrie the eight, his heires and successors of the kingdome, she committed all that matter to Poole: to whome the cleargie (thinking themselues discharged of the burthen of these first fruits and tenths) did notwithstanding the quænes grant, wholie paie the same. The cause whereof was pretended to be this. King Henrie the eight vpon the dissolution of the religious houses, did grant yærelie stipends to manie of the monks and other persons; all which Poole would haue to be paid out of the first fruits and tenths, least the quæne might feele the hurt of this liberall grant, when hir treasure being greatlie weakened therewith, should not suffice to beare the charges of those grants of king Henrie the eight. Whereby it followed, that this grant of the quæne did more hinder than profit the cleargie: for manie with the hope of this release of their first fruits, did put in no suerties to paie the same, which they ought to haue done vnder a great paine set downe by that law, which gaue them to king Henrie the eight; for want of which suerties they were after called into the law, as writeth Matthew Parker in these words: Illi in ius de stipulatione ac fidei iussione de primitijs danda vocati, dum in iure contenderènt, fisci procuratoribus ac ministris, cum consueta sportula essent pendenda, miserè plectebantur, soluendáque tum dilationibus factis earum residua, quæ arreragia dicuntur, mortuis paulo post tam regina Maria quàm Polo cardinale, maximo ministerij detrimento regina Elisabetha regnante iterum repetita sunt, postquam pontificius clerus amotus & abdicatus fuisset.

1556

Ex archiuis.

That same yeare Poole deseruing well of the see of Canturburie, obteined of the quæne that the patronage of ninetæne ecclesiasticall benefices placed in Kent within his diocesse were giuen vnto that see. Besides which he procured not anie great profit vnto that chaire, but onelie in building the long gallerie of Lambeth on the east side, with the inferior buildings and parlor ioined to the same: for the charge which he ment to haue bestowed vpon the palace of Canturburie was neuer done, by reason that he was preuented by death. This archbishop held a synod at London in S. Paules church, wherein he established all things which might strengthen the subiection of England to the church of Rome: all which he publisht in a booke intituled, The reformation of the church of England, conteining twelue chapters, amongst which this was one, for frugalitie and moderat diet in England, as worthie remembrance, & to be followed by our now clergie, his words be these: Quia exemplum vitæ magnam authoritatem verbo adfert, ésique velut quoddam prædicandi genus, ob id curandum est ijs, qui alijs præsunt, vt cæteris cùm morum probitate, vitæque sanctitate tum ea propriam domum rectè gubernandi laude, quàm in episcopis apostolus requirit, antecellant. Nullo igitur prælati fastu, nulla pompa vtantur, non vestibus fericis, non pretiosa suppelectile, sed eorum mensa frugalis & parca, non plus quàm tria, aut ad summum quatuor (quod etiam magis pro huius temporis ratione, indulgendo quàm probando concedimus) ciborum genera præter fructus & bellaria, qualescunque hospites aut conuiuas habeant apponantur. Reliqua mensæ cõdimenta sint charitas,

A law made for frugalitie and moderat diet, to be kept of the cleargie.

Poole laboreth to be archbishop of Canturburie.

tas, ſanctorum librorũ lectio, & ſermones pij. Domeſticorum & equorum numeroſa & ſuperflua multitudine abſtineant, ac tot miniſtris contenti ſint, quot ad curæ ſibi commiſſæ adminiſtrationem, ac domus regimen, & quotidianos vitæ vſus erunt neceſſarij. Thus much Poole.

Touching which ſparing and frugalitie of diet, Cranmer before him, in the yeare of our Lord one thouſand fiue hundred fortie and one, did make ſomwhat a more large decree. For he appointed ſix diſhes of fiſh and fleſh to an archbiſhop, fiue to a biſhop, to deanes and archdeanes foure, & to inferior perſons three; with foure diſhes of fruit, or ſuch like, for an archbiſhop, three for a biſhop, & two for the reſt. But neither Cranmer nor Poole with all their lawes (the greater is the pitie) could reſtreine the inordinat and needles ſuperfluitie of fare in England. For though theſe orders were for ſome ſmall time obſerued; yet within one month after they returned to their accuſtomed diet and banketing. But to returne to the courſe of the hiſtorie for this archbiſhop, we ſaie, that quæne Marie to ſuccor hir huſband now entred into the warres of France, ſent defiance vnto the French king, which did ſo much incenſe pope Paule the fourth, who fauored the Frenchmen, that his dailie miſlike of cardinall Poole grew more great againſt him, and that the rather, becauſe Poole had directed letters vnto the pope, and ſent meſſengers, by whome he did with great reuerence and vehemence deale with the pope, that the ſame warres might be appeaſed, through the mediation of his holineſſe, which Poole did know to haue furthered the ſame. Wherefore the pope taking awaie his legantine power from this cardinall Poole, did call him backe to Rome, and in that office did place William Peter (as hath Matthew Parker) one of the order of the Franciſcans to be both cardinall and legat, if this name of William Peter in the printed booke be not miſtaken for Peter Peto the frier Minor, being made legat & cardinall at this inſtant 1557. as appereth in my diſcourſe* of cardinals. When the pope had called Poole to Rome, he was not ſatiſfied therwith, but committed to priſon cardinall Moronus the familiar frend of cardinall Poole. All which being knowen to quæne Marie before they came vnto the eares of Poole, ſhe (vnknowledging to this archbiſhop) commanded, that they which ſhould come into England from the pope, ſhould not land at any hauen by the helpe of the Engliſh: adding moreouer, that if anie letters were brought, that they ſhould be intercepted and deliuered to the quæne, & not to Poole. For which cauſe ſhe further ſent vnto hir ambaſſador at Rome, to declare vnto the pope, that if this legantine power were taken from Poole and giuen vnto Peter, that the Romane religion new ſet vp in England would be in greter danger. Wherefore the pope with great heed ought to beware, that if he went forth in this determination, that it would breed ſuch turmoile in England, as would not eaſilie be againe appeaſed. Whereunto the pope anſwered, that Poole by probable reaſons of the court of Rome, was fallen into the ſuſpicion of hereſie, and for that cauſe was commanded to come to Rome: Vt (ſaith Matthew Parker) ſuum cum Moroni cardinalis ac familaris ſui confeßione iuncta habeatur de præſenti inquiſitio, ne cui tanti momenti negotio abſenti præiudicaretur. Which thing, although quæne Marie meant to haue had kept from Poole, yet he vnderſtood the ſame by other meſſengers, and therefore omitted to beare the ſiluer croſſe, leſt the adminiſtration of the legantine power, and by poſt horſſes ſent to Rome to the pope one Nicholas Dzmanet (called the popes datarie, whoſe diligence in that legantine power cardinall Poole did chefelie vſe) to defend Poole in all things, to render account of his orderlie vſing of the legantine power, & to open the ſtate of religion in England. The pope gladlie receiued Dzmanet, & gaue him hearing in the behalfe of Poole, but ſaid, he greatlie maruelled by whoſe perſuaſion the quæne of England made warres with the French, wherby a great ſlaughter & captiuitie of the French men was had at ſaint Quintins, from which warre he ſaid that his legat Poole ought and might haue diſſuaded the quæne, wherefore he deemed his negligence or permiſſion therein, and thereof vnworthie of legantine power. For as touching the other ſuſpicions of hereſie laid againſt him, ſaid they, were wholie vniuſt and malicious, from which the holieſt man that euer was, no not Chriſt himſelfe could be free. Which ſaid, the pope permitted Poole to kæpe his legantine authoritie, vntill he ſhould ſend cardinall Carafa his brothers ſon to ſet a peace betwæn king Philip and the French, and ſo gaue leaue vnto Dzmanet to returne into England vnto cardinall Poole, who was somewhat reuiued by the comming of Dzmanet. But becauſe he vnderſtood through the talke betwæne the pope & him that Carafa the new cardinall, Qui (as ſaith Parker) ex gregaria Galli militia ad id muneris nuper ab auunculo ſuo papa aſſumptus eſt. ſhould come vnto the emperor, he expected that Carafa would be a ſharpe cenſuror of all his deeds, in the adminiſtration of his legantine power. Wherfore this cardinall Poole proceeded verie ſtreictlie againſt the euangelicals, and not onelie purſued the liuing, but alſo ſtretched his power vpon the bones of the dead. For firſt, viſiting his dioceſſe of Canturburie, he after ſent John Chriſtopherſon biſhop of Chicheſter, and Cutbert Scot biſhop of Cheſter, with doctor Cole and Dzmanet (whome he preferred in all things) to be his delegat iudges to viſit the vniuerſities of Oxford and Cambridge, and to reduce them vnto the rule of the Romane religion. Which commiſſioners amongſt other things did at Oxford burne the buried bones of the wife of Peter Martyr, and at Cambridge the bones of Martine Bucer and Paulus Phagius, after that they were ſolemnlie condemned of hereſie; at which time they ſcarſe refreined their hands from the dead carcaſes of the kings, Henrie the eight & Edward the ſixt.

All things thus done, and (as it ſeemed) in quiet, Calis was loſt to the French, which thing greatlie greeued the people, and the quæne ſo vehementlie, that ſhe tooke it at the hart, and neuer after recouered it; being in ſuch agonie, as that ſhe neither could nor would be comforted by anie, ſith king Philip hir huſband was then alſo abſent, whereby in the end ſhe died. But before the quæns death there was a parlement & a ſynod holden, in which ſynod Poole declared vnto the clergie how heauilie the quæne did take the loſſe of Calis; wherfore, to comfort hir, he perſuaded the clergie, that they ſhould willinglie promiſe to giue liberallie of their owne ſubſtance towards the maintenance of continuall warres againſt the French. Whereunto the clergie was led vpon condition, that they might be free from all other manner of charges of armor, horſſe, and men, and other warlike expenſes, the which was after obteined by the interceſſion of Poole; and yet the prelats entred into a priuat conference amongſt themſelues, to prouide all armor neceſſarie for their own defenſe (as they ſaid in that ſynod) againſt the force of the enimies. This done, the quæne did ſhortlie after depart this life (during this parlement and ſynod) vpon thurſdaie, which that yeare was the ſeuententh daie of Nouember, in hir manor of ſaint James betwæne the houres of fiue and ſix of the clocke in morning. Upon whoſe death on that daie this

The pope incenſed againſt England.

* Pag. 1168.

Poole a ſuſpected heretike.

The loſſe of Calis the death of quæne Marie.

this is not to be ouerpassed in silence, that thursdaie was a fatall and funerall daie to three princes succeeding one after an other, being of one blood and line, which were Henrie the eight the father, king Edward the first the sonne, and this queene Marie daughter to the first, and sister to the last, but not by one woman.

A fatall daie to three princes.

In which yere a feuer quartane deuoured manie persons, and namelie of the clergie; which feuer at this time, and on the daie of the death of queene Marie, did twise giue two fits to cardinall Poole, which troubled him so greatlie, that he shortlie died on the same daie, or (as others haue) the next morning, when he heard of the death of queene Marie. Wherein seemeth to be no lesse sympathie and consent of minds, and influences of the heauens in them at that time of their death; than there was by birth, nighnesse of blood and consanguinitie, and by education and societie in their young yeares a consent in maners and religion in the time of their liues. The death of which cardinall occasioned manie then to saie, that he poisoned himselfe, as one that hated to liue to see the change of religion, and doubting the mercie of the noble succeeding queene, whom he had secretlie offended. Which procuring of his owne death I cannot be led to beleeue for manie reasons, but speciallie for that Matthew Parker speaketh not thereof, who of purpose hath largelie set downe his life, and to the vttermost recited whatsoeuer touched him, either for dispraise, or opening of his euill actions. Which I leaue to the iudgement of others, not hauing at this present sufficient time to set downe euerie thing, which the same reuerend father and worthie author hath spoken or aggrauated with or against him. He died (as I saie) the same daie wherin the queene died, the third houre of the night, after that he had liued seuen and sixtie yeares and six moneths, had ruled in the archbishops chaire two yeares seuen moneths three weekes and fiue daies, and had exercised his legantine power foure yeares and six daies; whose bodie was first conueied from Lambeth to Rochester, where it rested one night, being brought into the church of Rochester at the west dore, not opened manie yeres before. At what time my selfe then a young scholer beheld the funerall pompe thereof, which trulie was great and answerable both to his birth and calling, with store of burning torches and mourning weedes. At what time his coffin being brought into the church was couered with a cloth of blacke veluet, with a great crosse of white satten ouer all the length and breadth of the same, in the middest of which crosse his cardinals hat was placed. From Rochester he was conueied to Canturburie, where the same bodie (being first before it came to Rochester inclosed in lead) was (after three daies spent in his commendations, set forth in Latine and English) committed to the earth in the chapell of Thomas Becket. The tome of which Poole is yet to be seene so plaine and base as maie be, the same being onelie a heape of bricke mortised together, with the top like to the ridge or couer of a house onelie plastered ouer with lime, besides which is set his armes and this deuise of his: A globe, round about which a snake did spirallie wind hir selfe, vpon whose head did stand a white dowe, and besides the same this posie written, Prudens simplicitas: which bearing manie, and those both wise and learned expositions, I leaue to euerie man to iudge as his humor pleaseth, especiallie sith he maie see the same deuise at this daie ouer the entrance into the defaced church of the knights of S. Johns of Jerusalem nere Smithfield besides London. Which deuise standing there, proueth that this cardinall had begun to repare that church, and thought fullie to haue brought thither the knights of Malta, sometime knowne by the name of the knights of the Rhodes, and knights of S. Johns of Jerusalem, in as ample number as that order possessed that house before the same was dissolued in the time of king Henrie the eight, which was not done so fullie as he ment; for but fewe were gathered thither vnder their lord and prior sir Thomas Tresham knight. At the time of the death of this cardinall he greatlie fauoured and trusted strangers, to whom he principallie gaue all that he had, making Aloisius Priolus a senator of Venice, the heire of all his substance, to whose trust he committed the disposition of his will, and the performance of his legacies, who did it accordinglie, giuing liberallie to all men, but speciallie to such as came out Italie, or from other far countries with him into England. Which gratitude the Italians affirme that Poole vsed to them because he found honorable support amongst them when he remained there, and was banished his countrie. At what time of *disposing of his goods, Priolus himselfe seemed so modest and temperate in taking or withholding anie of the riches of the cardinall, that he gaue to euerie man his due, and further reteined nothing thereof to his owne vse but two prair bookes, which were a breuiarie and a diurnall.

Restitution of the knights of the Rhodes.

Poole supposed to haue poisoned himselfe.

*See pa. 1165.

Matthew Parker was made archbishop of Canturburie in this sort. After the death of queene Marie, and that the noble princesse Elisabeth obteined the crowne, who abolished all Romane ceremonies and altered the state of religion; shee had care first to place a most graue and wise person in the principall see of hir kingdome, to the end that he sitting at the sterne of the ship of ecclesiasticall gouernment, might direct the same according as the gospell required: wherefore she nominated to that place doctor Nicholas Wotton, a man of no lesse wisedome and experience than he was of great seruice imploied for the benefit of his countrie. But he refusing the same, as one who in his old yeares would not accept so heuie a charge, Matthew Parker was most worthilie aduanced to that place, of whose birth, education, desert and learning, which brought him to that see, we will intreat as followeth, in some part taken out of a booke written of his life.

Matthew Parker.

This Matthew was borne at Norwich on the first of August, in the yeare of our redemption one thousand fiue hundred and foure, being about the twentith yeare of Henrie the seuenth, of honest parents being citizens of Norwich, whereof his fathers name was William Parker, and his mother called Alois or Alice; of which two, the first died the tenth of Januarie one thousand fiue hundred and sixteene, being about the eight yere of king Henrie the eight; and the second departed the world the twentith of September, in the yeare of our redemption one thousand fiue hundred sixtie and three, falling in the first yeare of the reigne of queene Marie. These parents of this Matthew procured him to be brought vp in grammar & such learning at home with them, vntill he came to seuenteene or eighteene yeares of age; but when his father was dead, and he left in the custodie of his mother, he was sent to Cambridge, where he was maintained by hir charge, and nourished in Corpus Christi college. But shortlie after his comming thither, when his good increase of learning was perceiued, he had (as one hath written of him) appointed to him Stipendium è collegij vectigalibus, vt sacra bibliam socijs legeret, cuius generis scholares bibliotistæ dicuntur. Wherevpon he thus made one of that number, and abating his mothers charge, did in saint Marie hall (belonging to Corpus Christi college) diligentlie aplie his time in the studie of logike and philosophie, by meanes of which studies (after Matthew Parker a Bibleclarke.

The losse of Calis the death of queene Marie.

The pompe at Poles funerall.

ker that he had consumed three yeares and somewhat more in the same) he was made bachellor of arts in the fourth yeare after his comming to Cambridge, and within three yeares following, a professor or master of art, and fellow of the foresaid college. After which his first training vp in these humane arts, he did (as he grew in yeares and riper iudgment) applie himselfe to higher studies, giuing himselfe to diuinitie, the onlie knowledge wherein the most excellent part of man receiueth chéefest comfort in this life. In which kind of studie he bestowed such diligent and painfull trauell, that he red ouer the doctors & councels in the space of fiue yeares; which being so spent, he then began to come forth into the world to shew what he was, and to labour in the vineyard of Christ his church.

The first sermon that Matthew Parker made.

Wherefore hauing obteined the kings grant, and the licence of Thomas Cranmer archbishop of Canturburie to preach, he made his first sermon in the vniuersitie of Cambridge, preaching afterward in manie other famous places of England, to his singular commendation; and at length by degrées, was admitted in the Lent time amongst other learned persons, to preach before king Henrie the eight, king Edward the first, and quéene Elisabeth. Whose fame thereby growing great, and king Henrie the eight liking of him, this Matthew was called into the court; and by the king made the chapline of quéene Anne, mother to the now liuing renowmed princesse Elisabeth, to whome God grant a long, happie, and peacefull life and gouernement, making hir enimies hir footstoole. When he was thus the quénes chapline, the king and she bestowed manie great gifts vpon him. For first he was made deane of Stoke, which is not far from Clare in Suffolke. Then after (being made bachellor of diuinitie) he obteined of king Henrie the eight to haue a prebend in the church of Elie, and by the intercession of the same king (for his learning sake) he shortlie after obteined to haue the degrée of doctor of diuinitie, and to be chosen (by the fellows of that house) to be maister or ruler of Corpus Christi college, in which he had béene first brought vp, and which he did after increase with large gifts: besides the furnishing of the librarie there with manie rare and notable monuments and ancient histories of this realme.

See before pag. 1261.

After the death of king Henrie the eight, he was aduanced to be chapline to king Edward the first, by whose benefit he was made deane of Lincolne, and obteined the prebendarie of Coldingham in the same church, with the rectorie of Landbéech in the diocesse of Elie, foure miles from Cambridge, which was bestowed vpon him by the gift and patronage of the fellowes of his college. With which reuenues & dignities this bishop being thus indowed, he did not miserablie spend the same; but imploied it for the benefit of the common-welth, and kept the college of Stoke (desired & obteined of the king by the laitie) vntill in the first yeare of king Edward the first it was prouided by parlement, that the same college should come to the kings hand, by reason whereof he was inforced to depart therewith, hauing yearelie fortie pounds allowed him out of the exchéker for the same. The losse of which college he tooke the more grieuouslie, because he had there built a schoole, and appointed a yearelie stipend for the maintenance of a schoole maister there; which schoole he yet left, notwithstanding the taking awaie of the college, in such a state as he could by all means procure to haue it remaine.

1553 After this, when king Edward was dead, and his sister quéene Marie succéeded, and that in the second yeare of hir reigne all the maried clergie were remoued from their ecclesiasticall liuings: this Matthew was also depriued of all his promotions, and so liued contented without them, during all the time of quéene Marie. After the death of the same quéene, when the noble and heroicall woman 1558 the quéene Elisabeth obteined the crowne (remouing all such Romane ceremonies as were renewed by hir sister Marie) manie such persons as were exiled in those seuere times of quéene Maries reigne returned into England; and such as then had secretlie hidden themselues within the realme for their religions cause, began now to step forth into the light, and openlie shew themselues in the world. Amongst which latter sort was this Matthew Parker, known to the quéene and hir councell from the time of his youth, being by the iudgement of all men thought méet, both for his learning, grauitie and iudgement, to be aduanced to some spirituall promotion. Wherefore he was named to the archbishoprike of Canturburie, which offered dignitie the more he refused to accept, was the more vehementlie vrged vpon him; whereof there be manie witnesses liuing, and of them in the highest degrée of credit with the quéene, and of honor in the common-wealth. But at length, what by the commandement of hir maiestie, and the persuasion of his friends, he receiued the title and possession of the bishop and bishoprike of Canturburie: in which, how he behaued himselfe, we shall more liberallie hereafter discourse.

Wherefore in the second yeare of quéene Elisa- 1559 beth, he was on the seuentéenth daie of December chosen to that place by the deane and chapter of that metropolitane sée of Canturburie, and was consecrated in the presence of foure bishops: which were William bishop of Chichester, John bishop of Hereford, Miles sometime bishop of Excester, and Richard bishop of Bedford. In whose consecration, this memorable thing happened vnto him; that being the seuentith bishop after Augustine, he was the first and the onelie man that obteined the same without the popes confirming buls, & without anie Aronicall ornaments of gloues, rings, sandals, stippers, mitre, pall, or such like: Multóque rectiùs (as saith my author) & simpliciùs & puritati euangelicæ congruéntiùs, auspicatus est à precibus, & spiritus sancti inuocatione, manuum impositione; pijs ab eo interpositis stipulationibus, indumentis verò archiepiscopali authoritati grauitatíque consentaneis, habitóque per doctum & pium theologum pro concione de pastoris in gregem officio, cura & fide, gregísque vicißim in pastorem amore, obsequio, atque reuerentia diserta admonitione, eáque finita eucharistiæ à frequenti grauißimorum hominum cœtu perceptione, & ad extremum omnium communi & ardenti oratione, vt munus iam illi impositum maximè cedat ad Dei gloriam, gregis salutem, suaque conscientiæ letum testimonium, cùm coram Domino gesti muneris rationé sit redditurus.

The manner of consecrating Matthew Parker archbishop of Canturburie.

Now to go forward with him, being in this sort consecrated archbishop, there was a law made in the first yeare of our quéene Elisabeth, wherein it was appointed, that commissioners named by the prince, should haue authoritie to deale in ciuill 1558 and ecclesiasticall causes; least in such varietie and dissention of religion, the church of England might suffer some inconuenience and hurt. In which commission, this Matthew as he was first placed for his office and dignitie, so was he most carefull in trauelling therin, and executing thereof: who in doing the same, behaued himselfe with such modestie and vprightnesse, that he displeased none in correction of things not rightlie done but certeine new fansied fellows, who puffed vp with vaine glorie, did first conceiue, set forth, and defend (rather with rathnesse and will, than with iudgement and learning) certeine new opinions to trouble the ordered state of the commonwealth: whose vniust complaints and contumelies he tooke so moderatlie, that he neither left the mildnesse of his owne nature, nor went beyond the dignitie of his archiepiscopall calling, nor did maliciouslie punish their lightnesse and rash vnaduisednesse. For what his sufferance was, to regaine these degenerat persons to the publike religion; what his pietie was, in seeking to reconcile such of the nobilitie, as law controuersies had sundered in amitie; and what his patience was, in suffering all kinds of iniuries, whereby he brake and auoided the malice and boldnesse of manie, and bound vnto him the wise and better sort; all they knew which were dailie conuersant with him: which if by prowse they did not, yet the same might be more coniectured by others, vpon his mild and well ordered actions, than we can here presentlie write. Now beside manie other things which he shewed for prowfe of his patience and gentle nature, there were other good parts in him: for although he was manie times troubled with sickenesse, yet would he often ascend the pulpit and preach, both in his metropolitane church, and in other parishes. But leauing these and manie commendable vertues, wherewith he was indued, let vs come to those things which happened in the time of his archbishoprike.

Regist. Matth. Parker.

In the first yeare of his consecration, he did at Lambeth consecrat eleuen, and confirme two bishops in his prouince; & within the next two yeares did with the consecration of new bishops fill vp all the number of the bishoprikes of his owne prouince, except onelie the see of Landaffe, which still kept Anthonie the bishop, who possessed the same in the time of queene Marie. These bishops, which were by him so consecrated in that first yeare, were Edmund Grindall bishop of London, Richard Cor bishop of Elie, Edwine Sands bishop of Worcester, John Jewell bishop of Salisburie, Gilbert Berkeleie bishop of Bath and Wels, John Beaton bishop of Lichfield & Couentrie, Rowland Yericke bishop of Bangor, Thomas Yong bishop of saint Dauids, & Richard Dauid bishop of saint Assaph, all diuines; and such as being fled out of England in the time of queene Marie, were returned in the beginning of the reigne of queene Elisabeth. Besides which, he consecrated two other bishops, which secretlie remained in England in the daies of the same queene Marie: whereof the one was Nicholas Bullingham, brought vp in the ciuill and canon lawes, who (being in the time of Edward the first vicar generall of the bishop of Lincolne, was remoued from thense in queene Maries reigne, and after in the beginning of this queenes time, appointed by the said Matthew Parker to be iudge of his courts) was now by him consecrated bishop of Lincolne. The other bishop was Edmund Ghest a learned diuine, & one of the familie or household of the archbishoprike & archdeacon of Canturburie, whome this Matthew aduanced to the bishoprike of Rochester. In which yeare also, this archbishop confirmed in their bishoprikes William Barlow bishop of Bath & Wels in the time of king Edward the first, now made bishop of Chichester, and John Scorie bishop of Chichester in the reigne of Edward the first, now aduanced to the bishoprike of Hereford.

The maner of consecrating Matthew Parker archbishop of Canturburie.

The next yeare he consecrated at Lambeth Robert Horne (sometime deane of Durham before his banishment in queene Maries time) bishop of Winchester, John Parkhurst bishop of Norwich, Richard Cheneie bishop of Glocester, Thomas Dauid bishop of saint Assaph, and Edmund Schambler bishop of Peterborrough, being his household chapleine. Besides these, he confirmed also in the same yeare Thomas Yong, remoued from saint Dauids to the archbishoprike of Yorke, and Thomas Dauid bishop of saint Dauids being remoued from the see of Assaph to saint Dauids. When all the bishoprikes of his prouince were thus replenished, Anthonie bishop of Tauens or Landaffe departed the world, in whose place Hugh Dauid doctor of law did succeed, and was also consecrated at Lambeth. So that by this time all the number of bishops in his prouince receiued consecration at the hands of this Matthew. A thing worthie the noting, because all histories haue set it down for a speciall thing, if anie archbishop had in his time consecrated three or foure other bishops, as Anselme is said to haue in one daie consecrated fiue bishops, & Plegmund his predecessor seuen bishops, a thing whereat antiquitie did marueil: but this Matthew, in the first yeare of his consecration, did consecrat eleuen, and confirme two. And in the three first years of his archiepiscopall dignitie he did fill vp all the bishoprikes of his prouince; a thing which neuer happened to anie archbishop of Canturburie before the daies of this man. This done, he appointed visitations, in which himselfe did visit his owne diocesse of Canturburie. At what time, to auoid all note and suspicion of gaine, he did not onelie willinglie remit to euerie parish their accustomed charges to be paid for those causes, but did further in all his iourneie defraie the expenses thereof vpon his owne cost. In the rest of his dioceses, either he did not visit, least he should greeue the people with the charge thereof; or else appointed that visitation to some other moderat person to be his procurator therein, which neuer demanded allowance therefore; or if he had anie allowance, the same was bestowed in his name vpon some bishop whose profits were but small; as on the bishop, of Excester: or else it was distributed to the poore, as happened in the visitation of Norwich.

In hist. Ebor. epiſcor. cap. 51.

Thus hauing spoken somewhat of his publike doings, let vs now also saie somewhat of his priuat actions. This man liuing priuatlie at Cambridge married his wife Margaret, whom he loued seuen yeares before the mariage contracted or celebrated, which time they had to procure mutuall consent betweene them: because king Henrie the eight had established a law, wherein it was treason for anie priest to marie. Whereupon they were after maried in king Edwards time, in which band they continued two and twentie yeares. During which he had by his wife foure children, whereof two died yong, and the other two were called John and Matthew, whom he diligentlie brought vp in the vniuersitie of Cambridge; both which comming to mans estate, were after maried in the episcopall tribe. For the eldest John did marie Jone the daughter of Richard Cor bishop of Elie, the other tooke to wife Francis the daughter of William Barlow bishop of Chichester. The domesticall traine of this bishop was honorable after his estate, to euerie one of whom this law was set, to be at the seruice in the time appointed, or else to be fined with the losse of his dinner. His hall was in orderlie sort kept, as it had beene in the daies of his predecessors. For on the right side thereof, his steward kept the table for the archbishops gentlemen, and such other strangers: and on the other side did sit the almoner with his clearks, and the rest of his household: whose tables were so well furnished, as these officers were appointed to interteine (with their diet) all commers (who might thinke themselues satisfied) which were vnder the calling of a knight. And thus this much shortlie touching that matter.

The mariage and issue of Matthew Parker.

The order of his house.

Now, after that he had beene foure yeares archbishop, paied his first fruits, and furnished his house according to his degree, and established matters for religion; he determined to renew and build the ancient palace of Canturburie belonging to the bishop, being all ruinous, and a great part consumed with fire; which was a hard thing, & of great charge, considering the dearth of all things in these our daies, necessarie therevnto. Which in the end he brought to perfection, to the charge of one thousand foure hundred pounds and more. The charge whereof he was the willinger to sustaine, because he vnderstood, that in the yeare of Christ one thousand fiue hundred and nintéene: Charles the fift the emperor, when he came into England to king Henrie the eight, to visit his aunt quéene Katharine, was feasted in the same hall. In which feast, Charles and his people had the vpper end of the hall, and king Henrie the eight & quéene Katharine kept the lower end thereof. But the chiefest cause, which moued this bishop to vphold the buildings of his predecessors, was; for that manie kings and quéenes had béene crowned, and manie archbishops at their inthronization had kept great feasts in the same hall: and that besides, in the same hall, manie dukes, earles, and noble men, hauing a yearelie pension, therefore, did execute the offices of steward and butler at the installation of the archbishops. As of late, in the yeare of Christ one thousand fiue hundred and foure; when William Warham archbishop of Canturburie did enter the possession of the bishoprike, and kept a sumptuous feast therefore in the same hall, Edward duke of Buckingham did there serue as steward and ruler of all the household.

This hall thus repared, he also bestowed some costs vpon all those parish churches (which were in decaie) whereof exchange was made by king Henrie the eight with Thomas Cranmer, and whereof the quéene Elisabeth had receiued the tenths (during the vacancie of the bishoprike) by a law established in the first yeare of hir reigne. Which bishop (albeit he bestowed no great charge vpon his installment, as manie of his predecessors had done before, and lastlie cardinall Poole, whome this Matthew succéeded) further considering that the cause of building this great hall, was for the maintenance of hospitalitie, and desirous after the example of the old liberalitie of his predecessors, to make an archiepiscopall feast (worthie such a hall) to the multitude of his parishioners of Kent, (did in the yeare after the reparing of the same hall) take occasion that the same might be replenished with the people of Kent, when all the shire (aswell gentlemen and others were assembled at Canturburie, to wait vpon the iustices of assise) determined there to hold the oier, terminer, and gaole deliuerie. At what time, John Southcot iustice of the kings bench, and Gilbert Gerard then generall attourneie, and now maister of the rolles, were iustices of assise; and sir Thomas Kemp knight was shiriffe for and of that countrie, whome with the gentlemen of the shire this archbishop did inuite to a sumptuous feast.

He feasted the iustices of assise, and the whole assemblie of the assises.

Whereupon they granting to come thereunto, the bishop summoned the rest of the people by an officer and other messengers. On the daie of the appointed feast, the hall was decked with rich clothes, and furnished with much and rich plate and siluer vessell. At what time the iudges, the shiriffes, the knights, gentlemen, and all the whole companie of the bench, with lawyers and other officers attending on the court, togither with the whole multitude of the people, entered the hall, and were placed according to their degrées; no man seruing that daie, but such as were of the archbishops familie. But because the multitude was verie great, these ghests were faine to be set at seuerall times one after another; although in this publike time, when these iudges and other gentlemen were there, no woman was séene amongst them. For they being conueied into the innermost part of his palace, were committed to his wife, and this feast onelie consisted of the men: from whome the bishop receiued great thanks and commendations.

Which generall interteinement he vsed at other times, both there, & in manie other places: but because that this was openlie done in the shew of the whole shire; it séemed, and was reported, to be greater than anie other. For in the Whitsundaie before, when the archbishop had made a sermon to the cleargie and people of Canturburie, in the metropolitane church; and the sacrament was then distributed to the people: he was attended on to his house by the deane and cleargie, by the maior and citizens, and by diuerse gentlemen of Kent; whome he had that daie inuited to dinner. In which feast, (which continued three daies) the archbishop sat in his hall at the vpper end thereof. On whose right side sat the maior and the citizens; and on the other side ouer against them were placed the women. Which order was at the rest of the tables set along the hall, where the men were placed on the right side, and the women kept the other part. Which feast so ordered, was celebrated in honor of the quéne, which had aduanced him to that sée.

Other feasts made by the archbishop to the whole multitude.

This done, he preached againe on Trinitie sundaie to the people, and administring the sacrament, he bestowed the like feast on the people of Canturburie, in the honor of king Henrie the eight, the last restorer of the church of Canturburie. But this ouerpassed, let vs returne vnto some other thing, least in the midst of all these bankets, I make but a hungrie description of such worthie praise and liberalitie, vsed by so honorable and graue a personage. In the yeare of Christ one thousand fiue hundred three score and six, he consecrated Nicholas Robinson professor of diuinitie, to the bishoprike of saint Dauids, an eloquent man in his mother tong: who comming from Cambridge, where he suffered some troubles in quéene Maries time, was then this archbishops chapleine. In the yeare following, he confirmed Henrie Curwine doctor of law, bishop of Orford: who hauing béene archbishop of Dubline, and chancellor of Ireland, was verie skilfull in the ciuill law: which offices when he had worthilie manie yeares discharged, and did now grow in yeares; returned into his countrie, and was translated to the bishoprike of Orford. After which, this archbishop consecrated Richard Rogers bacheler of diuinitie to be his suffragane, bishop of Douer.

1566 Nicholas Robinson made bishop of saint Dauids.

1567 Henrie Curwine archbishop of Dubline, made bishop of Orford.

1569

The next yeare following, he returned vnto Canturburie, where on Ascension daie, in the metropolitane church, he fed the people with spirituall food; and the Whitsuntide after, for three daies together, did abundantlie fæd both men and women with materiall bread in the palace of Canturburie, after the same order whereof we spake before. In which yeare likewise he remoued the old example of his predecessors a long time pretermitted. For where of old time the bishops were wont to set their consecration at Canturburie; that order was now almost lost, to the preiudice of the right and priuilege of the church of Canturburie, which this archbishop did now restore. Wherefore, when Edmund Grindall bishop of London was to be remoued to the archbishops sée of Yorke, and that Richard Curteis bishop of Chichester was chosen: he would haue the consecration of the one, and the confirmation of the other, to be done at Canturburie in the metropolitane citie. For which cause, in the feast of Trinitie, in which Richard Curteis (which was his chapleine) chapleine) was fréelie consecrated without anie reward. This archbishop, after a sermon ended, did make an honorable feast in the memorie of king Henrie the eight, which excluded the monks from that church: which feast might worthilie be called an archbishops feast, because the archbishop of Yorke was also inuited thither. At which time, besides the bishop of Yorke, there was Robert Horne bishop of Winchester, Edmund Ghest bishop of Rochester, and this Curteis also now consecrated bishop of Chichester, with all the clergie of that citie, and other ministers of the church, both men and children. Besides all which, the outward tables of the hall were furnished throughout with verie people of both kinds, belonging to the hospitall of saint John and Harbaldowne. The next date following, being mondaie, this Matthew confirmed Edmund Grindall archbishop of Yorke, with the assistance of the bishops of Winchester, Rochester, and Chichester. The same yeare on the third date of Julie he began his ordinarie visitation, which with manie intermingled continuations he after deferred vntill the two and twentith of the same moneth. On which date he published iniunctions for the people & clergie of his diocesse to obserue: the same being the last session of his visitation, although that he had proroged the same to the feast of the purification of the virgine Marie.

1570

On the eleuenth date of which moneth, when the iudges were againe (with the whole traine of the shire) assembled at Canturburie to hold the assises, he did once more, as he before had done, inuite the whole companie to another feast, appointed in all things as the other was. The thursdaie following, Edwin Sands bishop of Worcester, being to be translated to London, came to Canturburie to visit the archbishop: where after he had remained two daies, he had on the saturdaie, when he departed in the morning, his election confirmed at London by the procurators, which were there for him. After which, the archbishop commeth to Lambeth, at what time his wife died, whose bodie was buried in the wals of the porch church of Lambeth, in a chapell, whose right belongeth to those houses of the buildings of Norfolke, whereof by hir husbands sufferance she obteined the inheritance, whilest she liued. On whose tombe this sentence grauen in golden letters (promising resurrection to him and to hir) is set downe by hir husband as followeth:

Qui credit in me non moritur in æternum.

The same yeare the six and twentith of Januarie, he confirmed the election of Nicholas Bullingham bishop of Lincolne to the bishoprike of Worcester, in whose see at Lincolne was Thomas Cooper placed, and consecrated at Lambeth the foure and twentith of Februarie. And in the same yeare, the eightéenth date of March, he consecrated William Wradbridge, professor of diuinitie, and deane of Salisburie, to the bishoprike of Exceter. Then he new shingled his house at Lambeth, making there a new bridge into the Thames, and reparing the notable solarie or sellar in the garden built at the charge of Cranmer, and almost now destroied. Besides which, he further repared two water courses, one comming into the garden, and the other into the inner cloister, to serue the common vse of the household. Moreouer in the same yeare he procured the new street in Cambridge, directlie leading from the west part of saint Maries church, to the gates of the publike schooles, to be new painted, and to be walled on both sides with bricke. Next in the same yeare, in the month of March, he consecrated at Lambeth, Edmund Ghest (bishop of Rochester) to the bishoprike of Salisburie: but because the archdeacon of Canturburie, whose office is to put the consecrated bishops into the possession of their sees deceassed at this time, this Ghest was inducted of the archbishop, by the procurator. After which, in the same place, John Freake professor of diuinitie and deane of Salisburie was made bishop of Rochester, and inducted therevnto by a procurator: at whose consecration were present the bishops Robert and Edmund, the first of Winchester, the second of Salisburie. But leauing this, let vs saie somewhat of his humanitie and courtesie vsed towards such as were committed to restreint vnder his custodie for matters of religion, who were Cutbert Tunstall bishop of Durham, Thomas Thurlebie bishop of Elie, John Boxall secretarie to quéene Marie, Richard Smith professor of diuinitie, doctor Tresham chancellor of Oxford, Edward Rice esquier, and Henrie Howard brother to Thomas duke of Norfolke; all which he vsed with great lenitie and honor, bestowing the charge of the honorable buriall of Cutbert Tunstall, and cauling maister Rice, and Henrie Howard vtterlie to renounce the Romane religion, as saith the author of the life of this Matthew.

After this, on the twelfe date of Aprill, was the yong baron the lord Sturton committed also to this archbishop; who because the quéene came that summer into Kent, went also thither with this archbishop. Of which the quéenes progresse into that countrie (wherein my selfe was borne and bred, & wherein I haue both manie friends and kinred (whome this progresse toucheth) I must aswell (for the loue which I naturallie beare vnto it, as for the courtesie I dailie receiue in it) leaue some memorie to posteritie. Thus therefore I enter into hir maiesties progresse into that countrie. The fourtéenth date of Julie being wednesdaie, the worthie quéene Elisabeth departed from Grænwich, and went to Croidon, where with hir traine she remained in the archbishops house; from thense she passed to Orpington, to the house of sir Perciuall Hart, an old knight & ancient courtier, where she staied three daies, from thense remouing to hir owne house at Knouls. After whose abode there by the space of fiue daies, she passed forth to Burling, to the house of Henrie Neuill lord of Aburgauennie, which she vsed for three daies. And departing from thense on the kalends of August, she went to another house of the said lords, called Eridge; & hauing staied there six daies, hir maiestie taketh hir iourneie to Bodgburie, belonging to Alexander Culpeper, and the next date came to Hampsted, where Thomas Gilford (after made knight) receiued hir into his house. In which, when she had remained three daies, she passed on to Rie, a towne of the sea costes of Sussex, belonging to the ports; whither the people affirmed that neuer king nor quéene euer came before hir maiestie, the truth whereof I will not at this time either approue or reproue.

In this place she rested three daies, and then spent other three at Sisingherst, the house of Richard Baker, whome she made knight at hir departure. Next on the seuentéenth date of August, which was mondaie, she came to Bocton Malcherbe, to the house of that worthie gentleman Thomas Wotton, where she was two daies largelie interteined. For which, when hir maiestie would haue honored him with the state of knighthood, as manie of his ancestors had béene before, he modestlie refused the same, rather séeking honor by vertue of life, and benefit to his countrie, than by the fauor and persuasion of others. From this mans house hir maiestie kept on hir progresse to Yetsield, to the house of maister Tufton; in which also staieng two daies, she passed from thense to hir own house of Westinhanger, then in the custodie of Thomas Sackeuill knight, baron of Buckehurst, where she spent foure daies.

After this, as she hastened towards Douer, she dined in the castell of Sandwich, and then being ascended Folkestone hill, this Matthew archbishop of Canturburie (who at that time remained at Bekesborne) and the lord Cobham warden of the fiue ports (accompanied with three hundred knights and gentlemen of Kent, all well horsed and attended vpon with a large retinue) did meet the queene vpon the same hill; all which waited vpon hir to Douer. In the furthest parts of the liberties of which towne, the maior and the iurats thereof, with three hundred armed men receiued the queene, and in the night conducted hir to Douer, where she was interteined with a noble peale of ordinance discharged from the castell, and the ships riding thereabouts. All which meetings, and hir receiuing into Douer, was done the fiue and twentith daie of August. Now hauing rested hir selfe six daies at Douer, interteined with delights answerable for the time, and for hir presence, she came to Sandwich, where she remained (being well receiued by the maior and iurats of the same towne, during hir abode there) by the space of three daies.

The next daie, which was the third of September, she tooke hir iourneie towards Canturburie, dined by the waie at Wingham, and then entered the citie somewhat after three of the clocke in the afternoone. Who presentlie going to the cathedrall church, & entring the same at the west gate, a yong man, then scholer of the grammar schoole, receiued hir with a Latine oration. Which ended, and she knéeling at a deske, the archbishop, the bishops of Lincolne, Rochester, and of Douer, vsed praiers for hir comming thither. Then the deane with the prebends, canons, ministers, and the whole quier of the church of Canturburie, and manie other singers of hir chapell went before hir (hauing a canopie borne ouer hir head by foure knights) through the quier vntill she came to the place appointed for hir oratorie; from whense (after euening praier done) she came along the stréet to hir palace of ancient time called saint Augustines: and the sundaie following, she went in hir coch through the stréets to the same church, and so returned home: on which daie the deane preached before hir. The next daie of which hir remaining at Canturburie (being the seuenth daie of September, and the daie of hir maiesties birth, making vp the fortith yeare of hir age) she was with all hir traine inuited to dinner by the archbishop of that citie. The order of which feast being celebrated much about the houre of hir birth, was after this sort.

The noble men did onelie attend vpon the queene, who as soone as she had washed hir hands, came to the table set in breadth in the highest place of the archbishops hall; in the midst whereof, vnder a canopie or cloth of estate, hir maiestie did sit in a certeine old marble chaire, alwaies there fixed, and now decked with pretious cloths of gold. Then the erle Ritius the marshall of France (who a little before, being sent ambassador from the French king, was with a hundred gentlemen come vnto Canturburie) togither with monsieur de Mote the French kings orator, were placed at the end of the queenes table, vpon the right hand of the queene, with their faces to hir maiestie, and their backs towards the hall; to the end that they might more conuenientlie talke with hir. And at the other end of the board on the left hand were placed foure ladies, which were the marchionesse of Northhampton, with the countesses of Oxford, Lincolne, and Warwike. At what time the pensioners serued the queene, and hir maiesties other seruants attended on the ambassador, the orator, and the ladies. The furniture of whose table consisted of two courses, of most delicat fish and flesh; and one third course of fruit & other banketting deuises. Hir maiestie thus placed, the other tables in the hall were also furnished; whereof, at the first (which stood at the right hand of the queene) were set the archbishop with diuerse counsellors and other noble men and women, of which the chiefe were such as came out of France. And at the table on the left hand of the queene were placed manie ladies and worshipfull women. At the tables somewhat further off were set the maior, the ancient citizens of Canturburie, and other gentlemen and gentlewomen of Kent, all which were serued with the archbishops retinue. Thus this solemnitie ended (whereof I haue omitted manie things, as well for order of seruice, as for musike and other delights) the queene went into the bishops gallerie, hauing long talke with the French ambassador, almost till night.

When hir maiestie departed, after that she had imparted manie great thanks vnto the bishop for this sumptuous and chargeable feast, and for the rich gifts which the archbishop did moreouer bestow vpon hir (as well of horses, as other iewels) amongst which was one salt of gold, which hauing two rich achats therein curiouslie carued, the one with the queenes image, and the other with saint George killing the dragon, and a long diamond in the couer, with French verses; it was valued at more than two hundred marks, besides the six portigues which were inclosed in the same salt, when he gaue it to the queene. Moreouer, the archbishop bestowed manie goodlie gifts vpon others of the councell, and of hir maiesties traine; with fiue hundred pounds, which he gaue amongst the officers of hir house. And yet not contented herewith, he kept open house for all commers, during the time that the queene remained at Canturburie.

The next sundaie also the queene came to the cathedrall church in hir coch through the street: and so returned againe, after morning praier and a sermon made by the bishop of Lincolne. Thus the queene remaining fourteene daies at Canturburie, she went on wednesdaie to Feuersham, where she remained two daies. Then on fridaie she passeth to Sittingburne, and laie that night at the house of James Cromer esquier, a good member of his common-wealth. The next daie she came to Rochester, and rested foure daies there in an inne called the crowne, the onelie place to interteine princes comming thither; as in my time I haue seene both king Philip and the queene to haue rested themselues there. From thense she goeth to Dartford a house of hir owne, and so after two daies to Grænwich, where she ended hir progresse. In which hir Kentish progresse (which by the queene of all other countries is most commended, as well for the troops of gentlemen which continuallie attended on hir, as for the varietie of delights which were there shewed, the learned inuentions & orations, and the rich shewes of the countrie) the shiriffe with a goodlie traine of knights and gentlemen did continuallie attend vpon hir maiestie, from hir first entrance into that shire, vntill hir returne vnto Grænewich. This being spoken of, let vs returne againe to this archbishop. After the queene was setled at Grænewich, the archbishop commeth to Lambeth, where hearing the fame of this interteinement of the queene, he greatlie reioised that he had liued so long, that being the seuentie archbishop of that sée, he should in the seuentie yeare of his age, receiue so honorable a prince as his soueraigne was, and giue hir a feast the daie of hir birth.

should

After this, he did at Lambeth on the thirteenth daie of December consecrat William Hughes doctor of diuinitie, chosen by the quæne to be bishop of saint Assaph; of whome he obteined that daie the accustomed fee for his consecration and confirmation; togither with the aduouson (which belonged to the archbishop by right of his prerogatiue) of the parish church of Llanduechen, in the diocesse of S. Assaph, then appertaining to the gift of the same bishop: which grant was confirmed by the consent of the deane and chapter, and signed with their common seale. The nert moneth in Januarie came Peter Dathen, orator from the countie Palatine of Rheine, to the quæne of England, to whome (after that the archbishop had greatlie feasted him) the archbishop gaue a guilt cup with a couer of three and fortie ounces of siluer: in the bottome whereof was the image of a citie grauen, hauing a serpent vnderneath it, lieng in a lake, and seking to deuoure the same citie; about which were written these two Latine verses, expressing the proper sense and meaning of this hieroglyphicall image or portrature:

Vrbs ego sancta Dei, serpentis fraude vetusti
Quassa, Pal-tini sæpe potentis ope.

This bishop, liuing in all worldie delights, did yet kæpe such a moderation of gouernment in himselfe, and in the ordering of all things, that he seemed most rightlie to be indued with the vertue of temperance: and therefore not esteeming of the present pleasures of this life, he allwaies vsed this posie in his windowes and other places: Mundus transit & concupiscentia eius. Which he caused also to be printed in his archiepiscopall seale, with the figure of the daie of iudgement. And now hauing spoken somewhat of his posie, let vs not also forget to write somewhat of his armes. It is supposed by some, that the keis which he bare in these ensignes of his, were by long inheritance of ancient familie descended vnto him: which armes being gules a cheuron siluer betweene three keis; at the last, the quæne commanded that three starres should be added thereunto, which the harolds placed in the cheuron, with the colour of gules: of which armes, namelie the three keies, & the three starres, doctor Haddon composed these verses:

Sunt antiquorum claues monumenta tuorum,
Venit ab augusto principe stella triplex:
Sic bene conspirant, virtus, doctrina, potestas,
Et placidæ pacis fœmina læta ferunt.
Sed tandem ad finem decurrant gaudia vitæ,
Ac homo puluis erit, puluis vt antè fuit.

This man wrote in the English tong a booke of priests mariages; he composed manie homilies to be read in the church; he procured Matthew Paris and Matthew Westminster to be printed; he set forth the foure euangelists in the old Saxon, and now English tong; and wrote a booke in Latine of the liues of the archbishops of that see (as some affirme) which I haue vsed much in this discourse, of the liues of the archbishops of Canturburie. He departed this world the seuentæenth daie of Maie (about midnight) at Lambeth, where he was honorablie buried: on whose toome (being of blacke marble) is ingrauen an epitaph, composed by the same doctor Haddon, and set downe before in this chronicle.

Edmund Grindall.

Edmund Grindall, descending of honest parentage (such as liued within the limits of good subiects, with the trade of certeine kind of merchandize; by which they neuer obteined the greatest wealth, nor by want felt the griefe of miserie) was borne in a towne commonlie called saint Bees, but rightlie saint Beges, standing in the west promontorie of Cumberlandshire. Which towne was so named of saint Bega, a godlie and religious woman borne in Ireland: who comming thither to liue a solitarie life in contemplation, as one estranged from the cares and troubles of the world, did there end hir daies, leauing a perpetuall memorie of hir being there; in that the same place, after rising to a proper towne, did still reteine the name of that woman, being called saint Beges or saint Bees. Whereby his birth place being famous by that woman, renowmed for hir religion and priuat life, is no lesse famous now, in bringing forth this man, who for his religion suffering a kind of persecution in the time of quæne Marie (as after shall appeare) was aduanced to the highest degree of ecclesiasticall honor in England. In which, for the fauor he bare vnto that place (as all men naturallie dow, by a certeine sympathie, which our flesh doth participat of the aire and soile wherewithout life is first nourished) he did there cause (for a perpetuall monument of his good loue and fauor thereunto) a free grammar schole to be erected (whereof we will speake more hereafter) in the same towne & place of his birth. Who being brought into the world much about the yeare of our redemption one thousand fiue hundred and nine-tæne (as I gather by certeine circumstances of his age when he died, which was past the great clymacteticall yeare, for he was threescore and foure yeares of age at such time as he departed the world) was (after that he had spent his tender yeares in the first rudiments) conuoied vnto Cambridge, there to be further instructed in learning, whereunto by naturall inclination he seemed greatlie addicted. In which place he much profited in studie, to the comfort of his friends, and to his owne following aduancement and credit. For he not onelie there receiued degrees of schole, as that he was called to be a maister of arts, but also was made fellow and maister likewise of Penbroke hall, where he had bæne first brought vp and instructed. Besides hauing executed the office of proctor in that vniuersitie, which is not the meanest rowme there, he afterwards rising to higher degree of scholasticall promotions, was made bacheler of diuinitie; hauing mostlie imploied his time, and profited his knowledge by the studie thereof, as appeareth by his disputations at Cambridge, on the foure and twentith daie of June, in the yeare of Christ one thousand fiue hundred fortie and nine, being in the third yeare of king Edward the first. For in the second of these disputations (appointed by the protector the duke of Somerset, at what time the visitors, before whome the same disputations were holden, were Ridleie bishop of Rochester, Thomas bishop of Elie, John Cheke the kings schoolemaister, doctor Yale a ciuilian, and doctor Wendie the kings physician) he disputed against doctor Sitn; whose arguments are liberallie set downe by maister Fox in his acts and monuments.

Thus, when he had spent some time in that place, he did forsake the vniuersitie, and began to make shew in the world of those skilfull parts wherewith he was indued. Wherefore being furthered by the helps, which his cousine William Grindall (schoolemaister to hir maiestie now liuing) could afford him; he was called into the affaires of the world, and made knowne to hir maiestie, then but ladie Elisabeth, in the daies of hir brother king Edward the first. To whom by the meanes of his good friends he was preferred in seruice, and admitted to be the kings chapleine, after that he had spent some time in the seruice of Nicholas Ridleie bishop of London, as chapleine vnto the said bishop. Which Ridleie, leie, being by the kings appointment to be remoued from London to Durham (a place of more reuenues, and also a countie palatine) this Edmund Grindall stood in election to haue bene bishop of London; but manie things falling betweene the mouth and the cup, he was disappointed thereof. For before that he could receiue anie admittance into that see, his maister king Edward the sixt departed the world. Whereby he was not-onelie disappointed of that honor, but driuen to that extremitie, that he was inforced amongst others to flie the realme, and to passe into Germanie; where he continued all the time of queene Marie, as after shall appeare. The cause of which voluntarie banishment of himselfe out of England was as followeth.

When king Edward was dead, in the yeare of our redemption one thousand fiue hundred fiftie and three; and that his sister queene Marie, a woman estranged from him in the points of religion, had obteined the crowne; she not onelie banished such doctrine, as was by hir brother set forth: but also brought in the Romane ceremonies, the which manie (professing the other doctrine in hir brothers daies not being able to sustteine) did (following the counsell of our sauiour Christ, who willeth vs when we are pursued in one citie, to flie into another) forsake England: for that they might not suffer or sustteine that innouation of queene Marie, denieng them the libertie of their conscience, to serue God according to the gospell. Amongst which persons, being manie, this Edmund Grindall (reserued vnto further honor after this trouble) was one, and not the meanest which fled the realme into Germanie; where he remained well intertеined amongst them, vntill the death of queene Marie; which happened in the yeare of Christ, one thousand fiue hundred fiftie and eight. At what time the crowne was deuolued vnto hir sister, the now reigning queene Elisabeth, who (banishing to Rome all such ceremonies as hir sister had set vp, restoring the free preaching of the euangelicall doctrine, and granting free passage to such as had bene exiled to returne home to their desired countrie) did gratiouslie and fauorablie receiue those preachers comming out of Germanie, and held them in greater honor than euer they were before. At what time this Edmund Grindall, hauing now recouered his sweet & native soile of England, was after his comming home aduanced to the chaire of the bishoprike of London, where he continued in gouernment about eleuen yeares, being a person well beloued and honored of the Citizens. During which time he did in Pauls preach a funerall sermon for the emperor, whose obsequies were there celebrated with all honor thereunto apperteining.

After which, about the yeare of Christ one thousand fiue hundred threescore and nine, he was remoued from London to the see of Yorke, where he continued by the space of six yeares; being from thense in Februarie, in the yeare of Christ one thousand fiue hundred threescore and fiftеne, aduanced to the highest spirituall dignitie in England, & made archbishop of Canturburie. Where now growing to the highth of his honor, he not long inioied the same in full perfection. For as the wheele, when it is at the highest, must turne; and as the faireſt cedar is most subiect vnto the power of the winds: so this man began somewhat to decline, and the beames of his honorable place were somewhat eclipsed, by the clouds of hir maiesties displeasure conceiued against him. For he was called before authoritie, where standing vpon the defense of his cause, and growing in mislike with hir maiestie therefore; he was committed to restreint in his owne house. In which estate he continued vntill his death, without releasе thereof. So greeuous a thing it is to fall into the princes disgrace: which Salomon saith is death, Sed vir sapiens placabit eam. Before the time of whose death (about the space of some two yeares) he was depriued of the benefit of his sight, and so continuing vntill his death, he fell into a feuer and lingering sickenes; wherein (one quarter of a yeare before he surrendred his soule) he did pininglie consume his life. At what time (because he would not late that vpon the conscience of another, which he might himselfe performe; and so leaue that to be done by his executors after his death, which he might dispatch in his life) he like a carefull and wise prelat appointed a free grammar schoole, as is touched a little before in the beginning of his life, to be built in the place where he was borne. For doing whereof (as he did also for the rest of the things which follow) he some ten or twelue daies before his death deliuered forth the monie to such as hereafter should be his executors; and further for the maintenance of the same schoole appointed a yeerelie reuenue of fiue and twentie pounds land to be annexed thereunto. Moreouer he deliuered forth monie so much as would purchase twentie pounds land by the yeare, which should be assured to Queenes colledge in Oxford, with as much monie as should buie twentie pound lands by yeare, to be conueied ouer to Penbroke hall in Cambridge, the vniuersitie wherein he was nourished and tooke degree in schoole. Wherewith not yet satisfied, he did in his life, a little before his death, bestow fiftie pounds vpon the almshouse of Croidon, for the releefe and maintenance of such poore and impotent people as were there. Which being done, he as one that now perceiued the time of his death drawing neere, and that he had dispatched most of those gifts and liberalities which he meant to bestow, tooke his leaue of the world and departed this life the first of Julie An. 1583, at Croidon, where he was also buried, when he had bene archbishop of Canturburie much about the space of seuen yeares. After whose death the see remained not void by the space of three moneths, but that hir maiestie aduanced John Whitegift thereunto, as here at hand more fullie appeareth.

John Whitegift.

John Whitegift now archbishop of Canturburie (a man of no lesse grauitie than learning and honor, as both the worthie bookes which he hath left to posteritie, and the honorable offices, as well ecclesiasticall as ciuill, by him borne, do well witnesse) being descended of honest parentage, was borne about the yere of our Lord God one thousand fiue hundred thirtie and three, at great Grimsbie in Lincolnshire, a place no lesse knowne to antiquitie for things there passed in former ages, than now famous by the birth of this man. Which Grimsbie being by some in old times called Grimundesbie, doth occasion me to treat somewhat thereof in this place, concerning the cause whie it was so named. Which matter being set downe in manie of our chronicles, as in Caxton, Henrie Knighton, Eulogium, Scala chronicôn, Campden, and others, I will deliuer the words of the said Authors, least I might seeme (in being ambitious in names) to bring emptie casks without anie wine. The words of which authors, although they be long & to some maie seeme needlesse to be so often remembred, yet I haue not refused to giue euerie author leaue to tell his owne tale, for that I would not seeme to wrong them in misreporting thereof; and for that I desire to make common by manie copies (as occasion maie serue) the writings of former ages remaining in priuat hands. Thus therefore to begin with Henrie Knighton, a canon of Leicester, I set downe his owne words liberallie describing the historie of the name of Grimesbie in this sort.

words

Interea videamus quam ob causam, & qua ratione, Canutus venit in Angliam, & misit clameum in regno Angliæ. Fuit quondam in Anglia quidam rex Ethelwoldus nomine, & genuit duos filios & duas filias, & moriebantur, excepta filia minore nomine Goldesborough ætate sex annorum & dimidium, quando pater eius moriebatur. Iste Ethelwoldus dū moriretur, cōmendauit tutelam filij sui cuidam Godricho duci Normaniæ, qui maritauit eam cuidam Hauelocke filio Birkelani regis Daciæ apud Lincoln, qui postea regnauit tam in Anglia quam in Dacia similiter: in Dacia iure hæreditario, & in Anglia iure hæreditatis vxoris suæ. Per quod Dani sumpserunt nimiam audaciam in Anglia, & suppeditauerunt Anglos longo tempore, sicut continetur in historia de Grimesbi. Quia quidam Grim nomine nutrivit prædictum Hauelocke apud Grimesbi, vsq; ad tempus quo ipse Hauelock desponsauit prædictam Goldesborough apud Lincoln. Et quia prædictus Grim quando primum adduxit puerum de Dacia primo applicuit illo loco qui sortitus est nomen à nomine ipsius Grimesbi. Iste Hauelock regnauit 31 annos, & rexit populū suum cū ingēti honore, & genuit quindecim filios & filias, & moriebantur omnes præter quatuor in iuuētute sua, & senior istorum quatuor vocabatur Gourmundus, quem proposuit præfeciſſe hæredem suum Angliæ, & secundus vocabatur Canutus (de quo loquitur in præsenti) quem fecit regem Daciæ quum esset 18 annorum. De regno Angliæ ipsemet contentus, volens reseruare regnum Angliæ filio suo Gourmundo, iste Gourmundus ascenso equo indomito (volens magistralia attemptare) fregit collum suum. Tertius filius vocatus est Godardus, quem feoffauit in senescharia Daciæ & in mercimoniatu Angliæ, quæ non se extendebat ad tantū valorem qui nunc. Quartus vocatus est Thoraldus, qui duxit vxorem comitissam Hebertow in Norwegia, cuius affinitas in Norwegia perseuerat vsque ad præsens, & maior amicitia inter regem Norwegiæ & regem Daciæ adhuc confirmatur, & qualibet vice quando Dani intrauerunt posthac in Anglia pro clameo mittendo in regnum Norigi cū eis affucrunt, suum præbendo auxiliū, donec Guido de Warwik finem fecit in hac parte.

Peculiaris historia de Grimesbi.

Grimel nutrit de ducunt nomen.

Thus much Knighton, which is confirmed by Eulogium, written by a monke of Canturburie, who hath set downe the same historie at large, knitting vp the matter with these words, lib. 5. a. 44. d. gathered out of diuers places of the same. Rex Edelfridus quandam habuit sororem nomine Orwen, & illam maritauit regi Ethelberto, quod coniugium vinculū amoris inter duos reges cathenabat. Rex autem Ethelbertus terram citra Trentam cum regio diademate occupauit, cum terra de Northfolke & Suffolke adiacentibus. Rex verò Edelfridus comitatum Lincolniæ & Lindeseiæ cum eis spectantibus. Rex verò Athelbert de vxore sua filiā genuit nomine Argentile, quæ nupta fuit Hauelock, &c.

John Knighton, writer, gist.

Which matter being liberallie also recorded by one Graie of Northumberland, as Leland getteth (the author of the chronicle intituled Scala chronicorum after the arms of the said Graie, which was a ladder, and after the imagination of a dreame which he theweth of a ladder in the prolog; which Graie being an Englishman and taken prisoner in the wars nere vnto Edenburgh in Scotland, did turne that chronicle out of French rime into French prose) I will not refuse to deliuer, as the same was turned into English by Leland; and that the rather, because the same Graie after the reciting of the same historie touching Grimesbie, in the end seemeth to conclude with some doubt of the truth of the matter, for that he called it an apocrypha, or thing not vniuersallie receiued, as appeareth in these words. Some ,, saie, in Constantine king of Britains daies, that Ethelbright and Edelseie were small kings vnder ,, him, whereof the first was king of Northfolke and Suffolke, and the other of Lindseie. And the two ,, kings increased, and Ethelbright toke to wife Dr- ,, wene the sister of Edelseie, of whome he begat a ,, daughter called Argentile in British, a Goldes- ,, rough in Saxon. And this Goldesborough was after ,, left with hir vncle Edelseie, on condition, that he ,, which in feats of armes might be found most noble, ,, should haue his daughter; who was after married ,, to one Hauelocke, which was sonne to the king of ,, Denmarke, but conueied by sleight into England, ,, and after the truth knowne, was restored in Den- ,, marke as the true heire. One Curane sonne vnto ,, Grime (a poore fisher, not able to keepe him for po- ,, uertie) a strong and a mightie yong fellow, came to ,, Edelseie his court into Lindseie, and there was ,, first a turner of broches in the kitchin, and after by ,, valiant deeds grew to great name. Grime had Ha- ,, uelocke by the commandement of the king of Den- ,, marks steward deliuered to him to be drowned: ,, but hauing pitie on him, he conueied him to Lin- ,, seie, to a place since called of his name, Grimesbie: ,, but this historie of some is counted but apocrypha. ,, And some saie that Sweine of Denmarke, father ,, to king Cnute first attempted Lindseie by the first ,, comming thither and mariage of Hauelocke. Thus much Scala chronicon. which in this sort censuring this historie, did (as I suppose) occasion that learned antiquarie Campden to write of the same in this sort in his Britannia, in the title of Lincolnshire, pag. 306. Deinde Louth frequentatum emporiolum, cui Lud fluuiolus nomen impertijt, & postea Grimesbi, quod Sabini nostri (qui quod volunt somniant) à Grimo mercatore sic dictum volunt, qui quòd Hauelocum regium Danorum puellulum expositum educauerat, fabellis decantatur cum Haueloco illo pupillo, qui in regis coquina primò lixa, & postea regis filiæ nuptijs ob heroicam fortitudinem honoratus, nescio quæ facinora gesit, illis dignissima qui anilibus fabulis noctem protrudere solent.

The author of Scala chronicon.

Wherefore passing ouer those things touching Grimsbie, the etymon whereof I leaue to some Apollo to declare, let vs descend to some such notable thing (whereof no question maie arise) as hath beene there doone. Touching which thus writeth Piers Longtoft in his chronicles of England written in French verse; in which he setteth downe, that in the time of Ethelred, the Danes infesting this land, arriued at Grimesbie, and so spoiled the countrie, as appeareth in these his French verses following:

Mes l'an suaunt a pres sunt cyl ariuez,
A mont de Grymesby, a Nicole sunt alez
Vastant & destruent, kant ke eit trouez
Le false counte Ederick al roy ad taunt perlez, Ke la pees est feye & Eylred enginez.

Thus leauing the place of the birth of this archbishop, and going forward with our purpose, we saie that he did participat his race with ancient gentrie, and some such persons as their place and office made honourable. For he was by kindred and bloud alied to the Fulnetbæs, and to Godrich sometime lord chancellor of England. The familie of the first being descended from an ancient race, hath yet his being in Lincolneshire, whereof Fulnetbæ at this daie liuing is indued with faire possessions. And the other (Godrich) being bishop of Elie & chancellor of England, a man as learned as honourable) obteined a perpetuall remembrance therof amongst posteritie, in that he did not degenerat from the Saxon etymon of his name, which signifieth a person both good & rich, sith he was vertuous in life and honorable in his calling. Besides, this John Whitegift had an uncle called Whitegift, lord abbat of the abbeie of Wellow (as I take it) Iuxta Grimsbie, at the last suppression of the abbeies.

allied

Now in this man, of whom we purposelie speake, there appeared euen in his tender and yong yeares a great towardnesse in learning, wherein he highlie profited as after shall appeare. For being by God his goodnesse and beneficiall natures inclination framed thereunto, he did in his first and youngest yeares wholie consecrate himselfe to the muses; by meanes of which naturall forwardnesse in him, he was (for more increase thereof) by his frends furtherance first trained to some practise skill in song, and after taught the rudiments of grammar in S. Anthonies schole in London, where he some yeares remained, vntill he was found apt to ascend to higher places of learning, and then was committed to the tuition of maister Bradford that famous martyr, then fellow of Penbroke hall in Cambridge, about the third yeare of the reigne of blessed king Edward: where continuing his studie with earnest desire and great profiting, he was first by doctor Ridleie then bishop of London & maister of that college, and maister Grindall then president there and afterwards archbishop of Canturburie his means chosen bible-clearke, and after that was inuested with the degree of bacheler of arts, being not long after from Penbroke hall (with the good liking and consent of all the fellows) chosen fellow of Peterhouse in that vniuersitie, where he proceeded to the degree of maister of arts, and bacheler in diuinitie, continuing his studie in that college by the space of twelue or thirteene yeares, and thereby atteining to great skill & knowledge in the Greeke and Latine tongs, diuinitie and all other good learnings. Whose profitable trauell in the tongs and sciences did well appeare in his painfull lectures and other exercises, as well in the said college, as in other his exercises and disputations abroode: but speciallie at a commensement, wherin he was father of the act at the bachelers proceedings. Moreouer, his dailie proceeding in the studie and knowledge of diuinitie (whereunto he wholie applied himselfe, making the same the centre wherin to end the lines of the circumference of all humane learnings) was not onelie made apparant by the learned readings that he made, being reader of the diuinitie lecture called the ladie Margarets in the said vniuersitie, & after that of the quænes maiesties lecture in diuinitie, by a good number of yeares (in which he expounded ouer the whole epistle to the Hebrues, & the reuelation of saint John) and likewise by the learned bookes which by good occasion he hath written: but also by his continuall, godlie, and dæpelie learned sermons, vttered in the vniuersitie of Cambridge (both in Latine & English) in the citie of London, and in the court before hir maiestie, & elsewhere.

And as almightie God did blesse his labours in studie of all kind of godlie sciences and knowledge, whereunto were ioined great humilitie, vertue, vprightnesse of life, and constancie, both in matters of religion, and priuat frendship: so did he singularlie blesse the fruits of his learning with increase of preferments and dignities in the church and the commonwealth. First, during his fellowship in Peterhouse, immediatlie vpon his being minister, preacher, and chapleine to doctor Cox, late bishop of Elie, the said bishop bestowed vpon him the parsonage of Teuersham neere vnto Cambridge, and after that a prebend belonging to the cathedrall church of Elie. Next (for his vertue, learning, and gouernment, whereof he had giuen good experiment) being president vnder the maister of Peterhouse, he was in the roome of doctor Hutton deane of Yorke, chosen by the fellows of Penbroke hall to be maister there, about Easter, in the yeare of our Lord God one thousand fiue hundred sixtie and seauen, in which yeare he also was orderlie called to the degree of doctor in diuinitie. But in the maistership of Penbroke hall he did not long continue, for such was the wise gouernment and cariage of himselfe (with a carefull and mild seueritie for the due obseruation of the lawes, statutes, and orders of the vniuersitie of Cambridge, and of the colleges he had gouernement in, not admitting anie innouation in them, or in anie other such good and tolerable orders) that vpon the death of doctor Beaumont he was, in the said yeare of Christ 1567, being the tenth yeare of the quænes maiesties happie reigne, by hir highnesse appointed and made maister of Trinitie college in the said vniuersitie: at what time he was also worthilie aduanced to be one of the swoorne chapleins to hir maiestie. During the time of his carefull and wise gouernment of that great college, which was by the space of ten yeares, he was twise by the generall good liking of the whole vniuersitie chosen vicechancellor. In the latter yeare of whose magistracie, being 1573, hir maiestie did bestow vpon him the deanrie of the church of Lincolne, whervnto was adioined afterwards the prebend of Nassington in that church. And such was the opinion iustlie conceiued of his learning, integritie and gouernment, that besides the education of the lord Herbert sonne and heire to the earle of Worcester, and of maister John North sonne and heire vnto the lord North in Peterhouse, there was at one time vnder his tuition in Trinitie college, the right honorable George earle of Cumberland, Edward lord Zouch, the lord Dunboine of Ireland, and two of the sonnes of sir Nicholas Bacon knight lord keeper of the great seale, with diuerse other yong gentlemen, ouer whome he had the ouersight for their education in good learning and vertue. And in the synod and clergie (which was held in the yeare of Christ 1571 and the 14 yeare of the quænes reigne, vpon a deserued opinion of his graue modestie and mildnesse of disposition, accompanied with great gifts of learning) he was chosen prolocutor: which function he right well performed both at that session and the session following, holden in the 18 yeare of hir maiesties reigne for the clergies benefit, and to hir maiesties verie good liking. Shortlie after which time, in the yeare of Grace 1577, and the 19 yeare of the quænes reigne, he was about Easter preferred by hir maiestie to the bishoprike of Worcester; and in September after by hir highnesse made vicepresident of hir councell in the principalitie and marches of Wales, in the absence of sir Henrie Sidneie knight then lord deputie of Ireland. Which office of vicepresidentship though he did beare during all the time of his being bishop of Worcester (which was by the space of six yeares and more) yet he did personallie execute and attend the same but onelie two yeares and an halfe, the lord president himselfe being then returned. During which time of attendance he so painefullie and so carefullie demeaned himselfe also in his other charge and function ecclesiasticall, stastical, that it did well appeare to all those countries adiacent, that his doing of iustice to and vpon others was no hinderance to the teaching of iustice and godlinesse to others, which euen then he continuallie practised. Afterwards doctor Grindall archbishop of Canturburie dieng in the moneth of Julie 1583, it pleased God to put into hir maiesties hart to nominat him in August after archbishop of that see, whose election thereunto was confirmed at Lambeth on the 23 of September following. And on the second of Februarie 1585, according to the computation of our church of England, being the 28 of hir maiesties reigne, he with other worthie and honorable personages was sworne one of hir highnes priuie councell; which honor vnder hir maiesties most gracious gouernement I praie God he may long inioie. Thus hauing set end to the discourse of the archbishops of Canturburie, with this reuerend prelat John Whitegift now liuing, order leadeth vs to a collection of the lord Cobhams, for that the lord Cobham now liuing is the next person (after the same John Whitegift) which is next before mentioned to haue bene sworne of hir maiesties councell.

A treatise of the lord Cobhams, with the lord wardens of the cinque ports: gathered (as well out of ancient records and monuments, as out of our histories of England) by Francis Boteuile, commonlie surnamed Thin, in the yeare of our redemption, 1586.

THe diuine philosopher Plato, diuiding nobilitie into foure degrées, saith; that the first is of such as be descended of famous, good, iust, and vertuous ancestors; the second are they whose former grandfathers were princes and mightie persons; the third sort be such as be renowmed by worthie fame, in that they haue obteined a crowne and reward for anie valiant exploit, or in anie other excellent action in the feats of warre; the fourth and chéefest kind of noble men, are persons which of themselues excell in the prerogatiue of the mind, and benefit of vertuous life. For he is most rightlie termed noble, whome his owne dowries of the mind, and not an others worthinesse doth nobilitate. Whereupon Socrates being demanded what was true nobilitie, answered: Animi corporisque temperantia. And Cassiodorus prooueth, that of all others, the nobilitie gotten by our selues is the most excellent, when he saith: Nobilitas à me procedens, est mihi cordi, plusquam quæ ex patrum procedit nobilitate: quia in quo definit cuiusque nobilitas, tunc auorum nobilitate congruè indiget. The reason whereof, and the cause whie a man is counted most noble by his owne actions, the graue and morall Seneca hath appointed to be the nobilitie of his mind, which alwaies seeketh to performe worthie and honourable actions, for thus he deliuereth vs his opinion vpon the same: Habet hoc optimum generosus animus, quòd concitatur ad honesta. Neminem excelsi animi virum humilia delectant & sordida. Fœlix qui ad meliora imperium animi dedit: ponet se extra conditionem fortunæ, prospera tentabit, aduersa comminuet, & aliis admiranda despiciet. Now if anie one of all these things by themselues in particular falling in seuerall persons maketh euerie such person noble, who tasteth but one of these foure distinctions of nobilitie: how much more is that person to be termed noble, and rightlie to be honoured therfore, in whom all these foure parts or the most of them do concur; as to be descended of good, of mightie, of ancient, and of warlike ancestors, and himselfe not to degenerate from them, euen in the chéefest point of all others, which is in his owne actions, therein most of all to nobilitate himselfe and his posteritie? All which as I haue persuaded my selfe are to be found in one, who at this time (as is before said) was amongest others for his worthinesse and merit aduanced to the estate of a councellor vnder the rarest princesse and queene of this our present age. Which noble person being so preferred to that place ministreth iust cause to me to record some antiquities touching the lords of Cobham, and the wardens of the cinque ports; and that the rather, for that the lord Cobham now liuing, being the glorie of that ancient and honorable familie, not onelie meriteth well of his countrie, as after shall appeare; but is also an honorable Mecenas of learning, a louer of learned persons, and not inferior in knowledge to anie of the borne nobilitie of England.

But leauing him for this instant to himselfe (of whome I cannot saie that which I ought, and he deserueth, and for auoiding the note of flatterie, I maie not saie that which I can, and euerie man knoweth) I will orderlie descend to my purposed catalog of the lords of Cobham, and the wardens of the cinque ports, which I will set downe in that sort, as the pedegrée of that neuer sufficientlie praised lord treasuror of England, sir William Cecill knight lord Burleigh, is deliuered to the world in my former discourse of the lord treasurors of England, pag. 1238. Wherefore thus I begin with the lord Cobhams.

William Quatermer, which signifieth as much as William of the foure seas, was lord Cobham of Cobham in Kent, and florished in the time of king Henrie the second. This man, being a knight and belonging to king Henrie the second, was called the kings knight; because that the king, after the seruice done by this Quatermer beyond the seas, brought him out of Normandie into England; where the king recompensed him with the gift of certeine land and rent in Kent of the nature of Gauelkind, together with all the land of Hertland in Schorne, and in the marsh of Bolham, and Swainpoole in Schorne, in the said countie of Kent. Whereunto the king further added all the lands and rents in Cobham; which after tooke denomination of this William Quatermer, and was called Quatermers fee. By force of which grant he possessed this land accordinglie, with all such honor and priuileges as to the same belonged. But after by his deed he gaue vnto Henrie of Cobham all his lands and tenements which he had in the towne of Cobham, as by a dateles deed thereof maie more largelie appeare, as followeth.

The charter whereby William Quatermer gaue to Henrie de Cobham his land in Cobham and Schorne in Kent.

OMnibus hominibus tàm præsentibus quàm futuris Wilhelmus de Quatermares salutem. Nouerit vniuersitas vestra, quòd ego dedi & concessi, & hac præsenti charta mea cõfirmaui Henrico de Cobham pro homagio & seruicio suo, totam terram meam & tenementum quod habui in villa de Cobham, cum toto iure, & homagijs, & eorum sectis, & seruicijs, & redditibus, & releuijs, & in omnibus eschetis, & totam terram & tenementum meum quod habui in villa de Schornes, videlicet totam terram quæ appellatur Gauelland: cum omnibus pertimentibus suis, totum mariscum meum de Bulham, & totum mariscum meum de Swanpoole, cum omnibus aisiamentis quas habeo in prædictis villis in capite de domino rege, per seruicium quarta partis feodi vnius militis. Habendum & tenendum sibi & haredibus suis de me & heredibus meis omnia omnia prædicta tenementa, cum omnibus pertinentibus ad fœdam firmam, absque omni diuisione & diminutione in perpetuum, liberè, & quietè, & integrè. Reddendo inde annuatim mihi & hæredibus meis, ille & hæredes sui decem libras sterlingorum apud Cobham, scilicet ad festum sancti Michaëlis, vel infra octabis, centum solidos; & ad pascha, vel infra octabis centum solidos, pro omnibus terrenis, demandis, & sectis, & querelis. Et ego prædictus Willielmus, & hæredes mei defendemus & quietabimus omnia prædicta tenementa, cum omnibus pertinentijs suis, versum dominum regem, regem, &c: de omnibus seruicijs, quæ pertinet ad quartam partem fœdi vnius militis, de omnibus seruicijs quæ possunt accedere super prædicta tenementa, &c. Testes, Richardus Bereſſe, Willielmus Clouile, Robertus de Sentclere, Stephanus de Cochington, Godfridus de la Deane, &c.

Henrie de Cobham.

Henrie de Cobham, who liued in the 10 of king John, in the yeare of Christ 1208, hauing obteined the lands in Cobham by the grant aforesaid from William Quatermer, was lord of Cobham, and so accounted; and that the rather, bicause that king John, by his charter in the same tenth yeare of his reigne, did confirme to the said Henrie de Cobham all the lands which he had in Kent, or elsewhere, vnder the witnes of Peter de Rupibus, or Peter of the rockes bishop of Winchester, Geffreie Fitzpeter erle of Esser, and Saier de Quincie earle of Winchester, &c. This Henrie had issue three sons, John de Cobham knight his eldest, William de Cobham his second called Cobham of Allington, iustice itinerant in the 40 of Henrie the third, and who further continued that office in the 42 of Henrie the third, as is proued by the records of the exchéker in the priuie seales of 41 of Henrie the third, where this writ is found: Liberate Willielmo de Cobham 20 marcas de termino paschæ, quas ei concessimus, percipiendum ad scaccarium nostrum, ad sustentandum se in seruicio nostro, quamdiu steterit in itinere in officio iusticiarij nostri. The third son of this Henrie Cobham was Reinold de Cobham, another of the iustices itinerants, in the 30 of Henrie the third, being the yeare 1246. I haue read also of one Henrie Cobham shiriffe of London the 13 & 21 of Henrie the third, whom at this time I will neither receiue or reiect to be this Henrie Cobham, to whome Quatermer gaue his lands.

John de Cobham.

John de Cobham knight, lord of the manors of Cobham and Cowling, eldest son to the first Henrie Cobham, came to the manor of Cowling by purchase for foure hundred marks, as appeareth by the effect of a charter, the note whereof came vnto my hands in this sort: Simon de Pelham dat Iohanni de Cobham manerium de Cowling, &c: pro 400 marcis præ manibus solutis. Hijs testibus, Rogero de Northwood, D. Fulcone Paiferer, D. W Sentclere, D. Will de Valouis, militibus. This John married two wiues, the first was the daughter of William Fitzbenet, by whome he had issue John de Cobham the yonger, or the second of that name, and Henrie de Cobham of Rundall or Randall, of whome we will intreat hereafter when we haue finished the lineall descents and orderlie successions vnto our time of the lord Cobhams of Cobham. After the death of which his first wife, this John Cobham knight married his second wife called Ione, the daughter of Hugh Neuill, by whom he had issue Reinold de Cobham knight, lord of Allington, an other person different from the former Reinold de Cobham lord of Allington, & son to Henrie before, James de Cobham, Will. de Cobham, & an other Reinold de Cobham that died without issue. Of which Reinold de Cobham lord of Allington, the son of this John by his second wife, descended the L. Cobhams of Starburow, whose descent and succession we will set downe after the discourse of the lord Cobhams of Randall; at this time in this place onelie shewing the death of this John the elder lord Cobham, who died not (as some haue) in the 35, but rather (as others haue) in the 36 of Henrie the third, being the yeare of Grace 1251, as I gather. After whose death an office was found that he held in Kent, the capitall messuage of Cobham, and that he had lands to the yearelie value of 117 pounds and 14 shillings.

And here, because I haue mentioned Hugh Neuill, whose daughter this John maried; I thinke it not vnmeet, although it concerne not the lord Cobhams otherwise than as a deed done by one from whome they are descended, to set downe what I haue read touching the said Hugh Neuill (being a person then of great honor, and one whose name hath béene the greatest in England: as well for manie noble men of that name liuing at one time, as for the valiancie of their mind, and continuance of their descent) in performing an act of great courage and force, deseruing continuall remembrance, the which I haue taken out of Matthew Paris. This Hugh Neuill, being in his youth familiar with king Richard, did (after that he had béene chiefe iustice of the forests) go into the holie land, to fight against the enimies of Christ: where he not onelie behaued himselfe to his singular glorie against those men of that countrie, but also obteined a memoriall of posteritie for that which he then did against the beasts thereof, when he killed a huge lion in the holie land, which being first by him pearsed with an arrow, and after hurt with a sword, there died. Of the death of which lion was this verse compiled, as followeth:

Viribus Hugonis vires periere leonis.

Afterwards this Hugh died, in the yeare of our redemption 1222, being about the first yeare of king Henrie the third.

John de Cobham the yonger.

John de Cobham knight, surnamed the yonger, or the second of that name, the sonne of the former John by his first wife, did (after the death of his father) diuide the lands according vnto the custome of Gauelkind in Kent, betweene him and his brother Henrie Cobham of Randall, as appeareth by a deed dated the 16 of Edward the first, about the yeare of Christ 1285, at what time the marsh called Sherdmarsh remained to John, & the lands called Heuer in the parish of All saints in Yo, in the hundred of Yo in Kent remained with Henrie. About 18 yeares before which, that is to saie, in the 54 yeare of Henrie the third (falling in the 1269 and 1270 yeares of our Lord after the account of England, beginning the yeare on the 25 of March) this John Cobham, mindfull of the aduancement and maintenance of his yonger brethren by his father & mother in law, the daughter of Hugh Neuill (as all elder brothers ought to be) did giue to them diuers lands in forme following: which was, he granted to James certeine rent in Burfield and Shelne, and pastures in Haligwesko; to William he gaue a rent in Aldington, togither with a mill there; & to Reinold he granted his lands in Orkesden, and in Sinsford: vpon condition, that euerie of those three brethren surviuing should be heire to the other, if they died without issue. Which when he had so liberallie done, finding how great an inconuenience it was (for the maintenance of anie name or familie) to haue the lands so to be diuided amongest manie brethren, as the Gauelkind land in Kent was accustomed to be, obteined of Edward the first a grant (dated the 4 of his reigne, being about the yere of Christ 1276) in which the king granted to him, that all his lands and tenements, which were holden in Gauelkind in Kent, should descend to his eldest sonne, or anie other next heire after him, according as other lands held by fargentæ or knights seruice, did at the common law without without anie partition of Gauelkind, to which deed were witnesses R. bishop of Canturburie, W. bishop of Rochester, R. bishop of Welles and Bath, William de Valence the kings vncle and earle of Penbroke, Roger de Mortimer, Paganus de Cadurcis, Stephan de Pinchester, and diuerse others.

In the time of Edward the first, as appeareth by the records of that court, there was one John de Cobham a baron of the exchéker, which office he held in the 34 yeare of that king, and also long before.

According to which deuise of this John Cobham, thus to make the Gauelkind land in Kent inheritable after the custome of the common law, diuers persons as well of nobilitie as gentrie of this shire of Kent (amongest which was George Brooke knight lord Cobham descended of this John Cobham) did by parlement holden in the one and thirtith yere of king Henrie the eight, cause the nature of their Gauelkind land to be altered into the customable descents of our common law, for the eldest sonne to inherit. The example whereof others also following in the time of Edward the first, did by like authoritie procure such descent of their lands in Kent, whereby at this daie most of the lands in that countrie haue weiued the nature of Gauelkind, and clothed themselues with the honor of descent in the common law. This John Cobham, who hath induced me to saie thus much touching Gauelkind lands in Kent, maried Jone daughter of Robert Septuans knight, by whome he had issue Henrie Cobham knight his heire, James Cobham a clearke, whom I suppose, to be he that in the tenth of Edward the third, the yere of Christ one thousand three hundred thirtie and six, had lands in Easchetes mead lieng in Penhurst in Kent, according as I haue seene a charter thereof: Roger Cobham of Piperstiue, that died without issue. And here because I am fallen into the name of Piperstiue, which is as much to saie as the clriue of Pipard, I will saie somewhat of that name of Pipard; and that the rather; because much about this time (as I haue read) one William Cobham married Jone the daughter of Henrie Pipard of Lachford in Oxfordshire esquire, the said Henrie Pipard liuing in the fift & tenth of Edward the second. The name of which Pipards comming into England with William the Conqueror, the first of them being called Rafe, was lord of great Yaselie and Lachford in great Yaselie in Oxfordshire. Shortlie after the time of which Rafe, Roger Pipard of great Yaselie gaue to his sonne Henrie Pipard certeine lands in Lachford in the tithe called Inland, bordering vpon Ditch furlong, to hold of him by a gilt spur; and further gaue to his said sonne Henrie all his lands in Lachford for his homage and seruice. The which line of the Pipards tooke end in Jane Pipard, the daughter and heire of Richard Pipard of Lachford in Oxfordshire esquire, who liued in the yeare of Christ 1421, being the ninth yeare of Henrie the fift, and in the third of Henrie the first, being the yeare of our Lord 1424. For she being maried to John Badbie the second sonne of John Badbie, he became lord of Lachford, in the first yeare of Edward the fourth, in the yeare 1466, whereby the name of that line of Pipard was vtterlie extinguished. The daughter and heire of which Badbie named Katharine, being maried to William Lenthall of Starkar in Herefordshire (an ancient gentleman, and one whose ancestors were lords of Hampton court in that shire of Hereford) the manor of Lachford came to the Lenthals, and is at this daie in the possession of William Lenthall esquire, descended from the said William Lenthall, which maried the heire of Badbie that maried the heire of Pipard, of which name one marieng a Cobham, occasioned me (as before I said) to digresse thus much to treat of the Pipards, and their offspring. And so againe to this John Cobham, who besides the sonnes before named, had other sonnes, as Rafe Cobham, which maried Marie Brewes countesse marshall (the widow of Thomas of Brotherton earle marshall, second sonne to King Edward the first) which Rafe died in the ninth yeare of the reigne of king Edward the second, being about the yeare of Christ 1316. And the ladie Marie his wife departed the world in the six and thirtith yeare of Edward the third, about the date of our Lord 1362, being 36 yeares after the death of the said Thomas of Brotherton. Of which countesse issued John Cobham knight, who liued in the 41 yeare of Edward the third, being the yeare of Christ 1367, (as apeareth by the records of the exchequer) and John Cobham of Blackborow in Deuonshire, with Thomas bishop of Worcester, besides two other daughters, whereof we will speake hereafter, when we haue treated a little of this Thomas Cobham the bishop, referring thee for the more ample discourse therof vnto Thomas Walsingham, and another anonymall chronicler, who liberallie treat of him. The first of the which writeth, that after the death of Robert Winchelseie archbishop of Canturburie, Monachi magistrum Thomam de Cobham, virum supereminentis literaturæ, multisque virtutibus redimitum, in pastorem regi præcipuum concorditer eligerunt, &c. Contrarie to which writing of Walsingham (in which is said, that Walter Reinolds was made archbishop gratis, & what a worthie person he was to gouerne the church and dispose the kingdome, and that Thomas Cobham was reiected from that see the other anonymall author before mentioned, referring all this to the yere of Christ one thousand three hundred and thirteene, doth most bitterlie write, who liuing much about that time, and before Th. Walsingham, as I coniecture (because he taketh vpon him to know the conditions of the said Thomas Cobham and Walter Reinolds) doth deliuer these words concerning the said Thomas Cobham and Walter Reinolds, that the monks of Canturburie Magistrum Thomam Cobham virum sanguinis nobilitate clarum, sacræ theologiæ, iuris canonici & ciuilis, necnon & dialecticæ professorem egregium, ecclesiæque fulcimento columnam immobilem concorditer eligerunt, cuius electioni & morum honestatibus humani generis inuidebat inimicus, misitque in cor Walteri Reginaldi viri siquidem & in tantum illiterati vt nomen proprium declinare penitùs ignorabat: qui & ipse vir Belial lubricus, regens tunc temporis indignè episcopatum Oswaldi & Dunstani apud Wigorniam, & ad episcopatum Cantuariensem nequiter aspirans, euacuauit electionem Thomæ Cobham per simoniam. Thus much he. By which we perceiue the diuersitie of affections in writing of histories. But whether this man, for malice to Walter Reinolds hath written this thing aboue the truth (for me thinketh it should not be, that a man so vnlearned, as that he could not decline his name, should atteine to such dignities, as to be bishop of Worcester, chancellor and treasuror of England, and archbishop of Canturburie) or that Walsingham (himselfe a spirituall man) seeking to aduance more than was due the metropolitane of the relme, hath so commended Walter Reinolds, I know not, and therefore leaue it to euerie man to iudge as he listeth: I will againe come backe to the said John Cobham the second of that name, and returne to make rehearsall in one place of all his children, to the end the same may be the better conceiued, sith I haue before with manie along parenthesis mingled other matters with them, whereby the reader might be troubled in the right knowledge of those persons.

1312 As hath Walsingham.

This Thomas was also prebendarie of Potkes deane of Salisburie, as hath Matthew Parker in the liues of the bishops of Canturburie.

This John the second therefore had issue Henrie his heire; who (I suppose) for this time, is that Henrie mentioned in the rolles of the exchequer, in the ninth yeare of Edward the second, to haue the farme of the citie of Rochester: James a clearke, Roger

This Henrie might well haue Rochester in farme, in the life of his father, in the time of Edward the second.

Cobham

Cobham of Piperdelliue, Rafe Cobham, John Cobham of Blackebozow, Thomas Cobham the bishop: Jone maried to Michaell de Columbarijs, and another daughter maried to William de Andwich knight. This John Cobham the second, liuing in the time of Edward the first, and dieng in the reigne of the same king, maie well be (and so is) that person which is recozded (if my conceiuing be not deceiued) in the eightæenth yeare of Edward the first, falling in the yeare of Chzist 1290, to be capteine ozgardian of Rochester, and of the castell; and also to be in the twentith yeare of the same king Edward the first, being in the yeare of Chzist one thousand two hundzed fourescoze and twelue, a baron of the exchequer. Befoze which time, John Euersden, a moonke of S. Edmundsburie in Suffolke, writeth that in the yeare of our redemption one thousand thzæe hundzed thzæescoze and ninetæne, which was in the seuenth yeare of king Edward the first, John Cobham and Walter de Helma were sent downe vnto Burie, otherwise called S. Edmundsburie, to sit vpon certeine goldsmiths that were accused foz clipping of the coine; where he fined them, and toke the monie to the kings vse, contrarie to the liberties of the abbat. This John Cobham the second died the eight and twentith yeare of the reigne of Edward the first, being in the yeare of our redemption one thousand and thzæe hundzed.

Henrie Cobham, the first lozd Cobham of that name.

Henrie Cobham the sonne and heire of John the second, being fozтie yeares old at the time of his fathers death, was made knight, and created the first baron and lozd of Cobham, obteining place in the parlement house. To this Henrie did king Edward the first, in the two and thirtith yeare of his reigne, being about the yeare of our redemption one thousand thzée hundzed & foure, grant the farme of Rochester, with the kéeping of the castell, as appeareth by this déed following.

The grant of Edward the first, of Rochester castell to Henrie Cobham.

Edwardus Dei gratia rex Angliæ, & dominus Hiberniæ, & dux Aquitaniæ, omnibus, &c. Nos de fidelitate dilecti & fidelis nostri Henrici de Cobham plenius considerantes, cõmisimus ei ciuitatem nostram Roffensem; tenendam de nobis, & hæredibus nostris ad firmam, ad totam vitam suam; ac etiam castrum eiusdem ciuitatis, cum pertinentijs, custodiendum similiter ad totam vitam suam. Reddendo nobis & hæredibus nostris per annum, ad scaccarium nostrũ pro ciuitate prædicta duodecim libras, & pro custodio dicti castri ac wardis eidem castro pertinentibus, triginta sex libras & quatuor solidos, sicut Ioannes de Cobham pater prædicti Henrici, & bonæ memoriæ Richardus nuper episcopus London, dudum firmarius noster, dictæ ciuitatis & custos castri prædicti nobis ad dictum scaccarium nostrum per annum, pro custodia eorundem reddere consueuerunt, &c. In cuius rei, &c: has litteras nostras, &c. Teste meipso apud Dumfermeline, 14 die Ianuarij, anno regni nostri triceſimo secundo.

This man being thus in great credit with the king, in the life of his father John Cobham, was constable of Douer castell, and warden of the cinque pozts, in the fiue & thirtith and last yeare of king Edward the first, as appeareth by a note which came to my hands, set downe in this sozt: Stephanus de Burgherſh filius & hæres Roberti de Burgherſh, quondam custodis quinque portuum, fatetur se recepisse de isto Henrico Cobham, conestabulo Douernie, & custode quinque portuum, 20 marcas argenti, &c. The déed of which Stephan Burgherth was dated the twentith of Maie, in the fiue and thirtith yeare of king Edward the first, in the yeare of our redemption one thousand thzæe hundzed and seuen; which Henrie Cobham is repozted, maister Lambard, in his perambulation of Kent, vnder the title of Léeds, to haue raised the castell thereof. But because there maie be some question touching the same, and foz that the same Lambard hath not iudiciallie defined the same; I will leaue it as I find it in his owne booke, and Verbatim set downe his wozds in this sozt.

He was constable of Douer vnder Edward the first, in the life of his father king Henrie the third: and after in the first yeare of king Edwards gouernment, as appeareth by this déed of Stephan Burgherſhin the fiftéenth yeare of Edward the third: and so vnto his death which was in the 13 yeare of Edward the third: of which time the most the wardens of the cinque pozts.

I haue read (saith he) that * Edward (prince of Wales, and afterward the first king of that name) being warden of the cinque pozts, and constable of Douer castell, in the life of Henrie the third his father, caused Henrie Cobham (whose ministerie he vsed as substitute in both those offices, to raise the castell that Robert Creueceur had erected, because Creueceur (that was then the owner of it, & heire to Robert) was of the number of the nobles that moued and mainteined warre against him; which whether it be true oz no, I will not affirme: but yet I thinke it verie likelie, both because Badlesmer (a man of another name) became lozd of Léeds shortlie after, and also foz that the présent wozke of Léeds présenteth not the antiquitie of so manie yeares as are passed since the conquest. Thus this much my synchzonos and the learned antiquarie maister Lambard. After which, it resteth to set downe the effect of a déed, wherein Richard de Rochester gaue the manoz of Stone and Stapingdon in the ile of Shepeie to this Henrie Cobham; in the first yeare of Edward the second, being the yeare of our redemption 1312, 1313; according to a note which I haue séene gathered thereof, in these wozds.

* Edward the first king of that name since the conquest.

The castell of Léeds builded by Robert Creueceur.

The barons warre against Henrie the third.

Richardus de Roueceſter dedit domino Henrico de Cobham, & Reginaldo filio eius, pro ducentis libris, manerium de Stone & Stapingdon in Schapeia: habendum et tenendum eisdem Henrico & Reginaldo, & hæredibus ipsius Reginaldi exeuntibus: & si Reginaldus obierit sine exitu, tunc idem manerium reuertitur rectis hæredibus ipsius Henrici: anno sexto Edwardi, regis filij Edwardi. Hijs testibus, domino Ioanne de Northwood seniore, Rogero de Sauage, Roberto de Shireland, Ioanne de Northwood iuniore, Ioanne de Sauage, militibus.

This Henrie, being the first baron of Cobham, maried Maud the daughter of one that was called De columbarijs: by whome he had issue John de Cobham his sonne and heire, Thomas de Cobham of Piperdelliue, and Beluncle knight, James Cobham, Reinold Cobham parson of the church of Wicham, Stephan Cobham bishop of Lincolne, and one daughter named Margaret, maried to Mathew Fitzherbert. After which, this Henrie lord Cobham surrendered his life to God, in the yeare of our redemption 1339, and in the thirteenth yeare of king Edward the third, about 39 yeares after the death of his father, being seuentie nine yeares of age, and was buried at Stoke vnder Hamden in Summersetshire.

John Cobh

John de Cobham knight, the third of that name, and second baron of Cobham, was gardian of the citie of Rochester, and was (as I gather by a note, that nameth John Cobham, if John be not mistaken foz Henrie, last befoze recited) constable of Douer castell, and warden of the cinque pozts, in the second yeare of Edward the third, in the yeare of Chzist 1320, which fell in the life of his father Henrie, the first baron of Cobham. This John, in the eleuenth yeare of Edward the third, being about the yeare of Chzist 1336, was (when the king toke his iourneie into France, by occasion whereof he was to gather great summes of monie of his subiects) ioined with Haimo de Heath bishop of Rochester, the pzioz of that citie, and Thomas de Aldon de Aldon knight in commission, whereby they were authorised to call before them in the church of Rochester the mondaie next after the feast of the Holie crosse, the clergie and people of the whole countie of Kent, to demand certeine summes of monie to be paid to the king for the support of his iournie toward France. Whereupon the people comming to that place at the daie appointed, those commissioners could not for that instant bring their trauell in executing that commission to the expected end. For the commissioners demanding what euerie man would giue towards the kings wars in France, the clergie would not giue anie thing, because they were to grant a tenth; and that which the laitie would giue, came to so small a summe that it was refused. Whervpon the king demanded onelie a fiftéenth and obteined it.

John lord Cobham.

Regist. Roffen.

This John the second baron maried two wiues, the first was Ione the daughter of John Beauchampe of Stoke vnder Hampden in Summertun-towne-shire, now called Summersetshire, knight; by whom he had issue, one sonne and his heire called John Cobham, which Ione was buried in the chancell of the collegiat church of Cobham in Kent, with this French epitaph as is yet there to be séene:

Dame Ione de Cobham gist icy,
Dieu de sa ailme ayt mercy,
Qui pur l'ailme priera,
Quarante iours de pardon auera.

The second wife of this John the second baron was Agnes the daughter of Richard Stone of Dertford in the countie of Kent, who dieng without anie issue by hir (whereof I can yet learne) in the yeare of our redemption one thousand three hundred fiftie and foure, being the eight and twentith of the reigne of king Edward the third, was also buried in the chancell of the collegiat church of Cobham, on whose graue stone is this epitaph yet to be séene:

Vous qui passe icy entour,
Pries pur l'ailme de curteous viandour,
Qui Iean de Cobham auoit a nome,
Dieu luy face veray pardone,
Qui trespassa l'endemayne de S. Mathy,
Le puissant otrie a demourer oue luy,
En l'an de grace Mil. CCC. L. quatre,
Ces enimies mortel fist abatre.

John Cobham. John Cobham knight (the first of that line, the fourth of that name, and the third and last baron of Cobham, descended of the males of that familie) was the sonne of John the second baron of Cobham. This man as the state of the world, and loue to religion went in those daies, did for the redemption of his soule erect a college and chanterie of a certeine number of chapleins, with a maister belonging vnto them, to praie for the soules of him, his ancestors, and his successors: which college he erected in the yeare of our redemption one thousand three hundred

The other maisters of that college were such as these epitaphs there found doo declare: ✠ Hic iacet dominus Iohannes Sprot, quondam magister istius collegij, qui obijt 25. die mensis Octobris, an. Domini 1498, cuius animæ propitietur Deus.

The third epitaph is of William Hobson maister of that college, which died in the thirteenth yeare of king Edward the fourth, hauing this written vpon his graue stone in brasse: ✠ Hic iacet dominus Gulielmus Hobson, quondam magister istius collegij, qui obijt 22. die Augusti, anno Dom. 1473, cuius animæ propitietur Deus.

A fourth epitaph is of John Gladwin maister of that college, wherein is neither set downe the time of his death, nor anie certeintie when he liued, being deliuered onelie in this sort: ✠ Hic iacet magister Iohannes Gladwin, quondam magister istius collegij, cuius animæ propitietur Deus.

Which college being so founded by this John lord Cobham, did (after the generall dissolution of houses of religion, & other chanteries, in the time of king Henrie the eight and king Edward the first) returne by the kings grant vnto those which were descended of this John Cobham. For George Brooke lord Cobham, father to that honorable and worthie gentleman William Brooke knight, lord Cobham now liuing, obteined the same at the kings hands, and doth at this daie inioie it. About fiue yeares after the building of that college, this said John last lord Cobham was (in the one and fortith yeare of king Edward the third, being the yeare of our redemption one thousand three hundred three score and seuen) dispatched ambassador vnto Rome, concerning the mariage of Lionell duke of Clarence with Iolenta or Violenta the daughter of Galeas earle of Millaine; as appeareth by a deed of the said Edward the third, directed to Nicholas of the Heath clearke, dated at Eltham in the said one and fortith yere of the king. Who dispatching his ambassage to the desired effect, did still increase in such fauor with king Edward the third, and with the nobilitie and commons of the realme, that after the death of Edward the third, and in the minoritie of Richard the second, he was by the whole consent of the nobilitie and voice of the parlement, amongst other appointed to haue the custodie of king Richard the second. In which he behaued himselfe verie faithfullie, both in defense of the king, & also of the kingdome, against those rebellious insurrections and coniurations of Wat Miler and of his complices, in the yeare of our redemption one thousand three hundred and foure score, and one thousand three hundred foure score and one, being the fourth and fift yeares of the deposed king Richard the second. At what time for his owne defense, and the safetie of the countrie of Kent, against those rebels, he by the kings licence built that goodlie castell of Cowling yet standing, with a writing of brasse fixed on the gate, to shew the cause and

Richard the second (did with the assistance of Thomas Woodstocke duke of Glocester the kings vncle, by violence take Tresilian the chiefe iustice out of the sanctuarie of Westminster. For which act afterward in the eleuenth yeare of the said Richard the second, being much about the yeare of our redemption one thousand three hundred fourescore and eight, both the duke and he asked pardon of the abbat of Westminster for the breach and violating of their priuileges, and the reuerence of the holie place in taking him out of sanctuarie. Which lord in some yeares after, that is, in the two and twentith yeare of Richard the second, being the yeare of Christ one thousand three hundred fourscore and eighténe, was apprehended & sent with sir John Cheincie knight to the Tower: after which, when they had sometime remained there, they were by the consent of the nobilitie (saith Walsingham) in the parlement holden at Shrewsburie banished into the Ile of Gernesele, where they had a small portion allowed them, the said lord John being onelie arreined vpon these two articles. First, that he the said lord Cobham was in counsell to make one commission against the state of the king, and likewise that he vsed the same commission in doing iudgement against the kings will and to the preiudice of him. Secondlie, that he did sit in iudgement to iudge sir Simon de Burleie, and James Barnes knights of the king, in his absence and against his will. Whereupon he was condemned to perpetuall prison and banishment into the Ile of Gernesele: of which matter thus writeth that worthie poet sir John Gowre knight liuing at that time, and beholding all these doings of that age:

Some saie they were condemned to lose their liues, but pardoned thereof at the request of the nobilitie and so banished.

Innocentem dominum Cobham, qui priùs seculo renuntians, in domo Carthusiensi tunc moram traxit, etiam in iudicium parlamenti produxit (which was the king) sed ille minarum terrore aut blandiciarum exhortatione locum tyranno non præbens, in omnibus suis responsionibus fidelißimus inueniebatur, vnde rex quasi confusus eius constantiam deterrens, ipsum præ verecundia absque mortis sententia longè ab Anglia destinauit. Which matter with a further commendation of this lord Cobham, the said John Gowre setteth downe in these heroicall verses following:

Vnus erat dignus patiens, pius, atque benignus,
Prouidus & iustus, morum virtute robustus,
Non erat obliquus, regni sed verus amicus,
Hunc rex odiuit in quo bona talia sciuit,
Vt dicunt mille dominus Cobham fuit ille,
Chronica quos læsit quibus ille fidelis adhæsit,
Christo sed verè voluit quia fine placere,
Transtulit ad sedem, se Carthusiensis in ædem,
Sic cœpit Christus voluit quem tollere fiscus,
Quem Christus duxit, fiscus sine iure reduxit,
Rex scelus accusat, Cobham scelus omne recusat, Iustificans factum, sic res processit in actum, (tur,
Quæ sapit hæc loquitur, nec in hoc vecors reperi-
Immo quod est certum, regi manifestat apertum,
Sic quia veridicus tribus est constanter amicus,
Rex condemnauit Cobham, sed non maculauit,
Sic non conuictus gladij non sentijt ictus,
Exilij loca subijt tamen exteriora,
Hunc rogo quòd purus redeat cum laude futurus,
Vt sic fœlici redditu lætentur amici.

But afterward, as sir John Gowre doth request of God in the end of these Latine verses, so this lord Cobham (being before greatlie in the fauor of Henrie duke of Hereford, after king of England, by the name of Henrie the fourth) was restored home to England, when the said Henrie did weare and beare the crowne and scepter of this realme, of whose calling home out of the Ile of Gernesele by king Henrie the fourth, the said Gowre writeth thus.

Cobham sorte pari dux fecit & hunc reuocari,
Exilio demptus iustus redit ille redemptus.

Which lord Cobham being now setled againe at his owne home, liued an honourable old man manie yeares after, and surrendered his life to God the tenth of Januarie, in the ninth yeare of king Henrie the fourth, being the yeare that the word of the Father take on it the flesh of the mother 1407, and was buried within the collegiat church of Cobham, which he built, with this epitaph yet there to be seene:

De terre fuit faite & fourmee,
Et en terre a terre suis retournee:
Iehan de Cobham foundeur de cestу place qui fui Mercy de ma ailme eit la seint trinitee. (nomee

He married Margaret the daughter of Hugh Courtneie earle of Deuonshire, who dieng the daie and yeare set downe in this following epitaph, was also buried beside hir husband, hauing this written:

Icy gist dame Margaret de Cobham, iadis fille a noble tire counte de Deuonshire, femme de siegneure de Cobham, foundeur de ceste place, que morust le second iour de mois de Aouste, le anne de grace 1495, l'ailme de que Dieu aist mercy, Amen.

This lord Cobham had (by the ladie Margaret Courtneie his wife) his onelie child, daughter and heire Ioane married to John de la Poole knight, by whome he had issue one daughter named Ione after hir mother, which was heire, ladie, and baronesse of Cobham, nece by the daughter and heire of this John Lord Cobham, which Ione de la Poole had fiue husbands, whereof we will speake as they succeeded in order. Hir first husband was Robert Hemengdale knight, by whome she had two sonnes, William & John, which both died in their childhood. Hir second husband was Reginald Braibrooke, knight, by whome she had issue Reginald and Robert, which died verie yong; and Ione maried to Thomas Brooke of Somersetshire knight, who was in hir right lord of Cobham, as after shall appeare, which Reginald Braibrooke with his two sonnes before named, were buried in the church of Cobham, as appeareth by this now extant epitaph ouer the place of their burials: ✠ Hic jacet dominus Reginaldus Braibrooke filius Gerardi Braibrooke militis, ac maritus dominæ Iohannæ dominæ de Cobham hæredis domini Iohannis domini de Cobham fundatoris istius collegij, qui quidè Reginaldus obijt apud Middelborow in Flandria 20 die mensis Septem. an. Dom. 1405, cuius animæ propitietur Deus. On which stone also was grauen on ech side of him: Hic iacet Reginaldus filius eorum: & also Hic iacet Robertus filius eorum.

Hir third husband was Nicholas Hawberke knight, by whome she had issue one sonne called John, which Nicholas died at Cowling in the ninth yeare of king Henrie the fourth, and was with his sonne John, who died yong, buried at Cobham with this epitaph: ✠ Hic iacet dominus Nicholaus Hawberke miles, quondam maritus dominæ Iohannæ de Cobham hæredis dominæ Iohannæ de Cobham, fundatoris istius collegij; qui quidem Nicholaus obijt apud castrũ de Cowling 20 die Octobris, an. Dom. 1407. cuius animæ propitietur Deus. Upon which stone was also grauen the picture of a yong man, vnder which was written Hic iacet Iohannes filius eorum

All these three husbands this Ione had in the life of hir grandfather the last lord John Cobham, whereby none of them was intituled lord of Cobham; but when she married hir fourth husband, he was called lord Cobham as after shall appeare. Hir fourth husband was sir John Oldcastle knight, by whome she had a daughter that died verie yong, and of whome we need not to saie anie thing, his life & doings being so largelie set forth in all our chronicles, especiallie by maister Fox and Walsingham, as that they need not anie discourse of mine. Onelie this I will touch, that he was intituled lord of Cobham ham in the right of his wife, and was burnt and hanged for the doctrine of Wickliffe, and for treason (as that age supposed) to king Henrie the fift, about the first yeare of the reigne of the said king, touching which I will in briefe sort set downe so much of his life, written partiallie (as the nature of that age would permit) in verse, as is to be seene in the chronicle intituled Extractũ breue de chronica THOMAE ELMHAM, prioris Lenton, de tempore regis Henrici quinti: the capitall letters of which verses doo shew the yeare of our Lord in this sort as here followeth:

Sir John Oldcastle lord Cobham.

1413 HIC Iohn oLD CaſteL ChriſtI fVrIt InſIDIator,
Amplectens hæreſes in ſcelus omne ruit:
Fautor perfidiæ pro ſecta Wickliniana,
Obicibus regis fert mala vota ſacris,
1413 His name being Iohn Oldcaſtle, conteineth by the letters in the firſt verſe the number of 1413. out of which take 378. being the ſame of the martyrdome ſuffered in the Apocalyps, the number remaining 1535. which was the yeare of his age when he died: ſuch myſticall repoſitions could that age ſucke out to ſerue their purpoſe.
Hic apocalypſis CirCVMCInCtVs patet hoſtIS,
Altera beſtia ſit cornua bina ferens,
Nomine ſecenti ſunt ſexaginta ſimul ſex,
Extrahe quod remanet his ſua vita datur.
Hunc rex militia necnon terroribus arcet,
Flecti mente nequit turbidus ille lupus:
Nam corpus Behemoth vt ſcutum fuſile fertur,
Durum dum ſupereſt fictile quando cadit:
Sic patet hæreticus non parens corripienti,
Dum lapſu proprio vergit ad antra Satan.
Cenſuit ancipiti rex hunc mucrone feriri,
Prætulit eccleſiæ iura paranda ſibi:
Hæreticum propria confeſſio reddit eundem,
Qua damnauit eum pontificalis honor.
Regia ſed pietas ſibi differt mortis & ignis
Pœnam, ſub ſpe qua poſſit adeſſe ſalus.
Has capit inducias in turri Londiniarum,
Rumpens vincla fugit dæmonis artis ope.
Hinc antris latitat, clam perquirendo fauorem,
*In lauacri * luce concipiendo dolum,*
Aſſultum regi ſtudet atque ſuis apud Eltham,
Sed Deus inde ſuos eripit abſque malo:
*Inſidiando cohors in * gurgitis arce lauacri,*
*Concutiens * chriſma ſeditioſa ruit.*
Vernans MILICIa ſVres CaLCabat agone,
Subuertit caſtrum, ſtat ſacer ordo vigil.
Sed tamen extendit trux vires vlteriores,
Tertia cui feria fixa ſit inde ſequens.
Hic bellum regi campeſtre parare ſtudebat,
Campum manè petens regia iura præit.
Vndique conueniunt hac proditione feroces,
Partibus ex multis vota gerenda mala:
Vexillum regis prodit, crux prauia campo
*Aſtitit, * Aegidij gens inimica fuit.*
Campis atque vijs equites exire iubentes,
Regi præſentant quos rapuere malos,
Carceribus trudi dominus rex mandat eoſdem,
Ne ſine iuſticia flet violenta manus,
*Námque * vetus caſtrum, cui ſit damnoſa vetuſtas,*
Profugus inde fugit cum nouitate fera.
Traditus hic Satana latitans luit ille ſatelles,
Fert odium luci qui mala tanta facit:
Hoc ſigno regi campo tunc fulgur amœnum,
Detexit tenebras, hoc operante Deo.
*Caros LVCe CLVIt * Ianl Dans robora * Deno*
Vt rus Aegidij regia cura colat:
Hic ſuſpenduntur tracti prius, inde cremantur
Hæretici plures, conditione pari,
Capta Cohors CaſtrI VeterIs partIta CreMatVr,
Rex hominem veterem ſic renouare ſtudet:
In tellure ſatum lolium ſit in igne crematum,
Quiſque pians gramen ſit benedictus, Amen.

Exſecto Epiſcopo.
Veſtelo Epiſcopo.
Eccleſia.
1413 Oldcaſtle.
S. Giles beſides London.
Sir John Oldcaſtle.
1413 Ianuarii. Decimo die.
1413

Of which Iohn Oldcaſtle I find alſo this note in the records of the exchequer, of the ninth yeare of that king in Michaelmas tearme: ✠ Eliſabeth, quæ fuit vxor Edwardi Charelton chiualer & Iohannis Piers, executores teſtamenti prædicti Edwardi, nuper domini de Powis, in denarijs ſibi liberatis per manus Thomæ Bradſhew, in partem ſolutionis 1000 marcarum, quas dominus rex dictis executoribus liberari mandauit pro captione Iohannis Oldcaſtle, chiualer (nuper vocatum dominum de Cobham) iuxta quandum proclamationem dicti domini regis in ſingulis comitatibus Anglie factum per priuatum ſigillum DClxvi lib. 13. s. 4 d.

Now the fift and laſt huſband of the foreſaid Ione de la Poole, was ſir Iohn Harpenden knight, buried at Weſtminſter, beſides hir firſt Huſband Hemendale. This Ione, which had all theſe Huſbands died in Januarie, in the twelfe yeare of king Henrie the firſt, and was buried in Cobham church, as is yet to be ſeene, with this epitaph: ✠ Hic iacet Iohanna domina de Cobham, quondam vxor domini Reginaldi de Braybrooke militis, quæ obijt in die ſancti Hilarij epiſcopi, anno Domini 1433. cuius anime propitietur Deus. Thus much touching Ione the heire and baroneſſe of Cobham, and of hir Huſbands and iſſue: amongſt which, Ione (as is before ſaid) maried to Thomas Brooke, was onelie baroneſſe of Cobham, and he intituled baron of that place in hir right, as after ſhall appeare. But before I enter into the treatie of the Brookes as lords of Cobham, I thinke it not amiſſe, as I haue ſet downe before of the Cobhams, to ſet downe the deſcending line of the Brooks, vnto Thomas Brooke the firſt, intituled lord Cobham, & ſo vnto this William Brooke knight lord Cobham now liuing, bicauſe I would fill vp one orderlie courſe of the names and deſcents of all ſuch families as haue inioied the honourable title of the lords of Cobham.

The line of the Brooks, at this daie lords of Cobham.

I Haue read in the hiſtorie of Cambridge, lib. 1. fol 4. of one Laurence Brooke, who liued in the foure & fortith yeare of king Henrie the third, falling about the yeare of Chriſt one thouſand two hundred and ſixtie, and was delegate of the king to appeaſe certeine diſcords at Cambridge. But whether theſe Brooks, whereof I am now to intreat, be deſcended of him or no, I will not at this time receiue or reiect, but leaue it to the iudgement of others: and therefore hauing nothing to ſaie certeine thereof, I will haſten to that certeintie which ſufficient authoritie doth warrant, vnder the learned pen of that notable antiquarie, Robert Glouer, named by office Summerſet. Thus therefore I begin with the Brooks.

Laurence Brooke liuing in the foure & fortith of Henrie the third, had receiued twentie pounds by the yeare of the kings grant out of the exchequer.

William de la Brooke, lord of the manor of the Brooke beſides Iuell Cheſter, now called Ilcheſter, in Summerſetſhire, had iſſue Henrie de la Brooke. Henrie de la Brooke the ſonne of William, married Nicholaa, the daughter of Brian Goneuile, by whom he had iſſue Henrie Brooke: of which name Goneuile one Edmund Goneuile a reuerend man, parſon of the church of Terrington in Northfolke, did begin to laie one part of Goneuile college in Cambridge, on thurſdaie in Whitſun weeke, in the yeare of our redemption one thouſand three hundred fortie and eight, being the two and twentith of Edward the third.

Henrie Brooke, the ſonne of Henrie, and of his wife Nicholaa married Eliſabeth, and died in the eightæenth yere of king Edward the ſecond, leauing iſſue Iohn de la Brooke.

Iohn de la Brooke, the ſonne of Henrie and Eliſabeth, maried Ione the daughter of ſir Iohn Bardſtone knight, by whome he had iſſue ſir Thomas Brooke knight, which Iohn died in the two and twentith yeare of Edward the third, being the yeare of Chriſt one thouſand three hundred fortie and eight.

Thomas Brooke knight, the ſonne of Iohn, maried Conſtance the daughter of one Markenfeld, by whome he had iſſue Thomas Brooke knight, which Thomas the father died in the one and fortith yeare of Edward the third, being the yeare of Lord 1367.

Thomas Brooke knight, the sonne of the said Thomas Brooke knight, married Ione second daughter, and one of the heires of Simon Yanape of Glocestershire, which Ione was the widow of Robert Chedder of Brittow. By which wife this Thomas had issue Thomas Brooke knight, lord Cobham, and Michaell Brooke his yonger sonne, which sir Thomas Brooke and his wife being buried at Thorncombe, there is this monument extant of the time of both their deaths: ✠ Heere lieth Thomas Brooke knight, which died in the yeare of our Lord 1419, being the fift of king Henrie the fift. And also heere lieth dame Ione Brooke, wife of the said Thomas, the which died the tenth of Aprill 1437, the fifteenth of king Henrie the sixt, on whose soules Iesus haue mercie.

Tho. Brooke knight, the first (that was intituled lord Cobham) of that familie.

Thomas Brooke of Summersetshire knight, the sonne of the last Thomas Brooke knight, married (as before is said) Ione the daughter of Reginald Braiebrooke, in whose right he was intituled lord Cobham. This man had issue by this Ione, Edward Brooke knight, lord Cobham; Thomas Brooke, and John Brooke, Robert Brooke, and Peter Brooke, all which died without issue; Reginald Brooke of Apsale; Morgan Brooke, which also died issueless, and Hugh Brooke; with Elisabeth married to S. Maur, the sonne and heire to John of S. Maur knight. Ione married to John Carrant the sonne and heire of William Carrant esquier, Margaret Brooke, & Christian which died without issue.

Edward Brooke lord Cobham.

Edward Brooke knight, the sonne of the last Thomas Brooke knight, was lord Cobham and aduanced to the baronie thereof about the fiue and twentith of king Henrie the sixt, about the yeare of our redemption one thousand foure hundred fortie and six, or a thousand foure hundred fortie and seauen, for that yeare of Henrie the sixt, fell part in that one and part in that other yeare of our Lord. This lord Cobham faithfullie assisting the faction of Richard duke of Yorke, being now in the kings seruice in Ireland, continued his faith vnto him in the absence of this duke, for which cause the duke in the thirtith yere of Henrie the sixt, being the yeare of Christ 1452, commeth out of Ireland to consult with his frends Iohn duke of Northfolke, Richard earle of Salisburie, and this lord Cobham, who being now in Wales and flieng the comming of the kings armie in those parts, they all went ouer Kingstone bridge, passing into Kent, and there vpon Burntheath nere vnto Dertford pight their field: whereof when the king had intelligence, he came to Blackeheath, and there also placed his campe. At length the duke by mediation of frends, and for that the people of Kent and of other places came not vnto him as they had promised, brake vp the field, and yelded himselfe to the king at Dertford: at what time on the tenth of March the duke made his submission and toke oth (to be true and obedient to the king) in S. Paules church of London, in the presence of manie of the nobilitie, amongst which were the lord S. Amond, and this Edward Brooke lord Cobham. After this, in the three & thirtith yeare of king Henrie the sixt 1455 the duke of Yorke being in the marches of Wales and associat with his frends, amongst which was the lord Cobham, and perceiuing that neither exhortation serued nor accusation preuailed against Edmund Beaufort duke of Summerset chefe hinderer and enimie of this duke of Yorke: they determined to reuenge the quarell by force, and so to obteine their purpose by open warre. Wherevpon, with those of his faction then present, whereof this lord Cobham was one, the duke commeth toward London, but was at saint Albons incountred with the king then present, and such as assisted him: where in the battell betwixt them, the victorie fell vnto the duke, and the king was wounded in the necke with an arrow: by meanes whereof things seemed to be at some quiet. But as the inward heat of coles of hatred are couered with the cold embers of outward dissimulation: so the malice betweene the king & the duke being but for a shew suppressed, and the same bursting forth againe, the duke of Yorke was faine to flie into Ireland. But afterward regathering his power togither, he landed at Sandwich in the eight and thirtith yeare of the reigne of king Henrie the sixt, in the yeare of Christ one thousand foure hundred and three score, where met them Thomas Bourcher archbishop of Canturburie with his crosse borne before him: who comming to Canturburie and through Kent, there ioined with them this Edward lord Cobham, John Guilford, William Pechee, Robert Horne, and manie other gentlemen of that shire. All which companie comming to London the second of Julie, at a conuocation in Paules, the earle of Warwike recited the cause of their comming. Which done, the duke and the rest departing from London to go to the king at Northampton, left Richard earle of Salisburie, the lord Cobham, and sir John Guilford, to keepe the Londoners in their promised obedience; which lords toke such carefull order for the citie, in diligent keeping the gates and entries thereof, that no succor might come to the lord Scales (lodging in the Tower) who with the lord Hungerford were come to the citie, to take the same before the comming of the duke of Yorke, that no aid might come to the lord Scales and those in the Tower, now streictlie besieged by water and by land. Wherewith the lord Scales toke such displesure, that he shot off the great ordinance against them within the citie, and they of the citie did with like requit them within the Tower, to the great damage of both parts. This Edward Brooke lord Cobham married Elisabeth the daughter of James lord Audleie, by whome he had issue John Brooke lord Cobham, & Elisabeth married to Robert Tanfield esquier.

John Brooke lord Cobham of Cobham.

John Brooke lord Cobham, the son of Edward lord Cobham, in the first yeare of the reigne of king Richard the third, being the yeare of our redemption one thousand foure hundred eightie and three, attended vpon the said king to his coronation: and in the ninth yeare of king Henrie the seuenth, being the yere of Christ one thousand foure hundred ninetie and three, he interteined to be of his councell sergeant Read, after cheefe iustice of the common plees, from whome Thomas Wootton and Thomas Willoughbie in Kent esquiers, as heires of the said Read, and James Cromer, and Isaac Rudston esquiers also in that shire are lineallie descended; for which cause I was the willinger to take this occasion by this lord Brooke in this sort, to mention the said sir Robert Read, and these persons descended of him. This John lord Cobham, in the twelfe yeare of the reigne of king Henrie the seuenth, being about the yeare of our saluation one thousand foure hundred ninetie and seuen, ioined with Greie earle of Kent against the Cornish rebels, who made insurrection vnder James Touchet lord Audleie & Michaell Joseph the blacke smith, at what time those rebels were subdued at Blackeheath. This John lord Cobham had two wiues, the first Elenor the daughter of one Antie of Suffolke, by whome he had no issue; the second wife was Margaret the daughter of Edward Neuill lord of Aburgauennie, by whom he had issue Thomas Brooke lord Cobham, George Brooke which married Elenor (some saie Elisabeth the daughter of William, and sister and heire to sir John Pechee knight) and Edward Brooke of Denton;

ton, which was knighted in the fourth yeare of the reigne of king Henrie the eight, by Howard lord admerall, in the yeare of Grace one thousand fiue hundred and twelue, and died without issue, hauing maried a woman borne in Ireland. The daughters of this John lord Cobham were Marie married vnto Robert Blage a baron of the exchekер; Dorothie married to William Isaac of Kent esquier, & Faith Brooke. And here hauing before mentioned one George Brooke sonne to this John lord Cobham, and finding by Leland, that much about this time liued one sir George Brooke knight, which I can not yet discerne to be other but this George Brooke; I will set downe the words and matter of Leland, as well for that I desire to perpetuat all whatsoeuer commeth to my hands of Lelands commentaries, as for that so worthie an exploit of a Brooke should not be by me forgotten. Thus therefore writeth Leland. After the battell of Tewkesburie, fought by king Edward the fourth against prince Edward sonne to Henrie the sixt, sir Walter Writle, and sir Geffreie Gates knights of Richard Neuill earle of Warwike were gouernors of the towne of Calis, who sent sir George Brooke knight out of Calis vnto Thomas bastard Fauconbridge capteine of the earle of Warwikes nauie, to raise the countrie of Kent, to go to London, and to take king Henrie out of the Tower, &c. So Fauconbridge came to Canturburie, raised all Kent, and came to London the tenth daie of Maie; there the maior and aldermen, and the lord Scales kept them out, wherefore Fauconbridge shot his ordinance at the citie, burning much about London bridge, and about Aldgate. Wherevpon the commons of London tooke great displeasure, or else they had let in Fauconbridge and the Kentishmen, in despite of the rulers of the citie. Wherevpon Fauconbridge went from London to Kingston, &c. Thus much Leland. This John lord Cobham died in the yeare of our Lord one thousand and fiue hundred, being about the fifteenth yere of the reigne of Henrie the seuenth, and his wife Margaret died in September, in the yeare of our Lord God one thousand fiue hundred and six, in the two and twentith yeare of the reigne of the said Henrie the seuenth, and were buried in the collegiat church of Cobham, with this epitaph: Hic iacet Iohannes Brooke miles ac baro baronia de Cobham, & domina Margareta vxor sua, quondam filia nobilis viri Edouardi Neuill nuper domini de Burgauenni, qui quidem Iohannes obijt () die mensis () Anno Domini 1500. Ipsa verò domina Margareta obijt () die mensis Septembris* 1506, quorum animabus propitietur Deus.

1471 In the eleuenth yeare of Edward the fourth.

John Brooke lord Cobham of Cobham.

*Stellula indicat nonnulla defuisse.

Thomas Brooke.

Thomas Brooke knight lord Cobham, the sonne of John lord Cobham, in the yere that the word became flesh one thousand fiue hundred and thirtéene, being the fift yeare of the reigne of king Henrie the eight, was with George Talbot earle of Shrewsburie left to tame the Welshmen, when the king minded to passe the seas to the warres of Terwine and Turneie: who after also in the same yeare with the same earle of Shrewsburie, was at the warres of the cities of Terwine and Turneie. After which, in the yeare that the word of the father tooke flesh in the wombe of the mother a thousand fiue hundred twentie and one, being the thirtéenth yeare of the reigne of king Henrie the eight, he was one of the peeres for the arreignment and condemnation of Edward Stafford duke of Buckingham. Then in the yeare of our incarnation one thousand fiue hundred and fiue and twentie, being the seuentéenth yeere of the reigne of Henrie the eight, commissioners sat in all shires, to leauie the first part of euerie mans goods; but the burden was so greeuous that it was denied, & the commons in euerie place were so moued, that it was like to haue growen to a rebellion. For in Kent the lord Cobham then a commissioner thought to execute the same, but being clubbishlie answered by one John Scudder, he sent him to the Tower; for which the people muttered against the lord Cobham, and said expreslie, that they would paie no monie, and in the same grudge did euillie intreat sir Thomas Bullen at Maidston, which tax the people refused to paie, because it was the cardinals extreame dooings & not the kings. He maried three wiues whereof the first was Dorothie daughter of Henrie Heidon knight, by whome he had issue John that died issuelesse; George Brooke after lord Cobham; Thomas and William Brooke, which died without issue; Margaret married to sir John Fog knight; Faith married to William Dkenden gentleman of Calis; and Elisabeth first married to sir Thomas Wiat knight, and after to sir Edward Warner knight. His second wife was also Dorothie the daughter of sir Philip Calthrope of Norwich knight. His third wife was Elisabeth the daughter of Thomas Hart, and sister to sir Perstuall Hart knight, by both which his last wiues this lord Cobham had no issue. He died the ninetenth daie of Julie, in the yeare of our Sauior one thousand fiue hundred twentie and nine, being the one and twentith yeare of the reigne of king Henrie the eight, and was honorablie buried with his ancestors at Cobham, hauing this epitaph grauen vpon him: Orate pro anima Thomæ Brooke militis domini de Cobham, & consanguinei & heredis Richardi Beauchamp militis, qui quidem Thomas cœpit in uxorem Dorotheam filiam Henrici Heidon militis, & habuerunt exitum inter eos septem filios & sex filias, & prædicta Dorothea obijt: & prædictus Thomas cœpit in vxorem Dorotheam Southwel viduam, quæ obijt sine exitu, & postea cœpit in vxorem Elizabetham Hart, & habuerunt nullum exitum inter eos, qui quidem Thomas obijt 19 die Iulij Anno Domini 1529.

George Brooke lord Cobham (by birth the second, but at the death of the same Thomas the eldest son of Thomas lord Cobham) being a gentleman of great hope, was for the valor shewed by him in his youngest yeares during the life of his father, not onlie well estéemed amongst all men, but also highlie honored by the king. For this George before his fathers death, shewing manifest proofe of those good parts wherewith he was liberallie indued by beneficiall nature, and his parents good and carefull education, attended with good credit (in the yéere of our Lord God one thousand fiue hundred and twentie, being about the twelfe yeare of king Henrie the eight) on Thomas duke of Norffolke then lieutenant of Ireland, where this George Brooke did valiantlie behaue himselfe in the same wars. Wherwith not contented, but being like the sun, which the higher it goeth, so much the more it spreadeth and increaseth his force; this George as he increased in yeares, so much the larger he spread forth the honorable beames of his valor. For in the yeare of our Lord 1522, falling in the fourtéenth yeare of the reigne of the renowmed king Henrie the eight, in the warres which the admerall of England had against the French Britons, at what time Morleus was taken from the Britons; the lord admerall in some part to recompense the worthie deserts of this George Brooke, then performing a peece of good seruice, did amongst others adorne him with the degree of a knight. Who thus honored, did not yet cease from the performance of the dutie both of a worthie knight, and a valiant gentleman. For shortlie after in the selfe same yeare, the kings armie (vnder the conduct of Thomas Howard earle of Surreie and admerall of England, ioining with the men of the emperor Charles the fift) passed towards Ard, from whense this sir George Cobham with two thousand men, by the precept of the admerall generall of the field, came to the towne of Sellois, set fire on the towne, assaulted the castell, burned, and subdued it, with the towns of Brunibridge, Senekerke, Botingham, and Manstier. Which donne, he returned to the admerall, and obteined due thanks and reward therefore, all these things being performed in the life of his father Thomas lord Cobham. After whose death, this noble man George Broke being become lord Cobham, did neither faint in the course of his honorable actions, nor anie whit degenerat from the nobilitie of his ancestors, for he was still had in such estimation: that amongst other of the nobilitie, in the three and twentith yeare of Henrie the eight, being the yere of our Lord and Sauior a thousand fiue hundred thirtie and one, attending on the king going to meet the French king betweene Calis and Bullongne, this lord Cobham was one, who in honorable sort behaued himselfe to his singular commendation. Some yeares after this, being in the yeare of our saluation one thousand fiue hundred fortie and foure, and the six and thirtith yeare of Henrie the eight, he as marshall of the armie vnder Edward Seimor earle of Hertford, taking ship at Newcastell, passed into Scotland, and in the same countrie performed manie warlike exploits. Whereupon, in the same yeare, as a reward of his worthinesse, he was made deputie of Calis in the place of the earle of Arundell; at what time this lord was sworne to that office, in the morning of the same daie, being the fourteenth daie of June, in the night whereof (after the watch bell ended) the king landed at Calis, to go in person to the siege of Bullongne. Touching whose landing, and the behauior of the lord Cobham; the first declaring a most noble mind of the prince, in that he would not refuse to obeie the orders of his townes; & the other shewing the wisedome of the same lord Cobham, in that he would not rashlie doo anie thing, I will not refuse to saie somewhat, sith the same deserueth not to be forgotten, and may be a good example to others. In the morning of the same fourteenth day of June before the king passed from Douer to Calis, was Henrie Fitzallen earle of Arundell deputie of Calis, but he then surrendering his office, and the lord Cobham that daie sworne, the king tooke land at Calis, after that the watch was set, & that the watch bell had ceased ringing; after the ceasing whereof, it was not lawfull to open the gates to receiue anie into the towne. The news of the kings landing being knowen, the erle of Arundell and the new deputie come with the porter, hauing the keies to open the gate, and to receiue the king into the towne, at what time the earle of Arundell in hast commanded the porter to open the gates, the lord Cobham then saieng nothing, but the porter refused the doing therof at his word, alledging, that this same morning in truth he was their gouernor, & then it was his dutie to obeie him. But now (saith he) you are no more in that office, wherfore I will not doo it vntill the lord Cobham our deputie doo appoint vs, at whose speech it shall be donne, and not before.

George Brooke.

Whereupon the lord Cobham noting the wise demeanour of the porter that warrantlesse would not breake the orders of the towne, for the present time said nothing, but still expecting the kings nearer approch to the towne, he at length goeth himselfe to the gate, when the king knocked, tooke the keie from the porter, did open onelie the little wicket, receiued the king onelie thereth rough, with three or foure more into the towne, and excluded all the rest of the traine, of what estate soeuer: which the king greatlie commended, hauing before vnderstood by the speech of the lord Cobham, that they might not without breach of the orders of the towne, admit such companie amongst them, after the houre appointed; and therefore besought the king that it would please him that onelie some three or foure, which his maiestie would appoint, might onelie come within the wals of the towne; whereunto the king granted, and standing himselfe at the wicket, would not permit anie to enter, but such as he by speciall name called vnto him; whereupon three or foure being now come in at the gate, the king did shut the wicket with his owne hands. Thus this lord Cobham continuing in the fauour of king Henrie the eight during his life, shewed no lesse merit of good desert after his death, to his sonne king Edward the first, than he had donne before. For about the third yeare of his reigne, in the yeare of Christ one thousand fiue hundred fortie and eight, the king adopted this lord Cobham into the honourable felowship of the knights of the garter; in which yeare also, about the second of Maie, after the surrender of Bullongne (the daie whereof following this lord left his deputiship of Calis as I haue beene informed) this lord Cobham with sir William Peter chéefe secretarie, went from Calis as ambassadors vnto the French king, at what time these ambassadors were lodged the first night at Bullongne, and so rode to Amiens, where they met the French king, with whome hauing dispatched the cause of their comming, they after returned into England honourablie rewarded, vpon which returne of the lord Cobham he was sworne one of the kings priuie councell.

After which to shew how redie and able he was to furnish himselfe with armor and men for defense of his countrie against inuasion, he in the first yeare of the same king Edward the first, in the yere of our Lord one thousand fiue hundred fiftie and two, amongst other of the nobilitie which mustered before the king in the parke of Grænewich, shewed his traine to the number of fiftie persons, vnder the ensigne of the Saracens head, which he gaue to his seruants for their cognisance. Then after the death of king Edward the first, in the yere of Christ one thousand fiue hundred fiftie and three, he setteth his hand with other of the nobilitie to a letter, wherin the lords admit quéene Jane to the crowne, excluding the ladie Marie daughter to king Henrie the eight. Which deed of his, donne by the persuasion of the greatest part of the greater sort of councellors, was not so hurtfull vnto him as it was to others, after the comming of quéene Marie to the crowne, to whom he shewed himselfe no lesse faithfull subiect than before he had beene a sound councellor to hir brother. For in the first yeare of the reigne of the same quæne, about the yeare of Christ one thousand fiue hundred fiftie and foure, he dutifullie resisted sir Thomas Wiat knight, raising a rebellion in Kent, and besieging this lord Cobham then defended within his castle of Cowling: where this lord discharging such artillerie as he had against Wiat, he inforced him to depart from thense. But as nothing is so well donne or meant, but that the same maie be impeched by the malice of the aduersarie, sith there is none that resteth free from enuie: so this lord growing in some suspicion about Wiats rebelling, by the euill persuasions of his enimies, sith this lord had vsed some conference with Wiat; he was in the end apprehended and committed to the Tower with certeine of his sonnes; who there sufficientlie prouing his innocencie, was after about the foure and twentith of March, discharged of his imprisonment and sent to his house in Kent. From whense in the second yere of the same quæne, with other noble men, he went to meet king Philip, comming into England land to marrie quéene Marie. After which he liued some fiue or six yeares in honorable peace and quiet, beloued of his countrie, and honored of the nobilitie, and then gaue place to nature.

He married Anne the eldest daughter of sir Edward Brzaie knight, and one of the heires of John lord Brzaie, by whom he had issue William Brzoke lord Cobham, George Brzoke his second sonne which maried Christian the daughter and heire of Richard Duke esquire, by whom he had issue three sonnes; Duke, so christened after his grandfather; Charles and Peter, Thomas Brzoke his third sonne which married Katharine the daughter of sir William Candish knight, by whom he had issue a daughter married to Arthur Pils esquire; John Brzoke his fourth sonne now liuing, who married Anne the widow of sir John Norton, and the daughter and heire of Cob; Henrie the elder his fift sonne, and Edward Brzoke the elder his sixt sonne, who both died without issue; Henrie Brzoke the yonger his seuenth sonne now liuing a pensioner, a knight, and one that hath béene ambassador legier in France for hir maiestie, who married Anne the daughter of Henrie Sutton of Arrone, and widow of doctor Walter Haddon maister of the requests; Thomas Brzoke the yonger his eight, Edmund the ninth, and Edward the yonger his tenth sonne, all which three died without issue. Besides which sonnes, this lord George had issue foure daughters, Elisabeth married to William Par marquesse of Northampton, Anne and Marie which died vnmaried, and Katharine now liuing married to John Jerningham esquire. And here sith I haue somewhat mentioned this Elisabeth marquesse of Northampton, who went into Flanders to recouer helpe of an infirmitie which she had, I must saie somewhat that she after hir returne from those parts vncured departed this life at Whitehall, and was buried in Paules on the north side of the quier, not farre from John of Gaunt. Touching whome after hir death doctor Haddon did compose these few following verses:

Elisabetha fuit naturæ iure Cobama,
Coniugis & proprio nomine Parra fuit,
Forma, pudor, pietas, fœcundæ gratia linguæ,
Ingenium, virtus, inuiolata fides,
Cum grauitate lepos, cū simplicitate venustas,
Larga manus, pectus nobile, firmus amor,
Deniq; quicquid habet natura, quod addere possit
Addere quod possit gratia quicquid habet,
Omnia viuentem Parram comitata fuerunt,
Omnia mors atrox obruit ista simul,
Obruat ista licèt tristi mors sæua sepulchro,
Attamen illorum fama superstes erit.

But leauing hir, and returning to hir father, we saie, that this lord George departed this life the third kalends of October, in the yeare of Christ one thousand fiue hundred fiftie and eight, and the fift and first yeare of the reignes of Philip and Marie. After whose death his wife ladie Anne, refusing anie longer to liue after the deth of hir honorable and louing husband, did also forsake the world, and ended hir daies in Nouember after the death of hir husband, to both whom buried in Cobham church, their louing sonne William lord Cobham did consecrate a rich, statelie, and curious monument of rare workmanship in stone, to the end that one tome might vnite their bodies after death, whose harts were by mutuall loue ioined during their liues. Vpon which gorgeous monument are ingrauen these following epitaphs, wherof the first in prose concerneth the lord Cobham, and the other in verse belongeth to his wife in this sort. ¶ Honoratissimus & clarissimus vir Georgius Brokus fuit dominus Cobhammus ex oppidi Cobhammi possessione cognominatus, & idē laudatissimus aliquot annis Caleti præfectus, in illustrissimum collegium cooptatus equitum diui Georgij, nec solùm hunc præstantissimū habuit honorem & familiæ commendationem, sed etiam natura fuit optima, & animo omni generis laude ornatissimo: dux fuit in bello præstantissimus, & sapientissimus in pace cōciliarius, principibus in quorum temporibus vixit egregiè probatus: Cantianis suis inter quos habitauit eximiè charus, deniq; toti reipublicæ propter honorum splendorem, & virtutum notissimus & dilectissimus. Et hæc omnia fuerunt in illo illustriora; quoniam & professionem euangelij susceperat, & defensionem, ac eandem ad extremum vsq; spiritum conseruauit. Iste nobilissimus vir, constantissimus Dei seruus, & ornatissimum patriæ membrum, cùm ad maturam senectutem peruenisset, annum agens sexagesimum secundum, & febris ardoribus conflagrans, tertio kalendas Octobris est mortuus, anno millesimo quingentesimo octauo, cuius discessu, liberi quos post se multos & inprimis laudatos reliquit, & amici & necessarij, tota denique respublica magnum & iustum dolorem acceperunt. Gulielmus autem Brokus eques appellatus, ex antiquæ familiæ cognominatione dominus Cobhammus Georgij patris & hæres beneuolētissimus, hoc monumentum memoriæ Georgij patris sui clarissimi dedicauit, an. 1561 & Elisabethæ reginæ tertio.

Besides which, vpon the other side of the same tome, besides the picture of his wife, is this epitaph set downe concerning hir, being a gentlewoman of great birth, and likewise of honourable behauiour:

Patre fuit domino fœlix, dominóq; marito,
Alter erat Brayus Cobhamus alter erat,
Anna fuit frugi, fuit & prosperima mater,
Pauperibus larga præbuit Anna manu,
Nil erat hac melius, nil fortunatius vna,
Donec erat charo charior illa viro.
Vltimus hunc annus Mariæ cū funere mersit,
Illa pari fato mense Nouembre ruit,
Sic quos vita duos concordes semper habebat,
Extinctos eadē nunc quoq; busta tenet.

William Brzoke knight, lord Cobham, the sonne and heire of George Brzoke lord Cobham, not degenerating in anie point from the nobilitie of his ancestors, was (as before his father had bene) aduanced to the honorable degree of knighthood in the life of his father, in whose time he deserued no small commendations for his seruice in the warres in those his yonger yeres. But because I maie not set downe what euerie particular action and honour of his might iustlie deserue to be spoken, because I might to some therin seeme ouer much to flatter him of whom I write whilest he is yet liuing, I will not either in truth dilate all the circumstances of the matter, neither in ample speeches streine my pen to powre out that which he rightlie deserueth, and euerie one plainlie knoweth: but onelie simplie set downe such things, as he hath valiantlie, honorablie, grauelie, and deliberatelie performed, in the warres, in peace, abroad and at home, to his countries good, the honour of his familie, his owne aduancement, and his princes liking. Wherefore to begin with things done in his fathers life, and in the budding of those yong yeares which gaue forth a manifest proofe of that fruit which so honorable a tree would in following time deliuer with ripe consideration; we saie, that in the third yeare of king Edward the first in the yeare of Christ one thousand fiue hundred fortie & nine, after the assault of Bullogne-

William Brzoke.

berg

berg in the warres betweene the French and the English, this lord Cobham (by order and appointment of his father George lord Cobham then deputie of Calis) came from Calis with a hundred souldiors, who ioining with another hundred souldiors issuing out of Guines vnder the leading of capteine Smith, toke their iorneies as appereth to Bullogneberg. Shortlie after which, by the order of the lord Clinton then gouernor of Bullogne, were sent forth sir William Brooke with his hundred from Bullogne berg, and capteine Litton with his hundred from the base towne, and another capteine with a third hundred of souldiors from another peece of defense thereabouts; wherevnto were ioined fiue and twentie horssemen with certeine cariages to go vnto a wood, two miles distance from Bullogneberg, to fetch timber from thense for the mounting of the great artillerie and other necessarie vses. These capteines with their bands being almost come to the woods side, met with certeine of their skouts, which were sent forth in the morning; who told them how they had discouered the tract of a great number of horssemen. Whereupon the English retired, and therewith the French horssemen brake out of the wood beforesaid, & following the English, fell in skirmish with them. But the Englishmen casting themselues in a ring, kept out the enimie with their pikes, wherewith they had impaled themselues; who hauing that their small number lined with shot, did continuallie gall the Frenchmen as they approched. All which notwithstanding, those horssemen gaue three maine onsets vpon the English, with the number of fiue hundred horsse; the rest of their companie remaining still in troope. But such was the valiant prowesse of the English (incouraged by the comfortable speeches, and valiant actiuitie of sir William Brooke, with the diligence of the other capteins, which not onelie conducted and placed them in such order as stood most for their safetie, but also vsed such good speeches to them as the necessitie of the time required and would permit) that in the end the enimie was manfullie repelled, and diuerse of them with their horsses slaine; amongst which was monsieur Cauret: whereby this sir William Brooke and the Englishmen did safelie retire and returne home.

This sir William Brooke being one of the squiers of the bodie to king Edward the sixt, was after the death of king Edward, which fell in the yeare of Christ one thousand fiue hundred fiftie and three, with his father the lord George, by the malicious persuasion of their enimies, committed to the Tower vpon suspicion of priuitie of the rebellion of Wiat, although (as you heard before) this lord repelled him from his castell of Cowling. But in the end, they so well answered whatsoeuer might be obiected against them, that they were shortlie after with great credit deliuered to their libertie. After which, this William Brooke liued in quiet all the time of quéene Marie, as far as I can yet learne. In the latter yeare of the reigne of which quéene, George lord Cobham died, whereby this sir William possessing now the honorable title of his father, was made lord Cobham by descent: who with all due circumstances executing the funerall of his father and mother (who did not long suruiue hir husband the lord George) did after in the church of Cobham erect a statelie monument ouer them of rich stone, most beautifull now to be seene in the same church. Not long after which death of his father, this William lord Cobham was after the death of sir Thomas Cheineie knight, in the first yeare of the reigne of our souereigne ladie Elisabeth, made constable of Douer castle, warden of the fiue ports, chancellor and admerall of the same. Which office he at this daie doth most honorablie inioie, hauing (during the same) onelie two lieutenants, the one a worthie gentleman called William Cripse esquier, and after his decease, Richard Barre esquier, a man well deseruing a place of such charge, trust, and credit.

In which first yeare of hir maiesties reigne, falling in the yeare of our Lord one thousand fiue hundred fiftie and nine, this lord did most honorablie interteine the quæne with hir traine, at his house of Cobham hall with sumptuous fare, and manie delights of rare inuention. Amongst which, one comming now to mind, which I then being yong beheld, vrgeth me forward in the setting downe thereof; which was: a banketing house made for hir maiestie in Cobham parke, with a goodlie gallerie therevnto, composed all of græne, with seuerall deuises of knotted flowers, supported on each side with a faire row of hawthorne trées, which nature sæmed to haue planted there of purpose in summer time to welcome hir maiestie, and to honor their lord and maister. But because the beautie and maiestie, with the rare deuise thereof cannot be so well conceiued by pen, as the same was artificiallie made, vnlesse the reder might at one instant behold also the artificiall situation of the place; I thinke it better to passe the rest in silence, than not deliuering it in such grace as it meriteth, to offer disgrace vnto it, and shame to my selfe, in that I shall faile in due commendation of the deuise; and take vpon me to describe that which is beyond my reach. Wherefore leauing the maner thereof, I will set downe certeine verses made by doctor Haddon, and placed in the forefront of the same banketting house, which doo not onelie shew the ioifull welcome of hir maiestie to this honorable lord; but also to the whole countrie of Kent, which verses were these following:

Regia progenies, clari stirps inclyta Bruti,
Grata venis populis Elisabetha tuis:
Quocúnque aspicias plausus & gaudia cernis,
Lætatur vultu fœmina virque tuo:
Imberbes pueri, cani, teneræque puellæ,
Omnis ad aspectum turba profusa ruunt.
Nos te reginam, tu nos agnosce clientes,
Sic tibi, sic nobis, sic bona cuncta fluent.

Not long after which, this lord Cobham was by hir maiestie sent ambassador into the low countries to king Philip, where he so honorablie and wiselie dispatched the same, that he was holden in no lesse reputation, than his birth and merits did well chalenge. Which doone, his wife the ladie Dorothie the daughter of George Neuill lord of Aburgauennie parted the world. Whereupon hauing no issue male by hir, and desirous to perpetuat so long and honorable a title of the lords Cobham, which he would not to haue ended in himselfe; he applied his mind to the second mariage, and finding a gentlewoman in the court of modest behauior and knightlie birth, deseruing well, not onelie for the rare and good cariage of hir selfe in that place; but also for the dowries of hir mind (for she was both wise and learned) and for the beautie of hir person wherewith nature had adorned hir, he toke hir to wife, being by name Francis, the daughter of sir John Newton, knight; who hauing made him a glad father of much faire issue, whereof we will speake hereafter, yet liueth to both their comforts. Touching which name of Newton, sith I am now occasioned to speake thereof; I thinke it not amisse here to set downe what I find noted thereupon; to the end that I might in like sort ioine them in some part of a discourse of their descent, whome God hath ioined in one societie of matrimonie. Wherefore I will vtter what I find thereof in the collections of Leland that most worthie antiquarie: who making mention of Gourneie, Caradoc, and Newton, as persons so tied together, partlie by descent, and partlie by name, that they cannot be seuered; I will Verbatim recite Lelands words, which are these, written in the peregrination of England, which he made in the yeare of Christ one thousand fiue hundred fortie and two.

of

From Montague to Stoke vnder Hampden about a mile, there I saw at Stoke in a bottome hard by the village, verie notable ruins of a great manor place or castell. In this manor place remaineth a verie ancient chapell, wherein be diuerse tombes of noblemen and women. In the south-west side of the chapell be fiue images and tombes one ioined hard to another, three of men harnessed with shields, and two of women. There haue bene inscriptions of each of them; but now so sore defaced that they cannot be read. I saw a shield or two all barreie of blew and white. There are manie other tombes of noble men in that chapell. Without the quier dore lieth a great faire flat marble stone, with an image of brasse flatlie grauen, and this writing in French about it: Icy gist le noble & valiant chiualier Mahew de Gourney iadis seneschall de Landes, & capteine de castell de Acquies pur nostre seigneiure le roy en la duchie de Guyen. Qui en sa vie fu a la battaile de Beuamazine, & ala apres a la siege de Algazire sur la Sarazins, & auxi a les battailes de Schluse, de Cressie, de Ingenesse, de Poiters, de Nazara, &c. Il morut al age de 96 ans, & 26 September, anno Domini 1406, de que ailme Dieu aist mercy. I marked in the windows three sorts of armes, one all barreie blew and white, another with three stripes gules downe right in a field gold, the third was crosselets of gold manie intermixt in one, in a field as I remember all gules. The prouost of this collegiat chapell hath a large house by the village of Stoke, and thereby is a notable quarrie of stone at Hampden.

Caradoc or Cradoc, they were called Newtons of the name of their dwelling called Newtowne.

The verie proper name of sir John Newton is Caradoc. The name of Newton came by this error, because the grandfather of sir John Newton dwelled, or was borne in Trenewithein in Pois land. Againe, this Gourneie was lord of Stokehampden, and there he lieth buried in a collegiat chapell, by the ruins of his castell; he was chiefe founder (as some saie) of the house of Gaunts at Bristow, he was founder of the priorie of nuns in Summersetshire, called Baron Gourneie: and of Richmont castell by Pendep, fiue miles from Wels. All the building of this castell is cleane downe. It came after to Hampden, and to Caradoc aliàs Newton. The forest of Kingswood commeth iust out to Barmecourt maister Newtons house. There were of ancient time foure counted as chiefe lords of Pendep; first the king and his part came to the bishop of Bath by fee farme; Glastenburie had another part; Bonuill lord Bonuill, and now the lord Greie marquesse Dorset was the third owner; the fourth was Gourneie; and now Caradoc aliàs Newton. Gourneie vsed much to lie at Richmont castell. Sir John Newton digged vp manie old foundations of this castell, towards the building of a new house hard thereby, called Eastwood. There is a village by East chapter, called West chapter Gourneie, and there be the varietie of armes that Gourneie gaue in the glasse windows, and his cote armor. At such time as Gourneie liued, the lord Fitzwaren was maister of Pendep first by inheritance, and it was well furnished with deare: but shortlie after, for riots and trespasses done in hunting, it was disforrested, and so it remaineth. Gourneis lands came by this means vnto Newton.

Sir John Newtons house standeth in the verie place where the grange of Richmond castell was.

One Newton a man of lands inhabiting at Wike towards Banwell, had a yonger brother, which maried one of the daughters and heires of Hampton, and wife issuelesse before to one of the Chocks that died without child by hir, which was the yongest daughter of three that Hampton left behind him, and yet she being maried vnto Newton, father to sir John Newton, fortuned to haue all the three parts. The verie lands of Newton of Wike, be descended by heires generals to sir Henrie Capell, sonne to sir Giles that dwelled at Wike, and to maister Griffith of Northamptonshire that hath Braibrooke castell. So that Newton of Barmecourt hath no part of Newtons lands of Wike. Thus much Leland Whose words although they be long, yet I haue bene the willinger to set downe, because it concerneth the name of Newton, of whome this honorable ladie Cobham is descended; being a person in no lesse credit with hir maiestie, than hir worthinesse doth well merit.

But to leaue hir in court in the good fauor of hir prince, I will returne my pen to the lord Cobham, who for the tender loue that he bare vnto his sister the ladie marchionesse of Northampton, went with hir and this ladie Cobham his wife into Flanders, there to seeke remedie for an infirmitie wherewith the said marchionesse was greeuouslie troubled. After whose returne into England, in the yeare of Christ one thousand fiue hundred three score and fiue, being the seuenth yeare of queene Elisabeth, Christopher prince and Margraue of Baden, with Cecilie his wife sister to the king of Swethen alanded heere in England in the month of September at Douer, whom this lord Cobham there receiued, and from thense conueied vnto London, where the prince and his wife lodged at the earle of Bedfords house standing on the east side, not far from Iuie bridge. But as there are none that liue in this world in such happinesse, but that they are enuied (because such is the nature of enuie that it alwaies repineth at hir superiors, and at the good of anie other; for as saint Augustine in a certeine sermon doth write; Inuidia est odium alienæ fœlicitatis, respectu superiorũ, quia eis non æquatur: respectu inferiorum, ne sibi æquentur, respectu parium, quia sibi æquantur; vnde Cain inuidet Abel prosperitati, Rachel Liæ fœcunditati, Saul Dauid fœlicitati: per inuidiam procuratus est lapsus mundi & mors Christi: the sharpe and fierie darts whereof, none but onelie the poore and miserable can eschue; for the vertuous, the wise, the valiant, kings, quenes, lords, capteines, and all estates whatsoeuer are subiect therevnto) so this noble lord Cobham, feeling the common force thereof, by the complaint of others, was vpon the same assigned ouer to the charge of the honorable lord treasuror, vntill further triall were made of his vprightnesse. But in the end, as gold the more it is purified by the fire the brighter and better it becommeth: so the lord Cobham, hauing well cleered himselfe of whatsoeuer was laied against him, did like Joseph not onelie receiue an honorable libertie, but did also in following time rise to greater honor than he had before. For his fidelitie to his prince deseruing it, and hir honorable fauor commanding it, he was after in the yeare of Christ one thousand fiue hundred three score and eightene, being the twentith yeare of hir maiesties reigne, sent with sir Francis Walsingham hir principall secretarie, ambassador into the low countries, to don John of Austria, bastard sonne of Charles the fift the emperor, and regent of those countries for Philip king of Spaine. In which ambassage he behaued himselfe so gravelie, that in few yeares after he was aduanced to greater honors. For he was called both to be one of the most honorable fellowship of the knights of the garter, and in Hilarie tearme in the yeare of Christ one thousand fiue hundred fourescore and fiue, in the eight and twentith yeare of hir maiesties reigne was admitted into the number of hir priuie councellors, where I will now leaue him, inioieng that place, in which I wish him long and happie continuance. Besides which (ouerpassing his goodlie buildings at the Blacke friers in London in the yeare of Christ one thousand fiue hundred fourescore and two, and since that, the statelie augmenting of his house at Cobham hall, with the rare garden there, in which no varietie of strange flowers and trees doo want, which praise or price maie obteine from the furthest part of Europe, or from other strange countries, wherby it is not inferior to the garden of Semiramis) I determine to speake somewhat of such persons, as are issued from him. Wherefore we first saie, that this lord maried two wiues, wherof the first (as is before said) was the daughter of George Neuill lord of Aburgauennie, by whom he had issue one onelie daughter called Francis, yet liuing, being borne on wednesday the last of Julie one thousand fiue hundred foure score & nine, being first maried to Thomas Copinger of Alhallowes in the countie of Kent esquire, by whom she hath issue, two sonnes now liuing, William & Francis; and after his decease vnto Edward Becher esquire now liuing, by whom she hath also issue, two sonnes, Caro & Francis. After the death of this ladie Dorothie, the lord Cobham maried Francis the daughter of sir John Newton, by whom he had issue, foure sonnes, & three daughters, which were Maximilian, Henrie, William, George, Elisabeth, Francis, and Margaret, of whom particularlie we will saie somewhat, aswell for their honorable birth, as for that their good education giuen by their parents deserueth not that they should be forgotten.

Maximilian the eldest sonne (borne on wednesdaie the fourth of December in the yeare of Christ one thousand fiue hundred and threescore, being the third yeare of the reigne of queene Elisabeth) growing after to be a goodlie yong gentleman, was first in his youngest yeares brought vp in his fathers house, where he learned the Latine, the French, & other languages; then going to Cambridge, where he bestowed some time in philosophicall exercises, & forsaking that place, did after trauell beyond the seas, where most vnfortunatlie (about the yeare of Christ one thousand fiue hundred fourescore and three) he ended his desired life, which might greatlie in time haue beene beneficiall to his countrie, whose death (being greeuous to his parents at Cobham performing the funerals of him their sonne, who should by the course of nature haue discharged that dutie to them) maie iustlie moue them to write vpon the tombe of the same Maximilian these verses, set vpon a tombe in the hospitals of the incurable in Naples, which in the like cause I haue read to be set by the now liuing mother vpon the tombe of hir lamented sonne, departing in hir life time to hir great griefe and heauines:

Quæ mihi debueras suprema munera vitæ,
Infœlix seruo nunc tibi nate prior:
Fortuna inconstans, lex & variabilis æui,
Debueras cineri iam superesse meæ.

The which I haue seene turned into French in this sort expressing the words & the true meaning therof:

Par ces derneirs honores, que puet ladie attender,
Ie te paye primer ce que tu me deuois,
Sort murable ô du temps les variable loix,
Tu deuois ah mon filz ah suire ma cender.

But to let that passe, this yong gentleman hauing his mind mounted to the hight of good actions, and desirous to make shew that patience reuolueth in expecting the good successe of hard and high things, tooke this posie to him; Gaudet patientia duris. Of which words and the blacke lion placed in a siluer field being his crest, one Giles Fletcher (now doctor of law in Cambridge in this yeare one thousand fiue hundred fourescore and six) and one that greatlie loued this gentleman, did some yeares past compose these following persuasiue verses, as followeth:

Ecce niger vestræ referens insignia stirpis,
Stat leo candenti conspiciendus agro:
Admonet vt niuei tibi sint in pectore mores,
Hic color & fortem te iubet esse leo.
Quàm bene conueniunt nigro coniuncta leoni?
Quæ tria sunt titulis addita verba tuis.
Hæc quoq; te fortem, Gaudet patientia duris,
Hæc quoq; te niueis moribus esse iubet.
Ergò sit vt tituli, sic vitæ regula, verbo
Sed quod inest, factis debet inesse tuis.
Vt te nobilitas humilem, fors ampla modestum
Reddat, honor mitem, copia magna pium.
Dura quidem res est, Gaudet patientia duris,
Conueniens verbo laus erit ista tuo.
Si malè quid placeat, quod vis non velle, carere,
Quod cupis, a placidis abstinuisse malis.
Dura quidem res est, Gaudet patientia duris,
Deterior verbo ne videare, caue.
Si quid displiceat, motus lenire feroces,
Pectoris ac iræ fræna tenere tuæ:
Dura quidem res est, Gaudet patientia duris,
Hic quoq; sint verbo consona facta tuo:
Si mala contingant, tranquilla mente dolorem
Ferre, nec aduersus succubuisse malis.
Dura quidem res est, Gaudet patientia duris,
Dissimilis verbo ne videare, caue.
Hæc bene si facias, re, sanguine, nomine magnus,
Et magno maior Maximilianus eris.

Thus setting end to Maximilian the eldest sonne of this lord Cobham, let vs descend to the rest of his children.

Henrie Brooke, being the second sonne by birth, but now the eldest by inheritance, is a gentleman, of whome great hope is conceiued, that his following yeares giuing increase to his good parts by nature, and to the like gifts of the languages by education, will not onelie make him a beneficiall member to his commonwealth, but also a person worthie of such a father, which Henrie was borne at Cobham hall, on wednesdaie the two and twentith of November, in the yeare of Christ one thousand fiue hundred sixtie and foure.

William Brooke the third sonne, a comelie gentleman, and inclined to follow the court (for which he seemeth by the gift of nature to be created) is in like sort beautified with the knowledge of the languages, and therefore likelie in following time to prooue a glorie to his house, as well abroad as at home, being brought into this world on tuesdaie the eleuenth of December, one thousand fiue hundred sixtie and fiue.

George Brooke the fourth sonne, hauing by an accidentall chance in his youth some imperfection, in one part of his bodie, being borne on saturdaie the last of Julie, in the yeare of Christ one thousand fiue hundred sixtie nine, is so well indowed with the gifts of nature, and so furthered therein by the helpe of studie, which he implóied in the vniuersitie of Cambridge, where he receiued the degree of maister of art, in the yeare of Christ one thousand fiue hundred eightie and six, that he fullie and more recompenseth that accidentall imperfection, with naturall and procured beautie of the mind, and therefore with Ouid (a man more wittie than wel-fauored) may iustlie saie:

Ingenio forma damna rependo meæ.

Elisabeth and Francis Brooke two twins were borne on tuesdaie the fift daie of Januarie, in the yeare of our redemption one thousand fiue hundred three score and one, whereof the first being a modest and vertuous gentlewoman doth worthilie serue hir maiestie as one of hir priuie chamber; the other being a person not degenerat from the honor of hir house, was in the yeare of our Lord God one thousand fiue hundred and eightie in Michaelmas terme married to John lord Sturton at the Blacke friers in London; Margaret the third daughter, a goodly gentlewoman & furnished with the good gifts of nature, and her parents education, was at Cobham hall in the yeare of Grace one thousand fiue hundred eightie and foure married vnto sir Thomas Sands of Throughlie in the countie of Kent knight. With which ladie I doo for this time knit vp the discourse of the lord Cobhams of Cobham, and will descend to the other persons by collaterall lines issued from that house.

The Cobhams lords of Randall or Rundall in Kent, in the parish of Shorne.

Hauing before perfourmed the descents & succession of all the lords of Cobham, either by the name of Quatermere Cobham, or Brooke; order requireth (sith there hath beene three lords, as I haue beene informed at one time of the Cobhams, which I for this present take to be the lord Cobham of Cobham, the lord Cobham of Randall, and the lord Cobham of Sterborow) that we also intreat somewhat of the Cobhams lords of Randall, to make this worke perfect, touching all the lord Cobhams in England, For which cause meaning first in orderlie sort to set downe the lords of Randall, a place not farre from Cobham; I must begin the same a little higher, and make repetition of somewhat spoken before to bring forth this line of the house of Randall in this sort.

John Cobham.

Sir John Cobham knight the sonne of the first Henrie Cobham, hauing two wiues, had by his first wife the daughter of one William Fitzbennet two sonnes, whereof the eldest was called John, of whom the lords of Cobham did descend (as we haue before touched) and the second was named Henrie Cobham lord of Rundall, of whome we are now to intreat.

Henrie Cobham of Randall.

This Henrie Cobham of Randall knight married Jone, one of the daughters and heires of Stephan Pinchester warden of the cinque ports, and of Margaret his wife the daughter of John de Burgh, which Stephan was the sonne of Stephan Pinchester knight, dieng in the yeare of Christ one thousand two hundred and eightéene, about the second yeare of the reigne of king Henrie the third, and of Rose his wife. The name of which Pinchester I haue beene the more willing to set downe, because that these Cobhams of Randall (in respect of this John daughter and heire of Stephan Pinchester) did leane the cote of the Cobhams, and bare the armes of Pinchester, which is gules a plaine crosse siluer, as yet to be seene vpon a monument carued out of stone in the church of Shorne in Kent, where this Henrie Cobham was buried with his armor, on whose shield he beareth those armes of Pinchester. By which Jone the daughter and heire of Stephan Pinchester this Henrie had issue John Cobham, which died without issue; Stephan Cobham of Randall knight, Thomas Cobham which had lands in Hollinborne and Chaford; and Stephan Cobham the yonger which had lands in Dunstall. Which Henrie liued in the seuentéenth yeare of the reigne of king Edward the third, being about the yeare of our incarnation one thousand three hundred fortie and three, and was buried at Shorne (as is before touched) with this epitaph in French as followeth: Sire Henry le Cobham leisne seignour dé Rondail fust appelle gist icy, Dieu de sa ame ayt mercy.

Stephan de Cobham lord of Randall the sonne of Henrie Cobham married Auisia, by whome he had issue John Cobham of Randall knight; which Stephan died in the life of his father, in the seuenth yeare of the reigne of king Edward the third, being about the yeare one thousand three hundred thirtie & three of the birth of our Sauior. Stephan de Cobham lord of Randall.

John de Cobham lord of Randall knight, had issue Thomas de Cobham of Randall knight, his heire, and John de Cobham of Yeuer his second sonne. Which John Cobham the knight departed this world, in the six and thirtith yeare of the reigne of king Edward the third, being the one thousand three hundred three score and second yeare from the birth of Christ. John de Cobham lord of Randall.

Thomas de Cobham of Randall knight, the sonne of John Cobham knight before recited, married Mawd the daughter of one Pimpe knight, who perhaps was lord of the manor of Pimps court in Kent. By which Mawd this Thomas had issue Reinold Cobham knight, and William Cobham, of which William I haue gathered this note out of an old euidence: William Cobham of Stapleherst, in the eight yere of king Henrie the sixt, gaue to Peter Web of Shorne two acres and a halfe in the parish of Shorne, in the field called Smithen, and all his lands vnder west Hull, which should descend vnto him after the death of the lord Thomas de Cobham alias Rundella knight, his father. This Thomas Cobham of Randall knight, died in the seuentéenth yere of the reigne of king Richard the second, being the yeare of our redemption one thousand three hundred foure score and thirtéene. But his wife Mawd died about thirtéene yeares before hir husband, in the yeare of Christ one thousand three hundred and foure score, in the third yeare of the said king Richard the second, and is buried in Cobham church, with this epitaph, which is there yet to be seene: Icy gist dame Mawd de Cobham, le femme de sire Thomas Cobham, que dellya le 9 iour d' Auerill, en le anne de grace 1380. Thomas de Cobham lord of Randall.

Reinold Cobham of Randall knight, the sonne of sir Thomas Cobham of Randall knight, married Elisabeth the daughter of sir Arnold Sauage knight, who was shiriffe of Kent in the ninth yeare of the said king Richard the second, about the yeare of Christ one thousand three hundred foure score and fiue, at what time he had a Dedimus potestatem directed vnto him to take a fine of sir Roger Northwood knight lord of Shorne in Kent. By which Elisabeth this Reinold Cobham had issue John de Cobham, which died without issue; Thomas Cobham of Randall esquire, and Henrie Cobham which died without issue. Reinold de Cobham lord of Randall.

Thomas Cobham of Randall esquire was nine yeares old in the ninth yeare of king Henrie the fourth, which fell about the yeare of our Lord one thousand foure hundred and seuen, or one thousand foure hundred & eight. For the said yere of the king did fall in both those yeares of our Lord, accounting the yeare of Christ to begin on the fiue and twentith daie of March, after the account of England. Of which Thomas sith I haue nothing to write either of his mariage or death, I will in this sort knit vp this discourse of the Cobhams lords of Randall, and descend to the lord Cobhams of Sterborow. Thomas Cobham lord of Randall.

The

The descents and successions of the lord Cobhams, lords and barons of Starburow castle in Surrie.

TO come to the full discourse of these lord Cobhams of Starburow, who were for honor and antiquitie of great estimation; we must first fetch their originall from John Cobham knight, as we haue alreadie done the lords of Cobham and Randall: and for that must the third time repeat some discourse and descent of the said John Cobham; who being the sonne of the first Henrie Cobham, to whom Quaternere sold his lands in Cobham, had two wiues as is before touched: by the first whereof he had two sonnes, of whom the lord Cobhams of Cobham and those Cobhams of Randall did descend: and by his second wife called Jone, the daughter of Hugh Nevill, he had issue Reinold Cobham knight, lord of Aldington, of whom the Cobhams of Starburow did descend, as this following discourse doth manifest.

Reinold Cobham knight lord of Aldington, which liued in the sixteenth yere of king Edward the first, being about the yeare of Christ one thousand two hundred foure score & eight, married Jone the daughter and heire of William de Yener, by whom he had issue Reinold lord Cobham of Starburow.

Reinold de Cobham lord of Starburow

Reinold lord Cobham of Starburow, the second of that name and that line, being knight of the garter was lord of Starburow castle. All which lord Cobhams of Starburow (as differing from the armes of the house of Cobham of Cobham, from which they issued) did beare gules a cheuron gold, charged with three staues sable, onelie changing the sable lions of the cheuron of the house of Cobham of Cobham into sable starres; but still keeping all the rest of the armes both in colour, field, & cheuron, as they of Cobham did beare them. Of which stars in those armes of these Cobhams, the place was called Starburow, or the burow of the stars, and they surnamed the lords of Starburow. This Reinold lord Cobham, was with the earle of Derbie and others, hauing fiue hundred men sent in the thirteenth yere of king Edward the third, being the yere of our redemption one thousand three hundred thirtie and nine, into Flanders, where they subdued the Flemings, whereof the most part were destrous to fall to league with the king of England against the mind of their erle, which took part with the French king. After which, the king going into Flanders, feining that he would in the fourteenth yeare of his reigne, being the yeare of our redemption one thousand three hundred and fortie, ride about that countrie for his pleasure, he secretlie came into Zeland, where taking ship, and sailing three daies and three nights, on S. Andrews daie at night about cocke crowing, entred the Tower of London by night, being attended on (amongst other noble men) with this lord Cobham, who (continuing still in his princes fauour, a thing rarelie happening, but that his worthinesse alwaies merited fauour) was in the sixteenth of Edward the third, in the yeare of Christ one thousand three hundred fortie & two, appointed with others, during the wars in Britaine, to be a commissioner for the king of England, to conclude a peace by mediation of two cardinals, setting their seales to the same agreement, in the presence of the lord Cobham. About two yeares following, this Reinold was made admerall of the sea, from the mouth of the Thames toward the west parts, so long as it pleased the king, as appeareth by the patent dated the eight of Maie, in the eightenth yere of Edward the third, falling in the yeare from the birth of Christ one thousand three hundred fortie and foure. Then in the twentith yeare of the said king, falling in the yere of our Lord one thosand three hundred fortie and six, he passed with the king into Normandie, continuing with him in all those warres of France, and was by speciall appointment of the king bestowed in the fore-ward of the armie, in which the prince of Wales was at the battell of Creseie, as one of the cheefe persons for value, to whom Edward the third would commit the life of his sonne the prince of Wales. The next yere following, being the one and twentith of Edward the third, and of Christ one thousand three hundred fortie and seuen, he was amongst others appointed for the English part to treat with two cardinals about a peace betweene France and England, and was in the same yere by patent admitted into the honor of a baron, with a further gift of the manor of Westclive to him and to the heires of his bodie begotten. Besides which, in the same yeare, this Reinold, with Thomas lord Berkeleie, and Norice Berkeleie, became manucaptors for Thomas Fitzmoris earle of Defmond, that he should come into England, and abide such order as the law would award for such misdemenors as he had vsed against the king. Afterward this lord Cobham tooke the towne and castle of Sacret or Salart; from whense he returned towards Languedocke, and was sent againe in another voiage against the Frenchmen. And in the nine and twentith of Edward the third, in the yeare of Christ one thousand three hundred fiftie and fiue, when the prince of Wales, commonlie surnamed the Blacke prince, diuided his armie two miles from the towne of Areull, this Reinold with others were in the vaward, at what time it seemeth that he was marshall of the armie. And in the thirtith yere of Edward the third, in the yere of our saluation one thousand three hundred fiftie and six, he was valiantlie fighting in that famous battell of Poitiers, in which the Blacke prince tooke the French king prisoner. But yet not ceasing his warlike exploits, he also in the three and thirtith of the king, being the yere of Christ one thousand three hundred three score and nine, went out of England againe with king Edward the third, and besieged the citie of Rhemes. Not long after which, in the thirtie and fift yere of this king, falling in the yeare of Christ one thousand three hundred three score and one, he departed this life, and was buried at Linfield in Surrie: at whose feet on his tombe lieth embossed in stone a Saracen in a red robe, signifieng that he had obteined victories amongst and against them. He married two wiues, whereof the first was Jone the daughter of sir Norice Berkeleie knight, by whome he had issue Reinold Cobham knight, baron of Starburow. His other wife was Elisabeth the daughter of Hugh erle of Stafford, the widow of John de Ferrers of Chartleie knight, by whom he had no issue.

Reinold lord Cobham of Starburow.

Reinold Cobham knight the third of this line and name, and the second baron of Starburow, was in the eight and fortith yere of king Edward the third, in the yeare of our redemption one thousand three hundred three score and foureteene, with John duke of Lancaster, William earle of Salisburie, Simon Suoberie and others sent into Flanders to Bruges to intreat a peace betweene England and France, which parlee continued almost two yeres, and ended without conclusion of peace, but onlie with a truce for a certeine time. After which, in the one and fiftith and last yere of the same king, being about the yeare of Christ one thousand three hundred three score and sixteene, he was the second time (with the bishop of Hereford and maior of London) sent to Bruges,

to

to treat of the like peace with the French, but was shortlie after called home by the death of the said Edward the third. When this king was dead, and that his nephue (by his sonne the Blacke prince) called Richard the second, being within age, came to the crowne; this Reinold Cobham amongst others was in the eleuenth yeare of the same Richard the second, in the yeare that God became man one thousand three hundred foure score and seuen, appointed to haue the gouernment of the realme, as maie appeare in my former discourse of the protectors of England, and to be one of the kings gouernors. For which office and for nothing else he was after in the parlement holden at Shrewsburie, in the two and twentith yeare of the reigne of this Richard, being in the yeare of our Lord one thousand three hundred foure score and eightéene condemned: who departing the realme therefore, did returne out of Britaine into England with Henrie of Bullingbroke, then duke of Hereford (and after king by the name of Henrie the fourth) in the three & twentith and last yere of this deposed king Richard, in the yere of our saluation one thousand three hundred foure score & ninetéene. After which he liued about foure yeares, and ended his life in the fourth of the reigne of the said king Henrie the fourth, falling about the yere of our Lord one thousand foure hundred and three, being buried in Linsted church in Surrie with this epitaph, declaring his martiall and ciuill qualities:

De Starborough dominus, de Cobham hic Reginaldus,
Hic iacet, hic validus miles fuit vt leopardus:
Sagax in guerris, satis audax omnibus horis,
In cunctis terris famam præclauit honoris.
Dapsilis in mensis, formosus, morigerosus,
Largus in expensis, imperterritus, generosus:
Et quando placuit Meschia, quòd moriretur,
Ac spirans obijt in cœlis glorificetur:
Mille quadringeno, trino, Iulij numeres tres,
Migrauit cœlo, sit sibi vera quies.

He maried Elenor the daughter of John lord Matrauers, & the widow of sir John Arundell knight, by whome he had issue, Reinold lord Cobham of Starburow.

Reinold lord Cobham of Starburow.

Reinold de Cobham knight, the fourth of that name and time, and the third baron of Starburow, had two wiues: the first was Elenor the daughter of sir Thomas Culpepper knight, by whome he had issue, Reinold lord Cobham of Starburow, Thomas Cobham knight, Elenor maried to Humfreie duke of Glocester, Elisabeth maried to Richard lord Strange of Knocking, Anne a nun at Barking, and Margaret maried to Reinold Curteous. Which Elenor first wife to this Reinold now lord Cobham, died in the yeare of Christ one thousand foure hundred and twentie, being the eight yeare of the reigne of king Henrie the fift, and was buried at Linsted with this epitaph here presentlie following:

¶ Hic iacet domina Eleonora quondam vxor Reginaldi Cobham militis, filia Thomæ Culpeper militis, quæ obijt anno Domini 1420.

The second wife of this Reinold the fourth of that name was Anne, one of the daughters and heires of Thomas lord Bardolph, by whome he had no issue. Now here I thinke it not vnmeet in this place, to saie somewhat of the said Elenor Cobham, the daughter of this Reinold lord Cobham before touched. Which woman being maried to Humfreie duke of Glocester, in the fourth yeare of the reigne of king Henrie the first, much about the yeare of Christ one thousand foure hundred twentie and seuen, did by night on tuesdaie the 19 daie of Julie, in the 19 yeare of the said Henrie the first, being the yeare that the word of the father tooke flesh in the wombe of the mother, one thousand foure hundred fortie and one, flie vnto sanctuarie, vpon the apprehending of Henrie Bullingbroke a priest the sundaie before, for vsing coniuration to consume the kings person. Which flight caused hir to be suspected of treason, & that the rather, because this Bullingbroke confessed he did this, by the procurement of the said Elenor: who was indicted as accessarie thereunto. After which, on the twentith daie of October, being in the twentith yeare of that Henrie, falling in the said yeare one thousand foure hundred fortie and one, from Christs birth, she appeared before Robert Gilbert bishop of London, William Alnewike bishop of Lincolne, and Thomas Browns bishop of Norwich. Where Adam Molins clearke of the kings councell read certeine articles obiected against hir, of sorcerie and witchcraft: whereof she confessed part, and denied others. But after, on the three and twentith of October, she was conuicted of those articles, and receiued penance therefore, which she performed. The maner whereof is set downe by Iohn Stow, and shall be more liberallie touched by me in my larger discourse of the lord Cobhams, hereafter to be set forth. And thus this much of that Reinold the fourth, and his children.

Reinold lord Cobham of Starburow.

Reinold the fift of that name and line, was the fourth & last baron of Starburow of that house, being called Reinold the yonger in the life of his father. This Reinold the fift, I take to be that man, whome the duke of Bedford (brother to Humfreie duke of Glocester that maried Elenor, sister to this Reinold the fift) did amongst others make knight in the fourth yeare of Henrie the first, in the yeare of Christ one thousand foure hundred twentie and fiue. He maried Thomasin the daughter of John Cherocke knight, by whome he had issue one daughter and heire called Margaret, maried to Rafe Neuill the second of that name earle of Westmerland; who hauing by hir one onelie daughter, which died in hir cradle, the lands of the lord Cobham of Starburow, came to sir Thomas Cobham knight, brother and heire to this Reinold.

Thomas Cobham lord of Starburow.

Thomas de Cobham knight, the sonne of Reinold the fourth, and heire to his brother Reinold the fift, maried Anne the daughter of Humfreie Stafford duke of Buckingham, by whome he had one onelie daughter and heire called Anne, maried first to the lord de Monte Iouis alias Monte Ioroso, in English Mont Iews or Mont ioies: and after to sir Edward Burgh of Lincolneshire knight, baron of Burgh. Who at this daie inioieng that name & baronie of Burgh, doth keepe the remembrance of their descents from these lords Cobhams of Starburow, the castle whereof being at this daie in their possession. This Thomas Cobham is he, whereof I haue read, that there was one Thomas Cobham knight, whose daughter and heire was called Anne, that died in the eleuenth yeare of king Edward the fourth, being the yeare of our redemption one thousand foure hundred seuentie and one. Of which name Cobham I also read manie more notes and epitaphs: but by reason I can not yet well tell, in which of the collaterall lines of this house (whereof there are manie) to bestow them, I will refer them to my next addition; not doubting but longer time will breed more certeine knowledge where to place them whereby truth maie be brought to light, sith Veritas est temporis filia.

Thus hauing finished all my course discourse of these lords Cobhams, it is high time for vs now to descend to the lord wardens of the fiue ports: which office the honorable baron sir William Brooke knight, lord Cobham of Cobham now liuing, doth to his countries good, and his great honor, worthilie inioy, as some of his ancestors haue done before.

The catalog of the lord wardens of the cinque ports, and constables of Douer castle, as well in the time of king Edward, surnamed the Confessor, as since the reigne of the Conqueror, collected by Francis Thin, in the yeare of Christ one thousand fiue hundred fourescore and six.

IT hath bin some question, whether this officer of warden of the ports were in the Romane and Saxons times, which truelie I am resolued was then vsed; and the officer rightlie to be called Limenarcha, the chiefe (as it were) of the borders of seacoasts, and the gouernor Saxonici litoris; which was of that shore which belonged to England in Kent, on which the roning pirats of the Saxons lieng vpon the sea were woont to alland, and then to spoile the countrie. For the more explanation whereof, I referre thee to that learned worke of maister Camden, touching the antiquities of Britaine, and will onlie bend my pen to such principall officers of those places as fall within my knowledge; as followeth.

Earle Godwine.

Godwine earle of Kent was constable of Douer castell, maister of the ports and those parts of the sea coastes, and had the towne of Douer in his kéeping, in the time of king Edward the confessor: who in the yeare of Christ one thousand and nineteene, being the third yeare, or as other haue, the second yeare of Canutus king of England, had the gouernment of the English armie into Denmarke, when Canutus went to subdue the Vandals: at what time Canutus by the helpe of Godwine obteined the victorie. After which, in the yeare of our redemption one thousand thirtie and eight, as some haue (but in the yeare one thousand thirtie and six, as others haue) in which yeare Canutus died, this Godwine, in recompense of the honor which he receiued by Canutus, labored to aduance Hardiknute the sonne of the same Canutus, to the kingdome of England; but he preuailed not: for Harold Harefoot was then made king.

Godwine thus still remaining in credit, found meanes to haue Alured the sonne of Egelred heire to the crowne to be slaine, least he should pursue his title to the kingdome. Of which thus speaketh the priuat history of Elie in the second booke: Alfredus (Alfred or Alured) missioni Goodwini strictissimè vinctus, ducitur ad Ely, sed vt ad terram nauis applicuit, eius oculi sunt eruti, & sic ad monasterium ductus traditur ad custodiendum; vbi breui post obijt, & in australi porticu in occidentali parte ecclesiæ sepultus: nunc autem (which was about the latter end of the time of King Henrie the second) ossa ipsius iuxta altare sanctorum Eadmundi regis & martyris, & Thomæ Cantuariensis episcopi tumulata sunt. Which history disproueth all such writers as affirme, that this Alfred was slaine, and that he was killed by Godwine about Guildenford, of some called Gilford. This done in the time of king Hardiknute, he with quéene Emma had the gouernment of the realme.

But yet in the time of the said Hardiknute, as some chronicles affirme, he was feine to purge himselfe of the death of Alured: which he did by oth, and by giuing to the king a rich present; being a ship, conteining therein fourescore souldiors, wearing vpon each of their armes two bracelets of gold of sixtéene ounces weight, a triple habergeon guilt on their bodies, and a sword with gilt hilts girded to their waists, a battle ax after the maner of the Danes on their left thoulder, a target with bosse & mailes gilt: and to conclude, they were furnished at all parts with armor and weapon accordinglie. But touching the purgation of Godwine, and the gift of this ship, I must speake my fansie; not as though I would be Honorarius arbiter, or a seuere controllor of other men: but as one that desireth that truth maie appeare, which hath béene manie waies obscured by writers of chronicles. And for that cause I saie, that this purgation of Godwine, and this gift, should be referred to the following time of king Edward the confessor; as is well proued by an ancient booke dedicated to quéene Edith, wife of Edward the Confessor, and the daughter of this earle Godwine. Which booke was of purpose made, to set forth the praise, vertues, learnings, and languages of the said Edith (amongst which languages, she is commended, for that she vnderstood and spake the Irish tong) and to further the renowme and glorie of this erle Godwine, as after by the verses proouing the same, shall more plainelie appeare. And yet I know, it is not vnpossible but that he might giue two ships in both those kings times: which if he had done, I doubt not but this booke would aswell haue spoken of the one, as of the other; being speciallie written to set out his glorie.

This earle Godwine, hauing with much diligence aduanced Edward the Confessor through his power and strength in the realme to the crowne of England, did after purge himselfe of the death of Alfred brother to this king Edward, and presented a worthie gift (vnto the said king Edward, at his entrance into the gouernement) a ship of rare deuise and riches, as these verses taken out of the before mentioned booke do well and soundlie proue:

Laudibus exortis hinc gratis concinit orbis,
Et resonet mecum tua musica gaudia rerum,
Quæ lux de cœlo rutilans, in rege nouello,
Anglis illuxit, gemebundáq; corda resoluit,
Has quoq; conuitias, qua lætitia celebrarunt,
Festum proceres, certatim dona ferentes,
Agnouere suum regem magnúmq; patronum.
Multa dedere quidem, verùm supereminet omnes
Larga ducis probitas Goodwini, munere tali,
Scapha grauis longo laterum compage redacto,
*Verticibus binis, finibus stabat Thamasinis,
Sedibus æquato numerosis ordine lato,
A medio naui despecto vertice mali,
Centum bis denis aptata minacibus heris,
Aureus è puppi leo prominet æquora proræ,
Celsè pennato perterret tempore draco,
Aureus & linguis flamma vorat ore trisulcis,
Nobilis appensum preciatur purpura velum,
Quòd patrum series depicta docet varias res,
Belláq; nobilium turbata per æquora regum,
Interné grauidus stipes robúrq; volatus,
Sustinet extensis auro rutilantibus alis,
 Armigerum volucrem, pedibus, rostróq; ferentè,*
Et similem viuo, visu gemmis simulato,
Singula bis denis argenti transtra talentis,
Bis binis rutili, cumulat dux inclytus auri,
Cuiq; viro galeam loricam pone trilicem,
Lancea cum gladio, nec abest his Gallicus vmbo,
Danica cum capitis sculpti formata securis,
Sæpius ex cocto chalybum fornace metallum,
Pluribus his opibus pollebat regia sedes,
Argenti montes meri rutilantes & auri,
Gazas insignes cum pallia plura videres,
Ornatúsq; graues, quo mittit Barbara tellus,
Orbis & extremi varijs textricibus Indi,
Tum decus armorum iungit nunc inferiorum,
Quanquam Vulcani referuntur in arte parari,
Regi Troiano nullo cedentia tclo,
Cætera præcipuè sunt instrumenta carinæ,
Quæ stupeat pontus nimium mirantibus vndis,

* The banks of the riuer of Thames.

* An Eagle.

Respiciens

Reſpiciens ſolem tota de claſſe lucentem,
Hanc in ſede noua ſolÿ regniq; corona,
Regnante tribuit, recipi & gratam fore poſcit,
Sæpiùs augeri ſpondens hæc velle libenti,
Vnde manus præſtat fidei ſacramenta parari,
Eduardúmq; ſibi regem dominúmq; fideli,
Seruandum voto conteſtans, & famulatu,
Principibus reliquis ſit in exemplum probitatis,
Iſtud idem cunctis imitantibus Anglicus orbis,
Gaudet in Eduardo feſtiuus rege decoro,
Pax antiqua ſuos rediens ſic viſitat Anglos,
Aufugiunt rixæ, diſcedunt bella, furórq;
Omnis frigeſcit, tellus pontúſq; quieſcit,
Ac paſſim lætis celebrantur feſta choreis.

After which this erle Godwine hauing the towne and caſtle of Douer in his charge, did (vpon the complaint of Euſtace earle of Bullogne, which maried Goda the ſiſter to king Edward, and alanded at Douer, to the intent that he would viſit the king, at which place eighténe of the men of Euſtace were ſlaine for one man of Douer ſlaine by the men of Euſtace, vpon a contention betwéene the townſmen and them) take armes againſt the king, in the yeare of our redemption one thouſand fiftie and one. Whervpon he was baniſhed, but neuer after ceaſſed to moleſt the king, vntill that he was reſtored home vnto his honors and liuings, and had his peace made with the king the ſecond yeare of his baniſhment, being about the yeare of Chriſt one thouſand fiftie and two, and the ninth yeare of king Edward the Confeſſor. Of the maner of the death of which Godwine there be diuers reports ſet downe, which I meane not here to touch, but onelie to laie before you that he died in the yeare of Chriſt one thouſand fiftie and three, or (as others haue) one thouſand fiftie and foure, and was honorablie buried at Wincheſter. He maried two wiues, the firſt was Thira borne in Flanders, by whom he had one ſonne, Quem equus impotenter agitatus deiecit in Thamiſin. His ſecond wife was Githa the ſiſter of Sweine the king of Denmarke, Quæ fulmine icta interijt, ſatisfacturis pœnas ſoluēs, quòd dicebatur agmina mancipiorum in Anglia coempta Danemarchiam ſolere mittere. By which woman this Godwine had iſſue, Harold after king, Sweine, Toſtie, Wolnothus, Gurth, Leofwine, and Edith maried to Edward the Confeſſor.

Harold. Harold the ſonne of Godwine being earle of Kent, after the death of his father, was alſo conſtable of Douer caſtle about one yeare in the time of Edward the confeſſor. After which, this Harold put on the crowne of England immediatlie vpon the death of the ſaid king Edward, but was within three quarters of a yeare thereof ſlaine by the Norman baſtard, in the firſt and laſt yeare of the reigne of the ſaid Harold. He maried Agatha, by whom he had a ſonne, by ſome named Ulfus, but by Dudo de ſancto Quintino, which liued aboue fiue hundred yeares paſt, it ſeemeth that he had two ſonnes. For thus writeth the ſaid author: Porrò duo filij Heraldi regis ſe ab eorum contubernio ſubducentes, cum multis vernaculis patris, Hibernia regem nomine Dermutum pro obtinendo inuamine ſunt aggreſſi. De cuius regno ipſo ſuffragante, parua temporis intercapedine non minimam militū ſibi contrahentes manum cum 66. nauibus (qua in regione maximè oportunum exiſtimauerunt) Anglos otiùs repetierunt, rapinis & incendijs, more ſauiſſimorum piratarum, exterminantes populum. Quibus Brientius Eudonis ducis Britannia minoris filius, cum ſuis obuius, protinus cum eis die vna duobus prælijs manum conſeruit, caſiſq; mille & 700. bellatoribus cum nonnullis regni proceribus, reliqui è certamine fugientes nauiū præſidio, necis exitium vtcúnq; euaſerunt, ex carorum amiſſione permaximum Hibernenſibus importantes luctum, qui profectò niſi nox prælium diremiſſet, omnes mortis nouacula abraſi fuiſſent.

The names of the two ſonnes of Harold, were Godwine and Edmund, as appeareth by one anonymall chronicle in theſe words: Godwinus & Edmundus filij regis Heroldi de Hibernia redeuntes in Summerſet applicuerunt, quibus Adnationis ol'm regis Heraldi ſtallarius occurrit cū exercitu, &c.

Thus much Dudo. The which I haue béene the willinger to ſet downe, becauſe that it not onelie proueth Harold to haue had two ſonnes, but alſo vnfoldeth a doubt which hath béene amongſt our antiquaries, whoſe ſonne that perſon, which is called commonlie amongſt vs Brientius filius comitis ſhould be; for by theſe words of this author, I find him to be the ſonne of Eudo earle of Britaine.

Bertram Alburneham a baron of Kent was conſtable of Douer caſtle in the yeare of Chriſt one thouſand three ſcore and ſix, being (as is ſaid) the firſt and laſt yeare of king Harold; which Bertram was beheaded by William the Conqueror, after that he had obteined the crowne, becauſe he did ſo valiantlie defend the ſame againſt the duke of Normandie. But of this man I am not yet fullie reſolued whether he were conſtable of Douer caſtle or no; or whether there were anie ſuch man before in that credit, at or before the conqueſt. Bertram Alburneham.

Odo biſhop of Baieux and earle of Kent, wherevnto he was aduanced by the Conqueror, had alſo the towne and caſtle of Douer in his charge, at what time Hugh Montfort was conſtable thereof, who reſiſted and repelled Euſtace earle of Bullogne beſieging the ſame caſtle. After which, this biſhop falling into the kings diſgrace, the caſtle of Douer was committed to John lord Fines, and he by the Conqueror made the firſt warden of the cinque ports, and conſtable of Douer caſtle. Odo.

John Fines lord Fines created warden of the cinque ports, and conſtable of Douer by William Conqueror, with a gift of inheritance to kéepe that place to him and to his heires; to whom alſo the Conqueror did giue (to the end that the ſaid Fines ſhould be of ſufficient abilitie to beare the charge thereof) the number of fiftie and ſix knights fées, of lands and poſſeſſions: which being valued at fiue pounds the knights fée, as is by ſtatute limited, amounted to the yearelie value of two hundred and foureſcore pounds; the ounce of ſiluer being then at twentie pence, which at this time riſeth to the ſumme of eight hundred and foztie pounds by yeare, after the rate of fiue ſhillings the ounce of ſiluer: which ſix and fiftie knights fées he had vpon condition, that he ſhould diſperſe the ſame to ſuch valiant perſons as worthilie ſerued in ſo noble and pretious a caſtle. Whervpon he diſtributed the ſame to eight perſons to be his aſſiſtants, and to mainteine one hundred and twelue ſouldiors, the names of which eight with the other matter therevnto belonging, is more liberallie ſet downe by that carefull and learned antiquarie William Lambard eſquire (my Synchronus) in his perambulation of Kent vnder the title of Douer, pag. 124. and 125. John Fines.

James lord Fines, the ſonne of John before named, was after the death of his father (by force of the inheritance thereof granted to his father) warden of the cinque ports, & conſtable of Douer caſtle, who died (as is by ſome ſuppoſed) at Folkeſtone in Kent. James Fines.

John lord Fines ſonne of the ſaid James Fines was alſo by inheritance warden of the cinque ports, and conſtable of Douer caſtle. John Fines.

Malchilinus de Mannot, called alſo by Robertus Montenſis Machelmus de Douer, is in other authors named Walkelme or Walkeline, and was conſtable of Douer caſtell in the third yeare of king Stephan, as witneſſeth the ſaid Robertus Montenſis, who being in the ſaid caſtle (as a freend to Maud the empreſſe as I coniecture) did yet in the ſaid third yeare of king Stephan, being the yeare of our redemption one thouſand one hundred thirtie & eight, deliuer the caſtell of Douer to the queene the wife of king Stephan, when ſhe beſieged the ſame caſtell. For which cauſe after the death of king Stephan, and Malchilinus.

the comming in of Henrie the second, he abandoned his charge, and fled into Normandie. By the comming of which Walkelme to the constableship of Douer castell, there was a disseizine of the inheritance thereof belonging to Fines. Now, after the surrender of this castell by Walkelme, there be some antiquaries which affirme that William earle of the Egle, and also earle Warren (in the right of his wife) being the base sonne of king Stephan, was in the life of his father constable of Douer castell, grounding themselues vpon a composition made in the seuentéenth yeare of the said Stephan, being the yeare of our redemption one thousand one hundred fiftie and two, betweene king Stephan and Henrie Fitzempresse duke of Normandie, contending with Stephan for the crowne of England. Which opinion they defend with these words of the agréement, wherein it was granted to this William (amongst other things) that he should haue the seruices of Faremouth besides the castell and towne of Douer, and whatsoeuer apperteined to the honor of Douer. In which (saie they) sith the honor of Douer is depending vpon the prerogatiue of the castell, and that without the castell there is no honor, sith all the tenures, and all the seruices which belong to that honour, doo belong to the castell, he could not haue the one without the other. For hauing whatsoeuer belonged to the honor which is the castell, he could not receiue the benefit of that, without he had the thing also which was the cause of that tenure, and by force of which he might receiue those appurtenances.

But truelie sauing correction, it is often séene, that seruice may be seuered from land to which it is due, and one to haue the demesne and an other the seruices of manour. But sith I am neither good logician nor lawier to dissolue arguments, or to disproue tenures, I will at this time leaue it indifferent for euerie one to receiue or reiect him for constable of Douer castell, vntill I find more substantiall proofe by charter to prefer him thereunto, than such an argument to infer it thereupon; especiallie sith I find him not so named by anie authoritie that I haue séene, whereof manie make mention of his other titles of honor, as that he had the citie of Norwich with the third penie of the earledome of Northfolke, that he was earle Warren, and that he was earle of Bullongne and Morton.

Richard earle of Ewe. Richard earle of Ewe. I haue read of this man this note, that he was both constable of Douer castell, warden of the cinque ports, and gouernour of Kent; but how true it is I will not at this time set downe, but leaue it to the iudgement of others, who can iudge better of that note deliuered to me in these words. Officium constabularij iuxta patris sui donationem perdurauit à Fineo ad Fineum vsque ad tempora regis Stephani; & postea Richardus comes de Oye constabularius institutus est ac custos quinque portuum & præfectus totius Cantiæ, ac fundator collegij de Hastings in castro de Hastings, &c.

Eustace. Eustace earle of Bullongne, and duke of Normandie, sonne to king Stephan, is by some supposed to be constable of Douer castell, and lord warden of the cinque ports. Which perhaps may be true, although that at the same time William de Ypre was earle of Kent, whome some haue in respect thereof made to be constable of Douer castell: notwithstanding others saie that he was onelie deputie constable of Douer castell to the said Eustace, or (as we terme it) his lieutenant.

Allen Fines. Allen Fines, after the death of king Stephan, was by the benefit of king Henrie the second restored vnto the wardenship of the ports, and constableship of the castell of Douer. And héere I thinke it good to note that king Henrie (the sonne of king Henrie the second) being crowned in the life of his father, did in the yeare one thousand one hundred seauentie and foure, being about the nineteenth or twentith yeare of the reigne of his father, giue vnto Philip earle of Flanders one thousand pounds of yearelie reuenues, the countie and earledome of Kent, with the castels of Douer and Rochester: for the which the said Philip should doo homage to the yong Henrie, and mainteine his quarrell against his father. But the erle was neuer in possession thereof, neither made anie constable of Douer castell, or was himselfe constable of that place; which gift of the said yong king Henrie Geruasius Dorobernensis setteth downe in this sort.

Comes Flandriæ Philippus suum pro posse spopondit auxilium iuueni regi (against his father king Henrie the second, being then in Normandie) faciens homagium cum iuramento, cui pro seruitio suo promisit rex cum tota Cantia 1000 librarum redditum, castellum quoque de Roffa cum castello de Doueria. Matthæus comes Boloniæ frater comitis Flandriæ suscepit in promissis pro homagio & seruitio suo totam socam de Kirketonia in Lindesia, cum comitatu de Moritonia, &c. And héere mentioning Allen Fines, and hauing no cause to speake of these Fines hereafter, I am to admonish the reader, that (although my iudgement be but of one man, and that one swallow maketh not summer) I doo not suppose anie thing spoken of the Fines constables of Douer castell to be so firme, as that I would bind anie man to beléeue more thereof than he listeth.

Hugh de Esser. Hugh de Esser, afterward earle of Esser, was made constable of Douer castell, at that time when the sonnes of Henrie the second (as is mentioned before by Geruasius, which fell about the yeare of our redemption one thousand one hundred seuentie and three, and the nintéenth of king Henrie the second) rebelled against their father not onelie in Normandie but in England also: this Hugh being further constable of Douer castell, when the same king sailed ouer into Ireland, for to receiue the kingdome thereof, which happened in the yeare of our redemption one thousand one hundred seauentie and two, the yeare before the rebellion of yong king Henrie the sonne against his father. At what time yet the right of the inheritance of this office of wardenship continued still in the heires of the Fines; by reason whereof Adam Fines, then baron, ought to haue continued constable thereof. But bicause he was hated of the king and the nobilitie, they appointed an other constable, which was this Hugh of Esser, a person in great fauour with the king, and possessed that office a great time of the gouernement of the same king. But of this man I haue no great opinion that he was constable of Douer, or earle of Esser, yet may I not tie other men to my conceit, bicause Barnardus non vidit omnia.

Matthew Clére. Matthew Clére was constable or capteine of Douer castell, as appeareth by manie authorities, being also by writers called shiriffe of Kent; who vpon the commandement of William Longchampe bishop of Elie, legat A latere, protector, chéefe iustice and chancellor of England, did (about the third yeare of king Richard the first, in the yeare of our redemption one thousand one hundred ninetie and one) imprison in Douer castell Godfreie bishop of Yorke (the base sonne of king Henrie the second) returning from Rome. At which time also (as I haue séene noted out of the register of the house of Canturburie) there were three constables of Douer castell,

castell, as is proued by this deed found in the said register.

Gulihelmus comes de Albemerle, & Simon de Auernen. & Matthæus de Clere constabularij Doueriæ, & Gulihelmus de Aubuill, & Henricus de Lõgo campo præfecti Cantiæ: Omnibus præsentibus & futuris, ad quos præsentes litteræ peruenerint, salutem. Sciatis quòd dominus noster Richardus rex Angliæ in redditu suo a Ierosolomytana apud Alemaniã detentus esset, & inimici eius contra eum & regnum suum insurgerent. Prior & conuentus Cantuar. licèt ab omni consuetudine regni & exactione sæculari, liberi & immunes esse dinoscerentur: de mera tamen voluntate sua non coacti, homines suos, ad opus domini regis per octo dies commodauerunt. Vnde ne quis in posterum ab eis hoc præsumat, quasi debitum vel consuetum petere, quod pro tam grati regni necessitate sponte studuerunt impendere, litteras istius cũ sigillorum nostrorum appositione in testimonium libertatum & immunitatum suorum tradidimus, &c.

William of Wrotham.

William of Wrotham, whome some call William of Wrothing, was warden of the cinque ports, & constable of the castell of Douer, in the time of king John, vnto whome he did faithfullie stand in all his warres and troubles, after that the king was excommunicated.

Hubert de Burow.

Hubert de Burow after earle of Kent, and chéefe iustice of England, was constable of Douer castell, and warden of the cinque ports, in the time of king John. This man in the yeare of Christ one thousand two hundred and seauentéene, as some haue, or rather one thousand two hundred and sixtéene, as other haue, valiantlie defended Douer castell. For when Lewis the sonne of Philip the French king had stronglie assaulted the castell (the monuments and mounts whereof are at this daie yet to be séene, whereof one standing on the west side of the castell is at this daie called Lewis siege) this Hubert did with no lesse honor and valor repell the enimie and defend the castell, than Lewis did besiege it egerlie, for which he deserued such fauor and recompense, as after the death of king John he was made protector of England in the minoritie of king Henrie the third. During whole constablership of Douer castell, in the yere of our redemption one thousand two hundred sixtie and three, or one thousand two hundred sixtie and two as some write, being about the six and fortith or seuen and fortith of king Henrie the third, he found meanes that the castell gard there, which had continued from the time of William Conqueror, vntill then, was with the assent of king Henrie the third conuerted into a paiment of monie, the land being charged with ten shillings for euerie warder, which it was bound to find: and the owners thereby discharged of their personall seruice and attendance for euer. At which time also he caused the same king to release by his frée charter the custome of forage due to this castell, and that done, himselfe instituted new lawes amongst the watchmen & increased the number of the warders. Which his doing of changing castell gard, cannot vnder correction be attributed to him in the yeare one thousand two hundred sixtie and three, because he was dead twentie yeares before that. For he died in the yere of grace one thousand two hundred fortie and three, being the seauen and twentith of king Henrie the third, as appeareth in my discourse of the protectors of England, in Edward the first, where is more mention made of him. This Hubert as maister Lambard noteth, was deposed from his constablership of Douer castell, which was at such time I gather as Matthew Paris mentioneth, that he fell into the kings displeasure, whereby he lost also the office of chéefe iustice of England, in the yeare of Christ one thousand two hundred thirtie and two, and the sixtéenth yeare of king Henrie the third: after which manie things were laid against him, the whole discourse whereof is in Matthew Paris, after this order.

First the king did instantlie require of him account of his treasure, paid at the excheker, and of the debts due vnto him in his owne and in his fathers time. Besides which, he demanded account of all his lordships wherof he was in possession from the death of William earle of Penbroke, then the kings marshall and iustice, as well of all such as he held in England, as of such as he had in Wales, Ireland, and Poitiers. Thirdlie, of his liberties which he then had in forrests, warrens, counties, and in other places, how they were kept, or how they were sold. Fourthlie, of the fiftéenths and sixtéenths granted to the king, and of other rents paid at the excheker, and at the new Temple, and otherwise. Fiftlie, of prises made for releasing of law, as well in lands as in moueables. These and manie other articles, whereof part concerned treason, were set downe against Hubert of Burow, the tenure wherof doo fullie appeare in Matthew Paris. Upon the exhibiting of which articles he had daie giuen him to appeare & answer them. But he fearing the kings displeasure, hauing a guiltie conscience, fled to sanctuarie into the college of Periton or Perton, where he hid himselfe amongst the canons: but after by the means of Lucas the archbishop of Dublin he obteined some libertie.

Whereupon he went vnto saint Edmundsburie, where his wife was, who passing through Eſſex, lodged in the bishop of Norwich his house; at what time the same being knowen to the king, greeued thereat, he sent Godfreie de Crawcome a knight with three hundred men after Hubert, to take and bring him prisoner to the Tower. This knight comming to him in the night, Hubert waked out of his sléepe, fled all naked to a chapell there by, out of the which he was by force, and with his legs fettered vnder the horsse bellie, brought vpon a pild iade to London, and put in the Tower fettered. But the bishop of London complaining of the iniurie done to the church, by violent taking him from the chapell, the king sent him to the same chapell againe, the fift kalends of October, and after commanded the shiriffs of Eſſex & Hertford vpon paine of hanging, to compasse the chapell that Hubert might not escape, or receiue anie kind of sustenance from anie man. By meanes whereof Hubert did long remaine in that place, with two seruants onelie that ministred meat vnto him, such as they could get. Whereupon Hubert being in this streict, came forth of himselfe, yeelded his bodie to the shiriffes, who led him prisoner to the Tower, where he was laid in irons. After which, the king restored him all the lands which he had by the gift of his father, or that he himselfe had bought; but yet he was sent into Wise castell, there to be kept in a more large restreint vnder the suretie of Richard earle of Cornewall, & William earle of Warren, Richard earle Marshall, William earle Ferrers, vndertaking for him to the king. But after this, in the yere of Christ one thousand two hundred thirtie and three, and the seuentéenth yeare of the reigne of Henrie the third, on Michaelmas éue, one of the seruants of Hubert, when the kéepers of the castell were asléepe, tooke Hubert fettered, & laid him on his shoulders, got him out at the great gate, with much difficultie brought him ouer a déep and long ditch to the parish church, & then placed him by the high altar. When the keepers awoke, & missed Hubert, they sought for him, and in the end obteining knowlege where he was, with manie blows toke him and his two seruants out of the church, and committed him againe vnto streicter prison in the same castell. But after (by the meanes of Robert bishop of Salisburie) Hubert was restored vnto the church the fift kalends of November. Whereat the king being greeued, commanded the shiriffe of Wiltshire to besiege the church, till Hubert should be inforced to die through hunger. But after in the third kalends of November, he was by the strength of his freends taken from the church of the Wise, put in armor, fled into Wales, & ioined with the kings enimies. Wherevpon, in the fourth kalends of June, by much intercession he was restored to the kings fauor. But about six yeares after, in the yeare of our redemption one thousand two hundred thirtie and nine, being about the 23 yeare of the reigne of Edward the third, the king afresh laieng great matters to his charge of treason against the king and kingdome; he in the end made peace with the king, and deliuered to him foure castels (by him greatlie esteemed) which were the castels of Blanch, of Grosmund in Wales, of Skenefrith, or Scheafreth (for I find both written) and of Halfield. This man first builded the decaied hospitall of the house of maison de Dieu in Douer (being a statlie and costlie peece of worke) as appeareth yet (although wether beaten) by a scutchion; the arms of the said Hubert there grauen on the vaulted porch built long since the first foundation of the house, ouer the which scutchion is this written: Scutum domini Huberti de Burgo quondam comitis Cantiæ, procurator: huius domus fundatoris. Which being almost by age consumed, much troubled me to read & find it out, in this yeare of our saluation one thousand fiue hundred eightie and six.

Peter de Rinallis.

Peter de Rivallis orde Driall, was by mine account constable of Douer castell, and warden of the cinque ports, which I gather out of these words of the records, which (amongst other offices that he had) doo leaue to vs in memorie, that he was also Custos omnium portuum & omnium prisarum in Anglia & Hibernia. Now if he were in generall (which alwaies inferreth a particular) warden of all the castels in England, and of all the ports of the sea: it seemeth no doubt vnto me, but that incroching vpon all, he would make choise to obteine such as were both most of honor, strength, and commoditie, and therefore would haue to deale with Douer castell. Of this man is more spoken in my discourse of the treasurors of England. But as I will not affirme this man to be constable of Douer, so I leaue it to them which better can either approue or disprooue him so to be.

Bertram de Creoll.

Bertram de Creoll, as haue the records of the exchéker, or Bertram de Criol, as our English histories haue, was constable of Douer castell, and warden of the cinque ports, in the yeare of our redemption one thousand two hundred fortie and one, being about the fiue and twentith yeare of Henrie the third; who bare for his arms in a golden field two cheuorons, and a quarter gules. He married Elenor by some termed otherwise, one of the daughters and heires of sir Hamond Creueceure, by whome he had issue one daughter and heire called Ione married to Richard of Rokeslie, of whom the lord Poinings is descended.

Richard Grele.

Richard Grele baron of Codnore, castelleine of Douer castell, and warden of the cinque ports, being placed there by the barons against the king, did in the two and fortith yeare of the reigne of king Henrie the third, being the yeare of Christ one thousand two hundred fiftie & eight, suffer none to passe vnsearched, according to that which he had in commandement. Wherevpon he toke and seized into his hands a great part of tresure that was brought thither to be transported to the Pictauians the kings halfe brethren that were fled the realme. After which in the three and fortith yeare of the reigne of Henrie the third, being in the yeare of our Lord a thousand two hundred fiftie and nine, the barons being in armor against the king; Richard king of Almaine brother to king Henrie the third landed at Douer (from the parts beyond the seas) where king Henrie was readie to receiue him, who brought him from Douer vnto Canturburie, because neither of them was suffered to enter into the castell of Douer, the lords hauing them in a geloulie, least they should go about to infringe the ordinances made in the parlement at Oxford. To which ordinances to be performed most of the nobilitie had set their seales, with the common seale of London. But notwithstanding that this Richard Grele seemed in the beginning to be so faithfull to the barons: yet returning to his dutie, he obeied the kings pleasure. For which in the yeare of Christ one thousand two hundred fiftie and nine he was by the barons removed. The occasion whereof we find to haue beene, because he suffered frier Malacho (comming from the pope, and hauing the kings letters vnder the great seale) to enter the land, not staieng him, nor warning the lords of his landing, contrarie (as it was interpreted) vnto the articles of their prouision enacted at Oxford; which frier in truth was sent from the pope, to restore Athelmar or Odomar the kings halfe brother by his mother vnto the bishoprike of Winchester, to the which he had bin long before elected. But the lords were so bent against Athelmar, that vpon such suggestions as they laid forth, Malacho refrained the doing of that for which he came. After which, Hugh Bigot chiefe iustice of England, hasting to Douer vsed this speech to the said Grele: Sith thou Richard wast placed by the whole realme, as a faithfull warden of the ports, as a searcher of all such as go out or come into the land, and that all our trust dwelleth in thy custodie; whie hast thou suffered such a person (though he were supported by the kings grant) to enter the land, not giuing intelligence thereof vnto vs, whereby thou hast gone against the common prouision of the nobilitie, & hast impudentlie broken thine oth: Wherefore we iudge thee to be deprived from thine office, and to receiue iudgement worthie that trespas which thou hast committed to the common danger of the kingdome. By which words he was displaced from his office, and the chiefe iustice toke the same into his owne hands. Of this man is sir John Zouch of Codnore descended.

Hugh Bigot.

Hugh Bigot chefe iustice of England, vpon the displacing of Grele, taking the constablelhip of Douer and the office of warden of the cinque ports into his owne hands, without the kings authoritie, but by the consent of the nobilitie, did kepe that castell in the yeare of our Lord one thousand two hundred fiftie and nine, being the three and fortith yeare of the reigne of king Henrie the third, as haue the records of the exchéker: who in the yeare of Grace a thousand two hundred and sixtie, being the foure & fortith yeare of the reigne of king Henrie the third, in which yeare he was made chiefe iustice, as some haue, but Matthew Paris maketh him chefe iustice somewhat before, in the yeare of our saluation one thousand two hundred fiftie and eight, being the one and fortith yeare of the reigne of king Henrie the third by his account, for he writeth of him in this sort vnder the same yeare: Instante verò festo nativita- tis beatæ Mariæ, dum vicecomes Northamptoniæ vestigia prædecessoris sui Willielmi de insula (quondam vicecomitis) tarciuando pluribus insontibus, stimulis agitatus auaritiæ, sequeretur, & super hoc ascenderet querimonia ad capitalem iusticiarium Hugonem Bigot, conuictus de iniurijs complurimis, captus est, & vix à laqueo liberatus, duro ac diro carceri est mancipatus. He married Ione the daughter of Robert Burnell, by whome he had issue (as some do saie) one son Rafe, of whom the erle of Sussex now liuing is descended.

Henrie Braibrooke. Henrie Braibrooke constable of Douer castell, whome some will haue so to be; but I not hauing sound authoritie therefore will not presume (vpon other mens pens, especiallie vpon the notes of parson Dorrell the corruptor of all things which he tooke in hand) either to receiue or reiect him. For I am not easilie led to beléeue that one Braibrooke was in those daies of such credit, as to haue one of the greatest offices of credit in the realme (as the constableship of Douer castell was) committed vnto his charge.

Edward the first. Edward the eldest sonne of king Henrie the third, being then prince and after king of England by the name of Edward the first, was constable of Douer castle, and warden of the ports in the time and life of his father. For the said prince Edward (after the subduing of Simon Montfort earle of Leicester) did about the yere of our redemption one thousand two hundred three score and six, being the fiftith yeare of king Henrie the third, assaile the castle of Douer, and by the aid of the prisoners within (which had taken the great tower to his vse) obteined it, and there left prisoner Guie the sonne of Simon Montfort, but Guie escaped soone after by corruption of his kéepers. During which time that prince Edward was constable of Douer castle, he made his deputie or lieutenant Henrie Cobham; whose sonne & heire called John, founded Cobham college: of which Henrie Cobham sée more vnder the title of the lord Cobhams. This Henrie Cobham, being lieutenant to the prince, was the first lieutenant (as far as I can learne) of Douer castle, which office hath euer since continued to our time.

Roger Leiborne. Sir Roger Leiborne knight, lord Leiborne, & lord of Leiborne castle in Kent (if my memorie deceiue me not) was in the time of king Edward the first, constable of Douer castle, & warden of the cinque ports, of whom my good and learned friend maister William Lambard doth discourse in this sort in his perambulation of Kent, vnder the title of Leds, pag. 264, where he treateth of the first founding of the priorie of Leds; who after that he had ascribed the same to the Creueceurs lords of Leeds castell, goeth on with these words: Howbeit I find an heralds note (who belike made his coniecture by some rote of armes latelie apparant) that one Leiborne an earle of Salisburie was the founder of it. In deed it is to be séene in the annales of saint Augustines of Canturburie, that a noble man called Roger Leiborne was sometime of great authoritie within this shire, notwithstanding that in his time he had tasted of both fortunes. For in the daies of king Henrie the third, he was first one of that conjuration which was called the barons warre: from which faction Edward the kings sonne wan him by faire meanes to his part, and made him the bearer of his priuie purse. Afterwards they agreed not vpon the reckoning, so that the prince (charging him with great arrerages) seized his liuing for satisfaction of the debt, by which occasion Roger once more became of the barons deuotion. But after the pacification made at Kenelworth, he was eftsoones receiued to fauor, and was made warden of the cinque ports, and lieutenant of the shire of Kent. Now though it cannot be true that this man was the builder of this priorie (for the same annales saie that it was erected long before) yet if he did but marrie the heire, he might truelie be termed the patrone or founder thereof, for by that name not onlie the builders themselues but their posteritie also (to whom the glorie of their deeds descended) were wont so to be called as well as they. Thus much that learned antiquarie William Lambard. Vpon which, to disproue the note of the herald, it is too plaine that neuer anie Leiborne was earle of Salisburie. For the erldome of Salisburie did alwaies, almost euen from the conquest, remaine in the names and families of Patrike, Longspée, Montague, Neuill, and one woman a Plantagenet euen vntill our time. But here might grow the error to make Leiborne erle of Salisburie, being deceiued with the affinitie of the armes; for that the earls of Salisburie, the Longspées, and the Leibornes gaue all one armes, different onlie in colours; for Longspée bare azure six lions or, three, two, and one: and Leiborne bare argent six lions sable, three, two, and one. The house of Leiborne hath bene great and of good continuance, and matched with noble houses. For John Hastings (the father of Laurence Hastings the first earle of Penbroke of the name of Hastings) maried Julian the daughter of Thomas lord Leiborne, which Julian died in the fourth yeare of king Henrie the third, about the yeare of Christ one thousand three hundred three score and seuen. Besides which also touching the Leibornes, of whom I suppose that Leiborne castell in Kent was named, I haue séene a charter of one Robert Leiborne, made to the house of nuns in Clerkenwell in this sort: Sciant præsentes & futuri, quòd ego Robertus de Leiborne dedi Deo & ecclesiæ sanctæ Mariæ de fonte clericorum, & sanctimonialibus ibidem Deo seruientibus, pro salute animæ meæ & antecessorum meorum, in puram & perpetuam eleemosynā duodecim denarios de Gablo Michaelis filij Hereberti de Luitona. Hanc autem donationem & concessionem ego Robertus de Leiborne & hæredes mei debemus warantizare prænominatæ ecclesiæ & sanctimonialibus contra omnes homines. Vt hæc mea donatio rata & inconcussa maneat, sigilli mei appositione & subscriptorum virorum testimonio eam cōfirmaui; his testibus, Gilone de Badlesmere, Iuone Patric, Radulpho de Hadling, &c. Which charter I haue set downe, to proue the antiquitie of the name of Leiborne. For this charter being without date, was made (as I gather) for this time in the reigne of Henrie the second, or in the begining of king Richard the first his gouernment.

Stephan Pinchester. Stephan Pinchester, the sonne of Stephan Pinchester (which died in the yeare of our Lord one thousand two hundred and eightéene, falling in the second and third yere of king Henrie the third) was a man of great valor, well estéemed of the king and of his countrie, by reason whereof he was aduanced to places of great honour, fauour and trust. For he was constable of Douer castell in the two and fiftith yeare of king Henrie the third, being the yere of our redemption one thousand two hundred three score and seuen, or one thousand two hundred three score and eight. For the said two and fiftith yeare of that king, fell partlie in that one, and partlie in the other yeare of our Lord, begining the yeare at the annunciation of the virgine, which office he long continued and possessed 6, 8, 15, 17, 18, 19, and in Michaelmas terme in the nine and twentith yeare of king Edward the first, being the yeare of our redemption one thousand two hundred foure score and thirteene, at what time Giuolo de monte regali was his seruant, uant, or perhaps his lieutenant. This man repared the castell of Allington, situate vpon the riuer of Medwaie in Kent, which castell standeth not farre from Medwegstow, now called Maidston, supposed by William Lambard in his perambulation of Kent to be called Duroprouis, and by maister Camden, in his Britannia vnder the title of Kent pag. 168, to be Vaginaca mentioned in the itinerarie of Antonine. Which Pinchester also caused the booke of Domesdaie, belonging to the castell of Douer, to be made, a thing altogether vnperfect, & reaching no further than to the time of Hubert de Burow. Besides which, in the same two and twentith of that king, he renewed a particular charge of ships to be found by euerie one of the seuerall ports and members of the same, as appeareth by record therof made in French; the orders whereof are set downe in the perambulation of Kent, pag. 96, vnder the title of the Cinque ports. He maried Margaret the daughter of John de Burgh, by whom he had issue a daughter called Ione maried to Henrie Cobham of Randall knight, as appeareth in my discourse of the lord Cobhams of Randall.

Robert de Burgersh.

Robert de Burgersh or Burwash, was conestable of Douer castell, & warden of the cinque ports in the thirtie and fourth yeare of king Edward the first; in which yeare he was sent ambassador into Gascoigne to the court of the pope, about the affairs of the king. He had issue Stephan Burgersh, as appeareth before in a note set downe in the lord Cobhams of Cobham, vnder Henrie Cobham the first baron of Cobham. Touching this name of Burgersh, I find in a vault in the church of Canturburie, being called our ladie Undercroft, an ancient monument of stone, in which a woman of that name was buried, pretending great antiquitie; on which lieth a ladie in rich habit, with this writing round about the tombe twise set downe: Pur Dieu pries pur l'aime Iohanne de Burwash, que fuit dame de Monsieur. At which word it staieth, and againe reciteth, Pries Dieu pur l'aime, &c. Which to explane more fullie, I will not refuse to do in this sort, taken Ex veteri martyrologio & capitulari libro ecclesiæ Cătuarien sis: in which is set downe in the yeare of Christ, one thousand foure hundred and fiue; Obijt Ioanna de Mohune domina de Dunster: being the same Ione there buried.

Henrie Cobham.

Henrie Cobham knight, the first baron of Cobham, was made conestable of Douer castell, and warden of the cinque ports, in the fiue and thirtith yeare of king Edward the second, as more largelie appeareth here following, vnder Robert de Kendall which succeeded this lord Cobham in the office of the cinque ports. Of this Henrie Cobham see more in my former discourse of the lord Cobhams of Cobham.

Robert de Kendall.

Robert de Kendall so called, because (as I for this time take it) he was there borne, and was made conestable of Douer castell, and warden of the cinque ports, in the first yeare of king Edward the second, as appeareth by this record of Pellis exitus, hauing this entrance therof in Michaelmas terme, in the fourth yeare of the said Edward the second, being the yeare of our redemption, one thousand three hundred and ten. Henrico de Cobham nuper constabulario castri Douer, & custodi quinque portuum 80 libras, 15 solidos 7 denarios & obulũ liberat. eidem, die 17 Nouẽbris in duabus tallijs sibi factis, eodem die, pro tot denarijs sibi debitis à 16 die Octobris, anno regni domini Edwardi patris domini regis nunc 34, vsque 16 diem Decembris, anno regni domini regis nunc primo, quo die idem dominus rex custodiam prædictam Roberto de Kendall cõmisit, per breue de liberate, datum apud Boger in Scotia, 6 die Octobris præsenti (which was the said fourth yeare of Edward the second) per præceptum thesaurarij, & persoluitur breue. In which office this Robert continued vntill the twelfe yeare of the same king Edward the second, falling in the yeare of Christ one thousand three hundred and eightene, but was liuing in the twentith yeare of the same king, as appeareth by records of the exchequer of Pellis exitus, where monie was paid vnto him by the name of Robert Kendall Nuper constabulario castri Douer, & custodi quinque portuum.

Bartholomew Badlesmer (the sonne, as I for this time gather, of Giles de Badlesmer slaine, as hath Ioannes London in the yeare of Christ, one thousand two hundred fiftie and nine, falling in the 43 and 44 yeare of king Henrie the third, in the warres betweene the English and the Welsh) was Præfectus, shiriffe, or lieutenant of Kent, and is vntrulie termed by some erle of Kent, by others more rightlie named baron of Leeds: but by the records of the exchequer most trulie called a baneret. Which name I haue obserued by manie of these ancient records, to haue beene attributed to such persons, as chronicles and heralds haue dubbed with the names of barons. This Bartholomew Badlesmer, being in the warres of Scotland with king Edward the second, in the yeare of Christ one thousand three hundred and fourteene, falling in part of the seuenth yeare, and part of the eighth yeare of the said Edward the second, did by his demeanor in those wars, occasion Ioannem Londonensem to write of him in this sort.

Bartholomew Badlesmer.

Quadam verò nocte ante futurum in crastinum vtriúsque exercitus congressum, inter comitem Glouerniæ & Herefordiæ (quis eorum primam aciem contra Scotorum exercitum obtineret) animosa contentio mouebatur. Porrò in crastino comes Hereford (cuius interest primam habere aciem ratione constabulariæ Angliæ) Scotos aggrediens, eorum exercitum viriliter penetrauit. Quo sic reuerso, comes Glouerniæ aliquid arduum, & quasi probitate dignum facere satagens, præcipitãter in Scotos minùs cautè insiliens, &c: in fronte sui exercitus (qui vulgariter dicitur Sheltrun) infigitur aculeis, & sic confossus de sella sua violenter eripitur. Qui protinus exclamans, quendam militem suum armis strenuum, consilio prudentem, sibi præ cæteris familiarem, & tanquam singulare perfugium, de quo specialiùs confidebat, videlicet Bartholomæum de Badlesmer nomine, in auxilium aduocauit. Sed ille pelli suæ timens, & magis saluti propriæ quàm domini sui defensionem qualitercúnque prospiciens, fugam arripuit, & ad dominum regem à latere properabat. Dictus verò comes auxilio destitutus, à Scotis ibidem miserabiliter est interemptus.

Humfreie de Bohune earle of Hereford.

Gilbert de Clare earle of Glocester.

Which matter I haue beene the willinger to set downe at large out of Iohn de London monke of Canturburie, because there be manie good notes to be gathered out of the same; besides that which concerneth Badlesmer. For, as it is there set downe, that Badlesmer was the knight and souldior belonging to the earle of Glocester, that his conditions be there described, that he was wise in counsell, valiant in armes, and helples to his friend in extremitie: so there is more to be gathered thereout. First, that it belongeth to the conestable of England by vertue of his office, to lead the vantgard in the battell: secondlie, that contention fell betweene the earle of Hereford and the earle of Glocester: and lastlie, at what time, how, and vpon what occasion the earle of Glocester was slaine. After which, this Bartholomew growing in fauor with king Edward the second, the king did make him capteine of Regist. Roff.

Bristow castell, and gaue vnto the said Bartholomew one hundred pounds by yeare out of the exchéker, as appeareth by the records thereof, in the Pell of Eritus of Michaelmas terme, of the twelfe yeare of the same king, falling in the yeare of our redemption after the account of England, one thousand three hundred & eightéene; where it is thus recorded. Bartholomæo de Badlesmer, cui rex concessit centū libras percipiendum annuatim ad scaccariū, ad festa Paschæ & Michaelis per æquales portiones, quoúsque manerium de Chatham cum pertinentibus in comitatu Cantiæ, quod Guido ferre tenet ad terminum vitæ suæ, & manerium de Langhton cum pertin. in com. Sussex ac hundred de Sheplake, quæ Ioannes de Vluedale tenet ad terminum vitæ suæ de hæreditate regis, & quæ post mortem eiusdem Guidonis præfato Bartholomeo, & hæredibus suis virtute concessionis regis, sibi inde factæ remanere debeat, &c. Much about which yeare of our Lord, one thousand three hundred and eightéene, the same king Edward gaue the castell of Leeds in exchange (for other lands, called Ingerlee to the same Bartholomew, and to his heires for euer: being about that time also, as I now take it, made constable of Douer castell, and warden of the cinque ports: hauing by the kings gift (in the thirteenth yeare of Edward the second) the wardship and mariage of the lands and heire of John de Northwood in Kent; for which he yearelie accounted to the king of three score and six pounds thirteene shillings and foure pence; paieng also the like yearelie sum for the wardship of the lands and mariage of John the sonne and heire of John Godhall, or Golhall of Esser.

Bartholomew Badlesmer.

This Bartholomew thus still increasing in the kings fauor was dailie aduanced to greater honors and offices: for besides the great reuenues wherewith the king indued him, the king also (to haue him neere about him in his court) made him steward of his houshold, as appeareth by these words of an annonymall chronicle M.S. which reciting the change of officers speaketh in this sort. In huius recursus varios temporis lapsentis, & nociui regni, primorum officialium status libera dispositione rex transmutauit. Nam domino Iohánne de Sandal episcopatus honore Winton. ecclesiæ & gloria, thesaurario morientis priuato, dominum episcopum Exonien. rex loco defuncti subrogauit, ad culmen cancellariæ episcopum Norwicen. promouit. In regimine quoque senescalliæ dominum Bartholomæum de Badlesmer stabilinit. Custodem verò sui capitis in officio camerariæ constituit dominum Hugonem Spenserum iuniorem, &c. In which thirteenth of the same king Edward the second, the king & his quéene Isabell going to Douer, to the end that the king should doo his homage to the French king; this Bartholomew being now the kings steward, receiued them into his castle of Chilham with most glorious shew, where he daintilie feasted the king and all his traine, and at their departure bestowed liberall gifts vpon euerie noble man according to their degrees. After which, when the king was come to Douer, he deuised with the nobilitie to staie his iournie into France, and to excuse the doing of his homage by sending ambassadors thereabout. Wherefore sending Edmund of Woodstocke his brother, the lord Hugh Spenser the father, this Bartholomew Badlesmere, and Adam de Hereford bishop of that place, to Rome; they were honorablie by the waie receiued of the king of France, and so went to Rome; where hauing dispatched their ambassage, & obteined licence to depart, they brought backe with them Henrie Burgherst nephew of sir Bartholomew, to whom the pope had giuen at their request the bishoprike of Lincolne, although the chapter of that house had chosen a diuine to haue that see, before the election, or rather reseruation of the pope of this man. Which the pope the rather did at the request of these ambassadors, because they should not be impediments to stand against Reginald his procurator in England, vnto whom he had giuen the bishoprike of Winchester after the death of John Sandall against the intreatie of the king and nobilitie of England. But although this Bartholomew was thus by the king honored and aduanced: yet shortlie after this, shewing himselfe both vnthankfull for such benefits, & vndutifull for his obedience, did (in the yere of our redemption one thousand three score twentie and one, which fell in part of the fourteenth & fifteenth yeres of that king) ioine in couenant with Thomas earle of Lancaster, and other euill disposed persons, rebelling against their prince. Whereupon (in despight of the kings commandement) he came from Tilleburge or Tilberie in Esser vnto Hengham in Kent, where he was with great pompe receiued of his followers, from whense going to his castle of Leeds (which he had stronglie furnished) he departed from thense with a great traine, and entred his castell of Chilham; who after a little abode there left the same, and came vnto Canturburie with nineteene knights attendant vpon him; so great a person was he, both for honor in the court, and fauor in the countrie: all which persons with their retinue were armed vnderneath their vpper garments. After their entring into Canturburie, some of his people, which were the esquiers attendant vpon him, did with their swords drawne enter Christs church, and came to the shrine of Thomas Becket. Which action in that order performed, troubled and disquieted the whole citie, and occasioned some of the better sort to giue intelligence to the king of the behauior of him and his people in that place. On which date of whose entring into the same citie, John Cromwell and his wife came vnto him, craued his aid and friendship, obteined the same, and with him went vnto the rebellious barons soiorning now at Orford. Afterward the king (as it seemeth, not yet fullie resolued that this Badlesmere besides all reason & dutie would be his enimie, but rather supposing that he ioined with the rebels to vndermine their deuise, and for that cause desirous to make full triall of the said Badlesmere) did send Isabell his wife quéene of England vnto the castle of Leeds. Which being knowne to Badlesmere, at that time remaining with the barons at Whitneie in Orfordshire, he sent certeine souldiors to the same castle, appointing Thomas Aldon to be constable and chiefe ouer the castle and them: giuing streict charge to the same Thomas that they should not open the gates vnto the quéene, but valiantlie resist hir, and defend the castle. The quéene therefore minding hir pilgrimage to Canturburie, and so by the waie to see Leeds, being ouertaken with night, sent hir marshall to prepare for hir lodging. But hir officer being denied anie helpe or satisfieng of hir request, they within the castle proudlie answered, that neither the quéene nor anie other should enter into the same castle, without letters from the lord of the castell. Which answer being forthwith brought vnto the quéenes eares, she came hir selfe in person to demand entrance, but could obteine no hope thereof, for which cause she was driuen to seeke hir lodging in an other place. This matter being greeuouslie taken by hir, she returned to the king, and complained of the iniurie and disgrace which she had receiued. By which speeches the king incensed to further anger, and assembling an armie of manie thousands, did come in person to the same castell, streictlie charging the castillians to deliuer the same to him: but they obstinatlie and rebellioustie withstood him, and would not

Humfreie de Bohune earle of Hereford.

Gilbert de Clare earle of Glocester.

Ex libro dedicato Margaretæ reginæ, which was the wife of Edward the first, and liuing at this time.

Walsingham and his followers call the capteine of the castle, Thomas Culpeper.

Regist. Roff.

not surrender the castell. Now Bartholomew Badlesmere, hauing intelligence that the king laie in siege before the castell of Leeds, moued the barons that they would with their power go to Leeds, to remoue the armie which the king had before the castell. Whereupon the barons came to Kingstowne vpon Thames; but there better considering of that matter whereunto they had before so vnaduisedlie condescended, they would not go anie further in that iourneie.

Whereupon Badlesmere being abashed and confounded, departed from them. Which being knowne to those that kept the castell of Leeds, now perceiuing themselues to be in great extremitie, hopelesse of anie succor, and in danger to be all destroied by the kings power, they yeelded themselues to the kings mercie, which was not so great vnto them (considering that he was driuen to such extreme dealing by their malicious minds) as that he pardoned anie of the chiefest, but sent the wife of Badlesmere, his onelie sonne Giles, the daughters of the said Badlesmere, Bartholomew Burgersh and his wife, with Thomas de Aldon constable of that place, prisoners vnto the Tower of London. On the first date of November he sent two knights to the castell of Chilham, with commission to enter the same; who comming to the castell demanded entrance accordinglie, in the behalfe of the king their maister. To whom Henrie de Malois knight and then constable of the castell answered, that he would not keepe the castell against the king, and so surrendered the same into their hands, Cuius deputatus (as saith the historie) erat comes Dathels or de Athels, to whom the castell was deliuered, with all things in the same, which were belonging to Bartholomew Badlesmere.

After which, Walter Culpepper bailiffe of the seuen hundreds, was the second of November miserablie intreated, drawne at a horsse taile, and hanged. Wherupon, Thomas Culpepper and others which were with him in the castell of Tunbridge, hearing of the kings approch, left the castell and fled to Hugh Audleie then being with the barons. Then were Geffreie de Saie, William de Dine or Diue, the kings iustices sent into Kent, to inquire of the fauorers of Badlesmere, and to doo iustice of Hugh Spenser reuoked. At what time, Thomas earle of Lancaster, who was the capteine of the barons, and fallen in displeasure with Badlesmere, would not giue aid vnto the barons, so long as Badlesmere was in their societie: for which cause Badlesmere was forsaken by the barons, & stronglie pursued by the king. Who (after the barons had burned one of the gates of Bridgenorth) granted vnto them a dissembled pardon, with their adherents, Bartholomew Badlesmere excepted. Shortlie after which, Badlesmere was apprehended, and in the yeare of Christ one thousand three hundred twentie and two, being in the fiftéenth yeare of Edward the second, was condemned at Canturburie by the iustices aforesaid. Whereupon, he was on the eightéenth kalends of Maie, drawne from Canturburie (as hath Ioannes Londonensis) vnto the gallowes standing at the Blene; where he was hanged as a traitor: after which, his head being striken off, and fastened vpon a pole, was caried to Canturburie, and set vpon a gate of that citie called Burgate.

This Bartholomew maried Margaret, the daughter & one of the heires of Thomas de Clare, seneschall of the forrest of Essex, by whome he had issue Giles his sonne & heire; who with his mother, as before is said, being committed prisoner to the Tower, was afterward in the yeare of Christ, one thousand three hundred twentie and foure, with his mother in like sort pardoned, set at libertie out of prison, & restored to the kings fauor; beside which son, he had foure daughters, who after being heires to their brother Giles, and their father Bartholomew; one of them called Elisabeth, was maried to William Bohune earle of Northampton. I haue read touching the antiquitie of this man of Badlesmere of one Peter de Batlesmere, witnesse to an ancient dateleslie deed. Wherein Brianus the sonne of Randulph (father to Jordan Biaset the baron, which gaue fourtéene acres of ground to build the monasterie of Clerkenwell neere London) did giue twelue acres of arable land in Steeple vnto the nuns of Clerkenwell. Which thing I thought good not to omit in this place, speaking of Bartholomew Badlesmere: as I must not doo the name of Gilo de Badlesmere, witnesse vnto a like dateleslie deed, made by Robert Leiborne, to the same Clerkenwell, the effect whereof is set downe before, vnder the name of Roger Leiborne constable of Douer Castell. Liber Clerken well.

Edmund of Woodstocke (so surnamed of the place where he was borne, not farre from Orford, being the sonne of Edward the first, by his second wife Margaret the daughter of the king of France) was borne in the yeare of our redemption one thousand three hundred, on saint Oswalds daie: but as saith William Paginton, in the yeare of Christ one thousand three hundred and one, was constable of Douer castell in Michaelmas tearme, in the fiftéenth yeare of king Edward the second his nephue, who aduanced the same Edmund to the earledome of Kent in the same fiftéenth yeare of his reigne, the eight and twentith of Julie, in the yeare of our Lord one thousand three hundred twentie & one. At what time it appeareth to me, that then first began the pensions out of the exchéker, to be giuen to euerie noble man in place, & for his honor of the erldome. For whereas in times past, he which was created an earle, had for his creation and maintenance in honor the third penie of the reuenues of that shire comming to the kings hands: now the created earle had in lieu thereof a pension out of the exchéker. For thus I find recorded in the Pellis of Exitus of Michaelmas tearme, the fiftéenth yeare of the reigne of Edward the second. Edmund of Woodstock.

Dominus rex 28 die Iulij proximè præterito, gladio cinxit in comitem Cantiæ (Edmund the kings brother) & ei concesit, &c: 30. lib. de exitibus comitatus Cantiæ percipiend. per manus vicecomitis comitatus illius, qui pro tempore fuerit, sub nomine & honore comitatus Cantiæ: ac firma alia & hundreda diuersa: habend. ad totam vitam ipsius comitis, inter quæ illas 500 lib. annuas ei assignauit, quas abbas & conuentus de Ramesey reddunt de firma nundinarum sancti Iuonis, &c. The occasion which moued the king so to create him earle of Kent, I haue read set downe in one anonymall chronicle in this sort. Rex moliebatur confusionē Bartholomæi de Badlesmer, & ne maximus fieret præ cæteris, sicut solebat Edmundum de Woodstock fratrē suū comitē Cantiæ fecit. Of which earle I will not speake anie more at this time, bicause I haue more liberallie treated of him amongst the protectors of England.

Hugh Spenser the yonger was constable of Douer castell, and warden of the cinque ports, being on the seas, and kéeping the cinque ports (by witnesse of our chronicles) in the time of Edward the second, as to his office appertained. He was in great fauour with king Edward the first, and made earle of Glocester by king Edward the second. He married Elenor the eldest sister, and one of the heires Hugh Spenser.

not surrender the castell. Now Bartholomew Badlesmere, hauing intelligence that the king laie in siege before the castell of Leeds, moued the barons that they would with their power go to Leeds, to remoue the armie which the king had before the castell. Whereupon the barons came to Kingstowne vpon Thames; but there better considering of that matter whereunto they had before so vnaduisedlie condescended, they would not go anie further in that iourneie.

Whereupon Badlesmere being abashed and confounded, departed from them. Which being knowne to those that kept the castell of Leeds, now perceiuing themselues to be in great extremitie, hopelesse of anie succor, and in danger to be all destroied by the kings power, they yelded themselues to the kings mercie, which was not so great vnto them (considering that he was driuen to such extreme dealing by their malicious minds) as that he pardoned anie of the chiefest, but sent the wife of Badlesmere, his onelie sonne Giles, the daughters of the said Badlesmere, Bartholomew Burgersh and his wife, with Thomas de Aldon constable of that place, prisoners vnto the Tower of London. On the first date of November he sent two knights to the castell of Chilham, with commission to enter the same; who comming to the castell demanded entrance accordinglie, in the behalfe of the king their maister. To whom Henrie de Malois knight and then constable of the castell answered, that he would not keepe the castell against the king, and so surrendered the same into their hands, Cuius deputatus (as saith the historie) erat comes Dathels or de Athels, to whom the castell was deliuered, with all things in the same, which were belonging to Bartholomew Badlesmere.

After which, Walter Culpepper bailiffe of the seuen hundreds, was the second of November miserablie intreated, drawne at a horsse taile, and hanged. Whereupon, Thomas Culpepper and others which were with him in the castell of Tunbridge, hearing of the kings approch, left the castell and fled to Hugh Audleie then being with the barons. Then were Geffreie de Saie, William de Dine or Diue, the kings iustices sent into Kent, to inquire of the fauorers of Badlesmere, and to doo iustice of Hugh Spenser reuoked. At what time, Thomas earle of Lancaster, who was the capteine of the barons, and fallen in displeasure with Badlesmere, would not giue aid vnto the barons, so long as Badlesmere was in their societie: for which cause Badlesmere was forsaken by the barons, & stronglie pursued by the king. Who (after the barons had burned one of the gates of Bridgenorth) granted vnto them a dissembled pardon, with their adherents, Bartholomew Badlesmere excepted. Shortlie after which, Badlesmere was apprehended, and in the yeare of Christ one thousand three hundred twentie and two, being in the fiftenth yeare of Edward the second, was condemned at Canturburie by the iustices aforesaid. Whereupon, he was on the eightenth kalends of Maie, drawne from Canturburie (as hath Ioannes Londonensis) vnto the gallows standing at the Blene; where he was hanged as a traitor: after which, his head being striken off, and fastened vpon a pole, was caried to Canturburie, and set vpon a gate of that citie called Burgate.

This Bartholomew maried Margaret, the daughter & one of the heires of Thomas de Clare, seneschall of the forrest of Essex, by whome he had issue Giles his sonne & heire; who with his mother, as before is said, being committed prisoner to the Tower, was afterward in the yeare of Christ, one thousand three hundred twentie and foure, with his mother in like sort pardoned, set at libertie out of prison, & restored to the kings fauor; beside which sonne, he had foure daughters, who after being heires to their brother Giles, and their father Bartholomew; one of them called Elisabeth, was maried to William Bohune earle of Northampton. I haue read touching the antiquitie of this man of Badlesmere of one Peter de Batlesmere, witnesse to an ancient dateles deed. Wherein Brianus the sonne of Randulph (father to Jordan Biaset the baron, which gaue fourténe acres of ground to build the monasterie of Clerkenwell neere London) did giue twelue acres of arable land in Steeple vnto the nuns of Clerkenwell. Which thing I thought good not to omit in this place, speaking of Bartholomew Badlesmere: as I must not doo the name of Gilo de Badlesmere, witnesse vnto a like dateles deed, made by Robert Leiborne, to the same Clerkenwell, the effect whereof is set downe before, vnder the name of Roger Leiborne constable of Douer Castell. Liber Clerken well.

Edmund of Woodstocke (so surnamed of the place where he was borne, not farre from Orford, being the sonne of Edward the first, by his second wife Margaret the daughter of the king of France) was borne in the yeare of our redemption one thousand three hundred, on saint Oswalds daie: but as saith William Paginton, in the yeare of Christ one thousand three hundred and one, was constable of Douer castell in Michaelmas tearme, in the fiftenth yeare of king Edward the second his nephue, who aduanced the same Edmund to the earledome of Kent in the same fiftenth yeare of his reigne, the eight and twentith of Julie, in the yeare of our Lord one thousand three hundred twentie & one. At what time it appeareth to me, that then first began the pensions out of the exchéker, to be giuen to euerie noble man in place, & for his honor of the erldome. For whereas in times past, he which was created an earle, had for his creation and maintenance in honor the third penie of the reuenues of that shire comming to the kings hands: now the created earle had in lieu thereof a pension out of the exchéker. For thus I find recorded in the Pellis of Exitus of Michaelmas tearme, the fiftenth yeare of the reigne of Edward the second. Edmund of Woodstocke.

Dominus rex 28 die Iulij proximè præterito, gladio cinxit in comitem Cantiæ (Edmund the kings brother) & ei concesit, &c: 30. lib. de exitibus comitatus Cantiæ percipiend. per manus vicecomitis comitatus illius, qui pro tempore fuerit, sub nomine & honore comitatus Cantiæ: ac firma alia & hundreda diuersa: habend. ad totam vitam ipsius comitis, inter quæ illas 500 lib. annuas ei assignauit, quas abbas & conuentus de Ramesey reddunt de firma nundinarum sancti Iuonis, &c. The occasion which moued the king so to create him earle of Kent, I haue read set downe in one anonymall chronicle in this sort. Rex moliebatur confusionē Bartholomæi de Badlesmer, & ne maximus fieret præ cæteris, sicut solebat Edmundum de Woodstock fratrē suū comitē Cantiæ fecit. Of which earle I will not speake anie more at this time, bicause I haue more liberallie treated of him amongst the protectors of England.

Hugh Spenser the yonger was constable of Douer castell, and warden of the cinque ports, being on the seas, and keeping the cinque ports (by witnesse of our chronicles) in the time of Edward the second, as to his office appertained. He was in great fauour with king Edward the first, and made earle of Glocester by king Edward the second. He married Elenor the eldest sister, and one of the heires Hugh Spenser.

heires of Gilbert de Clare earle of Glocester and Hertford, by whom he had issue Hugh that died without issue, Edward lord Spenser, and Gilbert, with Isabell wife to Edward Fitzallen erle of Arundell; he was at Hereford executed, by drawing hanging and quartering, in the yeare of our Lord one thousand three hundred twentie and six, in the last yeare of Edward the second.

William Clinton.

William Clinton, the sonne of John lord Clinton, was constable of Douer castell, and warden of the cinque ports, in the twentith yeare of Edward the second (if they haue not mistaken that king for Edward the third) about the yeare of our Lord one thousand three hundred twentie & six, in which yeare the same king was deposed, and Edward the third his sonne aduanced, who continued his office manie yeares, as in the fift, sixt, tenth, and thirteenth of Edward the third. Which Clinton was in Easter tearme in the ninth yeare of Edward the third, sent into France, and so to Rome, in the companie of John archbishop of Canturburie, the abbat of Doze, and sir William Trussell, and is the same person named in a booke belonging to the house of Rochester (which booke my good freend and rare antiquarie maister Lambard hath rightlie intituled by the name of Registrum Roffense) who with Robert de Walkefar was dispatcht into Kent to Canturburie, there to heare and determine the breach of the peace in Kent. To whome the king (as appeareth in the records of the exchéker of the Pellis exitus) in Michaelmas terme, of the tenth yeare of king Edward the third, had giuen three hundred markes by yeare, for the sustentation of Laurence Hastings, the sonne of John Hastings, as long as the said Laurence should be in his custodie: which Laurence was afterward the first earle of Penbroke by the name of Hastings. After which, in the ninth yeare of Edward the third, he was created earle of Huntington, of whome in the thirteenth yeare of the same king I find this registred in the register of Rochester before named. The Frenchmen infesting the sea coasts betweene Dwell and Cornewall, there was a councell holden to place a watch to repell the enimie from the sea side, whereunto few regarded to come, although manie popular knights and soldiours were by distresse inforced to come thither. Wherefore the lord William Clinton, earle of Huntington, and constable of Douer castell, assembling a great force of armed men in the countie of Kent to resist the enimies, did bestow manie things of his owne, and sustained greater trauell in labouring thereabout. For when the Frenchmen came to burne Sandwich, the erle with his companie entred the ships which were at Sandwich to subdue their enimies. Whereupon, when the French perceiued therby that they could doo no good, they turned their sailes, and cast anchor at Heath. Whom when the earle with his companie did pursue vnto Romeneie, they forthwith fled, & so from Ester vnto Lammas he continued armed with his people, valiantlie keeping the coasts of England against the enimies. After which, in the yeare following, which was the fourteenth of Edward the third, he attended the king, scowring the seas; as saith the same author, whose words although they be long, I shall not greeue to set downe in such barbarous sort as I find them.

*Rex transfretare cœptus in crastino sanctæ Trinitatis cum paucis nauibus, videlicet 16, ad plus cùm nauigare disposuisset, noua recepit, quòd rex Francie vnam classem ducentarum nauium magnarum cum multitudine armatorum apud Sclusam miserat, ad prohibendum ingressum Flandrie, siue ad capiendum eum siue ad occidendum. Quo audito, rex Anglie totam costeram maris vsque ad Lin, personaliter perscrutans, omnes naues magnas bene paratas in rebus & personis apud Herwich sumptibus patrie celeriter venire fecit. Comes verò Huntington ex parte sua omnes nautas quinque portuũ parari fecit, & scripsit omnibus amicis suis pro hominibus armorum auxilium ferre. Vnde factus est quod * episcopus Roffensis misit octo homines armatos sumptibus suis apud Sandwichum, ad conducendum regem vltra mare.* And so in the end the king passed into the parts beyond the seas in the sight of the French kings armie, which durst not aduenture to set vpon them. After which, to go forth with the words of the historie: Die sabbati, videlicet in festo sancti Johannis baptistæ intro concilio, sole, vento, & vlda cum aqua regi Anglie fauentibus, ductu piratarum, Anglici Francis grandem insultum dederunt: comite Huntingdonie & domino Roberto Morley admeralis siue capitaneis danibus insultum primum: ceteri verò naues viriliter sequentes cum Francis congredientes, multos occiderunt, seque telis se reddere pepercerunt, & fugientes de nauibus in mare saltare vi armata compulerunt: fugitarij hoc tamen fecerunt. Besides this, there was a certeine ship of Diepe, whereunto were fled foure hundred men of Normandie, who on a night caried awaie from the fleet of England a certeine ship of Sandwich, in which were the men of the prior of Canturburie. Which this earle of Huntington and warden of the cinque ports perceiuing, forthwith he turned the ship wherein he was, and directed it towards them: Et (as the same author further saith) cùm eos attigisset, tota nocte vsque manè ad solis ortum præliantes acerrimè, pulsis nauibus ambabus vsque ad terram, & deuictis 450 nautis, nauem de Diepe combustam reliquerunt. In the which conflict there were slaine sir Hugh Airet admerall and one other great man of Flanders called John Ieiuell, with manie other great and small to the number of fiue and twentie thousand persons: at what time there was also taken a hundred and three score ships which remained with the English, who exceeded not aboue sixteene thousand men. After this honorable victorie by this earle, in the yeare of our redemption one thousand three hundred fortie and six, being about the twentith yeare of the reigne of the said Edward the third, Robert Auesberie writeth of certeine letters of the French, conteining the destruction of this realme, which this earle deliuered vnto the archbishop of Canturburie; the words of which author are these: In vigilia assumptionis Marie virginis anno Domini 1346, reuerendus pater dominus Iohannes de Stratford Cantuariensis archiepiscopus, ante processionem generalem pro pace & domino rege Anglorum, tunc in Francia militante, à clero & populo London illa die solenniter facienda, verbum Dei ipsius clero & populo London illa die solenniter faciendum ad crucem Pauli London prædicans, exponens inter cetera publicauit, quòd nobilis vir comes de Huntington, qui cum domino rege Anglorum in conflictu habito apud Cadamum, fuerat febribus fatigatus, in Angliam tunc reuersus, litteras quasdam inuentas in Cadamo, continentes præsumptuosam Normannorum confœderationem seu ordinationem, ad subuersionem ipsius regis & regni Anglie, per concilium domini Philippi de Valois ordinatas & callidè adinuentas sibi tradidit vulgariter exponendas.

Robert. Auesb.

All which matter with the letters he openlie declared (as is before said) at Paules crosse, to moue the people feruentlie to praie for, and willinglie to aid the king. He liuing in the fiue and twentith yeare of the reigne of king Edward the third, founded the priorie of Maidstocke, married Julian the daughter and heire of Thomas lord Leiborne, by whome he had a daughter (as some suppose) Elisabeth: whereas the office taken after his death (in the yeare of our Lord one thousand three hundred fiftie and foure, being the eight and twentith yeare of the reigne of king Edward the third) saith that John Clinton, the son of John Clinton brother vnto this erle, was heire to the same earle.

Bartholomew de Burgersh.

Bartholomew de Burgersh baneret, was constable

conſtable of Douer caſtell & warden of the cinque portes, in the nineteenth yeare of the reigne of king Edward the third (as ſome note) and in the foure and twentith and ſixt and twentith yere of the reigne of the ſame king, being firſt in the ninth yeare of the reigne of king Edward the third ſteward of Penteif; and the ſame yeare (or rather the yeare before) in Michaelmaſſe terme he was ſent into France in the companie of William biſhop of Norwich; and likewiſe was diſpatched ambaſſador vnto Rome about the ſame time, whereof I dow find this note in the ſame Michaelmas terme in the records of the exchéker being in forme as followeth:
Bartholomæo de Burgerſh militi, eunti nuper in negotijs domini regis ad curiam Romanam, videlicet pro diſpenſatione habenda inter ipſum dominum regem & reginam Anglia conſortem ſuam, &c. Who being thus imploied in the affaires, and by the wiſe cariage of himſelfe therein, growing more and more in the kings fauor, was for the eſpeciall truſt which the king repoſed in him, in the three and twentith yeare of the reigne of king Edward the third, being in the yeare of Grace one thouſand three hundred fortie and nine, ſent with the earle of Lancaſter, the barons of Stafford, Greiſtocke, and Furneuall about the feaſt of all ſaints to Gaſcoigne, to appeaſe the furious vprore which John de Valois ſonne vnto the French king had made in that dukedome, greatlie ſpoiling the ſame. Which thing being well performed, he was after in the foure and twentith yeare of the reigne of king Edward the third, being the yeare of our Lord one thouſand three hundred and fiftie, made one of the firſt knights of the garter, at the erecting of that honorable order. Wherwith being honored, (to make it appeare to the world that the ſame was not vnworthilie laid vpon him, but moſt iuſtlie for his martiall proweſſe, who ſtill followed the warres) in the fiue and twentith and ſixt and twentith yeare of the reigne of king Edward the third, being in the yeare of our redemption one thouſand three hundred & fiftie, he went twiſe to Calis in the com-panie of William biſhop of Norwich. After which, in the nine and twentith yeare of the reigne of king Edward the third, being in the yeare of our ſalua-tion one thouſand three hundred fiftie and fiue he paſſeth to Burdeaux with the Blacke prince, and followed his armie, as a companion with him in all his conflicts and battels: which in the ſame yeare this Bartholomew, John Chandois, and James Audleie with foure & twentie knights comming to the taile of the French armie, flieng awaie, tooke two & thirtie knights and gentlemen priſoners, amongſt whome was the erle of Romenne. After which it ſeemeth that he liued not long, for in the Michaelmas terme in the thirtith yeare of the reigne of king Edward the third there is mention made of the executors of Bartholomew Burgerſh conſtable of Do-uer caſtell.

Roger de Mortimer. Roger de Mortimer was conſtable of Douer caſtell in Michaelmas terme, in the one and thirtith yeare of Edward the third, being the ſame man (as I ſuppoſe) which was the ſonne of Edward Morti-mer lord of Wigmore, and as the Welſh hiſtorie re-porteth, pag. 317, by king Edward the third, in the 29 yeare of his reigne reſtored to the earledome of March; or els was Roger Mortimer vncle to Roger earle of March. But becauſe time ſerueth not to decide which of them it was, I leaue it to others.

John Beauchampe of Warwike knight, was conſtable of Douer caſtell, & warden of the cinque portes, the firſt daie of December, in the yeare of Chriſt one thouſand three hundred three ſcore & one, and the fiue and thirtith yeare of king Edward the third, to whome ſucceeded Robert Yerle knight.

Robert Yerle knight, liuing in the one and thirtith yeare of Edward the third, being the ſonne and heire of William Yerle lord of Kirkbie, who died in the one and twentith yere of Edward the third, was in the fiue and twentith yere of king Edward the third, capteine of Calis, and alſo conſtable of Do-uer caſtell, and warden of the cinque portes, in the ſix and thirtith yeare of king Edward the third, being the yeare of Chriſt one thouſand three hundred three ſcore and two, as appeareth by the records of Pellis exitus, where it is thus entred in the firſt daie of December in the Pell of Michaelmas terme of the ſame ſix and thirtith yeare. Roberto de Herle militi, cuſtodi ca-ſtri Douer & quinq; portuum, ad totam vitam ſuam eodem modo quo Iohannes de Bello campo de Warwike dum vixit illam habuit. Which Robert (being lord and baron of Kirkbie) died without iſſue in the eight and thirtith yeare of king Edward the third, leauing Margaret his ſiſter to be his heire. Of which Margaret, being married to Rafe Haſtings, the now liuing earle of Huntington Henrie Haſtings is deſcended.

Rafe Spigornell. Rafe Spigornell knight was conſtable of Do-uer caſtle, & warden of the cinque portes, in the fortith and fortie fourth of Edward the third, to whome the ſame king gaue fourtie pounds in reward, becauſe that he brought a crowne of gold adorned with pretious ſtones, as a token from his daughter in law the princeſſe of Wales: whereof I haue ſéne this note in the Pellis exitus of Michaelmas terme of the ſix and thirtith of the ſame Edward the third, being the yeare of Chriſt one thouſand three hundred three ſcore and two, and the fouretéenth of October:
Radulpho de Spigornell militi, in denarijs ſibi liberatis in perſolutionē 40 libra. quas dominus rex ſibi liberari mandauit de dono ſuo, pro eo quòd idē Radulphus apportauit domino regi quandā coronā de auro & lapidibus pretioſis, de dono dominæ principiſſæ de Wallia, &c. Now for proofe that he was conſtable of Douer caſtell, and warden of the cinque portes, ſucceeding Robert Yerle, I find this note entred in the records of the exchéker, in Eaſter terme, in the foure and fourtith yere of the reigne of king Edward the third: Radulpho de Spigornell militi, cui dominus rex caſtrū de Douer & quin-que portus cum pertinenijs cuſtodiendum ad totam vitam ſuam eodem modo, quo Robertus de Herle dum vixit cuſtodiam illam habuit, percipiens per annum 300 libras pro ſuſtentatione ſua, ac capellanorum, ac vnius carpentarij in dicto ca-ſtro commorantium, & pro robis eorum, &c.

Richard de Penbrig was conſtable of Douer caſtell, and warden of the cinque portes, in the fiue and fortith yeare of Edward the third, being the yere of our redemption one thouſand three hundred three ſcore and eleuen.

William lord Latimer. William lord Latimer of Corbie knight, the ſonne of William lord Latimer, and Eliſabeth his wife, owner of Stratton in Bedfordſhire, was conſtable of Douer caſtell in the ſeuen and fortith yeare of Edward the third, being the yeare of our redemption one thouſand three hundred three ſcore and thirteene, in which office he continued in the fiftith yeare of Edward the third, whoſe lieutenant was William de Tidecombe. Which lord Latimer, being in great credit with the king, performed manie notable things, wherof mention is made in our chronicles. For which (as appeareth by record of the exchéker of the ſecond part of Michaelmas terme, in the one and thirtith yere of Edward the third, being the yeare of our redemption one thouſand three hundred three ſcore and eleuen) it is ſet downe, that the king gaue to this William Latimer one hundred marks a yeare out of the exchéker, the words

of

of which record be these: Willielmo de Latimer, cui dominus rex 100 marcas annuatim ad scaccarium percipiendum pro bono seruitio per ipsum eidē domino regi impensum, quousq; terræ quas Elisabeth, quæ fuit uxor W. Latimer mater prædicti Willielmi tenet in dotem, & aliàs ad terminum vitæ de hæreditate dicti Willielmi ad manus eiusdem deuenerint, &c.

Of the actions of which William, warden of the ports, I meane in some part here to intreat, besides that which I haue spoken of him in my discourse of the protectors of England, pag. 1076. This man in the eight and thirtith yeare of Edward the third, falling in the yeare of Christ one thousand three hundred three score and seuen, being in the warres of Britaine, in the feast of S. Michaell, Charles Blois, (betweene whom and John Montfort there was contention for the dukedome of Britaine) did with an armie of three thousand and fiue hundred suddenlie come vpon John Montfort and the lord William Latimer, whilst they did beseige the castell & towne of Dowrate, hauing scarse one thousand and fiue hundred of all sorts, both Britains and English. Whereupon the armies going togither without anie deliberation, there were slaine on the part of the duke Montfort onelie seuen men, and on the part of the intruder, Charles Blois himselfe, the lord of Richford, and William Range knight, and almost one thousand esquiers; at what time there was also taken on the part of the said Charles two earles, twentie lords, and fiftéene hundred valiant armed souldiors. After this, being the kings chamberlaine, he was (in the fiftith yeare of king Edward the third, being the yeare of our Lord one thousand three hundred three score and sixtéene) with the duke of Lancaster by parlement remoued from the king, and others placed in their roomes. But after, the duke of Lancaster obteining fauour to be protector of the kingdome, restored this William Latimer, sir Richard Sturie and others, to the kings fauour and to their former offices. Which lord Latimer, after the death of Edward the third, continuing in the yong king Richard his fauour, was before the coronation of the said king Richard, in the first yeare of his reigne, being the yeare of our Lord one thousand three hundred three score and seuentéene, sent with sir Simon Burleie to the Londoners, to set an agreement betweene them and the duke of Lancaster: whereof I will speake more hereafter in the treatie of sir Simon Burleie, warden of the cinque ports. After which, in the same yeare, the Englishmen hearing of a multitude of Spanish ships, which for want of wind were deteined at Scluse, determined to enter the sea with a great power, desirous to requite the wrongs which the Spaniards had done vnto them the yeare before, in aiding the Frenchmen. Wherefore the English hauing assembled an armie by sea, Thomas of Woodstocke erle of Buckingham, William lord Latimer, the lord Fitzwater, sir Robert Knolles, and manie valiant persons were made capteins thereof, who going to sea, felt the crosse of aduerse fortune in the midst of the waues. For by force of extreame tempests, their ships were dispersed, broken, drowned, and almost all lost. After which, in the end gathering their navie together, they returned into England, where anew refreshing and rigging their ships, they tooke another iorneie to the sea and found better successe. He married Elisabeth the daughter of Edmund erle of Arundell, by whome he had issue William which died a child, and Elisabeth his sole heire married to John lord Neuill, of whome sir Fulke Greuill now liuing is descended.

Wallingham.

William lord Latimer.

Edmund Plantagenet.

Edmund Plantagenet, surnamed of Langleie, the sonne of king Edward the third, was constable of Douer castle, and warden of the cinque ports, in the one and fiftith of Edward the third, which office he continued in some of the first yeares of the reigne of king Richard the second, as in his first and second yeare, &c. This Edmund, being in his fathers life made erle of Cambridge, was in the time of his nephue king Richard the second, created duke of Yorke, of whome I haue more intreated in my discourse of the dukes of England, pag. 1231.

Sir Robert Ashton knight, sometime treasurer of England, constable of Douer castell, and warden of the cinque ports, in the first and seuenth yeres of king Richard the second, falling in the yeares one thousand three hundred foure score and two, and one thousand three hundred foure score and three of our Lord, who gaue the great bell to the church in Douer castell, of whome I haue spoken more in my discourse of the treasurors of England, pag. 1247. He lieth buried in the foresaid church of Douer castell with this epitaph: Hic iacet Robertus Ashton miles, quondam constabularius castri Douer, qui obijt 2 die Ianuarij, an. Dom 1384 cuius animæ propitietur Deus.

Robert Ashton.

Simon Burleie knight of the garter, and banneret, the sonne of sir John Burleie knight, which liued in the first of Aprill, in the fortith yeare of Edward the third, being the yeare of our redemption one thousand three hundred three score and six, was constable of Douer castell, as by this short discourse of him it should appeare. Before the obteining of which office, he was on the two & twentith of June, being the daie after the death of king Edward the third, and the first yeare of Richard the second, in the yeare of our lord one thousand three hundred three score and seuentéene, sent with William lord Latimer, sir Nicholas Bond, & sir Richard Adderburie to the Londoners, who the two and twentith daie of Julie before, had sent John Philpot a worthie citizen of London, to touch the death of the late king Edward, and to request the kings fauour about the controuersies then depending betweene the duke of Lancaster and the citizens of London. Which sir Simon Burleie and the rest comming to London, deliuered to the citizens from the king, that as they brought them heauie newes of the kings death: so they were also to shew them glad tidings of the yong kings good disposition towards them, who had chosen their citie, and would come vnto them as they had required. Besides which, the king had spoken vnto the duke, who had submitted himselfe vnto the kings pleasure in all things. Wherefore they willed the citizens to doo the like, but they refused the same. Yet at length (after a long discourse had amongst them therabout, for six houres and more) they agreed that if this sir Simon Burleie and the rest would enter into bond, that this their submission should not tend to anie temporall losse or corporall hurt, that they would willinglie agree to the kings command; whereupon these knights gaue their assurance accordinglie. With which securitie the citizens coming to Shene, the king called them before him, and they acknowledged willinglie in all things to submit themselues to the kings pleasure. Which done, the king and nobilitie tooke their iorneie to London towards his coronation, whose horse sir Nicholas Bond going on foot did lead: at what time also this sir Simon Burleie did carrie the sword before the king. Which sir Simon still continuing in the kings fauour, and dailie growing to greater honour, was in the seuenth yeare of king Richard, being the yeare of our Lord one thousand three hundred foure score & foure, made constable of Douer castell, and warden of the cinque ports, holding that office during his life, as I for this time doo gather. For he was constable in the Simon Burleie.

Wallingham.

seuenth and eight yeare of Richard the second, hauing besides that the office of the kings chamberlaine, and manie other great dignities.

Before which, on the foure and twentith of March, in the tenth yeare of the king, being in the yeare of Christ one thousand three hundred fourescore and seauen, Richard earle of Arundell admerall for that time, and Thomas Mowbraie earle of Notingham went to the sea, and tooke about one hundred ships laden with wines, conteining one thousand nine hundred tuns of wines. After which he tooke Brest in Britaine, and returned into England. Which deeds of the earls being enuied by such as were with the king, as the duke of Ireland, the earle of Suffolke, this sir Simon Burleie, and Richard Stirie or Sturie, deprauing the earle to the king, said: that he had performed no worthie exploit, but onelie inuaded a few merchants, whose amitie it had beene more fruitfull to haue preserued, than so to haue stirred vnintreatable hatred. Of all which persons, the duke of Ireland, sir Simon Burleie, and the rest thus in generalitie writeth Walsingham. Hi nimirū milites plures erāt Veneris quàm Bellonæ, plus valentes in thalamo quàm in campo, plus linguā quàm lancea præmuniti, ad dicendum vigiles, ad faciendum acta Martia somnolenti. Hi igitur circa regem conuersantes, nihil quod deceret tantum militem informare curabant, non dico tantùm armorum vsum, sed nec ea quæ maximè reges generosos decent in pace, videlicet in venationem, vel aucupationem, aut his similia, quibus regni honor crescit. Thus much by Walsingham.

By which demeanour of this Simon Burleie, he grew in such hatred with the nobilitie, that at a parlement kept at Westminster in Februarie, he was about the first of Maie following, in the eleuenth yeare of the king, and in the yeare of our Lord, one thousand three hundred fourescore and eight, beheaded: notwithstanding that the earle of Derbie labored all he could with the nobilitie (which had taken armes against the king, for supporting of this Simon Burleie and others) to saue his life. For which intreatie there fell great dissention betweene the earle of Derbie and the duke of Glocester. This sir Simon Burleie being a man of great possessions in Kent, was lord of manie manors there; and namelie of the manors of Elham, and Colbridge; whereof he did with force dispossesse the tenants, as appeareth by these letters patents of king Richard the second: the which although they be long, yet for that they conteine manie matters touching the said sir Simon Burleie, and also the names of manie principall persons and officers in the realme liuing at that time, I shall not greeue to set downe in this sort.

The letters patents of Richard the second, wherein he granted manie parcels of land in Kent with the manors of Elham and Colbridge, to the deane of saint Stephans chapell of Westminster, founded by king Edward the third, as by the same letters patents plainelie appeareth.

RIchardus Dei Gratia rex Angliæ, & Franciæ, & dominus Hiberniæ, omnibus ad quos præsentes litteræ peruenerint, salutem. Sciatis quòd cùm dominus E. nuper rex Angliæ, auus noster defunctus, collegium liberæ capellæ nostræ sancti Stephani infra palacium nostrū Westmonasterium de vno decano, & 12 canonicis, 13 vicarijs, & alijs ministris ad diuina seruitia ibidem pro animabus progenitorum, & successorum ipsius aui nostri in perpetuum faciendum nuper fundasset, & per litteras suas patentes (quas confirmauimus') concessit eidem decano, & canonicis, & eorum successoribus pro sustentatione sua, quingentas & decem libras, percipiend. annuatim de præfato auo nostro, & hæredibus suis in perpetuum, quoúsque eis de terris, aut tenementis, seu alijs rebus immobilibus valorem summæ prædictæ per annum attingentibus, per prædictum auum nostrum, vel hæredes suos fuisset prouisum: postmodúmque idem auus noster per alias litteras suas patētes dedisset & concessisset charissimo auunculo nostro duci Aquitan. & Lancastr. tunc regi Castellæ & Legionis, Simoni tunc archiepiscopo Cant. Iohan. episcopo Lincolniæ, Henrico tunc episcopo Wigornie, Willielmo tunc domino de Latimer, Iohanni Kneuet tunc cancellario, Roberto de Ashton tunc thesaurario, Rogero de Beauchampe tunc camerario, Iohanni de Ipres tunc seneschallo hospitij, & Nicholao Carew tunc custodi priuati sigilli eiusdem aui nostri, certa castra, maneria, dominia, terras, tenementa, redditus, reuersiones, quæ dictus auus noster adquisiuit de quibusdam personis in com. Cant ac alijs diuersis comitatibus in Anglia, vnà cum toto stauro, bonis, & catallis in eisdem castris, manerijs, terris, & tenementis adtunc existentibus. Habendum & tenendum eidem duci, & alijs personis & hæredibus suis in perpetuum, absque aliqua conditione eis declarata, super liberationem chartæ prædictæ, quæ de recordo existit, vt dicitur siue antea, aut super liberationem festinam inde eis factam, prout coram nobis, ac dominis, ac paribus regni nostri, aliàs in parlamento nostro palam fuerat declaratum, prout sumus informati. Qui quidem auus noster post dictum feaoffamentum sic factum in testamento suo ordinauit, quòd dictum collegium, & aliæ domus religionis, quas fundauit, dotatæ essent, & feoffatæ de manerijs, terris, & tenementis, redditibus & reuersionibus prædictis cum pertinentijs tenendis separatim in perpetuum. Post cuius mortem prædicti, dux, Iohannes episcopus, Henricus, Robertus, Iohannes de Ipres, & Nicholaus, plenam noritiam vltimæ voluntatis dicti aui nostri habentes, volentéque eandem voluntatem, ac ordinationes, & promissa sua prædicta, penes prædictum decanum & canonicos, & successores suos adimplere, prout in testamento suo expressè fuerūt onerati, maneria, terras, tenemēta, redditus, & reuersiones prædicta, inter dictum collegiū & alias domos religionis prædict. secundum discretionem suam departir. fuerunt, & æqualiter proportionauerunt, ac per scriptum suum indentatum concesserunt, & ad firmam demiserunt præfatis decano & canonicis, & eorum successoribus parcellam maneriorum, terrarum, tenementorum, reddituum, & reuersionum prædictorum tanquam ratam suam eorundem prout intelleximus; videlicet, maneria de Esshatisford, cum Bartone, Buckwell, Eseling Meere, Langley iuxta Ledes cum aduocationibus ecclesiarum, francheſijs, warrennis, & omnimodis dominijs ad ea pertinent. ac quandam parcellam prati in Einsford in dicto comitatu Cantiæ, vnà cum toto stauro vivo & mortuo in manerijs, terris & tenementis prædictis tunc existent. Nec non reuersiones maneriorum de Elham, & de Colebridge, cum pertin. in dicto com. Cantiæ, quæ Willielmus Streat iam defunctus, tunc tenens ad terminum vitæ suæ, ac etiam reuersionem manerij de Winchfeeld cum pertinentibus in comitatu Southampton, quod Iohannes Kimberley tunc tenuit & adhuc tenet ad terminum vitæ suæ. Habend. & tenend. præfato decano & canonicis, & successoribus suis a festo sanctæ Paschæ, anno regni nostri quinto, vsque ad finem quadraginta annorum, ex tunc proximè sequentium, ad intentionem quòd dicta maneria

John of Gant fourth sonne to Edward the third.

Simon Sudburie archbishop of Canturburie.

John de Buckingham bishop of London.

Eseling otherwise called Northcourt, is now in the possession of Martin Iames of Smarden in Kent esquire, and the other lands in the possession of other men.

ria, terræ, tenementa, redditus, reuersiones, cũ omnibus pertinentijs suis, eisdem decano & canonicis priùs concessa, eisdem decano & canonicis & successoribus suis, infra eundem terminum ad manum mortuam data forent & assignata, tenenda in auxilium sustentationis suæ, ac in partem dotationis suæ prædictæ in perpetuum, prout per dictum scriptum indentatum plenius apparet. Virtute cuius dimissionis ac attornamenti tenentium præfati decani & canonici inde sesiti fuerũt, vt de termino suo prædicto & possessionem suam tam dictorum maneriorũ de Elham & Colbridge, post mortem prædicti Willielmi Streat quàm omnium aliorum maneriorum, terrarum, tenementorum, & reddituum prædictorum cum pertinentibus in dicto comitatu Cantiæ per tempus non modicũ continuarunt, quoúsq; ipsi per Simonem de Burleie chiualer defuncti inde indebitè expulsi fuerunt, vt asserunt, cui quidem Simoni ad minùs veram suggestionem suam omnia prædicta maneria, terras, tenementa, & redditus, cum pertinentibus in comitatu Cantiæ, habendum & tenendum eidem Simoni & hæredibus suis in perpetuum per litteras nostras patentes concessimus, prout in eisdem litteris plenius continetur. Quæ quidem maneria, terræ, tenementa, & redditus, cum pertinentibus in dicto comitatu Cantiæ, ratione iudicij versus ipsum Simonem in parlamento nostro apud Westmonasterium anno regni nostri vndecimo, tento, reddita in manus nostras tanquam nobis forisfacta, sesita, & ad centum & vndecim libras per eschaetorem nostrum in eodem comitatu Cantiæ extensa fuerunt: subsequentérque ad supplicationem prædictorum decani & canonicorum, pro maiore securitate sua per litteras nostras patentes concessimus Iohanni Sleford personæ ecclesiæ de Balsham, Iohanni de Appulton, Thomæ de Oxted capellano, Iohanni Darg capellano, & Richardo Bret capellano, custodiam maneriorum, terrarum, tenemẽtorum, & reddituum prædictorum, cum pertinentijs in dicto comitatu Cantiæ, habendum & tenendum vsque ad finem triginta annorum ex tunc proximè sequentium, omnimodis exitibus, bladis, fœno, commoditatibus & alijs proficuis, & quibuscúnq; aisiamentis maneriorum, terrarum, tenementorum, & reddituum prædictorum cum pertinentibus, præfato decano & canonicis & successoribus suis exceptis & reseruatis. Quæ quidem emolumenta per alias litteras patentes eisdem decano & canonicis priùs concessimus, sicut dicunt. Nos considerantes benignum propositum & piam intentionem prædicti aui nostri, de gratia nostra speciali in complementum vltimæ voluntatis suæ, dedimus & concessimus pro nobis & hæredibus nostris, quantum in nobis est, præfatis decano & canonicis tam dicta maneria de Asshetisford, cum Barton, Buckwell, Eseling Meere, & dictam parcellam in prato Einsford cum toto stauro vivo & mortuo ibidẽ existent. quàm dicta maneria de Elham & Colbridge cum aduocationibus ecclesiarum, fœdis militum, parcis, warrennis, piscarijs, wardis, maritagijs, releuijs, eschaetis, redditibus, leetis, seruitijs, franchesijs, custumis, priuilegijs, & omnibus alijs rebus & proficuis, ad dictum manerium & pratum, vel ad aliquam parcellam eorundem quouis modo pertinentibus siue spectantibus; habendum & tenendum eisdem decano & canonicis & successoribus suis in perpetuum. Concessimus insuper & licentiam dedimus, pro nobis & hæredibus nostris, quantũ in nobis est, prædictis duci & episcopo Lincoln. quòd ipsi concedere possint, quod manerium de Winchfeeld, vnà cum aduocatione ecclesiæ eiusdem manerij, quæ prædictus Iohannes Kimberley sic tenet ad terminum vitæ suæ, & quæ post mortem eiusdem Iohannis Kimberley ad præfatos ducem & episcopũ Lincoln. eo quòd alij coniunctim fœffati sui dies clauserunt extremos, reuerti deberent post mortem ipsius Iohannis Kimberley, remaneant præfatis decano & canonicis, &c. In cuius rei testimonium has litteras, &c. Teste meipso apud villam Salop. sexto die Februarij, anno regni nostri 21.

This patent thus reciting the death of Simon Burleie, amongst other matters putteth me in mind to saie what followed vpon the death of that man, so intirelie beloued of the king: who (not ceasing to call his death to remembrance, and waiting opportunitie to reuenge the same) did in the one and twentith yeare of his reigne, falling in the yeare of our redemption one thousand three hundred foure score and seuentéene, giue licence to sir John Bussie, to accuse Thomas Arundell the archbishop of Canturburie, and sometime chancellor to this king Richard the second of threefold treason: whereof the third article was, that by the said traitorous vsurping (meaning of the duke of Glocester, of Richard earle of Arundell, and other noble men, vsurping the gouernement of the realme, by a commission granted vnto them therefore by the said archbishop, then chancellor) sir Simon Burleie, and sir James Barnes knights, faithfull men vnto the king, were traitorouslie murthered and put to death. Wherevpon the king, although for a time he fullie granted not that the motions of sir John Bussie tooke place, yet afterward in reuenge of the death of sir Simon and others his frends, the archbishop was banished, the duke of Glocester murthered, the earle of Arundell beheaded, and the two Cobhams in like sort forbidden and exiled England. So hard it is for the greatest power of the nobilitie to contend with their prince, who being the god of the earth, and carieng the sword, can and will either by force, policie or authoritie iustlie with the same distribute the reward of rebellion.

This sir Simon died without issue, leaning his brother sir Roger Burleie his heire, of which sir Roger these persons now liuing are descended. Sir Thomas Bromleie knight lord chancellor of England, Philip Howard earle of Arundell, Edward de Uære erle of Oxford, and John Thin of Longleat in Wiltshire esquier, the sonne and heire of sir John Thin of Longleat knight, the sonne and heire of Thomas Boteuile (otherwise surnamed Thin) and of Margaret his wife, the daughter of Thomas Einus esquier and of Ioise his wife, the daughter of John Gatacre esquire and of Ioise his wife, the daughter of sir John Burleie knight, sonne vnto this sir Roger Burleie knight (in the chronicles and bookes of the law called Beuerlæ) brother to this sir Simon Burleie, as is before said. To which also may be added, as descended from this sir Roger Burleie these worshipfull persons now liuing, that is to saie Corbet of Lee, Ploiden of Ploiden hall, Mitton of Shropshire, Littleton, Einus, and others; whereof I haue not as yet the full and true descents, and therefore cannot lineallie conueie them, as I haue done some of the others before recited.

Sir John Denros knight, of diuerse chronicles diuerslie named (for by some he is called Deuereux, by some de Euros, and by others de Euers) was constable of Douer castle and warden of the cinque ports, being sometime appointed to the custodie of Calis, as appeareth by Walsingham in these words, pag. 243. Anno dominicæ incarnationis 1380, qui est annus 3 Rich. 2, hoc tempore circa festum natalis Domini redijt à Calisia dominus Gulielmus de Monteacuto comes Sarum, qui annualem custodiam egerat illius villæ, cui subrogatur dominus Iohannes Enros miles, ab antiquo xercitatus in armis. After which, for his worthinesse, he was made constable of Douer castell, & warden of the cinque Sir John Denros.

ports, which office he held in the twelfe yeare of Richard the second in Michaelmas terme, falling in the yeare of our redemption one thousand three hundred eightie and eight, as appeareth in the records of Pellis exitus of that terme; where mention is made that the king gaue him yearelie during his life, to be paid at Michaelmas and Easter, foure score and eight pounds six shillings and eight pence out of the exchequer for the sustentation of himselfe, of a chapleine, of seruitors, of wardens, and one carpentar, in the same castell of Douer; which office of warden of the cinque ports he likewise held in the fourteenth yeare of Richard the second, being the yeare of Christ one thousand three hundred eightie and nine. To this man (as some haue) was Gefferie Clinton esquier lieutenant. Besides which office of the wardenship of the ports, he was the kings steward, and possessed both those offices at the time of his death, which suddenlie fell vpon him after the manner of an apoplexie in the feast of S. Peters chaire: to whom (as hath Walsingham) Thomas Persie, brother to Henrie earle of Northumberland, and vicechamberleine succeeded in the office of steward; and John Beaumont, by some (but not rightlie) called Thomas, obteined the honor to be warden of the cinque ports.

John de Beaumont. John de Beaumont was constable of Douer castell, and warden of the cinque ports, in the sixteenth, seuentéenth, eightéenth, & nineteenth of the deposed king Richard the second.

Duke Edmund. Edmund duke of Aumerle and Yorke was constable of Douer castell and warden of the cinque ports, in the one and twentith yeare of king Richard the second, which office it séemed that he continued all the time of the gouernement of the same king Richard, vntill his deposition by Henrie the fourth, who comming to the crowne, not onelie deposed the king, but also remoued this duke of Yorke from the wardenship of the ports and Douer castell, placing sir Thomas Erpingham therein, as some haue. In which yeare of the one and twentith of that king, Arnold Sauage knight was lieutenant of the castell to this Edmund duke of Yorke, of whome is more spoken in my discourse of the dukes of England, page, 1231.

Sir Thomas Erpingham. Sir Thomas Erpingham knight was constable of Douer castell, in the third yeare of the reigne of king Henrie the fourth, falling in the yeare of Christ one thousand foure hundred and two: in which office he continued vntill the tenth yeare of the same king, being the yeare of Christ one thousand foure hundred and nine, who amongst others (as hath Walsingham) was one, before whome king Richard the second, in the three and twentith yeare of his reigne, being the yeare of Christ one thousand three hundred ninetie and nine, resigned his kingdome, and released his subiects of their oth of obedience vnto him.

Prince Henrie. Henrie (eldest sonne to king Henrie the fourth, being prince of Wales, duke of Cornewall and erle of Chester) was constable of Douer castell, and warden of the cinque ports, in the twelfe yeare of the reigne of king Henrie his father. Of this Henrie prince of Wales I néed not speake anie more, bicause he was after king of England, by the name of Henrie the fift.

John Beaufort. John Beaufort, marquesse Dorset, whome some appoint to be constable of Douer castell, in the reigne of king Henrie the fourth: which John I suppose for this time succeeded Henrie prince of Wales.

Thomas erle of Arundell. Thomas erle of Arundell was constable of Douer castell, & warden of the cinque ports, in the second and third of the most valiant king Henrie the fift. This man being at the same time also treasuror of England, occasioned me to sale more of him in my discourse of the lord treasurors of England, pag. 1250, whereunto I do refer thee.

Humfreie duke of Glocester was constable of Douer castell, and lord warden of the cinque ports, in the first yeare of king Henrie the first, then being the yeare of our redemption one thousand foure hundred twentie and two: which office he continued in the two and twentith yeare of the after deposed king Henrie the first, falling in the yeare of Christ one thousand foure hundred fortie and foure. Of this man is more spoken in my protectors of England, pag. 1078, & in my discourse of the dukes of England, pag. 1233. Beside which that is there set downe, I thinke it not amisse in this place to recite somewhat of him. Humfreie duke of Glocester

This duke, in the seauenth yeare of king Henrie the fift, being the yeare of our redemption one thousand foure hundred and nineténe, accompanied with the earle Marshall, and a goodlie troope of other men, was by the king being in the wars of France, sent to laie siege to the towne and castell of Yuorie, which the duke (after manie assaults) tooke by force, but the castell thereof was not yéelded vntill the thirtéenth date of Maie following: shortlie after which he also tooke the towne of saint Germans. About the feast of Simon and Jude, in the fourth yeare of king Henrie the first, falling in the yeare of Christ one thousand foure hundred twentie and fiue, there arose grieuous contention betwéene this duke protector of England, and Henrie Beaufort his vncle bishop of Winchester; whereby great force was assembled one both parts. But that dissention was afterward somewhat appeased, by the meanes of the prince of Portingall, who rode eight times in one daie betwéene the armies of these two great persons.

Sir James Fines. Sir James Fines knight, lord Saie, the sonne of sir William Fines, was chamberleine to the king, constable of Douer castell, and warden of the cinque ports, in the six and twentith and seuen and twentith of king Henrie the first: of whome I haue more liberallie discoursed in the treasurors of England, as may appeare, pag. 1251, and of whome I will also further hereafter intreat in the edition of my other trauels.

Humfreie duke of Buckingham. Humfreie duke of Buckingham was constable of Douer castell in the seauen and twentith yeare of the reigne of king Henrie the first, being in the yeare of our redemption one thousand foure hundred and nineténe, which office he continued in the seauen and thirtith of the reigne of the same king; further holding the same office (as I for this time suppose) vntill his owne death, which happened in the eight and thirtith yeare of that king Henrie the first, being the yeare of Christ one thousand foure hundred and sixtie, or thereabouts; of whom is more spoken in my discourse of the constables of England, pag. 868.

Richard Neuill. Richard Neuill earle of Warwike and Salisburie lord Aburgauennie, great chamberlaine of England, and deputie of Calis, was constable of Douer castell, and warden of the cinque ports, in the first yeare of the reigne of king Edward the fourth, being the yeare of our redemption one thousand fours hundred three score and one: of whome I will speake somewhat, before that he came to be aduanced vnto this honorable place of warden of the cinque ports. This earle, taking part against the king, followed the faction of the familie of Yorke against the house of Lancaster; and in the three and thirtith yeare of the reigne of king Henrie the first, on the twentith daie of Maie, in the yeare of our redemption one thousand foure hundred fiftie and fiue, lieng at Watford or Wadeford beside S. Al-

bons

bons, did come to the part of Richard duke of Yorke, who with his companie pitched his campe in Keie-field besides saint Albons; at what time the king fixed his banner and power in a place called Gollow, sometime called Standforth in saint Peters street in saint Albons. Whereupon a battell being had, the king was taken, to whome the duke of Yorke, this earle of Warwike and diuerse other came, submitted themselues, craued pardon, and went with the king to London, where the king and this earle were lodged in the bishops palace. Shortlie after which, a parlement began the ninth daie of June, & the said earle was made capteine of Calis, who after he had sometime remained there, he left the same; and on the seuentæenth daie of Februarie, in the yeare of our Lord one thousand foure hundred fiftie and seuen, being the six and thirtith yeare of the reigne of king Henrie the sixt, came from Calis to London with a great band of men, all attired in red iackets with white ragged staues vpon them, and toke vp his lodging at the Grey friers. This doone, the king and quæne comming to London on the seuentæenth daie of March following, there was on the fiue and twentith daie of March, in the yeare of our saluation one thousand foure hundred fiftie & eight, a feined reconciliation betweene the king, the quæne, and the duke of Yorke, this erle of Warwike, and others; who at a generall procession made in S. Paules church in London were thus placed to go in the same procession. First the king in his roiall habit with his crown kept the state, before whom went hand in hand the duke of Summerset, and the earle of Salisburie, the duke of Excester, and this earle of Warwike, and so one of one faction, and another of the other sort. And behind the king, the duke of Yorke led the quæne, whome the other states and companie followed orderlie.

But these hot coles of dissention for a time thus coldlie couered with cinders, did in the end breake forth againe. For shortlie after this, in the same yere of our Lord one thousand foure hundred fiftie and eight, in the seuen and thirtith yeare of the reigne of Henrie the sixt, when the king and quæne were lodged at Westminster, there did on the ninth daie of Nouember a heauie quarrell arise betweene this earle of Warwike, and such as were of the kings house, growing to such malicious furie, as that they would haue taken awaie the life of the earle, who hardlie escaped their hands to his barge. But hauing so recouered himselfe out of danger, he sailed to his charge of Calis. Then not being there suffered fullie to settle (for what will not malice and desire of reuenge seeke to doo in prosecuting the effect of his intent) the duke of Summerset, by the quænes persuasion, and the kings authoritie, which was alwaies vsed as it pleased the stronger part, was aduanced vnto the gouernment of Calis, and a priuie seale directed to this erle of Warwike to giue place vnto him. But the earle, whose valiant mind could neuer stoope to his enimie, nor brooke anie iniurie by his superior, no not by his king, refused the same as well for that the duke was then his enimie, and placed by that faction which he hated; as for that the erle was appointed to that place by parlement; which caused him to thinke that he ought not to be remoued by anie other authoritie but such as came from a parlement: whereupon by force and will he kept the same office. After which, in the moneth of October, in the eight and thirtith yeare of the reigne of king Henrie the sixt, and in the yeare of Christ one thousand foure hundred fiftie & nine, comming from Calis, he ioined with the duke of Yorke, and with the earle of Salisburie, who all togither directed a letter vnder their hands to the king from Ludlow, dated the tenth daie of October, excusing them of all their misdemeanors. But they not finding things to succeed to their minds, seuered themselues, and this earle of Warwike returned to Calis, where he still remained: but yet not in such safetie for himselfe and his liuing as he desired. Who after that he had thus presumptuouslie lifted vp his hand against our annointed king (an action of plaine rebellion, with what shadow soeuer he and his complices couered the same) was shortlie after, amongst others, at a parlement holden the same yeare attainted of high treason: wherby his liuings being taken from him, he prepared for preie and spoile. For the obteining whereof he rigged a great nauie, kept the narrow seas, fought with the Spaniards, killed manie of them, and toke their great vessels, with one carricke of Jeane, by which he obteined great riches. Whereupon in the yeare of Grace a thousand foure hundred and sixtie, being the nine and thirtith and last yeare of the deposed Henrie the sixt, the duke of Excester admerall was sent with a great nauie to distresse this earle of Warwike; but he durst not set vpon the earle now returning from Ireland, where he had bin to haue conference with the duke of Yorke. These things doone, and king Henrie the sixt deposed by king Edward the fourth, the same king Edward, the seuenth of Maie, in the first yere of his reigne, being in the yeare of our redemption 1461, made this earle (as is before said) constable of Douer castell: who being thus honored with the same, did (on the tenth daie of Maie following) constitute Otwell Worslie his lieutenant of Douer castell, as appeareth by a deed which I haue abridged in this sort.

The grant whereby Otwell Worslie is made lieutenant of Douer castell by Richard erle of Warwike.

Richardus comes de Warwike, dominus de Burgauenni, magnus camerarius Angliæ, capitaneus villæ & castri de Calis ac marchiarum circumuicinarum locum tenens, necnon constabularius castri Douorensis, custos & admerallus quinque portuum: omnibus, &c. Cùm nuper christianissimus princeps ac metuendissimus dominus noster Edwardus, Dei gratia rex Angliæ & Franciæ quartus, per litteras suas patentes datas septimo die Maij, anno regni sui primo Angliæ, prout in eisdem litteris, &c. Nos, &c: de fidelitate, &c: dilecti & fidelis seruientis nostri Otwelli Worsley armigeri ad plenum informati, &c: prædictum Otwellum locum tenentem nostrum castri prædicti, ac portuum prædictorum substituimus, &c. Datum decimo die Maij prædicti, anno prædicti domini regis Edwardi quarti primo.

After which, about foure yeares, to wit, in the fift yeare of the reigne of king Edward the fourth, this earle of Warwike did by the like grant dated the first daie of Julie, being the fift yere of the reigne of king Edward the fourth, substitute John Guilford knight his lieutenant of Douer castell and the cinque ports. Thus much of this earle for this time, of whome I will make a full discourse hereafter, not hauing leisure now to deliuer both what I know, and haue collected touching him: onlie at this time more setting downe, that he married Anne sister and heire to Henrie Beauchamp duke of Warwike: by whome he had issue two daughters, Isabell married to George Plantagenet duke of Clarence; and Anne married first to Edward prince of Wales sonne to king Henrie the first: after whose death she was married vnto Richard Plantagenet duke of Glocester, after king, by the name of Richard the third.

William Fitzallen earle of Arundell, the son William Fitzallen, of John earle of Arundell, and of Elenor the daughter of sir John Berkleie knight, was constable of Douer castell and warden of the cinque ports, in the ninetæenth, twentith, and two and twentith yeare of the reigne of king Edward the fourth; but after being displaced, he left the same to another.

Richard duke of Glocester. Richard duke of Glocester vncle vnto king Edward the fift, was constable of Douer castell and warden of the cinque ports, in the first and last yere of the reigne of the same yong but neuer crowned king Edward the fift. This Richard was after king of England, by the name of king Richard the third, of whome I haue spoken more in my discourse of the constables of England, pag. 869, and of the protectors, pag. 1080.

Henrie duke of Buckingham. Henrie duke of Buckingham constable of England, was also constable of Douer castell, and warden of the cinque ports, after that the duke of Glocester had atteined the crowne; which office he kept vntill the yere of Christ one thousand foure hundred foure score and thre, in which he was beheaded in the first yeare of the same king Richard the third. Of this man I haue spoken more liberallie in my treatise of the constables of England, set downe before, pag. 874.

William earle of Arundell. William earle of Arundell, as I gather the second time made constable of Douer castell, and warden of the cinque ports, about the first of king Henrie the seuenth, after that the same king had slaine king Richard the third at Bolworth field. Which William married Jone the daughter of Richard Neuill earle of Salisburie, by whome he had amongst manie other children, Thomas earle of Arundell, and Jone maried to George Neuill lord Aburgauennie.

Henrie prince of Wales. Henrie prince of Wales, duke of Yorke, and marshall (as some saie) of England, and the kings lieutenant in Ireland, being second sonne to king Henrie the seuenth, was constable of Douer castle, and warden of the cinque ports, about the eleuenth yeare of king Henrie the seuenth: of whome, being after king of England by the name of king Henrie the eight, we meane not here to speake anie more.

Arthur Plantagenet. Arthur Plantagenet, bastard sonne to king Edward the fourth, was (as I haue read) made constable of Douer castell, and warden of the cinque ports in the time of king Henrie the eight, and was at Bridewell in the right of his wife the ladie Elisabeth daughter & heire to John Greie vicount Lisle, created vicount Lisle, in the fiftæenth yeare of the same king, being the yeare of Christ, one thousand fiue hundred twentie and thre. Which doone, in the thre and twentith yeare of the same king, he attended on the king, when he met the French king betwæne Bullogne and Calis. Then in the foure and twentith of king Henrie the eight, in the yeare of our Lord one thousand fiue hundred thirtie and thre, he serued as pantler, of right belonging vnto him, when the ladie Anne Bullen was crowned. Which Arthur being committed to the Tower for matters of treason, where he a long time remained, being after cleared and to beset at libertie, conceiued such great ioie thereof, that he died presentlie thereupon in March, in the yeare of Christ one thousand fiue hundred fortie and one, being the thre and thirtith of king Henrie the eight. He married as before is said, and died without issue.

Sir Edward Poinings. Sir Edward Poinings knight, the sonne of Robert Poinings was made constable of Douer castell, and warden of the cinque ports, about the seuentæenth yeare of the reigne of king Henrie the seuenth, falling in the yeare of Christ one thousand fiue hundred and one; which office he continued, vntill the fiftæenth yeare of king Henrie the eight, falling about the yeare of Christ one thousand fiue hundred twentie and thre. During which his constableship of Douer castell, he had two lieutenants, whereof the first was Rafe Tuckeie of Bere esquier: after whose deth succeeded John Cowpeldike esquire. But before this sir Edward Poinings was constable of Douer, he was in the yere of Christ one thousand foure hundred foure score and fouretæne, about the tenth yeare of king Henrie the seuenth, made capteine, or (as some haue) deputie of Ireland, and sent with Henrie Deane chancellor of that Iland, amongst the Irish, to purge the realme of such as fauoured Parkin Warbecke; but when he could not bring things to passe there as he would, he caused the earle of Kildare, whom he suspected to be an hinderance vnto his purpose, to be brought into England, but the earle purging himselfe was returned into Ireland and made deputie.

After this, in the 12 yere of Henrie the seuenth, in the yeare of Christ 1497, he was with the earle of Kent John Lord Cobham, and sir Richard Guilford at Blackeheath field, where James lord Audlie, and the Blacke Smith were ouerthrowne. Next, when king Henrie the seuenth died, in the yeare of Christ one thousand fiue hundred and nine, he was (when K. Henrie the eight came to the crowne) made one of the priuie councell. Then in the yeare of Christ one thousand fiue hundred and ten, being the second yeare of king Henrie the eight; this sir Edward Poinings, being knight of the garter, and controllor of the kings house, was as capteine generall sent with one thousand and fiue hundred archers to helpe Margaret duches of Sauoie, and regent of the low countries, against such as molested hir gouernment. Which ladie receiued him with great honor, and so they ioined themselues with hir armie; which after manie other exploits performed, came at length to a towne called Strawlie, of great defense, and double ditched, where they planted their siege: at what time sir Edward Poinings, who euer was in the fore-ward with his armie, caused such spedie trenches and passages to be made, that within thre daies after the towne was surrendered, and sir Edward Poinings with the admerall of Flanders and others entered the same. This doone, they besieged Uenlow, & when the English were quiet, and that sir Edward Poinings was at dinner with monsieur de Romie, they of Uenlow issued out, set vpon the English, hurt some, and tooke two prisoners; whome after the English rescued, & got the victorie of their enimies. This doone, they left the siege of Uenlow, and sir Edward Poinings departed to the court of Burgognie, where he was honorablie interteined, and richlie rewarded. Wherewith he passed into England, not hauing lost one hundred men in all that iourneie.

But within thre yeares after, which was in the yeare of Christ one thousand fiue hundred and thirtæne, being the fift yeare of king Henrie the eight, this noble knight went with the king to the warres of France, commonlie called the winning of Turwine & Turneie: at what time in the battell there, sir Edward Poinings with six hundred men kept on the kings right hand, as the king went out of Calis to the siege of Turwine: and when Turneie was taken, this knight was made the kings lieutenant of that towne, hauing the custodie thereof committed vnto him; who valiantlie kept it in good order and iustice. After this, in the twelfe yeare of king Henrie the eight, he attended vpon the king of England, meeting the French king at Ard. Shortlie after which, he returned into England, & died in the Lent following, in the yeare of Christ one thousand fiue hundred twentie and one, suspected to be poisoned poiſoned in the banket at Ard. Who in his life time hauing two hundred pounds penſion yearelie of the emperor, going out of the houſe of Burgognie, began to build a moſt ſtatelie houſe at Oſtenhanger, now commonlie called Weſtenhanger; which being by him left vnperfected, did after come to the hands of hir maieſtie, who gaue the cuſtodie thereof to ſir Thomas Sackeuill lord Buckhurſt; and is now in poſſeſſion of Thomas Smith of London eſquier, cuſtomer of the ſame citie: whoſe wealth in ſhort time hath raiſed him to great reuenues of lands in the countie of Kent, and likewiſe elſwhere. This ſir Edward Poinings did marie Iſabell the daughter of ſir John Scot of Kent knight, by whome he had iſſue.

Henrie Fitzroie.

Henrie Fitzroie earle of Richmond, & duke Sommerſet, the baſtard ſonne of king Henrie the eight, (by the ladie Tailboiſe) in the abſence of this ſir Edward Poinings, was conſtituted conſtable of Douer caſtell, and warden of the cinque ports; of whom I haue ſpoken more in my diſcourſe of the dukes of England, pag. 1237.

Sir Edward Guilford.

Sir Edward Guilford knight (the eldeſt ſonne of ſir Richard Guilford knight, & brother to ſir Henrie Guilford knight of the noble order of the garter, controllor of the houſe, and one of the priuie councell to king Henrie the eight) was conſtable of Douer caſtell, and warden of the cinque ports; of whome I am to intreat, after that I haue ſet downe this note of his father ſir Richard Guilford: who aſſiſting king Henrie the ſeuenth in the atteining of the crowne, was after controllor of the houſe, and one of the priuie councell to the ſaid king Henrie the ſeuenth. Which ſir Richard did after take his iourneie into the Holie land, where he died, and was buried beſides the temple or church of our ſauior in Ieruſalem; of whom I thought good not to omit this ſpeach, becauſe that he was father to three ſuch worthie gentlemen; as were ſir Edward, ſir Henrie, and George Guilford, of all which we onelie meane to intreat.

This ſir Edward Guilford conſtable of Douer caſtell, which office he continued vntill the fiue and twentith yeare of the reigne of king Henrie the eight, falling in the yeare of our redemption one thouſand fiue hundred thirtie and three, which ſir Edward dwelling at Halden in the countie of Kent, in the parith of Rowlenden, was alſo one of the priuie councell to king Henrie the eight, as was alſo his brother ſir Henrie Guilford, as is before touched. This ſir Edward, being marſhall of Calis, did with fiftie men of armes richlie beſeene, and one hundred archers on horſſebacke, receiue the emperor Charles the fift at the Turne pike, in the lordſhip of Marke, and brought him to Calis, on the fiue and twentith of Maie, and the fourteenth yeare of king Henrie the eight, being the yeare of our redemption, one thouſand fiue hundred twentie and two. After, in the ſame ſummer, whileſt the wars were vehementlie purſued betweene the Engliſh and French on both parts; the capteine of Bullogne called Faiet, ſent ſcoffing letters to the garriſon of Calis, affirming that if the Caliſians would iſſue out, he would incounter them halfe waie with foure thouſand men. Whereupon this ſir Edward Guilford as yet marſhall of Calis, whome the capteine of Bullogne called the firebrand, becauſe it was his cogniſance, ſet forth from Calis the 11 daie of June, with one thouſand two hundred, ſending a purſeuant to the capteine of Bullogne, to aſcerteine him that he was come with his firebrand, and willing him to keepe promiſe, which the officer did accordinglie: but monſieur the French bragger came not. Whereupon ſir Edward Guilford came to Morgiſon, where he yet a while remained, expecting the comming of the capteine of Bullogne.

But when he ſaw that Faiet failed his word, he ſet fire on Morgiſon, burnt the villages about them, forraged the countrie, and returned with a preie of beaſts and other pillages. The next daie following, this ſir Edward deliuered a priſoner freelie without ranſome, on condition that he ſhould tell the capteine of Bullogne that he had beene at Morgiſon with his firebrand: which meſſage the priſoner did accordinglie; in recompenſe wherof, the capteine of Bullogne brake his head. But ſir Edward not contented with this, but ſtill looking for monſieur Faiet, did on the fiue and twentith of June, ioine with ſir William Sands treaſuror: and they togither hauing a troope of one thouſand & foure hundred men, iſſued out of Calis, went to the French pale, ſet fire on Whitſandbaie, and tooke the church, whervnto the people were fled, and caried manie priſoners to Calis. Againe, in the ſame yeare, about the two and twentith daie of Auguſt, in the battell which the lord admerall led into France, ſir Edward Guilford was appointed capteine of the horſſemen, by whome the currers and bewers of the countrie were placed and named. Then in the yeare following, in the end of Auguſt, in the fiftéenth yeare of king Henrie the eight, being the yeare of Chriſt one thouſand fiue hundred twentie and three, this ſir Edward was againe appointed to aſſiſt Charles Brandon duke of Suffolke, going with an armie roiall to make war in France: at what time alſo, as he had beene before in the armie of the admerall, ſo was he now againe made capteine of the horſſemen, ſtill continuing the office of marſhall of Calis. During the continuance of which wars vnder the duke of Suffolke, he with the campe about the thirteenth daie of Nouember, remoued two miles from the caſtell of Bowhen, which was iudged impregnable: at what time there was a great froſt which continued long.

Notwithſtanding which, ſir Edward Guilford capteine of the horſemen, viewed the caſtle of Bowhen or Boughan, which he ſuppoſed might be woone; notwithſtanding that the caſtell was inuironed with mariſhes, which by our mens iudgements made it inuincible. But ſir Edward perceiuing the froſt ſo ſtrong, ſaid that they might well beſiege it. Wherupon obteining licence of the duke therfore, he ſet forth with the ordinance ouer the marith, which being eſpied by ſuch as were in the caſtell, they were greatlie diſmaid. At length ſir Edward Guilford diſcharging three great ſhot againſt them, the caſtillians requited them with the like. After, as the Engliſh gunners were preparing to the batterie, the capteine perceiuing that his caſtell could not beare it out, yéelded the ſame to the behoofe of the emperor and the king of England. Thus leauing this knight (who had for his lieutenant of Douer caſtell, after the death of Cowpledike, Richard Dæring eſquire) continuallie increſing his fame in wars, and his honour in peace, with great fauour of the prince for his worthie deſerts. We ſaie that he married Elenor, the daughter of Thomas Weſt lord Laware, by whome he had iſſue one onelie daughter and heire, married to John Sutton of Dudleie after duke of Northumberland: which noble knight ſir Edward Guilford died and was buried at Halden before named.

George Bullen.

George Bullen knight, lord Rochford, the ſonne of Thomas Bullen earle of Wiltſhire, was conſtable of Douer caſtell, and warden of the cinque ports, in the ſix & twentith yere of king Henrie the eight, being the yeare of our redemption one thouſand fiue hundred fiue and thirtie, in which office he continued vntill the foure and thirtith yeare of the reigne of the same king, falling in the yeare of our Lord one thousand fiue hundred fortie and two, hauing for his lieutenant of Douer castell the forenamed Richard Dæring.

ſame

Thomas Cheineie. Thomas Cheineie knight, after the death of the lord Rochford, was in the foure and thirtith yeare of king Henrie the eight made constable of Douer castell, and warden of the cinque ports: which office he continued in some part of the time of foure princes, longer (as far as my memorie serueth) than anie of his predecessors had done before him. For he held the same in the time of king Henrie the eight, king Edward the first, quéene Marie, and some small time in the begining of the reigne of quéene Elisabeth, in whose first yeare by death he left the same; hauing for his lieutenants the foresaid Richard Dæring and William Cripse esquire. And yet this sir Thomas Cheineie, possessing that office about the space of eightéene yeares, did not inioie it so long as the worthie lord Cobham his successor hath possessed it. For the same lord Cobham (as after shall appeare) hath honorablie inioied the same by these eight and twentie yeares. But passing ouer that, we are here to talke of sir Thomas Cheineie: who being a toward yong gentleman, and full of courage, but not yet knighted, obteined of the king in the first yeare of Henrie the eight, in the yeare of Christ one thousand fiue hundred and foureteéne, to passe ouer with the duke of Suffolke and others into France, to answer a iusts proclamed at Paris, and challenged by Francis duke de Valois, at the coronation of Marie quéene of France, daughter of king Henrie the seuenth, and wife to Lewis the twelfe of that name: at what time this sir Thomas Cheineie behaued himselfe right valiantlie. Who being after a knight, and the kings ambassador in France, did in the foureteenth yeare of king Henrie the eight, being the yeare of Christ one thousand fiue hundred twentie and two, send letters to the king his maister being at Calis with the emperor: in which were conteined, that sir Thomas Cheineie had moued the French king to peace with the emperor, and restitution of the Englishmens goods, which he had wrongfullie deteined and spoiled: but the French king denied it. At length sir Thomas Cheineie with Clarenceaux, who denounced war against the French king, hauing a safe conduct from the French, departed, and came to Bullogne, where he was staied, vntill the ambassador of France which had laien at Calis, were clerelie deliuered out of Calis.

Then in the eightéenth yeare of king Henrie the eight, this sir Thomas Cheineie being of the kings priuie councell, was sent by the king his maister to the French king as an ambassador congratulatorie, in that the king of England greatlie reioised at the libertie of the French king, & the end made betwixt him & the emperor, who had taken the French king at the battell of Pauie. After which, in the one & thirtith yeare of the same Henrie, being the yeare of Christ one thousand fiue hundred thirtie and nine, he in the Christmasse time receiued at Deale vpon the Downs the ladie Anne of Cleue landed in England to be maried to king Henrie the eight, from whense this lord warden of the cinque ports, with diuerse dukes and ladies, brought hir to Douer castell, where she for a time did rest hir selfe. Beside which in the yeare of Christ one thousand fiue hundred fortie and foure, he with the earle of Surreie, sonne and heire to the duke of Northfolke, did take a towne in the dominion of France called saint Requiers.

Then in the yeare of Christ one thousand fiue hundred fortie and nine, being the third yeare of king Edward the first, he amongst others of the councell, (for now he was one of that number, and treasuror of the household) set his hand vnto a letter directed to the maior and citizens, wherein certeine of the nobilitie praied their aid against the duke of Summerset protector of the realme; which done, in the first yere of the said king, being the yeare of Christ one thousand fiue hundred fiftie and two, this sir Thomas Cheineie, in a muster of horssemen before the king at Grenewich of the nobilitie, did shew himselfe equall in number of horsse with the most of them, hauing of his retinue a hundred persons well horssed vnder his banner of the rose, with the sun beames. But king Edward not liuing long after, this lord warden did in the seuenth and last yeare of the same king, in the yeare of Christ one thousand fiue hundred fiftie and three, among others of the councell set his hand to a letter sent vnto quéene Marie, wherein quéene Jane was allowed quéene; and quéene Marie sister to king Edward reiected from the crowne. After which being in the Tower (with quéene Jane whome they had proclamed) and misliking of the successe of things which they had attempted, he with others sought to get out of the Tower, to consult in London with such others of the councell as were there assembled, but he could not haue anie passage from thense. Yet in the end quéene Marie preuailing, and he escaping without anie danger for that which he had done against hir, he did in the first yere of the reigne of the same quéene oppose himselfe against Wiat, and such as succoured that rebellion. Wherefore he not onlie sent defiance vnto the said Wiat, but also came to Rochester with his power against him, at what time he shewed himselfe a dutifull subiect vnto quéene Marie: notwithstanding all whatsoeuer before done by him against hir. He maried two Wiues, the first was Fridelwide, the daughter and one of the heires of Thomas Frowicke knight, chefe iustice: by whome he had issue John Cheineie (slaine at Mutterell, after that he had maried Margaret the daughter of George Neuil lord of Aburgauennie) Katharine married to Thomas Kempe knight, Francis married to Nicholas Cripse, the sonne of sir Henrie Cripse knight and Anne married to sir John Perot knight. His second wife was the daughter and heire of Broughton knight, by whome he had issue Henrie, after in the fourteenth yeare of the quéene now liuing, falling in the yeare of Christ one thousand fiue hundred seauentie and one, called by writ to be one of the barons of the parlement house, by the name of the lord Cheineie of Tuddington in Bedfordshire. This worthie knight sir Thomas Cheineie died in the first yeare of the reigne of the noble quéene Elisabeth, and was buried at Minster in the Ile of Sheppeie, whereof he was the greatest lord.

Sir William Brooke knight, lord Cobham, was made constable of Douer castell, warden of the cinque ports, and chancellor of the same, after the death of sir Thomas Cheineie, in the first yeare of the quénes reigne that now is; being the yeare of Christ one thousand fiue hundred fiftie and nine: of whom because I haue spoken more liberallie in my discourse of the lord Cobhams of Cobham, I will not here saie anie thing but this; that he hauing possessed this place by the space of eight and twentie yeares, being much longer time than anie of his predecessors, hath (in executing that office) caried himselfe with such honor and loue, that he worthilie deserueth, and his countrie hopeth he shall inioie the same manie following yeares, to his owne honor, and his countries benefit: whome I will here leaue in his princes fauor, and set end to all my discourses inserted in the new augmented chronicles of Holinshed, with the succession of the lord wardens of the cinque ports. Sir William Brooke.

¶ In

The note of Reynold Scot esquier concerning Douer hauen.

¶ In this yeare one thousand fiue hundred eightie and six, certeine of the lords of hir maiesties most honourable priuie councell made an appointment to haue met at Douer, to suruete a notable pece of worke there latelie performed about the hauen, to the benefit of the whole land. Howbeit the said lords, by means of other accidents of importance, staid at the court, and went not that iourneie. Neuertheleſſe the lord Cobham, lord warden of the cinque ports, one of hir maiesties priuie councell, repairing thither (accompanied with diuerse knights and gentlemen of great worship) did take the view both of the worke finished, and also conferred about the buſineſſe then in hand. Now for so much as that which is alreadie done, is a perfect and an absolute worke, to the perpetuall maintnance of a hauen in that place, being such a monument as is hardlie to be found written in anie record, it might seme absurd that no mention thereof should be made in this chronicle: and that the cost and buſineſſe thereabouts imploied hath not bene vnneceſſarie, may appeare by the reasons insuing.

Considerations whie the building of Douer hauen is here recorded.

First, Douer hath bene euer reputed the keie and locke (as Matthæus Parisiensis reporteth) or (as rather he should haue said) the verie doore and entrance into the realme of England, either for frend or fo, and also the readie passage vnto all nations, but especiallie into France, from whense it is not distant aboue thirtie English miles, and is commonlie passed in fiue or six houres at the most, and in a prosperous wind within halfe the time. Secondlie, it standeth in the most conuenient place of all this land to offend the enimie, and to defend either domesticall or forren frend. Thirdlie, a meane harbor would be there (in the opinion of all skilfull mariners) more beneficiall and commodious for the nauigation of England, than an excellent hauen placed anie where else about the coast thereof. Fourthlie, all our passengers through the narrow seas being distressed by violence of weather, or by inconuenience of piracie, or else by force of the common enimie in the time of warre, might there haue present succor and refuge, and both speedie and easie passage thereinto, or otherwise be best rescued. Fiftlie, of late yeares, the considerations aforesaid haue moued some noble princes of this land, to bestow infinit treasure to gaine a harbourough or hauen in that place, to their great honor, fame, and commendation, to the wonderfull contentment of all their subiects, and for the good and benefit of all the neighbors adioining, and strangers passing these narrow seas. Finallie, it hath pleased our most noble quene Elisabeth to vndertake it, who in all good actions and neceſſarie workes, for the benefit of the realme, and commonwealth of England, hath bene so liberall, carefull, and prouident, as thereby hir glorie and renowme is spread ouer all the face of the earth, and reacheth vnto heauen, where the King of kings sitteth, and heareth the praises and praiers, not onelie of hir owne people, but of all christians liuing in hir behalfe, for whose good (it seemeth) she was brought forth and preserued in this world.

Douer the nerest place of England to France.

Douer the most conuenient place of England for a hauen.

Reasons whie a harbor at Douer would be so beneficial

A true commendation of quene Elisabeth.

Sir William Brooke.

And now (I saie) for so much as hir highneſſe hath at this present time taken order for the building of a new hauen in this place, and bountifullie imploied great summes of monie vpon the same (being begun with more probabilitie, iudgement, and circumspection, and accompanied with better succeſſe than euer anie of hir highneſſe predeceſſors haue heretofore had in this case, wherein the most difficult and dangerous worke is alreadie accomplished, so as there is now and euer hereafter will be a verie good hauen, except extreame negligence be vsed in maintaining the same) I thought it a most neceſſarie matter to be here recorded, to hir maiesties perpetuall fame, and partlie also to giue light & incouragement to hir succeſſors in the crowne of England, to attempt and vndertake, and the better to execute and accomplish the like famous enterprise. For actions of farre leſſe importance are made memorable by historiographers, as in euerie chronicle may appeare.

In this discourse I thought met to passe ouer the antiquitie of the towne and port of Douer, with the liberties thereof; which togither with the ruines and misfortunes of fire are to be found extant in the perambulation of Kent, written by William Lambard esquier. Of Douer castell somewhat might here be said, but for so much as maister Lambard hath so largelie discoursed thereupon in his booke, which is likelie to remaine of continuance, I will make bold with the reader to referre him thereunto; and onelie giue this note (to wit) that whereas he iustlie complaineth of the miserable ruines therof; it hath pleased hir maiestie (in respect of the neceſſarie maintenance of the same) to bestow more charge of late in reparing and reedifing of it; than hath bene spent thereabouts (as it seemeth) since the first building thereof, whether the same were done by Julius Cesar the Romane emperor, or by Aruiragus then king of the Britains (king Edward the fourth onelie excepted) who (as Iohn Rosse reporteth) did throughlie repare it, bestowing thereon 10000 pounds, insomuch as it is now reduced to be a pece of great force and importance, and verie beautifull to behold. Wherin the honorable disposition of the lord Burleie lord high treasuror of England is to be commended, who was a principall furtherer thereof, & whose forwardneſſe in all militarie affaires is had in admiration among all the beſt souldiours of England, although he himselfe an aged and a most graue councellor. And in these commendations if I should omit the praises of the honorable lord Cobham, lord warden of the cinque ports, and constable of the castle of Douer, &c: I should doo him great wrong. For by his prouidence and mediation, togither with the diligent trauell and industrie of Richard Barrie esquier, lieutenant of the said castell, that worke is accomplished, to the comfort and benefit of the whole realme. Within the wals whereof is now also raised such a mount at the north side thereof, as thereby the castell is double so strong as before. But omitting all other occasions and matters concerning Douer, I will now passe to my purpose.

In peramb Cant. tit. Douer.

Douer castell reedified by quene Elisabeth.

Edward the fourth bestowed 10000 pounds vpon reparations of Douer castell.

But yet, before I enter into these last works, I must giue you to vnderstand, that the verie situation of the place miniſtreth incouragement to the execution, and yeldeth great fauor and occasion to the attempt. For Douer cliffes stand to the sea north and east, the towne being placed at the foot of the northerne cliffes, the castle on the top of the easterne cliffes, called the Castell Kaie: so as there is a naturall baie, through the which from by north issueth a proper riuer entring into the same baie: and thense runneth through the hauen into the sea. In times past, vntill of late yeares, that onelie baie hath serued them for a rode, and at manie times in some sort hath stood the nauie (but especiallie the fisher botes) in good sted. For in a great northernlie and westernlie wind, the ships were driuen from the Downes and the foreland to repaire thither, where they might lie safelie vntill the wind blew great from by east or south, and then were they driuen to depart thense vnto the Camber at Rie (which then was a notable good rode, though now vtterlie decaied) or into the Isle of Wight. For in a sudden flaw or storme of wind at southeast, there hath bin seuen or eight ships broken all to peces in one daie vpon

The situation of Douer harbour.

A naturall rode for ships at Douer.

The hauen of Rie decaied, whereby more need of a harboure at Douer.

Ships lost for lacke of sufficient harbour at Douer.

The pent at Douer will maintaine a hauen there for euer.

the

The first benefit bestowed on Douer harbour.

the said cliffes. To relieue & amend the same harborough, and somwhat to mitigate the foresaid inconuenience, there was a round tower built by one John Clarke, priest, maister of the maison de Dieu, about the yere one thousand fiue hundred at the south west part of the said baie, which serued somewhat to defend the ships from the rage of the southwest wind, but especiallie to moore the ships which were tied thereunto. For manie great ringles were fastened to the same tower for that purpose, as it maie yet be seene, sith it standeth there at this houre. And hereby that part of the baie was made so pleasant, as euer after that corner hath beene named, and is at this daie called Little paradise. Neuertheless this was thought verie insufficient in respect of the place, for the safegard of such a multitude of ships as vsuallie laie for harbour in that rode. For besides all strange botes which commonlie repaired thither, it appeareth in the booke of Domesdaie, that Douer armed yearelie at his proper charges twentie vessels to the sea by the space of fiftéene daies, with one and twentie able men in ech ship.

Little paradise.

In the reigne of Edward the Confessor.

Now about the yeare of Christ one thousand fiue hundred fiftie and two, one sir John Thomson clarke parson of the parish of saint James in Douer, being a man ingenious, and séeing the conueniencie and possibilitie of a good hauen to be made in that place, consulted with the chiefe and best mariners of the towne. Among whom it was agréed, that humble suite should be made to the kings maiestie by the state of the towne, for his gratious fauor and aid toward the making of a good hauen there. And it was also by them all thought meet, that the said sir John Thomson should exhibit their petition to his highnesse: whereunto he agreed, and drew a plot, and prepared a supplication in the name and behalfe of the towne, conteining the necessarie causes and reasons, deuises and instructions, for the erection and building therof. But he told them he was poore, and therefore vnable of his owne proper charges to follow the suite. In which respect they collected among themselues, and deliuered vnto him foure pounds ten shillings, which he accepted, and forthwith repaired to the court; where he so demeaned himselfe, as he had present accesse to the king, who heard his suite with great fauor, and debated with him about the contents of his plot, and liked so well of his informations that he willed him to repaire home, & without delaie to returne to his presence accompanied with some of the best mariners or seamen of the towne, and so with commendations dismissed him for that time. When the maister of the towne vnderstood his graces pleasure, they immediatlie assembled themselues, and made choise of Edward Maie, Robert Justice, Richard Cowchie, and John Steward, as the fittest and skilfullest persons to vse conference, and to be imploied in that cause, being all mariners of good experience. These foure and the said sir John Thomson without further staie resorted to the court, with whom when the king had communed, he conceiued of the necessitie of a hauen to be there had, and of the probabilitie and likelihood of good successe in the enterprise to be performed according to their suggestion. And because his maiestie vnderstood the poore estate of the towne, he granted his gratious aid for the supplie of their want of monie, deliuering at that time out of his owne cofers vnto them the summe of fiue hundred pounds, wherewith he willed them to make a beginning of the worke. At which time he bestowed on the said sir John Thomson the maistership of the maison de Dieu of Douer, which was a hospitall, valued at one hundred and twentie pounds by the yeare: the custome and duke of the which house was (as the ancient townesmen informe me) to interteine and relieue souldiors, and others which came from beyond the seas, hurt or distressed, who were allowed some relefe there by the space of certeine daies gratis: which though I find not directlie set downe in record, yet dow I know assuredlie the same to haue béene put in execution, wherewith the verie name of the house is agréable, and as it were a credible witnesse. The king at that time also appointed the said sir John to be principall surueior of the works, and vnder him the other foure to be ouerséers of the same.

Sir John Thomson priest his supplication.

Fiue hundred pounds giuen by Henrie the eight towards a beginning of Douer works.

The maison de Dieu of Douer.

Surueiors and ouerséers.

Now am I to giue you to vnderstand, that the drift and deuise of the said sir John Thomson was to erect a huge wall (which he termed by the name of a pierre) from Arcliffe chapell being the southwest part of the baie directlie towards the east into the maine sea, about 131 rods in length: so as by that means the harborough was to be garded from the rage of all weather, comming from the north, northeast, northwest, and southwest, and so the entrance onelie at east southeast, wherinto when the ships were once brought, they might there lie safe in all weather, at the one side or the other. But the pierre was not finished by 530 foot so farre as the foundation thereof (which is called the Polehead) was laid, which foundation consisted of great rocks, brought from a place nére hand, called Yakcliffe, or the castell Raie & Folkstone. This pierre was begun on S. Annes daie 1533, and it was compiled of two rowes of maine posts, and great piles, of fiue or six & twentie foot long, set at each side close togither, which were let downe and put in certeine holes hewed in the great rocks, laid for that purpose: but some of those piles were shod with iron, and driuen into the maine rocke of chalke, with a great engine called a ram. These posts and piles were combined and held togither with iron bolts, and were filled with mightie stones of chalke and with beach and other earth: but the bottome consisted altogither of great rocks of stone, which if they had not béene brought thither by a speciall deuise, must néeds haue béene extreame chargeable, for manie of them were of twentie tun a péece, and few vnder.

Sir John Thomson discouered.

The Polehead.

Douer pierre when it was taken in hand, and whereof it consisteth.

The practise of this cariage is now common, but it was before that time rare & vnknowne in England, and inuented there by a poore simple man named John Young, who first with a nutthell, and after with an egshell, & lastlie with a small vessell, made proue what weight those things could raise & beare in the water; and hauing by that experiment made triall, or at least a probable coniecture, that stones of great weight might be raised and carried in the water by greater vessels: he discouered his experience to such as were officers in the worke, who presentlie put in practise and execution the same deuise, & making prouision of great & strong barrels and pipes of wood, caried them to Folkstone, and at low water fastened thereto with chaines such huge stones as laie on the shore nére the low water marke (where the quarrie or mine of those rocks is) so as when the flood or full sea came, the said vessels with the stones therto fastned rose vp & swam. And if the stone were of such quantitie as two or three emptie casks could not lift it vp, then did they ad a barrell or two more, which would not faile to do it: then did they drag with small botes the casks and stones thervnto tied, to the place where they were disposed to sinke them, and so the worke wherein consisted the greatest difficultie (in appearance) was with most ease & least charge accomplished. And for this deuise the said John Young had a yearelie stipend giuen vnto him by the king during his life. With these stones, as also by this meanes was the greatest worke done, and with great cost and labour these piles were filled vp.

A notable deuise to carrie great rocks by water.

Foure pence a daie.

The chalke and filling therof being brought from the north pierre, was conueied thither in a great bote called a Gaboth, which had nine kæles. There stands yet of the timberworke of the old pierre eightie foot in length, & ioines vpon that part of the pierre where stood a fort named the blacke bulworke.

Gaboth.

Now that which was done on that side, with the helpe of nature at the other two sides made an excellent rode or harborough for the time it continued, and had maintenance. The king for his part spared no charge, for he spent hereabouts (as I am credible informed) fiftie thousand pounds, nor yet did forbeare anie trauell which might further the worke. For in person he purposelie repaired thither diuerse and sundrie times, being distant from the court fiftie miles at the least; yea his highnesse had such care that it should be well performed, that no expert man in water works, either on this side, or beyond the seas, but (if it might be) he was brought thither, or at the least conferred withall. And during the time of all the worke, the kings coffers seemed to stand wide open. But alas, the kings care and charge, and the continuall trouble and trauell of officers was such about the worke present, that the prouision for the future maintenance thereof was vtterlie neglected. For the kings absence at his being at Bullongne, his sickenesse at his returne, and finallie his death meeting with the nonage of his son king Edward the first, made an end of all this worke: which being once in the state of decaie, there was no reparations nor further proceeding therein, till the time of queene Marie; in the beginning of whose reigne (by the space of two yeares) there was some rumbling thereabout. But the workmen and officers were not well paid; and after bad paiment, no paiment, & so all was giuen ouer. Sir Anthonie Aucher was treasurer in these works, and manie other inferior officers also there were, but especiallie of clerks.

The charge of the pierre.

The kings care for Douer pierre.

The kings repaire to Douer.

The cause of the decaie of the pierre.

Officers about the pierre.

But now I am to declare vnto you the lamentable ruine and decaie of this worke, before the end and finishing whereof there was brought along the coast from by southwest a marueilous quantitie of beach and bowlder stone, wherof there had beene neuer anie seene before in those parts of that coast, and a great quantitie thereof rested vpon the backe of the pierre, especiallie before the blacke bulworke, which (so long as it might lie there without further annoiance) was (in appearance) a singular helpe for the strength and preseruation of the said worke, but it fell out otherwise. For beside that, that an easterlie great wind would remoue and driue it from that coast, and consequentlie from the pierre, which then would lie naked as before, vntill the south and westerne wind turned it backe againe; the pierre through negligence decaieng, especiallie at the blacke bulworke (where the greatest abundance of beach vsuallie rested) it passed through the decaid places thereof in such measure, as in short time thereby grew a shelfe of beach from that point of the pier to the east part of the baie, butting to the Castell Rade: so as no entrance thereunto for anie ship remained. And the more that the furthest point of the pierre decaied and wared shorter, the nearer was the shelfe brought vnto the shore: insomuch as if the residue of the pierre had not bin preserued, that shelfe would soone haue beene brought to the verie towne, and so haue choked vp the baie, and bereft all possibilitie of euer hauing a harbor in that place.

Stone called bastr or bowlder choked vp Douer hauen.

The decaie of the pier grew now more and more, partlie (as is said) through want of prouidence and cost to be imploied thereupon, and sufficient prouision to maintaine the same: but especiallie through the disorder of the power sort of the townesmen, who dailie purloined timber, iron, and all that was anie thing worth, which they could pull or catch from the decaieng places of the pierre. And now by means of this shelfe) the hauen waxed worse than euer it was, insomuch as oftentimes, a bote that drew but foure foot of water could not enter into the mouth thereof, and sometime none at all: for the baie was altogither shut vp, so as the harborough was become a pent, out of the which nothing could passe out or in, saue the water that soked through the beach. But the riuer, which issueth out of the towne at a water gate standing at the northeast end of the said pent, in continuance of time would make an issue through some part of the same beach into the sea, sometime at one end, sometime at another, sometime verie shallow, and neuer verie deepe; which issue was alwaies their hauens mouth, vntill a contrarie wind did stop it vp againe, and then had they no entrance at all, vntill the riuer had made a new fret, or that they had digged a chanell through the beach, which manie times they were driuen to do.

Sometime no harborough at all at Douer.

The losse of this hauen, and the losse of Calis, which happened about one time, made such an alteration, or rather desolation in and of the towne, as was lamentable and wonderfull to behold. For of a braue, rich, and populous towne, it presentlie became a poore and desolat village, reteining onlie the name and liberties of the famous port of Douer. Neuertheless, the necessitie and expedience of a good hauen in that place did still remaine, and a conuenient meane also was left for the accomplishment therof, as it seemed to diuerse which were wise and of good experience: insomuch as that verie matter, which was supposed to be the destruction of the late harborough, should now become a principall help and furtherance to a new hauen of greater importance, and better securitie than euer it was before. For as you haue heard) Douer cliffes naturallie defend this baie from all tempests comming from northest and northwest; the pierre yet remaining gardeth it from the west and southwest winds; and the shelfe of beach crossing from the end thereof to the Castell Raie, had made such a close pent, as if anie ships could be conueied therinto, they might there rest in great safetie.

Douer hauen made desolat.

That beach which destroied the pierre helpeth now the hauen.

The roome within this close baie conteineth almost fortie acres, and the riuer as I haue said) runneth quite through the same immediatlie into the maine sea at south: so as the said pent being surrounded at euerie high water, & lieng almost bare at euerie ebbe, the ouze or sleech grew to be foure tæne or fiftæne foot deepe, the bottome thereof being a maine rocke of chalke: insomuch as a great multitude of ships might be placed there in good securitie, if the entrance could be made good. These things considered by men of good capacitie and experience, sundrie deuises and conceits were exhibited thereabouts, wherof some seemed verie probable; and were the rather heard and commended, for that the worke was so necessarie and beneficiall to the commonwealth. And in that respect, it pleased the quenes maiestie to grant to the towne of Douer, towards the reparing of their hauen, the free transportation of thirtie thousand quarters of wheat, ten thousand quarters of barleie and malt, and foure thousand tun of beere, without paieng either custome or impost: which was a gift of no small importance.

A bountifull gift of queene Elisabeth towards the reparing of Douer hauen.

For (beside great summes of monie alreadie leuied & imploied vpon the beginning of these works) the licence or patent was sold to a couple of merchants of London named John Bird, and Thomas Wats, after the rate of three shillings & foure pence for euerie quarter of wheat, and two shillings and eight pence for euerie quarter of barleie and malt;

The patent of the queenes gift sold vnto two merchants.

and

Sir John Thomsons deuise discouered.

Surueiors and ouerseers.

The Mole-head.

Douer pierre when it was taken in hand, and whereof it consisteth.

notable deuise to carrie great rocks by water.

Foure pence a daie.

and the licence of bere being sold to diuerse others amounted to foure thousand marks at the least. Besides all this, it was enacted in the parlement holden the three and twentith yeare of the reigne of hir maiestie, for and in the considerations aforesaid, and for that there was a probable plot contriued by skilfull men, to be performed for a conuenient sum of monie, that for euerie ship, vessell, or craier, whereof anie of hir maiesties subiects were owners, or part owners, being of the burthen of twentie tuns or vpwards, loding or discharging within this realme, or passing to or fro anie forren countrie, during the space of seuen yeers then next insuing from fortie daies after the end of the same session of parlement, there should be paid for euerie such voiage by the maister or owner of all such vessels, &c: the summe of three pence for euerie tun of the burthen of such ship, &c.

The act of parlement for Douer hauen 23 Elisab.

Three pence the tun of euerie vessell allowed towards Douer hauen.

Hereby there grew great summes of monie to be yerelie leuied toward these works, amounting to 1000 pounds yerelie at the least, and yet the time not expired by two yeres. After this, hir maiestie being carefull that the hauen should with expedition be taken in hand, directed hir letters patents, dated the nine and twentith daie of March, in the foure and twentith yeare of hir reigne, to the lord Cobham lord warden of the cinque ports, &c: sir Thomas Scot, sir James Hales knights, Thomas Wotton, Edward Bois, the maior of the towne of Douer present and to come, Richard Barrie lieutenant of the castell of Douer, Henrie Palmer, Thomas Digs, Thomas Wilford, and William Partrige esquiers, all which were of the shire, and men of great wisedome and iudgement, and no small trauellers in matters concerning the commonwealth: some of them maruellous expert in affaires and matters of the sea, some in fortifications, some hauing trauelled beyond the seas for experience and conference that waie, and to see the order of forren seaworks & hauens, and none without singular vertues. In which respect they were commissionated and authorised by those presents, to doo, and foresee to be done from time to time, all things needfull and requisit to be imploied about the reparing and mending of the said hauen, and as might tend to the furtherance of the said seruice; and to choose officers, & assigne their stipends, and the seuerall fees of all ministers, attendants and clerks needfull for the substantiall, necessarie, speedie, and cheape doing thereof, and therein to set downe particular orders and directions, as might be for the furtherance and accomplishing of the said works most expedient.

The tunnage amounted to 1000 pounds yearelie.

The tenure of the queens commission for Douer hauen.

Now for the performance hereof, manie plots by sundrie persons were deuised, and first of all one John True was commended, or at the least commended himselfe to the lords of hir maiesties priuie councell, to whome he made great shew to be an expert engineor, and by their lordships he was sent to Douer, and presented to be generall surueior of the works, as one in whome they reposed great hope of furthering and finishing the said hauen; whereof he made no doubt, but resolutelie promised the speedie execution and accomplishing thereof. His deuise and determination was, to make within the said baie nere to the shelfe of beach, a long wall from the water gate (out of which the riuer issueth into the harborough) to the blacke bulwarke, in length two hundred rods. This wall was to be made of excellent stone at Folkstone, the which he framed after a strange and contrarie kind of workmanship. And there was for this purpose alredie perfectlie hewed of the same stone seuen thousand foot, and six thousand foot more was scapled; he bestowed and spent thereabouts one thousand two hundred foure score and eight pounds, as appeareth in the accounts of the treasurors for that time being; and yet there was not one stone of his said long wall laid, nor that hitherto hath come to anie profitable vse. But this wall if it had beene, or rather could haue beene finished, it would haue cost a hundred thousand pounds, and yet would neuer haue serued the turne. For a stone wall is so contrarie to the nature of that sandie foundation, as it can make no good coniunction nor perfect pent.

John True surueior generall of Douer hauen.

The deuise of John True.

Stone hewed at Folkstone amounting to 1288 pounds.

Infinit charge to haue compleated the stone wall.

For the furtherance of his deuise he would haue plucked downe a great part of the old pierre, whereof there was then too little remaining: he detracted the time, for he had ten shillings a daie allowed vnto him for his fee, which perhaps he was loth to forgo. He either could or would not render anie reason to the commissioners of his doings and finall purpose, but alwaies said he would make them a good hauen, neither would he set downe anie time certeine for the accomplishing thereof. All these matters with his negligence, delaies, and vntowardlinesse of his works, being aduertised to the lords of hir maiesties councell, he was dismissed.

True had ten shillings a daie for his fee.

John True is dismissed.

After whom, one Ferdinando Poins, who had beene conuersant & acquainted with water works in the low countries, & had dealt much about Woolwich and Erith breaches, offered his seruice for the accomplishing of these works; affirming, that it was an easie matter to bring the same to passe, in such sort as there should sone be a good harborough; refusing not to haue taken the worke to do by great, either by a plot of his owne deuising, or else by the plot agreed on by the commissioners, and allowed by the lords of the councell. But this Ferdinando Poins, though he seemed a verie good executioner either of his owne, or another mans deuise concerning such affaires: yet was he verie loth to discouer his order and maner of working, or anie other deuise of his owne, least (as he said) he might be preuented by some other that would vndertake to doo it by his deuises, better cheape than himselfe could afford it, and so he to loose, and other to gaine the benefit of his inuention. Howbeit, in the end he was content to be imploied anie waie, so as therewithall he might haue monie before hand: for Woolwich works did so sticke in his fingers, as monie was verie palpable and plausible vnto him.

Ferdinando Poins.

In fine, he vndertooke to make certeine groins or knocks, which at the hauens mouth should cause such a depth, as thereby the whole harborough should lie drie at a low water, whereby the works about the wals might the better and more conuenientlie be performed, and the present entrie amended. For it was concluded, that there should be made a perfect pent within the baie, conteining in quantitie about sixteene acres, which should be inuironed with a long wall, reaching from aboue the water gate nere to the Castell Raie, extending in length about a hundred and twentie rods along within the shelfe of beach, directlie towards the end of the pierre, where the blacke bulwarke was placed; and at the end of the said long wall, a crosse wall of length about fortie rods, reaching from that wall directlie crosse to the shore at the northerne cliffe, not far from the towns end. And this should make a perfect pent to conteine and reteine the water of the riuer, which (when the sluse standing in the crosse wall should be opened) might be of force to make and mainteine a depth for an entrance or hauens mouth for shipping to come into the rode, which lieth betwixt the maine sea and the pent.

Poins his groine.

The pent is 16 acres.

The length of the long wall.

The crosse wall.

The rode for ships.

In this worke there appeared great difficultie, and so much the more, in that (for the most part) the place where the wall should stand, was continuallie surrounded, and also the sea did euerie tide ouerflow the same, and besides that annoiance, the crosse wall also must crosse the riuer, the course whereof could not be diuerted anie other waie but with extreme charge. The speciall cause whie this harborough was continuallie surrounded, euen at the low water, was for want of a depth at the hauens mouth, which might at an ebbe conueie thense into the sea (more spædilie and abundantlie) all those waters which remained vpon the face of the hauen. To the execution hereof (I saie) the said Ferdinando Poins was appointed, and towards his charge therabouts there was first deliuered vnto him one thousand pounds, by force of a warrant sent by the commissioners for Douer hauen, to Thomas Smith of Ostinhanger esquire, farmer of hir maiesties customes inwards in the ports of London, Sandwich, Chichester, Southhampton, and Ipswich, with their creeks and members, and the creke of Woodbridge, being a member of the port of Yarmouth, who is neuertheless called by the name of Customer Smith, because in times past his office was by letters patents to collect the said custome, and to yeeld account thereof, as other customers vsuallie dow, hauing for his fee one hundred and three score pounds yearelie. Now for that he was so trustie and sufficient a person euerie waie, there was committed vnto his charge the receipt of all such summes of monie as were due, either for the aforesaid tunnage, or for the licence of free transportation of corns and beere, the which summes as need required, were by him to be deliuered to the treasuror for Douer harborough vpon the councels direction, and a warrant of six of the said commissioners hands.

Stone hewed at Folkestone, amounting to 1288 pounds.

Infinit charge to accomplish the stone wall.

One thousand pounds to Ferdinando Poins.

Customer Smith.

There might be much written in the renowme and commendation of this man, for his great affaires and aduentures, as also for other singular vertues: but for that he yet liueth, and is generallie knowne, it maie with modestie be deferred; yet thus much I haue said of him, for that he was a speciall fauorer and furtherer of these works, neuer making delaie of anie paiment appointed or required, but rather disbursing great summes of monie out of his owne cofers to set forwards the same. After the receipt of this thousand pounds, the said F. Poins had 200 more, as it appeareth in those accounts. Trulie, this Ferdinando Poins applied the works industriouslie, and performed some thing profitablie for the drayning of the harborough, by making two groins, whereby there was a depth made at the hauens mouth. But as it is thought, his worke either was or might haue bene performed with lesse than halfe that monie: which if he had done, I would more willinglie haue published his praises. By the premisses it maie appeare, that the life of the hauen consisteth in the pent, and consequentlie in the long wall and crosse wall, without the which no pent could be made, so as wals must be erected. But now the question grew to be how and whereof they should be framed which were to be wrought in the sea, vpon the sand or beach, through a riuer, &c: and the same wall to withstand the violence and rage of the sea at the one side, and to hold and reteine a mightie weight of fresh at the other, so as no water might soke through or vnder the same.

True had ten shillings a day for his fee.

John True is dismissed.

Ferdinando Poins.

Poins his groine.

The pent 16 acres.

The length of the long wall.

The crosse wall.

Barres of wales.

Maister True (as you haue heard) would haue made stone wals verie costlie, and without limitation of time. Maister Ferdinando Poins would haue raised them with ouze and beach shoueled and cast together without anie more adoo. An other would haue made a coffin dam, whereof the cost would haue bene infinite. Pet and Baker, being skilfull shipwrights, with certeine other coparteners, thought a woodden wall most conuenient; and presented to the commissioners a module thereof, deuised and framed (for the most part) by one Andrew a carpentar, then seruant to the said Pet: which deuise maister William Burroughs, a verie expert seaman, greatlie liked and commended. Maister True his deuise was reiected as impossible and intolerable. Maister Poins his workemanship was easie for a plaine man of the countrie to conceiue and performe: but verie few could be persuaded that his wall would be tight inough to make a pent, consisting onlie of slub and beach shoueled together, and lieng so howeer: for that was his deuise. Neuertheless, sir William Winter (a man verie skilfull and of great experience in sea matters, being sent to Douer by the lords of hir maiesties priuie councell, with maister William Burroughs and others, to suruew and confer about that hauen with the said commissioners) vnderstanding Ferdinando Poins had delt in the inning of Woolwich & Erith marshes, being also willing to dow him good, gaue fauourable eare vnto him, as to one that propounded an easie and a cheape platforme, and not much vnprobable in his opinion, whose desire was to haue it well performed, and with as small charge as might be, for that he was the greatest preferrer of that bill in the parlement house, and yeelded the best reasons for a hauen to be there placed.

Sir W. Winter sent to Douer to suruew the harbor, &c.

At this assemblie were proposed other sundrie mens deuises; namelie, of one Thomas Brewer gentleman, John Stoneham carpentar, Bedwell, &c: and among the rest sir Thomas Scot, being a man carefull for the affaires of his countrie, and therewithall verie perspicuous, being wearied with manie fruitlesse conferences, delaies, strange and vntoward deuises, chargeable and vaine attempts, and contrarie proceedings; and among other things, hauing had great experience in Romneie marsh matters (the greatest businesse whereof consisteth in making and reparing of wals to defend the same marsh from the inuasion and inundation of the sea) and dailie seeing the nature and effects therof, weieng also in his mind, that Romneie marsh wals are of greater bulke and force than these need to be, for that they lie more open to the maine sea, and without comparison more subiect to the weight and violent rage thereof; and further knowing that the marsh wals are placed not farre from thense vpon that coast, vpon a foundation in all respects like vnto the same, if not worse (for sometimes they build vpon a verie quicke sand, where one maie thrust downe a pole of a dozzen or twentie foot, and not find or feele the bottome) and after he had compared these workes together, perceiuing no impediment whie one rule should not direct two workes of one kind, he conferred with his neighbours of Romneie marsh therein, who allowed and confirmed his deuise, and afterward readilie attended on him to Douer, there to approue his opinion with their reasons and experience; and not so onelie, but also to vndertake and performe what soeuer he had set downe or promised in that behalfe. The residue of the commissioners (hearing and conceiuing sir Thomas Scot reasons, ioined and confirmed with experience not far fetcht, but ratified by neere neighbours, being persons of good account, which were expert from their childhood in the practise of those kind of workes) inclined greatlie vnto his motion; and the rather, for that they knew him to be such a one as would not seeke for priuat gaines. Howbeit, they which exhibited the woodden worke, could not well conceiue hereof, nor easilie consent herevnto. And no waie was thought by them more fit to preferre their owne worke, than to make some offer to dow it by great, which the lords of the coun-

Sir Thomas Scot.

The wals of Romneie marsh subiect to the raging seas.

All the commissioners ioine with sir Thomas Scot, and allow his deuise.

cell greatlie desired, as whereby they might vnderstand the vttermost charge and time required for the accomplishing thereof. But the price of the wodden wall grew to be so large (for fiue thousand and fiue hundred pounds was the lowest rate of their demand for the long wall onelie) that it was much misliked. For first there was no likelihood or possibilitie that the same should be set fast and vnmoueable wher the slub or sleech is fifténe foot déepe at the least, and the maine rocke immediatlie vnderneath it. Secondlie, if the same could be erected, yet it must in short time be so shaken by reason of the weight of the pent water on the one side at low water, and by the violence of the sea on the other side at the flood, that through the vnstedinesse thereof, it could not continue tight. Thirdlie, the nature of the sand and slub was thought to be so different from the condition of wodden words and planks, whereof this wall was to consist, that though there were no weight or wether that could impech the stedie standing thereof, yet there could be no such firme coniunction betwixt them, but that the verie weight of the wall it selfe must néeds cause the same to decline to one side or other, whereby water would draine betwixt, by reason of the thinnesse of the slub or sleech, which could minister no certeine staie thereunto, nor likelihood that the same should so vnite with the wood, as to stand stedie, and to make a perfect pent in that place: but to helpe that matter, they meant to haue shored and braced the said timber wall, in such sort as the same should haue staid the whole worke: yet no bracing could (as the best opinion was) haue preuailed to bring that wall to be good or stedie. Fourthlie, it was thought that such a wall so placed, would be subiect to more than ordinarie decaie, by reason that anie woodworke lieng in water, especiallie when it is sometimes wet and sometimes drie, will in short time rot and disioint: so as if the same could be repared (whereof there was great doubt made) yet the reparations would be in respect of charge verie intollerable. Fiftlie, the delaie of time herein was also disliked, for two yeares being demanded for the accomplishing of that one wall, no time could be promised. Sixtlie, they being demanded whether they had euer séene (either on this side or beyond the seas) anie such wall or worke; they answered, No: but affirmed it to be in their opinions so probable, as they would aduenture to vndertake it for thirtie pounds the rod, but in what space to finish it they could not saie. Seuenthlie, there was required for the building of this wall 7000 tun of timber, which all Kent and Sussex (without vnrecouerable hurt in depriuation of their timber) was not able to yeld: and the necessarie carriages for such a prouision could haue béene by no meanes procured, without the vndoing of the inhabitants, and spoile of the countrie. These causes were of force inough to ouerthrow a wodden wall. The deuise neuertheless deserued commendation.

Seuen inuincible reasons against the wodden wall.

These matters thus mentioned were afterwards debated before the lords of the councell, and these reasons with manie others were deliuered vnto their lordships by maister Thomas Digs, the first elected surueior of the works, as from the commissioners. The credit of the parties, who were to vndertake this wodden wall, and their reasons preuailed so much, as diuerse noble and wise men grew to conceiue good liking thereof. But the lord treasuror, whose voice and iudgement in all causes of importance hath in all his time worthilie caried the swaie, allowed rather of the marsh works; saieng that if he erred therein, as not séeing but hearing the matter in question, he would erre with discretion, as led by the reasons of the commissioners; who had séene and tried the experience of that kind of worke.

The lord treasurors resolution.

Diuerse liked of Poins his worke, or at the least of his communication: partlie (as it is said) for the cheapnesse supposed, though in déede the contrarie fell out in demand: partlie for the expedition promised, which could neuer haue béene performed: partlie for that he was knowne to be a speciall executioner in Woolwich breaches, being workes defensatiue against inuasion of waters, as yet vnaccomplished, though no small charges haue béene therein imploied, for the recouerie of two thousand acres of excellent marsh land, lieng seuen miles from London, in the parishes of Plumsted, Erith, &c: lost by a breach made in the wals there with a tempest, about the yeare of our Lord one thousand fiue hundred and thirtie, to the vndoing of manie, but especiallie of sir Edward Boulton knight: partlie also he was hearkened vnto, for that he was reputed to be a good engineer; partlie for his experience in forren works, partlie for his resolutenesse: but especiallie, for that he made a shew of more cunning than he would vtter; so as although his deuise for the erection of the wals was finallie reiected; yet was the matter brought to further conference. For he was commended to the lords of hir maiesties priuie councell, and namelie to sir Francis Walsingham knight, principall secretarie to hir highnesse; to whome was happilie referred the consideration and chiefe direction of all matters concerning these works; wherein he dealt from time to time, with as great care, trauell, and circumspection, as though his owne estate had depended vpon the well proceeding thereof. Whatsoeuer was thought necessarie to be done thereabouts, was alwaies aduertised by the commissioners vnto him, and his opinion and direction required, and he without good conference and probabilitie would enter into no action concerning this matter.

Woolwich and Erith breaches.

Secretarie Walsingham the chiefe referer and furtherer of Poins deuise.

Now therefore he wrote to sir Thomas Scot, requiring him to send vp some sufficient person, acquainted & exercised in Romnete marsh works, to satisfie the lords of the councell in all such doubts as should be obiected, speciallie by maister Burroughs, who had more liking of the shipwrights maner of worke, than either of the Romneie marsh works exhibited by sir Thomas Scot, or of Plumsted works propounded by Ferdinando Poins. Wherein sir Francis Walsingham shewed maister Digs his defense, & his owne good liking of the earthen wals; onelie requiring, that sir Thomas Scot would throughlie informe himselfe by conference with the marshmen, to answer certeine obiections which he there inclosed, sent downe vnto him in writing, concerning the passage of the long wall, and the distance thereof from the shore, the higth and tightnes of the same, the conueniencie of the foundation, the maner of stuffe, the time of finishing, the breadth below and at the top, the vndertakers thereof, and of their assurance, &c: and lastlie, that some sufficient person should be sent vp, to confer in these matters. All which points were so answered by sir Thomas Scot, as sir Francis Walsingham was greatlie satisfied thereby. Concerning the doing thereof by great, sir Thomas Scots aduise was, that (séeing it was a princes charge) it might rather be performed by daieworkers and good ouersées, than by great; wherein no man would aduenture, in respect of the quantitie of the charge and difficultie of the works, without certeintie of great gaines. Neuertheless, if it were so set downe by the lords of the priuie councell, that it should be done no other waie but by great; he himselfe would vndertake it better cheape than anie other had profered to do it by fiue hundred marks, and to that effect would Maister Secretaries letter to sir Thomas Scot.

Do dealing by great, in matters of charge and danger.

would put in verie good and sufficient assurance. Presentlie after the receipt of those letters, sir Thomas Scot sent to the court a kinsman of his, named Reinold Scot, who had bene deputed a surueior of Romneie marsh by the space of foure yeares togither; and Reinold Smith, who had bene clearke of Romneie marsh, and a continuall dealer about these wals by the space of thirtie yeares. These two repairing first to Douer, to consider of the earth, which should serue to make the wals of the pent of Douer hauen, and to search where such earth as would serue that turne might most conuenientlie and nerest hand be had, with pasture for horsses which should be imploied for carriage thereof, proceeded to the court at Richmont, where they attended on maister secretarie Walsingham on the mondaie and tuesdaie before Easter daie 1583: and after conference had with him, they deliuered vnto him certeine notes in writing from sir Thomas Scot, conteining necessarie orders, and recounting the charges, businesse, and offices, &c: incident to the erection of these walles, imitating as nere as time, place, and matter would giue leaue, the maner of Romneie marsh works: wherein he remembred or rather required a yeerelie assemblie of commissioners at Douer in Easter weeke, as is by the lords of Romneie marsh at Whitsuntide, with the election of officers, and set downe the dutie and charge of ech officer, the order of the works, what prouision of stuffe should be made, to wit, of timber, thorne, faggots, nedels, keies, bettels, piles, pasture, earth, with totall sums of all officers fees, of all stuffe and prouision, of all the labourers, and of all the cariages: which estimat was little or nothing differing from the charge as it fell out, sauing that where he set it downe that both walles might be finished in two summers, he accomplished them in one quarter of a yeere, beyond promise or expectation.

Sir Thomas Scots notes.

Douer pent finished in three monthes.

Maister secretarie Walsingham (hauing perused these notes, & seene the maner of the works & rates set downe therein) liked verie well thereof: howbeit, he strictlie examined the parties aforesaid, how those works could be performed at so low prices, and especiallie, how so manie courts could be prounded without commission, or griefe to the countrie, euerie court hauing a horsse and a driuer, and all for twelue pence a day, in a place where pastures are for the most part barren, and hard to be gotten: and both that and all other things, but especiallie victels extreame dere. But being satisfied herein by the said Reinold Scot & Reinold Smith, he thought good neuertheless to send them two, accompanied with Thomas Digs esquier, and William Burroughs gentleman, to confer with sir William Winter, the said Ferdinando Poins, & the Plumsted men, which were workemen in Wolwich and Erith breaches, who propounded to the said workemen certeine questions at the house of sir William Winter at Tower hill. Wherein they were demanded amongst other things, whether they euer had heretofore made anie wals, whereby water hath bene pent to anie highth, and vpon what foundation or soile they were set, and of what substance their wals were made, and whether they could remedie such wals if they leaked, or could worke in water: and finallie, what they would aske for a rod doing, and what suerties they could put in for the tightnesse of their worke.

Reinold Scot and Rafe Smith examined by maister secretarie about the wals of the pent.

Questions propounded to Poins and the Plumsted men.

Ferdinando Poins and his Plumsted men answered verie comfortable to euerie question, they seemed ignorant in nothing, and promised to performe whatsoeuer was required, sauing assurance. But they knew not the order of Romneie marsh works, neither could they possiblie haue accomplished this: for they were oneie good dikers and hodmen, which arts were little pertinent hereunto. Maister secretarie being aduertised how Ferdinando Poins and his pioners of Plumsted shewed themselues in this conference, wherein neither their owne disabilitie, nor the difficultie of: the worke by themselues was anie thing at all doubted of, thought it not amis to aduertise the residue of the lords of the councell thereof: so as if those works might in such wise be by anie thought possible to be performed, then might the marsh works with much more assurance be trusted vnto; and that did maister Burroughs now verie well conceiue and note: neuertheless, it was thought expedient by their lordships, that Poins and his workemen should repaire to Douer to a finall conference in those matters; who perchance might be somewhat at the least imploied in those businesses. And therefore maister secretarie sent down to sir Thomas Scot, that their lordships had receiued the resolution he grew vnto, vpon conference with the marshmen of Romneie, touching the proceeding in the plot of Douer hauen, and had both well considered & allowed of the same; and that their lordships also had appointed, that on the tuesdaie after Easter weeke, maister Burroughs and maister Poins, with certeine marshmen of Plumsted, should be sent downe to meet and confer further with him about the going forwards with the same plot at Douer: at which time such order might be taken and agreed on among the commissioners, for the making of all necessarie prouisions for the same, as should be thought most expedient.

Sir Thomas Scots deuise allowed by the lords o the councell.

On the ninth daie of Aprill next insuing, the parties aboue specified came to Douer accordinglie, where all the commissioners for that harborough met them, who hauing receiued letters from the lords of the councell to set downe a finall resolution; after long debating of matters, agreed that Romneie marshmen should vndertake the worke; and for the better and more speedie proceeding therein, the commissioners made election of all necessarie officers, and rated their wages in this sort. The treasuror, which was sir James Hales knight, to haue for euerie fiftie pounds receiued and disbursed, six shillings eight pence, and for his clearke fiue pounds yearelie. John Smith the expenditor twentie pounds yearelie, his clearke fiue pounds yearelie. The common clearke twentie marks, and each sworne man during his attendance eight pence a daie. The generall surueior (that is to saie) maister Digs esquier twentie marks yearelie, which he gaue to Alexander Mudge his deputie.

The resolution at a conference at Douer.

Officers elected at Douer.

It was there also ordered, that the deputies surueiors, the expenditor, and clearke, should take present order for the inlarging of the waies for carriages to passe; for thorne, fagot, bettels, nedels, keies, piles, baun, and carriages for them, before Whitsuntide following. These things were committed to their charge; but they were afterwards eased by purueiors appointed for those and other purposes; they hauing more to doo otherwise than they could well ouercome. Hauing now discouered the first & second estate of Douer harborough, euerie mans deuise for the amending, or rather erecting of a new hauen in that place, with declaration of hir maiesties bountie, and the care of the whole state iointlie and seuerallie in that behalfe: I am to make description of the things performed, and of the manner of the execution thereof, in which thing consisted the difficultie, and (as some thought) the impossibilitie of this enterprise.

First therefore you are to vnderstand, that before a hauen could be there erected, there must be made a pent, to conteine abundance of water issuing ing from the land, which being let out at a sluse, should open & maintaine the hauens mouth; the violence whereof should scowre it so, as neither beach, sand, nor slub might there remaine. The working of these wals in the sea and thorough the channell, was the great thing to be brought to passe, as hath beene before said. The discouerie therefore of these workes will not be vnprofitable to posteritie, nor vnnecessarie for the time present. Herein I will omit all contentions & factions concerning these proceedings, as also all iniurious practises against those works, whense soeuer they sprang: but I would gladlie giue to euerie one his due commendation, which cannot be done; because therein I should grow too long. I thought meet also to omit a controuersie rising about the placing of the hauens mouth, excellentlie disputed betwixt persons of good acount.

The rare mediting of the pent.

The question was, whether were most conuenient a more readie and speedie entrance in times of danger, when contrarie winds permitted no entrie or abode in anie harbeurough, though this entrance were somewhat more shallow, whereby the greatest ships in these cases should be excluded: or a deeper hauens mouth in an other place more conuenient for great ships, with a more calme ingresse, and a quieter rode, the hauens mouth somewhat more easterlie, and therefore not so good to enter into at a southwest wind, which distresseth men most in those seas: wherein (I saie) I forbeare to repeate the arguments of ech side, and the circumstance of that matter (being now decided and ouerruled) in such sort as I doo the works of the pent, the description whereof maie be profitable to all that shall haue to doo either in hauens or great water breaches. For both Plumsted & Erith marshes, or anie like breaches by this means doubtlesse maie easilie and most assuredlie be recouered. In the declaration hereof also, the parties which haue deserued commendation or consideration maie perhaps in some sort haue a kind of recompense: for other reward was not looked after, or sought for by the best executioners hereof, sith the better sort imploied their trauell with great charges, the meaner sort their readie furtherance to their power, the poorer people their labor at a small rate to the preferring and performance of this worke; and all with such forwardnesse and willingnes of mind, as the like hath not beene knowne or seene in this age: the beholding whereof would haue amazed anie man vnacquainted with Romeneie marsh works, from whense the patterne hereof was fetcht, and the officers and chiefe workemen thereof brought by sir Thomas Scot to Douer. These works were digested and ordered by them, euen as a battell is marshalled by officers of the feeld. And trulie it was expedient that good direction should be vsed on this behalfe, for there were to be imploied fiue or six hundred courts about a wall of small bredth at one instant, none to be idle or hindered by an other, for the staie of one court a verie little space might be to the works an incredible hinderance.

Woolwich breach recouerable.

Euerie degree willing to set forward this worke.

Six hundred courts imploied at once in these works.

The nature and names of the offices and officers hereunto perteining you haue alreadie heard. For as they were at the first set downe by sir Thomas Scot, so in all respects was it ordered and concluded in that behalfe; sauing that because these works were so great, and required such expedition, as the expenditor was ouercharged with busines, though an expert man trained vp in Romneie marsh in those affaires, trustie, diligent, and euerie waie sufficient: vnto whose office naturallie belonged the purueiance of all necessaries, anie waie apperteining to the maintenance of the wals. There was appointed by the commissioners (as chiefe purueior) a gentleman of good sufficiencie named John Reies, by whose countenance and discreet dealing men were brought to yeeld willinglie anie of their commodities towards the helpe and furtherance of these proceedings for their iust values, which was duelie answered vnto them, so as no man was seene to complaine of anie iniurie or hard dealing. But when the works, or rather the workers grew to be greater and more in number than was expected, (which came to passe by reason of the multitude of courts and workemen, who proffered their seruice so fast, as from the rate of two hundred, which was at the first set downe, they increased to six hundred) all pastures neere the towne being imploied that waie, manie men were content to make their owne prouision, conditionallie to be admitted into the works, insomuch as some hired pasture for their working horsses seuen or eight miles from Douer, and neuertheless came to worke with the first, and continued the whole daie with them that wrought longest. For they came at six of the clocke in the morning, and departed at six of the clocke at night, except extraordinarie causes in preuenting inconueniences of great and fowle tides caused them to worke longer. Diuerse brought thither courts from beides Maidstone and Seuenocke, being thirtie or fortie miles from Douer; and in the end the officers were driuen to put backe and refuse such as made suite to bring courts into the works: and yet had they for their horsse, their court, and their driuer but onelie twelue pence a daie. Which because it seemeth incredible, I thought good to discouer and vnfold to the reader in such sort, as he might be resolued and satisfied in the certeintie thereof, and throughlie conceiue not onelie the possibilitie but also the reason of it.

John Reies gentleman chiefe purueior.

A horsse, a court, and a driuer for twelue pence the daie.

First therefore the time of yeare when that worke was to be done, must be considered, which was intended, and by proclamations in certeine market townes notified to haue had beginning the thirteenth of Maie (when in those parts barleie season is ended) and from that time till haruest or haieng time little is to be done in husbandrie; and allowne as haruest should begin, their purpose was to leaue this worke vntill the yere following. So as in this meane time, that is to saie, from Aprill till haruest, the seruants, & speciallie the cattell of farmers are rather chargeable than anie waie gainefull vnto them, and therefore at such a time to raise profit by them is double aduantage. Neuertheless, he that should make his best commoditie herein, was to looke circumspectlie into the matter, and then might he see that it was requisit to haue two courts: for one boie might driue them both, because whilest the one was driuen, the other was filled, & the same being vnloden or discharged, he went for the other, leauing that to be filled. This filler was a labourer allowed to euerie man which had two courts, for whome the owner of the two courts had ten pence the daie: so as he had for his filler, his driuer, his two horsses, and his two courts two shillings and ten pence the daie, which amounteth to seuentene shillings the weeke. He paied out of the same for the bord of his filler and driuer six shillings weekelie, and so had the owner of cleere weekelie gaine for his two seruants and two horsses nine shillings, which must all this while haue lien at his charge.

There were among this number certeine double courts, which had double wages; because they were furnished with two horsses in a court, being double in quantitie to the rest, and were specialie imploied about the cariage of fleech, a more weightie mould than either the chalke or the earth. A single court contemed in length fiue foot, in bredth two foot, and in depth sixtene inches: whereunto the expenditor

The quantitie of one court of cumbrell.

loked

looked verie narrowlie, as also to the sufficiencie and diligence of euerie workeman and horse, so as vpon euerie default their wages was totted and defalked, or the offendors excluded from the works, or some times punished with stocks and other imprisonment.

The first entrie into the works.

An entrance into this worke was made in the beginning of Maie, one thousand fiue hundred foure score and three, in the fiue and twentith yeare of his maiesties reigne, with six courts onelie at the crosse wall; & such was the towardlines thereof, as yelded so great a brute & promise of good successe, that from that daie forward there were continuallie cariages brought (at the rate before set downe) beyond all expectation: in so much as by the 27 of June, there were assembled in those works 542 courts, and almost 1000 workemen. And truelie, there consisted so great difficultie in marshalling this multitude (for all were to worke at once, none might staie for other, or be impediment to others worke) as without the paterne of former experience the worke could hardlie haue bene performed.

Romneie marshmen chefe directors in the works.

Herein Richard Coast and William Norris iurats, and the aforenamed Reginald Smith clearke of Romneie marsh were chefe directors, and as it were marshals, as hauing dailie experience in the like works. For in Romneie marsh there are euerie yeare commonlie imploied at one time about making or mending of some one wall 200 courts at the least, in each court for the most part being two oxen, for whome the owners hire feeding in the marsh, as they can agree with the landholders, and yet haue had hitherto for their court and dinner but ten pence the daie. And this togither with their manner of working would be wonderfull, famous, and much spoken of throughout England, if the continuance of so manie hundred yeares exercise thereof had not qualified the strangenesse and admiration of it. For here (though at Douer it could not be so, because they wrought altogither with horsbeasts) the nights feeding preuaileth so much ouer the daies working, that bullocks brought to those works leane and out of flesh, are returned from the works most commonlie in verie good plight.

A horsse, a court, and a dinner for twelue pence the daie.

A benefit to man & beast.

The stuffe or substance of the wals.

The stuffe carried by these courts for the erection of the walles at Douer, was earth, being of a haselie mould, chalke and sleech, whereunto the carriages were seuerallie imploid, the most number for earth, whereof the greatest part of the wall consisted; the second for chalke, which mingled and beaten togither with the earth, did make the same more firme, and was placed in the midst of the wall; the smallest number for sleech, which serued for the out sides onlie.

The disposing of the works.

For the same being beaten with beetles to the sides of the wall, would by and by cleaue so fast and close thereunto, as thereby the wals were strengthened; and therevpon also the arming might be set much more firmelie than vpon anie other mould. This also preserued the walk from annoiance by rage of waters, almost as well as if they were otherwise armed with thorne and faggot.

Henrie Guilford esquier, capteine of Arcliffe castell.

There was prouided nere to the castell called Arcliffe (whereof Henrie Guilford esquier, being one that toke especiall care and paines in setting forward that businesse, was then capiteine) two acres and a halfe of ground for the prouision of earth for the walles: which ground was distant from the crosse wall about twentie score tailors yards, and for the same the owner had ten pounds, and the soile remaining to himselfe, which in short time will recouer to be as good as euer it was. At an other place also called Horsepoole sole, lieng behind S. James his church, was more earth prouided, which was altogither imploied vpon the long wall, as being nearer thereunto. Hereof euerie court brought commonlie to the walles in one daie about twelue lodes. The chalke was had from diuerse places of the cliffes, somwhat nearer to the wals than the earth, and these brought about seauentéene or eightéene lode a daie. The sleech was for the most part had at the west part of the hauen in a place called Paradise. And to these seuerall sorts of stuffe were seuerall cariages appointed and disposed, as might most conuenientlie serue the turne, and as occasion serued; for sometimes more and sometimes lesse of each sort of mould was necessarilie imploied. Sometimes also the sleech was had close at the side of the wals, and therefore fewer cariages imploied that waie.

Now to make a perfect triall of the worke before the daie limited that all the courts should come in, there was an experiment of great importance performed, which was the making of a baie head, & therby a pent to keepe the water in or out of a peece of the hauen called Little paradise, which place conteineth about three acres and a halfe of ground in great depth, wherein there riseth manie springs. And in the place where this wall or baie head should be made, the ouze & sleech was twentie foot deepe at the least. Herin also was laid first a pinstocke, and afterwards a sluse of great charge, the streame whereof meeting with the course of the great sluse increaseth the force thereof to the benefit of the hauens mouth.

The beginning of the great works at Douer.

On the thirteenth daie of Maie, in the yeare of our saluation one thousand fiue hundred eightie and three, when the courts, which (by proclamations made one moneth before in diuerse market towns) were to come to begin the works, there were more of them prepared and readie furnished for the purpose than were expected. Howbeit, the same was brought to passe by the meanes of sir Thomas Scot and other of the commissioners, who brought both their owne and their neighbors cariages, persuading all whom they thought able and meet, to set forward, and giue incouragement to the execution of these works. But Romneie marshmen, and such as knew those works, were they indeed which onlie gaue light to others of the true & right maner of working, and of the commoditie insuing hereby; & they in effect supplied those works, vntill the countrie did see which waie to saue themselues, and make profit thereof. But such was the multitude alreadie assembled, that (to auoid the difficultie and confusion of so manie courts working togither at the beginning, and to doo the better and greater seruice afterwards) the whole course was altered by sir Thomas Scot, by whome it was thought most meet to enter into the execution of both walles (to wit, the long wall and crosse wall) togither, & to diuide the courts into two parts: with whome the said Richard Barrie esquier lieutenant of Douer castell willinglie ioined, vndertaking the charge or ouersight of the long wall, as sir Thomas Scot did of the crosse wall; and by that meanes all the workmen & courts did with much more conueniencie and speed accomplish their worke.

Reasons for the difficultie of the crosse wall.

The crosse wall was of more importance, and the difficultie to make it was greater than of the long wall, for manie respects. First, for that the crosse wall standeth nearer to the maine sea than the long wall, and by that meanes this worke more violentlie impugned, and sooner interrupted than that of the long wall. Secondlie, they carried the crosse wall through the chanell (a thing verie strange and difficult) and so did they not the long wall. Thirdlie, the ouze and sleech was deeper vnder the crosse wall than vnder the long wall. Fourthlie, the crosse wall was to be made deeper or higher, and broder or wider than the long wall. Fiftlie, the tide was to hinder this worke, by approching sooner, by rising higher, ter, and by more violent raging than it did at the other. Sixtlie, the weight of the pent water was to lie altogither vpon this wall, and consequentlie the water would search thereinto more dangerouslie. Seuenthlie, in this wall there was a sluse to be laid, which without great circumspection would haue indangered the whole worke. Adde vnto these, that the crosse wall was more suddenlie vndertaken, & of more importance. For vnder fiftéene thousand pounds none euer made offer to dw it before this time: for the first purpose was to begin with the long wall onlie, or rather a péece thereof, as a worke sufficient to be performed in one summer.

Now if the long wall was thought a worke so difficult, dangerous, costlie, and tedious, what may be thought of the crosse wall? Trulie, had not the other commissioners bæne comforted herein by sir Thomas Scot, the impossibilitie presupposed would haue discouraged and ouerthrowne the whole enterprise. But he with good comfort and confidence entred vpon the crosse wall, and maister lieutenant on the long wall: insomuch as the one was called sir Thomas Scots wall, the other maister lieutenants wall. And certeinlie, they might well so be termed, in respect of the paines, care, and costs imploied vpon them by those two gentlemen. Sir Thomas Scot dwelt twelue long Kentish miles from Douer, yet did he seldome faile to come from his house to the beginning of the worke euerie mondaie morning while the walles were in hand; and from that daie vntill saturdaie in the euening, when he returned home. He lightlie came first to the walles, and departed with the last: and it behoued him so to dw, in as much as by his meanes onelie this manner of worke was vndertaken, and all other deuises reiected. He laie in one John Spritwels house, who kept an inne in Douer, called the Greihound, and there did he and his followers and seruants, togither with maister lieutenant and his companie receiue their diet at a dére hand. For although the castell stand within a quarter of a mile of the worke, and as nére to the towne; yet was the lieutenants industrie and charge such, as he or his seruants did neuer lightlie returne home from fiue of the clocke in the morning till after supper; but remained alwaies there with sir Thomas Scot, in continuall businesse & extreme charge, not onelie in respect of their owne table, but also in regard of strangers, who came to sée them and the workes, whose charges they commonlie defraied. Besides that, they did (not seldome times) bestow rewards bountifullie vpon the poore workmen, who vpon sundrie occasions were driuen to worke longer than the rest, and with more difficultie; for some at some times wrought in danger of life, & ofttimes in the waters vp to the waist or shoulders. And among the rest (to whome I could rather wish a liberall recompense than a due praise) there was in these workes a poore man named John Bowle, borne and brought vp in Romneie marsh, whose dexteritie of hand, fine and excellent inuentions in executing difficult workes, and whose willing mind and painfulnesse for his owne part, with furthering and incouraging of others, ought in some calling to haue bæne honored, and in his poore estate should not be forgotten. As touching the residue of the commissioners, they for their parts (if they were in health) did almost dailie visit the workes, with as great care for the good procéedings thereof as was possible.

This worke vndertaken and other reiected by sir Thomas Scots means.

Bowle a notable good workman.

Commissioners.

Sir James Hales was this yeare chosen by the generall voice and consent of the commissioners, and with the good allowance of the lords of the councell, treasurer for the workes (as sir Thomas Scot was the two yeares precedent) and did not onelie discharge the office and dutie thereof with commendation and iust account, which amounted almost to fiue thousand pounds: but beside his often repaire at other times during the works, he did continue there by the space of one whole month, while sir Thomas Scot (by meanes of a sickenesse taken vpon the wals) was absent, and all that time kept a bountifull table, and vsed great diligence, in continuall ouersight and furtherance of the works, whereof Thomas Digs esquier was generall surueior commended thervnto by the lords of the councell, who although he made his chiefe abode then at London, yet did he often repaire to the works, and seriouslie bent himselfe to set forward the same there, being also a carefull sollicitor in that behalfe. Certeine of the iurats & chiefe magistrats of the towne, were by two at once dailie assigned to be directors and setters forth of the carriages, and to sée the courts well filled: these also did refuse their allowance, being eight pence the daie, and did neuertheless verie diligentlie attend vpon their charge: their names were John Watson, John Garret, William Willis, Thomas Brodgat, &c.

Treasuror.

Two iurats called directors.

There were eight men called guiders standing at eight seuerall stations, or places of most danger, to guide and helpe the driuers distressed or troubled with their cattell or courts, and to hasten them forward: for the default of one did make staie of the whole companie, and these had eight pence the daie. There attended also at the wals eight men called vntingers, to lose and vndo the tackle of euerie court immediatlie before the vnloding or shelving thereof, and were allowed eight pence the daie. Then were there eight shelvers, which pulled downe the courts as soone as they came to the place where it was needfull to vnlode, and these were chosen of the strongest and nimblest men, hauing ten pence the daie. There were also eight tingers, whose speciall office was to lift vp the courts immediatlie after they were vnloden, and to make fast their tackle; for the driuers hasted forth without making anie staie, otherwise all the companie must haue tarried for them; these had eight pence the daie. The number of the labourers which were to shouell abrode and laie euen the earth, chalke, and flæch, as soone as it was vnloden was vncerteine, they had six pence and eight pence the daie. A great manie marshmen were assigned to laie the flæch vpon the sides of the wals, and were called scauelmen, and had twelue pence the daie. The number of bætlemen also were vncerteine, who serued to beat or driue the flæch to the sides of the wals, and to breake the great stones of chalke laid on the wals; as also to leuell the earth, and to worke it close together, hauing for their wages eight pence the daie. Manie marshmen also were appointed to arme the sides of the wals, after they were flæched, & had twelue pence, and some sixtéene pence the daie.

Eight guiders

Eight vntingers.

Eight sheluers.

Eight tingers.

Labourers.

Scauelmen.

Bætlemen.

Armors.

The order of arming.

The order of arming was in this maner. First beginning at the foot of the wall, they laid downe a row of fagot, through euerie one of the which they driue a néedle or stake about foure foot long, hauing an eie or hole at the great end. Then dw they edder it with thorne and other prouision for that purpose, and lastlie driue a keie or wodden wedge (being one foot and a halfe long) through the eie of the néedle to kéepe downe the edder, which staith downe the fagot. Also there was an inferiour purueior for fagot, thorne, néedles, keies, &c: who for his horse & himselfe was allowed for euerie daie he trauelled two shillings. The clerke of the works, who kept all the reckonings of the expenditor (through whose hands all the monie passed) he at fiue a clocke in the morning, togither with the expenditor, called euerie one that wrought Inferiour purueiors.

Clerke. Expenditor.

that that daie, and saw euerie court furnished, and recorded all this in his booke, and such as were absent, had no allowance that daie: if they came late, their wages was totted at the expenditors good discretion.

The groine keeper.

There was one Iuline appointed to attend vpon Poins his groins, he was a Dutchman, and more expert in these kind of water workes than Poins himselfe, his wages was first (I meane in Poins his time) two shillings a daie, afterwards (to wit) whilest these workes were in hand, and better husbandrie was vsed, he had but foure grotes a daie. And thus much touching the offices and officers duties.

The manner of [illegible] hir

Euerie court was most commonlie filled ouer night, and in the morning at six of the clocke they all approched orderlie to the place where the wall should be made. The first driuer for good consideration was chosen to be a sufficient and a diligent person, and that court to haue a good gelding: for as he lead the danse, so must they all follow. When the first court came nigh to the place where he should vnlode, one vntinged it, and the driuer proceeded with his court, either into the ouze or water, or as neere thereunto as they could; and bringing his horse about in his returne, when the taile of the court was turned to the water side, the shelues plucked downe the lode, as far into the chanell as he could. The driuer neuer staied, but went forth for a new lode: the tinger runneth after and pulleth vp the court, and fasteneth the tackle, and goeth presentlie with speed to dow likewise to another; and so doth the vntinger. When the whole course of courts (being about two hundred) were vnloden, the labourers with their shouels and beetels plied to make euen the wall against another course came.

Two tinrats called directors.

Eight guiders

Eight sheluers.

Eight tingers.

labourers.

Scauelmen.

Beetlemen.

Sometimes they wrought a whole daie or two, and laid downe manie thousand lodes of earth and chalke, and no increase seene at night of the worke, either in higth or length; in so much as manie supposed that the earth was rather washed awaie than sunke. And in truth, some part thereof was carried awaie with the flood in a rough tide; for all the water in the hauen was manie times discoloured therewith; especiallie, vntill sir Thomas Scot tooke order, that before euerie flood, not onelie each side of the wall, but the end also should be armed with fagot; & in the morning or after noone (when returne was made to the works) the end where they were to proceed, should be vnarmed againe: which needed not be done to the sides, for they carried the whole breadth of the wall with them. But in truth, the weight of the wall, with the continuall passage thereupon, made the whole worke to sinke to the verie rocke; being from the top of the chanell sixteene foot, and from the face of the water at the flood, almost as much more. But in the end, it was a wonder to see how the multitude of carriages (being well plied) preuailed, euen ouer the flood: which though it rose exceeding fast, and was come to the verie brinke or vpermost lane of the wall, a new course of courts came from time to time and supplied the want; which if it should haue staied a minute longer, would haue turned to great losse: for they could haue wrought no longer that tide.

How the wall was saued from being wasted.

More.

The order of arming.

Inferior purueiors.

Clerke. Expenditor.

In this maner they proceeded, vntill there was made of the crosse wall about fiue and twentie rods, which they wrought alwaies (as they went) aboue the high water marke (otherwise it could neuer haue beene performed) and so they passed through the chanell or riuer, and caried the wall beyond the same three or foure rods, so as the backe water or chanell had no issue to passe downe into the sea; but as it rose aboue the flats, and ran awaie before the end of the wall; whense they continuallie droue it further and further by lengthening the same. Howbeit, by this meanes they wrought alwaies in the water, which was verie discommodious. This riuer therefore manie men would haue had turned some other waie; otherwise it was thought, that this wall could not haue beene made, the turning whereof would haue beene diuerse waies inconuenient. First, for the extreame charge; secondlie, the hauens mouth would (for want hereof) haue soone beene swarued vp; thirdlie, Poins his worke, which cost one thousand & two hundred pounds, should haue bin hereby frustrated; fourthlie, the hauen (all that time) and all passage vnto Douer had beene vtterlie taken awaie, to the great hinderance and vndoing of the townsmen there. But sir Thomas Scot, who imploied his head and mind to seeke all aduantages for the setting forward of this worke, and had conceiued a perfect plot for the finishing of the same, caused a cut to be made in the wall, and a small sluse to be laid in the verie place where the chanell did first run, which serued (for the time) not onelie to giue naturall passage to the riuer, and to maintaine the hauens mouth: but as a bridge also for the courts to passe ouer the water, to the further end of the wall; which now by this meanes remained drie and free from water vntill the flood, to the great aduantage and commoditie of the worke.

The inconuenience which would haue followed the diuerting of the riuer another waie.

A sluse made of diuerse good purposes.

This sluse was composed with two arches, in length sixtie foot (besides the splaies) at each end, in breadth eight foot, and in depth also eight foot, and the charge thereof amounted not to aboue one hundred marks. In truth, the laieng of this sluse was a verie dangerous and difficult peece of worke, and the executioners thereof worthie of commendation, for with great courage to dow their countrie seruice they aduentured their liues in more perill than I can well expresse. Manie were astonied to behold the dangerous case of the workemen, and diuerse departed from the place as being loth to see the poore mens destruction. Wherein the said Reginald Smith, and the Romneie marshmen dealt with great dexterisie and courage; when all other almost had giuen it ouer, persisting in continuall and extreame trauell thereabouts, by the space of two daies and one night without intermission.

A difficult and dangerous worke.

After the cut was digged through the wall, the sluse was laid by peecemeale, at the direction of him and the foresaid Richard Coast, William Norris, and John Bowle, whose hands were as busie also as anie others in the dooing thereof. And as they were trauelling hereabouts, the weight of the wall it selfe, with the earth cast out of the trench thereunto, and the multitude of the beholders standing thereon, made a clift or crase therein, consisting of manie hundred lodes of earth, which declined towards the cut where they wrought to laie the sluse, and was redie to fall vpon them all, so as they were faine to sustaine the side therof with shores which they supported chéefelie with their owne force. Which if they had not done with great art & labour, by the space of diuerse hours together, the wall had fallen into the place where the sluse should haue beene laid, to the destruction of sundrie people, and to the discomfort of manie belonging to the works. But these marshmen neuer gaue ouer, till euerie sticke thereof was laid, at what time ech man reioised that meant well to the works, and diuerse bestowed rewards vpon the workemen, and praise was giuen to God for his fauour shewed in that behalfe.

This worke being thus performed, the courts (which during that time were altogither set to worke at maister lieutenants wall) did now diuide themselues againe, and returne to worke as before at sir Thomas Scots wall, and at euerie side wrought with with singular diligence & great facilitie. And God so fauored those works, as there were not lost in all that summer by meanes of foule wether aboue three daies and a halfe, wherein either courts or labourers were put from their worke, and in all those businesse not one person slaine, and yet almost in euerie action belonging thereunto there was imminent danger, as first you heard in the taleng of the sluse. And manie times in digging of chalke, they stood in the cliffe and vndermined it, so as sometimes an hundred lode fell downe at once from vnder their feet, and sometimes from aboue their heads; and yet through Gods goodnes, & their diligent care, all escaped without hurt: sauing two persons, vpon whom great chalke rocks and much abundance of earth did fall, and yet were recouered without losse of life or of lim. In the passage also of the courts, if (by chance) either man or boie had fallen downe amongest them (as sometimes some did) the hill was so steepe at some places, and the court was so swift, that there could be no staie made, but the courts must run ouer them, and yet no great harme hath happened that waie. And I my selfe haue seene a court loden with earth passe ouer the bellie or stomach of the driuer, and yet he not hurt at all therby.

Gods blessing and fauour shewen to the works of Douer.

Dangers happilie escaped.

Manie courts also being vnloden (for expedition) were driuen at low waters through the chanell, within the pent, from maister lieutenants wall, whereby they gained more than halfe the waie: and so long as by anie possibilitie they might passe that waie, they were loth to go about. And when the flood came, the chanell did so suddenlie swell, as manie horsses with their courts and driuers which rode in them were ouertaken, or rather ouerwhelmed with water, and were forced to swim, with great hazard of life, though therat some tooke pleasure. For sometimes the boies would strip themselues naked, and ride in that case in their courts through the chanell, being so high, as they were ducked ouer head and eares: but they knew their horsses would swim and carrie them through the streame, which ministred to some occasion of laughter and mirth. Finallie, this summer, being in the yeare of our Lord one thousand fiue hundred eightie and three, was verie hot and contagious, & the infection of the plague that yeare more vniuersallie dispersed through England than in manie yeares before, and that towne verie much subiect thereunto, by means of throughfare and common passage, and had bene extremelie visited therewith not long before, so as the towne was abandoned of most men; yea of some of the inhabitants themselues for that cause: and yet God blessed so the works, as in this extraordinarie and populous assemblie, there was in no part of the towne anie death or infection either of townsmen or workmen, which resorted thither from all the parts of England.

Boies plaie.

And one thing more in mine opinion is to be noted and commended herein, that is to saie, that in all this time, and among all these people, there was neuer anie tumult, fraie, nor falling out, to the disquieting or disturbance of the works, which by that means were the better applied, and with lesse interruption. For they neuer ceased working the whole daie, sauing that at eleuen of the clocke before noone, as also at six of the clocke in the euening, there was a flag vsuallie held vp by the sargent of the towne, in the top of a tower, except the tide or extraordinarie businesse forced the officers to preuent the houre, or to make some small delaie & staie therof. And presentlie vpon the signe giuen, there was a generall shout made by all the workers: and whersoeuer anie court was at that instant either emptie or loden, there was it left, till one of the clocke after noone or six of the clocke in the morning, when they returned to their businesse. But by the space of halfe an houre before the flag of libertie was hanged out, all the court driuers entered into a song, whereof although the ditie was barbarous, and the note rusticall, the matter of no moment, & all but a iest: yet is it not vnworthie of some briefe note of remembrance; because the tune or rather the noise thereof was extraordinarie, and (being deliuered with the continuall voice of such a multitude) was verie strange. In this and some other respect, I will set downe their ditie, the words whereof were these:

The flag of libertie.

O Harrie hold vp thy hat, t'is eleuen * a clocke, * Or six.
and a little, little, little, little past:
My bow is broke, I would vnyoke,
my foot is sore, I can worke no more.

This song was made and set in Romneie marsh, where their best making is making of wals and dikes, and their best setting is to set a needle or a stake in a hedge: howbeit this is a more ciuill call than the brutish call at the theatre for the comming awaie of the plaiers to the stage. I thinke there was neuer worke attempted with more desire, nor proceeded in with more contentment, nor executed with greater trauell of workemen, or diligence of officers, nor prouided for with more carefulnesse of commissioners, nor with truer accounts or duer paie, nor contriued with more circumspection of the deuisers and vndertakers of the worke, nor ended with more commendation or comfort: sauing that vpon the seuen & twentith of Julie, being S. James his daie, the verie daie when the crosse wall and the long wall met, and were ioined together, and in effect finished (for both wals were brought aboue the high water marke, and nothing remained to be done of the same but highthening, which might be done at anie time after) sir Thomas Scot the principall pikler of that worke fell sicke vpon the wals, and was conueied thense in a wagon to his house, where he remained six weeks, more likelie to die than to liue, whose ladie and wife (being a most vertuous and noble matrone, & a liuelie paterne of womanhood and sobrietie, the daughter of sir John Baker knight, and the mother of seuentéene children) vsed such diligent attendance and continuall care for hir husbands recouerie of helth, as thereby she brought hir selfe into so weake state of bodie, as being great with two children, she fell sicke; and after hir vntimelie trauell, being deliuered of a sonne and a daughter, she ended hir mortall life.

A commendation of them which wrought or had anie charge about Douer works.

Sir Thomas Scot fell sicke in Douer works.

The death of the ladie Scot.

This sicknesse of sir Thomas Scot, and that which fell out thereupon, was no small discomfiture to him and all his. And the workmen at Douer made such mone for his sicknesse, and also for his absence, that euerie street was replenished with sorrow and greefe; and the people would be comforted with nothing more, nor anie waie be better incouraged to worke lustilie, than to be told that sir Thomas Scot was well recouered, and would shortlie be amongst them againe. And in truth, they translated their barbarous musicke into a sorrowfull song, and in steed of calling to Harrie for their dinner, they called to God for the good health and returne of their best frend sir Thomas Scot, and that with a generall and continuall outcrie, euen in their old accustomed tune & time. But the courts proceeded in highthening the wals, vntill they were raised about two foot higher than they were on S. James his daie, when the wals met togither; so as the crosse wall is ninetie foot broad in the bottome, and about fiftie foot in the top. The long wall is seuentie foot in the bottome, and almost fortie foot in the top, in so much as vpon either wall two courts may meet and passe, or turne without troubling eche other. The length of the crosse

The bredth, depth, length, and charge of the long and crosse wall, with the arming, &c.

crosse wall is foztie rods, the length of the long wall a hundzed and twentie rods. The charge of these two wals, with the appurtenances, amounted to two thousand and seauen hundzed pounds, as appeareth in the expenditors books. If there were anie issue oz draining of water vnder the wals, it was soone stopped by the peise of the wall it selfe, which neuer left sinking till it came to the foundation of the rocke, except by some ouersight of the workemen some part thereof were set vpon the beach, which should by order haue bene first removed, & in that case they benched it, digging a trench at the foot of that part of the wall, and filling the same with earth, they made it verie tight, and so might anie such place be perfected and amended if need should require. But at this houre there leaketh not a drop of water vnder oz through anie part of the wall that anie man maie perceiue oz see: so as a full pent shrinketh not anie whit at all betwixt tide and tide, whereas the allowance of one foot leakage oz fall at the least was required of them, which exhibited the plot of the woodden wall, which being measured from the top oz face of the high pent diminisheth almost one quarter thereof. And thus betwixt the first of Maie and midst of August, this pent, which was thought vnpossible to be done in three yeares, was perfectlie finished in lesse than three months, and remaineth in so good and sure state, as the longer it standeth, the better and tighter it will be.

A necessarie remedie if water draine vnder the wall

Expedition necessarie and profitable.

The state of the wals.

If neuer anie thing should be added herevnto, this pent (by reason of the abundance of water reteined therein, and issuing out of the sluse) would mainteine a good hauen in that place; for the violent course therof will alwaies open the hauens mouth, and make a fret there, euen downe to the rocke, although it be distant from the same three score rods; in somuch as at this instant there maie come in at quarter floud a barke of foztie oz fiftie tun, and at full sea a ship of three hundzed tun and vpwards. But when the two iuttie heads are once finished (which are now in hand) so as the hauens mouth be perfected, anie ship whatsoeuer maie enter in thereat, and remaine within that rode in good safetie.

A sure triall latelie made of the good effect of the pent.

But as at manie other times heretofore there hath bene sure triall had of the good effects of this pent, so now in this last moneth of October one thousand fiue hundzed foure score and six, one gate of the sluse being by mischance broken, so as by the space of foure daies there could be no water reteined within the pent, to scowze the mouth of the hauen, the same was so choked and swarued vp with sand and beach in that space, as no bote could enter in, oz passe out of the same: insomuch as Edward Wootton esquire, being then at Douer to passe thense in an ambassage from hir maiestie to the French king, was forced to send to Sandwich for a crater, to transport him to Calis, because no bote of Douer lieng within the rode could passe out at the hauens mouth. But assoone as the said gate of the sluse was repared, euen the next tide following, a vessell of three hundzed tun might and did easilie passe in and out thereat, one pent of water had so scowzed and depthened the same. Whereby it maie appeare, that neither the cost bestowed, nor the worke performed, hath bene vnprofitablie imploied, oz vnnecessarilie vndertaken.

A gate of the sluse broken.

Edward Wootton esquire ambassador into France.

The effect of the pent.

Now you shall vnderstand, that the small sluse which was first made and laied in the crosse wall in such sort, and for such purpose as hath bene declared, was taken vp after the said walles were finished, and a sluse of far greater charge was made by the aforesaid Peter Pet, who vndertooke to do it by great, and had for the same foure hundzed pounds, the laieng whereof did cost two hundzed pounds more at the least. This sluse conteineth in length foure score foot, in bredth sixteene foot, in depth thirteene, and hath in it two draw gates. It was one whole moneth in laieng, all which time the said lord Cobham made his abode there, and kept a most honorable and costlie table, furthering those works not onelie with his continuall presence and countenance, but also with his good direction, and that not at starts, but from morning till night, and from daie to daie, vntill the full accomplishing thereof.

Of the sluse.

The lord Cobham remaineth at Douer one whole moneth.

And in the meane time sir Francis Walsingham hir maiesties principall secretarie was not vncarefull of this action, as being the man without whome nothing was done, directing the course, and alwaie looking into the state thereof, and gaue continuall life thervnto, by prouiding monie for it, whereof when anie want approched, he neuer failed to see oz rather to send a sure supplie. Since the finishing of these wals and sluses, there hath bene much worke and charge imploied about one of the iuttie heads, and beautifieng of the harborough, wherin one George Carie of Deuonshire esquire, and one John Hill an auditor, haue bene the principall directors. But because that worke remaineth as yet vnperformed, the report thereof shall also remaine to be made by others that shall hereafter haue occasion to write of such affairs.

Sir Francis Walsingham principall friend to these works.

Of the late works.

¶ At the assises kept at the citie of Excester, the fourteenth daie of March, in the eight and twentith yeare of hir maiesties reigne, before sir Edmund Anderson knight lord chiefe iustice of the common pleas, and sargeant Fizedale one of the barons of the exchecker, iustices of the assises in the countie of Deuon and Cron, there happened a verie sudden and a strange sickenesse; first amongst the prisoners of the gaole of the castell of Cron, & then dispersed (vpon their triall amongst sundrie other persons: which was not much vnlike to the sickenesse that of late yeares happened at an assise holden at Oxford, before sir Robert Bell knight, lord chiefe baron of the exchecker, and iustice then of that assise; and of which sickenesse he amongst others died. This sickenesse was verie sharpe for the time, & few escaped, which at the first were infected therewith. It was contagious and infectious, but not so violent, as commonlie the pestilence is; neither doth there appeare anie outward vlcer oz sore.

The note of John Hooker alias Vowell concerning the sudden and strange sickenesse of late happening in Excester.

The originall cause of this infection whereto imputed.

The origen and cause thereof diuerse men are of diuerse iudgements. Some did impute it, and were of the mind, that it proceeded from the contagion of the gaole, which by reason of the close aire, and filthie stinke, the prisoners newlie come out of a fresh aire into the same, are in a short time for the most part infected therewith; and this is commonlie called the gaole sickenesse, and manie die thereof. Some did impute it to certeine poore Portingals, then prisoners in the said gaole. For not long before, one Barnard Drake esquier (afterwards dubbed knight) had bene at the seas, and meeting with certeine Portingals, come from New found land, and laden with fish, he tooke them as a good praise, and brought them into Dartmouth hauen in England; and from thense they were sent, being in number about eight and thirtie persons, vnto the gaole of the castell of Cron, and there were cast into the deepe pit and stinking dungeon.

Barnard Drake esquier.

The mischiefe of nastie apparell.

These men had bene before a long time at the seas, and had no change of apparell, nor laine in bed, and now lieng vpon the ground without succor oz relefe, were soone infected; and all for the most part were sicke, and some of them died, and some one of them was distracted: and this sickenesse verie soone after dispersed it selfe among all the residue of the prisoners in the gaole; of which disease manie of them them died, but all brought to great extremities, and verie hardlie escaped. These men, when they were to be brought before the foresaid iustices for their triall, manie of them were so weake and sicke, that they were not able to go nor stand; but were caried from the gaole to the place of iudgement, some vpon handbarrowes, and some betweene men leading them, and so brought to the place of iustice.

The sight of these mens miserable and pitifull cases, being thought (and more like) to be hunger starued than with sickenesse diseased, mooued manie a mans hart to behold and looke vpon them; but none pitied them more than the lords iustices themselues, and especiallie the lord chiefe iustice himselfe; who vpon this occasion tooke a better order for keeping all prisoners thenceforth in the gaole, and for the more often trials: which was now appointed to be quarterlie kept at euerie quarter sessions, and not to be posted anie more ouer, as in times past vntill the assises. These prisoners thus brought from out of the gaole to the iudgement place, after that they had béene staied, and pausedawhile in the open aire, and somewhat refreshed therwith, they were brought into the house, in the one end of the hall nære to the iudges seat, and which is the ordinarie and accustomable place where they do stand to their trials and arreignments.

The assise at Excester appointed to be quarterlie kept.

And howsoeuer the matter fell out, and by what occasion it happened, an infection followed vpon manie and a great number of such as were there in the court, and especiallie vpon such as were nerest to them were soonest infected. And albeit the infection was not then perceiued, because euerie man departed (as he thought) in as good health as he came thither: yet the same by little and little so crept into such, as vpon whom the infection was seized, that after a few daies, and at their home comming to their owne houses, they felt the violence of this pestilent sickenesse: wherein more died that were infected than escaped. And besides the prisoners, manie there were of good account, and of all other degrees which died thereof: as by name sargeant Flowredaie who then was the iudge of those trials vpon the prisoners, sir John Chichester, sir Arthur Basset, and sir Barnard Drake knights; Thomas Carew of Haccombe, Robert Carie of Clouelleigh, John Fortescue of Wood, John Waldron of Bradfield, and Thomas Kildone esquires, and iustices of the peace.

This sickness was contagious & mortall.

Principall men that died of that infection.

The losse of euerie of them was verie great to the commonwealth of that prouince and countrie: but none more lamented than these two knights, sir John Chichester, and sir Arthur Basset; who albeit they were but yong in yeares, yet ancient in wisedome, vpright in iudgement, and zealous in the ministration of iustice. Likewise Robert Carie, a gentleman striken in yeares, and a man of great experience, knowledge, and learning: he had béene a student of the common lawes of the realme at the temple, and verie well learned both therein, and vniuersallie séene in all good letters: an eloquent man of his speech, effectuall in deliuerie, deepe in iudgement, vpright in iustice, and considerat in all his doings. The more worthie were these personages, the greater losse was their deaths to the whole common wealth of that countrie. Of the plebeian and common people died verie manie, and especiallie constables, réeues, and tithing men, and such as were iurors, and namelie one iurie of twelue, of which there died eleuen.

Sir John Chichester, and sir Arthur Basset bemoned and commended.

Eleuen of the iurie with other officers die of this sicknesse.

This sicknesse was dispersed through out all the whole shire, and at the writing hereof in the fine of October, one thousand fiue hundred fourescore and six, it is not altogither extinguished. It resteth for the most part about fourétéene daies and vpwards by a secret infection, before it breake out into his force and violence. At the first comming, it made the people afraid and dismaid, manie men then pretending rather than performing the amendement of life. So long as the plague was hot and feruent, so long euerie man was holie and repentant: but with the slaking of the one, followed the forgetfulnesse of the other; euen as it is with a companie of shrewd children, who so long as the rod is ouer the head, so long feare of correction frameth them to aptnesse, conformitie, and obedience.

Affliction draweth men to God, &c.

¶ In the chronicles of Ireland, vpon occasion of seruice in the highest office there, mention was made here and there of sir Henrie Sidneie his saiengs and doings, where promise did passe (by means of discoursing his death) that the reader was to looke for a full declaration of his life and death in the chronicles of England, as course of time should giue direction. Now therefore hauing entred into the eight and twentith yeare of hir maiesties gratious gouernment, and the yeare of Christ 1586, the time most fitlie openeth a readie waie into the historie concerning that nobleman, penned by one that could not be ignorant of his affaires, considering the nærenesse and necessarinesse of his seruice, and therefore as a truth to be receiued.

An introduction to the historicall remembrance of the Sidneis, the father and the sonne, &c.

This right famous, renowmed, worthie, vertuous and heroicall knight, by father and mother verie noblie descended, was from his infancie bred and brought vp in the princes court, and in nærenesse to his person vsed familiarlie euen as a companion, and manie times a bedfellow. After that by course of nature and lawfull descent, this yong prince was inuested in the kingdome and imperiall crowne, he aduanced this gallant noble gentleman (partlie as it séemed for the singular loue and entire affection he formerlie bare him) to be a principall gentleman of his priuie chamber. For he was then reputed for comelinesse of person, gallantnesse & liuelinesse of spirit, vertue, qualitie, beautie, & good composition of bodie, the onelie od man & paragon of the court. And from time to time this good and most godlie king held such delight in his pleasant, modest, and sweet conuersation and companie, as he would sildome or neuer giue him leaue to be absent from him, till his last breth that he departed this life in his armes at Grænwich. Such exceeding expectation & hope was conceiued of this honorable gentleman in his yonger yeares, as he was specialliechosen and sent ambassador to Henrie the first then French king, concerning matter verie important, being at that time not fullie one and twentie yeares old, and performed his charge with that singular commendation, wisedome, spirit and dexteritie, as at sundrie times not long after, he was employed in ambassage both in France & Scotland, yea somtime twise in one yere.

The noble of Edmund Molineux touching sir Henrie Sidneis life and death.

His education in his youth.

His employment in ambassage.

He was foure seuerall times lord iustice of Ireland, and three times by speciall appointment and commission sent deputie out of England: at each which seuerall time, he by his wisedome and good gouernement appeased and suppressed a great and an actuall rebellion, the seeds whereof were for the most part sowen and the fire kindled (though smothlie and cunninglie hid and couered) before his comming, or in the time of his absence. In his first deputation he suppressed the rebellion of Shane Oneill, and floured the top of the castell of Dublin with the archrebels head. In his second he suppressed the most dangerous insurrection begun and long continued by some of the Butlers. In the third the commotion of the erle of Clanricard, & his two graceless hopefull sonnes Shane and Ulike Bourke.

Foure times lord iustice, & twise lord deputie of Ireland.

He suppressed by force and policie three actuall rebellions.

reuiued and put in execution the lawes for the abolishing of coine and liuerie.

Immediatlie after his first arriuall deputie, he caused the old statutes and ordinances for the abolishing of coine and liuerie (the ancient festering sore and creeping canker of that countrie and commonwealth) to be reuiued and put in due execution, against sundrie persons of calling and note, who were therewithall sharplie touched, whereupon followed a long time after great good to the countrie, and a speedie releefe to the poore oppressed people of that realme. He deuised that the remoter prouinces should be gouerned by presidents, after the imitation of the marches of Wales, from whense he tooke his patterne, being himselfe at that time president, holding opinion that there could be neither better nor a more expedit and easie means to reforme and reduce that barbarous countrie to perfect obedience and ciuilitie, than planting of presidents in the remoter prouinces, to the end vniuersall iustice might be currant amongst them, whereby the poore might be deliuered from the wonted exactions and tyrannes of the lords and great ones (by whom they were dailie spoiled and oppressed) and taste the sweet benefits and pleasant fruits of peace and quietnesse, the onelie singular commoditie, and the most happie blessing of wise, politike, and discreet gouernement.

He deuised the planting of presidents in the remoter prouinces.

He both first deuised, and consequentlie prudentlie executed, the plot for the diuision and distribution of the Irish countries into shire ground, whereby insued the currencie of hir maiesties writ, which before that time was either not knowne, or at least neuer vsed amongst them. He in his gouernment aduanced and increased the reuenues of the crowne by waie of custome, impost vpon wines, compositions with the Irishrie for rent and seruice, and other direct and commendable means, as out of casualties creating rents certeine, ten thousand pounds yearelie. And by good deuise and policie he had both intended, and would haue brought to passe and performed a farre greater increase, if enuie, spite, and malice of that vnhappie countrie had not crossed him, and opposed themselues all that they could, by purse or credit against his honorable, worthie, and commendable seruices & desseins: an example of rare note to be duelie followed, and carefullie executed by his successors, that Ireland may in short time be reduced to beare Irelands charges, and made both honorable and profitable to the crowne (as were to be wished.) He repaired the castell of Dubline, being vsed a long time before as a ruinous, vncleane, and filthie place, of no reckoning and accompt, stored onlie with mechanicall persons, and some of worse sort (the constable and his familie excepted) and left the same a conuenient and fit house for the gouernour to lie in, to which vse it now serueth and is imploied.

He deuised the lawes for the distribution of the Irish countries into shire ground.

He increased the reuenues ten thousand pounds yerlie.

He builded the bridge of Athelon ouer the riuer of Shenin, arched it with masonrie and free stone, strong wall and battlement, and made it of that strength, togither with that spaciousnesse and breedth, as two carts may (in maner) meet afront. By building of which bridge ouer so swift & great a streame, the passage was set open and made free out of the pale into Conaught, which before (by reason of the strenablenesse of the water) was not passable, which dawnted and appalled the rebells and traitors more, and kept them in greater awe and due obedience, than anie deuise or policie before had done, or other plot lightlie could then doo. He likewise began the walling and fortifieng of the towne of Carickfergus in Ulster, reedifieng of the towne of Athenrie in Conaught, the strengthening of Athelon with gates and other fortifications, the foundation and plot of the bridge of Caterlagh, and made a strong goale at Molingar, and walled the same about with stone, to imprison rebels, theeues, and other malefactors. And likewise he begun manie other needfull and necessarie works in sundrie other places which tended to the great furtherance and aduancement of seruice, but he left them Quasi opera inchoata: for he being called awaie so soone, time would not permit and allow him to finish and fullie to end them, or (it may be) by fatall appointment the time is not yet come the countrie deserueth so great a good and benefit of Gods eternall blessing.

His builings fortifications, and other necessarie works for the benefit and good of the countrie.

He found hir maiesties records laid as it were in an open place, whither anie man (that vouchsafed his paines) might come that would, not defended, but subiect to wind, raine, and all kind of weather, and so in a sort neglected, that they serued now and then (as I haue by good men and good meanes crediblie heard reported) in stead of better litter to rub horse heeles, which he with great care and diligence caused to be perused and sorted, and prepared an apt place within the castell of Dubline, well trimmed and boorded with a chimneie in the roome, where neither by the moisture of the wals, nor vnseasonablenesse of the weather, nor other meanes they could be subiect to harme. He prepared fit & conuenient places and seuerall diuisions to laie them apart, according to their seuerall natures, and appointed one of discretion and skill to looke to them, who also for his better incouragement was assigned a conuenient fee for his labor. He also caused the statutes, policies, and ordinances of that realme, which laie hid and not knowen to manie (though not destroied but kept in safetie) to be searched, surueied, and ouer viewed, by men of the best learning, skill, and discretion he could find or come by in that realme, giuing them in expresse charge to peruse and read all, and to collect such and so manie of them as they should in their discretions iudge and discerne to be expedient and necessarie to be published and knowen, to the end the same might be imprinted, as afterward they were, that no man thensforth might pretend ignorance in the lawes, statutes, & ordinances of his owne countrie where he was borne, which euerie man by our lawes is bound to know. And because he both saw and by experience found what defect grew in the administration of iustice, by reason of kinred, affinitie, corruption, parcialitie, as otherwise; he deuised, and earnestlie sought to haue Englishmen sent ouer to supplie the cheefe places of iustice. And for the better increase of hir maiesties reuenue and profit, he praied the like to serue in the roomes of hir highnesse attorneie generall and sollicitor.

He built conuenient roomes for the keeping and preseruation of the records which before were neglected.

He caused the statutes of Ireland to be imprinted which neuer before were published.

He procured some Englishmen to be sent ouer, for the better administration of iustice.

No man had a greater desire to aduance the publike euerie waie than he had, and in opinion greatlie magnified & esteemed all them that were of that mind: for he would manie times saie, that those were things memorable, of perpetuitie, fame, and last, where all priuat things died and perished with their priuat persons. Whersoeuer he was bestowed to serue, he had such a rare gift, gallant courtlie behauior, and comlinesse of person, as he gained the harts of manie, and such vniuersall liking and louing of all sorts of people to ward him, as they were euer desirous and neuer wearie of him; but speciall sute commonlie made of the grauest, best, and wisest sort amongst them, when he was reuoked to haue him returne and continue againe amongst them. He was (as best became him) verie aduised, circumspect, and carefull in the seruice of the state, not onelie setting apart, but in a sort neglecting all businesse of his owne, in respect of his charge. He was a perfect orator by nature, hauing such readinesse and facilitie of speech, flowing eloquence, sweet deliuerie, and passing memorie (for he seldome or neuer forgat anie thing he either read or heard) as he was speci-

A great furtherer of all publike works. The great loue he got him in all places where he serued.

His carefulnesse in the seruice of the state.

allie

allie noted a moſt rare man of all that did heare him. Such ample inſtructions he would giue for the framing and writing of his letters, or anie other thing he committed to be conceiued and put downe in writing, and diſpoſe the ſame in ſo good order and fine method, as a verie ſimple man, if he reteined and remembred but a part of that he ſaid and deliuered, might ſupplie himſelfe with matter inough to the purpoſe to write of.

And when by occaſion he happened vpon ſome dull conceipted ſpirited fellow (as Ireland and Wales now and then bred ſome ſuch) to whome he had giuen inſtructions to write, who afterwards brought him the ſame to ſigne, not couched in ſort as he liked or would haue it; his temperance, courteſie, and diſcreet modeſtie was ſuch, as he would neuer ſhew choler and impatience, rent the paper in peeces, or publikelie diſgrace the writer, but bid him not be diſcouraged for that fault: he could giue him the like inſtructions againe he gaue him before, but willed him then to marke and remember them better. At ech ſeuerall time he was ſent deputie into Ireland, he was by occaſion, and as time fell out, furniſhed with a new ſecretarie. The firſt was maſter Edward Waterhouſe, now knighted, and one of hir maieſties councell in Ireland. The ſecond maſter Edmund Tremaine, who after was preferred to be a clearke to hir maieſties councell on hir highneſſe perſon attendant. The third (who although it was thought of manie, who were in that caſe well able to iudge neither in paine, deſert, birth, nor breeding was much inferiour to the other two that were before him: yet in fortune, reward, or other recompenſe ſo far behind them, as this noble gentleman (who trulie honored vertue) maſter to them all three, would manie times in ſort lament, and deepelie bemone to his good friends, commending highlie this mans paine and diligence, attributing his hard hap to his owne miſhap, the time ſo ſerued he could not doo him good, which manie times & by ſundrie means he had earneſtlie attempted to doo; affirming often in ſolemne and earneſt proteſtation as well to him as others, that it greeued him not a little, his fortune was ſo bad, to come to him now in the declination and wane of the moone: for he was the ſole onelie man he had imploied about him in that neereneſſe and credit of ſeruice, wherein he had vſed him, that euer had quailed vnder his hands (for that was the terme he vſed) howbeit, he well hoped time or ſome good man (in reſpect his ſeruice was publike and not priuat) would repaire that then he could not doo. For he deemed the man right worthie regard and conſideration, that had ſerued him ſo long (and that in his great and roiall ſeruices, in ſo painefull and toileſome a place) without anie great wages, fee, or other interteinment growing to him in perpetuitie or other wais; which was either burthenous to his purſe, or proceeding by or from him by anie other degree, to the gentlemans benefit, increaſe of credit, or further aduancement, in recompenſe of his long ſeruice.

Verie expert and able he was of a bad clerke in time to frame a good ſecretarie.

Of great facilitie in diſpatch of common cauſes.

He had both a ſpeciall care & likewiſe a ſingular gift in diſpatch of common cauſes, and the people in like manner had a paſſing maruellous deſire to be heard & diſpatched by him. Therefore as well in part to ſatiſfie their humors and affections, as more completlie to performe the due and full meaſure of his charge (which was to heare and helpe all as neere as he could) he applied himſelfe greatlie thereunto, and would ſpare no paines, but indure maruellous toile and trauell to rid and diſpatch awaie ſuitors: which he could doo with ſuch dexteritie and wonderfull facilitie, as the ſame might ſeeme no wearineſſe and tediouſneſſe at all to him (that was halfe a hell to ſome others) but rather to be reckoned a kind of recreation and paſtime. He made manie beholding vnto him, for he (as much as laie in him) did benefit manie, and had more than an ordinarie deſire to doo for all his friends and faithfull followers; and ſo carefullie, earneſtlie, and painfullie he would trauell to aduance their particular ſuites, were it ſometimes to ſpeake to hir maieſtie hir ſelfe, or to the bodie of hir graue and honorable councell, or to anie priuat councellor apart, as though he had purpoſelie followed his owne moſt weightie cauſes.

A great deſire to doo for all men.

And as he was a moſt deere, kind, tender, and louing father to his children (for none could loue and eſteeme his children more than he did) and noting in them great minds and hautie courages, which drew them by degrees to exceſſe in expenſe, and more than an ordinarie liberalitie, he would ſometime fatherlie aduiſe them thus; that if they meant to liue in order, they ſhould euer behold whoſe ſonnes, & ſeldome thinke whoſe nephues they were: ſo he was an affable, gentle, courteous, conſtant, and honourable maſter to his ſeruants. For he would often ſaie, it was an eaſie matter for them to keepe him, but hard to recouer his loue and fauour, if they had once loſt him. And when anie of his noble and moſt louing friends would commend him greatlie (as manie times they would) that he made much of his old ſeruants (for few that came to him euer went from him, but ſuch as were firſt aduanced by him to better preferment) he would anſwer pleſantlie after his wonted mirth; Lord I giue thee thanks, that of thoſe thou gaueſt me I haue not loſt one. He was marueilous affable and courteous of nature, of eaſie acceſſe, and pleſantlie familiar with anie that had occaſion to repaire vnto him, & ſtrict and preciſe in the obſeruation of good order. For he would ſeldome breake it in anie reſpect, but vpon euident, knowne, and moſt iuſt cauſe, or when he was ouerruled (as ſometimes he was) by ſuch as had ſouereigne power to direct and command him. Extraordinarie courſes he alwaies vtterlie miſliked, eſpeciallie when order was peruerted, or iuſtice hindered, whereby the common ſocietie of mans life is onelie preſerued and maintained; which two things ſpeciallie purchaſed him ſuch vniuerſall goodwill euerie where (and namelie amongſt the officers of hir maieſties moſt honorable houſhold, with whome he would manie times be familiarlie conuerſant) as they haue often wiſhed he might haue beene honored with a white ſtaffe, to haue borne office with authoritie amongſt them.

A tender father to his children and a louing maſter to his ſeruants.

Solitario homini atque magno vitam agenti omnia inſtitia neceſſaria eſt.

He was inwardlie beloued of the officers of hir maieſties houſhold.

His nature was ſo tempered with modeſtie, pietie and patience, as he ſeldome ſhewed heat or choler, how greeuous ſo euer the offenſe was which was giuen him. He was a faſt friend where he profeſſed friendſhip, and no reuengefull ſo when he was offended; & hardlie would he be remooued in friendſhip from his friend or follower, but vpon moſt iuſt, certeine, and knowne cauſe, which he could not ſmulther, and would not hide from the partie. I haue manie times heard him ſaie, and by occaſion haue ſeene the ſame written in his owne letters, that he was dubbed knight (by that noble and vertuous prince king Edward) the ſelfe ſame daie ſir William Cecill (then principall ſecretarie, now lord treaſuror of England) was, by meanes whereof and that ſir William Cecill was (yea euen in thoſe daies) eſteemed a moſt rare man, both for ſundrie and ſingular gifts of nature, learning, wiſedome, and integritie: and partlie by the friendlie good offices of that true paterne of humanitie and courteſie, ſir John Cheeke, then ſchoolemaſter to the king (a choiſe deare friend to them both) that there began ſuch an entrie of acquaintance, knowledge, loue, mutuall goodwill, and intire friendſhip betwixt them, as continued alwais

He was dubbed knight the ſame daie ſir William Cecill was.

ſted-

stedfast, firme, and vnuariable after till his dieng daie. Nihil autem est amabilius, nec copulantius, quàm morum similitudo bonorum. In quibus enim eadem studia sunt, eademque voluntates, in hijs fit vt æquè quisque altero delectetur ac se ipso. So that manie times in his life time he would acknowledge & confesse how greatlie he and his were bound in good will, and tied in dutie and friendship, to this right worthie and noble personage, Verus pater patriæ: to whome manie ages nor worlds can scarse once affoord a fellow or pere. For speciall fauours, louing courtesies, and amiable benefits & good turns they had receiued by his meanes, and at his owne hands sundrie waies.

Fortunat in warre, and no lesse happie in peace.

He was of that euen temperature, commixtion, and perfection, as it was hard to iudge, whether to attribute more commendation and praise to his gouernement in the time of peace, or to his good hap and policie in warre, he was in both so fortunat. In his iourneis he would comfort his souldiors with these words; My good friends and most louing companions: and where soeuer he came, his chiefe and principall care was to foresee their wants, and to prouide for their necessities. And when it so fell out (as sometimes it did) that he had not wherewithall to supplie the same, he would bestow vpon them so good countenance and honorable kind speaches, as the same would haue contented and satisfied them much better, than some other gouernor could haue done with halfe a supplie of that he would: so great a conqueror he was of hearts, and of the goodwils of all men, that serued with and vnder him. He was alwaies most vpright in iustice, yet of himselfe naturallie inclined to mercie (where he hoped it would worke amendement.)

Passing well beloued of his souldiors.

He was vpright in iustice, yet withall inclined to mercie.

He greatlie honored all men of science and skill, in what good art soeuer, and was most apt and readie to pleasure them: for he would manie times saie, Science was to be honored whersoeuer it was to be found: Nam nemo nascitur artifex. He was so zealous in all vertue and godlinesse, as he neuer omitted in court nor campe, at home or abrode, publike morning and euening praier; which he did attend deuoutlie vpon his knees, besides his other priuat praiers & meditations euerie daie he did arise, and go to bed, which he seldome failed. He would neuer in publike assemblies, consultations, field, or feast, omit anie thing that apperteined to his office or honor: & alwaies delighted to keepe an orderlie liberall and honorable house (greatlie to the releefe & comfort of the poore) according to the reputation & degree of his place and calling. He had steward, treasuror, controllor, auditor, clearke controllor, clearke of his kitchen, and maister cooke, besides other ordinarie clearks and inferior officers and ministers of houshold, who could in their degrees well and skilfullie execute their seuerall rooms and places; and knew in honor, state, and ceremonie in assemblies, solemnities, and feasts, how to serue him as he should be. His knowledge in Ireland was far greater than anie one mans of our time hath beene, aswell touching the naturall conditions, guise and maners of the people generallie, as each particular prouince seuerallie: and for the perfect and sound gouernement of the whole vniuersallie, no one man could saie more. Others that haue succeeded him, haue built vpon his foundations, and framed their plots of gouernement after his deuises: but the originall came from him, it must be confessed by them all, if they vouchsafe him but onelie that apperteineth vnto him by iust desert, and most meere right.

He reuerenced all men of science.

He omitted not morning and euening praier.

Liberall and honorable in hospitalitie.

His skill far exceeded other mens in knowledge and secrets of Ireland.

And here due place is offered (although hapilie to some it maie seeme a digression) to speake somewhat of the planting of presidents; because the same hath beene vnder hand obscurelie and cunninglie carried, and according to mens fansies and imaginations diuerslie reported; and some of his shadows haue seemed to cloth themselues with his vertues, and attribute his onelie seruices aswell in that, as in some other things, to their owne priuat and peculiar praises. To repeat the matter from the beginning, after this noble knight & right worthie gouernor, had found how necessarie a thing it was, the planting of presidents in the remoter prouinces of Ireland; he certified his opinion ouer: which was well conceiued, liked, and digested; both of his highnesse, and also of his graue and right honorable councell. So that not long after, certeine speciall men were thought of to be chosen, and spedilie sent thither, as in deed there were; and sir John Perot appointed president of Mounster, and sir Edward Fitton for Connagh. The first by reason of his sicknesse, feblenesse, and that some parts and lims of his bodie were suddenlie become benummed, neuer possessed the place he was assigned vnto; but sir John Perot was forthwith sent, and presentlie succeeded in the roome he should haue had. At whose seuerall arriuals (for the one came somewhat after the other) ech was immediatlie dispatched to his seuerall charge, with ample authoritie, commission, and instructions deriued from the deputie for their seating and placing in those two offices. And after he had in this sort stalled them both, he made his present repare into England, before whose returne againe, these two presidents were (as it seemed) for vrgent cause, and by speciall fauour, licenced to come ouer againe. So that their roomes in their absence were supplied (in a sort) by interchange of commissioners; whereby not long after insued great hurt, wast, spoile, and disorder in either of those two prouinces.

He placed sir John Perot and sir Edmard Fitton presidents.

Sir Edward Fitton was afterwards made treasuror at the warres, and in that roome paied the due debt to nature; and sir John Perot returned no more to his former office. By meanes whereof, a supplie of others was thought of, and sir William Dzurie was appointed president for Mounster; and captaine Nicholas Malbie, a gentleman hir maiesties seruant, was assigned for the seruice in Connagh. Howbeit, the name of lord president being thought a little too high and great for this gentleman, in respect of the meanesse of his liuing and hauiour; he bare the name onelie of colonell, and chiefe commissioner of Connagh; hauing neuertheless equall authoritie as sir Edward Fitton, late lord president there had in the said prouince. These two discreet, worthie, and expert marshall men, were placed by like authoritie, instructions, and commission, as their predecessors had beene; the lord deputie in person accompanieng them to their seuerall charges, and so left them setled. And maister Malbie, for the better credit and countenance of the place he was to enter then into, was dubbed knight in the church of Athelon, and with that addition and increase of title was left in his charge, who after did acceptable and commendable worthie seruice.

He placed sir William Dzurie president of Mounster, and sir Nicholas Malbie colonell of Connagh.

But now to returne to the place where I left: as for the view and knowledge of the soile, hauens, ports, promontories, necks of lands, and creeks, or whatsoeuer secret or mysterie else was to be vnderstood; take it from the north to the south, from the east to the west: no one man (yea although he were of that countrie birth) had seene more, or obserued so much as he had done. His manie, long, and painefull iourneis compared and laid togither (if they maie be well sorted, and truelie and sincerlie reported) testifie no lesse than I haue said. For better manifostation whereof, his circular discourses (as he named them) put downe, and written with his owne hand, which are extant and to be seene, will make the matter more than euident and apparent.

He had seene and knowne more of Ireland than anie one, yea of that countrie birth.

The loue and affection the Irishrie bare him, shew manie of them to ciuilitie.

He often inuited the gentlemen of the better reformed Irishrie, newlie reclamed to ciuilitie, to comelinesse in habit, and clenlinesse in diet, house, and lodging; which partlie in respect of the great loue & affection they bare him, and partlie of frendlie feare to offend him, manie afterwards obserued and followed. This one thing, amongst manie others, was noted verie rare in him; that being a big, well liking, and complet full bodie; he could content nature, and satisfie himselfe with so little sleepe as he did. For he seldome kept his bed aboue six houres (if he were in health) neither after he arose would he take in the daie time anie kind of repose. And when he had occasion to trauell, were it in post for speciall seruice, or other ordinarie iourneie; he would manie times rise vp, and throughlie wearie most of his traine and companie: for he had that abilitie and strong constitution of bodie, that none could lightlie indure the continuall laborsome toile and trauell at all times and seasons as he could; nor that hardnesse of diet for the time as he himselfe would doo. Nothing euer offended him more than vnkindnesse and ingratitude; speciallie where he hoped (and the world thought) he had deserued otherwise (whereof sometimes in the course of his life he had his part) and when he was vexed and oppressed with that extreame, vnnaturall, and most cruell corrosiue fit, his reuenge was commonlie vpon himselfe, it went no further; which he could not so cunninglie hide, but manie times amongst his friends he would outwardlie bewraie it, by some shew and outward action: so that the greefe and passion of his inward tormented mind would manifestlie appeare, which was to him (as it seemed) for the time some ease and contentment.

Summa & perfecta gloria constat ex tribus hijs: si diligit multitudo, si fidem habet, si cum admiratione quadam honore nos dignos putat.

Little giuen to repose and ease in the night.

He would in his iourneis wearie and late vp most of his companie.

Nothing offended him more than ingratitude.

When he had occasion offered to deale in matters great or small; his sinceritie, plaine, and naked dealing was euer such, as he would commonlie knit vp his speeches with this phrase; My word is my worke, & so they should find it. He had that passing readinesse of speech, and delectable sweet oratorie deliuerie (when he was yong) as now and then (as occasion fell out) that he was forced to speake at length in solemne sittings or publike assemblies (as sometimes he was) that he would readilie make and coine words out of his owne forge, and could in such good sort, so apt, fashion, fit, and grace them; as albeit they were neuer either heard, vsed, or receiued before: yet his mouth seemed a sufficient warrant to others for their naturalization, admission, and common vse afterwards. He was naturallie pleasant, and verie merilie conceipted; yet withall graue, wise, discreet, expert, readie in matters of councell, both inuentiue and iudicious, a good antiquarie, skilfull in storie, pedegree, and armes, languaged (for he profited greatlie both by trauell and conference) and not meanelie learned. Which noble vertues and excellent qualities he manie times did and could well shew, as time, place, and occasion required, with an heroicall presence and maiestie. He was so stored with such sound grounds and principles for ciuill policie and gouernment, as it would greatlie haue delighted, yea the best and ripest wits to haue heard him discourse at length in those matters: and he was a speciall rare man, that learned not at euerie time somewhat from him he had not heard before worth his comming. So friendlie, courteous, and sociable he was with all his assistants, collegues, and companions; as they intirelie loued and greatlie honored him.

In his dealings his word was his worke.

He would now and then coine words.

Some description of his vertues.

Sociable with his assistants.

In Ireland he made speciall choise of two worthie councellors, whom for their faithfulnes in councell for the state, good will and frendship towards him, and for their integritie & sinceritie euerie waie, he intirelie loued and assuredlie trusted. One was sir Lucas Dillon who yet liueth, the other maister Francis Agard who is now departed: both these so agreed and concurred in opinion with him, and applied their wits and indeuors so dutifullie, and with so great zeale and affection to the aduancement of seruice, and the good and quiet of the countrie, as ech in emulation frendlie contended with other who should doo the best seruice. To the one he would saie, Lucas mihi solus relictus est: the other he commonlie called Fidus Achates. Much more might be said (though a great deale too little) of this complet, honorable, and right worthie gentleman, who priuat and publike carried himselfe alwaies so iustlie, vprightlie, and euenlie, as (for the most part) noble fame went afore him, and loue followed and accompanied him as a shadow whersoeuer he went. He had an intention, which proceeded by degrees to motion in parlement, to haue erected some publike schooles and nurseries of learning, which by degrees and in time might haue growen to an vniuersitie, for the better reformation of the barbarisme of that countrie, and offered a large yeerelie portion of his owne to the furtherance of so good a purpose. But I know not how, Nondum venit hora, it tooke no place in deed, though in the beginning great apparance & shew in words was made to haue verie manie venerable fautors, and more worthie and rich furtherers.

He made speciall choise of sir Lucas Dillon, and Francis Agard.

Much more might be said of this honorable gentleman.

His intention to haue erected certaine nurseries of learning.

In one thing his fortune was most hard, & he more than twise vnhappie, that his seruice (for the most part) was subiect to the eare, and not obiect to the eie, by meanes whereof his noble vertues and deserts were manie times suppressed, and seldome or neuer seene, but his faults often told and willinglie heard; and so consequentlie his seruice obedient to great misreport, slander, & calumniation. As it fell out among other matters for his last seruice in Ireland, that manie gaue out how he had taken that realme to farme, in respect of the composition he made with the queene: so that whatsoeuer paine and trauell he tooke, either for the aduancement of the reuenue of the crowne, or maintenance and defense of the prerogatiue roiall, it was giuen out and spread abroade, that what he did was for himselfe and for his owne gaine and benefit: where in truth in that seruice he spent his yeares, sold his lands, & consumed much of his patrimonie to the hinderance of his posteritie, without anie great recompense or reward (though others perhaps that were both before him, and since haue succeeded him, haue gained by the place and countenance of that seruice.) He held both the cheefe offices of Ireland and Wales togither at one time, and was likewise companion of the most honorable order of the garter (such was his speciall fauor and grace with hir maiestie) which no one priuat subiect hath held at once, and inioied so great titles and dignities togither, at the least that I haue heard or read of; were he not a kings sonne, vncle, or nephue: so that his fortune in shew and apparance was great, though in respect of gaine & benefit to himselfe, nothing equiualent with his vertues. Which ample authoritie & large scope of dominion & gouernement procured him (and not his owne deserts) manie enuious, heauie, and potent enimies. Howbeit, his innocencie was euer his buckler and shield of defense against them: so that their complaints (though for a time they might and did a little hinder him) yet seldome or neuer they preuailed against him. And when he had passed ouer such cloudie mists and ouerthwart storms, he would pleasantlie saie vnto his frends;

His priuate was subiect to the eare, and not to the eie, whereby his vertues manie times were suppressed.

He was deputie of Ireland and president of Wales both at one time.

friends; Salutem ab iis qui oderunt nos: for the more they contended to ſuppreſſe him, the more (like the camomill being foiled and troden) his vertues roſe vp and appeared, and their malice was both vnfolded and controlled.

This noble knight, graue councellor, complet gentleman, and moſt worthie and rare ſubiect, departed this life at the biſhops palace at Worceſter, the fift daie of Maie, in the yeare of our Lord one thouſand fiue hundred eightie and ſix (being 57 yeares old complet, wanting onelie one moneth and fiftéene daies) about foure of the cloke in the morning, after he had continued ſeuen daies ſicke of a kind of cold palſeie, as the phyſicians decréed of the diſeaſe, which happened vnto him (as it was of manie ſaid, and of mo thought) by reaſon of an extreme cold he tooke vpon the water in his paſſage and remoue by barge betwéene Bewdlie and Worceſter, not long after he had béene purged, and his bodie not fullie ſetled, but his pores remaining ſtill open (as it is moſt like) by reaſon of an extraordinarie loſeneſſe which conſequentlie followed the taking of his phyſike which could not be ſtopped; hauing then béene lord preſident of hir maieſties councell eſtabliſhed in the dominion and principalitie of Wales ſix and twentie yeares complet, without anie change or alteration, or abſolute tranſferring the roome or authoritie to anie other in the meane time. For whoſe death there was great mone and lamentation (eſpeciallie by thoſe vnder his gouernement) as hauing loſt that ſpeciall noble man, whome for courteſie they loued, for iuſtice amongeſt them they highlie honored, and for manie other his rare gifts and ſingular vertues they in his life time greatlie eſtéemed, and at his death maruellouſlie bémoned, lifting vp both hands and hearts to almightie God, and heartilie wiſhing, and humblie praieng a like might ſucceed in the place as he had béene.

And like as he liued and continued euer in much fame, great countenance, credit and honor; ſo his buriall was prepared & performed accordinglie. For his bodie by eaſie iorneies and ſhort remoues was conueied from Worceſter vnto his houſe at Penſhurſt in Kent, verie honorablie and well attended with great traine, ceremonie, and all other things apperteining to funerall order, honor, and ſolemnitie: where he was honorablie interred the one and twentith daie of June following. He was before imbowelled, and his intrals buried in the deans chapell in the cathedrall church at Worceſter; his heart brought to Ludlow, and buried in the toome with his déere beloued daughter Ambroſia, in the little oratorie he made in the ſemicollegiat pariſh church there, wherein he erected this monument. To this towne of Ludlow eſpeciallie, and ſo in like maner to Tikenhill houſe he carried euer good liking and affection, as might appeare by his often reſort & abode at thoſe two places in the time of his preſidencie, as by ſome other tokens & worthie remembrances he left in perpetuitie to remaine vnto them that ſhould come after, as certeine demonſtrations and ſignes of his former good will.

Neither muſt I here forget (except I ſhould herein forget my ſelfe) to ſpeake of the church of Hereford, whome (when by occaſion of iuſtice he was reſident there with them) as they intirelie loued and greatlie honored, ſo he in like ſort accepting and acknowledging their kindneſſe and good will (ſuch was euer the ſetled vertue and paſſing bountie of his good nature) that he preſented them, and left to continue and remaine to poſteritie amongſt them, a ſpeciall note of remembrance. By meanes of which honorable and friendlie gift and courteous token ſo louinglie beſtowed, and left to that ſocietie & companie (as the laſt pledge of his former affection & good will borne towards them) he hath béene ſince manie times honorablie remembred, and (no doubt) is and ſtill hereafter maie and will be both eſtéemed, loued, honored, & held (as he alwaies deſerued) in freſh and freſher memorie amongeſt them. With this report concerning ſir Henrie Sidneie (a noble man neuer ſufficientlie commended) accordeth that of C.O. ſet downe in his Eirenarchia, where amongſt diuerſe honorable perſonages, I find this note of coherence:

Quid cunctos memorem, ſupereſt tamen vnus, & ille Henricus Sidneus.
Vndique non minima memorandus laude, parentum
Stemmate ab antiquo, ſed & illis clarior ipſe
Henricus Sidneus, eques gemino ordine ſplendens,
Quem ter legatum dominæ vice ſceptra tenentem,
Iúſque miniſtrantem iam vidit Hibernica tellus,
Nec vidit modò, ſed ſenſit, verita eſt, & amauit,
Vt nemo vnquam alius (vulgo notiſſima res eſt)
Intrârit maiori illas cum gentis amore,
Rexerit obſequio, luctúque reliquerit oras.
Sola nec illius teſtatur Hibernia laudes,
Verùm etiam Albionis pars altera Cambria, curſu
Interlabentis rapido diuiſa Sabrinæ,
Præfecti illius præconia grandia narrat.
Cuius præſidio iam multos tuta per annos
Floruit, vt dubium ſit, eo fœlicior almo
Præſide lætetúrne, an iudice gaudeat æquo.
Iampridem diues legatum Gallia vidit
(Eliſabetha) tuum, præſtanti corpore pulchrum, &c.

The ninth daie of Auguſt next following died the moſt noble, worthie, beneficent, and bounteous ladie, the ladie Marie Sidneie, his onelie ſpouſe and moſt déere wife, who was eldeſt daughter vnto that renowmed duke John late of Northumberland, and ſiſter to the right honorable and moſt worthie the earles of Warwike and Leiceſter, moſt zealouſlie, godlie, & penitentlie, as by the teſtimonie of ſome honorable & other graue perſonages is well auouched, and was interred at Penſhurſt, in the ſame toome with hir déere and honorable huſband. During the whole courſe of hir ſickneſſe, and ſpeciallie a little before it pleaſed almightie God to call hir henſe to his mercie, ſhe vſed ſuch godlie ſpéeches, earneſt and effectuall perſuaſions to all thoſe about hir, and vnto ſuch others as came of frendlie courteſie to viſit hir, to exhort them to repentance and amendement of life, and dehort them from all ſin and lewdneſſe, as wounded the conſciences, and inwardlie peared the hearts of manie that heard hir. And though before they knew hir to exceed moſt of hir ſex in ſingularitie of vertue and qualitie; as good ſpéech, apt and readie conceipt, excellencie of wit, and notable eloquent deliuerie (for none could match hir, and few or none come nére hir, either in the good conceipt and frame of orderlie writing, indicting, and ſpédie diſpatching, or facilitie of gallant, ſweet, delectable, and courtlie ſpeaking; at leaſt that in this time I my ſelfe haue knowen, heard, or read of) yet in this hir laſt action and ending of hir life (as it were one ſpeciallie at that inſtant called of God) ſhe ſo farre ſurpaſſed hir ſelfe, in diſcréet, wiſe, effectuall, ſound, and grounded reaſons, all tending to zeale and pietie, as the ſame almoſt amazed & aſtoniſhed the hearers to heare & conceiue ſuch plentie of godlie and pithie matter to come from ſuch a creature. Who although for a time ſhe ſéemed to the world to liue obſcurelie, yet ſhe ended this life, & left the world moſt confidentlie, and to God (no doubt) moſt gloriouſlie, to the exceeding comfort of all them (which are not few) that loued or honored hir, or the great and renowmed houſe whereof ſhe was deſcended. They left behind them yet liuing moſt déere pledges noble and worthie reſemblances deſcended of them, three ſonnes, all forward, martiall, and valorous

The time of my ladie Sidneis death.

Sir Philip, ſir Robert, and maiſter Thomas Sidneies.

Marie countesse of Penbroke, William lord Herbert of Cardiffe.

gentlemen, and one onelie daughter, matched in marriage vnto the right honorable Henrie earle of Penbroke, whome God hath alreadie blessed with goodlie, rare, and towardlie issue: sir Philip Sidneie his sonne and heire, Ad quem hæreditas gloriæ & factorum imitatio pertinet, a gentleman of great hope, and exceeding expectation, indowed with manie rare gifts, singular vertues, and other ornaments both of mind and bodie, one generallie beloued and esteemed of all men, who matched in marriage with the daughter and heire of sir Francis Walsingham knight, hir maiesties principall secretarie, by whom he hath alreadie a goodlie babe, but a daughter. And if his good fortune by almightie Gods good appointment answer his noble deserts & worthinesse, he is most like to prooue a famous, great, and rare personage for the seruice of his countrie & commonwelth. And the glorie, renowme, & fame of so worthie a father can neuer die, hauing left so noble a son, not onlie to continue, but rather (in sort) to surpasse his fathers worthinesse, fame, and vertues; and therfore to be well hoped & vndoutedlie almost expected) he may in time succeed him in his offices, or if it please God in some better and greater. To the atteining wherof he is thus farre in good degree alreadie aduanced (imitating therein his fathers perfect paterne) that he hath bin imploied ambassador to the emperor when he was not aboue one and twentie yeres old (as his father at like age was to the French king) in which iorneie by the waie, he had on hir maiesties behalfe to visit and treat with sundrie princes, other potentats, and great ones: which he performed in such exquisit order, and aduised wise course, omitting nothing he should doo, nor suplieng anie thing he should not doo in ceremonie or otherwise, as he exceedinglie therein satisfied hir maiestie, both by his letters and report, and wan to himselfe great credit and singular commendation.

The commendation of sir Philip Sidneie.

Quidam autem ad eas laudes, quas à patribus acceperunt, addunt aliquam suam.

He was sent ambassador to the emperor.

Not long after his returne from that iorneie, and before his further imploiment by hir maiestie, at his vacant and spare times of leisure (for he could indure at no time to be idle and void of action) he made his booke which he named Arcadia, a worke (though a mere fansie, toie, and fiction) shewing such excellencie of spirit, gallant inuention, varietie of matter, and orderlie disposition, and couched in frame of such apt words without superfluitie, eloquent phrase, and fine conceipt, with interchange of deuise, so delightfull to the reader, and pleasant to the hearer, as nothing could be taken out to amend it, or added to it that would not impaire it, as few works of like subiect hath béene either of some more earnestlie sought, choislie kept, nor placed in better place, and amongest better iewels than that was; so that a speciall dere frend he should be that could haue a sight, but much more dere that could once obteine a copie of it. Which his so happie and fortunat beginnings so amplie set out both his sufficiencie for the publike, and what he can doo in exercise priuat, that manie mens eies are drawen into exceeding hope and expectation of his spedie further aduancement, which to the honor of himselfe and his house I dailie praie for, and most heartilie wish him.

His Arcadia.

An additament.

¶ This note you find here before set downe, touching sir Philip Sidneie, being a member of the discourse made of his father, was brought and deliuered to the impression before there was either speech, or could be imagination of his fatall end, which some after happened: who for that he was reckoned for his modestie, courtesie, affabilitie, and other speciall vertues, amongest the verie prime gentlemen for his yeares that this age hath bred, or our countrie affoorded; and so complet a man to euerie perfection, as the memorie of him ought not to be forgotten, I haue entred the note verbatim, without adding or altering as it came first to my hands.

Nihil laudabilius, nihil magno & præclaro viro dignius plagâilitate, & quasi ornatus vitæ est temperantia & modestia.

This right worthie, and thrise renowmed knight sir Philip Sidneie lord gouernor of Ulissingen, hauing spent some time in hir maiesties seruice in the low countries, with great honor, speciall credit, and estimation; and withall, hauing obteined by his vertue, valor, and great policie such an entrie of entire good will, trust, and authoritie with the states, as his counsels and persuasions could much more preuaile and worke singular effect with them than anie one mans could doo in anie cause whatsoeuer that happened to fall in question or debate amongst them: therefore earnestlie following the course he then tooke in hand for the aduancement of that seruice, and to win fame (the onelie marke true nobilitie either doth or ought to leuell at) he imbarked himselfe at Ulissingen, accompanied onelie with three thousand footmen, & bending his course to Arell, which lieth in the countie of Flanders, vsed both such diligence and secrecie in this expedition, as he surprised the towne, before they could haue intelligence of his comming, without losse or hurt of anie one of his companie. By meanes whereof, the forts and sconses there nere abouts adioining, being striken vpon the sudden into such a feare & amazement, as doubting some further perils to them intended, than anie at the present well appeared; voluntarilie and simplie gaue themselues and their holds into his hands, and yelded to his disposition and mercie. And so after he had well refreshed himselfe and his companie in this towne he had thus new taken, he departed thense, and remained in the countrie not far off, ten or twelue daies next following, till he had vittelled the same and put in a garrison, and left monsieur Pernon there gouernor.

Lord gouernor of Ulissingen, commonlie called Flushing.

He surprised Arell in Flanders.

Now in the meane time of his staie attending these seruices (and because he would alwaies be occupied in some honorable action) he brake a sluse, forced a trench, & cut out a banke, that made such an open passage & entrance into the sea, as since it hath drowned & destroied the whole countrie (being well nere now worne into a chanell) the same hauing béene the best & most fertill soile in those parts, & far exceeding anie territorie nére thereabouts, to so great a preiudice and annoiance of the enimie, as by common & well grounded opinion, neither by sluse, or lightlie anie other draine or deuise, that countrie can possiblie be recouered or regained. And this enterprise was atchiued without making head or other offer of offence, inuasion, or resistance by Mondragon, who was of purpose imploied with sufficient force to defend the countrie, and to haue impeached all these attempts and actions.

He drowned the countrie by making entrie into the sea.

No resistance made by Mondragon.

Moreouer, his aduise for the seruice intended at Graueling (dissenting in opinion from others, who were thought the most expert capteins and best renowmed and forted souldiors) gaue such a sufficient proofe of his excellent wit, policie, and ripe iudgement; as his onelie act and counsell, with the losse of a verie few of his companie, wrought all their safeties, which otherwise by treacherie had béene most likelie to haue béene intrapped. And so consequentlie going forward in other seruices, at an incounter with the enimie not far from Sutphen, where he that daie most valiantly serued (for he bare the inuincible mind of an ancient worthie Romane, who euer where he came made account of victorie) he receiued hurt by a musket shot a little aboue the left knée, which so brake and rifted the bone, and so entred the thigh vpward towards the bodie, as the bullet could not be found before his bodie was opened. Of which hurt notwithstanding he Graueling.

His hurt the occasion of his death.

The date of the death of Sir Philip Sidnete.

he liued (though in great paine and extreame torment) six and twentie daies following, and died the seuentéenth daie of October betweene two and three of the clocke in the afternoone at Arnam in Gelderland. By whose vntimelie death (to the hartie and inward sorow of manie) in the most flourishing and prime time of his yeares (for he was scarslie complet one and thirtie yeares old) there is presented vnto vs a verie rare example, and that in no common case; that father, mother, and sonne (in line of bloud and societie in that nèreneslie, as none can be nèrer) should come to their fatall ends and fall of name and familie, within the compasse of lesse than six moneths: and that each died so far off by distance of place one from another, as where they died they were but strangers, where by birth and propertie they could pretend no interest. Whereby we maie note a notable lesson to our good (though in this example we be taught to our griefe) the variablenesse of fickle fortune, and the small securitie in all humane and worldlie things whatsoeuer: Et quid Deus folus est in omnibus suspiciendus.

Trans societas in ipso communis proximus in mari.

A state for three lines done determined.

The night before he departed, leaning vpon a pillow in his bed, he wrote a line or two by waie of letter to Wierus, a verie expert and learned physician, to praie him to come vnto him. And because it maie thereby the better appeare, how sound and perfect he remained in sense and memorie (notwithstanding his most extreame griefe and paine) till he rendered his debt to nature; I thought it not inconuenient in this place to remember: Mi Wiere veni, veni, de vita periclitor, & te cupio, nec viuus nec mortuus ero ingratus, plura non possum, sed obnixè te oro vt festines. Vale.

Wierus of Claue a learned physician.

Tuus P. Sidneius.

Not manie daies before he sent these few words here before recited, he wrote a large epistle to Belerius a learned diuine, in verie pure and eloquent Latine (in like sort as manie times he had done before to some great ones (vpon occasions) and to others of learning and qualitie) the copie whereof was not long after, for the excellencie of the phrase, and pithinesse of the matter, brought to hir maiesties view. And surelie rare he was, aswell in that kind, as in manie other qualities of equall raritie. Yea most rare and rarest vndoubtedlie he would haue proued, if so it might haue pleased God to haue left vs so rare a iewell of vertue and courtesie. A testimonie of diuerse most famous and lerned men, who had him in speciall liking and admiration, allow him no lesse than I write of him. And amongst others, here I will remember Henrie Stephans in his epistle before his Greeke testament dedicated vnto him, who writeth thus: Factum est enim nescio quomodo, vt quibus te videre & tua consuetudine frui datum fuit interuallis, magis ac magis propensam meam in te voluntatem senserim. Heydelbergæ primùm vidère te mihi contigit, aliquanto pòst Argentorati: longo pòst tempore, Viennæ Austriæ: sed Argentorati magna facta est accessio ad illum amorem quo te Heydelbergæ prosequebar: Viennæ rursum, is etiam quo te Argentorati prosequutus fueram, magnum incrementum cepit. Nec mirum sanè meum illum in te amorem ita creuisse, quum tuæ, quæ eum excitauerant ingenij dotes, non parum creuisse viderentur. Atque vtinam crescere non desinant, donec talis tantúsque euaseris, vt tuæ etiam Angliæ celebritas incrementum à te accipiat.

Omnis virtus nos ad se allicit, faciúque vt diligamus eos in quibus inesse videatur, tamen nullius & literalibus id maximè efficit.

He greatlie abounded in sundrie good vertues, which euer, where he came, procured him loue, but chieflie in iustice & liberalitie (a worthie & most speciall note in a gouernor) which gained him heartie loue coupled with fame & honor. For the which especiallie, those vnder his late charge and gouernment so greatlie loued, estéemed, honored, and in a sort adored him, when he was aliue; as they made earnest meanes and intreatie to haue his bodie remaine there still with them for memorie when he was dead; & promised, that (if they might obteine it) to erect for him as faire a monument as anie prince had in christendome, yea though the same should cost halfe a tun of gold the building. As his life was most worthie; so his end was most godlie. The loue men bare him hath left fame behind him, his friendlie courtesie to manie procured him good will of all. God hath taken him, we hope to his comfort; we haue lost him, we feele to our greefe: his diuine will is done, our humane minds must be satisfied, and humblie wish (for it were a presumption to hope) to haue his life. For he had that great care and regard to the conseruation of his fame and honor entire, when he was gone; that he made a most bountifull and liberall will, which if the same be performed according to his simple, sincere, and good meaning; it will appeare he died not indebted to anie, neither to those that were nere his person, familiars, or domesticks, nor to anie other he was indebted vnto by bond or borrowing, nor otherwise in credit for wares or merchandize, or in other degrée whatsoeuer, he had to treat or deale with him in; yea not so much as for common courtesie and goodwill: but he ordered and appointed him satisfaction, and honorable contentment. His bodie was most honorablie conueied from Arnam to London, where it remained at the Minories certeine daies, and from thense brought and remoued to the place of his interrement; where with great solemnitie and funerall ho[illegible] amongst the monuments of his most renowmed [illegible]rents and worthie ancestors, he was buried.

His bountifull will.

And here behold the end of two worthie persons, who for that their deuises answered in a sort the state of both their fortunes, I thinke it not impertinent in this place to speake of. The father bare for deuise, placed vnder his armes: Quo me fata vocant, applieng the same to his good hap in his yonger yeares when fortune smiled, & time and friends flattered, and none more accounted of and estéemed than he. The sonne, suspecting future haps, and not trusting ouer much in present fortune, bare for his deuise, placed in like maner vnder his armes: Vix ea nostra voco: signifieng thereby, that he would not call those his owne, which he knew not how worthie he was to beare, nor how long he should inioie and kéepe them; sith that both states and persons are subiect to time and mutation, as by his vntimelie death appeared. And albeit this was his last word and deuise, which accompanied his funerall; yet not sealed before as occasion fell out, & as time wrought alteration in his déepe and noble conceipt, at iusts, torneis, triumphs, and other such roiall pastimes (for at all such disports he commonlie made one) he would bring in such a liuelie gallant shew, so agréable to euerie point, which is required for the expressing of a perfect deuise (so rich he was in those inuentions) as if he surpassed not all, he would equall or at least second the best. Wherein (as he rightlie deserued) he euer gained singular commendation.

Their words and deuises.

There are fiue speciall points required in euerie deuise to be perfect.

There grew some diuersitie of opinion (amongst their well affected friends) in one point of comparison touching the helps of nature, that were distinctlie placed in them both. Some gaue commendation to the father for his gallant tong, and others to the sonne for his readie pen; both were rare gifts in them both, and both two gifts placed in both. And when some of the fathers familiars would tell him, how men were of opinion that he could nothing so well frame his mind in writing, as he could deliuer the same in speaking: he would saie that it seemed so onelie to them, that neuer heard him reade his owne letters.

The father commended for his tong, and the sonne for his pen.

He left (beſides his other fatherlie blеſſings and liberalitie for increaſe of patrimonie) to his yonger ſonnes, that happie and rich inheritance Cicero ſo highlie commendeth; whoſe words here I will recite, for better impreſſion of the matter hereafter in their minds to whome of right it apperteineth.

The happie inheritance he left to his yonger ſons.

Optima autem hæreditas à patribus traditur liberis, omnique patrimonio præſtantior gloria virtutis rerúmque geſtarum, cui dedecori eſſe nefas & vitium iudicandum eſt.

And thus far goodwill hath led me, and dutie bound me, to remember and commend theſe two noble and worthie perſons the father and ſonne, as perfect examples for vs to follow (for they now dwell too far off to heare their owne praiſes) who as when they liued, the one I long and faithfullie ſerued, the other I dærelie loued and greatlie honored, euen from his yonger and tender yeares: ſo in regard of mine owne meane fortune, albeit I muſt acknowledge it my great miſhap and verie heauie croſſe (almoſt at one inſtant) to loſe two ſuch noble patrons and furtherers of my good and benefit, on whome onelie I depended, and to whome wholie I had dedicated my good will and humble ſeruice: yet in reſpect of them now departed, to whome both dutie and courteſie bindeth me to wiſh and praie all happineſſe (for ſeeking their fauours and good wils aliue with diligence: reaſon willeth me to eſteeme their images dead with reuerence) this conſideration then greatlie ſtirreth me vp to exceeding comfort, to ſpeake in ſaint Johns words: Beati mortui qui in Domino moriuntur; amodò iam dicit ſpiritus, vt requieſcant à laboribus ſuis: opera enim illorum ſequuntur illos. Thus as in their liues they had great honors, ample credit and authoritie heaped vpon them, the better to grace them amongſt vs: ſo being departed henſe from vs, noble fame and good report ſoundeth forth both their praiſes euerie where to accompanie their memories, to dwell & remaine ſtill euer freſh & liuelie flouriſhing with vs. And they haue (by the ſcale of their vertues) atteined (I hope) the higheſt type and degree of honor (which all men in this world ſhould mightilie contend for) which is the crowne of eternall life, wherewith (I truſt) they be now both decked and crowned in great glorie, ioy, bleſſednеſſe, and eternitie. And here to end the memorie of them, it ſhall not be amiſſe, to record an epitaph made and publiſhed, for the perpetuating of the name of ſir Henrie Sidneie, neuer ſufficientlie commended.

Bleſſed are the dead from henſeforth, now ſaith the ſpirit, that they reſt from their labors.

¶ In mortem illuſtriſſimi viri domini Henrici Sydnei, Edwardi ſexti in Galliam, Mariæ in Hiſpaniam, & ſereniſſimæ noſtræ reginæ E*liſabethæ in Galliam & Scotiam, legati, aureæ periſcelidis* & Sancti Georgij equitis aurati, vicémque olim regiæ maieſtatis Hiberniæ ter gerentis, & Walliæ 26, annis præſidis, & regiæ maieſtatis à concilijs: Henricus Dillon,

Vminibus mentis perluſtrans ſæpe ſtudebam,
Paruum quàm filum cuncta caduca tenet:
Sicut enim multis tribuit fortuna ſecunda,
Sic donat multos iſta nouerca malis.
Inſula noſtra dijs ſuperis inuiſa videtur,
Fortunæ lapſu labitur illa ſimul.
Nullus patronus fidus, nec verus amicus,
Quin ſubito caſu morte ruente perit.
Clarius hoc luna monſtrat dignиſſimus ille
Sydneus Henricus, nominis ille decor.
Qui nos protector viuax defendit & autor,
Qui fuerat patriæ, ſpéſque ſalúſque ſuæ.
Ter patriam curua petijt comitante carina,
Aduentus dignus laudibus ille fuit.
Palladis imbutus muſis hic armipotentis,
Hoſtes imperio ſe dedidere ſuo.
Legibus inſtituit priùs armis omnia vinci,
Legibus expulſis attamen arma tulit.
Hoſtes ſub pedibus calcauit Marte feroce,
Sedibus in ſummis conſtitutúſque bonos.
Henrici virtus valuit plus omnibus armis,
Aſpectu primo quiſquis amaret eum.
Oſtendit vultu naturæ dona ſereno,
Verbis erexit docta Minerua virum.
Conſtans & lenis minimè permobilis ira,
In bello nullis ille ſecundus erat.
Dapſilis in cunctos, ratio tamen omnia rexit,
Qui vulgi famam ſpreuit habere leuis.
In patriam tandem curſu felice reuerſus,
E medio lapſus culmina ſumma rapit.
Wallicus en conſul ſuperis præconia fudit,
Magna ſic pompa terra tegebat eum.

Laus Deo.

Suſtulit è ſacro me nudum fonte poëtam
Henricum Dillon Sydneus ipſe manu.

Ioannes Cawell in eundem.

MOtibus aduerſis verſatur machina rerum,
Quolibet & moles voluitur iſta breui.
Gignitur inſtanti quod creſcit tempore longo
Diuerſas formas inde ſubire ſtudet.
Culmine fatali ſenſim deflectitur ipſum,
Interitus falcat lubrica fata ſua.
Illis inſeritur porro motúſque localis
Omnes amplexu continet ipſe ſuo.
Sydneus his heros fauſtum produxerat æuum,
Fluctibus & nullis exagitatus erat.
Summis hic attauis cretus natione Britannus
Extendit ſtirpem viribus ille ſuam.
Poſthabuit partum ſemper ſectando decorum,
Maiorum laudes auxit honore ſuo.
Muſarum teneros ſtudio deuouerat annos
Auſpicijs miris inde beatus erat.
Quæſtor fiſcalis ſignatus munere primo,
Térque vicem regis geſſit amore loci.
Per multos præſes regnauit Wallicus annos,
Diſtribuens æquè iura cuique ſua.
Aurati fulgens equitis ſignitus honore,
Conſilio princeps illius vſa fuit.
Tantum vitali filo decreuerat heros
In partes totum ſoluitur omne ſuas.
Sicque nouis corpus formis transfertur ad vnum,
Pars terrena perit, cœlica forma manet.
Nobilis Henricus Mæcenas verus amicis,
Hoſtibus armatus ſæuus habendus erat.
Wallia læſa iacet, caſus & Hibernia plorat,
Vertitur in luctus regia tota domus.
Ipſe baro Dillon conſul tum iure dolebat,
Soluitur in lachrymas nocte diéque ſuas.
Quorſum ſic lugent, cum Sydneus alta petebat?
Turpi pro mundo ſydera pura tenet.

Laus Deo.

Now to leaue matters of the dead, and to touch affaires of the liuing, ſomewhat out of place in reſpect of the moneth; but occurring in the ſame yeare (which prepoſterous courſe could not for the preſent time be auoided, but hereafter maie be redreſſed) you ſhall vnderſtand, that not long after the beginning of Hilarie terme, in this preſent yeare 1586, for foure ſeuerall reſpects well worthie the remembrance, and thereupon bræfelie to be put downe in this historie, there did befall this accident that hereafter followeth. It so being, that one Thomas Louelace late of Staple Inne gentleman, had diuerse waies so wilfullie behaued himselfe toward maister Leonard Louelace esquier, his nære kinsman, as that the said Leonard Louelace was inforced to attempt a suite of waste against the said Thomas which being in course of law ordered for the plaintife: yet did the said plaintife offer verie fauorable conditions to the defendant, hauing long time bæne by so manie malicious practises pursued by his said kinsman, as he deserued to find no fauor at all at the plaintifes hands. But yet so dæpelie had an old cankered & inueterat hatred possessed the heart of this defendant, that these new fauours towards him could nothing mollifie or remoue the same. Which vngratious humor, hauing long boiled in his vnquiet brest, he conceiueth this course to put it on foot, sounding in the highest degrée of danger, to the liues and persons of his two nærest kinsmen, and pestilent to their whole posteritie.

Thomas Louelace treacherouslie sought to spoile his nerest kinsmen of their liues to haue his lands, by example of T. S. who before had sought to spoile his eldest brother of his life, after he had defrauded him of his goods and cattels, and was neuer punished therefore.

Considerations wise enough, if they had bæne accordinglie vsed and applied.

For considering with himselfe, that the late lawes of king Henrie the eight do giue vnto the crowne the lands and possessions of tenants intaile attainted of treason, so long as there be anie issues remaining vnder the same estate intaile; and weighing with himselfe, that the plaintife in the foresaid suite might by his verie late mariage be likelie to haue children (during whose liues he could by no colorable meanes make himselfe waie to the whole inheritance of his said cousin) he now obserueth it to be the onelie due season, aswell to cut off his kinsman from his life, and all other things which we hold pretious in this world; as to make himselfe capable of all his liuing, by colour of a remaindor limited vnto him and his line by the will of one John Louelace esquier. For full accomplishment of which intent, because the life of maister Richard Louelace, next brother to the plaintife, was a barre to one part of his purpose; he calleth him likewise within the compasse of the same danger, and frameth his drift after this manner.

Note the manner of his drift.

A third brother of the plaintifes, desirous of sæing the vniuersities abrode for the studie of the ciuill law, and being latelie noised to haue bæne professed in religion there; from him he deriueth the groundworke of his desperat deuise, counterfeiting letters to come from the third brother to the plaintife, and the said maister Richard Louelace; which letters did set forth an intent of most dangerous treasons against hir maiesties most gratious person, whereof the plaintife was put downe to be the compasser, and the said maister Richard Louelace the executioner. Then it was compacted betwæne the defendant, and a certeine lewd fellow, who was before manie waies beholding to maister Leonard Louelace, that he hauing accesse without suspicion, should either leaue these letters in the plaintifes studie, or else bestow them vnsæne in some other place; which being so donne, there should no time be left by the defendant for such present procæding as such causes required. But maister Leonard Louelace, being gone from his London lodging before this messenger came, he returning homeward, and not well aduised what to do, thought better to hazard the successe of his message, than to sæme to do nothing at all: and therefore not far from Grauesend, did suffer the same letters to fall from him, as was sufficientlie perceiued by an honest poore man, who was not far off about the topping of a trée.

Note how God will haue lewd dealing and ill meaning reuealed.

These letters were presentlie taken vp by a boy, who was by the said fellow allured by monie, to make deliuerie according to their direction. This boy being seruant in a victelling house, did carrie them home & cast them vpon a cupbord, as papers spotted with mire and of no valure. There comming that night a waifaring man, did esteeme of them accordinglie, and carrieng them to an house of office, going ouer a few lines, did find them to conteine a dangerous intention of most weightie importance; and therevpon carried them to the lord Cobham, who with requisit spæd directed the same to the lords of the councell. Who according to the qualitie of the cause, hauing in their due respect of preseruing hir highnesse safetie, a verie honorable care ouer the gentlemens good fame and credit, who were to be touched in so foule a cause: whose former good course of life had cleared them from anie slender suspicion of so great a villanie, as the lord Cobham had likewise before informed: they therevpon thought good to refer the ordering of this so strange a case to the lord treasuror; who for his great wisedome was likelie soone to discerne (for his most tender well wishing of hir highnesse well doing) and most spædilie to preuent all danger; and for his singular zeale to iustice, to deale indifferentlie with the parties in question.

The lord treasuror had the discussing and sifting out of the matter.

The lord treasuror in the absence of maister Leonard Louelace, hauing called before him maister Richard Louelace; and being by him informed of such sensible circumstances, as did directlie induce his lordship to be of opinion, that all this villanous practise should proceed from the defendant, he in courteous and honorable manner, without baile, bond, or maineprise, did dismisse the said maister Richard Louelace to his owne libertie; and did giue present direction for the apprehension of the defendant, and other his complices: who as vpon his comming before their honors, did by manie aduised oths make colourable purgation of this obiected action; so yet by some amazednesse of his countenance, and by certeine repugnances in his owne answers, he left a more setled suspicion that it should be his doing. Wherevpon the lord treasuror well regarding and perusing the letter, and finding by the close couching and setting togither of the same, that although the inditer lacked not a malicious kind of learning; that yet in his orthographie there were certeine such slips committed, as by a custome of negligent writing were likelie to grow into an habit with him. Those verie words did his lordship interlace vnder the forme of another matter, and bad him to write the same; who keeping his former custome, did verie iustlie fulfill his lordships expectation. Which being well conceiued and compared with the former forme of letters, did sæme to haue some difference rather in policie than in substance: but the same slips & imperfections of orthographie did clearelie discouer the workeman of this whole matter.

What we are to gather for our owne benefit, by the former declaration.

The conclusion of the former points premised in the beginning, must be this short aduertisement of good substance. First, to what desperat dispositions and most inhumane actions, that cankered humor of malice driueth them vnto, whome it hath dæpelie touched and attached. Secondlie, how wonderfull is the working and goodnesse of God, in preseruing innocencie from the most dangerous and subtill drifts of the aduersarie. Thirdlie, how profitable it is to those countries & commonwealths, where the councellors do rather sæke with sharpenesse of iudgement to discerne and discouer the qualities and causes, before they aplie the princes displeasure, or the heauie burthen of laws to the first apperance of anie suggestions. Lastlie, how necessarie it is to the good estate of gouernments, that iustice be dulie deliuered: which in this case was in so due and honorable manner performed, vpon the hearing of the cause before the lords in the star chamber; as that the posteritie to come maie from thense fetch a right fruitfull president, to take hæd of such odious practises. And now to set downe the matter according to the record: thus it followeth.

In camera stellata coram consilio, 11 die Februa. anno 28 Elisabetæ reginæ.

On this daie (to wit the eleuenth of Februarie) Thomas Louelace was brought to the bar, as a prisoner from the Tower; against whome hir maiesties attorneie generall did informe, that the same Louelace, vpon malice conceiued against Leonard Louelace & Richard Louelace his cousine germans, had most lewdlie, falslie, and diuelishlie, contriued and counterfeited with his owne hand, a verie traitorous letter in the name of Thomas Louelace, another brother of the said Richard and Leonard, now resident at Rome (as it is supposed) purporting in shew, that the same Thomas, now resident beyond the seas, should thereby incite and prouoke the said Leonard, to procure the said Richard his brother to worke and execute hir highnesse destruction, with manie more verie wicked and horrible circumstances of treason in the highest degree, specified in the same letter: as by the contents thereof, which was this daie openlie read in court, most euidentlie appeared. And yet not so contented, either cast or let fall, or caused the same letter to be cast or let fall in the open high waie; pretending thereby, that vpon the discouerie thereof, his said kinsmen, Leonard and Richard, should be drawne in question for the treasonable matter against hir maiesties person in that letter conteined, euen in the highest degree. For which offense, hir maiesties said attorneie praied on the behalfe of hir maiestie, that the said Thomas Louelace the prisoner might receiue condigne punishment.

Thomas Louelace condinglie punished by iudgement of the honorable court in the starchamber: a notable and praise worthie example of iustice, the like whereof is to be wished to the like offendor.

Herevpon the court demanded of the said Louelace what answer he could make to the said accusation. Who immediatlie confessing his said lewd and diuelish offense, to be by him committed, in such maner and forme as is before expressed, humblie submitted himselfe, and praied the fauor of this honorable court. Whereupon the court had therefore conuicted him thereof, by the full and whole consent of all the persons there sitting: and haue adiudged him to suffer such corporall punishment and imprisonment, as hereafter followeth. That is to saie: that he shall be remitted to the Tower from whense he came, that he shall be caried on horsebacke about Westminster hall with his face to the horsse taile, and with a paper on his backe, wherein shall be written these words: For counterfeiting of false and trecherous letters against his owne kindred, conteining most traitorous matter against hir maiesties person: and from thense shall be carried in that manner, and set on the pillorie here in the palace at Westminster, & there shall haue one of his ears cut off: and shall also be carried in like manner on horsebacke into London, and set on the pillorie on a market daie in Cheapside with the like paper on his backe: and after that, shall be carried downe into Kent, and at the next assise there shall be set openlie in the pillorie, in the place where the assises shall be kept, with the like paper on his backe, and there shall haue his other eare cut off. And also that he shall be set on the pillorie one market daie in Canturburie, and one other market daie at Rochester in the said countie of Kent, with the like paper on his backe (as afore said) at either of the same places. And it is further ordered, that in euerie of the foresaid places, where he shall stand on the pillorie, the order taken by this honorable court, touching his said offense and punishment, shall be openlie read and published. Thus far the record, the sentence whereof was dulie executed.

An offenslue sermon at Pauls crosse.

Vpon sundaie being the first daie of March 1586, the preacher appointed to supplie the place at Paules crosse failed therein: by occasion whereof, one George Closse (a preacher of the citie) was procured to supplie his roome that was absent, and in his sermon intreating vpon iustice, reproued the maior of London particularlie being there present, for shuffling vp a cause (as he termed it) that came before him; and whereat the said Closse was also present the fridaie before he preached. Herevpon grew much varietie of talke and rumors amongst the people, coniecturing and scanning diuerslie vpon the cause. And the daie following, the maior, aldermen, and the councell of the citie entered into consultation about it; and vpon tuesdaie, the preacher was warned to answer the cause before the maior, aldermen, and councell of the citie, in the Guildhall. Where, after much debating of the matter, it was finallie concluded, that certeine of the aldermen of the citie, with the recorder, should commense complaint hereof before the archbishop of Canturburie. And in the afternoone the same daie, it was ordered by the archbishop and other his collegues in causes ecclesiasticall; that because the said Closse had delt so particularlie against the magistrate, he should be inioined to preach in the same place againe the 27 daie of March following (being Palmesundaie) and in his sermon should make his submission, which the common people called a recantation.

The preacher is troubled for his sermon, and duged to a submission commonlie termed a recantation.

In the meane space were dispersed sundrie rumors and great diuersities of reports of the matter, and great expectation of the daie appointed. And at the daie and place prefixed was gathered such an assemblie and concourse of people, as by estimation had not beene seene there at anie rehearsall sermon. This confluence of people grew the greater, for that the preacher who supplied the said place the verie next sundaie following, did intimat to the people (commanded so to doo) that the said Closse, whose sermon was offensiuelie taken, as tending against the chiefe magistrate, was verie sorie for that which he had doone; and was to signifie no lesse vpon Palmesundaie insuing in another sermon, which he was appointed to make in forme of submission. Now by the waie of parenthesis, before we come to shew how the said Closse did acquite himselfe; we are to declare, that vpon the same sundaie, that this inioined submission was imparted to the people, there stood before the preacher at Pauls crosse, in the verie eie of the multitude, a most heinous malefactor in a white sheet, with a rod of about halfe a yard long in his hand, and about his head a paper fastened, with the inscription of the offense for the which he did penance. This lewd fellow (hauing a wife) did notwithstanding for the space of fiue yeares past, keepe in his house an harlot or strumpet vnder the name of his maid, whose bodie he vnlawfullie vsed; insomuch that she bare him certeine bastards, which in time were made awaie and murthered, this horrible deed still remaining vndisclosed; vntill the last whome she bare and slue, which was then bewraied, and she of the fact by course of law orderlie conuinced, was executed at Tiborne the last sessions next before the publication hereof by the preacher.

A fowle offendor, or heinous malefactor did penance at Pauls crosse, his companion hauing beene executed at Tiborne not long before.

Now (saith the preacher) although the law haue acquited this heinous malefactor, and released him from the gallowes: yet is it not likelie that he can be excusable from priuitie in the offense. For it cannot be, but that as he was not, nor could be ignorant of the harlots being with child; so must he needs know what became of them after their procreation and bringing forth into the world. Neuertheless (saith the preacher) although he haue escaped the like execution as his fellow offendor hath suffered: yet except he doo hartilie repent, and be inwardlie sorie for the same, he is certeine to hang in hell fier. In signification therefore of his heartie repentance, he was inioined to make open confession of his fault, the forme whereof was deliuered in writing to the preacher, he reading it, and the offendor saieng after him the same, with as lowd a voice as conceiued shame for so grieuous a trespasse would admit.

The offendor openlie confesseth his fault with a lowd voice.

Now vpon this repentance and confession, the preacher toke occasion to aggrauat the dangerous sinne of fornication and adulterie, shewing by sundrie examples what punishments haue bene inflicted vpon offendors in that kind, by the laws of diuerse nations: as of the Tartars, Turks, Jews, and Aegyptians, &c: some stripping the man that was giltie, starke naked in sight of the people, who receiued a thousand yerks vpon his flesh; the woman had hir nose cut off, and so liued with a perpetuall note of infamie, bearing a visible badge of hir former lewd life. Among others it was sentenced by law, that the wife offending, should be stripped naked, and whipped from street to street, euen of hir owne husband; who was appointed the executioner of that punishment. This fault was likewise reuenged with stoning to death, and other corporall smarts and torments; all which shew how odious a sinne it is, both in the sight of God and man.

Laws for adulterie and fornication sharplie executed.

Hauing waded so far in the argument, the preacher spake verie honorablie of the dignitie of marriage, and against the frequented vice of vsurie, whereof he deliuered examples verie dreadfull, intending an amendment of that enormitie. And imputing the lacke and neglect of forbearing to sinne, vnto the idle hearing of the word; the preacher shewed that some hearers there are, who after they haue heard their lewd liues vehementlie inueighed against, for a moment of time entring into a consideration of the horror of the same, go home, seeme somewhat sorowfull; and for one, two, or three daies appeare verie forwards and towards in reformation. On the first daie they can saie, Gloria patri; on the second, Et filio; on the third, Et spiritui sancto: but on the fourth, Sicut erat in principio; and so they become as bad as they were in the beginning; naie much worse, and so continue to their latter ending. Thus much by waie of interposition, touching that sundaies worke, being a note none of the worst in the booke, and maie doo much good by Gods grace, if it be well marked and throughlie thought vpon.

How people are affected in hearing of Gods word, and therefore no maruell though vnfruitfull.

And now to returne to the continuation of the report of the said Cloose, who during the time of respiration, furnished himselfe for the place which he was appointed to supplie, and for the time of expectation now approching and at length present. When & where (as aforsaid) thousands were gathered together of each age & sex; some comming to see, some to heare, and some to obserue what was said and doone. The most part of the maiors officers, the children of the hospitals, and manie other were there, to write and take notes of the sermon. Besides, there were six preachers appointed to heare the sermon, and to certifie how he discharged his designement. During the time of the sermon was vsed great silence, but much and secret whisperings, strange countenances, often lookings to and fro of the people, and some intercourse of speech among the aldermen, especiallie when the preacher entred his discourse of the matter of expectation; wherein he made report of the whole cause as it had passed before the maior, alleging sundrie reasons diuine and humane, which had moued him in his former sermon to deale so particularlie.

The report of George Cloose matter continued.

The preachers sermon is noted.

The matter of expectation.

In conclusion, the sermon finished, the auditorie departed with generall approbation and applause to the preacher, and the maior with greater discontentment: insomuch as after Easter, when the sermons at the spittle and other businesse was ouerpassed; the maior by his brethren renewed a further complaint before the archbishop of Canturburie. But in the meane space, the said Cloose had obteined from the archbishop and others his collegues of the ecclesiasticall commission, sentence of dismission from further molestation touching this cause; vpon a certificat made from the six preachers before mentioned, whereof there were three doctors, and three bachellors in diuinitie, which had made report vnto the bishop of London (according to his appointment touching the sermon) that the said Cloose had fullie in all good sort satisfied the order of the archbishop: so as the complaint and accusation of the maior could not be anie further admitted. Then was the matter complained of vnto the lords of the priuie councell, and a commission granted by them to haue the cause further examined.

Further complaint renewed against the preacher, who is dismissed from further molestation.

Commissioners were appointed by the councell, three ecclesiasticall persons, & fiue temporall lawiers, namelie the bishop of Winchester, the bishop of London, and the bishop of Salisburie; the lord chiefe iustice of the common pleas, the maister of the rols, the lord chiefe baron, the quenes attorneie generall, and the maister of saint Katharins. The cause being heard vpon articles preferred and answered, it was finallie thought conuenient by the commissioners, vpon conference with both parties, to draw them to a priuat reconciliation; whereunto after the preacher had assented, the maior would in no wise accept it: but vrged a certificat to be made to the councell, and after some suspense of his request, at last he obteined of the bishop of London, & others of the temporall commissioners, a certificat to be made, and the matter was continued in suspense till his maioraltie was expired.

The matter brought before the councell, and ordered by commissioners.

A priuat reconciliation of the partie offended and offending intended.

This yeare on the seuententh daie of March, a strange thing happened, the like whereof before hath not bene heard of in our time. Maister Dorrington of Spaldwike in the countie of Huntington esquier, one of hir maiesties gentlemen pensioners, had a great horsse that died suddenlie; & being ripped to see the cause of his death, there was found in the hole of the heart of the same horsse a strange worme, which laie in a round heape in a kall or skin, of the bignesse of a tode, which being taken out and spred abrode, was in forme the fashion not easie to be described in words, but in picture. The length of this worme diuided into manie grains, to the number of fiftie, spred from the bodie like the branches of a tree, was from the snowt to the end of the longest graine seuentene inches; hauing foure issues in the grains, from whense dropped forth a red water. The bodie in bignesse round about was three inches and a halfe, the colour whereof was like vnto a mackerell. This monstrous worme found in maner aforesaid, crauling to haue got awaie, was stabbed in with a dagger and died: which after being dried, was shewed to manie honorable personages of this realme.

A strange worme found in a horsse heart.

In the sessions of oier and terminer holden at London in the iustice hall, on the eightenth daie of Aprill, William Tomson alias Blackeborne, made priest at Reims in France by the authoritie of the bishop of Rome, and remaining within this realme after the terme of fortie daies after the session of the last parlement, was condemned of treason. Also Richard Lea alias Long, made priest at Laon in France (as aforesaid) and remaining here in this realme after the terme aforesaid, was likewise there condemned for treason: which said William and Seminarie priests executed at Tiborne.

and Thomas, were both on the twentith daie of Aprill drawne to Tiborne, and there hanged, bowelled, and quartered, according as they before had receiued iudgement.

The note of Iohn Waller concerning the arreignement of a witch.

At a great session holden in a towne of Kent called Feuersham, being a towne incorporat, and a limb or member of Douer; vpon the nintéenth daie of Aprill, in the yeare one thousand fiue hundred fourescore and six, before Thomas Warning, then maior of the same towne, and others; Ione Cason late the wife of one Frœman, was accused, attached, indicted, and arreigned for witchcraft; but condemned & adiudged to die, and executed for inuocating of wicked spirits, according to a statute made In 5. Elisa. ca. 2.: for that she, the statute aforesaid not at all regarding, vpon the first of Aprill, in the seuen and twentith yeare of quéene Elisabeth, and at diuerse daies and times since, the art of witchcraft and inchantment had vsed, and vpon wicked spirits had inuocated and called, contrarie to the peace of our souereigne ladie the quéene; and namelie, that she the second of Februarie in the eight and twentith yeare of quéene Elisabeth, had bewitched Jane Cooke of the age of three yeares, who by hir inchantment languished and died. Herevpon seuen women and one man gaue euidence against hir, who though they were all verie poore people, yet were they the rather admitted to accuse hir, for that they were hir nére neighbors, and hir offense verie odious.

The euidence of Sara Cooke against Ione Cason.

The first and principall deposition was made by Sara Cooke, mother to the bewitched child in these words following (that is to saie) that after hir said child had béene sicke, languishing by the space of thirtéene daies, a trauellor came into hir house, to the end to drinke a pot of ale (for she kept an alehouse) who séeing the lamentable case and pitious griefe of the child, called hir vnto him, saieng; Hostesse, I take it that your child is bewitched. Whereunto she answered, that she for hir part knew of no such matter. Well (said the ghest) if you thinke it to be so, doo no more but take a tile from ouer the lodging of the partie suspected, and laie it in a hot fier: and if she haue bewitched the child, the tile will sparkle and flie round about the cradle where the child lieth. Now she, conceiuing that trauellors haue good experience in such matters, did steale (as she deposed) a tile from the house of the said Ione Cason (though not from ouer hir lodging) and laied it in the fier besides the cradle, which soone after sparkled about the house, euen according to hir said ghests information. And within short space, the saide Ione (being the suspected partie) came into this deponents house, to see how the child did, which (soone after hir comming) looked full in hir face, and had not lifted vp hir eie, nor looked abrode all the night precedent; but within foure houres after died: so as by the circumstance of that euidence, she thought it might plainelie appeare to the iurie, that the said Ione had bewitched hir child to death. Neuertheles, the prisoner did absolutelie denie anie thing donne, or purposed by hir to haue béene donne in this behalfe.

A pretie point of witchcraft.

Howbeit, to pursue this matter to proofe, and hir to death, the other seuen persons were all deposed; by whome it was affirmed constantlie, and approued manifestlie, that to the house of one Frœman (whose wife the said Ione Cason then was) not latelie but diuerse years since resorted a little thing like a rat (but more reddish) hauing a brode taile, which some of them had séene, and some had heard of. Insomuch as one heard it crie in the wall like a cricket, another like a rat, another like a tode, another that it ran vnder a tub, and spake these words (that is to saie) Go to, go to, go to. And it was further deposed by one goodwife Offild (the substantiallest person of them all) that hir cat could not kill it.

A. Kelm.

All these depositions were made and taken, to proue Ione Cason a witch; and consequentlie, that she had through hir inchantments, and by the helpe of this vermin or spirit, killed the said Jane Cooke. But she (with great attestations) pleaded not giltie, alleging diuerse matters and instances of the malicious dealings of hir aduersaries against hir, reciting also certeine controuersies betwixt hir and them, wherein they had donne hir open wrong. But although she satisfied the bench and all the iurie touching hir innocencie for the killing of hir child, denieng also that she had anie skill in the art of witchcraft; she then and there confessed, that a little vermin, being of colour reddish, of stature lesse than a rat, and furnished with a brode taile, did diuerse yeares since (but not latelie) haunt hir house, and manie other houses in the towne; & further, that she (as she imagined) heard it crie sometimes; Go to, go to, go to; sometimes, Sicke sicke; sometimes, Come, come. Whereby she gathered, that it charged hir to sée hir maister Masons will performed; which she had not executed according to the confidence he had in hir; to the trouble of hir conscience, and veration of hir mind. And yet she honestlie confessed, that she had the vse of hir bodie verie dishonestlie, whilest she was wife to hir husband Frœman.

Hir accusers hir prouoked maliciousnes.

Upon these foresaid depositions, and vpon this hir owne confession, the iurie was charged, went together; and being loth to condemne hir of witchcraft (which they knew to be fellonie) they acquitted hir thereof, and found hir giltie vpon the said statute, for inuocation of wicked spirits; thinking thereby to haue procured hir punishment by pillorie, or imprisonment, and to haue saued hir from the gallowes. So as when the verdict was giuen vp by the iurie to the maior and his brethren, sitting on their iudgement seat, togither with their learned counsell; the said maior vttered this speech following: (that is to saie) Ione Cason, for so much as it hath pleased God to shew such fauor this daie vnto you, as to put it into the hearts of the iurie, to acquite you of the fellonie, whereupon you were arreigned; it behoueth you to render most humble thanks to God and the quéene, and hereafter to beware that you giue no such occasions of offense againe. And you shall doo well, hense forwards to serue God better, and to resort to sermons oftener: whereby you maie learne your obedience to God, and your dutie to your neighbors.

The iurie meant well.

The first sentence of the maior of Feuersham.

A gentleman (being a lawier, & of counsell with the towne, sitting vpon the bench with the maior, to assist, or rather to direct him in the course of law and iustice) hearing this mild iudgement to proceed out of the maiors mouth, kept vnto him, and told him, that (vnder correction) he thought him to erre in the principall point of his sentence (that is to saie) that instead of life he should haue pronounced death; because inuocation of wicked spirits was made fellonie by the statute whereupon she was arreigned. Then (quoth the maior) goodwife Cason, you must be conueied from hense to the White house from whense you came, and from thense to the place of execution, where you must be hanged vntill you be dead; and so God haue mercie vpon you.

The maiors second sentence.

Then was she carried back to their prison, which they call the White house. And because there was no matter of inuocation giuen in euidence against hir, nor proued in or by anie accusation, whereby the iurie might haue anie colour to condemne hir therfore: hir execution was staied by the space of three daies after iudgement was giuen. In the meane time time, she was persuaded by sundrie preachers and learned men to confesse it. But no persuasion could preuaile, to make hir acknowledge anie other criminall offense, but hir lewd life & adulterous conuersation with one Mason, whose house she kept whilest he was in health, and whose person she tended whilest he was sicke; with whome she was conuersant at the houre of his death, mainteining his concupiscence all the daies of his life; & in the end abused the trust repосed in hir, touching the disposition of certeine bequests, which he made hir onelie priuie vnto. For he died of the plague, for feare of which infection none other durst repaire vnto him; so as she vsed that matter according to hir wicked conscience. In which respect, she said in hir confession vpon the gallowes (taking hir death that she died guiltlesse herein) that the iudgement of God was in such measure laid vpon hir, and therewithall made so godlie and penitent an end, that manie now lamented hir death, which were (before) hir utter enimies. Yea some wished hir aliue after she was hanged, that cried out for the hangman when she was aliue: but she should haue beene more beholding vnto them that had kept hir from the gallowes, than to such as would haue cut the rope when she was strangled. Neuertheless, they extended to hir as much fauor herein, as their combarons of the ancient towne of Rie shewed to a neighbour of theirs named Foule. Which storie being not altogither impertinent, and certeinelie performed about the yeare of our Lord one thousand fiue hundred fortie & seuen, I thought it not vnfit to be in this place inserted; especiallie, because both these townes are ruled by one kind of gouernement, for they are of the ports.

Jane Cafons confession.

Jane Cafon taketh hir death what she died guiltlesse.

The storie of Foule of Rie, hanged for robbing his wife.

There haunted to the house of this Foule, in respect of the good will he bare to his wife, a little honest man, whose name I will not discouer, who committed vnto hir custodie a bag of monie, amounting to the summe of ten pounds sterling. Foules wife locked it vp in hir cupbord. Howbeit, the handled not the matter so couertlie, but hir couert baron espied it, and (in hir absence) either picked or brake open the locke, and tooke out the monie; wherewith afterwards he plaied the good fellow all the daies of his life. For immediatlie his wife accused him (not of subtill dealing) but of plaine theft, regarding more hir friends losse, than hir husbands life. Herevpon, the maior of Rie (at the next sessions) caused him to be indicted and arreigned, and being conuinced of the fact, he was condemned and adiudged to death. For whose better execution, there was presentlie a new paire of gallowes erected, whereupon without further delaie he was hanged vntill he was dead; which gallowes hath beene euer since called by the name of Foules mare. And now he cared not so much for the maior, as the maior did for him. For Foule was skant cold, but manie murmured at the maiors hastie proceedings; which moued them to doubt and whisper, that Foules fault was no felonie.

Foules mare.

But the maior (although it be said that portsmen maie tell their tale twise) could not now deuise, how (Foule being dead) he might reuerse this foule sentence. Neuertheless, he sent vp with all speed to one maister Ramsete of Greies Inne, who was of counsell with the towne, to learne what the law was in that case: who hauing fullie weied and conceiued thereof, told the partie directlie, that the matter was without the compasse of felonie. Whie sir (quoth the messenger) goodman Foule is alreadie hanged. Goodman Foule (said he againe) whie came ye then to me for counsell? But what was he for a man (said maister Ramsie?) A bad fellow (said the messenger.) Well (quoth he) go thou thy waies home, & then there is but one knaue out of the waie. Such conclusions are manie times made in the ports, who sometimes vse the priuilege of their liberties, not as they ought, but as they list, seldome times applieng their authoritie to so good purposes as they might: for commonlie they vse more circumspection in their expenses, than in their sentences.

Counsell asked too late.

Henrie Ramelius ambassador out of Denmarke.

On sundaie the eight daie of Maie, an ambassador, named Henrie Ramelius, intituled Cancellarius Germanicus, arriued at the Tower of London, A gentleman he was of goodlie personage, somewhat corpulent, and of sanguine complexion: verie eloquent likewise and learned, not onelie in the knowledge of diuerse tongs, as Latine, French, Italian, and Germane; but also in diuerse sciences. He came in ambassage from Frederike the second of that name, king of Denmarke, vnto the queens maiestie of England, and arriuing (as you haue heard) at the Tower, was honorablie receiued by the lord Cobham and other great estates; who conueied him from thense through Tower street into bishops gate street, and so to a faire and large house called Crosbies place, where he was lodged, and remained.

The Danish ambassador honorablie interteined.

The said Ramelius, during the time of his tarriance, had attendance done him conuenient for his person, both by water and by land: the queens maiesties barges and seruants imploied about him to and from London, the court then being at Greenewich; whither alwaies when he came, the nobilitie of England failed in no point of courtesie that might be shewed. Which he seemed (as he could no lesse) verie acceptable to take. Now being in England, and in the English court, he might (and no doubt did) marke the magnificence of hir maiestie, in all respects admirable. Whereof a notable president was giuen in Whitsunweeke; at what time the said ambassador, being at the court, was accompanied with certeine English lords to hir highnesse chapell, and placed not far from hir excellencie, did heare diuine seruice so melodiouslie said and song, both by voice and instruments of consort, as a man halfe dead might thereby haue beene quickened. The gentlemen of the chapell with the rest of the quier bending themselues, both with skill and zeale, that daie to honor their prince according to their place. The bishop of Salisburie and others distinctlie reading part of diuine seruice, and in presence of all the auditorie doing such obeisance with knee and countenance, as the presence of so gratious a souereigne as they had in their eies did require.

The maiestie of the English court.

Heauenlie musike in the queens chapell.

Now when this solemnitie was ended, hir maiestie departed; and so did the ambassador, attended vpon and accompanied vnto the place appointed for dinner: where standing neere to a faire window fronting into the open court, he might (being in communication now with one, and then with another English lord, as the lord Charls Howard lord admerall, the lord Cobham lord warden of the cinque ports, &c:) behold the roiall seruice of hir maiestie, verie personable gentlemen thereto sorted, carrieng couered dishes, all of siluer & gilt verie beautifull; themselues in veluet and silke sutable in each respect, and as decentlie made, so decentlie worne; the trumpets sounding, and the drum plaieng thereunto: a maruellous delightsome thing to heare, and a passing gallant sight to behold. When dinner was done, the ambassador was made partaker of such courtlie recreations, as for that time were fit, wherewith he could not but be pleasantlie conceipted; considering that as euerie thing was done with purpose to delight: so he with others must needs be accordinglie affected. And as the better sort had their conuenient disports, so were not the ordinarie people excluded from competent pleasure. For vpon a greene verie spatious and large, where thousands might stand and behold with good contentment, there bearebaiting and bulbaiting (tempered with other merie disports) were exhibited; whereat it can not be spoken of what pleasure the people tooke.

The ambassador of Denmarke seeth the roiall seruice of the queene of England.

Recreations and disports for prince and people.

Bearebaiting described.

For it was a sport alone of these beasts, to see the beare with his pinke eies leering after his enimies, the nimblenesse and wait of the dog to take his aduantage, and the force and experience of the beare againe to auoid the assaults: if he were bitten in one place, how he would pinch in another to get free; and if he were once taken, then what shift with biting, clawing, rozing, tugging, grasping, tumbling, & tossing he would worke to wind himselfe awaie; & when he was lose, to shake his eares with the blood and slauer about his phisnomie, was a pittance of good releefe. The like pastime also of the bull, & the horsse with the ape on his backe, did greatlie please the people, who standing round, some in a ring vpon the greene, other some aloft, and some below, had their eies full bent vpon the present spectacle, diuerse times expressing their inward conceiued ioy and delight with shrill shouts and varietie of gesture. Now the daie being far spent, and the sun in his declination, the pastimes ended, and the actors therein wearie; the ambassador withdrew to his lodging by barge to Crosbies place, where (no doubt) this daies solemnitie was thought vpon, and talked of; if not by him, yet by his traine, and perhaps (as like enough) of both. Now after this, and manie other English courtesies elsewhere, verie bountifullie giuen and taken: the ambassador, after the finishing of such affaires as he was put in trust withall, taking his leaue both of the court, citie, and countrie, returned towards Denmarke on the thirtith daie of Maie next following, whome we will leaue vpon his voiage, and touch other matters happening at home.

Bulbaiting and an old ape on horsseback.

This Crosbie was a knight, see his gift to the citie of London, pag. 702, a 50.

The ambassador departeth home towards Denmarke.

Lord Edward earle of Rutland ambassador into Scotland.

In this yeare one thousand fiue hundred foure score and six, and on the fourth daie of June, a commission was directed from the queens maiestie then at Greenewich, tending to the ratification of a firme league of amitie betweene the two mightie princes, Elisabeth queene of England, and James the sixt of that name king of Scots, vpon certeine causes necessarie and important: the reigne and gouernement of the said princes, happening in so doubtfull and dangerous times, wherein the princes neere adioining, who will be called catholike, agnising the popes authoritie, by mutuall leagues dow knit friendship, for the rooting vp and throwing out of the true, pure, and sincere religion of the gospell, not onelie out of their owne territories and dominions, but also out of other forren kingdoms; and thereto haue obliged their faith.

The queens maiestie hath speciall care of christian religion to be preserued and propagated.

Least they therefore that loue the religion of the gospell, should seeme lesse carefull for the defense and supportation thereof, than they which earnestlie indeuour to mainteine and vphold that of Rome, least it should be ouerthrowne: the said princes, for the greater securitie of their persons, vpon whose safetie the safetie of the whole people doth depend; and for the preseruation of the true, ancient, and christian religion, which they now profesle; haue thought good that a stricter bond of mutuall and sociall league, than at anie time hitherto hath beene agreed vpon betweene their maiesties progenitors, should now be substantiallie concluded. This league was articulated, and commissioners thereto appointed; the right honorable Edward earle of Rutland, (a complet noble man, answerable to the etymon of his name, and deseruing the poets report ——nomen virtutibus æquat, Nec sinit ingenium nobilitate premi)

the lord William Euers; and also Thomas Randolph esquier; who with their traine of attendants came to Berwike the nineteenth of June, where (the ambassadors of Scotland being in like sort present) they accomplished the matter, whereto they were commissionated: the articles of the said league in all and euerie part sufficientlie confirmed, on the fift of Julie. All which being dispatched, the said earle of Rutland with his traine returned. This ambassage is reported in the historie of Scotland, wherevnto (for the auoiding of tautologie) we refer the reader.

A league betweene England and Scotland confirmed.

See more of this ambassage in the historie of Scotland, pag. 356. b. 60.

And here (by the waie) hauing entered into a remembrance concerning Scotland, it is noteworthie, a little to glanse at the present state of the same, whereof let the wise consider, how soeuer the lesse aduised passe it ouer. The king himselfe we omit as touching his port be it as it is, neuertheles by name to be thought vpon: Vtpote nomen minimæ felicitatis, maximi verò infortunij perhibetur. For if a man tosse ouer the Scotish historie, and cast an eie vpon the succession of their kings; not medling with anie of anie name, sauing such as were of the same with him now in state of principalitie; he shall see Fatale quoddam malum nomini innatum. For certeine conspirators forceablie breaking vp the first kings chamber doore, hauing before died their hands with the blood of the kings fauorers, did now also with like continuall bloudthirstinesse murther their soueraigne, inflicting vpon his bodie manie cruell and deadlie wounds at eight and twentie seuerall blowes.

James the first slaine, see the Scotish historie, pag. 260. b. 40, 50.

Compare this murther with that of Brutus and Cassius vpon Julius Cæsar.

The second king of that name, hauing great experience in knowledge of shooting great artillerie, came to the trenches where the great ordinance was planted, which he caused to be shot off. And here by great misfortune he was slaine by the slice of a great peece of artillerie; which by ouercharging chanced to breake, and slue not onelie the king standing somewhat neere it, but also hurt the earle of Angus with others. The third of that name banded himselfe against certeine rebellious lords, who had made their forces so strong, that they durst enter a pitcht field; and in deed so did: where after great slaughter and murther made of an huge multitude, the king being put to the worst, fled into a mill, whither being fiercelie followed and found therein, he was cruellie slaine, and vnreuerentlie left starke naked.

James the second slaine, see the Scotish historie, pag. 278. a 20.

James the third slaine, see the Scotish historie, pag. 287. a 40.

The fourth of that name, with no lesse infelicitie than the former, ended his daies. For in a battell attempted, tried, and fiercelie fought with the English (notwithstanding manie prodigious chances as forewarnings of misfortune to befall both prince and people, as an hare start among them, which hauing a thousand arrowes, daggers, & other things flong at hir with great noise and shouting, yet escaped she from them all, safe and scotfree: the buckle leather likewise of the kings helmet was gnawne with mise, & the cloth or veile of his inner tent of sanguine red) yet nothing moued with these extraordinarie accidents, nor the persuasions of such as were neere to & about him, he made against the English; & breaking his araie of battell (more hardie than wise) rushed forward (with a companie of noble men) and accomplishing the office of a footman, he found the English manfullie standing at resistance. In fine it fell out verie fatallie against the king & his power, by meanes that the English comming forceablie vpon them, and both sides for a long space fighting verie cruellie, at length the victorie inclined to the English; king James being there beaten downe and slaine.

Forewarnings of misfortunes and ill lucks to befall.

James the fourth slaine, see the Scotish historie, pag. 300. a 60. 301. a 10.

The

The fift of that name, a man neither certeine in doubtfull things, nor doubtfull in things of certeintie, eger to reuenge iniuries, and of an high stomach; hearing of the discomfiture giuen vnto his people in a conflict by the English, was maruellouslie amazed: and therewithall such an impression of pensiuenesse surprised him, that he suspected a conspiracie of all his nobilitie (vpon probable reasons) to haue bene intended against him. Insomuch that he tooke such a vehement and deepe displeasure, increased with a melancholicall thought, that he departed suddenlie from place to place, and at last to Falkland, where he remained as a man desolat of comfort, sore vexed in spirit and bodie, and would not permit anie manner of person to haue accesse vnto him, his secret and familiar frends onelie excepted: so that in a short tract of time he died euen in the vigor of his manhood and strength, at the age of thirtie and three yeares. Now, in how little time the reigns and ruines of these forsaid princes were concluded, we leaue to such as list to looke into the course of the Scotish historie, where they are to obserue not onelie that point, but also manie matters of good consideration.

The first and last of that name, of rare qualitie, and now in roialtie (the sonne of Marie Dowager malicious and murtherous, of whome in discourse hereafter, as occurrences of consequence shall direct our pen) what dangers he passed, &c: by search into the Scotish annals maie appeare: what remaineth behind we leaue to the Lord Gods counsell and working. Touching the countrie it selfe, it is diuided into factions; a plague to kingdoms, and a verie entrance to ruine and desolation. As for the tumults and seditions (which haue often happened) they haue had their begining from a pretended care of religion, which diuerse times hath bene altered, not in profession but in discipline; and which at this present (bishops remooued) is in the power of superintendents; neither can the same, by meanes of old hatred remaining in seed, be at quiet. How the people are affected, the nobles inclined, the officers disposed, the king obeied, the commons gouerned, law administred, religion reuerenced, dutie generallie exhibited, and Gods holie name honored, Eloquar an sileam? grauis est in vtroque querela.

Howbeit, by the report of the * author of the Blacke booke, bearing shew to be printed at Cullen, and dedicated vnto the foresaid Marie the Scotish queene, in the yeare of our Lord one thousand fiue hundred seuentie and fiue (whome this deuiser intituleth high and mightie princesse) euen then it was said that the commonwealth of Scotland was past hope, &c. To which purpose Cicero verie aptlie saith, that such commonwealths as are readie to be ouerthrowne, and haue all things forlorne and desperat in them, fall into this miserable issue, that they whome the laws condemne are restored, and iudgements giuen are reuoked and broken. Now when such things come to passe, let none be ignorant of this, that destruction is at hand, neither can anie man iustlie conceiue hope of safetie. From which remediless mischeefes God defend this realme of England! But enough of this, and now to matters of our owne.

This yeare vpon the seuen and twentith daie of June, at the sessions of oier and terminer at iustice hall in London, a lewd fellow named Henrie Elks clerke, for counterfeiting the Q. signet manuell to a presentation of the parsonage of all saints in Hastings, directed to the archbishop of Canturburie, or to his vicar or commissarie generall (the see or dioceese of Chichester being void) that he might be instituted parson there, was condemned, and had iudgement to be hanged, bowelled, & quartered: who was accordinglie on the next morrow, being the eight and twentith daie of June, executed at Tiborne, in companie of ten other prisoners that were hanged for felonies by them committed. About this time also a lotterie, for maruellous rich and beautifull armor, was begun to be drawen at the great west gate of saint Pauls church in London, in a house of timber newlie erected for that purpose, which lotterie continued drawing daie and night for the space of two or three daies.

A lotterie for armor in London.

¶ In the moneth of Julie a verie dangerous conspiracie was discouered, tending to the subuersion of the state and lamentable confusion of all things: wherin, as the turbulent spirited did what they could to proceed, so it pleased God the author of peace to intercept them in the plot of their mischeefous deuise, and to ouerthrow them in their owne imagined nets. Ringleaders in this pretended treason were certeine gentlemen and others (of whome hereafter by particular name we will speake) who had waded and ventured so farre therein, that vpon the notice thereof (as God will suffer no such attempts to lie long vndetected) order was taken for a verie strict inquirie and search vniuersallie to be made for their apprehension.

The horrible conspiracie of Babington & other his fellow traitors discoursed by A. F.

In the execution whereof, such officers, as vpon whome the charge was imposed, demeaned themselues so precislie (and speciallie the constables of London, to their praise be it spoken) that they spared not their next neighbors houses, but indifferentlie and without partialitie did search them; proceeding so farre by vertue of their office & present commission (wherein they had a speciall regard by their seruice to iustifie their allegiance and faithfull subiection to the whole world) that they went into the verie bedchambers of manie a welthie and worshipfull person, not forbearing the drawing of the coffers, &c: which was offensiuelie taken for the instant, vntill that the reason of their so seuere inquisition was aduisedlie considered.

The faithfull and feruent seruice of such as were in office in and about London in searching for the conspirators.

This search continued for certeine nights, with watch and ward conuenient, to the terrifieng of the conspirators whom the same principallie concerned, and draue them to such a perpleritie, that being ferretted from place to place, they wist not in what corner to take vp their safe repose. Neuertheless, great and diligent search hauing bene made daie and night, and the expected issue failing, peoples minds grew vnquiet and discontented: so much the rather, for that now the rumor of the said hainous attempt was so ranke, that the same was noised and voiced by verie children: insomuch that double diligence was vsed in a further inquirie, and indeed such circumspection had on all hands, that hedge and bush was so beaten, as at length some of those noisome birds were vnnested and surprised.

The conspirators distressed and succorlesse are put to verie hard shifts by inquisition and pursute.

The sound hereof rang him in diuerse places, and people thronged togither to see the vnnaturall beasts that were attached, whose hearts were ouerwhelmed with horror, and their faces couered with confusion; their consciences inwardlie exulcerated and galled with the guilt of their offense: which how damnable it was, the whisperings, communications, and lowd speeches of the multitude, pointing at them with the finger of infamie as traitors of singular note (some saieng, Looke, looke, yonder go the errant traitors that would haue killed our queene, yonder go the wretches that would haue burnt our citie, that would haue alienated the state of the land, that would haue laid all open vnto bloudshed, slaughter, desolation, and spoile: yonder they go whome heauen aboue doth abhorre, the earth below detest, the sun, moone, and starres be ashamed of, all creatures doo curse and count vnworthie of breath and life) might make them conceiue, euen to the extreme torment of their minds, which were now to meditat vpon nothing more than compunction of spirit, repentance, submission to the law and sentence of deserued death, with reconciliation to God, whome they most shamefullie betraied in betraieng his annointed, euen good queene Elisabeth, the Lords lieutenant and viceregerent generall ouer vs.

The conspirators apprehended and detected, to the great reioising of the citizens of London, &c.

No malefactor so odious as a traitor.

O caitiues most execrable, begotten and borne to miserie! How much better had it beene for you, neuer to haue beene conceiued, to haue proued an vntimelie frute, to haue beene ouerthrowen in your cradles, to haue perished in your swathling clowts; than in so vnhappie an houre, vnder so infortunat constellations, to so vnluckie a life, and so reprochfull a death to be reserued; whome none can pitie without suspicion of impietie, none lament but with lacke of lotaltie, none fauorablie speake of without great note of ingratitude and priuie trecherie? To this effect tended the interchangable speeches of the people, all with one voice disclosing the conceipts of their mind, against these eminent traitors: a most odious name and flat against all humanitie, the pernicious plague of kingdoms & commonwealths, hated of God and man, wherewith periured persons being bewitched, feare not to betraie themselues, so they may betraie others also, and their countrie. Whereupon they become intollerable to euerie one, yea euen to those that vse them to serue their owne wicked turns in disloiall & lewd actions, receiuing in the end the reward due to their execrable impieties.

Proditionem amo proditores odi: Treason I loue, but traitors I hate: the saieng of Cæsar Augustus.

For this is the common affection that men beare towards such people, so to seeke them out (which notwithstanding is not the propertie of a noble heart) when they stand in feare of them, as they that want gall or the poison of some venemous beasts: afterwards to giue them ouer and to reiect because of their wickednesse. If a man be called slouthfull, he maie become diligent; if talkatiue, silent; if a glutton, temperat; if an adulterer, continent; if furious, dissemble; if ambitious, constant; if a sinner, amend: but he that is once called a traitor, there is no water to wash him cleane, nor meane to excuse himselfe. And in truth, what man of anie good iudgement will trust such a one, as betraieth his prince, his benefactor, his citie, his countrie, his kinsfolks and frends into the hands of tyrannie and thraldome, from the which (aswell the one of bodie as the other of conscience and religion) good Lord deliuer vs. But to proceed in our discourse, you shall vnderstand, that by meanes of common report both in street and lane, the conspirators diabolicall purposes being knowne, there was such an excesse of ioie bred in the peoples hearts vpon their apprehension, and preuention of the imminent mischiefs, through Gods almightie goodnes, that neighbor with neighbor and friend with friend, yea familiars and strangers by companies fell in talke of the present accident, diuerse diuersle discoursing thereof, some wishing a whole weeks exquisit torment, others renting in peeces with wild horsses, and the mildest (for conclusion) not forbearing imprecations of extreme bitternesse against the traitors.

Diuers kinds of reioisings among the people.

Now besides these were a sort of people of an other disposition, in whom the present occasion forced such a sudden impression of ioie, that they made the bels in steeples witnesses of their inward conceipt; the same being so strong & destrouslie sought to be testified, that some galled themselues with ringing, choosing rather to loose a little lether, yea a portion of their fat and flesh, than not (as time moued, and leasure was made to serue) to giue a signe of their good affection. This liked them well that misliked the ill, the euasion whereof was the cause of this mutuall reioising.

No spring of wood to make bonfires, albeit the price was verie high.

Beyond this the well affected of the citie did passe certeine degrees: for besides that some wearied themselues with pulling at the bell ropes, which were rung both date and night, as vpon the date of hir maiesties coronation; so others deuised a further testification of ioie, insomuch that although wood was then at a soare extent of price, yet they spared not their stacks or piles, were the same little or great; but brought (we thinke in conscience) euerie house a portion, where fires might conuenientlie be made and without danger. Memorandum that none were more forward herein than the meaner sort of people, who rather than they would omit to ad little or much to a fire, being vnprouided of fuell, parted with a penie or two to buie a few sticks by retaile. Insomuch that now by common consent this action grew to be generall, for few places might a man see in the citie, of anie spatiousnesse or compasse, where a cleare fire was not made.

The poore peoples disposition in this exultation.

And surelie infinit was the wood spent for the present time, as maie appeare by the number betweet Ludgate and Charing crosse (fires made in bitumings, lanes, yards, &c: excepted) amounting vnto aboue threescore, by count of the writer hereof, who went of purpose to view them, and indeed did note them all. The people hauing thus done, did not so staie their inward reioising; but bringing out their square and round tables into the open streets, like neighbors sitting togither, and furnishing the boords with such prouision as the present time afforded, made merrie in comelie and honest sort. Where (by the waie) this is not worthie, that manie times an euill thing doth effectuat a good.

A true and iust obseruation of the writer.

Neighbors make merrie in the open streets for ioy of the conspirators ouerthrow and apprehension.

An euill thing doth sometime effectuat a good.

For by the breaking out of this conspiracie, whereupon insued this remembred reioising; it so came to passe, that manie a priuat reconciliation was procured by this mutuall meeting of neighbors betweene diuerse that before had beene at ouerthwarts and in secret grudge, all which was washed awaie with a cup of merrie go downe for hir sake, that vndam [illegible] galatis nostr. In some places the people sang psalmes, and made such melodie as their skill could deuise, with tabber and pipe marching about their fires, and giuing manie a shewt, that the aire rang withall. Now by this president hir maiestie is to be comforted, and also persuaded, that she hath subiects in this hir citie, to whome hir health and safetie is more precious than life or life, and who could be content to spare the best blood in their heart, so hir little finger might not so much as ake: in which mind they liue, and so meane to die, herein saieng by waie of deprecation:

The queens maiestie may perswade herselfe that she is not worth ten thousands of such bloudie hearts, &c.

Viue, vale, regina vale, viue Elisabetha,
Viue valéque tibi, viue valéque tuis:
Seu tua te Windsora capit, quæ sydera lambens,
Subiectas alta despicit arce domos:
Quæque præit formareliquas, Hamptonia, quamuis
Pontificis fuerat, regibus apta domus:
Seu te Londinum cunctorum regia regum
Detinet, & gremio certat habere suo.
Viue, vale, regina vale, viue Elisabetha,
I, comitante Deo, quo duce sospes eris.
Ah pereat! quicunque tuo linescit honore,
Quisquis te nolit, qualis es, esse diu.
Viue (precor) decus excellens, spes vnaq; rerum,
Viue valéque tibi, viue valéque tuis.

Now by reuelation of this pestilent practise, & apprehension of the conspirators in seeking to escape, the minds of people lately perplexed, were presentlie disburthened of manie mistrustfull douts, & their hearts verywhile heauie, grew forthwith somewhat lighter by the extenuation of feare & suspicion, where-

The hearts and minds of the people greatlie quieted and eased.

with

with before they carefullie trauelled; and some that before could not sleepe, not so much for their priuat as their princes and publike estate disquieted, did take their wished rest; most persuading themselues that as a traine of gunpowder, being fiered but in some little part, ceaseth not till it be vtterlie consumed: so would it befall these traitors vpon their descrie and apprehension.

Treasons and conspiracies can not be so closelie wrought but they will out at last.

But as after a pleasant summer followeth a sharpe winter, and the greatest pleasures haue their ouerthwarts: so fared it with this ioie of the multitude, which (as the bright sun in a clere daie ouercast with clouds) was dawnted with a sudden dread, & the necke thereof in a sort broken with the brute of an arriuall of forren enimies vpon the coasts of Sussex. For towards the euening, there were seene fiftie ships houering to and fro before Brighthemston, and sailing towards the towne, as though they had purposed to haue come to the shore: whereof the towne within a few houres aduertised the lord Buckehurst, the messenger adding ten to the number, and bringing word that threescore ships were descried; and that if they ment to come on land, they would do it within an houre following, which if they did, then they would send him further word; but supposed they would not land till the next morning, the tide then serving verie conuenient. Whereupon alarums were rung, and messengers sent out to giue notice to the other parties to be in a readinesse: but expresse charge to fire no beacons, vnlesse they had warrant so to do, and that the enimies were first landed.

After mirth heauie cheere.

No sparing of wood to make bonfires, albeit the price was verie high.

The poore peoples dispositi on in this exultation.

A true and iust obseruation of the writer.

Neighbors make merrie in the open streets for ioy of the conspirators detection and apprehension. Sin euill thing doth procreat a good.

The readinesse of the lord Buckhurst to repell the enimies, if anie such arriuall as was noised had beene.

The lord Buckehurst redilie arming his men, gaue spedie direction what should be done, & went out and laie on the downes all night with the companie, betweene a village called Rottingdeane and Brighthemston, whither resorted vnto him about one thousand and six hundred people, readie there to do their dutie, if need required. His presence greatlie confirmed the people somewhat troubled with this rumor; but yet with great alacritie they flocked from all parts in heaps, and made towards the coast. The Kentishmen likewise with all celeritie assembled, and with no lesse willingnesse addressed themselues to march in good order, well furnished and prepared to haue come downe, had not contrarie news of all things quieted beene brought. For not long after, the coast was cleare, & no more but ten ships with a pinnesse seene a far off, about sixteene miles in the sea, against the downs, betweene Newhauen and Brighthemston; whereof two were said to haue come somewhat neere to the shore about Salt Deane, and to haue discharged two peeces of ordinance. Afterwards being descried what they were, by a vessell manned forth for that purpose by the lord Buckehurst to parle with them; it was found they were Hollanders come out of Spaine laden with merchandize, and bound to Holland, who (by reason the wind had continued easterlie) were forced to houer alongst the coast, their making towards Brighthemston being onelie to get the wind, and that they were frends and no enimies. Beacons were none fired (although the contrarie were reported) but one at Burrish (as was said) from which error some perhaps might in like sort be fired in Kent, but yet verie few.

The queens maiestie may persuade hirselfe that she is not without thousands of faithfull hearts, &c.

Upon what occasion the false voice of forren arriuall did grow.

At the same time that this rumor of tumult was so rife, a great mariage (wherat the bishop of Chichester made a sermon in the chapell) was solemnized at the lord Mountagues house; whereat the earle of Worcester, the countesse of Southampton, the ladie Marie Arundell, the ladie Greie sister to the said lord Mountague, with diuers other knights, ladies, gentlemen & gentlewomen of great traine & attendance were present; insomuch that the number was so great, as it was thought there were not ten gentelmen of Sussex, which might dispend two hundred pounds lands by yeare, that were absent: which number as they were great, so was their variance long in that place. Now as the said companie was redie to sit downe to supper, sudden news came that Newhauen was burned, & the lord Buckhurst with a power gone to Brighthemston to saue the towne from forren inuasion, intended by certeine ships redie to make arriuall. Which although it was a meere lie and vaine report (as by the premisses appeareth) yet notwithstanding it bred such an abashment in the minds of the multitude, from the best to the worst, that thereupon a partile dissolution of the companie was procured, to the number of a hundred horsse making awaie vpon that occasion: howbeit, there supped (as it was said) fiftéene hundred people in and about the said house, the same night that these troublesome news arriued. Which might well be true: for the bere tap neuer left running, during the space of foure daies; a time wherein a great part of the good prouision was spent, to the founders praise and the feders releefe.

A great mariage solemnized at the time of the false voice of forren arriuall.

The hearts and minds of the people greatlie quieted and eased.

These false news came flieng from diuerse places.

Hospitalitie commendable.

But to let that passe, you shall vnderstand, that when the truth of this whole matter was knowne, all former feare, whereto false report had made passage into the minds of men, was forthwith put to flight; and though for a season, being sudden, the present conspiracie (so greene of memorie) gaue it force for the time; yet neuertheless at length, like a cloud in the aire, or a dreame in sleepe, it vanished quite awaie, and the rumor thereof was the restoring of the people to their former reioising, ingendring likewise in them an expectation of deserued iustice against the troublers of Israels blessed peace. Howbeit (a matter of great moment, and at no hand to be omitted) hir maiestie hauing intelligence of hir louing peoples demeanor, in such sort as you haue heard, did most gratiouslie accept of the same, and conceiued no small comfort in heart, that God had giuen hir a people so studious of hir safetie, and ioifull for the same. Insomuch that the consideration thereof did so worke in hir highnesse, as herevpon (a thing rare in a prince) she directed letters of thanks to the citie, for the manifold testifications of their loue and loialtie: which because they are materiall (as no word nor tittle procéeding from so singular a souereigne, is to fall to the ground vnregarded) we are in dutie bound trulie to anner them, as we had them vnder publication. And first a breefe oration of maister James Dalton, one of the councellors of the citie of London, in the absence of the recorder, as followeth.

The reioising of the people for hir maiesties preseruation commeth to hir eares, &c.

The oration of maister Iames Dalton, &c.

Right worshipfull, my good countriemen and citizens of this most noble citie of London: since the late brute and report of a most wicked & traitorous conspiracie, not onelie to take awaie the life of our most gratious souereigne (whome God grant long to liue and reigne ouer vs) but also to stir vp a generall rebellion throughout the whole realme: the great and vniuersall ioie of you all of this citie, vpon the apprehension of diuerse of that most wicked conspiracie alate declared and testified, by manie outward acts and shewes, hath wrought in the queens most excellent maiestie such a gratious contentment; that it hath moued hir highnesse, by hir letters signed with hir owne hand, to signifie vnto my lord maior of this citie and his brethren, hir most noble and prince-lie acceptation thereof, and that in ſuch ſort, as thereby maie appeare, that hir highneſſe hath not more, no not ſo much reioiſed at the moſt happie eſcape of the wicked miſchiefe intended againſt hir owne perſon, as at the ioie which hir louing ſubiects, & namelie you of this citie of London toke at the apprehenſion of the practiſers of that intended treaſon.

By occaſion whereof, hir highneſſe brought to a thankefull remembrance, and acknowledging of Gods infinit bleſſings beſtowed on hir, comparable with anie prince or creature in the world, no worldlie thing more or like accompteth of, than of the heartie loue of hir louing and faithfull ſubiects manie waies, and manie times before now; but eſpeciallie by this our great ioie in this ſort, at this time, and vpon this occaſion ſhewed. And that hir exceeding great loue and acceptation of our reioiſing maie the more appeare vnto you; it hath pleaſed hir highneſſe in the ſame letters to declare, that ſhe deſireth not longer to liue among vs, than ſhe ſhall mainteine, continue, nouriſh, and increaſe the loue & goodwill of hir ſubiects towards hir. And this hir highneſſe hath willed to be made knowne vnto you all, with this; that ſhe will not faile with all care, and by all good meanes that apperteine to a chriſtian prince, to ſeeke the conſeruation of you all, ſo louing and dutifullie affected ſubiects.

This hir maieſties pleaſure in part now declared, and more to be made knowen vnto you by hir owne letters, which you ſhall heare read, my lord maior and his brethren haue required me to declare vnto you all, that they doo heartilie reioiſe and thanke God for the happie daie of the good acceptation of this your great ioie; and my lord himſelfe hath willed me to giue you all heartie thanks in his name; for that in the time of his ſeruice, your dutifull behauiours haue gotten to the citie ſo noble and worthie a teſtimonie of dutie and loialtie, of ſo noble and worthie a queene. Now, for ſo much as Gods bleſſings wonderfullie abound, & one ioie commeth vpon another, let vs not be vnthankefull to God, but acknowledge his goodneſſe, and attribute the ſame (as in deed we ought) to the ſincere religion of almightie God, moſt godlie eſtabliſhed by the queens moſt excellent maieſtie, which hath taught vs to know God aright, our dutie to our ſouereigne, and to loue our countrie, and hath made vs dutifull and obedient ſubiects, reioiſing at all good things happening to hir maieſtie, hir realme, or to anie in hir noble ſeruice, the true effects of a true and good religion: whereas the contemners thereof, and immoderat affectors of the Romiſh religion and ſuperſtitions, being void of the true knowledge of God, haue declined from God, their allegiance to their prince, their loue to their countrie, and haue become inuenters of miſchiefes, bruters and ſpreaders abrode of falſe and ſeditious rumors, ſuch as ioie at no good thing; but contrariwiſe reioiſe at euerie euill ſucceſſe, the badges and marks of their profeſſion, who haue before this, in this realme and in other hir highneſſe dominions, ſtirred vp rebellion, forren inuaſion, and manie times practiſed the verie death & deſtruction of the queene hir ſelfe; the ruine & ſubuerſion of the whole realme; the proper effects of their Romiſh religion.

We haue beheld all theſe things, and ſeene in our daies the ruine and miſchiefs inuented againſt others, fall vpon the inuenters themſelues; and haue knowne the wicked and violent hands of diuerſe of them, diuerſlie to kill and murther themſelues, when moſt traitorouſlie they would, and moſt happilie they could not, ſlea the Lords annointed. As we haue knowne all theſe things, ſo God be thanked, that by a better religion, hauing beene better taught, we haue beene no partakers of their wicked deuiſes, but haue put to our helping hands, as occaſion hath ſerued; and euer readie to ouerthrow the authors and deuiſers thereof. And I haue no doubt, but we of this noble citie, who hitherto haue beene alwaies readie, dutifullie and faithfullie to ſerue hir maieſtie vpon all occaſions (hir highneſſe now ſo gratiouſlie accepting onelie of our reioiſing at the apprehenſion of hir enimies, euen the leaſt part of the dutie of a good ſubiect to ſo good a queene) will be readie euerie one with all that we can make, and with the vttermoſt aduenture of all our liues, ſpedilie to be reuenged vpon all ſuch as ſhall villanouſlie and traitorouſlie attempt or put in vre anie miſchiefe to hir noble perſon; and in the meane time will haue a better eie and eare to all ſuſpicious and miſcontented perſons, to their ſaiengs and doings, to their falſe brutes and reports, to the places and corners of their haunt and reſort, to their harborers companions, aiders and mainteiners. God vphold and continue his religion among vs, and increaſe our zeale therein, which hath made vs ſo louing and loiall, and ſo beloued and acceptable ſubiects to ſo worthie a prince; and root out that wicked and Romiſh religion, that hath made ſo manie diſloiall and traitorous ſubiects; to whome is both odious and irkeſome the long life and proſperous reigne of our moſt noble queene Eliſabeth. God confound all ſuch traitors, and preſerue hir highneſſe long to liue & reigne ouer vs. ¶ Hauing thus ſpoken, the multitude all the while no leſſe ſilent than attendant, the ſpeaker verie reuerentlie opened hir maieſties letters, and read the ſame with a verie diſtinct and audible voice, as followeth.

Sir Wolſtan Dixie lord maior of London, Anthonie Ratcliffe and Henrie Pranell ſhiriffes.

To our right truſtie and welbeloued, the lord maior of our citie of London, and his brethren the aldermen of the ſame.

RIght truſtie and welbeloued, we greete you well. Being giuen to vnderſtand, how greatlie our good and moſt louing ſubiects of that citie, did reioiſe at the apprehenſion of certeine diuelliſh and wicked minded ſubiects of ours, that through the great and ſingular goodneſſe of God haue beene detected, to haue moſt wickedlie and vnnaturallie conſpired, not onelie the taking awaie of our owne life, but alſo to haue ſtirred vp (as much as in them laie) a generall rebellion throughout our whole realme: we could not but by our owne letters witneſſe vnto you the great and ſingular contentment we receiued vpon the knowledge thereof; aſſuring you, that we did not ſo much reioiſe at the eſcape of the intended attempt againſt our owne perſon, as to ſee the great ioie our moſt louing ſubiects toke at the apprehenſion of the contriuers thereof: which, to make their loue more apparant, they haue (as we are to our great comfort informed) omitted no outward ſhew, that by anie externall act might witneſſe to the world the inward loue and dutifull affection they beare towards vs. And as we haue as great cauſe with all thankefulneſſe to acknowledge Gods great goodneſſe toward vs, through the infinit bleſſings he laieth vpon us, as manie as euer prince had; yea rather as euer creature had: yet doo we not for anie worldlie bleſſing receiued from his diuine maieſtie, ſo greatlie acknowledge the ſame, as in that it hath pleaſed him to incline the hearts of our ſubiects, euen from the firſt beginning of our reigne; to carie as great loue toward vs, as euer ſubiects carried toward prince, which ought to moue vs (as it doth in verie deed) to ſeeke with all care, & by all all good means that apperteine to a Christian prince, the conseruation of so louing and dutifullie affected subiects: assuring you, that we desire no longer to liue, than while we maie in the whole course of our gouernment carie our selues in such sort, as may not onelie nourish & continue their loue & good will towards vs, but also increase the same. We thinke meet, that these our letters should be communicated in some generall assemblie to our most louing subiects the commoners of that citie. Giuen vnder our signet at our castell of Windsor, the eightenth daie of August 1586, in the eight and twentith yeare of our reigne.

Thus you se hir maiesties mindfulnesse and thankefulnesse of and for slender and bounden dutie: a propertie of princelie imitation, and wherein hir highnesse father of famous memorie king Henrie the eight did excell; who in the fift yeare of his reigne, managing wars in France (at what time also the English forces, vnder the conduct and gouernment of the earle of Surrie, the kings lieutenant generall, atchiued manie notable exploits against the Scots at the battell of Bramrton, to the enimies great discomfiture, both by slaughter and captiuitie) where he heard how happilie his people had demeaned themselues, to the renowme and credit of their natiue countrie; but speciallie to his roiall contentment: insomuch that at his returne into England from his conquest of Terwin and Tornay, he forgat not the acceptable seruice of his said people done in the Scotish wars; but verie thankefullie esteeming thereof, wrote vnto them his louing letters, leuened with words and clauses of such singular liking and passing fauour, that euerie man thought himselfe sufficientlie rewarded. Euen so blessed queene Elisabeth (a naturall branch of that spreading vine) treading the steps of hir great progenitor, gaue like publike testimonie of heartie good will and gratious acceptance, of hir peoples forerememberd reioising. Which as it is a note of no common exemplification, so it cannot but excite and stir vp much matter of multiplieng and ratifieng all dutifull kindnesse and seruiceable submission to hir highnesse: wherein as we doubt not anie neglect, when occasion is ministred; so we leaue hir to the Lords holie hand, the onelie hope of hir and our helpe; purposing now for a while to leaue the conspirators in safe custodie, and to touch the next occurrence comming to hand, as course of time offereth direction.

Queene Elisabeth a right patterne of king Henrie the eight.

About this time, returned into England, sir Francis Drake knight, a man of rare knowledge in nauigation, & verie fortunat in the euent of his enterprises, after manie feats of good seruice accomplished in forren countries (as at Baion, Hispaniola, S. Dominico, Carthagena, &c: to the admiration of all people amongest whom he came, and contrarie to the expectation of the Spaniards, who vpon supposall of places impregnable grew so confident, that they seemed lightlie to esteeme anie purposed force of the enimie, and therefore doubted no kind of annoiance. Howbeit, they were as safe as he that hangeth by the leaues of a tree in the end of autumne, when as the leaues begin to fall. For they were so terrified at the sight of sacke and spoile, as also doubting a totall wast by fire and sword, that they were glad to yeeld to composition. And here, because mention is made of Hispaniola, it shall not be amisse to honor this voiage with an historicall report of that countrie.

Sir Francis Drake his returne into England after his last voiage finished.

It is supposed that Salomon king of Jerusalem had his great riches of gold from hense, and that his ships sailed to Ophir by the gulfe of Persia, called Sinus Persicus.

Hispaniola (of some affirmed to be Ophir, whereof mention is made in the third booke of the kings) is of latitude fiue south degrees, hauing the north pole eleuat on the north side seuen and twentie degrees, & on the south side (as they saie) two & twentie degrees; it reacheth in length from east to west, seuen hundred and foure score miles, being distant from the Ilands of Gades (now Cales) nine and fortie degrees and more, as some saie. The forme of the Iland resembleth the leafe of a chesnut tree, with a gulfe towards the west side, lieng open against the Iland of Cuba. But the expert shipmaister Andreas Moralis describeth it, from the east and west angle to be indented and eaten with manie great gulfes, and the corners to reach forth verie farre, placing manie large and safe hauens in the great gulfe on the east side. It may be compared (without shame or blame as some saie) to Italie, sometimes queene of the world. For if the quantitie be considered, it shall be found little lesse, and much more fruitfull. It reacheth from the east into the west foure hundred and fortie miles, according to the computation of the later searchers. It is in breadth somewhere almost three hundred miles, and in some places narrower, where the corners are extended. But it is surelie much more blessed and fortunat than Italie, being for the most part thereof so temperat and flourishing, that it is neither vexed with sharpe cold, nor afflicted with immoderat heat. It hath both the staiengs or conuersions of the sun called solstitia in a maner equall with the equinoctiall, with little difference betweene the length of the daie and the night throughout all the yeare. For on the south side the daie ascendeth scarslie an houre in length aboue the night, or contrariwise: the cold is accidentall, and not by the situation of the region, their spring and summer is perpetuall, their ground of maruellous fruitfulnesse, their oxen and swine of exceeding bignesse, & fed with mirobalans, an eare of wheat with them as big as a mans arme in the brawne; great plentie of cattell, wholsome waters, & gold euerie where; for there is in maner no riuer, nor mounteine, and but few plaines that are vtterlie without it.

Hispaniola compared to Italie.

The temperature of Hispaniola.

The equinoctiall.

The bignesse of a eare of wheat.

This Hispaniola is reputed the head, and as it were the principall mart of all the liberalitie of the ocean, hauing a thousand and a thousand faire, pleasant, beautifull, and rich Nereides or Ilands, which lie about it on euerie side, adorning this their ladie and mother, as it were an other Thetis the wife of Neptune, inuironing hir about, and attending vpon hir as their queene and patronesse: and therefore aptlie denominated and likened vnto the earthlie paradise. Where, by the waie might be touched who first inhabited Hispaniola, how it was first named, the peoples maner of learning, their ballads and rimes, their singing and dansing, their songs of loue and mourning, their prophesies, familiaritie with spirits, their serpents, their riuers and poles, their prouinces, their delights and pleasures, and how they can abide no labor nor cold, what gold is yearelie brought from thense into Spaine, namelie the summe of foure hundred, and sometimes fiue hundred ducats of gold, as may be gathered by the fift portion due to the kings exchequer, amounting to an hundred and fourescore, or fourescore and ten thousand castellans of gold, and sometimes more. Here also might be discoursed the manifold and admirable things in that countrie, the variable motions of the elements, the colonies & villages which the Spaniards haue builded, the sundrie goodlie Ilands round about it, as Arethusa, Sanctus Johannes, Cuba, Jamaica, Guadalupea, &c: the suger presses wherwith great plentie of suger is made, the canes or reeds wherein the same groweth, being as big as a mans arme in the brawne, & higher than the stature of a man by the halfe, the like whereof is in no

A particular description of the Iland of Hispaniola.

What gold is brought yearelie from Hispaniola into Spaine.

The suger of Hispaniola.

place: the wheat, wine, with infinit other commodities and circumstances; and speciallie the chæfest gold mines, how the same is fined and distributed, as also that onelie in the melting shops of the two golden mines of Hispaniola, are molten yerelie aboue three hundred thousand pounds weight of gold: so likewise might we saie much of Sancto Dominico, the chiefe citie and head of Hispaniola, reported in histozie, as touching the building, that there is no citie in Spaine, Tanto pro tanto, no not Barsalona, that is to be preferred before it generallie. For the houses are for the most part of stone, as are they of Barsalona, or of so strong and well wrought earth, that it maketh a singular and strong binding. Touching the situation thereof enough is extant in bookes of nauigation, whereto we remit the readers. We might also speake of Carthagena, of the authoritie of the viceroie of Hispaniola, the mother and principall of all other lands and Ilands, of the senat and iudges there, who giue lawes to all the inhabitants of these tracts. But if we should take that course, there would be no end of our worke. Onelie this we haue said in honor of the knight, who with extraordinarie fortune trauelled to the places aboue said: and vnto whome with his companie much maie be ascribed by waie of commendation, because that they haue made knowne vnto posteritie so manie thousands of Antipodes, which laie hid before and vnknowne to our forefathers.

Sancto Dominico the chiefe citie in Hispaniola.

And now resuming the person of him, whose valor did induce vs vnto this remembrance; note this, that hauing augmented his former renowme with new accesse of praisworthie seruice, he grew so famous in places far & neere, that among nations abrode his name grew verie common, insomuch that some of the learned sort maligning his honorable atchiuements, euen against their owne consciences & knowledge did report verie ingloriouslie of him and his actions, against whose obloquies the truth is a sufficient target. But thus much by the waie to the slanderer, who hath learned the pestilent precept of Medius giuen to backbiters, who taught that they should not spare to nip boldlie, and to bite with store of slanders. For (quoth he) although he that is bitten should be cured of the wound, yet the skar at the least will still remaine. Howbeit true it is, that this comfort can not be taken awaie from good men, namelie to be persuaded, that the sleights of backbiters and slanderers are able to preuaile but little against the inuincible tower of sacred vertue, and of an assured hope well grounded, which (whatsoeuer commeth to passe) triumph alwaies, and victoriouslie hold enuie and backbiting vnder their feet. In the meane while, it is the greatest griefe in the world to see the honor of a good man in the mercie of a venemous tong: and true is and will be the common prouerbe, Non e alcuna persona si libera, a chimanchi il suo bargello. As for the opinions and conceipts of people at home concerning him, they were extraordinarie: insomuch that after his arriuall and being in London, manie did flocke about him in the open streets, with admiration as a worlds wonder: yea the report of his exploits abrode did so rauish their minds, that leauing preacher and sermon, they ran apace to behold him: such force hath magnanimitie, wherwith this worthie knight tempered all his enterprises, sorted to a verie prosperous issue.

Rerum in orbe gestarum, &c. comment. in eclano.

There is no man so free that hath not his persecutor or enimie.

Now hauing touched (though not with conuenient dignitie) the last voiage of this singular gentleman, it were not amisse to anner in this place a memoriall of a former voiage by him attempted, namelie on the thirteenth daie of December, in the yeare of Christ one thousand fiue hundred seuentie and seuen: at what time accompanied with fiue tall ships well manned and appointed, he sailed into the west Indies: and by the same aduenture (most luckilie accomplished) eternised his name. At what time the king of the Moluccaes admiring his order, and astonied at the hearing of the peales of English ordinance, roring like thunder (which he there at his arriuall valiantlie and liberallie discharged) receiued him right honorablie, causing foure galliasses to conduct and bring his ship into the surest harborough, and himselfe with his companie to his presence. In this voiage he discouered a countrie erst vnknowne, which he named Noua Albion, where by his courteous deling he so allured and woone the hearts of the inhabitants, that twise they crowned him king. Beyond the large countrie of Chilie, where it hath bene heretofore thought that nothing had bene but continent and firme land, he found sundrie Ilands, the furthest wherof lieng most south, he called by his maiesties name Elisabetha. Now after manie a singular note of his incomparable valorousnesse exhibited in places where he came, and purposing to make his aduenture profitable, he neglected no meanes that might stand with his honestie & honor; returning home into England with great riches the six and twentith of September, in the yeare of our Lord one thousand fiue hundred and eightie; with one ship onelie. For of the fiue, wherwith (at his first setting forth) he was furnished, he was forced to set two on fire, the third perished, the fourth came backe and went not forwards at the first. A voiage of great aduenture and prosperous successe, contrarie to the ackward and frowning hap of sundrie worthie gentlemen, whose attempts albeit honorable and commendable, yet matched with misfortune, or at least defectiue in deserued and hoped issue: a sore discouragement to gentlemen of trauell, and not a little impeaching the art of nauigation. For with what corage can men put in practise the rules of their knowledge, when they see the successe of their skill and actions inferior vnto the tediousnesse of their labors, oftentimes accompanied with losse of life? A forceable motiue to withdraw mens minds quite from all desire to sea, and to breed in them a good liking of the land, yea of their owne houses and smoking chimnies: whereby in fine might follow a contempt of nauigation, and a neglect of all profit that trauell might afford.

The returne of sir Francis Drake into England with great riches, &c.

Manie voiages of great difficultie haue bene vndertaken, but failed in the issue.

To which purpose Fabatus the consull is worth the noting, who in seuentie yeares which he liued, departed not once from his village of Regio to go to Messina, which was but two miles off by water. And when one asked him the cause whie? The barke (quoth he) is foolish, for it alwaies stirreth vp and downe; the mariner is foolish, for he neuer abideth in one opinion; the water is foolish, for it neuer standeth still; the wind is foolish, for it runneth continuallie. Now if we vse to go from a fole when we meet him vpon the land; what reason were it for me to hazard my life with foure fooles vpon the sea? But if all men had bene of Fabatus his mind, or vpon some ouerthwart casualties and fatall accidents should grow into a mislike of ship and sea (as diuers both wise, graue, and aged philosophers were of the contrarie opinion) then would not Plato, after he had bene well instructed by Socrates, sought out the Magies & wise men of Egypt, by whose means he saw the bookes of Moses: then he went into Italie, to heare Architas Tarentinus, the most renowmed philosopher of that countrie. Apollonius, who matched in learning all the philosophers of his time, trauelled ouer all the three parts of the world, to see and conferre with all the skilfull men of his age: and being returned into his countrie, inriched with Fabatus an old consull, but no trauceller, speaketh according to his small skill.

Philosophers haue bene great trauellers for knowledge, &c.

wonderfull knowledge, he distributed all his goods (whereof he had great abundance) amongst his brethren, and to the poore: and withdrawing himselfe into the field, he liued with bread and water onelie, that he might haue his mind free for the contemplation of heauenlie things. Wherein we are the more willing to vse the authorities of philosophers, because they were counted wise, and no mens iudgement in the world more consonant to the truth, as likewise their examples are of force to persuade.

The benefits of nauigation or trauelling by sea, &c.

And surelie as wisdome with experience is purchased by trauelling; so wealth and worship is thereby obteined: all which are most vrgent prouocations to draw men forwards to great and doubtfull aduentures: besides a carefull and louing regard of common vtilitie, which to a valorous mind is a verie spurre. Wherefore we may iudge that Frenchman scarse well aduised or affected, who vpon a light gheste concludeth, that want of prudence and ambitious desires did first inuent the art of nauigation and sailing into farre countries: a thing ordeined of God, and time out of mind vsed amongest men, as may appeare by the words of the prophet Dauid, They that go downe to the sea in ships, and occupie their businesse in great waters: these men see the works of the Lord, and his wonders in the deepe. But to end with him at whome this present note toke beginning, it were to be wished, that in memorie of this gentlemans incomparable atchiuement, some monument might remaine to succeeding ages: and none fitter than the brittle barke wherein he arriued safe and sound, which a knight of good account and rarelie qualified, thought meet to be fixed vpon the stumpe of Paules steeple, in lieu of the spire, that being discerned farre and neere, it might be noted and pointed at of people with these true termes: Ponder is the barke that hath sailed round about the world. The emperor Adrian toke such glorie and pride in all execrable vices, that he commanded a temple with a sumptuous tombe to be made for a naughtie man named Antinous, whom he had miserablie abused in his life. The gentleman whome this remembrance concerneth, preferring the honor of his countrie before his owne life, with magnanimitie vndertoke vnwonted aduentures, and went through the same with wonderfull happines: were it not then iniurie to burie his name in oblivion, matters of no moment in a manner compared to this noted in our annales? Wherefore till time produce a more sufficient commemoration of him, let this serue the turne: whereto we will adde a few verses written in his fame, and so leaue him vnto the blessed successe whereunto he is by Gods most gratious appointment (no doubt) reserued:

Nauigation in vse before Christs time: note psalme 107.

The words of a knight concerning the barke wherein sir Francis Drake sailed about the world.

The obseruations in all his voiages remaine in writing, &c.

T.N. Ciceſt.

Ante Dracum multi heroes freta multa Britanni
Non ſine laude citis ſulcárunt ſalſa carinis,
Nec potuere tamen votis potirier: alti
Nec reſerare vias pelagi (ſors omnia verſat)
Quamuis mente pia imbuti atque ingentibus auſis:
Dracus at ex multis (gallinæ filius albæ)
Quem decorat Pitho, quem Suada venuſtat amica,
Quem pia relligio, quem dia Modeſtia adornat,
Omine felici cuncta incipit, omine fauſto
Perficit, & patriæ ſeruit, viuitque fidelis,
Colla petulca domans, & opima trophea reportans.

And now back againe to our former stop in the conspiracie; the processe whereof who would not willinglie heare, the same being so odious & vnnaturall? The mischiefes against hir maiestie and the bodie of the land preuented, and the imaginers thereof now in durance: the honorable lords of the councell (whose vigilancie hath beene alwaies most wonderfull for the tranquillitie and securitie of the state) did now enter into the discussing and winnowing out of such vnnaturall treacheries, as the conspirators had in their lewd conuenticles consulted vpon, & in their seditious letters solicited. Wherein although the offendors had capitallie transgressed, and in a degree so eminent as none aboue, and therefore deserued what rigor (were it neuer so sharpe) might be thought vpon, or vsed: yet not so much as falling into a conceipt of anie such proceeding, they so dealt with the conspirators by clemencie, circumspection, & persuasion; that whatsoeuer concerned their attempt in that heinous kind, they discouered, and vpon hope of fauour (which it were sin against God to grant to malefactors so mischiefoullie bent) opened the whole forme of the action, with the circumstances of the same. By which their voluntarie confession they satisfied the examinants, whose wisedoms in a course of that kind it is impossible for a giltie conscience to outreach.

No rigor vsed against the conspirators, whereby anie thing might seeme to be violentlie extorted in examination.

Matters thus far passed, and the greater sorts much quieted, the people were in dailie expectation & desire to heare some report of the conspirators now by their owne confessions sufficientlie conuicted: whereupon a preacher at Pauls crosse was commanded from authoritie, to deliuer some notice to the assemblie, answerable to the knowledge which he himselfe receiued by eare at the best hand; namelie, that diuerse of the traitors were apprehended, and without anie torture or torment confessed their treasonable intentions; which were, to murther hir maiestie, and procure meanes for the arriuall of forren powers, whereby the land might be ouerrun, heauen and earth confounded, and all things turned topsie turuie. It was not the policie of man (said the preacher) that caused this discoverie, but Digitus Dei, the finger of God that found them out. Thus much being intimated to the people in that publike sermon, they gaue God thanks for the same; as surelie we cannot sufficientlie magnifie his diuine maiestie, who of his infinit mercie hath preserued hir highnesse from manie imminent mischiefes, and wrapped the wretched imaginers and intenders thereof in their owne snares, to their foule shame and confusion.

The conspirators now discouerie of the plot of their purposed practise.

How this great conspiracie came to light is published by the preachers.

Now after voluntarie confession, and examination by hir maiesties wise councellors, being hir eies and eares, there seemed no further euidence or proofe requirable for their conuiction: the giltinesse of their conscience inducing them to the discouerie of their intollerable treacheries: than the which there cannot be a hell of more extreame torment. And surelie true it is, that the conscience of a malefactor is vnto him in stead of an accuser, a witnesse, a iudge, and a hangman: the scripture importing no lesse, in saieng, that the wicked shall tremble at the fall of the leafe of a tree, and be as if their life hong by a thread. Which violence of mans conscience we ought to be persuaded commeth from God, who causeth his enimies (which be such as oppose themselues against his annointed) to feele his iudgement and furie in such sort, that they cannot abide it, but are constrained to condemne themselues: as we see notablie exemplified in these conspirators, who being now scarselie the shadows of men, and all hope of life or mitigation of deserued death quite extinguished, were to thinke vpon their present downe-fall into destruction, restlesse in bodie, troubled in soule, heauie in heart, and wholie ouerwhelmed with waues of most wofull miserie. And doubtlesse, if at anie time, most likelie now were they touched with compunction and remorse, euen to the quicke, if the grace of God were not vtterlie exiled out of their hearts.

The quéens wise councellors [illegible] eies and eares.

The wret[illegible] state of the conspirators [illegible] aware of iudgement and death.

Now had they iust cause and fit time to curse their vngratious meetings, their execrable consultations,

tations, their diuelish deuises, the vnhappie houre of giuing consent to effectuat, or anie waie to prefer a practise of so pestilent a plot; & finallie the dismall daie of their destruction, the mindfulnesse whereof could not but so terrifie and torment them, as that no meane could relæue them, no place succor them: being not vnlike vnto fearefull men at sea subiect to casting, who thinking to be better in one place than in another, go from the sterne to the stem, then to the bottome of the ship, afterwards to the highest part, from thense into the skiph, and in the end returne into the ship, without anie amendement of their euill, because they carrie alwaie about with them both feare and greefe. And surelie thus it must be by the inevitable decree of God, with all such as insurge and rise against their souereigne (in whome is power to prescribe laws vnto all in generall, and to euerie one in particular, and not to receiue anie but of God; who is the iudge of princes, as princes are the iudges of their people) and labour to dissolue the societie of men, which is the bond of life; nature spurning against such malicious minds, whose ordinance tendereth the preseruation of all creatures in their kinds, whether earthie, waterie, aierie, or flieng, tame or wild, they all seeking after fellowship of like with like to liue togither; as sheepe by flocks, kine, oxen, harts & hinds feeding by heards; horsses & mules by companies; choughs, stares, cranes, & other birds by flight; fishes both in fresh & salt waters following one another in sholes; bees dwelling in hiues, pigeons in dowehouses, ants in little hills, &c.

The remembrance of death is dreadfull to all traitors.

The societie of men is the bond of life, which who so seeketh to dissolue is worthie of death.

What a mischiefe meant these, shall I saie men, naie monsters of men, to transgresse the limits of all loialtie in such an outragious sort? The wretches might well thinke, that God establisheth no principalitie, but he will by his power support the same, euen to the confusion of all them that seeke either directlie or indirectlie to supplant the same. But these men troubled their minds with no such cogitations, which might haue reuoked or restreined them from their attempts, or forewarned them of dangers insuing vpon consultations held against princes, of plots laid against the whole state of a kingdome, of innouations, of alienations, of intrusions, and confusions. Wherein it is to be wondered, what legion of diuels possessed them, that professing the name of christians, and linked with the societie of Iesus, they should so degenerat as to kicke against the rule of christianitie, which teacheth that princes and potentates are to be obeied, speciallie souereignes and monarchs, who in their seuerall territories and dominions are like the sun, which is as king among the starrs, the moone as quæne, the eagle among birds, the lion among beasts, the whale in the sea, and the pike in powles among fishes: finallie, as the heart in a liuing creature, which giueth life to the whole bodie, because it is the fountaine of bloud and vitall spirits.

God establisheth no principalitie but he supporteth the same by his omnipotencie.

The rule of christianitie teacheth obedience and loialtie.

Princes whereto compared in their dignities.

Now to enter either into consultation or action against a person of such excellencie, what is it else but to pull the sunne out of heauen, and to teare the heart out of the bodie? Wise men will ground their affections and enterprises vpon right and equitie onelie, knowing that they ought not alwaies to be measured by their euent and end, which oftentimes seeme to favor vniust counsels and doings; and offer some colour and occasion to the wicked to prosecute their dealings, having no care of violating right and iustice: but howsoeuer it be, a miserable end bringeth them an ouerlate repentance. There is no action but hath his originall intention, no intention but issueth from a premeditation, no premeditation but proceedeth from a conceipt: all these concurring with their accessaries, make a complet action: as we see in sciences and arts, as in grammar, which taketh beginning from letters, geometrie from the point, arithmetike from vnitie, musike from the minnem and semibreefe; and also in things naturall, as plants and trees, which rise and increase out of a verie small seed. And therefore let men take heed how they giue place vnto a wicked thought, much more to a mischeefous deed. In which respect it is worth the noting that is reported of Diogenes, who beholding one of his scholars in a publike place talking verie earnestlie with a young man, that was suspected wanton and effeminat, demanded what communication they had? To whome the scholar, answered that the other rehearsed vnto him a notable tricke of youth, which he had plaied the night before. Then Diogenes said to them both; My will and commandement is, that each of you haue fortie stripes with a whip within the amphitheater or plaieng place: thou (quoth he to his scholar) for giuing eare vnto him, and he for the follie committed; because a philosopher deserueth as much for hearkening to follie recited, as doth the vagabond that rehearseth it.

Queere thing taketh his beginning of a small beginning.

Communication with a lewd person reproued, and iustlie punishable.

Now if this were the punishment sentenced against these two, in this case of lightnesse and follie: what iudgement might a wise man deeme, would haue beene awarded by Diogenes against conspirators, whose conuentions and consultations are the whetting of daggers and swords, to thrust into the bowels of their sweet native countrie? But whither wade we? Trulie the matter in present discourse is so ample, and therewithall so odious, that the further we saile, the more sea we see. Wherefore to draw neere to the verie subiect, this maie not be omitted, that the conspirators, who had wouen the web of their owne woo, being now forlorne, as hated of heauen, and irkesome to the earth, seeing no hope of life, but deserued death imminent and hanging ouer their heads, occupied their wits in dolorous deuises, bemoning their miseries, of the like stampe to this here annexed, sauouring more of prophane poetrie than christianitie, of fansie than religion:

My prime of youth is but a frost of cares,
My feast of ioie is but a dish of paine:
My crop of corne is but a field of tares,
And all my good is but vaine hope of gaine:
The daie is past, and yet I saw no sun,
And now I liue, and now my life is doone.

My tale was heard, and yet it was not told,
My fruit is falne, and yet my leaues are greene:
My youth is spent, and yet I am not old,
I saw the world, and yet I was not seene:
My Thred is cut, and yet it is not spun,
And now I liue, and now my life is doone.

I sought my death and found it in my wombe,
I lookt for life, and saw it was a shade:
I trod the earth, and knew it was my tombe,
And now I die, and now I was but made:
My glasse is full, and now my glasse is run,
And now I liue, and now my life is doone.

Tichborns elegie written with his owne hand in the Tower before his execution, printed by Iohn Wolfe. 1586.

The like elegies also did the rest (and namelie Babington) deuise, with letters supplicatorie for fauour of high estates, whome he had most greeuouslie offended: which because the copies are common (but yet neuer authorised for the print) we will omit, onelie touching in superficiall sort the tenor thereof. As first his asking of grace and fauour with all humilitie, to acknowledge his vnadvised offense (as he termeth it) wherein he pretendeth certeine motiues to compassion, as his vncoloured petition, his gentrie, his brainsicke yeares, the order of his behauiour and plaine course of dealing in his confession, his most heartie repentance, his inward vow of assured seruice hereafter, both to hir grati-

A fable or tale which Sir Iohn Gray applieth to his present case of wretchednesse.

ous maiestie and his countrie. Furthermore, to procure the speedier commiseration (in his fansie) he falleth into a familiar tale of a certeine man, that having a great flocke of sheepe, moued either with a sheepish vnrulinesse, or for his better commoditie, threatened euerie daie by one and by one to dispatch them all: which he dailie performed according to his promise, vntill such time as the terror of his accustomed butcherie strake the whole flocke into such a feare, as whensoeuer he came and held vp his knife, aduising at that instant but the slaughter of one, the whole number of them would quake, fearing each one his particular chance. Which tale he applieth vnto himselfe, being one of the brutish herd (as he confesseth) that for their disordinat behauiour the law iustlie condemneth, and threatneth to dispatch one after another, &c. Lastlie, suing for his life, he saith, that to take it, were as if one should take out of the sun beame a mote, or from the sea a spoonefull of water: but to saue it, were by his vowed seruice to hir highnesse happie estate to merit more, than the losse thereof could procure: and so with remembrance of the lamentable conditions of his present estate, &c: he concludeth.

What good seruice was to be hoped for at this wretches hands: he had lost, who did what he could to procure his princes death?

These and such like were the studies and meditations of those dangerous wits, too sudden to be sound, and wanting prudence, which preuenteth too late repentance. But with what face, with what heart might this enimie to all humanitie (hauing deserued a death of exquisit crueltie) aske, seeke, or hope for fauour, much lesse for pardon, who with his complices had conspired to be an actor in a tragedie of bloudshed and slaughter vniuersallie, pelle melle to be perpetrated? By the law of nature men should doo as they would be doone vnto; a precept which prudence inuiteth them to put in practise, as she moueth them to nothing that is either vndutifull, or not beneficiall. For she is amongst the rest of the vertues, as the sight amongst the fiue senses; thereby giuing vs to note, that as the eie of all the other senses is most beautifull, subtill, and pearsing: so the vertue of prudence by hir quicke and cleare light, directeth and conducteth all vertues in their good and commendable operations. It is by hir that a man is clothed with a mild and setled disposition, whereof he standeth no lesse in need, than a ship floting on the sea doth of the presence of a pilot, that he maie prudentlie vndertake and wiselie execute whatsoeuer he knoweth to be good, after mature deliberation & consideration of all the circumstances of the fact. So that if these men had beene guided by prudence, which is said to haue three eies, namelie memorie, vnderstanding, and prouidence (with the first beholding the time past, with the second the time present, with the third the time to come) they would neuer haue fallen into conceipts of common confusion, much lesse haue entred into consultation, or giuen consent to further the action, or so lightlie yelded to become desperat workers of the same; knowing that the state of a land is not so negligentlie regarded, as that the deuises and diuelish practises of some few helhounds (content with nothing that standeth not with their liking) can violat the same.

The necessarie vse of prudence in all attempts and actions.

The conspirators had been true subiects if they had not wanted prudence and hir three eies.

But to returne. These fellows hauing so heinouslie offended against the laws of nature and nations, drawing out their sword of furie and cruell outrage against the bodie of the commonwealth; now after the preuention of their purpose, detection of all their treasons, and guilt of conscience, seruing in lieu of a thousand peremptorie witnesses; seeing no waie with them but the halter and the hatchet, like prophane persons laie the cause of their fall vpon cruell and ineuitable destinie, accusing that to excuse their owne fault. Wherein we maie compare them to blind folks, who are angrie, and oftentimes call them blind that vnawares doo met and iustle them. They should rather, if they had meant to liue alwaies happilie, haue propounded to themselues and desired things possible, and to be content with things present: they should haue preferred their countries safetie before their owne prosperitie, & haue frequented the academie of philosophers, and the temple of mercie, whereby ignorance of dutie might haue beene abandoned, and whatsoeuer sauoring of crueltie trodden vnder foot. Wherein it were to be wished, that all such as are anie waie leaning to a life of that qualitie as these men lead; would be taught by the example of Pythagoras, to abstaine from crueltie and iniustice; who was so tender hearted, and so farre estranged from desire of bloudshed and death, euen of creatures reasonlesse, that he requested foulers, when they had taken birds, to let them flie againe; and of fisher men he bought their draughts, and caused all the fish to be cast into the sea aliue: he also forbad all his disciples to kill a tame beast at anie time. But these conspirators had not the grace of a heathen man granted vnto them, whereby they became subiect to sinne as to a tyrant: and no remedie but submitting themselues therevnto, it must nedes reigne in their mortall bodies, yea though it haue hard entrance at the first into the heart. For as a wedge maketh but a small cleft in the beginning, but afterwards the cleft being greater sundereth all in peeces: so the sufferance of all vnlawfull things, how small so euer it be, leadeth men by little and little to an vniuersall licentiousnesse: and therefore men had need beware how they make passage for sinne into their thought, which (without the assistance of Gods grace) commonlie breaketh out into action. As we see exemplified in these desperat persons, in danger of death & destruction; to whose arreignement, as tract of time moueth, we will now proceed: and so to the sequele of the tragedie: wherein this would be remembred as a comfort, that they were passiues and not actiues; as is to be wished all of that stampe and leuen maie be.

that their owne villanies might be excused.

Christian men disuaded from crueltie and iniustice by the example of an heathen man.

The nature of sinne after it hath once found passage into the heart.

On the seuenth daie of September, certeine of these diuelish and wicked subiects were led from the Tower of London to Westminster by water, hauing neuertheless manie an eie gasing vpon them, as spectacles odious to God and man; manie a tong talking of the greeuousnesse of their offense; and manie a true English heart wishing their present cutting off from the face of the earth, as wretches vnworthie to inioie the common aire: all which the vnnaturall beasts could not but conceiue, to the kindling of manie a pinching passion in their minds and consciences. But to let all that passe, to the place aforesaid at last they were brought, where they were indicted; first, for intending treason against the queens owne person; secondlie, for stirring ciuill warres within the realme; and thirdlie, for practising to bring in forren power to inuade the land. Seuen of them appeared at Westminster on the thirteenth daie of September, who all pleaded giltie, and therefore had no iurie, but were condemned, and had iudgement on the next morrow.

Traitors indicted, arreigned, and condemned at Westminster.

I. S.

The first seuen condemned without anie iurie.

On the fiftéenth daie of September, other seuen of them were likewise arreigned at Westminster, who pleaded not giltie, were tried by a iurie, found giltie, and had iudgement accordinglie. The effect of whose treasons shortlie to touch were these. John Sauage, remaining long in France at Rheims, was persuaded by doctor Gilbert Gifford, that great honor should redound to him, if he would take in hand to change religion, to inuade inuade the realme by forren power, to dispossesse the queene of England, and to proclame the Scotish queene, and set hir in hir place. All which Sauage promised to doo, or else to lose his life, and thereupon returned into England; where he imparted his purpose to Anthonie Babington, requiring his aid therein. Then John Ballard, priest, also persuaded the said Babington to the purpose before expressed, promising him aid of three score thousand men that secretlie should be landed, and told him both how & when (as he thought.) Whereupon Babington promised and concluded to make a slaughter vpon the councell of hir maiestie in the Star chamber, then to haue sacked London, to haue burned the nauie & chiefest ships, to kill or displace the lords, knights and magistrats, that remained true subiects to our right and lawfull queene & realme, and also to haue cloied and poisoned the greatest ordinance, &c. These were their purposes.] But God, disappointing their diuelish deuises, prepared for them the reward of iniquitie, namelie death in a dreadfull sort; which when they had heard denounced against them by the mouth of the iudge, they were conducted backe againe to the place of safe custodie, all the waie replenished with horror and feare, wishing that the water, whereupon they were rowed, might swallow them vp, the earth open and they sinke thereinto, or some sudden end betide them, that the time of their heauie execution might be preuented.

The effect of the last seuen their treasons notable.

Destinie commonlie accused of malefactors and offendors.

But God, who is the founteine of iustice, as he is the founder of princes and principalities, hauing proportioned out for them a due and inevitable punishment, and being the author of all godlie desires, vouchsafed them no such fauour of anie element, wherby the course of iustice might anie waie be stopped or hindered. So that remaining two or three daies in durance after their condemnation, and definitiue sentence thundered against them (a time of respiration giuen them to humble their hearts, and reconcile their souls to God; a speciall end which the execution of iustice in England respecteth, in fauour of all malefactors) they were all that while (if touched with anie remorse) not destitute of greeuous agonies. For what man, if he consist of flesh & bloud, knowing himselfe, after the law hath passed against him, to be a meere dead man, but must needs tremble & quake at the remembrance of his end, through the vehement affects of feare possessing his heart? With which feare they needed not haue beene surprised, if a former feare, grounded vpon a good discourse of reason and iudgement, had preuented them in all their actions. Which feare was so esteemed and honored of the ancients, that in the citie of Sparta there was a temple dedicated and consecrated vnto it: the same (as was affirmed) better mainteining and preseruing the state of commonwealths, than anie other thing whatsoeuer; because thereby men were lead to stand more in aw of blame, reproch, and dishonor, than of death or greefe. But what should we speake of that which they wanted, who were indued with nothing, either godlie or honest? Let vs therefore proceed in the residue of this discourse, hauing attained now after a long tract, to the time of their execution; whereof when there was a report among the people, a wonder it was what reckoning they did make before hand to heare and see them put to death.

God being the founteine of iustice abhorreth vnrighteousnesse: Ergo, &c.

What feare is necessarie in euerie christian subiect.

Now when the twentith daie of September was come, and therewithall their fatall hours, the two shiriffes of London, assisted with the officers of the citie, and other attendants in great number, with weapons answerable to the maner of an execution, came to the Tower, into whose hands and charge seuen of the said conspirators were committed, who being combined & laid on hurdels fast bound (Ballard excepted who laie alone as a notable archtraitor, and first of the ranke) were drawne from the said Tower through the streets of London to the place of execution, the magistrats and officers, with a multitude of others conuenientlie appointed, seeing them conueied thither, and the censure of iustice dulie administred. Now it is no question whether there wanted people at this publike spectacle, no more than it is to be doubted whether their treasons deserued death. For there was no lane, street, allie, or house in London, in the suburbs of the same, or in the hamlets or bordering townes neere the citie, (and like enough that they would come from far, both by water and by land, to see that and the next daies worke dispatched) out of the which there issued not some of each sex and age; in somuch that the waies were pestered with people so multiplied, as they thronged and ouerran one another for hast, contending to the place of death for the aduantage of the ground where to stand, see, and heare what was said and done: the traitors all this while beholding this infinit assemblie, and the further they were drawne, the nearer to their end.

Seuen of the traitors are laid on hurdels and conueied to their execution.

Now when they were come within sight of their destinie, where they might discerne their dolefull downfall; in what agonies might we imagine these most vile malefactors fell; if they were not vtterlie Stoicall and senselesse? For besides the present obiects of terror that were in euerie beholders eie, although of low stature, as the scaffold and gallows of extraordinarie altitude and height, they might, as they did successiuelie ascend and attend their fatall turns, take full view of the instruments ordeined and prepared for their dispatch; as the executioner with the halter, hatchet, and knife, whereby they were to be seuered, dismembred, and quartered; the fier wherein their bowels were to be burned; the stakes whereon their heads were to be fastened vpon the gallows, and what else belonged to the accomplishment of that tragedie: thousands of people with earnest eie present, and purposing to tarrie out the verie last act. The least of which motiues (much more all togither) had beene sufficient to haue rent a stonie heart in sunder; and what affections were wrought in them thereby, he best knoweth from whome no secrets are hid.

A scaffold and gallowes of extraordinarie height erected.

But that this execution maie be deliuered in some orderly discourse, we will (for the satisfieng of manie thousands) note the maner thereof, with the behauiors and speeches of these traitors at their last end; according to a copie of credit from a present obseruer and marker of this great execution. Touching the full number of these ranke traitors, that sought to bereaue the queens maiestie of hir life, they were fourteene, who made their confession at the gallows, and receiued a iust recompense of their vnnaturall disloialtie. For our eies saw their traitorous harts burned, and their bodilesse heads aduanced, to the view and comfort of manie thousands of people: a happie sight for the quietnesse and safetie of hir highnesse, a generall comfort to all good subiects, and a fearefull example to all conspirators.

Concordat cum libro approbato.

But forsomuch as they offended in the highest degree of treason, as traitors resolued to kill hir highnesse, to spoile hir nauie, to cloie the ordinance, to kill the honorable lords of the priuie councell, to moue a generall rebellion, and (what in them laie) to procure forren inuasion: all which being treasons of such danger (as the least of them shut vp the sluses of mercie) it seemeth conuenient that their executions should be with more seueritie, than the common iudgement of traitors. Howbeit, the limits of law were in no sort transgressed, though the same

The sum of the traitors intended practises, agreeing with the course of their indictment.

The nature of iustice requireth that punishments and offenses should be proportioned.

accord-

according to the prescise rule thereof were sharplie administred.

The first seuen were executed with lesse fauour than the last, as shall appeare by the sequele of this narration, & the consideration of their iudgments; namelie to be drawne to the place of execution, there to be hanged till they were halfe dead, their bowels to be burnt before their faces, &c. And trulie the first seuen as the most malicious (if there be anie difference in treason) were executed nære the seueritie of laws definitiue sentence; but the other seuen were so fauorablie vsed, as they hong vntill they were euen altogither dead, before they suffered the rest of their iudgement. Now touching the names of the traitors, their behauiours and speaches, with the maner of their executions, you shall vnderstand, that vpon the twentith daie of September, being tuesdaie, John Ballard a preest, and first persuader of Babington to these odious treasons, was laid alone vpon an hurdell, and six others two and two in like sort, all drawne from Tower hill through the citie of London, vnto a field at the vpper end of Holborne, hard by the high waie side to saint Giles in the field, where was erected a scaffold for their execution, and a paire of gallows of extraordinarie hight, as was that whereupon haughtie Haman was hanged for his ambition, &c: the place likewise so railed to kæpe off horssemen, as the people might plainelie sæ the execution.

Paria delicta pari pœna compensanda, nisi inferatur aliqua mitigationis causa.

John Ballard priest persuader of Babington to these odious treasons executed.

The place of their execution was sometime the meeting place of their consultation.

And although the thousands were thought (& in dæd so sæmed) to be numberlesse: yet somewhat to note the huge multitude, there were by computation able men enow to giue battell to a strong enimie. Howbeit, one thing was speciallie regarded, that although the assemblie were wonderfull great, & the traitors all gowdie personages, clothed in silkes, &c: and euerie waie furnished to mooue pitie, and that the order of their execution was in euerie mans eie; yet the odiousnesse of their treasons was so setled in euerie mans heart, as there appeared no sadnesse or alteration among the people, at the mangling and quartering of their bodies. Yea the whole assemblie without anie signe of lamentation stedfastlie beheld the spectacle from the first to the last.

The multitude sheweth no motion of pitie at the execution of the traitors.

On the first daie the traitors were placed vpon the scaffold, that the one might behold the reward of his fellowes treason. Ballard the preest, who was the first brocher of this treason, was the first that was hanged, who being cut downe (according to iudgement) was dismembred, his bellie ript vp, his bowels & traitorous heart taken out & throwne into the fire, his head also (seuered from his shoulders) was set on a short stake vpon the top of the gallows, and the trunke of his bodie quartered and imbrued in his owne bloud, wherewith the executioners hands were bathed, and some of the standers by (but to their great loathing, as not able for their liues to auoid it, such was the throng) bæsprinkled. This Ballard, at the verie time of his death not denieng his treason, died an obstinat papist, and in his protestation doubtfullie said, that If he had offended the quæns maiestie, or anie man else, he was sorie, and so conditionallie desired forgiuenesse. The malicious affection of his heart towards hir highnesse appeared in the trembling passage of death, that whereas his treasons were impious, odious, and damnable, as the most wicked (to wit his confederats for the most part) confessed (as the common fame goeth) that they exceeded the greatnesse of hir maiesties mercie, which maie not be measured, where there is anie measure in offending. And yet in his desire of remission at hir highnes hands, he added this condition (If) as one that doubted if he had offended hir person.

The order of the traitors execution.

How Ballard was affected at his death.

Ballards sophisticall asking of the quæns maiestie forgiuenesse.

Next vnto this preest, Anthonie Babington was made readie to the gallows, who in euerie point was handled like vnto Ballard; in whome a signe of his former pride was to be obserued. For whereas the rest (through the cogitation of death) were exercised in praier vpon their knæs and bareheaded; he (whose turne was next) stood on his fæt with his hat on his head, as if he had bæne but a beholder of the execution. Concerning his religion, he died a papist. His treasons were so odious, as the sting of conscience compelled him to acknowledge himselfe a most grieuous trespasser against the diuine maiestie, and the quæns highnesse. Next vnto Babington, Sauage was likewise prepared for the execution. This notable traitor (as the fame goeth) was the man that conferred with doctor Gifford at Paris; and by the confirmations of the English fugitiues at Rhemes was resolued, and resolutelie determined to kill the quæne. It is likewise said, that vpon the apprehension of Ballard the preest, Babington accellerated and hastened this Sauage to dispatch his resolution, and that he onelie deferred the matter for the making of a courtlike sute of apparell.

Anthonie Babington esquier executed.

A note of Babingtons pride at the verie instant of his execution.

John Sauage gentleman executed.

The frutes that issue from listening to the counsell of Iesuits, Romanists, and Rhemists.

When Sauage was executed, Barnewell was made readie to die, an obstinate papist, who for his treason made conscience his best excuse; howbeit a rotten conscience, which was infected with the murther of a vertuous quæne; which sith it was so bad, few there were that heard him, but forbad their conscience to pitie him, otherwise than charitablie to be sorowfull for his offense, deseruing so shamefull a fall, and damnable before God and man. After this Barnewell, Tichborns turne was serued, a proper yong gentleman, whose humilitie and mone mooued much compassion. He was not setled so much in papistrie as the others, but so far gone with the proud humor of Babington, as his head could no longer hold with his shoulders. In his mone (which was verie well marked) he compared his state to Adams, who said he was placed in paradise, & there inioied all the pleasures of the earth; he was onelie forbidden to eat of the frute of one træ: but for his transgression he not onelie procured wretchednesse and miserie vpon his owne head, but vpon the heads of all his posteritie: so (quoth he) I wanted nothing, but had health, wealth & frends, and so might long haue liued, if I could haue forborne to haue bene vntrue to prince: But alas! by mine offense I haue brought my selfe vnto this miserie, whereby my good mother, my louing wife, my foure brethren and six sisters, yea our whole house (neuer before attainted) is infamed, and our posteritie for euer like to be vndone.

Robert Barnewell gentleman executed.

Chidiocke Tichborne esquire executed.

Tichborns lamentation mooued manie to commiseration.

In this mans confession thus much is to be obserued, that in comparing his offense to Adams, was implied a resembling of hir highnes to the pleasant and glorious frute, so pretious in Gods eies, as he forbad Adam & all others to laie violent hands vpon. And thus by the mouth of hir enimies, God causeth hir sacred excellencie to be blazed. Tilneie one of the quæns maiesties pensioners, next vnto Tichborne, made worke for the hangman, a wretch well worthie of death, who went about to take awaie hir highnelle life. In statute law it is petie treason for a seruant to murther his maister or mistresse, being but a subiect; how detestable a treason is it then for a sworne seruant to laie violent hands on his annointed prince? The offense being in the extreamest degræ, the punishment ought to be according to the seuerest censure of iustice.

Hir maiesties praise by hir enimies.

Nolite tangere Christos meos, Touch not my Christs or annointed.

Charls Tilneie a pensioner executed.

The last of these seuen that suffered was Edward Abington, whose father was an officer of good credit squire executed, his thretning speech.

Edward Abington &c.

in hir highnes house, and for manie aduancements was bound to saie; God saue good M. Elisabeth. But his sonne was a notable papist, and an archtraitor, who at his death did all that in him laie, to stir a feare in the hearts of the ignorant multitude, with this speech, that there could not chuse but be great effusion of bloud in England verie shortlie. But Gods prouidence maketh it apparant, that the prophesies of traitors prooue not euermore scripture. For Throgmorton the traitor said, that before one yeare was expired, the prosperitie and peace of England should be turned into generall calamitie. Howbeit, the date of that diuination is out, & they both (as maie betide the rest of that rebellious rout in their appointed time) by Gods grace partakers of semblable destinie. This Abington was the last of the first seuen that were executed, and thus ended that daies worke, to the comfort of Israell, for that the execrable thing which troubled the whole land (and highlie offended the diuine maiestie) was taken awaie.

Throgmortons prophesie and Abingtons of like truth in euent.

Now when these venemous vipers were thus hewne in peces, their tigers hearts burned in the fire, and the sentence of law satisfied: their heads and quarters were conueied awaie in baskets, to be fixed vpon poles and set ouer the gates of London, that all the world might behold the iust reward of traitors. Then decreased the multitude, and withdrew to their mansions and abodes: howbeit the fields were frequented all that daie of the weaker sex, as womenkind, with the yonger and tenderer sort: who albeit they could not with wished opportunitie see the execution of these traitors, when it was at the quickest: yet they satisfied their eies with beholding the fier wherein their bowels were burned, & the scaffold stained with the tincture of their bloud, diuers diuerslie talking of that dismall daies worke, according as they were for that present time passionat: but all giuing God thanks, that the commonwelth was discharged of such putrified members, whose maladie was of such malignitie, that it was altogither desperat, and not to be helped but by extremities of cauterie or incision.

An ingression to the second daies execution.

Now making a period or stop at the dispatch of these first seuen, let vs addresse our pen to the description of the remanent, who being in continuall trauell of terror at the meditation of iustice still proceeding against them by moments and degrees, till the last act were ended, were miserablie tormented with multiplicitie of imaginations, fearing euerie knocke at the prison doore to be a messenger of deth: insomuch that their hearts could not but be ouercome with horror & heauinesse, the same beating and thumping (as the smiths hammer doth the anuill) euen till it pant. In which irrecouerable distresse of theirs, whether they bethought themselues of their soules, defiled with the fog and slime of their ouglie sinnes; or of their bodie, which was made a pretious tabernacle wherein the image of God should haue béene inshrined; but now become a dongeon of discomfortable obscuritie and darkenesse: he onelie knoweth, to whome it is proper to giue that speciall grace. But to leaue all iudgement to the iudge of all, we will now proceed, and (as we haue in the former) shew what the last seuen said at their sufferings.

Thomas Salisburie esquire executed.

On the daie following (according to generall expectation) being the one and twentith daie of September, Salisburie was laid alone vpon an hurdell, and other six, two and two in like maner, all drawne from Tower hill through the citie of London, vnto the former place of execution. Salisburie was the first man that suffered, who in all points was handled as the other seuen the daie before; sauing that he and the latter six were executed with this fauour, that they were permitted to hang vntill they were fullie dead, before the rest of their execution was performed. And albeit this man was blinded with the superstition of papistrie, euen at the point of death, yet he mildlie acknowledged his grieuous offense against the queene, and in his last commendation charged all catholikes (for so he onelie accounted the papists) that they should leaue attempting to set vp their religion by violent hand, and by double and treble repetition exhorted them to patience, and earnestlie forbad them all maner of violence.

Salisburie acknowledgeth his grieuous offense: a note of repentance.

Violence forbidden by Salisburie.

After Salisburie was with all possible fauour executed, Dun was stripped into his shirt, and séemed penitent for his grieuous offense: who after that with verie earnest persuasions he had likewise disuaded the Romanists from attempting anie matter of violence, he was executed with exceeding fauour. This Dun (as the report goeth) liued reasonable wealthilie, but it séemeth the man was of a discontented humour, and in dislike with a competent vocation; as appeared by this his vaine imagination. For in Trinitie terme last, comming into the Kings bench office, among other pleasant speeches to one of his familiars; You will maruell (quoth he) to sée me within one quarter of a yeare to walke vp and downe the streets with twentie men after me. Whereupon one of his acquaintance pleasantlie answered, that he feared he should first see him followed to the gallowes with a thousand people. Dun shewed his desire, and the other read his destinie. But let the end of this traitor be a warning to all ambitious men, that destruction followeth presumption, and pride will haue a fall. When the execution of Dun was finished, the next in that tragedie was Jones. This traitor (by that which was easie to be gathered of his behauiour at the gallowes) was a verie close papist, of a shrewd reach, and a most dangerous member in this common wealth. For notwithstanding his protestation that he dissuaded Salisburie from this odious enterprise; yet his owne talke shewed that his counsell proceeded of a feare which he had, that the proud humor of Babington threatened an ouerthrow of their purpose; rather than of anie dutifull zeale that he bare towards the safetie of the queens maiestie. For he neither would himselfe discouer this treason of the highest degree, neither did he counsell his friend Salisburie to preuent his owne danger in detecting the conspiracie of his companions: yea when the odiousnesse thereof brake out into publike knowledge, he (contrarie to the generall duetie of a good subiect, and in contempt of a speciall warrant directed vnto him) not onelie refused (as he himselfe confessed) to apprehend Salisburie being in his owne house, but (so far as hée might) succoured him, after that he was published to be a firebrand of that most wicked treason. One speciall thing neuertheless, which moued manie to pitie him aboue the rest, was, bicause with vehement words he protested, that although he was a catholike in religion, yet he so dearelie weied the libertie of his countrie, as that he would be (and euer was) readie to spend his life in withstanding anie forren enimie, French, Italish, Spanish, or whatsoeuer: by whose opinion the tolleration of inuasion was so far from nature and christian duetie, as no excuse or punishment might satisfie the crime.

Edward Jones esquire executed.

The ambitious humour of Henrie Dun.

Henrie Dun gentleman executed.

Forren inuasion reproued by Jones.

After Jones had paid the price of his treason, with all possible fauour, then Charnocke was executed, and after him Trauers, both two men (as it séemed) bewitched with an ignorant deuotion; for that in their ends nothing was to be obserued but their

John Trauers and John Charnocke gentlemen executed.

praieng

praieng to our ladie, calling vpon saints, ioined with a number of ceremonies, crossings, and blessings, &c. So that it appeared that in their praiers, they were bound to forme more than to faith.

When the hangman had giuen these two his benediction, Gage prepared himselfe to die, who began his protestation, that there was neuer subiect more bound to a prince than his father was to hir maiestie: and from that reuerend recognisance and true acknowledgement of hir maiesties gratious- 10 nes, he fell to excuse him selfe of the odious treasons for which he was to die: but on so weake a ground, as the simplest iudgement then present, found (by the order of his owne confession) that he was a dangerous instrument for the pope. He confessed that he accompanied Ballard the seminarie préest (who hatched the great egg of this pestilent practise) into Yorkeshire, & that he wrote a letter for the said préest to a Frenchman or Spaniard of account beyond the seas. To be short, in all the course of his confession, in indifferent iudgements, he accused himselfe to be an hollow hearted subiect, and a sound papist. This cunning traitor Gage could neuer haue made a confession of more infamie to himselfe, than in acknowleging the quéens maiesties most excellent fauour, shewed to his father (which a dutifull sonne ought to estéeme a benefit vnto himselfe) and so to redouble the reproch of his treasons, he condemned himselfe of ingratitude, an vnnaturall vice, which the verie soules of the aire abhorre: as (to vse one example of sufficiencie for a thousand) is reported of the storke; which so often as she hath yong, casteth one out of the nest for the hire of the house, and reward of him that lodged hir.

Robert Gage executed.

His maiesties gratiousnesse commended by this traitor.

Hipocrisie of Robert Gage.

The last that suffered was one of the Bellamies, whose countenance discouered him to be a setled papist, and who as he could saie little to saue his life; so at the gallows he spake nothing to defend his death. Although this traitor had but a dull spirit, yet (as it séemed) he had a malicious heart, answerable to that of his frends, who succored Babington and some of his associats, when feare of the law, and shame of their odious treasons, made them to shrowd themselues like foxes in holes and couerts. And it séemeth that they were as resolute to follow the treasons of Babington, as they were readie to releéue him from the danger of the law. Otherwise if this Bellamies brother had not had an accusing conscience, he would neuer with violent hands haue hanged himselfe.

Jerom Bellamie gentleman executed.

One of the Bellamies hanged himselfe in the Tower.

Thus ended the second daies execution, to the full satisfaction of the peoples expectation; who nertheless (as the date before) were inwardlie touched with passions ingendred by the déepe impressions of the present obiects: but touched they were, as nothing pitieng their deserued deaths, in regard they were most heinous malefactors: but as they were men, in whome humanitie should so haue preuailed, as that they should rather haue chosen losse of life & liuelod, than to haue intended the desolation of their native countrie, the depriuation of prince, the deposition of péeres, the destruction of people; and whatsoeuer might séeme as a directorie to bloudshed and slaughter, from the highest gouernor sitting in roialtie adorned with crowne and scepter, to the sucking babe lieng in the cradle inwapped in swathing clouts. Which extremities of butcherlie cruelties and vnnaturall sauagenesse, haue had an ancient purpose of practise, as maie appeare by a clause or two of John Nichols his recantation; where speaking of Pius Quintus, excommunicating our liege soureigne, he saith that the same was within a twelue moneth of the first publication renued, and fiue hundred copies printed at Rome, which were dispersed throughout Italie, Spaine, & Germanie. Whereof what were the contents, is at large set downe in the treatise of execution of iustice in England for treason, not for religion.

Bellarmine. lib. 3. de Pont. Rom. cap. 15. & lib. 5. cap. 7. Edit. Ingolst. 1581.

See before pag. 1357, a, 60, &c. 1358, b, 60, &c.

But thus saith the same conuert, that a reader of diuinitie positiue, in the hearing of two hundred scholers, vomited these prophane words out of his vncircumcised mouth; that it was lawfull for anie of worship in England, to authorise the vilest wretch that is, to séeke the death of hir highnesse: whose prosperous estate the Italish préest and Spanish prince dow so maligne, that they would worke wonders, were it not for certeine impedits: as father Pais a Spaniard, reader of diuinitie scholastical in the Romane college, affirmed in an auditorie of three hundred, saieng: Bona papæ voluntas trita & manifesta est, & eius crumena parata: sed R. P. aut metus subtrahit, aut potestatis defectus vetat, vt suum in Angliam exercitum ducere non audeat. Where (by the waie) would be noted an inuasion long since pretended. And that the quéens maiesties estate was then maliciouslie aimed at, maie appeare by these comminations and threats, that they would burne hir bones, and the bones of all such as lotted hir, either aliue or dead; of whome, some were lords temporall, some spirituall, &c. Memorandum, that this was to be donne, when they held the sterne of gouernement: which shall be, when errant traitors are good subiects, and ranke knaues honest men.

The causes that haue so long hindered king Philip to inuade England.

And now to touch the punishment inflicted vpon the foresaid wretches, there is none (if he be not a sworne aduersarie to the state, and an enimie to iustice) but must néeds confesse, that although some of the conspirators were no lesse sharplie executed, than by law was censured: yet considering the qualitie of their offense, it was a death tempered with lenitie, if no more but the spédines of their execution be considered, whereby their paine and smart was but momentanie. Oh with what seueritie did the ancients punish offenses of this nature! And not without cause. For besides that nothing is more vsuall in all the whole scriptures, than prohibition to kill or to séeke the life or honor, not onelie of the prince, but also of inferior magistrats, although they be wicked (and it is said in Exodus; Thou shalt not raile vpon the iudges, neither speake euill of the ruler of the people) so is it prouided by the laws of nations, that not onelie he that hath killed his soueréigne, but he also that made the attempt, that gaue counsell, that yælded consent, that conceiued the thought, is giltie of high treason. Yea, he that was neuer preuented nor taken in the maner, in this point of the soueréigne, the law accounteth him as condemned alreadie; and iudgeth him capable of death, that thought once in times past to haue seized vpon the life of his prince, anie repentance that followed notwithstanding.

The reuerend regard that subiects ought to haue of their soueréignes, &c.

And trulie there was a gentleman of Normandie, who confessed to a Franciscane frier, that he once minded to haue killed king Francis the first: but repented him of that euill thought. The frier gaue him absolution, but yet afterwards informed the king of the same; who sent the gentleman to the parlement at Paris there to be tried, where he was by common consent condemned to die, and after executed. Amongst the Macedonians there was a law, that condemned to death fiue of their next kinsfolks that were conuicted of conspiracie against their prince. And most notable is the historie of Romilda, who séeing hir towne or citie besieged by a barbarous king, but yet youthfull and wanton; she signified vnto the enimie by messengers, that she would betraie the citizens into his hands, if he would honour hir with marriage. Which when the

A gentleman iudged to die because he once thought to haue killed his prince.

A seuere law against treason.

king had promised to doo, she in the night season opened the gates, and (the people vnwitting and ignorant) let in foren force. Now the king being entered & in possession, commanded that the towne should be sacked, and all the people slaughtered, Romilda excepted, the vse of whose bodie (for his oth sake, which he was loth to violat) he had the same night as in wedlocke: howbeit, the next date he cast hir off, and betooke hir to twelue scullions by turns to be abused; & lastlie pitcht hir vpon a stake.

A woman traitoresse well rewarded.

Here you haue examples in both seres (man and woman) of treason and conspiracie most seuerelie executed: which if they be compared vnto the sufferings of our late offendors, Jesu what ods shall we sée and confesse? And as the ancients had treason in mortall hatred; so could they not awaie with ingratitude, as maie be obserued by the lawes of Draco (which were said to be written in bloud, they were so sharpe and peremptorie) amongst which, there was a commandement, that if anie man had receiued a benefit of his neighbor, and it were proued against him long after that he had bæne vnthankefull for it, and had ill acknowledged the good turne receiued; such a one should be put to death. So then we sée how in old time they opposed their affections against particular vices, persecuting them with seueritie, as laboring to supplant them: this age of ours beholdeth ingratitude and treason combined, with a fowle nest of other irksome and noisome sins, in the hearts of helhounds (for we maie not vouchsafe them the name of men) breathing out the vapors of their venemous infection, to the damnifieng of the whole commonwelth: what fauour then deserue such to find where they haue offended, or rather what rigor are they not worthie to suffer?

Against séeking after nouelties, and to teach men to be well aduised, &c.

Among the Locrians there was a strict decrée, that euerie citizen, desirous to bring in a new law, should come and declare it publikelie before the people with a halter about his necke; to the end that if his new law was not thought meet to be receiued, and verie profitable for the commonwelth, he might presentlie be strangled with the same rope. If they in old time went so short a waie to worke in a case of vnaduisednesse, to teach others that they vndertake nothing without mature deliberation: what are we taught to be conuenient for such, as breake not their wits either to deuise or prefer new lawes; but indeuor what they can to dissolue all law and order, all peace and societie, all gouernment and subiection; and by the impulsion of a furious mind to let in libertie, contempt, and all the enormities and abuses that accompanie a licentious life? To let passe the pluralitie of examples & authorities of this kind, the number being so great as that they would fill vp Erotosthenes siue; and to sate somewhat of seueritie, that by opposition of countrie to countrie in that respect, we maie sée the great difference betweene ours and theirs.

Extreame kinds of torments in other countries for treason, &c.

It is seueritie to flea men quicke, to chaine them aliue to a stake, in such sort as they maie run round thereabout, the fier inuironing them on all sides: it is seueritie to haue collops of flesh pluckt from the bodie with hot burning tongs: it is seueritie to be cast downe from a steepe place starke naked vpon sharpe stakes: it is seueritie to be torne in peeces with wild horsses, and to haue the bones broken vpon a wheele. All these be extremities of torments awarded by law, and at this date practised in foren regions for treason, and sometime for crimes of nothing so dangerous a nature. Finallie, if we confer the seueritie of this execution, exercised vpon rebellious and traitorous subiects in a superlatiue degree of disloialtie, with that of other nations commonlie vsed, namelie in principall affaires, which concerne peace and warre, and matters of gouernment, to accept the seruice of runnagate slaues, to place them in authoritie, to change or depose at pleasure anie whatsoeuer; yea to strangle them vpon the least suspicion or dislike: our seueritie is clemencie. For in this is ripe reason and iudiciall processe, in the other will without wit, & (as commonlie they saie) Omnia pro imperio, nihil pro officio.

And therefore we conclude, that ingratitude being counted vnnaturall, and treason (a vice vomited out of hell mouth) linked togither with manie knots of other shamefull sinnes, and all concurring in the hearts and liues of these outragious conspirators as in a centre: whie should it be thought seueritie to haue iustice iustlie administred, that traitors should be drawne vpon hurdels, strangled in a halter, cut downe aliue, dismembred, their bellies ripped, their bowels taken out and burned, their heads chopt from their shoulders, their bodies clouen in foure quarters, and set ouer the gates of London, for the fowles of the aire to feed vpon at full? Vnto which fowle end maie all such come, as meane anie mischiefe against good quéene Elisabeth, the lords of hir highnesse councell, the bodie politike of the land, the slander or innouation of true religion, &c: wherein God make prince and people of one mind, and plant in all subiects a reuerend regard of obedience and contentment of present estate, supported with iustice and religion: least longing after nouelties, it fare with them as with the frogs, who liuing at libertie in lakes and ponds, would néeds (as misliking their present intercommunitie of life) with one consent sue to Jupiter for a king, and so did. Whereat he wondering, granted their desires, and cast them an huge trunke of a trée, which besides that it made a great noise in the water as it fell, to their terrifieng; so it was cumbersome by taking vp their accustomed passage: insomuch that discontented therewithall, they assaulted Jupiter with a fresh petition, complaining that (besides diuerse mislikes otherwise) the king whom he gaue them was but a senseless stocke, and vnworthie of obedience: wherefore it would please him to appoint them another indued with life. Whereupon Jupiter sent the herne among them, who entring into the water, deuoured vp the frogs one after another: insomuch that the residue, séeing their new king so rauenoustie gobling vp their fellowes, lamentablie weeping besought Jupiter to deliuer them from the throte of that dragon and tyrant. But he (of purpose vnchangeable) made them a flat answer, that (will they nill they) the herne should rule ouer them.

Traitors iustlie rewarded, and yet nothing so as they deserue.

A prettie apologie allusiue to the present case of malcontents.

Whereby we are taught to be content when we are well, and to make much of good quéene Elisabeth, by whom we enioie life and libertie, with other blessings from aboue; beseeching God we maie sée a consummation of the world, before the scepter of the kingdome be translated to another. For (as the prouerbe saith) seldome commeth the better. But to the purpose, this execution being dispatched, and the testimonies thereof dispersed and visible in diuerse places about the citie, as at London bridge, where the traitors heads were ranged into their seuerall classes: manie rimes, ballads, and pamphlets were set forth by sundrie well affected people, wherein breefelie were compriséd the plot of their conspiracie, the names of the traitors, and their successiue suffering, which growing common and familiar both in citie and countrie, were chanted with no lesse alacritie & courage of the singer; than willinglie and delightfullie listened vnto of the hearer. So that, what by one meane and what by another, all

Seldome commeth the better.

English

England was made acquainted with this horrible conspiracie, not so much admiring the maner of the mischeefes intended, as comforted that hir highnesse had the holie hand of God ouershadowing hir, the surest protection that prince or people can haue against perill. So that England is replenished with faithfull and louing subiects, though here and there (like darnell among wheate) lurke a viper or aspe waiting opportunitie to bite or sting.

Traitors iustlie rewarded, and yet nothing so as they deserue.

Now to make a complet discourse of all these heauie & tragicall accidents, hauing thus far continued much important matter concerning the same: the reader is with due regard to perusse the addition following, wherein is argument of aggrauation touching these treasons: which being aduisedlie read, considered, and conferred with the former narration, will yéeld as sound, pithie, and effectuall information for the knowledge of the conspirators purposed plot, as anie subiect would desire: and more than without greefe or teares anie true English heart can abide to read or heare. Where, by the waie, is to be noted, that Marie the Scotish Q. was a principall.

A prettie apolog allusorie to the present case of malcontents.

It is apparant by the iudiciall confessions of John Ballard preest, Anthonie Babington, and their confederats, that the said John Ballard (being a preest of the English seminarie at Rheims) in Lent past (after he and sundrie other Iesuits and preests, of his sect, had trauelled throughout all parts almost of this realme, & labored to their vttermost to brèed in hir maiesties subiects an inclination to rebell against hir) he went into France, and there treated and concluded with Barnardino de Mendoza (the Spanish ambassador reliant at Paris) with Charles Paget & Thomas Morgan two English fugitiues, and inexcusable traitors for an inuasion to be made by forren forces into this kingdome. And because no assurance could then be made vnto Mendoza for the interteining, assisting, and good landing of those whome the king his maister, the pope, and the house of Guise should dispatch for that seruice, he sent the said Ballard into England at Whitsuntide last, with expresse charge to informe the catholikes, that for sundrie important considerations, the king his maister had vowed vpon his soule to reforme England, or to lose Spaine: and for that purpose had in readinesse such forces & warlike preparations, as the like was neuer séene in these parts of christendome. And therefore willed him to stirre the people, and worke the meanes to make some faction to giue them landing & interteinment at their comming: & specially to preserue the Scotish Q. in that confusion; letting the catholiks vnderstand, that in case they did not assist the inuaders, they would then enter as conquerors, put no difference betwixt man & man.

Barnardino de Mendoza, alwaies mischeeuslie minded against the state of England: note his practises with Ballard.

The Scotish queene is an actor in this purposed conspiracie.

With this dispatch Ballard by the special direction of Morgan (a notorious traitor to this state, yea a professed & sworne seruant vnto the Scotish queene) repaired to Anthonie Babington, a gentleman to whom the said Scotish Q. vpon the commendation of Morgan & the bishop of Glascow, had long before written letters of gratulation, & with whom she had secret intelligence by sending of letters & other messages, the space almost of two yeares before. To this gentleman Ballard discouered at large the whole purpose of Mendoza, Paget, & Morgan, and said (as he had in charge) that if happilie a strong partie could be made here to assist the inuasion, and aduance the Scotish queene, men, munition, monie, and vittels should be abundantlie supplied from beyond the seas; and therefore persuaded Babington to sound the whole realme, and to vndertake the action. Babington at the first proposed manie difficulties, but principallie this, that the inuaders or their assistants could haue no hope (the state being so well setled) to preuaile during hir maiesties life. Whereupon Ballard presentlie replied, that hir life could be no hinderance therein. For vpon like doubts moued beyond the seas by meanes alreadie laid, John Sauage (a conspirator conuicted hereof by his owne confession) through the persuasion and procurement principallie of one William Gifford (an English fugitiue, and reader of diuinitie in the English seminarie at Rheims) had vowed and sworne to kill hir maiestie, as a thing resolued vpon to be lawfull, honorable, and meritorious.

Seldome commeth the better.

John Sauage had vowed and sworne to kill the queene.

This difficultie being thus removed, and Ballard from daie to daie continuing his persuasions, and highlie commending the murthering of hir maiestie as a deed of great honor, singular merit, and easie to effectuat: Babington vndertooke the managing of the whole action, and hauing first with his complices entred into manie seuerall propositions of sundrie treasonable natures, as to surprise hir maiesties person by force, to kill the lord treasurer, the earle of Leicester, and sir Francis Walsingham, to remoue hir councellors, and to place new, to murther the nobilitie whilest they were set in administring iustice, to sacke the citie of London, to fire the navie of the realme, to surprise some forces and hauens, to furnish the pate of their forces by an vniuersall spoile and robbing of the richer sort; hauing (I saie) first entred into these and such like propositions) in fine, he with Ballard and others resolued vpon these three principall points: first, that the inuaders should be assisted by a prepared readinesse in the people to rebell in diuerse places, and to ioine with them vpon their first landing; that hir maiestie should be murthered by six gentlemen of resolution; and lastlie, that the Scotish queene should be aduanced to the crowne of England. For the better performance of these resolutions, Ballard and Babington sounded diuerse, and dealt with manie; and so farre Babington proceeded in short time, that a choise was made by him of the six that should execute the attempt against hir maiesties person, that some others were especiallie assigned by him to attend and assist the inuasion, with direction from Babington to be popular vnto their vttermost; and that himselfe resolued vpon the first assurance either of hir maiesties death, or of the strangers arriuall, to proclame the queene of Scots queene of England.

Babington vndertaketh the managing of the whole action: note their treasons.

Things standing in these terms, and Babington deferring onelie the execution of this plot, vntill signification therof were giuen to the Scotish queene, and hir good pleasure knowne therein (God so ordening it) the Scotish quéene in June last wrote vnto Babington a short letter in cipher, signifieng hir discontent for the breach of their intelligence, and requiring him to send by that bearer a packet receiued for hir in Aprill before, and vntill that time retained by Babington, as wanting good meanes of conueieng, and therefore fearing the danger of that seruice. Whereupon Babington vsing that opportunitie, both deliuered hir packet vnto that messenger, and by him wrote vnto hir touching euerie particular of this plot aboue mentioned, and how farre he had procéeded therein; signifieng amongst manie other things, how desirous he was to do hir some seruice, how well it might be performed, if assurance were giuen from beyond the seas for that which was vndertaken thense, and how necessarie it were that rewards were promised vnto the cheefe actors for their better incouragement, and to be giuen to their posteritie, in case they miscaried in the execution. And therefore he required, that she would grant authoritie to some such as it might like hir to giue certeine offices and dignities necessarie for this action. Unto this letter Babington about twentie daies after in the same cipher, by which he did write before, receiued answer from the Scotish quéene, with which she also sent inclosed (as hir secretarie now confesseth) a new alphabet in cipher, to be vsed betweene them from that time forward.

The Scotish queene writeth vnto Babington in cipher: with his aduise, direction, and request.

And in this hir letter she not onelie declared hir good opinion of Babington, gaue him due thanks for his readinesse to do hir seruice, promised correspondencie in all that she might, and willed that the resolution being taken, he should with all spéed impart it to Barnardino de Mendoza, considering first what forces on foot or horssebacke he could make, what place for their assemblie, what leaders in euerie shire, what generall or chéefe leaders; but also amongst infinit other traitorous directions (apparant by the verie letters) she aduised that vpon returne of answer from Mendoza, with assurance that all things were in a readinesse, then and not before it should be conuenient to sound the countrie. And to colour the prouision and preparation, it should be giuen out, that what they did, was not vpon anie euill or dilotall disposition towards hir maiestie, but for the iust defense of catholikes, their bodies, liues, & lands, against the violence of the Puritans, the principall wherof being in the low countries with the chéefe forces of the realme, purposed at his returne to ruine not onelie the whole catholikes, but also meant to deprriue hir maiestie of the crowne. And that they should giue it out, that therefore the preparation was for the defense of hir maiestie, and hir lawfull successors, not naming the Scotish quéene: vnder which pretense an association also might be made amongest the catholikes.

The Scotish quéenes aduise in this mischiefous plot sauoring altogither of inhumanitie.

Which being done, and all things in readinesse both within and without the realme, it should be then time for the six gentlemen to worke, taking order that (because the time would be somewhat vncerteine of the exploit vpon hir maiesties person) there should be continuallie some men in readinesse about the court well horsed, to bring word in post into the countrie (by foure seuerall waies for feare of intercepting) when that designment was performed, to the end she might be taken awaie before hir kéeper could either conueie hir awaie or fortifie the place. She wished that some fire might be kindled in Ireland, to the end the councellors attention might be distracted from that part whense the stroke should come, which was from Flanders, Spaine, and the house of Guise. She aduised Babington to deale carefullie and vigilantlie, to prouide all things necessarie for effecting the enterprise, in such sort that it might take good effect by the grace of God (for so it pleaseth hir to vse the phrase.) Lastlie, after great promises of large requitall to all the conspirators, and manie other particular aduises tending wholie to the subuersion of this state, and deprriuation of hir maiesties life, she groweth towards a conclusion, with praier for his good successe in the aforesaid conspiracie. It were needlesse to exprresse more particularlie the contents of his or hir letters, the originals themselues being extant and surprised.

Six gentlemen of resolution, &c.

To these letters Babington wrote for answer by the same messenger, that so soone as the resolution was fullie taken with Mendoza, he would informe hir more; and thereupon within three daies after addressed Ballard towards Mendoza with signification, that all things were here in a readinesse, and attended onelie the arriuall of their forces. But God, who hath alwaies protected hir maiestie in all mercie beyond the expectation of man, euen almost in the verie point of execution, discouered the conspiracie. And thereupon Ballard (being readie to imbarke himselfe) was taken, vpon whose apprehension Babington forced (as he said) with the extreme danger to be discouered, and the no hope of anie pardon for so hatefull an offense, entred a new resolution with Sauage aforenamed & Charnocke, to take hir maiesties life awaie presentlie, otherwise intended to haue béene respited vntill the inuasion, which (as Ballard from the mouth of Mendoza swore) must at the vttermost haue béene performed by September. But Babington, finding himselfe restreined before he wist, and thereby assuring himselfe that all was knowne, found the meanes to escape, in hope to haue recouered the sea, and so to haue saued himselfe and his confederats. Yet after ten daies search through all countries adioining to London, though disguised in clownes attire, and discoloured with walnut leaues, he was discouered, apprehended, and with some other of the conspirators brought vnto London, with greater manifestation of true ioie in the people for their surprise, than tong can exprresse or pen maie write.

Ballard apprehended being readie to imbarke to be imbarked and transported ouersea.

The conspirators disguised themselues, thinking by that meane to shift the matter.

The apprehension of Ballard and flight of Babington dismaied the rest, and dispersed the other conspirators; yet not so farre, but that iustice hath since laid hold vpon the most of them. And though in the beginning they seemed all resolued to stand vnto the denial of euerie part of this action; yet such is the force of truth, that without either hope of fauor or feare of torture, they haue all acknowledged the conspiracie, and confessed their seuerall offenses, agnising the Scotish quéene to be the principall comforter, directer, and imbracer of these treasons, and imputing this error to their deceiuable expectation of hir future greatnesse in this land, the hope whereof ioined with hir allurements, hath heretofore as the world can witnesse (though these could not beware thereby) bred diuerse rebellions within this kingdome, ouerturned manie happie estates, and defiled sundrie families of vnspotted fidelitie in former time.

Magna est veritas & prævalet.

All which notwithstanding our catholikes and others owe and attribute so great a priuilege to hir person onelie, that being past expectation (as they terme it) of anie good from the king hir sonne, and not regarding the interest of anie other to the succession of this state, if she by death or otherwise maie not be aduanced vnto this kingdome: they are then determined to set the crowne on the house of Spaine, either by pretense of some putatiue title, to which effect some pamphlets haue béene alreadie composed; or rather (to auoid all controuersies) by some grant and inuesture from the see apostolike: for the dispatch wherof (as the conspirators confesse) doctor Allen an English fugitiue, and some others attend in Rome to sollicit the pope. Which being once performed, some of the grauer and more reuerend sort (as they call them) of our fugitiue diuines, must secretlie make their repaire hither, and in auricular confession persuade the principall catholikes of this land, and such as are able to swaie the rest, to fauor, mainteine and aduance that title of Spaine against all others, vnder paine of damnation. By meanes whereof it is intended that Spaine shall mount to so huge a greatnesse, as to be able of himselfe to giue lawes to all the states of christendome. ¶ With this note, being the verie flower and grace of all the former discourse, we will conclude, hauing now no more to say touching the conspiracie, but these few verses, which we will vse in lieu of a conclusion, and so proceed vnto other matters of consequence, conuenient for the booke:

How the popish catholikes are affected to the Scotish quéene.

What the fugitiue diuines must do for their parts.

Quid non papa ruens spondet, modò iussa capessas?
En diadema tibi, sceptráque, pactus Hymen.
Dissimilem votis mercedem nacta, sed ausis
Et sceleri resulit turba nefanda parem.

In nefariam Babingtoni coniurationem, hexastichon.

Successere

to be imbarked and transported ouerſea.

Succeſſere rogi regno, coniuxque coronæ,
Pro ſceptro laqueus, pro thalamo tumulus.]

Sir Philip Sidneie ſlaine at Zutphen in Gelderland: of whome ſée more pag. 1554.

In this meane time, to wit, on thurſdaie the 22 daie of September, ſir Philip Sidneie knight, a moſt valiant & towardlie gentleman, ſonne & heire to ſir Henrie Sidneie late deceaſed (as is before ſhewed, in ſeruice of his prince, and defense of his countrie, in the warres of the Netherlands) was ſhot into his thigh with a muſket at Zutphen in Gelderland, whereof he died on the 17 of October, whoſe bodie was conueied into England, to be honourablie buried. On the eight of October, John Low, John Adams, and Robert Dibdale, being before condemned for treaſon, in being made prieſts by authoritie of the biſhop of Rome, ſince the feaſt of John Baptiſt in the firſt yeare of his maieſties reigne, and remaining here after the terme of fourtie daies after ſeſſion of the laſt parlement, were drawne to Tiborne, and there hanged, bowelled, and quartered.

Seminarie prieſts executed at Tiborn.

The conſpirators diſguiſed themſelues, thinking by that meane to ſhift the matter.

Magna eſt veritas & prævalet.

On the ſame daie at night being ſaturdaie, there aroſe the greateſt ſtorme that happened ſince the wind which ſome do call Doner wind; and ſome others, the wind that blew awaie Calis, which was in the time of the reigne of quéene Marie. For beſides great harmes, which happened that night vpon the ſeas, there were vpon the land in euerie quarter ouerthrowne thereby, houſes, cottages, barnes, haieſtacks, tiles, chimneies, pales, and gates innumerable, and manie trées both great and ſmall were not onelie torne and rent aſunder, but grubd vp by the roots: in ſo much as vpon the mondaie next in manie places men could not paſſe on horſebacke in the high waies, by reſon of the trées that laie blowne and broken downe croſſe ouerthwart the ſtréets. And among other ſtrange chances happening in that tempeſt, I thought good (for a taſt) to recite three accidents which befell not farre aſunder within the countie of Kent. The one was at Sittingborne, where a woman paſſing in the ſtréet by hir neighbors houſe, ſaw a great trée ſtanding cloſe by the ſame, to wauer and wag at the verie root, in ſuch ſort as the ſuſpecting the ruine thereof, called vnto hir neighbors who were then in bed, and told them the danger thereof, who preſentlie ariſing, deſcended from out of the loft where they lodged, and were no ſoner departed thenſe, but downe fell the trée and brake through the roofe of that houſe, and reſted on the bed where they laie.

The note of R. S. eſquire. A tempeſtuous wind in October terrible and hurtfull.

The accidents noteworthie by meanes of this bluſtering wind.

How the popiſh catholikes are affected to the Scotiſh quéene.

A ſtrange accident of a walnut trée blowne downe with the wind, &c.

There was alſo blowne downe with the violence of the ſame wind not far off a great walnut trée, the armes and branches whereof bare and bent a couple of imps, in ſuch ſort as the owner in the morning to ſaue them, did cut off two branches from the walnut trée, and ſo departed to the church to heare morning praier: but before he was returned home to dinner, his walnut trée ſtood as vpright as euer it did, and ſo remaineth and groweth as before.

What the fugitiue dimmes muſt doo for their parts.

The third ſtrange chance

The third ſtrange chance happened that night at Dartford in the ſaid ſhire, at the dwelling houſe of maiſter Bére eſquire, where by the force of the ſaid wind, all the coping of one ſide of a great gable hed of bricke (reaching from below the top or roofe of the ſame houſe almoſt to the eaues thereof) was blowne quite ouer the houſe vnder which it ſtood, and neuer touched anie part thereof at anie ſide. By theſe accidents happening within ſo ſmall a circuit, it maie be conceiued what great harmes were done that night throughout the whole realme. For it was thought vniuerſall, as was alſo that which raged in the end of September, wherewithall fell ſuch ſharpe ſhewers of raine, that the drops thereof beating againſt the faces of trauellers made them to ſmart, as with twigs of birch: and ſo behement they were that they perſed through their clothing to their ſkin: ſo that manie wringing wet and ſore beaten with wind and weather, being verie ill apaid, were glad to ſhorten their purpoſed iournies, by taking the next towne for their preſent ſuccour, where they might ſée the roofes and rafters of houſes naked of tiles, and heare the donging of belles as they hong in the ſteeples, &c. At what time it was reported by people of great age, that they had béene in manie tempeſts they thanked God, but none comparable to this: which might well be ſo, if a man were diſpoſed to ſet downe a regiſter of the particular caſualties, loſſes, damages, hurts, hinderances, &c: thereby occaſioned. In the table if you loke for tempeſts and winds, you ſhall read ſtrange matter and worthie obſeruation, though ſome account this and manie more but ridiculus ſtuffe: which kind of people I doubt are not of the number that wonder at Gods works, but are to too much addicted to naturall philoſophie.

Ludgate of London newlie builded.

One of the weſt gates of the citie of London, commonlie called Ludgate, being ſore decaied, and in perill to haue fallen, was taken downe, the priſoners thereof in the meane time remaining vnder the charge of Thomas Lutwich cuſtos or keeper of Ludgate, in the ſoutheaſt quadrant to the ſame gate adioining: which quadrant, for the eaſe of the priſoners freemen of that citie, was ſometime builded by ſir Steuen Foſter fiſhmonger, lord maior of that citie, in Anno 1453. And this yeare, the ſaid gate was againe not onelie newlie, but alſo ſtronglie and beautifullie builded, at the charges of the citizens of the ſame citie, the foundation whereof, in the name and preſence of ſir Wolſtan Dixie maior, certeine of his brethren the aldermen, Anthonie Ratcliſe and Henrie Pranell ſhiriffes, was laid on the ſecond daie of Maie, and ſo forthwith ſo diligentlie applied by William Kirwine free maſon (and other workmen of diuerſe crafts vnder his charge) who for a certeine ſum had taken vpon him for all maner of ſtuffe & workemanſhip to the ſame belonging, that the ſame gate was fullie finiſhed in the ſpace of ſir moneths or leſſe. So that on the 29 daie of October in the ſame yeare, the ſaid gate was ſet open to ſir William Cecill knight lord treaſurer, who firſt entered the ſame on horſebacke, accompanied of diuerſe other honorable perſons, and noble men of hir maieſties priuie councell, who all rode to the Guildhall, where on the ſame daie kept his feaſt George Barnes lord maior of that citie, after he had taken his oth and charge in the exchecker at Weſtminſter.

Parlement at Weſtminſter.

On the 29 daie of October the archbiſhop of Canturburie, the lord treaſurer, and the earle of Derbie, repreſenting the quéens maieſties perſon, began the high court of parlement by prore, which ſeſſion of parlement was at this time aſſembled for triall of matters concerning Marie quéene of Scots, as more plainlie ſhall appeare, by that which followeth the end of that ſeſſion. In the moneth of Nouember about the 23 daie, the right honorable lord Robert earle of Leiceſter, lieutenant generall of all hir maieſties forces in the vnited prouinces of the low countries, returning from thenſe, arriued at London, and went late to the court, where as he was not ſo ſuddenlie come, as forwardlie welcome of the principall, and others, to the great reioiſing of all eſtates throughout the whole realme, as maie appeare by verſes of gratulation, in part as followeth:

Anno Reg. 29.

The earle of Leiceſter returned from the low countries, and arriued in England.

Solonem ingenio, magnum qui Neſtora vincis
Conſilio, pietate Numam, grauitate Catonem:
Gratus ades, ter gratus ades, Comes inclyte, ab oris
Teutonicis, falſi emenſus vada cærula ponti.
Raucaſuit Wanſteda diu, te abſente, nec vllas

Inreditum magnanimi herois, Roberti Comitis Leceſtrij, Laudatorium gratulatorium.

Lætitiæ ediderat voces: Ilsordia eclypsin
Passa fuit, modulis fleuit Laitona canoris:
Hammáque mœstificus ululauit percita curis.
At veluti auricomus dispellit nubila Titan,
Exhilarat tua sic nostros præsentia vultus
Magne Comes, terræ decus, immortale Britannæ,
Magnanimos inter meritò numerande dynastas.

The parliament prorogued.

On the second date of December, the session of parlement (begun the nine & twentith of October as is afore shewed) was dissolued & broken vp, and was prorogued vntill the fiue & twentith of Februarie next following. The substance and effect of matters handled in the same parlement, is set downe in a letter learnedlie penned, and directed to the right honorable the earle of Leicester, as followeth.

THE COPIE OF A LETTER TO the right honorable the earle of Leicester, lieutenant generall of all hir maiesties forces in the vnited prouinces of the low countries, written before, but deliuered at his returne from thense: with a report of certeine petitions and declarations made to the queenes maiestie at two seuerall times, from all the lords and commons latelie assembled in parlement: and hir maiesties answeres therevnto by hir selfe deliuered, though not expressed by the reporter with such grace and life, as the same were vttered by hir maiestie.

To the right honorable the earle of Leicester, &c.

ALbeit with earnest desire of my heart (right honorable my verie good lord) I haue alwaies indeuored to doo your lordship some acceptable seruice, for the honour you first vouchsafed me from beyond my cradle, and after confirmed with the fauorable opinion wherewith you haue alwaies countenanced me euer since, euen thus far onward on my daies, which also togither with my yeares hath increased faster than mine abilitie to performe, being crossed in nothing more dispelle, than when I was letted by the ouermuch tendering of me by my parents, to attend your lordship in your late voiage and honorable expedition into the low countries: yet haue I béene euer since most studious to obserue and apprehend some good occasion, or fit opportunitie, to testifie the dutifull reuerence I beare to your lordship: wherein if hitherto I haue béene slacke in performance during your absence, it hath proceeded of the care I had, not to interteine your lordship with matter either friuolous or vulgar: though things of that nature might best become my condition, and well agrée with my vnderstanding.

In which cogitation it came to my mind, that the report of the spéeches deliuered by the queens most excellent maiestie in a late and weightie cause dealt in this parlement, in answer to the petitions presented to hir maiestie the twelfe and foure and twentith date of Nouember at Richmond by the lord chancellor and speaker, respectiuelie, in the name and behalfe of both estates, accompanied with diuerse of either sort, would doubtlesse be a thing to your lordship most gratefull, as one euer pleased iustlie to admire the rare perfections of hir mind, and approued iudgement, wherewith according to your estate and place, deseruedlie, your lordship hath béene vsuallie acquainted: as also worthie of eternall monument and euerlasting memorie, for as much as on the sudden they were deliuered by hir selfe, for answer of a matter propounded, debated, resolued, and digested, with great labor and premeditation of the greatest, grauest, wisest, and most choise persons of the whole realme, whereof although I haue but slenderlie purtrated the lineaments, without expressing to life the externall ornaments of hir roiall speach, accompanied with all princelie and graceful accomplements: yet doubt I not but your lordship will easilie find hir inward vertues, whereof it is impossible for me to make the least adumbration.

And because in the dailie expectation of your lordships returne, I rested vncerteine how these might come safelie to your lordships hands: I did therefore aduise to haue this my letter with the included copies to be readie to attend your first arriuall, in gratulation of the safetie thereof, which hath béene long desired. Wherein, as I striue to performe a particular dutie to your lordship, so trust I you will haue that honorable consideration, that in the communication thereof with others, there grow not anie preiudice to me for my presumption, in aduenturing to be a reporter of that, which in the deliuerie wrought so great astonishment to all the hearers, as it exceeded the fulnesse of euerie mans expectation: and therefore, without some fauorable construction of mine attempt, I might incurre great blame by my slender maner of report, so to haue blemished the excellencie of hir maiesties spéeches, whereof I humblie beséech your lordship to haue fauorable regard. Thus referring them to your lordships disposition, and my selfe to your fauorable protection, I humblie take my leaue. 25. Nouember. 1586.

Your lordships most humblie in all dutie to command, R. C.

The briefe of the lord chancellors first speach, at the time when he deliuered hir most excellent maiestie a petition in writing, for and in the name of the lords and commons: which speaches were of more length than here are by me collected: but sure I am, the substance thereof is here trulie expressed.

THat the lords and commons, hauing of long time to their intolerable greefe, found, by how manie practises the Scotish quéene had compassed the destruction of hir highnesse most roiall person (in whose safetie next vnder God they acknowledged their chiefe felicitie to consist) thereby not onelie to bereaue them of the sincere and true religion in this realme professed and established, but to bring backe againe this noble realme into the thraldome of Romish tyrannie, and to ouerthrow the happie estate thereof: wherein, although hir highnesse of hir abundant, gratious, naturall clemencie, and princelie magnanimitie, hath either lightlie passed them ouer, or with no small indulgence tolerated, notwithstanding the often and earnest instances of hir nobilitie and commons in sundrie parlements heretofore: and further hath protected hir from the violent pursute of hir owne people: she yet, as a person obdurat in malice (as it appeareth) continued hir former practises, as had béene latelie manifested by certeine wicked conspiracies plotted by one Anthonie Babington, and diuerse desperat persons, that had combined and confederated themselues by vow and oth in a most horrible enterprise, by murther to take awaie the life of hir maiestie: wherein the Scotish quéene did not onelie aduise them, but also direct, comfort, and abbet them, with persuasion, counsell, promise of reward, and earnest obtestation.

Whereupon

Whereupon hir maiestie at the earnest request of such as tendered the safetie of hir roiall person, and the quiet of the realme, did direct commission vnder the great seale to sundrie lords and others of hir maiesties priuie councell, & a great number of lords of parlement, of the greatest and most ancient degrée, assisted with some of the principall iudges of the realme, to heare, examine, and determine the same, according to a statute in that behalfe, made in the seuen and twentith yeare of hir reigne. Who to the number of thirtie and six, hauing attended the execution of the said commission, and diuerse daies and times heard the allegations against the said Scotish quéene in hir owne presence and hearing (she being permitted to saie what she would in hir owne excuse) did with one assent, find hir culpable both in priuitie & consent to the said crimes obiected, and also in compassing the quéens maiesties death.

Which sentence, by hir owne directions, vpon the hearing of the prowfes and proceese in parlement, was iudged to haue béene most honorable and iust. And thereupon they all beséech hir maiestie, that forasmuch as the said quéene of Scots, was the verie ground and onelie subiect, whereupon such dangerous practises and complots had béene founded, against hir maiesties most roiall person, and the estate of this realme for these manie yeares, to the ouerthrow of sundrie of the nobilitie of the land, and danger of christian religion, and that they could sée no hope of hir desisting, and hir adherents; but that still hir maiesties safetie must be hazarded, and stand to the euent of the like miraculous discoueries.

Therefore, as most humble and instant suppliants, they did vpon their knées at hir most gratious fét, beséech and request in most earnest maner, that aswell for the continuance of Gods religion, the quiet of this kingdome, preseruation of hir person, and defense of them and their posteritie, it would please hir highnesse to take order, that the said sentence might be published, and such further direction giuen, as was requisit in this so weightie a cause, according to the purport and intent of the said statute. Wherein, if hir maiestie (pursuing hir wonted clemencie) should now be remisse, besides the imminent danger to hir person, she might by the state thereof, procure the heauie displeasure of almightie God, as by sundrie seuere examples of his iustice in the sacred scriptures doth appeare. And so he deliuered to hir maiesties owne hands the petition in writing, which he said had béene with great deliberation assented vnto by all the whole parlement.

A SHORT EXTRACT OF SVCH reasons, as were deliuered in speach by maister Sargent Puckering, speaker of the lower house, before the queens most excellent maiestie in hir presence chamber at Richmond, the twelfe of November 1586, in the eight and twentith yere of hir reigne, conteining diuerse apparant and imminent dangers, that maie grow to hir maiesties most roiall person, and to hir realme from the Scotish queene and hir adherents, if remedie be not prouided.

First touching the danger of hir maiesties person.

1 BOth this Scotish quéene and hir fautors, doo thinke hir to haue right, not to succeed but to inioie your crowne in possession: and therefore as shée is a most impatient competitor, so will shée not spare anie meanes whatsoeuer, that maie bereaue vs of your maiestie, the onelie impediment that she inioieth not hir desire.

2 She is obdurat in malice against your roiall person, notwithstanding you haue shewed hir all fauour and mercie, as well in preseruing hir kingdome, as sauing hir life, and saluing hir honor. And therefore there is no place for mercie, since there is no hope that she will desist from most wicked attempts: the rather, for that hir malice appeareth such, that she maketh (as it were) hir testament of the same, to be executed after hir death, and appointeth hir executors to performe it.

3 She boldlie and openlie professed it lawfull for hir to moue inuasion vpon you. And therefore, as of inuasion victorie maie insue, and of victorie, the death of the vanquished: so did she thereby not obscurelie bewraie, that she thought it lawfull for hir to destroie your sacred person.

4 She thinketh it not onelie lawfull, but honorable also and meritorious to take your life from you, as being alreadie depriued of your crowne by the excommunication of the holie father. And therefore it is like she will (as hitherto she hath done) continuallie séeke it by whatsoeuer meanes.

5 What she is greedie of your maiesties death, and preferreth it before hir owne life and safetie: for in hir direction to one of hir late complices, she aduised (vnder couert termes) that whatsoeuer should become of hir, that tragicall execution should be performed vpon you.

1 IT is most perillous to spare hir, that continuallie hath sought the ouerthrow and suppression of true religion, infected with poperie from hir tender youth, and being after that a confederat in that holie league when she came to age, and euer since a professed enimie against the truth. The danger of the ouerthrow of the true religion.

2 She resteth wholie vpon popish hopes to deliuer and aduance hir, and is thereby so deuoted to that profession, that aswell for satisfaction of others, as for feeding of hir owne humor, she will supplant the gospell, where and when so euer she maie: which euill is so much the greater, and the more to be auoided, as that it slaieth the verie soule, and will spread it selfe not onelie ouer England and Scotland, but also into those parts beyond the seas, where the gospell of God is mainteined, the which cannot but be exceedinglie weakened, by the defection of this noble Iland.

1 As the Lydians said, Vnum regem agnoscunt Lydi, duos autem tolerare non possunt: So we saie, Vnicam reginam Elizabetham agnoscunt Angli, duas autem tolerare non possunt. The perill of the state of the realme.

2 As she hath alredie by hir allurements brought to destruction more noble men and their houses, together with a greater multitude of the commons of this realme, during hir being here, than she should haue béene able to doo, if she had béene in possession of hir owne crowne, and armed in the field against vs: so will she still be continuall cause of the like spoile, to the greater losse and perill of this estate: and therefore this realme neither can, nor maie indure hir.

3 Againe, she is the onelie hope of all discontented subiects, she is the foundation whereon all the euill disposed doo build, she is the root from whense all rebellions and trecheries doo spring: and therefore whilest this hope lasteth, this foundation standeth, and this root liueth, they will reteine heart, and set on foot whatsoeuer their deuises against the realme, which otherwise will fall awaie, die, and come to nothing.

4 Mercie

4 Percie now in this case towards hir would in the end proue crueltie against vs all. Nam est quædam crudelis misericordia, and therefore to spare hir, is to spill vs.

5 Besides this, it will exceedinglie greeue and in a maner deadlie wound the hearts of all the good subiects of your land, if they shall see a conspiracie so horrible not condignlie punished.

6 Thousands of your maiesties most liege and louing subiects, of all sorts and degrees, that in a tender zeale of your maiesties safetie, haue most willinglie both by open subscription and solemne vow, entered into a firme and loiall association, and haue thereby protested to pursue vnto the death, by all forcible and possible meanes, such as she is by iust sentence now found to be: can neither discharge their loue, nor well saue their oths, if your maiestie shall keepe hir aliue: of which burthen your maiesties subiects are most desirous to be releeued, as the same maie be, if iustice be done.

7 Lastlie, your maiesties most louing and dutifull commons doubt not, but that as your maiestie is dulie exercised in reading the booke of God: so it will please you to call to your princelie remembrance, how fearefull the examples of Gods vengeance be, that are there to be found against king Saule for sparing king Agag, & against king Achab for sauing the life of Benadad; both which were by the iust iudgement of God depriued of their kingdoms, for sparing those wicked princes, whome God had deliuered into their hands, of purpose to be slaine by them, as by the ministers of his eternall and diuine iustice. Wherein full wiselie Salomon proceeded to punishment, when he toke the life of his owne naturall and elder brother Adonias, for the onelie intention of a marriage, that gaue suspicion of treason against him. Herein we your maiesties most louing and obedient subiects earnestlie depend vpon your princelie resolution, which we assure our selues shall be to God most acceptable, and to vs no other than the state of your regall authoritie maie afford vs, and the approued arguments of your tender care for our safetie vnder your charge doth promise to our expectation.

A REPORT OF HIR MAIESTIES

most gratious answer, deliuered by hir selfe verballie, to the first petitions of the lords and commons, being the estates of parlement, in hir chamber of presence at Richmond, the twelfe daie of Nouember 1586, at the full almost of eight and twentie yeares of hir reigne. Whereof the reporter requireth of all that were hearers, a fauorable interpretation of his intent, because he findeth that he can not expresse the same answerable to the originall, which the learned call Prototypon.

THe bottomlesse graces and immesurable benefits bestowed vpon me by the almightie, are, and haue beene such, as I must not onelie acknowledge them, but admire them, accounting them as well miracles as benefits; not so much in respect of his diuine maiestie, with whome nothing is more common than to doo things rare and singular: as in regard of our weakenesse, who can not sufficientlie set forth his wonderfull works and graces, which to me haue beene so manie, so diuerselie folded and imbroidered one vpon another, as in no sort I am able to expresse them. And although there liueth not anie, that maie more iustlie acknowledge themselues infinitelie bound vnto God than I, whose life he hath miraculouslie preserued at sundrie times (beyond my merit) from a multitude of perils & dangers: yet is not that the cause, for which I count my selfe the deerelie bound to giue him my humblest thanks, or to yeeld him greatest recognition; but this which I shall tell you hereafter, which will deserue the name of wonder, if rare things and seldome seene be worthie of account. Euen this it is, that as I came to the crowne with the willing hearts of my subiects, so doo I now after eight and twentie yeares reigne, perceiue in you no diminution of good wils, which if haplie I should want, well might I breath, but neuer thinke I liued.

And now, albeit I find my life hath beene full dangerouslie sought, and death contriued by such as no desert procured: yet am I therein so cleare from malice (which hath the propertie to make men glad at the fals and faults of their foes, and make them seeme to doo for other causes, when rancor is the ground) as I protest it is and hath beene my greeuous thought, that one, not different in ser, of like estate, and my neere kin, should fall into so great a crime: yea I had so little purpose to pursue hir with anie colour of malice, that as it is not vnknowen to some of my lords here (for now I will plaie the blab) I secretlie wrote hir a letter vpon the discouerie of sundrie treasons, that if she would confesse them, and priuatlie acknowledge them by hir letters to my selfe, she neuer should need be called for them into so publike question. Neither did I it of mind to circumuent hir: for then I knew as much as she could confesse, and so did I write. And if euen yet, now that the matter is made but too apparant, I thought she truelie would repent (as perhaps she would easilie appeare in outward shew to doo) and that for hir, none other would take the matter vpon them; or that we were but as two milke maids with pailes vpon our armes, or that there were no more dependencie vpon vs but mine owne life were onelie in danger, and not the whole estate of your religion and well doings, I protest (wherein you maie beleeue me, for though I maie haue manie vices, I hope I haue not accustomed my tong to be an instrument of vntruth) I would most willinglie pardon and remit this offense.

Or if by my death other nations and kingdoms might truelie saie, that this realme had attained an euer prosperous and flourishing estate: I would (I assure you) not desire to liue; but gladlie giue my life, to the end my death might procure you a better prince. And for your sakes it is, that I desire to liue, to keepe you from a worse. For as for me, I assure you, I find no great cause I should be fond to liue: I take no such pleasure in it, that I should much wish it; nor conceiue such terror in death, that I should greatlie feare it: and yet I saie not, but if the stroke were comming, perchance flesh and bloud would be moued with it, and seeke to shun it. I haue had good experience and triall of this world: I know what it is to be a subiect; what to be a souereigne; what to haue good neighbors, and sometime meet euill willers. I haue found treason in trust, seene great benefits little regarded, and in stead of gratefulnesse, courses of purpose to crosse.

These former remembrances, present feeling, and future expectation of euils (I saie) haue made me thinke, An euill is much the better, the lesse while it indureth: & so, them happiest, that are soonest hense: and taught me to beare with a better mind these treasons, than is common to my ser: yea, with a better heart perhaps, than is in some men. Which I hope you will not meerelie impute to my simplicitie or want of vnderstanding, but rather, that I thus conceiued, that had their purposes taken effect, I should

ſhould not haue found the blow, before I had felt it: and though my perill ſhould haue béene great, my paine ſhould haue béene but ſmall and ſhort: wherein, as I would be loth to die ſo bloudie a death, ſo doubt I not, but God would haue giuen me grace to be prepared for ſuch an euent, chance when it ſhall, which I refer vnto his good pleaſure. And now, as touching their treaſons and conſpiracies, togither with the contriuer of them; I will not ſo preiudicat my ſelfe and this my realme, as to ſaie or thinke, that I might not, without the laſt ſtatute, by the ancient lawes of this land, haue proceeded againſt him, which was not made particularlie to preiudice him; though perhaps it might then be ſuſpected, in reſpect of the diſpoſition of ſuch as depend that waie. It was ſo far from being intended to intrap him, that it was rather an admonition to warne the danger thereof: but ſith it is made, and in the force of a law, I thought good, in that which might concerne him, to proceed according thereunto, rather than by courſe of common law: wherein, if you the iudges haue not deceiued me, or that the bookes you brought me were not falſe (which God forbid) I might as iuſtlie haue tried him by the ancient lawes of the land.

But you lawiers are ſo nice in ſifting, and ſcanning euerie word and letter, that manie times you ſtand more vpon forme than matter, vpon ſyllables than ſenſe of the law. For in the ſtrictneſſe & exact following of common forme, ſhe muſt haue béene indicted in Staffordſhire, haue holden vp hir hand at the barre, and béene tried by a iurie: a proper courſe forſooth, to deale in that maner with one of hir eſtate. I thought it better therefore, for auoiding of theſe and more abſurdities, to commit the cauſe to the inquiſition of a good number of the greateſt and moſt noble perſonages of this realme, of the iudges and others of good account, whoſe ſentence I muſt approue: and all little enough. For we princes, I tell you, are ſet on ſtages, in the ſight and view of all the world duelie obſerued; the eies of manie behold our actions; a ſpot is ſone ſpied in our garments; a blemiſh quicklie noted in our doings. It behoueth vs therefore to be carefull that our proceedings be iuſt and honorable.

But I muſt tell you one thing more, that in this laſt act of parlement you haue brought me vnto a narrow ſtreict, that I muſt giue direction for hir death, which cannot bée to mée but a moſt greéuous and irkſome burthen. And leaſt you might miſtake mine abſence from this parlement (which I had almoſt forgotten) although there bée no cauſe whie I ſhould willinglie come amongſt multitudes, for that amongſt manie ſome mate bee euill: yet hath it not béene the doubt of anie ſuch danger or occaſion that kept me from thenſe; but onlie the great griefe to heare this cauſe ſpoken of; eſpeciallie, that ſuch a one of ſtate and kin ſhould néed ſo open a declaration, and that this nation ſhould be ſo ſpotted with blots of diſloialtie. Wherein the leſſe is my greéfe, for that I hope the better part is mine, and thoſe of the worſe not ſo much to be accounted of, for that in ſéeking my deſtruction, they might haue ſpoiled their owne ſouls. And euen now could I tell you, that which would make you ſorie. It is a ſecret, and yet I will tell it you; although it is knowne I haue the propertie to keepe counſell, but to well oftentimes to mine owne perill. It is not long ſince mine eies did ſée it written, that an oth was taken within few daies, either to kill me, or to be hanged themſelues: and that to be performed per one moneth were ended. Hereby I ſée your danger in me, and neither can nor will be ſo vnthankefull or careleſſe of your conſciences, as not prouide for your ſafetie.

I am not vnmindfull of your oth made in the aſſociation, manifeſting your great good wils and affections, taken and entered into, vpon good conſcience, and true knowledge of the guilt, for ſafetie of my perſon, and conſeruation of my life: done (I proteſt to God) before I heard it, or euer thought of ſuch a matter, vntill a great number of hands with manie obligations were ſhewed me, at Hampton court, ſigned and ſubſcribed with the names and ſeales of the greateſt of this land. Which as I doo acknowledge as a perfect argument of your true hearts, and great zeale to my ſafetie: ſo ſhall my bond be ſtronger tied to greater care for all your good. But for as much as this matter is rare, weightie, and of great conſequence, I thinke you doo not looke for anie preſent reſolution: the rather, for that, as it is not my maner, in matters of far leſſe moment, to giue ſpéedie anſwer without due conſideration; ſo in this of ſuch importance, I thinke it verie requiſit with earneſt praier to beſéech his diuine maieſtie, ſo to illuminat my vnderſtanding, and inſpire me with his grace, as I maie doo and determine that, which ſhall ſerue to the eſtabliſhment of his church, preſeruation of your eſtates, and proſperitie of this common wealth vnder my charge. Wherein (for that I know delaie is dangerous) you ſhall haue with all conueniencie our reſolution deliuered by our meſſage. And what euer anie prince maie merit of their ſubiects, for their approued teſtimonie of their vnfained ſinceritie, either by gouerning iuſtlie, void of all parcialitie, or ſufferance of anie iniuries done (euen to the worſt) that doo I aſſuredlie promiſe inuiolablie to performe, for requitall of your ſo manie deſerts.

¶ The occaſions of the ſecond acceſſe.

This anſwer thus made by hir maieſtie, the lords and commons were diſmiſſed. And then hir highneſſe ſome few daies after, vpon deliberation had of this petition, being (as it appeared) of hir mercifull diſpoſition of nature, and hir princelie magnanimitie, in ſome conflict with hir ſelfe what to doo in a cauſe ſo weightie and important to hir and the realme, ſent by the lord chancellor (as I heard) and by the mouth of an honorable perſon, and a right worthie member of the lower houſe, this meſſage to both houſes: moouing and earneſtlie charging them, to enter into a further conſideration, whether there might not be ſome other waie of remedie, than that they had alreadie required, ſo far diſagreeing from hir owne naturall inclination. Whereupon, the lords and commons in either houſes aſſembled, had ſundrie conſultations, both in their ſeuerall houſes generallie, and by priuat committées deputed ſpeciallie. And after conference had betwixt the ſaid committées, it was reſolued with vnanimitie of conſent amongſt them in the lower houſe, and by vniuerſall concord in the vpper houſe (the queſtion there propounded to euerie one of the lords) that there could be found no other ſound and aſſured meane, in the depth of their vnderſtanding, for the continuance of the chriſtian religion, quiet of the realme, and ſafetie of hir maieſties moſt roiall perſon, than that which was conteined in their former petition. The reaſons whereof were ſummarilie theſe that follow, which are more shortlie reported than they were vttered.

A briefe report of the ſecond acceſſe the foure and twentith of Nouember 1586: and of the anſwer made in the name of tiue lords of the parlement, to a meſſage ſent from hir maieſtie by the lord chancellor after hir firſt anſwer.

THe lord chancellor, accompanied with aboue fiue or ſix and twentie lords of parlement, came before hir highneſſe in hir chamber of preſence, to deliuer the reſolution of all the lords of parlement, concerning a meſſage which he had not long before deliuered from hir maieſtie, for further conſultation, whether anie other means could be thought of, or found out by anie of them, how the Scotiſh queens life might be ſpared, and yet hir maieſties perſon ſaued out of perill, and the ſtate of the realme preſerued in quiet; declared, that according to that he had receiued in commandement from hir maieſtie, he had imparted the ſame vnto the lords aſſembled in the vpper houſe, whom he found by their generall ſilence much amazed at the propounding thereof, conſidering the ſame had béene before in deliberation amongeſt them, and reſolued vpon, and as appeared by their former petition exhibited to hir highneſſe, wherein they had expreſſed the ſame reſolution.

Notwithſtanding, for hir maieſties further ſatisfaction, they had entred into a new conſultation, & for that purpoſe ſelected a great number of the choiſeſt perſons of the higher houſe of parlement to confer thereof, either priuatlie or togither with the lower houſe: which alſo was done accordinglie at ſeuerall times. At all which conferences it was concluded by them all, & ſo afterwards by the whole aſſemblie of both houſes, that there could be no other aſſured means for the preſeruation of hir maieſties life, and continuance of Gods religion & quiet of this ſtate, than by the full execution of the ſentence according to their former petition, inſtantlie preſſing hir maieſtie with manie arguments and reaſons tending thereto. All which, though by diſtance from his lordſhip I could not well conceiue, yet this I did remember preciſelie and eſpecialliè was one: that as it were iniuſtice to denie execution of law at the ſute of anie one particular, and the meaneſt of hir people: ſo much more not to yeeld to the earneſt inſtance and humble praiers of all hir faithfull and louing ſubiects. And ſo concluded, with earneſt petition for hir maieſties reſolute determination and anſwer, for a preſent and ſpéedie direction by proclamation, and otherwiſe alſo, according vnto the forme of the ſtatute.

A ſummarie report of the ſecond ſpeach, vttered by the ſpeaker of the lower houſe, by direction of all the commons.

THat if hir maieſtie ſhould be ſafe without taking awaie the life of the Scotiſh queene, the ſame were moſt likelie and probablie to grow, by one of theſe means following.

1 Firſt, that happilie ſhe might be reclamed and become a repentant conuert, agniſing hir maieſties great mercie and fauors in remitting hir heinous offenſe, and by hir loialtie hereafter performe the fruits of ſuch conuerſion.

2 Or elſe by a more ſtreict gard be ſo kept, as there ſhould be no feare of the like attempts hereafter.

3 Or that good aſſurance might be giuen by oth, bonds or hoſtages, as cautions for hir good and loiall demeanor from henceforth.

4 Or laſtlie by baniſhment, the realme might be voided of hir perſon, and thereby the perils further remoued that grow to hir maieſtie by hir preſence. The moments whereof being dulie pondered, did yet appeare ſo light in all their iudgements, that they durſt not aduiſe anie ſecuritie to reſt in anie, no not in all of them. For touching hir conuerſion, it was conſidered, that if pietie or dutie could haue reſtreined hir from ſuch heinous attempts, there was cauſe abundantlie miniſtred vnto hir on hir maieſties behalfe, when ſhe not onelie proteſted hir againſt the violence of hir owne ſubiects, who purſued hir to death by iuſtice, but couered hir honor when the ſame by publike fame was touched, and by verie heinous and capitall crimes (obiected and proued againſt hir before certeine commiſſarie delegats aſſigned to examine the ſame) more than blemiſhed; and ſpared hir life, when for hir former conſpiracies and confederacies with the Northerne rebels, hir highneſſe was with great inſtance preſſed by both the houſes in the foureténth yeare of hir maieſties reigne, to do like iuſtice vpon hir, as now is deſired, and as hir treaſonable practiſes then had moſt iuſtlie deſerued.

And where the penaltie of this act ſufficientlie notified vnto hir, ſhould haue terrified hir from ſo wicked attempts; ſhe hath neuertheleſſe inſiſted in hir former practiſes, as a perſon obdurat in malice againſt hir maieſtie, and irrecouerable; ſo as there was no probable hope of anie conuerſion, but rather great doubt and feare of relapſe and recidiuation, forasmuch as ſhe ſtood obſtinatlie in the denial of matter moſt euidentlie proued, and now moſt iuſtlie ſentenced againſt hir, and was not entred into the firſt part of repentance, the recognition of hir offenſe, and ſo much the further off from the true fruits that ſhould accompanie the ſame.

As for a ſurer gard & more ſtreict impriſonment, it was reſolued that there was no ſecuritie therein, nor yet in the other two means propounded of bonds and hoſtages: forasmuch as the ſame meanes that ſhould be practiſed to take hir maieſties life awaie, (which God forbid) would aptlie ſerue for the deliuerie of hir perſon, and releaſe of the bonds & hoſtages that ſhould be giuen for cautions in that behalfe: which being vnhappilie atchiued, and to our irreparable loſſe, who ſhould ſue the bonds, or deteine the hoſtages? Or being deteined, what proportion was there in bonds or hoſtages whatſoeuer, to counteruaile the value of ſo pretious & ineſtimable a iewell, as hir maieſtie is to this realme, & to vs all? But ſhe will ſolemnlie vow & take an oth, that ſhe will not attempt anie thing to the hurt of hir maieſties perſon. She hath alreadie ſundrie times ſatiſfied hir word, hir writing, and hir oth; and holdeth it for an article of religion, that faith is not to be holden with heretiks, of which ſort ſhe accounteth your maieſtie and all the profeſſors of the goſpell to be: and therfore haue we little reaſon to truſt hir in that, whereof ſhe maketh ſo ſmall a conſcience.

As for baniſhment, that were a ſtep A malo in peius, to ſet hir at libertie, a thing ſo greatlie deſired and thirſted for by hir adherents, and by ſome princes hir alies, who ſought hir inlargement chéeflie to make hir a head to be ſet vp againſt hir maieſtie, in time of inuaſion. To the which were added ſome few reaſons collected out of hir owne letters and the confeſſion of Babington, hir inſtrument and conſpirator: by which appeared how hir owne conſcience bewraied what might iuſtlie fall vpon hir, in caſe anie of hir intended deſignements came to light, that ſhe might haplie be ſhut vp in ſome more cloſe and strict prison, as the Tower of London, if there befell him no worse thing. And in that she directed Babington, in case he failed in the action of his deliuerie, that he should neuertheless proceed in the residue; which was the death of his maiestie: who also confessed, that vpon assurance of his maiesties death, or the arriuall of strangers, he intended to proclame the queene of Scots, and made no doubt of the desired successe: and therefore his maiesties death being so earnestlie sought, for aduancement of this competitor, his highnesse could not remaine in quietnesse or securitie, if the Scotish queene should longer continue his life.

and

THE SECOND ANSWER

made by the queens maiestie, deliuered by hir owne mouth, to the second speach, vttered in the names of the lords and commons of the parlement.

All greeuous is the waie, whose going on, and end, breed cumber for the hire of a laborious tourneie. I haue striued more this daie than euer in my life, whether I should speake, or vse silence. If I speake and not complaine, I shall dissemble; if I hold my peace, your labour taken were full vaine. For me to make my mone, were strange and rare: for I suppose you shall find few, that for their owne particular, will cumber you with such a care. Yet such I protest hath beene my greedie desire and hungrie will, that of your consultation might haue fallen out some other meanes to worke my safetie ioined with your assurance (than that for which you are become such earnest sutors) as I protest, I must néeds vse complaint, though not of you, but vnto you, and of the cause; for that I do perceiue by your aduises, praiers, and desires, there falleth out this accident, that onelie my iniurers bane must be my lifes suertie.

But if anie there liue so wicked of nature, to suppose, that I prolonged this time onelie, Pro forma, to the intent to make a shew of clemencie, thereby to set my praises to the wierdrawers to lengthen them the more: they do me so great a wrong, as they can hardlie recompense. Or if anie person there be, that thinke or imagine, that the least vaine-glorious thought hath drawne me further herein, they do me as open iniurie as euer was done to a ne liuing creature, as he that is the maker of all thoughts knoweth best to be true. Or if there be anie, that thinke, that the lords appointed in commission durst do no other, as fearing thereby to displease, or else to be suspected to be of a contrarie opinion to my safetie, they do but heape vpon me iniurious conceipts. For either those put in trust by me to supplie my place, haue not performed their duties towards me; or else they haue signified vnto you all, that my desire was, that euerie one should do according to his conscience, and in the course of his procéedings should inioie both fréedome of voice and libertie of opinion; and what they would not openlie declare, they might priuatlie to my selfe haue reuealed. It was of a willing mind and great desire I had, that some other meanes might be found out, wherein I should haue taken more comfort, than in anie other thing vnder the sun.

And sith now it is resolued, that my saretie can not be established without a princelie end, I haue iust cause to complaine; that I, who haue in my time pardoned so manie rebels, winked at so manie treasons, and either not produced them, or altogither slipt them ouer with silence, should now be forced to this procéeding, against such a person. I haue besides, during my reigne, séene and heard manie opprobrious bokes and pamphlets against me, my realme and state, accusing me to be a tyrant; I thanke them for their almes: I beléeue, therein their meaning was to tell me news, and news it is to me in déed; I would it were as strange to heare of their impietie! What will they not now saie, when it shall be spread, that for the safetie of hir life, a maiden queene could be content to spill the bloud, euen of hir owne kinswoman? I maie therefore full well complaine, that anie man should thinke me giuen to crueltie, whereof I am so giltlesse and innocent, as I should slander God, if I should saie he gaue me so vile a mind: yea, I protest, I am so far from it, that for mine owne life I would not touch hir: neither hath my care beene so much bent how to prolong mine, as how to preserue both: which I am right sorie is made so hard, yea so impossible.

I am not so void of iudgement, as not to sée mine owne perill; nor yet so ignorant, as not to know it were in nature a foolish course, to cherish a sword to cut mine owne throte; nor so careless, as not to weigh that my life dailie is in hazard: but this I do consider, that manie a man would put his life in danger for the safegard of a king, I do not saie that so will I: but I praie you thinke, that I haue thought vpon it. But sith so manie haue both written & spoken against me, I praie you giue me leaue to saie somewhat for my selfe, & before you returne to your countries, let you know, for what a one you haue passed so carefull thoughts. Wherein, as I thinke my selfe infinitlie beholding vnto you all, that sæke to preserue my life by all the meanes you maie: so I protest vnto you, that there liueth no prince, that euer shall be more mindfull to requite so god deserts. And as I perceiue you haue kept your old wonts, in a generall séeking of the lengthning of my daies: so am I sure that I shall neuer requite it, vnlesse I had as manie liues as you all: but for euer I will acknowledge it, while there is anie breath left me. Although I maie not iustifie, but iustlie condemne my sundrie faults and sinnes to God: yet for my care in this gouernment, let me acquaint you with my intents.

When first I toke the scepter, my title made me not forget the giuer: and therefore began, as it became me, with such religion, as both I was borne in, bred in, and I trust shall die in. Although I was not so simple, as not to know what danger and perill so great an alteration might procure me: how manie great princes of the contrarie opinion would attempt all they might against me: and generallie, what enimitie I should breed vnto my selfe: which all I regarded not, knowing that he, for whose sake I did it, might, and would defend me. For which it is, that euer since I haue béene so dangerouslie prosecuted, as I rather maruell that I am, than muse that I should not be: if it were not Gods holie hand that continueth me, beyond all other expectation. When entered I further into the schole of experience, bethinking what it fitted a king to do; and there I saw, he scant was well furnished, if either he lacked iustice, temperance, magnanimitie, or iudgement. As for the two latter, I will not boast, my ser doth not permit it: but for the two first, this dare I saie; amongst my subiects I neuer knew a difference of person, where right was one: nor neuer to my knowledge preferred for fauour, whome I thought not fit for worth: nor bent my eares to credit a tale that first was told me: nor was so rash, to corrupt my iudgement with my censure, before I heard the cause. I will not saie, but manie reports might fortune be brought me by such as might heare the case, whose partialitie might mar sometime the matter: for we princes maie not heare all our selues. But this dare I boldlie affirme, my verdict went euer with the truth of my knowledge. As full well wished Alcibiades his frend, that he should not giue anie answer, till he had recited the letters of the alphabet: so haue I not vsed ouer sudden resolutions, in matters that haue touched me full neere: you will saie that with me, I thinke.

we

And therefore, as touching your counsels and consultations, I conceiue them to be wise, honest, and conscionable: so prouident and carefull for the safetie of my life (which I wish no longer than maie be for your good) that though I neuer can yéld you of recompense your due: yet shall I indeuour my selfe to giue you cause, to thinke your good will not ill bestowed, and striue to make my selfe worthie for such subiects. And now for your petition, I shall praie you for this present, to content your selues with an answer without answer. Your iudgement I condemne not, neither do I mistake your reasons, but praie you to accept my thankefulnesse, excuse my doubtfulnesse, and take in good part my answer answerlesse: wherein I attribute not so much to mine owne iudgement, but that I thinke manie particular persons maie go before me, though by my degrée I go before them. Therefore if I should saie, I would not do what you request, it might peraduenture be more than I thought: and to saie I would do it, might perhaps breed perill of that you labour to preserue, being more than in your owne wisedoms and discretions would séeme conuenient, circumstances of place and time being dulie considered.

Thus far the procéeding against the Scotish quéene, as the same is reported by R. C. Now followeth the publication of the same, which was done with great port and statelinesse. For vpon tuesdate, being the first date of December, the lord maior of London, assisted with diuers earls, and barons, the aldermen in their scarlet gownes, the principall officers of the citie, the greatest number of gentlemen of the best accompt in and about the citie, with the number of fourescore of the most graue & worshipfullest citizens, in cotes of veluet, and chaines of gold, all on horsse backe; in most solemne and statelie maner, by the sound of foure trumpets, about ten of the clocke in the forenone, made open and publike proclamation and declaration of the sentence latelie giuen by the nobilitie against the quéene of Scots, vnder the great seale of England, bearing date at Richmont the fourth daie of December, being openlie read by maister Serjeight, towne-clerke of London, & with lowd voice solemnelie proclamed by the sargent at armes of the said citie, in foure seuerall places, to wit, at the crosse in Cheape, at the end of Chancerie lane in Flétstrét, ouer against the Temple, at Leaden hall corner, and at saint Magnus corner néere London bridge.

The sentence giuen against the Scotish quéene solemnelie proclamed.

During which time, the like solemne proclamations were made with great solemnities in the countie of Middlesex, namelie in the palace at Westminster, without Temple barre, and in Holborne, by the shiriffes of London and Middlesex, assisted with sundrie noblemen, gentlemen of good account, and the iustices of peace of the said countie, to the great and wonderfull reioising of the people of all sorts, as manifestlie appeared by their eger running after the portlie traine, their thronging to heare the same published, their ringing of bels, making of bonfires, and singing of psalmes in euerie strét and lane of the citie. The said proclamation followeth.

A true copie of the proclamation latelie published by the queenes maiestie, vnder the great seale of England, for the declaring of the sentence latelie giuen against the queene of Scots, in forme as followeth.

ELisabeth by the grace of God, quéene of England, France, and Ireland, defender of the faith, &c. Whereas we were giuen to vnderstand very crediblie, though to our great greefe, that diuerse things were, and of late time had bene compassed, imagined, and resolutelie intended, tending directlie to the hurt and destruction of our roiall person, and to the subuersion of the state of our realme by forren inuasions and rebellions at home, as well by the quéene of Scots, remaining in our realme vnder our protection, as by manie diuerse other wicked persons with hir priuitie, who had frélie confessed the same, and had thereupon receiued open triall, iudgement, and execution according to the lawes for their deserts. And though in verie truth we were greatlie and deeplie greéued in our mind, to thinke or imagine that anie such vnnaturall and monstrous acts should be either deuised, or willinglie assented vnto against vs, by hir being a princesse borne, and of our sex and bloud, and one also whose life & honor we had manie times before saued and preserued: yet were we so directlie drawne to thinke all the same to be true, by the sight and vnderstanding of such proofes as were manifestlie produced afore vs, vpon matters that had as well procéeded from hir selfe, as from the conspirators themselues, who voluntarilie & frélie without anie coercion had confessed their conspirations, both iointlie with hir, and directed by hir, against our person and our realme: and therefore also we saw great reason, to thinke the same ouer dangerous to be suffered to passe onward to take their full effect.

Wherefore we were by sundrie lords of our nobilitie, and others our louing subiects, earnestlie moued and counselled, to take vndelaied order for the inquisition and examination of all these dangerous enterprises & conspiracies, by sundrie waies directlie auowed to be by the said quéen of Scots against vs and our realme certeinlie intended; and also to vse all present meanes with expedition to withstand or rather to preuent the same. And for that we were verie vnwilling to procéed against hir, considering hir birth and estate, by such vsuall sort as by the common lawes of the realme we might haue lawfullie done, which was by indictment and arreignment by ordinarie iuries: therefore, in respect both of our owne honor, and of hir person, we yélded, by good aduise giuen to vs, to procéed in the most honorable sort that could be deuised within our realme, to the examination hereof, according to a late act of parlement, made the three and twentith daie of November, in the seuen and twentith yeare of our reigne.

Whereupon by our commission vnder our great seale of England, bearing date at our castell of Windsor in our countie of Barkeshire, the first daie of October now last past, we did (for that purpose) according to that statute, assigne, name, and appoint all the lords and others of our priuie councell, and so manie other earls and barons lords of parlement, of the greatest degrée and most ancient of the nobilitie of this our realme, as with the same lords and others of our priuie councell, made vp the number of fortie and two, adding also thereto a further, number according to the tenor of the foresaid act of parlement, of certeine of the cheefest and other principall iudges of the courts of record at Westminster, amounting in the whole to the number uer of forty and seuen, to examine all things compassed and imagined, tending to the hurt of our rotall person, as well by the said quéene of Scots, by the name of Marie the daughter & heire of James the fift late king of Scots, commonlie called the quéene of Scots & Dowager of France, as by anie other by hir priuitie, and all the circumstances thereof, & thereupon according to the tenor of the said act of parlement, to giue sentence or iudgment, as vpon good proofe the matter vnto them should appeare, as by the same commission more fullie appeareth.

And where afterwards the more part of the said councellors, lords, and iudges, in our said commission named, that is to saie, the number of six and thirtie, did in the presence and hearing of the said quéene of Scots, where she remained at our castell of Fodringhaie, at diuerse daies and times in publike place, verie exactlie, vprightlie, and with great deliberation examine all the matters & offenses, whereof she was charged and accused, tending vnto the dangers afore rehearsed and mentioned in our said commission and all the circumstances thereof, and heard also at large in all fauorable maner, what the same quéene did, or could saie for hir excuse and defense in that behalfe. Whereupon afterwards on the fiue and twentith daie of October now last past, all the said councell, lords, and iudges, that had heard and examined the same cause in the said quéenes presence, as afore is mentioned, with one assent and consent, after good deliberation did giue their sentence and iudgement, in this sort following.

That after the first daie of June, in the seuen and twentith yeare of our reigne, and before the date of our said commission, diuerse things were compassed and imagined within this realme of England by Anthonie Babington, and others, with the priuitie of the said Marie, pretending title to the crowne of this realme of England, tending to the hurt, death, and destruction of our rotall person. And likewise, that after the same first daie of June, and before the date of our said commission, the said Marie, pretending title to the same crowne, had compassed & imagined within the same realme, diuers things tending to the hurt, death, and destruction of our rotall person, contrarie to the forme of the said statute: which sentence and iudgement the same lords and commissioners haue with one full consent caused to be put in writing, and dulie ingrossed, with the whole processe of their proceedings thereunto belonging, and haue subscribed the same with their hands, as by a record thereof shewed to vs more fullie and largelie doth appeare.

And whereas also, sithence the same sentence and iudgement so giuen and recorded, the lords and commons in this present parlement assembled, haue also at sundrie times in open parlement, heard and considered the principall euidences, proofes, and circumstances, whereupon the same sentence and iudgement was grounded, and haue by their publike assent in parlement affirmed the same to be a iust, lawfull, and true sentence, and so haue allowed and approued the same in writing presented vnto vs: and haue also notified to vs, how dispelie they did foresee the great and manifest imminent dangers, which otherwise might and should grow to our person, and to the whole realme, if this sentence were not fullie executed: and consequentlie therefore, they did by their most humble and earnest petitions in that behalfe, of one accord, hauing accesse vnto vs (vpon their sundrie requests) most instantlie vpon their knées, praie, beseech, and with manie reasons of great force and importance, mooue and presse vs, that the said sentence and iudgement so iustlie & dulie giuen, and by them approued, as is aforesaid, might (according to the expresse tenor of the said act of parlement) by our proclamation vnder our great seale be declared and published, and the same also finallie executed.

But after such most earnest request, so made to vs from all the said lords and commons in parlement, they perceiuing by our owne speeches and answers, how deepelie we are greeued to heare of these horrible and vnnaturall attempts and actions of that quéene, whose manie former offenses, manifestlie and dangerouslie committed against vs, our crowne and realme, we had ouerpassed with our ouer great clemencie, contrarie to the manie aduises and requests of our subiects, aswell in parlement as otherwise: and therefore they also vnderstanding from our selfe, how desirous we were to haue some other meanes deuised by them in their seuerall places of parlement, to withstand these mischiefes intended both against our selfe, and the publike quiet state of our realme, and suertie of our good subiects, than by execution of the foresaid sentence, as was required: they did after their sundrie consultations apart, and conferences iointlie with one accord, in the names of all the lords of parlement, euen by the particular votes of them all assembled, and also of the commons with one vniuersall assent, representing the state of all our realme, at their seuerall times of accesse vnto vs, alledge, declare, and protest, that vpon their long, manie, & aduised consultations and conferences by our commandement, and for our satisfaction in that behalfe had, they could not by anie meanes find or deuise, how the suertie of our rotall person, and the preseruation of themselues and their posteritie, with the good state of the realme, might be prouided for and continued, without the publication and due execution of the said sentence.

Whereupon, being not onelie mooued to our grefe, but also ouercome with the earnest requests, declarations, and important reasons of all our said subiects, the nobles and commons of our realme, whose iudgement, knowledge, and naturall care of vs, and the whole realme, we know doth farre surmount all others, being not so interessed therin, and so iustlie to be esteemed: and perceiuing also the said sentence to haue béene honourablie, lawfullie, and iustlie giuen, agréeable to iustice and to the lawes of our realme: we did yéeld, and do according to this said statute by this our proclamation vnder our great seale of England, declare, notifie, and publish to all our loving subiects, and other persons whatsoeuer, that the said sentence and iudgement is giuen in maner aforesaid, to the intent, that they and euerie of them, by this our proclamation may haue full vnderstanding and knowledge thereof. We do also will you, that you returne this our proclamation into our court of Chancerie, as spéedilie as you maie conuenientlie, with the place and time of the proclaming thereof thereupon indorsed, whereof faile you not. In witnesse whereof, we haue caused this our proclamation to be made patent, and sealed with the great seale of England. At our manor of Richmont the fourth daie of December, the nine and twentith yeare of our reigne, and in the yeare of our Lord God, one thousand fiue hundred fourescore and six.

Now to conclude with a remembrance of perpetuities concerning the queens maiestie, of whose loning care and tender affection towards all hir faithfull subiects as we haue manifold testimonies in the historie of hir highnesse time, whereby their hearts are linked vnto hir maiestie with an indis-soluble knot of deserued loue and loialtie: so we maie not omit in anie case the publike witnesse of hir highnesse naturall care and mercifull prouidence ouer hir liege people, euen those of the poorer sort, vnto whome the comfortable streames of hir rare regard for their benefit and welfare, in a hard time of scarsitie, do most plentifullie flow. But because our barren and sapleſſe stile is insufficient, with conuenient dignitie to describe, naie not so much as to delineat or shadow out this incomparable pitie and pietie of hir highnesse tender heart to hir commons, I will surceasse to intermedle therein, reserving the same vnto the due consideration of euerie particular member of this bodie politike (whereof hir maiestie is the souereigne head) by the view and perusall of the proclamation and orders here annexed.

A true copie of the said proclamation concerning corne, &c.

THe quenes most excellent maiestie, foreseeing the generall dearth growne of corne & other victuals, partlie through the vnseasonablenesse of the yeare past, whereby want hath growne more in some countries than in others, but most of all generallie through the couetousnes & vncharitable greedines of such as be great cornemaisters & ingrosers of corne, vsing all the subtill meanes they can, to worke their owne present vnconscionable gaine against the rules of charitie, which hir maiestie of hir princelie care and loue towards hir people, vtterlie condemneth, and earnestlie desireth to remedie, for the releefe of the poorer sort. And therefore, hir maiestie with hir princelie care towards hir people, hauing (with the aduise of hir councell) had good consideration hereof, doth by this hir proclamation, giue expresse commandement and charge vnto all such to whom it shall or maie apperteine, that such good orders as hir maiestie hath commanded to be deuised for that purpose, and now also are sent to all parts of hir realme, be diligentlie and effectuallie put in speedie execution: signifieng withall vnto all hir good and loving subiects, that if anie shall be found obstinat or negligent in the due execution, or otherwise in the obseruation thereof, that then vpon due information and proofe thereof made vnto hir highnesse said councell, which she requireth not to be spared by anie, hauing iust cause of complaint, for respect of anie person, she hath giuen speciall commandement and order, that they shall be speedilie called to answer; & thereupon, according to the qualitie of their offenses, shall receiue sharpe punishment, whereby others maie take example to auoid the like contempt, negligence, or other defaults.

And although this dearth hath in sundrie parts of the realme first growne by the visitation of almightie God, in the alteration of seasonable weather this last yeare, which neuertheless of his great mercie hath not beene so extreme in this realme, as in manie other countries adioining, where the dearth is by manie occasions manifestlie knowne to be far greater than is in this relme hitherto, or by his goodnesse is like to be: yet it is manifestlie knowne the said dearth to haue bin wilfullie increased in verie manie places of this realme, not onelie by & through the couetousnes of manie ingrosers of corne & cornmaisters, but also by vnlawfull transportation of graine, & lacke also of preseruation of store in time requisit. Hir highnesse acknowledging this maner of Gods mercie and fauour in a more fauourable measure towards hir countrie and hir people, than to other forren parts neere adioining, hath thought good and necessarie, for a further remedie against the vncharitable couetousnesse of the cornemaisters, as cause shall require, to notifie, that if such as be the great cornemaisters and owners of graine, or of other necessarie victuals for food of the poore, shall not be willing, or do not performe these orders, whereby the poorer sort maie be releeued in the markets at reasonable prices; or that it shall appeare that other needfull victuals shall by couetousnesse of anie persons grow to excessiue prices, to the pinching of the poorer sort: then hir highnesse doth hereby signifie, that she will not onelie seuerelie punish the offendors for their cruell couetousnesse and offenses against hir orders; but will also for releefe of the excessiue prices of other needfull victuals, giue order that reasonable prices shall be set both on corne and other victuals, to be sold for the releefe of hir maiesties poore subiects, according both to hir prerogatiue roiall, and to the order of iustice, as by speciall law of parlement therefore made in the fiue and twentith yeare of the reigne of hir late noble and deare father king Henrie the eight, is speciallie in such cases prouided. Giuen at Greenewich the second daie of Januarie, one thousand fiue hundred fourescore and six, in the nine and twentith yeare of hir highnesse reigne.

Now the said orders before specified, being a matter of coherence (deuised by the speciall commandement of hir maiestie, for the releefe and staie of the present dearth of graine within the realme) and published at large, do here follow (agreeable to that which was sent from the court at Greenewich abroade into the realme, the second daie of Januarie, one thousand fiue hundred foure score and six, in the nine and twentith yere of hir maiesties reigne, by hir maiesties priuie councell) but abridged according to the annotations. And first; That the iustices shall diuide themselues into sundrie parts to execute these orders: To appoint sundrie iuries to inquire of things hereafter following: The oth of the iurors, with charge to inquire what number of persons be in the houses of them that haue store of corne: For badgers, hoggers, and carriers of corne: Maltmakers, bakers, and brewers: Buiers of corne to sell againe: Buiers of corne vpon the ground: Against such as shall refuse to declare the truth of the matters inquirable: Parties offending to appeare afore the councell: A consideration of all persons that haue corne, to determine how they shall serue the markets with such portions as they maie spare: The forme of the recognisance to be freelie taken.

An abridgment of the orders deuised for the releefe of the poore in this time of dearth, &c.

Orders to be obserued by such as shall be appointed to serue the markets with corne, for the releefe of the poore people first: To whome corne shall be sold, after that the poore are serued: No corne brought to the market vnsold, to be caried out of the towne: None to buie such kind of corne as they shall bring to sell, but by warrant vpon reasonable cause: No corne to be bought & to sell againe: No corne to be bought but in open market: Inquirie to be made against ingrosers: An order for all licences from the iustices of the peace, to be kept in a record: Regard to the bakers for keeping of the assise of bread: Bread faultie in anie excesse to be sold towards the releefe of the poore: No badger to buie corne but in open market, and with a sufficient licence in writing: The badgers to shew weekelie their books of buieng: No iustices seruant to be a badger, nor none other, but such as shall be licenced in open sessions: No badger, baker, brewer, or purueior, to buie graine, vntill an houre after the full market begin: Some iustices to be present in the market, to see the poore releeued vpon reasonable prices.

Where iustices are wanting in anie hundred for for to appoint some rich persons to supplie the want: That ministers and preachers exhort the rich sort to be liberall to helpe the poore with monie or victels needfull: To make malt of oates in countries where there hath beene vse thereof: No waste of bread corne superfluouslie, nor anie expense thereof but for feeding of people: None suffered to make starch of anie graine: Able poore people to be set to worke: Stocks of monie for prouision of works for poore people: Clothiers to continue their worke-folks: Souldiors hurt, and impotent people, to be relæued in their dwelling places: That no millers be suffered to be common buiers of corne, nor to sell meale, but to attend to the true grinding of the corne brought, & to vse measurable tole these deare seasons: Conferences to be had betwixt the iustices of peace in the shires, and the principall officers of cities and townes corporat for prouisions of graine, for the inhabitants in cities and corporat towns: Order for places exempted from the iurisdiction of the iustices of peace in the bodies of the shires: Regard to staie all transportation of graine out of the realme: Certificat to be made of the execution of these orders monethlie to the shiriffe, and he to certifie the same to the priuie councell within euerie fortie daies: To certifie what iustices be absent from the seruice, that such as without iust excuse shall not attend, maie be displaced, and their rooms, if there be need, supplied.

Starch.

The conclusion of these orders is this Ad verbum, That if anie shall offend against the true meaning of these instructions, or of anie part thereof, or shall vse anie sinister meane to the defrauding thereof, that such be seuerelie punished according to the lawes; and for such obstinat persons as shall not conforme themselues, the iustices shall at their pleasure bind them to appeare before the quéenes maiesties priuie councell by a daie certeine, there to be further delt with by seuere punishment, for the better example of all others.

An abridgment of the orders deuised for the releefe of the poore in this time of dearth, &c.

F. T. Now as Holinshed and such as with painfull care and loue to their countrie haue thought good before me, to knit vp the seuerall reigne of euerie seuerall king with a generalitie of the seuerall writers in that princes daies: so haue I béene importuned by manie of my frends, to knit vp the said whole history with a particular catalog of all such as haue purposelie in seuerall histories of this realme, or by the waie in the histories of other countries written of England and English matter. For which cause (with the title of other anonymall chronicles) I haue here for that purpose, by order of alphabet set downe the same. Wherein, although I shall not set downe euerie mans name, nor of what time & qualitie euerie one was (for he is not liuing I suppose that can do the same) yet hauing done my good will therein, and that more than perhaps some others would haue done, I praie thée to beare with the defaults, and accept that which I haue done and could do. And although perhaps I maie set downe one man twise, as first by his name, and then set downe the worke without his name, as another seuerall thing: yet is it not of purpose done, or to the end that I would make a great shew, and séeme ambitious of names or knowledge; but for that I haue not as yet atteined to that perfection, which hereafter I hope to do in distinguishing of the same. For Rome was not built in one daie, & yet if one daies foundation thereof had not bæne first laid, it had neuer béene after builded: and so to the matter.

A, Abbo Floriacensis liued in the time of Dunstane archbishop of Canturburie, to whome he dedicated his booke: Abbas Wiseburgensis, Nicholaus Adams liued in the daies of king Edward the first, Alfric Abbas, Alfric that gathered the liues of the saints in Saxonie, which I sometimes had, it maie be that these two were all one man; Alfridus Beuerlacensis thesaurarius whom Leland calleth Aluredus Fibroleganus; Alanus abbat of Tenkesburie, one of the foure that writ the Quadrilogium of Thomas Becket in the time of king John; Alexander Hessebiensis, he writ Epitome Britannicæ historiæ; Alexander Somersetensis, Alexander Staffordiensis, Aelius Spartianus, Alured or Alfred king of England in the yeare of Christ nine hundred and three, Adam Merimuth canon of Paules in the reigne of Richard the second, Anianus Marcellinus, Richardus Angeruil surnamed De Berie, bishop of Durham, died in the yeare of our Lord one thousand three hundred fortie and fiue; Antoninus, Arnold of London in the time of king Henrie the eight, Asserius Meneuensis, Aurelius or Aluredus Riualensis, Robert Auersberie.

B, Sir Nicholas Bacon knight lord képer of the great seale vnto quéene Elisabeth, Benedictus Claudiocestrensis, Balantine a Scot, William Baldwin liued in the time of king Edward the first, Stephan Batemaine died in the yere one thousand fiue hundred eightie and foure, Beda an English Saxon died in the yere of Christ seuen hundred thirtie and two; G. de Barrie archdeacon of S. Dauids writ the life of Remigius bishop of Lincolne, John Bale flourished in the time of Edward the first, Barnardus Andreas writ a chronicle intituled Liber Barnardi Andreæ Tolosati poetæ laureati regij historiographi de vita atque gestis Henrici septimi, in whose time he flourished; Robert Boston in the time of Edward the second, Rafe Baldocke bishop of London vnder Edward the second, Peter Baillet in the time of Henrie the fift, whose life he did write; Robert Bale recorder of London, he died in the yere of our Lord one thousand foure hundred three score and one, about the latter end of the reigne of Richard the second; Edmund Bedenhame writer of the chronicles of Rochester; John Bramus, and not Bromus as saith Bale, a monke of Tedsord; John Brackelow a Benedictine monke, in the yeare one thousand two hundred fourténe; Iohannes Brompton, historia vetus quam contulit Iornal. monasterio, as hath Mathew Parker In vitis episcop. Cantu. Ferdinando Blake liued in the yeare of Christ one thousand fiue hundred foure score and foure, Bodinus, John Bouchet a Frenchman of Aquitaine, Nicholas Brodingham or Brodringham, John Bosue of Burie, Blondus Foroliuiensis, Henrie Bradshaw borne in Chester a blacke monke there in the time of Henrie the eight, John Burgh a monke in the daies of K. Edward the third, Nicholas Bungeie borne in a towne of the same name in Northfolke in the daies of king Henrie the first, sir John Bourchier knight lord Barnes translated Froissard, Bullerus, Roger Bond, Thomas Buckhurst lord Buckhurst now liuing, Stephan Birchington, George Buckhanan liued in the yere of our Lord one thousand fiue hundred and foure score.

C, Thomas Castleford: sir William Cecill knight lord Burleigh lord treasuror of England now liuing, William Caxton liued in the daies of king Edward the fourth, Campbell, Carion a Germane, Caradocus Lancarnauensis liued in the daies of K. Stephan, Iulius Cæsar a Romane, John Capgraue borne in Kent an Augustine frier died in the fourth yere of king Edward the fourth, in the yeare of our Lord one thousand foure hundred three score and foure; Cornelius Hibernensis, Cornelius Tacitus, Albertus Crantz, John Caius died in the reigne of our quéene Elisabeth, William Camp-den now liuing, George Cauendish gentleman vsher vnto cardinall Wolsele, whose life he did write, John Clinu or Linu an Irishman, he flourished in the yere of Christ one thousand three hundred and fiftie, Rase Coggeshall abbat of Coggeshall in Esser liued in the time of king Henrie the third and writ the appendix to Radulphus Niger, Thomas Cooper bishop of Winchester now liuing, Richard Carguent flourished in the daies of king Edward the first, Thomas Churchyard now liuing. D, Demetrius a Britaine, Diodorus Siculus, Dionysius, Dion Cassius, Thomas Dando a Carmelit frier of Marleborow, writ the life of Alphred king of Percia or rather of west Sarons, and liued in the time of king Henrie the first; Diouionensis, Dolensis writ De laudibus Britonum.

E, Edmerus a monke of Canturburie liued in the time of Henrie the second; Elwardus, Eutropius a Romane priest, Enguerrant de Monstrellet a Frenchman, and scholer in Paris in the time of king Henrie the fift; Edmund Campian a Iesuit brought vp in Oxford, & executed in the yere of our Lord 1581; John Euersden a monke of Burie flourished in the time of king Edward the first, and so continued in the time of king Edward the third; Ernulphus bishop of Rochester liued in the time of king Henrie the second, and compiled Textus Roffensis, conteining the grants of the lands to the same house, & the copies of sundrie ancient lawes in the Saxon tong, Thomas Elmeham prior of Lenton.

F, Robert Fabian alderman of London, liued in the time of Henrie the seuenth, Geffreie Fenton now liuing; Samuell and Abraham Flemings both liuing, brethren by one bellie, and Londoners borne, Quorum prior historiolam quandam de regimine Mariæ nuper Anglorũ principis, eámq; elegantem, Latino idiomate (nunquã tamẽ excusam) cõtexuit: posterior in hisce chronicis detergẽdis atque dilatandis, vna cum vberrimorũ indicum accessione, plurimùm desudauit; Iohannes Fibernis or Bever writ the historie of Westminster, John Froissart, Ferculphus, Flaccus Albinus or Alcuinus, Philip Flattesberie a worthie Irish gentleman flourished in the yere 1517, John Fourdon a Scot, John Foxe a learned diuine, that writ the Acts and Monuments, and is now liuing; George Ferres liuing in the yere of our Lord one thousand fiue hundred three score and eight, Fabius Questor, Florentius Wigornius died about the yeare of our Lord one thousand one hundred and eighténe, being about the eightéenth yeare of king Henrie the first.

G, Robert Gagwin a Frenchman, John Greie bishop of Norwich in king Johns time, Thomas Gardiner a monke of Westminster in the time of Henrie the eight; Robert Glouer by office named Somerset now liuing a most rare antiquarie, and worthily deseruing to be named Scientissimus antiquitatũ; Francis Guiciardine an Italian liuing in the yeare of our Lord one thousand fiue hundred three score and eighténe, Laurence Guiciardine, Gildas Sapiens, Gildas Cambrensis, Gildas Badonicus, Gildas Albanius, Geffreie of Munmouth liued in the time of king Stephan, John Gower knight died about the second of Henrie the fourth, Giraldus Cambrensis liued in the time of Henrie the second, Richard the first, and king John; Nicholas Gill a Frenchman, Goccelinus first a monke of saint Bertine beyond the seas, and after a monke of Canturburie; Giraldus Cornubiensis De gestis Anglorum, Gulielmus Malmsberie in the daies of K. Stephan, Gulielmus Parus alias Gulielmus Nouoburgensis or Newberie, Geruasius Dorobernensis. Geruasius Tilberiensis, Richard Grafton in the time of queene Elisabeth, Robert Greene, Guido de Columna.

H, John Hales, Hugo Albus Petroburgensis, in the time of king John; John Harding esquier liued in the daies of Edward the fourth, Edward Hall a counsellor of Greies inne flourished in the time of Henrie the eight and Edward the first, Abrahamus Hartwellus Academicus Cantab. that writ in verse Regina literata; Henrie of Marleborow, Gualter Hemigsford a monke of Gisborne in the daies of Edward the third, Hector Boetius a Scot, Hirmannus archdeacon in the yeare of our Lord one thousand three score and ten, Herbert de Bolham one of the foure that writ the life of Thomas Becket, Hoclet one that liued in the time of Henrie the first in the yeare of our Lord one thousand foure hundred fiftie and foure, John de Heram and Richard de Heram liued in the daies of king Richard the first, Wilfrid Holme vnder Henrie the eight, Raphaell Holinshed in the time of queene Elisabeth, William Harrison now liuing, John Harrison doctor of arts and of physicke, Rase Higden alias Cestrensis flourished in the time of Edward the third, John Higgins now liuing, Roger Houeden liued in the time of king John, Hugo de sancto Victore; Hugo Abbas Petroburgensis, it maie be that Hugo Abbas before & this Hugo were one man, although for this time I suppose the contrarie; Hugo de Genesis an Italian, John Hooker alias Vowell now liuing.

I, Iehan de Bauge, Iohannes Maior a Scot, Iohannes Seuerianus, Iohannes Carnotensis one of the foure that writ the Quadrilogium of the life of Thomas Becket, Iohannes Anglicus writ Historiam aureã, Iehan Maior de Belgis, Iohannes Londonienſis, John a monke of Ford, Iossridus Crowlandensis, Ingulfus abbat of Crowland in the daies of William Conqueror, Thomas Ichingham whome Leland calleth Thomas Vicanius, Iosephus Domnonienſis, Joceline of Furneis, Peter de Icham or Icham a monke, whose booke beginneth Non solum audiendis sacræ scripturæ verbis aurem sedulus auditor accomodare tenetur, which booke Caius de antiquitate Cantab. doth ascribe to Robert Kemington, as after shall appeare; Iulius Capitolinus In vita Antonij Pij.

K, Albertus Krantz a Dane, Kentigernus, Henrie Knighton liued in the time of king Richard the second. L, Lanfrancus that writ a chronicle in Welch, Stephan Langton bishop of Canturburie writ the life of king Richard the first, John Leland in the time of Henrie the eight and Edward the first, William Lambard esquire now liuing, and deseruing well of all antiquitie; George Lillie, Humfreie Lhoid, he died in the time of queene Elisabeth; Piers de Longtoft, Thomas Lanquet, John Lesle a Scot bishop of Rosse in Scotland now liuing, John Langden bishop of Rochester.

M, Marcerius an Englishman, of whom John Baconthorpe speaketh in the prolog of the fourth booke of Senten. quæst. 10. John Maluerne monke of Worcester continued Ranulphus in the yeare of Christ, one thousand three hundred three score and sirténe; Marianus Scotus liued about the yeare of Christ one thousand foure score and ten, Matthew Paris, Matthew Westminster alias Flores historiarum a monke of Westminster, and liued in the time of king Edward the third; Thomas More knight lord chancellor of England, Thomas de la More knight liued in the daies of Edward the second, Radulphus Marham, Merlinus Ambrosius, Merlinus Sylueſter, Melkinus, Nicholas Montacute liued in the time of Henrie the first, Edmund Molineux now liuing, Sebastian Munster a Germane.

N, Nennius Helius brother to Cassiuelane & Lud k ings of Britaine, Nennius Banchorensis, Nauclerus Alexander Neuill now liuing, Laurence Nowell died about the sixtéenth yere of queene Elisabeth,

Ninianus

Ninianus that wrote Eulogium. O, Osbert de Clare prior of Westminster, Osbernus Dorobernensis in the time of William the Conqueror, Thomas Otterborne a Franciscan or greie frier lived in the time of Henrie the fift, Abraham Ortuelius now living a Fleming; Christopher Ocland now living sometime schoolemaister in Southwarke.

P, William Pakington clerke & treasurer to the blacke prince of his household in Gascoigne, Patricius Consul, Ioannes de Prato a writer of Aquitaine & protonotarie, Paulus Aemilius, Petrus Blessensis archdeacon of Bath, Philip de Comines alias monsieur de Argentone secretarie to Charles duke of Burgoine, Polydor Virgill an Urbinat Italian and canon of Paules in the daies of Henrie the eight, Paulus Iouius an Italian bishop of Nucerne, John Pike, John Price knight died in the reigne of quéene Elisabeth, William Paten now living, John Proctor schoolemaister of Tunbridge to whom I was sometime scholer, Ptolomeus, Dauid Powell now living.

R, John Read in the time of Edward the first, John Rastall, Radulphus Londoniensis, Radulphus Niger lived in the daies of king Henrie the third, Radulphus de Diceto deane of Paules in London in the time of king John, Reutha king of Scots, Michaell Ricius, William Rishanger a monke of saint Albons in the daies of Edward the second, Richeffer a monke of Westminster lived in the time of Edward the third, and wrote an excellent chronicle beginning at the comming of the Saxons in the yeare of our Lord foure hundred fortie and nine, & continued it vntill the yeare one thousand three hundred fortie and eight, conteining eight hundred fourescore and nineteene yeares; Richardus Deuisiensis, Richardus Cadneus, Richardus Eliensis whose storie beginneth Cùm animaduerterem excellentiam Elienſis inſulæ, &c. Richardus Eliensis an other from the former that wrote an other historie of Elie, Robert abbat of saint Michaels mount florished in the yeare of Christ one thousand fiue hundred fiftie and eight; Robertus Montensis, Robertus sine cognomento, Robertus Remingtonus De geſtis Anglorum, cuius initium, Non ſolum audiendis ſacræ ſcripturæ verbis, &c. This saieth Caius In antiquitate Cantabrigiæ. But others attribute that worke to Peter Ickam, See before in the letter I.

Robert Record living in the time of quéene Marie, Robert bishop of Hereford which lived in the yeare of our redemption one thousand three scoze and twelue, Robertus de Paterna that wrote the register of Orford, Robert a prior of Shrewsburie, Roger of Abindon, Roger of Winsore. Roger de Windore, Roger of Chester lived in the daies of Edward the third, John Rouse borne in Warwikeshire lived in the daies of Henrie the seuenth, and being a canon of Osnete died at Warwike in the yeare of our Lord one thousand foure hundred fourescore and eleuen, Thomas Rudborne archdeacon of Sudberie after bishop of S. Dauids in Wales lived in the time of Henrie the fourth, Henrie the fift, and Henrie the first; Thomas Rudborne an other from the former was a monke of Winchester and followed manie other authors, amongst which was the said Thomas Rudborne bishop of S. Dauids.

S, Saxo Grammaticus a Dane, Samuel Britannus, Sextus Aurelius, Sentleger, Edward Segeswike now living, Iohannes Sulgenus or Sullenus, Solinus, Sigebertus Gemblacensis, Thomas Spot who lived in the reigne of Edward the first, Antonius Sabellicus a Venetian, John Sleidan a Germane, Richard Sowthwell, Reginald Scot now living, Simon Dunelmensis, John Stow now living, John Knish a Cornish man in the daies of Henrie the eight, Richard Stanihurst borne in Ireland now living, Sharton now living, John Swapham, Stephanides alias Fitzstephan. T, Titus Liuius Patauiensis, Titus Liuius Foroliuiensis an Italian lived in the time of Henrie the fift, John Tartor a monke of Burie, Andrew Theuet a Frenchman, Nicholas Triuet a blacke frier borne in Northfolke sonne to sir Thomas Triuet knight one of the kings iustices lived in the daies of Edward the third, and died in the yeare of our Lord one thousand three hundred twentie and eight; John Tilberie florished in the yere of Christ one thousand one hundred fourescore and ten; John Treuisa a Cornishman préest and vicar of Barkleie, Telesinus a Briton, Francis Boteuile alias Thin now living, Brian Duke knight lived in the daies of Henrie the eight, John Twine died in the reigne of quéene Elisabeth, William Thorne lived in the daies of Richard the second, Richard Turpin borne of a worshipfull familie in England serued in the garison of Calis, he died in the yeare of our Lord one thousand fiue hundred fortie and one; Tobias Roffensis, Turgotus which lived in the yeare of Christ one thousand ninetie and eight in the time of William Rufus wrote a chronicle of Durham.

V, Veremund a Spaniard, Raphaell Volateran, Giouanni Vilani a Florentine, Ponticus Virunnius an Italian, John Ufford, John Uton. W, John Whethamsted otherwise called Frumentarius a learned man abbat of S. Albons lived in the daies of Henrie the first, Roger Wall an herald who in Latine writ the doings of Henrie the fift, Thomas Walsingham a monke of the abbeie of S. Albons lived in the reigne of Henrie the first, William of Riuall lived in the age of king Stephan, Willielmus Cantuariensis one of the foure that wrote the Quadrilogium of Thomas Becket lived in the time of king John, Willielmus Gemeticensis, Willielmus filius Stephani a clerke of the Chancerie and deane of the chapell of Thomas Becket in the daies of Henrie the second, Willielmus Summersetensis, Willielmus Crowlandensis (for the other Williams see in the letter G, in the name of Gulielmus) Thomas Wike canon of Osnete, John Walworth, Walterus Excestrensis, Walterus Couentrensis.

Annales Burtonenses, Memoriale historiarum, Chronica Dunstable, Chronicle of Tinmouth, Chronicles of S. Albons, Deflorationes Galfridi, Historia obsidionis Eliensis insulæ, Chronica, cuius initium, Calendarium Bruti, Chronicle beginning Rex Pictorum, Chronica Westmonast. Chronicle beginning In diebus ſanctiſſimi regis Edwardi, Chronicle beginning Aeneas cum Aſcanio, Chronica chronicorũ, Supplementum chronicorum, Fasciculus temporũ, Historia Richardi secundi beginning De parte Bruti, Eulogiũ, Historia Iornalensis, Historia Carina written in Latine compiled in the thirteenth yeare of Richard the second by whom it was caused to be written, as the title declareth, which for that it sheweth no name of the author, and for that maister For borowed the same of maister Carie citizen of London, maister For in his Acts and Monuments the second edition calleth the same booke Historia Carina.

Anonymall or nameleſſe chronicles, treating wholie or in part of England.

The epitome of chronicles from Brute to Henrie 6. beginning Ab origine mundi concurrunt anni ſecundũ Hebræos, 6646. Chronicle beginning Chronicorũ verò quæ ſunt imagines hiſtoriarum, Chronicle of genealogies beginning Cuilibet principi congruum, The chronicles of S. Swithin, The commentaries of Hide, The continuances of Roger Houeden beginning Excerpta ex dictis viri religioſi, An other chronicle of S. Albons beginning Fecit rex Edwardus tertius comites, Hiſtoria ſtoria regia vel ſancti Edmundi, Chronicle of Elie beginning Anno ab incarnatione dominica, 616. qui eſt annus 21, ex quo Auguſtinus cum ſocijs ad prædicandum genti Anglorum miſſus eſt, Hiſtoria Anglorum beginning Conſiderans hiſtoriæ Britonum, Pictorum, Scotorum, Saxonum, Anglorum, Danorum, & Normannorũ prolixitatem, &c. Le mer des hiſtories, Les annales de France, Les annales d'Acquitaine, Les grand cronicqz de Britane, Les petit cronicqz de Britane, Les cronicqz de Normandi, Le Roſarie, Les genelogies des roys, Cronicles de Flandres, The chronicles of London, The chronicle called Brute, The Saxon chronicle of the church of Worceſter, The Saxon chronicle of the abbete of Peterborrow, The Saxon chronicle written in the yeare of Chriſt eight hundred foure ſcore and fiue, The chronicles of England. Thus far this catalog. Now peraduenture ſome will loke for a rehearſall omnigatherum of ſuch as haue written in the reigne of our bleſſed ſouereigne: but herein as it paſſeth our poſſibilitie to ſatiſfie their expectation, their number being infinit, and manie of them vnknowne and vnworthie of remembrance: ſo it were to be wiſhed that ſome fauourer of learned mens fame, would compriſe their names and works in a particular volume, therein imitating either the order of Bale, or Geſner; or elſe the commendable method of John James the Friſlander, printed at Tigurie one thouſand fiue hundred foureſcore and three, either of which courſes being taken would well ſerue the turne.

The concluſion of A. F.

✠ Thus far (bleſſed be Chriſt) the ertent of Engliſh chronicles; a long labour, of great care and expenſe: howbeit at length conquered and ouercome, by the benefit of his grace who enableth vs to go through with all things that be good: his name be praiſed therefore. Wherein if the helpe of ſuch as are furniſhed with varietie of knowledge, or as by gorgeous ſhew of words and rich pompe of phraſe pretend profound ſkill, had bene as forward to aduance this worke (being of vnexpected magnitude by means of the multitude of contents) as ſome of low ſaile, willing to laie out their poze talent, haue affoorded what furtherance they were able (ſomewhat to the ſatiſfieng of thoſe honeſt minded men and parteners, at whoſe great coſts and charges the ſame is now newlie printed, though not to their full contentment, who were euer deſirous and diuerſlie made aſſaies to haue it ſo abſolute, as nothing might want of due perfection, if the meanes might haue bene obteined) the chronicles of England, both for matter & maner, had bene comparable to anie hiſtorie or annals in Chriſtendome. Howbeit perfected as it is, though not with exquiſit curiouſnes to pleaſe euerie fickle fanſie, yet according to the proportion of ſkill vouchſafed of God to the dealers therein (men of commendable diligence though not of deepeſt iudgement) ſomewhat to ſatiſfie the well affected and indifferent mind, the ſame is now come abrode, yelding matter no leſſe manifold than the ſpring doth floures, and the ſame maruellous frutefull, if they haue their right vſe and due application: which indeed is the verie end of hiſtories and chronicles. And ſo craning a fauorable acceptation of this tedious trauell, with a toleration of all ſuch defaults as haplie therein lie hidden, and by diligent reading maie ſone be ſpied; we with that they which beſt maie, would once in their life grow reſolute and at a point, in this laudable kind of ſtudie (moſt neceſſarie, next to the word of God, for common knowledge) little or much to exerciſe their head and hand. Finallie beſeeching God to bleſſe the realme of England, and the pretious iewell of the ſame (euen good quæne Eliſabeth) to ſaue as the apple of his eie; to protect hir with the target of his power againſt all the pernicious practiſes of ſatans inſtruments; to lengthen the lines of hir highneſſe honorable counſellors, by whoſe vigilant policie this whole land fareth the better; in preuenting, intercepting and making fruſtrat (God directing and proſpering their conſultations and proceedings) all the attempts of traitors, to whom O Lord in vengeance giue the iudgement of Iudas, as they haue bene partakers of his ſinne; let them be intangled and taken in the traps of their trecheries, and ſwallowed vp in the ſeas of deſerued confuſion, that they be no more a familie. And we beſeech God to increaſe the multitude of loiall ſubiects, to make them ſtrong in faith towards him, and in loue one with another, that the goſpell (which is the doctrine of pacification and obedience) maie be glorified in the commonwealth of England, a corner of the world, O Lord, which thou haſt ſingled out for the magnifieng of thy maieſtie, and wherof we praie thee to giue vs a dailie remembrance: ſo ſhall we make conſcience of ſin, & addict our ſelues to the exerciſes of righteouſneſſe, Amen.

FINIS.

The third table for the Chronicles of England from the conqueſt vntill this preſent regiment: wherin the reader is to obſerue theſe notes for his better direction; namelie, to ſeeke for the ſurnames of perſons as more commonlie knowne than the proper; and alſo when the name faileth to looke for the dignitie, title, office and degree of ſuch perſons; as Armenia, Cipriots, Spaine, France, Portingall, Nauarre, Denmarke, &c; if they were kings: Archbiſhop, Biſhop, Pope, Car*nall, Legat, &c; if they were Clergiemen: Chancellors, Treaſurors, Lord high conſtables, Lord wardens* of the cinque ports, &c; Duke, Earle, Marqueſſe, Queene, Ducheſſe, Counteſſe, &c; if they were great ſtates: Maior, Sargents at law, officers, &c: if they were of that degree: knights and eſquires excepted, who as they were of renowme, are accordinglie noted by their vſuall names. Likewiſe for ſuch as haue beene executed as notorious offendors againſt the prince and the ſtate, to come to the knowledge of their names, looke for the qualitie of their offenſe; as counterfeting, coineclippers, conſpiracie and conſpirators, murther and murtherers, rebellion and rebels, treaſon and traitors, preeſts ſeminaric, &c: of all which this table affoordeth infinit examples. Finallie, whereſoeuer you find this word (Note) there dooth matter of conſideration come to hand.

If the reader be not ſatiſfied with this table, let him not blame the order, but his owne conceipt. Gathered by Abraham Fleming.

A.

Abbaſie of Wincheſter obteined for monie, 21, a 40
Abbat Ageinothus, ¶ See Ageinothus. Of Battell in reſcuing Wincheſcete is put to flight, 427, a 50. Egelſin. ¶ See Egelſin. Egelwine. ¶ See Egelwine. Feckham of Weſtminſter inſtalled, 1132, b 20. Frederike. ¶ See Frederike. Joachim, a man of great fame, 126, a 10. Of Glaſtenburie an erls ſon, 42, a 60. Loſauage. ¶ See Loſauage. Paule. ¶ See Paule. Of ſaint Auguſtine capteine of an armie, 2 a 10. Of S. Edmundſburie, Robert Lou an earls ſonne, 20, a 40. Thurſtan. ¶ See Thurſtan. Of Weſtminſter dieth ſuddenlie, 516, b 30. ¶ See Conſpiracie.
Abbats ordeined by William Rufus, 20, a 60. They and priors deprined, and whie, 30, b 10. Not to be made knights, &c: note, 30, b 50
Abbie of Battell with the roll thereof, 3, 4, 5. The firſt of white monks when and by whom founded, 26, a 60. Of S. Albons repared by Lanfranke, 18, a 60
Abbies builded three by duke William, 15, a 40. Founded in king Stephans time, 64, b 60 Eleuen let out to farme, 26, a 40. Searched and ranſacked at duke Williams commandement, 8, b 50. Suppreſſed, 945, b 50, 946, b 10, 947, b 50. Their lands promiſed by queene Marie to be reſtored: note, 1127, b 10, &c. ¶ See Churches and Nunneries.
Abiuration for ſpeking againſt the popes authoritie, 898, b 30. Of biſhop Pecocke, 646, a 60. ¶ See Biſhop Pecocke.
Abſolution to be purchaſed from Rome, 214, b 60. Of the clergie ſued for from Rome, 201, b 60. Of Oxford by legat Otho, 222, a 50. For vowes & other offenſes, 257, b 60. For an oth obteined, 313, b 60. For the offenſe of diſobedience, 201, b 10. Pronounced by cardinall Poole to the parlement houſe, 1123, b 10
Aburgauennie lord arreigned at Weſtminſter, 872, b 10. Aſſembleth a power againſt Wiat, & putteth them to flight, 1094, a 10, b 20
Accuſation falſe for a time preuailed but in fine fruſtrate: note, 223, b 50, 60. Of a iuſtice for taking of bribes, 243, b 50. Of two noble men that had the cuſtodie of the king and queene of Scots, 251, a 30. Againſt prince Henrie to king Henrie the fourth his father, 539, a 10. Vniuſt redoundeth to the accuſants ſhame, 937, b 60. Interchangable and doubtfull tried by combat: note, 992, b 60, 993, a 10. Falſe puniſhed, 968, a 50. By the philozie: note, 1132, b 30. Of a maiſter againſt his ſeruant whereof followed ſecret vengeance, 1084, b 20, 30
Acon knight his rebellion, ſurpriſed, he and his complices condemned of treaſon and hereſie, 544, a 60, b 40
Adela married to Richard Henrie the ſecond his ſon, 94, a 30
Adelicia. ¶ See Queene.
Admonition. ¶ See Warning.
Adnothus maſter of the hoſpitall to king Harold ſlaine in fight 6, a 60
Aduenturers, 875, b 10. Soldiers and whie ſo called, 880, b 60, 881, a 10. Their capteine ſlaine, and they diſcomfited, 882, b 10. Good ſeruitors, 882, b 60. Slaine and diſcomfited, their ſmall end, 883, b 50. ¶ See Kreekers.
Aduiſe. ¶ See Emperour.
Aduiterie puniſhed with hanging, 211, b 60. Seuerelie corrected in a maiors time of London, 440, b 10. ¶ See Inceſt and Whoredome.
Affinitie ¶ See Freendſhip and Marriage.
Agatha the mother of Edgar Etheling driuen by tempeſt into Scotland, 6, a 30
Ageimarus biſhop of Thetford deposed and whie, 9, a 20
Ageinothus abbat of Glaſtenburie, 5, a 10
Agincourt battell, 552, b 60. When fought, 618, b 20. The number of the ſlaine, noblemen priſoners, 555, a 50, 60, b 10, &c.
Agrément. ¶ See Peace.
Aire red as though on fier, 38, a 40. Full of clouds, red, yellow, & greene, 102, b 60. Buddie of colour as though it burned and of a ſanguine hue, 142, a 10. Seemed to be on a bright fier, 167, a 40. ¶ See Sights.
Aiſle a towne, burned by the Engliſh, 810, b 30
Alane earle of Britaine aduanced by duke William his vncle, 7, a 60
Alane the blacke earle, illaieſſe, 7, b 20
Alane le Rous, illaieſſe, 7, b 20
Alan the ſon of Stephan, 7, b 30
Alanſon beſieged & yelded vp, 561, a 40
Albemarle beſieged by French king, 146, b 30. Wonne by the earle of Flanders, 88, b 30
Albemarle William, whoſe ſon ſhould haue beene made king of England, 22, a 10
Alberike ruler of Northumberland, 13, a 40
Albertus de Laſco, &c: his coming into England, 1353, b 40. Prepareth for his returne into Poland, 1354, b 60. Deſcribed, 1355, a 10. Intertained at Oxford, 50, 60, b 10. His departing thenſe, 20. ¶ See Polander.
Alderman of London his authoritie, 120, a 30. Seuen deceaſed within the ſpace of ten moneths, 1209, b 60, 1132, b 10 ¶ See Almhouſes, Charitie, Londoners, and Schoole.
Aldgitha queene, ſiſter to Edwin & Mercia ſent to Cheſter, 1, a 30
Aldred archbiſhop of Yorke, 1, a 40. Crowneth duke William, 1, b 20. And Mawd queene, 6, a 60. Dieth for griefe, b 60.
Alexander king of Scots deceaſſeth, the manner thereof, 283, a 10
Alexander biſhop of Lincolne fled into Scotland, 8, a 30
Alexander Robert. ¶ See Juſts triumphant.
Alexander. ¶ See Pope.
Alice the daughter of erle Morteine ſold for monie, 84, a 60,
Allum deere, 791
Almaine great and tall incountred withall by the duke of Suffolke, 833, b 60, 834, a 10
Almes. ¶ See Charitie.
Almeſhouſes for the poore, 1311, b 20. Within Biſhopſgate, 1062, b 30. Of Dauid Smith for poore widows, 1375, b 50, 1376. For the relefe of the poore, 1377, b 30
Almiramumoli king of the Saracens feineth himſelfe dead, 124, a 20
Altars taken downe and tables ſet in their roome, 1062, b 10
Ambaſſadour into Denmarke, 892, b 10. 1348. a 20, 30, &c. Sent into France, 110, b 10, 167, a 50, 205, a 60, 209, a 20, 257, a 20, 336, a 20, 351, a 50, 477, a 30, 485, b 30, 546, b 30, 849, a 10, &c. 1229, a 10, a 10, 20, 1129, a 50, 1380, a 50, 60, 1381, all. 1382, a 10, &c.

¶ Sée Sackuill. Sent to the generall councell, they come to the councell, 236, b 60. At Cambzeie, 260, b 10. Sent into Germanie, 292, b 20. Sent to the king of Almaigne, 260, b 60. To Philip archduke of Burgogne, 777, a 50. To the pope, 242, a 20, 365, a 50, 380, a 20, 535, a 20, 30, 381, b 10, 237, a 60, 205, b 10, 179, b 60, 187, a 50, b 30, 29, a 50, 31, b 10, 20, &c. Sent to the king of Scots, 297, b 20, 162, a 60, 163, b 30, 1402, b 30. Sent into Spaine, 248, b 30. To the emperour Charles, 897, b 60. The answer which they receiue, 899, a 10. Sent from Alfonse king of Castile, &c: 100, b 50. Sent from the king of Connagh in Ireland, 96, b 40. Sent from the emperour, 1093, a 30, 961, a 50, 894, a 30, 891, a 60, 839, a 60: note, 791, a 30, 35, a 10, 38, a 10, 75, a 60. Out of France into England, 1238, a 20. From the K. of Spaine, 808, b 60, 894, a 60, b 10. From the French king with a traine, 848, a 40, 50, 60, 771, a 50, 546, b 30, 1315, b 60, 1316, a 10, 518, a 30, 474, b 40, 350, b 60, 282, b 50, 334, b 60. From the good townes in Flanders, 368, a 60. From the king of Hungarie, 894, b 40. Out of Muscouie, 1132, b 60, 1211, b 50, 60. From the duke of Burgogne, 693, b 30, 60. From the pope, 336, a 10. Out of Scotland, 705, a 30, 518, a 60, 159, b 60, 875, b 40. From Swethen about a marriage, 1185, a 60, b 10
Ambassadoz ligier of Spaine. ¶ Sée Mendoza.
Ambassage disdainefull, 545, a 10. Roiall into France, 477, a 60
Amberuilliers castell taken, 589, a 60
Amphibalus bodie found and buried at saint Albons, 101, b 30
Amphibologie of this word daughter, 156, b 10
Ambition was Anselme loth to be suspected of, 28, a 10. Of earle Robert of Northumberland, 22, b 10. Of earle John, 132, b 40. In the French and Spanish kings aspiring to the empire, 851, a 40, &c. Of archbishop Thurstane notable, 38, b 10. Of bishop Longchampe, 129, a 10. Of an old aged bishop of Durham: note, 119, b 40, 50, 60. Of earles suing to be kings, 1, a 30. Of two archbishops, 39, b 60. Of bishops, 38, b 20. Contentious, 121, a 30. Of two monks labouring for an abbasie, 18, b 60. Of mans nature, 76, a 40, 714, a 30. The working thereof, 739, b 60. And fruits thereof: noted in Robert, 12, a 30. It will haue a fall: note, 734, b 60. Note the whole storie, from page 1083, a 60, b 10, &c. 1084, b 10, &c. ¶ Sée Solim and Turke.
Amsterdam a towne of great concourse and commerce, inexpugnable, 1430, b 30, 50
Anabaptists dw penance and are burned, 946, a 40, 50. Their hereties, recantation, and penance at Pauls crosse, 1260, b 10, 20, 30, &c. Banished. 1261, b 20. Burned in Smithfield, 1261, b 40. Manie in Amsterdam, 1430, b 40
Anger and what the heat thereof dzineth a man vnto: note, 211, b 10. ¶ Sée Enuie.
Angiers citie taken, 158, b 30. Wone of king John by assault, 170, a 30. And by him repared, 170, b 30
Angleseie inuironed with the sea, 23, a 40
Angolesme recouered by the Frenchmen, 369, a 30
Anion, a rode made thereinto by the duke of Clarence, 579, b 60
Anne Askew and others arreigned and acquited, 968, b 10, &c.
Anne Bullen created marchionesse of Penbzoke, 928, b 30. ¶ Sée Queene.
Anne of Cleeue, a marriage betweene hir and king Henrie the eight concluded, 947, b 60. She is receiued at Calis, landeth in Kent, the ozder of hir receiuing on Black heath, 948, a 40, b 30. The meeting of hir and the king, hir chariot wherein she rode all hir iournie, hir welcome to Greenewich, 949,, a 50, b 20, 60. She is married to king Henrie the eight, 950, a 10, &c. At queene Maries cozonation, 1091, a 30. Deceaseth, 1133, b 60
Annates fozbidden to be paid to the pope, 928, a 40
Annuities. ¶ Sée Patents.
Anselme archbishop of Canturburie elected, 20, a 60. At strife with William Rufus, and whie, 24, a 10. His shift foz his paiment to William Rufus and his honest satisfaction, 22, b 10. ¶ Sée Archbishop. Pzepareth to auoid the realme by ship, and complaineth to the pope of William Rufus, 26, a 10. His admonition from Rome to William Rufus, returneth into England, 27, b 60. At the instance of Hugh earle of Chester commeth ouer into England, 28, a 10. Restozed home, 28, b 20. Goeth to Rome, 31, b 20. Denieth to dw homage to Henrie the first: note, 29, a 50. Holdeth a councell at Westminster: note, and what was there decreed, 30, a 60. Refuseth to consecrat the bishops inuested by the king. 31, a 60. Wanished, and his see seized vpon into the kings hands, 32, a 10. Received into Henrie the firsts fauour and returneth home, 33, b 20, 30. Held a synod, and what was there decreed, 34, b 10. Wziteth to pope Paschall that he would not send archbishop Thomas of yozke his pall, 35, a 20. His curtle feared of king Henrie the first and his bishops, 36, b 30. He falleth sicke, 35, b 60. His death, and what countrie man he was, 36, a 30
Antedating of the kings seale treasonable and so executed, 953, a 20
Anticipation. ¶ Sée Subsidie.
Antipope, 421, a 50, b 50, 475, a 10, 535, a 10, 24, b 20. ¶ Sée Fitzleo, Pope, and Schisme.
Antiquitie reuerenced, note the meaning of the proclamation, 1321, b 30. Presented vnto queene Elisabeth at Nozwich, 1293, b 30, 1294, a 60, b 10
Antwerpe entred into by the Spaniards who plaied the cruell tyzants, 1263, a 10. Interteineth the duke of Mansion right roiallie: note, 1332, 1333, &c: to 1344, a 10. Reioiseth at the duke of Mansions comming, 1331, a 60. ¶ Sée Duke of Mansion.
Apparell of king Henrie the eight at his cozonation, 801, a 40. Running at the ring, 805, b 60. Of him and his nobles going to meet Maximilian, 820, a 10, 20. After the taking of Tournie, 822, b 60. Sumptuous at queene Annes cozonation, 931, a 10, &c. b 60. Of the duke of Mansion whereat the French wondered, 1337, a 10. Of William Rufus counted gozgious then, but now verie simple, 27, b 40. Of Edward the second gozgious and triumphant, 322, a 20. Sumptuous of Richard the second, 501, b 40. Of sir John Arundell verie sumptuous, 423, b 50. Strange of yzince Henrie, sonne to Henrie the fourth, 539, a 30. Gozgious of Richard the seconds court: note, at the verie end of his stozie, 544. Of Edward the fourth at an interview with the French king, 699, a 60, b 10, &c. Sumptuous of the earle of Nozthumberland, 791, a 60. Sumptuous of the duke of Buckingham, 801, a 10. Of great estates, 825, a 20. Statelie in France at a tilt, 834, a 30. Of the earle of Surie receiuing the French kings ambassadozs, 148, a 40. Statelie of the duchie of Wzabant, 1336, a 20. Of the monsieur of Wzabant, 1333, b 60. Of the king of England and France at an interuiew, 851, a 50, b 60, 859, a 60, 860, a 20, 30, 40. Right gozgious in a shew, 807, b 40. Faire suites giuen by king John and the archbishop of Canturburie to their seruants: note, 163, a 60. Disguised soldiers in womens apparell: note, 1188, b 40. Of women wherein a bishop disguiseth himselfe, 132, a 10. Costlie fozbidden, 111, b 40. In act foz it, 353, a 40, 396, b 40. Of a knight all not wozth foure shillings, 1099, b 20. Changed from robes to rags: note, 460, b 30. ¶ Sée Maske.
Apparition. ¶ Sée Vision.
Appeales to Rome, 213, a 40, 133, a 60, 98, a 50, 210, a 30. Fozbidden, &c, 74, a 30. Of the yzince of Wales before the French king, 401, a 20
Appletreé. ¶ Sée Gun.
Apzentises at what time admitted to fellowships of companies, 120, a 20
Aques besieged by earle Richard, Henrie the seconds sonne, 99, b 40
Aquitane full of warre, 403, a 50. The grant thereof to the duke of Lancaster reuoked, 485, b 10. Recouered by the French, the dignitie and state of that dukedome, 641, a 40, 50
Arbitrement of certeine graue persons in the strife betweene William Rufus and his brother Robert reiected, and whie, 21, a 60
Archbishop Aldzed submitteth himselfe to duke William, 1, a 50. ¶ Sée Aldzed. Anselme. ¶ Sée Anselme. Arundell of Canturburie his answer foz the clergie, he chaketh, the kings answer to him, 526, a 20, 40, 60. Baldwine of Canturburie deceaseth, 130, b 50. Exhozted men to go to warre against the Saracens, 108, a 40. Bomface of Canturburie uncle to queene Elenoz, 225, a 60. Described, and how he came to be aduanced, 226, a 60. He deceaseth, 767, a 30. Courtneie of Canturburie his visitation, 483, b 60. He excommunicateth the wicleists: note, 484, a 10. Authorised by the pope to leuie foure pence of the pound, &c: note, 485, a 20. Cranmer of Canturburie, 929, b 30. ¶ Sée Cranmer. Edmund of Canturburie getteth him to Pontnete to remaine in voluntarie exile, 224, b 60. What caused him to depart England, his death and surname, reputed a saint, 225, a 10, 20. Grindall of Canturburie elected, 1262, a 30. Deceaseth, 1354, a 20. Heath of Canturburie his wozds vttered in the parlement house touching the pzoclaming of queene Elisabeth, 1170, a 40. Lozd chancellor, 1130, b 40. Hubert elected of Canturburie, lozd cheefe iustice, 140, a 30, 145, b 30. Complained of to the pope, 153, a 20. His wozds at the cozonation of king John, 158, b 60. Lozd chancellor, to the mislike of some: note, 159, b 30. Deceaseth, 169, a 50. Lanfranke. ¶ Sée Lanfranke. Langton of Canturburie elected whiles two others were striuing foz it, 171, a 10. Meuill of Canturburie commended, 213, a 60. His conditions, b 10, &c. Parker of Canturburie deceaseth, 1261, a 10. His commendation, 20. A benefactoz diuerse waies, 40, 50, 60. ¶ Sée Parker. Rafe of Canturburies returne into England out of Nozmandie, 41, a 10. Diedy, 42, a 60. Reignolds election of Canturburie bzed much discozd, 169, a 60. Richard of Canturburie elected receiueth his pall, 37, b 20. His consecration disturbed, 85, b 60. His death, and conditions: note, 108, a 40. Robert of Canturburie accused by Edward the first to the pope, suspended, 313, b 50. Roger of Canturburie, 64, b 20. Seuage of Canturburie deceaseth, 795, b 30. Stephan of Canturburie deceaseth, 210, a 10. Stigand. ¶ Sée Stigand. Stratford of Canturburie in Edward the the thirdes displeasure, he writeth vnto him, refuseth to come to the court, 361, a 10, 30, 60. Sudburie of Canturburie made lord chancellour, 424, b 50. Theobald of Canturburie consecrated, 50, a 60. Deceased, 68, b 60. Thomas, 9, a 20. ¶ See Thomas. Wetherhead elected to Canturburie, 210, a 10. Whittgift doctor of diuinitie, thankfull for his aduancements, the armes of both sees which he impaled blasoned, his posie answerable to his propertie, 1355, b 30, &c. Made of the priuie councell, 1434, b 60. William of Canturburie, 42, a 60

Archbishop of Canturburie primat of Ireland, 22, b 50. Made the popes legat, 147, b 50. Besieged Marleburgh castell, 142, a 40. Flieth out of the realme, 59, a 60. Goeth to Rome, 39, b 60. Hath power legantine, 69, a 10. He and king William at contention and white, 24, a 20, Captaine of an armie, 2 a 10. Put by from crowning the king, 1, b 20. Accused of treason by the speaker in parlement, 490, b 40. Condemned to perpetuall imprisonment, 491 a 50. His words at a parlement in the behalfe of the clergie, that would be exempted from paieng of subsidies, &c: 301, b 60. His goods confiscat, his obstinacie, 302, a 20, 50. Purchaseth a grant of the pope to lewis monie, 238, a 60. Restored to his see, 514, a 10. His curse, 241, a 60. He and Winchester made freends, 247, b 10. Standeth against Henrie the third in defense of his clergie, at contention with the earle of Kent, appealeth to Rome, dieth in his returne from thense, 213, a 30, &c. Readie to broch new contention, 204, b 60. Legat and lord cheefe iustice of England, 147, b 60

Archbishops at contention for primasie: note, 9, a 30. Decided by the king and bishops of the lands, 9, a 60. Sentenced by decree of the pope, 9, b 40. Go both to Rome, and white, 31, b 20. At strife, 35. all. For the primasie: note, 37, b 40. Thorough ambition, 39, b 60. Sue both personallie for their consecration to the pope, 40, a 10, &c. At strife for a peece of seruice about king Henrie the first, 43, a 40. At strife for carrieng of their crosses, 142, b 20. At strife in king Henrie the eights time, 919, b 30. Of Canturburies see void foure yeares, and in Henrie the first hands, 37, a 60

Archbishops of Canturburie from the first to the last, their names and liues, &c: set downe in a collection, 1435, a 10, &c.

Archbishop Geffreie bastard of Yorke, 119, b 10. Obteineth his pall, 130, b 20, Committed to prison: note, 130, b 60. Deprined and white, 161, b 60. Restored to all his dignities, 163, b 20. Stealeth out of the realme, 170, b 50. Deceaseth, 176, b 10. Gerard of Yorke consecrateth the bishops of Henrie the firsts inuesting, 31, b 10. Receiueth his pall, 31, b 60. Deceaseth, 35, a 10. Greie of Yorke, 182, a 60. Greenewich, and what summes of monie the pope had of him, 315, a 20. Neuill, 969, b 10. Roger sent to the pope, 72, a 60. Forbidden the vse of the sacraments, 76, b 10. Deceaseth, 105, b 20. Sands, 1145, b 50. ¶ See Sands. Thomas sometimes Henrie the firsts chapleine and much a dooer about his consecration, 35, a 10. &c. Refuseth to come to Canturburie to be consecrated, 35 a 50. Sulpended, &c. 35, b 60, 36, a 10. Hath his pall sent him from the pope, 36, a 50. Submits himselfe to Canturburie, note the forme, 36, b 30. Dieth, 37, b 40. Thurstane of Yorke, 37, b 40. Restored vpon condition, 40, b 60. Made lieutenant of the north parts, 49, a 20. In armes against the Scots, 49, a 50. Deceaseth, 1211, a 50

Archbishop of Yorke acknowleged primat of all Scotland, 9, b 20. His subiection to the archbishop of Canturburie: note, 9, b 10. Sent ouer to Guisnes to be kept in safe custodie, 693, b 10. Inconstant and variable: note, 683, a 20, 60, b 10. A conspirator, he is in armes, 529, b 10, 20. Forbidden to be at Richard the firsts coronation, 143, b 30. The estimation that was had of him, his protestation white he put on armes, b 60. He and others arrested, put to death, reputed a martyr, 530, a 30, 60, a 10. Of counsell with the Persies conspiracie, 522, a 10, 20. Made cardinall, resigneth his archbishoprike, 279, b 20. Crowneth Henrie the first, and white, 28, a 20. Deprined of his crosse, 257, b 50. Accursed by the pope, his constancie: note, 256, b 40. Gouernour of the realme, 229, b 10. Proud, deposed, and out of fauour with Richard the first, 147, b 40. Accused but to no purpose, 143, a 10. His presumptuous demeanor, 98, a 30. He and Elie reconciled by Richard the firsts means, 144, a 60. He and Durham at strife, 133, a 60. Sicke and his place supplied, 49, a 60

Archbishop of Cullen biliueth Beckets towne, 107, b 60. Of Rons cheefe gouernour of England, 132, b 30. Of saint Andrews in Scotland receiueth his staffe from an altar, 41, a 50. A deadlie enmie to Henrie the eight, 959, b 10. Of Vienna the popes legat not receiued as legat, and white, 29, a 40

Archbishops of England are in no respect to deale with the pope: note, 24. Their authoritie notablie exemplified in Anselme: note, 24, 25. Their election annulled vpon good causes: note, 210, a 10. Six at London in time of the parlement, 256, a 10

Archbishoprike of Canturburie void more than three yeares, 225, a 60. Vnd foure yeares: note, 18, b 10. Let out to farme, 206, a 40

Archbishoprikes giuen to strangers by duke William, 9, a 20

Archdeacons should be deacons, 30, b 30

Archdeconries not to be let out to farme, 30, b 30

Archer good was Henrie the eight, 806, a 40

Archer English of the garrison of Calis, a notable peece of seruice against the enimie, 380, a 60

Archers of England driue the French from their siege, 363, a 10. Notable seruice against the Genowaies: note, 372, a 40, 50. Victorious against the French, 373, a 60. Seruice against the Scots, 987, a 60. Fulfill a prophesie: note, 388, b 50. Force against the French, 389, a 40, Worthie actiuitie, 396, b 60. Valiancie against the Spaniards, 399, a 30. Good seruice vnder sir Hugh Calueilie, 422, b 50. Vnder the conduct of a priest, 443, b 50 Shot killeth in a quarell, 447, a 50. Great seruice against the Spanish & French 448, a 10. Good seruice against the Saracens, 473, a 60. In the time of a conspiracie: note, 516, a 30. The greatest force of the English armie: note, 553, a 60. Good seruice at Tenkesburie field, 687, b 60. Good seruice vnder sir Humfreie Talbot, 770, b 30. Good seruice against the enimie, 771, a 10. Of the Cornish rebels whose arrowes were in length a full cloth yard, 782, b 10. Game made with laieng wast of gardens in Morefield, 785, a 20. A shew of two hundred in a matgame before king Henrie the eight, 836, b 40. Call the French hostlemen, 966, a 60

Archers Irish, 986, a 20. Discomfited, 984, b 40. ¶ See Inclosures.

Ard assaulted by the Englishmen, 528, b 40

Arden murthered by the meens of his wife a notable whore: note, 1062, b 40, &c.

Arden. ¶ See Someruill.

Arks besieged, 819, a 30

Arlet duke William Conquerors mother the daughter of a burgesse, 20, a 10

Armach in Ireland, where the see metropolitane is, 100, b 40

Armenia, the king thereof commeth ouer into England for aid against the Turkes, 448, b 50. Sueth for a safeconduct to come into England, which is denied him, 453, b 30. Would gladlie that a peace betweene England and France should be concluded, 480, b 30

Armetrida the wife of Hugh Lou earle of Chester, 20, a 40

Armie called the armie of God and the holie church, 185. a 50

Armour, and an ordinance for the same, 105, a 30. ¶ See England.

Arnalt knight his valiantnesse, 997, a 10, 40

Arrogancie of Becket blamed, 77, b 10. ¶ See Ambition and Pride.

Arsacide. ¶ See Saracens.

Arthur made awaie by meanes of his vncle king John, and white, 7, b 30

Arthur the eldest and first son of Henrie the seuenth borne, 769, b 10. Had carnall knowledge with his wife, he is sent into Wales, 789, a 50, 60, b 20. Deceaseth, 790, b 10

Arthur Plantagenet created vicount Lisle, 878, a 50. Deceaseth in the tower, 955, a 60. ¶ See Plantagenet.

Arthur of Britaine. ¶ See Duke.

Arundell castell besieged, 30, a 50

Arundell knight drowned, his excesse and sumptuous apparell, 423, b 10, 60

Aske a notable rebell pardoned: note, 942, b 30. He and others practise to raise a new rebellion, 944, a 10, &c. He with his coparteners is executed, 944, b 10

Assassini. ¶ See Saracens,

Assemblies vnlawfull an act there against, 1061, a 30

Assise of bread published by proclamation: note, 166, a 20, 30

Astronomers deceiued, and how they excused their false predictions, 882, b 20. Deceiued in their predictions, 1356, b 30, &c.

Attaindors at parlament, 946, b 20, 955, a 10. ¶ See Treason.

Audleie lord cheefe capteine of the Cornish rebels ignominiouslie drawne vnto Tiburne and executed, 782, a 10, b 30. Slaine. 649, b 10

Audleie knight lord chancellor, 929, b 20. Keeper of the great seale, 928, b 20

Auricular confession. ¶ See Confession.

Auxerre citie taken by sir Robert Knols, 391, b 30

B.

BAbington and his confederats. ¶ See Traitors.

Bacon knight lord keeper deceaseth, 1271, b 60. His epitaph in Paules, 1272, a 10. See more of him, 1286, b 40. ¶ See Chancellors.

Badbie his notable constancie, 536, a 60

Badge of the bright sunne the earle of Marches badge, 660, a 20. Of the earle of Warwike worne in euerie mans cap: note, 678, b 40. Of Richard the second, 500, b 60. Of queene Elisabeth, note, 1290, b 10

Badges a bill against the wearing of them, 472, b 60

Baffuling what it is among the Scots, 427, a 30

Bagot knight and prisoner discloseth secrets of trouble, 512, b 50, 60, &c: 513, a 10, &c.

Bailifes first that bare rule in London, 119, b 60. ¶ See London, and Officers.

Bainards castell new built, 788, a 10

Baion yeelded to the Englishmen, 293, b 20

Bakers sell bread lacking six of seuen ounces weight in a penie lost, 282, b 60. Punished by the pillorie, 259, b 40.

Bales writting within the compasse of a penie, 1262, b 10
Baliol king of Scots obteineth the kingdome of Scotland, 288, b 60. The forme of his fealtie to the king of England, 288, b 60. 289, b 50. His homage, 290, a 20. Crowned king of Scotland, 349, b 60. Chaled out of Scotland, 350, a 20. Doth hamage to Edward the third, 350, b 20. Departeth this life, 308, b 60
Banbourgh. ¶ See Castell.
Banket rotall: note, 254, a 50. 825, a 30. Of two hundred and three score dishes. 849, a 40. Of two hundred dishes vpon the sudden, 922, b 20. Of thirtie or fortie dishes and not one of them fish nor flesh, 1192, b 50. Full of proper deuises, 1425, a 30
Banketting house of French king described, 849, b 10, &c. Of Henrie the eight in his palace at Guisnes, 857, b 60. Within the towne of Calis, 881, b 20, &c. At westminster builded, 1315, b 10. How garnished and decked, 30. The costs and charges thereof, 40
Banckerupts practise, 812, b 20
Banishment of bishops and other English in duke Williams time, 8, a 30. By whome ordeined, 33, b 50. For twelue monethes, 269, b 10. Of the earle of Cornewall out of the realme, 319, b 60. Perpetuall, 465, a 30
Banister the duke of Buckingham seruant reteineth the duke in perill of life into his house, 743, b 50. Betraieth him into the hands of his enimies for monie, Gods secret iudgements vpon him and his children: note, 744, a 50, 60
Barnabés date kept holie date all London ouer, 1062, b 10
Barnard of Newmarch a Norman, 17, a 60
Barnes doctor and two merchants of the Stilliard did penance at Paules crosse for heresie, 892, b 60. For a sermon inuectiue against bishop Gardiner, asketh him forgiuenesse, 950, b 10. He and others executed, 952, b 30
Barnet towne how seated, 684, a 10
Barnet field. ¶ See Battell.
Barons foure vnder the earle of Chester, 20, a 20
Barton the Scotish pirat, 426, b 20. Incountreth the lord Howard, he is slaine, 811, a 20, &c.
Bastard of Burgogne ambassadour into England, iusts betwixt him and the lord Scales, 669, a 10, 20
Bastard to a king made a bishop, 99, b 60
Bastards made legitimat, 487, b 10
Bath taken by the bishop of Constance, 17, a 40. It and welles when and by whome united, 27, b 50
Battell of Agincourt, 552, b 60, 553, a 10, &c. At Barnet, 684, a 10, &c. 685, a 10, &c. Of Blorheath, 649, a 50, 60, b 10. Of S. Edmundsbarie, 90, b 20. Of Northampton, 654, b 20. Of Palmesundaie, 664, a 40. Of Sexton. ¶ See Palmesundaie. At Hedgcote or Banberie, 672, b 30. At Exham, 666, b 10. At Teukesburie, 687, b 60. The first at saint Albons, 643, a 60, 644, a 20. At wakefield, 659, b 10. Of three long houres betweene the English & French, great losse on the English side, 601, b 30. Second at saint Albons, 660, a 60. Of Mortimers crosse, 660, a 20. Of Nerneuill, 388, a 50, b 40. Of Ferribrig the thirteenth of March, one thousand foure hundred three score and one, wherein twentie thousand were slaine, most knights and gentlemen, 1234, a 50. Betweene duke William and his sonne Robert: note, 12, a 40. Betweene the Danes and Normans verie fierce, 7, a 40. Begun with prayer: note, 371, a 60. At Kenils crosse, 376, a 20. Of Talrode, 396, b 50, &c. Of Hastile where the English were vanquis, 358, b 10. Of Banokesburie, 322, a 40. Called the white battell, and why, 325, a 10. Of Boxroughbridge, 341, a 10. Of Comeran in Vlster, 322, b 60. At Dunbar betweene the English and Scots in Edward the first time, 299, b 30. Betweene the earle of Lincolne and the earle of Arthois, 302, b 30, 40, &c. Of Fowkirke, 307, b 30. Betweene Henrie the third and his barons: note, 267, b all. Of Euesham, 270, a 50. Of Chesterfield, 272, a 40. Betweene king Richard the third and the earle of Richmond, called Bollworth field, 758, b 60. At Stoke nere to Newarke betweene the earle of Lincolne, &c: and Henrie the seuenth, 765, b 40, 50, 767, a 10, 20. Of saint Aubin in Britaine betweene the duke of Britaine and the French king, 769, a 30. At Blackheath, 782, b 10. Of Spurs, 822, a 50. At Floddon betweene the English and the Scotish, 426, 427, 428. Of Pauia, 884, a 60, b 10, &c. At Mulkieborrow. ¶ See Leith and Scotland. Stained by Gods prouidence: note, 943, a 30. Of the bridge of Bonums, 183, a 60. Sharpe and bloudie betweene duke Robert and Henrie the first brethren, 33, a 10, 20, &c. Three things to be forseene by them that shall giue it, 52, b 50, 60. Of Monadmore in Ireland, 59, b 10
Battell betwixt fishes, 225, b 60. Of herrings, 600, a 40. Betwixt flies and gnats, 465 b 60. Their slaughter, 466, a 10. ¶ See Warres.
Battell abbeie, why so called and by whome built, 15, a 40. The church to what saint dedicated, 21, a 40. Their abbie roll, 3, 4, 5
Baulbalon a French knight valiant fighteth with Henrie the fift hand to hand, 577, a 10, 60
Becket Thomas archdecon of Canturburie, 64, b 20. Lord chancellour, 65, a 40. Sent into France, 67, a 50. His & Henrie the seconds first falling out, 68, b 20. His authoritie, 69, a 10. A better courtier than a preacher, 69, a 30. Bewraieth secret treason, 69, b 10. Receiueth an oth, 70, b 10. Repenteth him thereof, and would haue fled the realme, 70, b 20, &c. Cited to appeare before the king and sentence against him, 70, b 60. Condemned in fiue hundred markes, 71, a 10. Called to an account, 71, a 20. Will not be perswaded to submit himselfe to the king, appealeth to Rome, goeth to the court, is reputed a traitor, and disallowed to be archbishop, 71, all. His stout courage, 72, a 10. His flight by night, 72, a 40. His complaint to the pope, 72, b 50. Resigneth his pall, 73, a 50. His curse, 74, b 20. An edict against him, 74, a 20. Six years in exile, 77 a 30. His arrogancie and wilfulnesse in opinion, in fauour with the French king, reconciled to Henrie the second the king of England, 77, b all. Is aduised by the French king, returneth into England, is complained of to Henrie the second by the archbishop of Yorke, he is killed, 78, all, 79, all. His death discussed, 82, b 50. The king purgeth himselfe of his death, 83, b 30. Canonized a saint, his holie date and collect for the same, 85, b 10, 20. His tombe visited by the French king, 103, a 60. His tombe visited by the archbishop of Cullen, 107, b 60. His shrine visited by the earle of Flanders, 152, a 60. His sword in the ministration of an oth, 303, b 40. His shrine taken awaie and his dead bones burnt, 945, b 50
Becons and the vse of them in countries nere the sea, 752, a 30
Bedford castell besieged, 206, b 20. Deliuered to the barons, 185, a 60
Bele doctor an vndiscreet and seditious preacher, 841, a 10, 20
Beleme. ¶ See Erle.
Bell a seditious preest arreigned, condemned, his prophesie, his sermon to the rebels, his seditious letter, his execution at saint Albons, 437, a 40, &c.
Bell rong at eight of the clocke at night by whom appointed, and why, 6, a 50. ¶ See Chime.
Bell castell assaulted and yelded vp to the English, 879, b 30
Belman. ¶ See Common crier.
Benbrike doctor poisoned at Rome, 835, b 50
Benefices belonging to strangers their valuation taken, 236, b 40. The value of them in strangers hands, 247 b 20. Bestowed without consent of patrones, 224, a 10. Impropriat, 214, b 60. With request to the pope that he would not meddle with their reseruations, 408, b 60, 409, &c. Inhibited by the king & how: note, 363, b 60. The best in strangers hands, 365, a 60. A proclamation that all English beneficed men in Rome should returne into England, 474, b 50, 60. ¶ See Abberies, Bishops, Churches, Clergie, Pope, Sequestration.
Beneuolence granted to Edward the fourth, 694, a 50. Put into Henrie the seuenths head to be leuied ouer the whole land, 792, a 20. An exaction of monie of whole deuise, 771, b 60. ¶ See Subsidie.
Benenolence of the French king to the earle of Richmonds note, 745, a 40
Bennyngfield knight his churlishnesse of the ladie Elisabeth his prisoner and in his keeping, 1117, b 40. He is too streict and seuere in his office against the ladie Elisabeth, 1155, b 20, &c. He grudgeth at the gentle intertenement of hir, his rude and ungentle behauiour, 1156, a 60, b 10, 20, &c. 60. His cruell dealing towards hir, 1157, a 30
Bereheating on sundaie reteined by Gods iust iudgement: note, 1353, a 30
Beards shauen, and rounded haire in vse with the Normans, 5, b 10
Berengaria daughter to the king of Nauarre, king Richard the firsts wife, 126, b 40, 127, a 40
Berkhamsted castell surrendred, 198, a 60
Bertie, husband to the duchesse of Suffolke attached by bishop Gardiner: note, 1142, b 10, &c. ¶ See duchesse Katharine of Suffolke.
Berwike fortified, 320, b 10. Taken by the Scots, 383, a 60. Besieged, 350, a 30. Surrendred, 350, a 50. Betraied to the Scots. 324, a 20. Summoned and swone by Edward the first, 298, a 20, 50. Fortified by Edward the first, 299, a 30. Chiefly regarded, 881, b 40. Yeelded to Henrie the fourth, 530, b 50. The castell swone by the Scots, recouered by the earle of Northampton, 446, b 20. Wone by the Scots, 421, a 60. Recouered by the earle of Northumberland, 421, b 10. Wone by the Scots, recouered by the English, 418, a 60. The capteine thereof will not suffer the duke of Lancaster to enter, 439, a 10. Deliuered to the French king and of him possessed, 665, a 60. Wone by the Englishmen, 705, b 60. Deliuered to the lord Stanlie, &c: 706, b 60
Betrice Henrie the thirds daughter borne, 230, b 10
Beuchamps tournie to the holie land against the Saracens, 22, a 60. His valiantnesse, 88, a 10
Beuclerke Henrie why so called, 15, a 60
Beuer castell to whom it appertained, 189, a 30
Beuerlcie towne burned, 113, b 20
Beumont vicount his daughter married vnto the Scotish king, 110, a 60. Discomfited by the Scots, 323, a 40
Beaumont lord of Heinault: note, note,337, a 60, 346, b 60, 347. Forſaketh the king of Englands ſeruice,367, b 50. Lord high conſtable of England, 627, a 20

Bible in euerie church commanded to be read, 945, b 40. The neceſſarie vſe and benefite therof, 1042, b 50. Preſented to queene Elizabeth which ſhe promiſeth the citie often to read ouer, 1175, b 60

Bigod Roger his ſpoiles and bootes, 17, a 50. Hugh ſometime ſteward to Henrie the firſt, 46, b 40. Knight procureth a commotion, 943, b 60. Apprehended and executed, 944, a 10, b 10

Bilneie burned, 928, a 10

Bishop Adrian an Italian of Hereford, Bath and Wels, 771, a 40. Agelmarus. ¶ See Agelmarus. Alexander. ¶ See Alexander. Anthonie of Durham his great reuenues, kept out of the abbeie of Durham, ſummoned to appeare before Edward the firſt, refuſeth, the concluſion of the ſtrife betweene him and the monks, 315, a 40, &c. Athelmarie Henrie the thirds halfe brother biſhop of Winchester, 243, a 10. Beauchampe of Salisburie is ſent to the duke of Yorke, &c: to know the lords meaning that were vp in armes, 649, b 60. Beaufort of Winchester ſonne to John duke of Lancaſter, 590, b 60, 591, a 10, &c. Otherwiſe called the rich cardinall, deceaſed, and deſcribed, 627, b 60, 628. Chriſtianus. ¶ See Chriſtianus. Cox of Elie deceaſeth, his epitaph, 1321, b 60. Egelwinus. ¶ See Egelwinus. Ermenfred. ¶ See Ermenfred. Fiſher of Rochester complained of to king Henrie the eight, 911, b 40, 50. Beheaded, 938, a 60. Foliot of London ambaſſador to the French king, 72, a 50. Fox of Durham owner of Norham caſtell, 782, b 50. Of Excester ambaſſadour into Scotland, 767, b 50. Of Winchester, 839, b 50, 60. ¶ See Corpus Chriſti college. His wiſedome in procuring the clergie to be contributors of monie for Henrie the ſeuenths behoofe, 792, a 50, 60. Gardiner biſhop of Winchester ambaſſador into France, 939, a 60. ¶ See Gardiner. Geffreie of Lincolne king Henries baſe ſonne, 98, b 60. His letter to the archbiſhop of Canturburie, he reſigneth his biſhoprike, 104, b 10, 40. Giffard of winchester refuſeth to be conſecrated at the archbiſhop of Yorks hands, and therefore baniſhed and deprriued, 31, b 10. ¶ See Giffard. Godfreie of Winchester ſonne to the lord Richard de Lucie deceaſeth, 168, b 30. Graie of Norwich lord lieutenant of Ireland, 174, b 30. Graie of Norwich preſident of the councell, 169, b 10. Groſted of Lincolne deceaſed, his praiſe, 249, a 10. Harue firſt biſhop of Elie, 36, a 30. Horne of Winchester deceaſeth, 1299, b 60. Hugh of Lincolne his bold courage to king Richard the firſt, 143, b 60. Deceaſeth, a deſcription of his doings, and life preſumptuous, 161, b 30. Admitted into the number of ſaints, 163, a 10. Of Coventrie reſtored to his ſee, 147, b 30. Jewell of Sarliburie deceaſeth, 1226, b 30. Lile of Elie and the ladie wake at variance, 392, a 10. Longchampe of Elie the popes legat, his ſtatelie port, 129, a 10. Depriueth biſhops, meaneth to keepe earle John low, beſiegeth the caſtell of Lincolne, raiſeth his ſiege with dishonour, breaketh agreements concluded, 129, &c. Lord chancellor of England, 121, a 10. Horton of Elie commended, 791, a 10. Buildeth vpon the dukes ambition, 737, b 10. Deuiſeth to be at his owne libertie in his biſhoprike of Elie, he ſaileth into Flanders to the earle of Richmond, 741, a 60, b 10. What pagents he plaid, the high honour wherein he was placed, his ſubtill vndermining of the duke of Gloceſter, 736, b 10, 30, 50. Defeated the practiſes of king Richard the third and Peter Landoiſe, 747, b 60. Admoniſheth duke Richard to releaſe the realme by ſome deuiſe from the preſent euill eſtate, 738, a 60. A new conference betweene them, b 20. Made archbiſhop of Canturburie, cardinall, and lord chancellor, 767, a 30. Odo. ¶ See Odo. Osmond. ¶ See Osmond. Pecocke of Chichester abiured at Paules croſſe: note, 646, a 20. Peter of Winchester gouernor of king Henrie the third, 202, a 60. Rafe of Durham his warlike exhortation, 49, a 60. Ralegh of Winchester conſecrated by the pope, he ſtealeth out of the realme, he giueth to the pope ſix thouſand marks, 231, b 60. Ranulfe. ¶ See Ranulfe. Remeld of Hereford inueſted by the king: note, 31, a 50. Remigius. ¶ See Remigius. Richard of London tranſlated to the archbiſhoprike of Canturburie, 37, b 10. Roger of Salisburie put in truſt with the gouernement of the realme, 45, b 50. Ruthall of Durham, one of king Henrie the ſeuenths priuie counſell, his buſie of priuat affaires vnaduiſedlie deliuered in ſtead of the kings, diſaduantageable to himſelfe, 796, b 60. He dieth with griefe, 797, a 10. Samſon of Worceſter the mouth of the biſhops, 36, a 60. Tunſtall. ¶ See Tunſtall. Wainfleet of Winchester founder of Magdalene college in Oxford, 628, b 10, &c. Walkhelme. ¶ See Walkhelme. Walkher. ¶ See Walkher. Walter of Alba bringeth Anſelme his pall, 25, b 60. ¶ See Walter, 1, a 50. Waltham of Salisburie buried at Weſtminſter among the kings, 485, a 40. Warlewaſts words to pope Paſchall in behalfe of Henrie the firſt, 31, b 40. Watſon of Winchester deceaſeth, 1368, b 60. Wickham of Winchester remembred and commended: note, 526, b 60, 527, a 10, &c. Made lord chancellor, 486, b 50. William. ¶ See William Wolſtane. ¶ See Wolſtane.

Biſhop of Beauuois taken priſoner, 150, b 50. In aduerſitie to Richard the firſt, two of his chapleins come to Richard the firſt, to intreat that they might wait vpon their maiſter, but are denied, 151, a 10

Biſhop of Carleill bold and faithfull, commended, 513, b 40. The firſt was a prior, and the kings counſellor, 44, b 20. Of Conſtance with others taketh Bath, 17, a 40. Of Couentrie committed to priſon, 318, a 30. Of Dublin made archbiſhop, 59, b 20. Of Durham created an earle, 119, b 50. Beſieged the caſtell of Tickhill, 142, a 30. Loſt his earledome, 144, a 10. Reſtrained of his libertie, 122, b 60. Chiefe ruler of the north parts, 121, a 10. He & earle Patrike at ſtrife, 161, a 10. By letters aſſwageth the Scotiſh kings diſpleaſure, hee goeth into Scotland, 785, a 30, 40. Winneth caſtels, 307, a 40. Of Elies taking vp of horſes to K. Richard the firſts vſe, 122, b 50, 60. Summoned to appeare at Reading, his returne to London, a declaration againſt him, he perſeuereth vp the tower, 131, all. His letter to the ſhiriffe of Kent, 130, b 30. Diſguiſeth himſelfe in womans apparell, he eſcapeth, is betraied, and committed to priſon, complaineth of his wrongs to the pope, 132, a 10. His deceaſeth, 151, b 10. Of Elie impriſoneth archbiſhop Geffreie of Yorke, 130, b 30. Arriueth in England as a ſimple biſhop, 139, b 30. Sent ambaſſadour to the emperour, 148, a 30. Wantſhed, 50, b 30. Blind of Excester ſent to Rome from Henrie the firſt, 37, b 30. Put in charge with the citie of London, beheaded by the Londoners, 338, a 40, b 30. Hereford arreſted for treſon, 335, a 10. His deuiſe to get monie of the biſhops, 251, b 10. Of Ireland elected out of England, 22, a 50. Of Liege murthered, 140, a 10. Of Lincolne viſiteth abbeies, and is ſuſpended by the pope, 244, a 40, 50. Captaine of a band of men, 30, a 50. Of London taken vp with repzochfull words, and reuenged by the Londoners, 412, a 20. His palace, where Richard ſecond kept open houſe, 474, a 10. Stout words to an earle, 458, a 20. Made lord chancellor, 440, b 60. Ambaſſadour to the emperour, 168, b 20. Deane to the archbiſhop of Canturburie, 35, b 20. Of Norwich in armes againſt the antipape, 441, b 50, 60, 442, a 40. Contagious and warlike, 444, a 20. Setteth forward with his armie, & inuadeth Flanders, 442, b 10, 50. The order of his battell againſt the Flemings, 443, a 30. His diſobedience puniſhed, 445, a 20. His armie of fiue hundred footmen and twiſe horſmen, 176, b 50. Returneth out of Flanders into England, 444, b 60. Of Rolle an enimie to the Engliſh eſtate, 1370, b 60. Of Salisburies men and the Londoners in a riot, he maketh a great complaint of them to the king, 478, a 20, 50. Diſth for thought, 50, b 30. Made lord chancellor, 51, a 10. Shamefullie murthered: note, 636, a 10. Of Whitherne conſecrated, 119, b 10. Of Winchester lent Henrie the ſift two hundred thouſand pounds, 580, b 10. Made a cardinall, 596, b 10. Legated and vnlegated by the pope, 602, a 60, b 60

Biſhop earle of Kent, 13, a 60. Captaine of an armie, 7, b 40. Wiped of fiue thouſand pounds by William Rufus: note, 20, b 10. Depriued of his ſtaffe by the king, 21, a 40. ¶ See Herbert. One reuengeth anothers death, 12, b 20

Biſhops choſen principall iuſtices of the realme, 115, b 20. Sent ambaſſadours to the French king, 112, b 50. Forbidden the vſe of the ſacrament, 76, b 10. Miſallow archbiſhop Thomas Becket, 71, b 40. Think to pleaſe God in breaking their oth, 46, b 40. Of Man firſt and ſecond, 59, b 10. Threatened, 59, a 40. In ſuſpicion to be diſloiall, 50, b 10. Inueſting done by the kings of England, 29, a 50. ¶ See William Rufus. At ſtrife about crowning the king, and ſeieng maſſe before him, 37, a 10. Tranſlation from ſee to ſee, 36, a 30. Of priuie counſell and ambaſſadors to Rome, 31, b 20. Fiue conſecrated by Anſelme in one daie, 34, a 40. Inueſtitures giuen awaie from the king by the popes ſentence, 33, b 60. Of a late election Saliſburie and Hereford, 30, a 60, b 10. Depriued by the biſhop of Elie, 129, a 50. Contentious and ambitious, 121, a 50. Elected and conſecrated, 119, a 60, b 10. Quarell with the monks of Canturburie, 169, b 30. Three dead in one yeare, 788, b 20. Reſtored and others depriued, 1089, a 20. Trauell to make peace, 265, a 30. Would rather become martyrs than loſe their monie, 252, b 40. Practiſe to diſappoint the archbiſhop of Canturburie of his purpoſe, 243, a 50. Readineſſe to reſiſt the Saracens, 209, a 50. Ambaſſadors, 205, a 60. Cannot tell what to ſaie in the contention betweene king William Rufus and Anſelme: note, 25. Of Ireland their names and ſees, 22, b 50. Seditious and ranke warriors, 17, a 30, 40. In fault that duke William was king of England, 1, a 40, 50. Submit themſelues to duke William, 1, a 40. Sworne to be loiall, 1, b 20. Flie into forren lands and countries, 6, a 20. Sees remoued from ſmall towns to cities of more fame, 11, b 60. In armes againſt rebellious earls, 11, a 50. Of Scotland

Scotland consecrated by the archbishop of Yorke, 9, b 20.
Of Excester from the first to the last set downe in a catalog, 1300, a 20, 30, 1301, &c.
Hir receiue the communion, 1185, a 60. Deprined, & others succeeding, 1184, b 30. ¶ Sée Ambition, Archbishops, and Consecration.
Bishoprike of Carlels erection 44, b 20. Of Elie first erected, 36, a 30. Of Lincolne void seuenteene yeares, 75, a 60, 109, b 40. Of Waterford in Ireland erected, 24, b 40
Bishoprikes bestowed by king Henrie his gift thought insufficient, 31, a 50. Bought of king William Rufus, 21, a 40. Let out to farme, 26, a 40
Bishopsgate new builded, 702, b 60
Bilkains and Englishmen together by the eares, 813, b 60
Blackwagon that followed euill Maie daie, 844, a 60
Blackheath field, 782, b 10
Blacksenesse an hauen towne on the south shore of Scotland, 989, b 50
Blackwell knight smothered to death in a chrong, 319, a 10
Blacke Will a notorious murthering ruffian, 1063, a 50, b 40. Receiueth ten pounds in reward for murthering of Arden, 1065, a 10. Burnt at Flushing, 1066, a 20
Bisling Bar, 1131, b 10, 252, a 50, 204, b 40, 277, b 40, 1344, a 40, 1324, a 50. Of strange appearance 37, a 40. With other strange sights, 519, b 60. Herie drendfull for thirtie daies space together, 225, b 60. In the north of a moneths continuance, 323, a 10. With long & terrible streames, 353, a 20. Appearing in a faire & cleare daie, 11, b 50. ¶ Sée Comet and Starre.
Blasphemie of pope Julie against God, 1128, a 40. Of a popish preacher seuerelie punished by God, 1128, b 60, 1129, a 10
Bleothgent king of Wales partaker with a rebell, 5, a 20
Blewbeard, capteine of rebels, 632, a 20
Blockhouses & bulworks builded, 946, b 10
Blorehearh field, 649, a 50
Blnet Robert bishop of Lincolne: note, 20, b 10
Blunt knight, his notable seruice against the French, 540, b 50
Bohune John, his wife and issue, 20, a 50
Boier maior of Bodwin in Cornwall hanged: note, 1006, b 50, &c: 1007, a 10
Boldnesse. ¶ Sée Magnanimitie, and words.
Bolton prior of S. Bartholomews buildeth an house at Harrow on the hill to auoid floods prognosticated that yeare, 882, b 20
Bondage. ¶ Sée Seruitude.
Bondmen by letters reuocatorie disfranchised, 437, a 10. Letters of manumission called in, 438, a 10
Boner bishop of London employed about the controuersie of Henrie the eights vnlawfull marriage, 923, b 30. Beareth with the enimies of the L. Elisabeth, 1160, a 10. His god was the rod of Paules, 1121, a 60. Writterh to cardinall Pole concerning persecution, 1164, a 10. Head broken: note, 915, a 60, b 10
Bookes anie waie imparing the popes dignitie are forbidden, 1131, a 60. Seditious scattered, and the offendors executed, 1353, b 40. Printed & the printer executed, 1357, a 40. Popish dangerous and damnable to read or listen vnto, 1391, b 50. Seditious published against the state, and the offendors executed, 1413, a 50 ¶ Sée Libels.
Bourne doctor preaching at Paules crosse hath a dagger throwne at him, 1089, a 60, b 10
Bosworth field. ¶ Sée Batteil.
Bounarme with his ten speares all at once about him, 834, a 50
Bowes Rafe. ¶ Sée Iusts triumphant.
Bow steeple builded, 815, b 60
Brabanders and the reason of their name: note, 98, b 50, 60, 99, a 10. Ouercome by earle Richard, Henrie the seconds sonne, 98, b 50. The number of 20000 retained by Henrie the second to beare armor, 87, a 50
Brale knight of the garter commended. 791, a 10
Brandre knight executed with an ax of his owne deuise, 464, a 10
Brandon knight standardbearer to the earle of Richmond slaine, 759, a 50. Knight his pompe at a iusts, 807, b 60. He is created vicount Lisle, 816, a 30
Bread made of bran & pusens, 1022, a 10. Made of fernrotes, 616, b 60. ¶ Sée Assise.
Breame. ¶ Sée Brunstar.
Brest yeelded vp to the duke of Britaine, 487, b 30. Besieged by the duke of Lancaster, and the maner how, 449, b 10. Force intended against it, 1149, b 50
Brethren at deadlie hate & pursuing one another, 32, b 40. Set at variance by factious persons, 32, a 60. In armes one against another, 19, a 10. Forces vnited how valiant & effectuall in warre, 6, b 50, 7, a 20
Brereton capteine of the aduenturers taken and slaine, 882, b 20
Briake in Britaine assaulted & taken, 534, b 30
Bribe of fiue hundred markes giuen to come to the popes presence, 80, b 30
Bribes the ouerthrow of lawes & good orders: note, 862, b 40. Of a iustice seuerelie handled for taking them, 243, b 50. 244, a 10. Hinder the execution of good orders & statutes: note, 380, b 30, 40. Refused, 18, b 60
Briberie how it tempteth mens minds: note, 361, b 50. ¶ Sée Gifts and Rewards.
Bridges made with hard shift, 1138, b 60. In England borne downe with landfloods, 38, a 40. ¶ Sée Floods.
Bridgenorth besieged, 30, a 60
Bridewell a place which Henrie the eight put to vse of pleasure. 894, a 20. Henrie the eights new palace, a place receiuing noblemen, 873, b 30. The maior and aldermen enter and take possession thereof, 1130, b 40. when it became a place to punish bagarant and lewd persons, 1082, b, 10
Bristow taken by the earle of Glocester, 48, b 60. ¶ Sée Faire.
Britaine foas the first name of England & Scotland, 1000, a 10. ¶ Sée Earles.
Britains plagued by the lord admerall, 814, a 10, &c.
Bromlete esquire his manhood, 551, b 10
Bromlete knight his decease, 565, b 40. Made capteine of Dampfront, 563, b 30. The old armes of their house, 564, a 30. Knight lord chancellor, 1272, a 20, 1286, b 60
Brotherton Thomas K. Edward the first his sonne, 309, a 60
Browne his seditious bookes procure losse of life, 1353, b 40
Browne. ¶ Sée Murther.
Brunkard Henrie. ¶ Sée Iusts triumphant.
Brute crowned king of Scotland, in armes against prince Edward and the English power, put to flight by the erle of Penbroke, fled into Kentrie, his wife and brethren taken, his words to his wife, he is executed, his lands giuen awaie by the king Edward the first, wherein note the end of disloialtie, 314, a 10, 40, 60, b 20, 40, 50
Brute inuadeth England, 332. His ill dealing with Welshmen, 95, b 30. His wife whose daughter she was, 314, b 20. Pronounced accursed, 324, a 50. Thriueth in his succesle, inuadeth England, & faileth his siege. 322, a 10, b 30, 49
Brunstar and Marie Breame smothered to death, 1353, a 60, b 10
Buchanan reproouing and reproued, 112, a 30
Buckhurst lord made of the priuie councell, 1434, b 60. ¶ Sée Sackuill.
Buggerie committed by a lord and punished, 952, b 20
Buieng and selling on the sundaie a law against it, 624, a 20. ¶ Sée Selling.
Buildings of William Rufus berie great and famous, 23, a 60, b 10
Bull seditious hanged on the bishop of Londons gate, and the partie executed as a traitor, 1221, a 20, &c. 1222, a 30. ¶ Sée Felton and Pope.
Bullen besieged, assaulted, deliuered by, the number of them that went forth of the towne, 964, a 40, b 30, 60. Manie feats of armes exploited betwixt the English & French, 972, a 40. The Frenchmen buske to build a fort there, 970, a 60, b 10. To be restored to the French king by accord, note how, 973, b 20. And Bullenois restored to the French vpon certeine conditions: note, 1061, b 60. Deliuered vp and entered into, a 10, 20. By the French king, 1062, a 10, &c. Besieged by the Englishmen the king himselfe being present, 775, a 10. The base, a cannadado giuen vnto it, the French haue an ouerthrow, 967, a 20, &c.
Bullocke a mercilesse murtherer hanged within Bishopsgate: note, 1128, b 20, &c. ¶ Sée Murther.
Bulmer knight rebuked for refusing K. Henrie the eights seruice, and taking the seruice of the duke of Buckingham, 852, b 60, 853, a 10
Burchet gentleman of the middle temple hanged: note, 1259 a 30
Burdet knight his valiantnesse against the enimie: note, 590, b 40
Burdet knight slaine, 618, a 40
Burdet for a word spoken beheaded. 703, a 10
Burdeux yeelded againe to the French king, 641. a 30
Burgesse of the parlement arrested, and what mischefe thereof insued: note, 955, b 40, &c. 956, a 10, &c.
Burgognians ioine with the English host & make it stronger, 875, a 30
Burle knight and the earle Were in faithfull freendship, 464, a 40. what the same Burle was: note, a 50, &c.
Buriall of duke Williams bodie not suffered without satisfaction to the lord of the soile, 15. a 50. Of more than two hundred dead corpses in the Charterhouse yard, 379, b 30. Christian forbidden prests concubines, 207, b 30. Of nobles and great men in a monks cowle: note, 195, b 10, 20. Neglected: note, 157, a 10. Of the dead done with honor and reuerence, 576, a 60. For the dead, 1211, b 10. Of dead bodies within their owne parishes, 31, a 10. Of the Jewes at London, 101, b 20. ¶ Sée Churchyard new.
Burning in the hand when inacted. 787, a 60, b 10
Burse, ground purchased to build it, the first stone thereof laid, 1209, a 40, 50. Finished & named The rotall exchange by the now queene Elisabeth, 1224, a 60
Bushie knight, 495. ¶ Sée Flatterie.
Butcher strangelie saued from drowning, 41, b 30. Hanged for fauouring rebels, 943, a 60
Butterwife set on the pillorie, 702, b 40

C.

Cadwallon prince of wales slaine, 103, b 20
Caen taken by the English, 559 b 60. Besieged and yeelded to the French king, 630, a 50
Cages and stocks ordeined, 792 a 10
Caldwell doctor in physicke founder of surgerie lecture in London: note, 1349, a 20, &c. Deceaseth, his distributions in his life, and bequests after his death, his commentaries vpon Paulus Aeginera and other bookes, his infirmitie that was his end, his age, 1369, b 10, &c. His armes blasoned, his epitaph, 1370, a 10, 20
Calendar. ¶ Sée Kalendar.
Calis, the French commissioners would haue raised to the ground, 480, a 40. Preparation made to win it, the enimies frustrated, 536, b 10, 40. Besieged: note: the commodiousnesse of that towne, 373, b 10. Surrendred to Edward the third, vpon what conditions, 377, b 60. Inexpugnable: note, note,375,a 10. Six burgesses thereof presented to Edward the third,378,a 10. Yeelded to the king of England, 378,a 30. Made a colonie of English, a practise to betraie it, Edward the third passeth ouer secretlie thither,378,a 30, 40, b 40, 60. Not furnished with a sufficient number of men, deliuered to the French, 1135,a 10,b 60. Rifled & spoiled by the French, the power auoid out of the same, conquered and lost in lesse than eight yeares, how long in possession of the kings of England,1136,a 10, 50, b 10, 20. Hauen, the Frenchmens meaning to destroie the same disappointed, 878, b 50. How the French were in loue with it after it was lost, note the words of the lord Cozdes 771, a 20. King Henrie the seauenth saileth thither, 788, a 10, &c. The mart of all English commodities kept there,778,a 20. The duke of Burgognies armie of 40000 men,613,b 60. Besieged, he breaketh vp his siege and flieth,614,a 20,b 30. A report that Richard the second ment to resigne it into the French kings hands,462,b 10. The toie that the French made euerie waie for the getting of it,1136,b 60,1137,a 10. The French king goeth to visit Calis,1141,b 20. The losse thereof with what indignation queene Marie taketh it, 1149,b 40. Might haue beene recouered from the French, 1150,b 60. The eleuenth king from the conquest got it, and the eleuenth againe after him lost it, 1161, b 10. Queene Maries pensife for the losse of it, the cause of hir sicknesse and death,1151,b 10,20. Triumphs in France for the getting againe thereof, 1141, a 30. ¶ See Calis, Duke, and Victozie.

Calueriete knight a valiant capteine,418,b 60. He recouereth Marke castell, 419,a 10. His exploits against the French,419,b 10. His valiantnes, 422,b 50

Cambridge, queene Elisabeths progresse thither,1206, b 20, &c. Presenteth a faire & statelie cup to queene Elisabeth, 1299,a 10. ¶ See Emanuell college.

Campeius refuseth to giue iudgement in the matter of Henrie the eight his vnlawfull mariage with queen Katharine, 908,b 50,60. ¶ See Cardinall.

Campians description of cardinall Wolsete, 917, b 20. ¶ See priests seminarie.

Campbell a Scotish pirat or rouer taken on the sea, 872, b 20

Canons regular put in priests places,100, a 10. Of Yorke refuse to receiue the archbishop of Canturburie as their primat, 147,b 60

Canonizing of kings beere, 691,a 40

Canturburie. ¶ See archbishopzike.

Canutus ment to haue attempted a subduing of London, and what hindered, 7, a 30. Discomfited by the Normans retireth to his ships, 7,a 40. ¶ See Otozne.

Cardinall Campeius sent into England about Henrie the eight his vnlawfull mariage, 906,b 60, Sent from the pope & the causes of his staieng at Calis, received with great pompe, what trash was inclosed in his chests, the pomp of him and Wolsete going to the court, 845, a 10, &c. Of Canturburie, thought the fittest man to deale with the queene for surrendzing hir sonne,717,a 50, he dieth another waie to persuade hir, 720,b 20. De Comos letter to Parrie, touching resolution to kill the queene, 1388, b 10, &c. Gualo commeth ouer into England,192,a 20. A couetous prelat and fauourer of king John,187,b 20. Johannes de Anagnia, prohibited to passe no further into England than Doner, 120,a 60, b 10. Nicholas sent into England to take awaie the interdiction,181,b 20. Octauianus legat into Ireland, 110,b 30. And what words Richard the first bled to him against Rome,123, b 50. Otho commeth into England, the lords grudge at his receiuing without their knowledge, he is praised for his sober behauiour, strikes by him are compounded,221,b 30, &c. He holdeth a synod at London, he goeth to Oxford, a fraie betwixt his men & the scholers, his owne slaine, he complaineth to the king, he curseth the misdoers, 222, a 10, &c. Made to blush at a Charterhouse monks words,225, b 10. Lieth in the Wind still for the popes profit,224,a 40, &c,b 40. Beginneth to looke to his owne commoditie,224, a 10. His persuasions to the English cleargie, touching tribute to the pope, frustrate, 208,a 40,50, &c, b 10. Peito become a begging frier,1365, b 10. Petrus Hispanus sent from the pope, the cause of his comming, his demand of monie of religious houses,315,b 50,60. He preacheth, & curseth Bzuse the vsurper, 316, a 10. Piergot his trauell to treat a peace betweene both kings of England & France, 388,b 40: note. Pole made archbishop of Canturburie, 1132,a 10. Was to reduce the church of England to the popes obedience, 1092, a 10. Sent for home into England,1092,b 60. The councell diuided about the receiuing of him,1093,a 10. Arriueth at Doner, his restitution in blood, commeth to the parlement house, his oration there tending to the publike estate, 1122, all. Against the pope, 1365,a 60. Cometh to Pauls crosse in great pompe, 1126,a 60. A supplication exhibited vnto him, his authozitie apostolike: note,1123,a 60. His malice against Henrie the eight,1134,b 60. Boners letter touching persecution vnto him, taieth Boners cruelties somewhat, a papist but no bloudie papist, haike suspected for a Lutheran at Rome, an errant traitor, seditious and impudent, his treasons detected by his owne brother, worse than a pagan, 1164, all. Unkind to Henrie the eight that brought him vp, the manner of his death and distribution of his goods, 1165,a 10,20, &c. Deceaseth, described,1162,a 60, earnest in burning the bones of the dead,b 10, articles touching the cleargie to be inquired of in his visitation, 30, &c, and the laitie, 1163, a 30. Of Praxed, liberall of the faculties: note 428,b 60,429, a 10, &c. Uiuiano of S. Stephans in mount Celio,100,a 40. Of Winchester complained against by the duke of Glocester,620,a 50, &c. Otherwise called the rich cardinall, deceaseth: note,627,b 20. Wolsete. ¶ See Wolsete.

Cardinall commeth into England, receiuing an oth not to preiudice the realme, 239, b 60. He maketh shift for monie, 240, a 10. Two, John and Peter sent into England in commission from the pope,8,b 60. Two robbed and the robbers executed, 323, a 60, they curse the Scots,3, b 10. Two from the pope to accord the two kings of England and France, 377,b 50. Two come into England about a treatie of peace 354,a 30. Their returne to Rome, a 60. Appointed to treat a peace betweene England and France,406,b 30. Sent to the king of England and France, to treat of peace, they gather monie, 295, a 10.

Cardinals of England all from the first to the last, collected, 1165,b 10,&c,1166,1167,1168.

Careie George knight desirous of combat with the lord Fleming, his letter of challenge, and replie to a former answer, 1218,a 10,30,b 30

Carew baron slaine with a bullet shot,817,b 10. Knight taken of the French,960,b 60. Beheaded: note, 946, a 60. Used as an instrument to appease rebellion in Deuon, 1015,b 30. Charged with the rebellion in Deuonshire,1022 b 30. ¶ See Dinham.

Carlill destroied by the Danes, repaired and peopled by William Rufus,19,b 50,60. Assailed by the Scots,447,b 40

Carter an Englishman serung among the French, but to their disaduantage, an hardie soldiour, and good seruitor, 997,a 20,b 10

Casimere ambassadoz from the emperoz Maximilian: note, 791,a 30. His comming into England, receiued at London, going to the court, made knight of the garter, 1271, b 10, &c.

Castell of Banbourgh how wone and gotten, 21, b 50. Yeelded vnto king William Rufus,21,b 60. Of Beauer summoned to yeeld to king John,189,a 30. Of Biham yeelded,203,a 30. Chartlete and Beston built, 202, b 50. Of Doll in Britaine belonging to earle Rafe, besieged, 11,b 40. Of Doner & Windsor could Lewis neuer subdue,192,a 60. Yeelded vnto the queene,49,a 10. Doth Lewis the French labour to get but in vaine, 193, a 30. Of Durham by whom built, 10, b 60. Of Faringdon built, 56, b 20. Of Fodzinghete taken by dissimulation, 203, a 20. Galiard besieged and wone by the French, 166, b 50. Builded by Richard the first 155,a 60,b 10. Of Hozne vnerthzowne by William Rufus,17,b 40. Of Huntington wone,92,a 60. Of Walnatsin built by William Rufus, and whte,21,b 50. Of Montgomerie built,203,a 60. Won by the Welshmen, 21. Of Newarke in whose keeping, 192,b 20. where king John died, 194, a 60. Of Newberrie wone,59,b 30. Nozham by whome begun, 42, a 40. Notingham wone by Richard the first, 142, a 60. In whose keeping,192, b 60. Of Ramsete where Odo late fortified against William Rufus, 17, b 40. Of Richmont nere Gillingham builded, 7, b 10. Of Rochester. ¶ See Rochester. Of Rockingham,25,a 10. Of Rutland builded,67,a 30. Of Tickhill yeelded,142,b 10. Of Tunbridge yeelded into William Rufus his hands, 17, b 40

Castels besieged and surrendered to Lewis the French kings sonne,198,b 20. Wone by the bishop of Durham, 307,a 40. Builded by duke William for the suppressing of rebellions,6,a 40. Fortified by king John,192. Besieged by bishops,142,a 30,40. Deliuered to king Richard the first,128,a 60. Deliuered by the king of Scots,95, a 30. Wone by the Scots,91,a 60. Held by great men against king Stephan,48,b 60. Licenced to be builded,47, a 30. Manie builded in king Stephans daies,65,a 10. In number 1115 to be raised,61, b 20. Fortified by the bishop of Winchester,54,a 20. Built by the bishop of Salisburie, 50, b 20. Recouered by K. Stephan,50,a 50. Of Brikstow & Cardiff, &c: by whome builded,37,a 50. Fortified against Henrie the first, 30,a 30

Castell seene in the aire and armed men, 395,a 60

Casteller. ¶ See Shoomaker.

Castile inuaded by the duke of Lancaster and the king of Portingale,450,a 30. Philip king thereof saileth out of Flanders into Spaine, cast by casualtie of sea vpon the English coasts, promiseth to deliuer to Henrie the seuenth the earle of Suffolke, 794,a 20,30,50

Cat hanged in Cheape disguised like a masking preest,1102, b 50

Cataia. ¶ See Frobisher.

Catesbie and his conditions described, 722,a 30

Cauendish lord chefe iustice of England beheaded by the rebels, 434,b 10,20

Cementarius and his mischeeuous preaching, 173,b 60

Chancellor lord elected bishop, 20,b 10

Chancellors of England first & last laid downe in a collection, 1272,a 30,1273,&c. 1286,b 60

Chaun

Chancerie court by whome inſtituted, 8, a 60. Iſt and Kingſ bench kept at Yorke, & from thense removed to London, 480, a 10

Chanell from Tockleie to Lincolne made by hand, 42, a 40

Chapell of our ladie of peace, 486, b 60

Chapels none to be newlie built without the biſhops conſent, 30, b 40

Charing croſſe and others erected, 285, b 40

Charles de Valois chaſeth the Engliſhmen, his returne into France, 294, a 40, b 60. Sent to Bruges, and diſappointed of his preie, 304, b 40, 50, ¶ Sée French king.

Charles James yong prince of Scots chriſtened, 1209, b 50

Charitie of Henrie the ſixt, 566, b 20. Of Henrie the ſeauenth, 797, a 20. Of Londoners towards the hoſpitals, 1083, a 10, &c. Of ſir Rowland Hill: note, 1060, b 50, 60. Of William Lambe eſquier, 1311, a 60, b 10, &c, 1312, 1313. Of ſir Andrew Jude, 1062, b 20. Of Juſtice Randolph, 1349, a 40, 1354 a 40. Of archb. Parker, 1261, a 20, 30, &c. Of ſir William Harper, 1194, b 40. Of ſir Roger Manwood, 1377, a 60, b 10, &c. Of ſir William Peters, 1227, b 50. Of Dauid Smith, 1375, b 50, 1376. Of John Ligh a preſt, 796, a 10, 20, &c. Of Kneiſworth maior of London, 792, b 10, 20. Of ſir John Allen, twiſe maior of London, 961, a 60, b 10, &c. Of George Monex maior of London, 830, a 30. Of Thomas Huntlow ſhiriffe of London, 948, a 10. Of Thomas Gibſon ſhiriffe of London, 945, b 60. Of ſir Thomas White, 1092, a 30. Of ſir John Gresham, 1131, b 10. Preached before Edward the ſixt, and the effects that followed: note, 1081 b 20, &c. Iſt and concord in a commonwealth be things moſt neceſſarie: note, 971, b 30 ¶ Sée Almeſhouſes, Pittie, and Mercie.

Charta de Foreſta, 308, b 10, 185, b 60, 207, a 40, 306, a 40.

Charter of Alexander king of Scotland made to Henrie the third, 233, b 60. The ſame confirmed by the pope, 235. Of articles concerning a league betweene Henrie the third & the nobles of Wales, 226, b 60. Of the articles of Dauid of Wales his ſubmiſſion, 227, b 60. Wher Edward the firſt is acknowledged ſuperior lord of Scotland, 286, b, 10, &c, 287, a all. Of king Johns ſubmiſſion, as it was conueied to the pope at Rome 177, b 50. Of Richard the firſt concerning turnaments. 146, a 10. Conteining articles of the peace and agreement concluded betwixt the two kings read in S. Peters church in Yorke, 96, a 10. Of agreement betweene the king of England and the king of Conagh, 96, b 60. Of king Stephen and the pacification of troubles betwixt him and Henrie Fitzempreſſe, 62, a 10. Of manumiſſion granted to the rebels by Richard the ſecond, 434, a 10. Blanke ſealed: note, 496, a 10. Confirmed vnder Henrie the thirds acknowledgment and ſubſcription of witneſſes, 120, b 20. Cancelled and much greeued at, 208, b 60.

Chartres taken by treaſon notwithſtanding the truce, 607, a 60

Chaſtitie of the ladie Grate, and hir wiſdom, 726, a 50. Should ſuch profeſſe as would be admitted ſubdeacons, 30, b. 30. ¶ Sée Clergie.

Charuage a certeine dutie for euerie plowland, 229, a 50

Chaucer the Engliſh poet in what kings time he liued, 541 b 50. ¶ Sée Dukes.

Chaumount Hugh taken priſoner, 152, a 10

Cheeke knight his deſerued commendation: note 1055, a 50, 60, b 10, &c. His treatiſe ſhewing how greeuous ſedition is to a commonwealth: note, 1042, 1043, &c, to 1055.

Cheinie knight, lord warden of the cinque ports, authoriſed by Henrie the eight to the chriſtening of the Dolphins daughter, 973, b 50, 60. An enimie to Wiat: note, 1094, a 40. Henrie the eights letter to him for a preſcript forme of demeanor in the Engliſh towards the French, 974, a 40, &c. Lord warden of the cinque ports his death, his old ſeruices at home and abroad, much ſpoken to his praiſe and honor: note, 1171, a 30, 40, 50, 60, b 10, 20, 30.

Cheapſide conduit builded, 704, b 10

Chelſhire made a principalitie, 492, b 40

Chelſhiremen gard Richard the ſecond, 489, b 50. Slaine: note, 523, b 60

Chelſter abbeie by whome builded, 27, b 60. And who geue order thereto, 28, b 10. Earledome by whome poſſeſſed and inioied, 20 a 10

Chierburgh beſieged by the Engliſh, 562, b 50. Yeilded to the Engliſhmen, 563, a 10. Deliuered to the Engliſh, 420, a 10. Poſſeſſed by the Engliſh, 564, a 40

Child of eleuen years old ſpeaking ſtrange ſpeeches, 1315. a 10, &c.

Chime of ſaint Giles without Criplegate to be mainteined, 1312, a 60. ¶ Sée Bels.

Chimniage. ¶ Sée Subſidie.

Chinon taken by force of aſſault. 169, b 60

Chiſie William, a notable theefe hanged, 124, a 20

Chriſt and of a portion of his bloud ſhewed in a ſolemne proceſſion, 240, a 40

Chriſt counterfet whipped, 1194, a 10. Falſe apprehended and puniſhed, 203, b 40, 50

Chriſts hoſpitall erected, 1082, b 10

Chriſtians preuaile againſt the Saracens at Damieta, 202, b 20. Attempted diſcord, 134, a 20. Beheded by the Turks 133, a 30. And Saracens are a peace 135. Two hundred and threeſcore deliuered from the captiuitie of the Turks, by means of one John Fox: note, 1310, b 20. ¶ Sée Saracens.

Chriſtianitie abiured for monies note, 27, a 40

Chriſtianus a biſhop of the Danes, & captiue in Warre, 7, b 40

Chriſtine a queenes ſiſter, a nun ¶ Sée Margaret.

Chriſtmas roiall, 807, a 40

Chriſtmas ſhewes, 816, a 10

Chriſtmaſſe called The ſtill Chriſtmaſſe, 892, b 40

Chronicles whereof and whie ſo named, and their neceſſarie vſe, 1268, 1269

Chronicilers deſerue a dutifull reuerence, and whie, 1268

Church of ſaint Anthonies in London, when and by whome builded, 779, a 50. Of ſaint Dunſtans in the eaſt defiled with bloud: note, 562, a 20, &c. Of Elie dedicated: note, 246, b 30. Of Hales ſolemnlie dedicated, 244, b 60, 245, a 10. Of Scotland obedient to the church of England, 97, b 10. Of England ſore ſpoiled of hir wealth, 18, b 30. Ruinated by the Danes in the north parts, and verie ſcant: note, 11, a 20. Depriued of temporall proſperitie, 256, a 50. Impropriat, and that the biſhop of Lincolne had authoritie to inſtitute vicars in them, 246, a 40. Occupied by incumbents ſtrangers of the popes preferring, what grudge it bred: note, 214, a 60. Spoiles aduantage not the getter: note, 194, a 50. & that for feare of the cenſure thereof the Engliſh pledges were releaſed, 147, b 10, Jewels &c, turned into monie for Richard the firſt his ranſome, 139, b 10. The ſtate thereof in Becket's time, 77, a 60. Liuings reſtored by act of parlement: note, 1130, a 20. Cathedrall to inioie the right of their elections, 409, a 10. Ouerthrowne by an earthquake, 440, b 40. In London ſtriken and broken by tempeſt, 1185, a 10. Made a kenell of hounds, reuenged, 23, a 50. ¶ Sée Conſecration, Fines, Inueſtitures, Lands, Schiſme.

Churchmen. ¶ Sée Clergie.

Churchyard new neere Bedlem firſt made, 1211, b 10

Ciceſter, the ſituation thereof, 796, b 10

Cicill knight commiſſioner into Scotland, about an accord of peace, 1192, a 30. Created lord treaſurer, 1238, a 50. His deſcent, 1255, b 30

Cipriots reſiſt Richard the firſt his landing, and are purſued, banquiſhed, 127, a 60, b 10. Their offers in reſpect of his diſcontentment & loſſe, 127, b 60. Submit themſelues and are receiued as his ſubiects, 128, a 40. Their king ſubmitteth himſelfe to Richard the firſt, 128, a 10. Stealeth awaie, & ſubmitteth himſelfe againe, is committed priſoner and chained in giues of ſiluer, 128, a 10, 60, b 10

Circumciſion for loue of a Jewiſh woman, 203, b 60

Ciſteaux monks. ¶ Sée monks white.

Citie wherof it conſiſteth, 1046, b 50

Cities their neceſſarie vſe and ſeruice: note, 1047, b 10, 20, 30

Citizens, ¶ Sée Londoners.

Clergie their preſumptuous authoritie reſtreined by acts, 239, b 40. Large offer to Henrie the third in a parlement, 255, b 30. Depriued of their liuings and liberties, 8, b, 60, and Normans preferred, 9, a 10. Kicked at by duke William, againſt whome note his malice, 9, a 10. Pinched by their purſſes, fret and fume againſt the popes proceedings in that behalfe, 252, b 30. Reſiſt duke Williams decrees, and are baniſhed, 8, a 30 Hardlie delt withall, and out of order: note, 24, a 30. Of England complaine to pope Urban againſt William Rufus, 18, b 40. Cardinall Pools articles concerning them, 1162, b 30. Grant halfe of all their ſpirituall reuenues for one peare to Henrie the eight, 877, b 20. Complained of by the commons, 911, a 30. Both head and taile one with another againſt them, 911, b 10. In danger of a premunire, their offer to Henrie the eight 923, a 20, 30. The ſame pardoned, 923, b 10. Their ſubmiſſion to H. the eight: note, 923. Speake euill of Henrie the eights proceedings in the reformation of religion, 941, a 20, 30. Conuocation for the reforming of religion, 940, b 60. Complained of for their crueltie Ex officio. 928, a 20. The cauſe whie ſo hetnouſlie offending was ſo fauoured, 787, a 50, &c. Of two ſorts and both deſirous to ſpare their purſſes, 792, a 30. Of Exceſter againſt Henrie the ſixt and the duke of Summerſet, in defenſe of their eccleſiaſticall priuileges, 637, b 30. A bill exhibited againſt them in the parlement, 545, b 10. Libels againſt them caſt abrode 558, b 20. Sorelie bridled, 475, a 30. Inueied againſt of the wicklieuiſts. 481, b 60. They complaine of them to the king, 482, a 10. Ignorant and couerous in Richard the ſeconds time: note, 508 a 30. Mainteined by archbiſhop Arundell of Canturburie, 526, a 20, 30, &c. Fauoured of Henrie the fourth, 536, a 50. Diſpleaſed by Henrie the firſts doings, 31, a 40. Of England conſiſted moſt of preeſts ſonnes, 34, a 20. Exempted from dealing in ante tempozall cauſe or office, 30, b 20. To keepe no women in their houſe: except, &c, 34, b 10. Of liberties obteined for them, 99, a 40. Againſt Henrie the ſecond, whome he laboureth to bridle, 70, a 10. A heauie time for them: note, 172, a 50. In what awe they had K. John, 180, b 20, &c. Repining againſt king John, 184, b 30. More malicious to K. John than he deſerued, 196, a 20, 30, &c, b 20. Complaine to Henrie the third againſt the collections for the pope, 225, a 10. Of Durham glad to flie into the holie Iland, 7, b 60. Paid a tenth ſooner than the time appointed, 355, a 40. Depoſed for denieng the ſubſidie, 406, b 20. Preſumptuous demeanors, 335, a 30. Without head: note, 293, a 10. Grant halfe part of their liuings to king Edward the firſt, 293, a 20.

Grene

Grant the eleuenth part of ecclesiasticall things to Edward the first, 285, b 20. And tenths of spirituall liuings to Edward the first, 285, b 50. Continue in denial of a subsidie, 301, b 60. Cronis to be free from subsidies, &c, 301, b 40. Their pride abhorred of Edward the first, 316, b 20. Oppressed complaine, & the same redressed, 315, b 30. Fined, but the temporalitie pardoned: note, 201, b 60. In a miserable case, 302, a 40. Pinched with courtesies, beneuolences, and aids: note, 315, a 30. Maintened & defended by archbishop Richard of Canturburie, 213, a 50. Hope greeued at the popes exactions, 224, b 40, &c. ¶ See Bishops, Churchmen, and Priests.

Clerke knight, a valiant captaine, 422, a 50

Clinton lord admerall, sent against the rebels in the north, 1212, b 40. Sent out against Wales, 1149, b 60. His seruice in Scotland, 986, 987, 988, 989, b 50. Deceaseth, 1378, b 50, 1379, a 10

Clinton Gefferie, a noble man accused of treason, 43, b 50

Clinton Rikinson. ¶ See Pirats.

Clothiers in diuerse places reigned, 1311, b 40. In Burton had two hundred pounds lent gratis for euer, 1369, b 30

Clippers of gold. ¶ See Coine.

Cnuto with certeine Danes, arriueth in England: note, 11, b 30

Cobham lord with his new supplie of soldiors, valiant, 998, a 10, 40. Condemned: note, 493

Cobham lord vnable to resist Wiat and his power, 1095, b 50. Made of the priuie councell, 1434, b 60. His lineall descent, 1505, b 30, &c.

Cocke of westminster. ¶ See Castellet.

Cognisances. ¶ See Badges.

Coine base, 963, b 10. New, 1090, b 50. Of small peces, as six pence, &c, 1194, b 50. New of sundrie sorts, 1193, b 50. Thirtie barrels carried ouer sea for soldiours paie, 229, b 20. Of sundrie sorts in England current, prohibited by proclamation, 309, a 20. ¶ See Monie. K. Edward the first amended, 280, a 20. Of grotes and halfe grotes, first coined, 380, b 10. To be inhanced or abased, 400, b 40. Disanulled, and degrees of Florengmade, 367, a 30. New of gold called the Floren, 366, a 10. Of Ireland reformed, 174, b 30. Altered, 67, a 40. Of Henrie the seconds changed in forme, and whie, 104, a 30. Crackt, wherein note Henrie the firsts act, 45, b 10. Changed, 540, a 40. Imbased, 1066, b 40. New stamped, 667, b 10. Diuerse sorts newlie ordeined, 791, b 60. Of gold set at their valuation, 893, b 60 Salute, 578

Coine clipped an ordinance for the same: note, 241, a 10

Coine clippers, washers, &c, searched for, 279, b 30

Coine clippers both gold and siluer executed as traitors, 1262, a 40: note, 1270, a 30

Coine counterfeitors executed, 1271, a 60, 1211, a 60

Coine executed, 792, a 20

Colchester castell besieged, and deliuered to king Iohn, 190, b 30

Colleo denised in honour of Thomas Becket: note, 85, b 20. ¶ See Nazarene.

Collegion. ¶ See officers.

Collingborne a fautour of the earle of Richmond, his purpose to aid him at Poole in Dorsetshire, indicted to be a libeller against the king, he is executed, 746, b 10, &c.

Collingham a valorous gentleman of Fuller, 192, a 50

Colonie of southerne men planted in Carleil, 189, b 60

Combat appointed at Tuthill, for a controuersie of land, but not tried: note, 1225, b 60, 1226, a 10, &c: with the lord Fleming, sent for by sir George Careie, 1218, a 10. Fought at Westminster, 379, b 50. In a case of debate, appointed and disappointed, 388, a 10. Required betwixt the king of England & France, for triall of all matters in controuerlie betweene them 152, a 30. Purposed in a controuerlie of lands, 100, b 50. Betwixt Henrie de Esser, and Robert de Montfort, 67, a 20. Fought betwixt two esquires of diuersing nations, 446, a 60. Betweene two dukes, staied by Richard the second, 493, a 60. Appointed betweene the duke of Lancaster, and the duke of Norfolke, 494, b 30, &c, 495, a 10, &c Betweene a knight and an esquire, with the maner therof: note, 424, b 50, 425, a 10, &c. For triall of treason, in what case lawfull: note, 424, b 10. Betweene two Scottish gentlemen, accusing each other, 992, b 60, 993, a 10. Betweene Henrie the fift, and monsieur Waulason, 577, a 10, 60, b 10, &c. Vpon triall of manhood betweene an Englishman & a French, 628, b 40. Appointed and disappointed, 626, b 10. Betweene Iulian Romeron, and Marow, 974, b 60. The French king challengeth the emperor thereto, and giueth him the lie, 905, b 60

Comet. ¶ See Blasingstar.

Commandement bloudie, executed on the English, 10, b 10

Common crier for sale of houshold stuffe, 1207, a 50

Commons propouned certeine articles against the duke of Suffolke, 631, a 30

Commotion of the commons in diuerse parts of the realme, by reason of the great subsidie, and other oppressions, 429 a 60, b 10, &c. In Summersetshire & other places: note, 1002, a 40. In Yorkeshire, 672, a 10. In Norwich against the prior of the place: note, 626, a 60. ¶ See Insurrection, Rebellion, and Subsidie.

Communion booke and common prayer published, 996, b 10. Confirmed, 1066, a 60.

Communion in both kinds, 980, a 10. Received of six bishops, 1185, a 60

Companie lewd, and what mischefe and disorder it worketh, 318, b 10. With ill counsell how mischeefous, 321, b 10

Compassion of an Englishman to a French, 628, b 50. Of Penbrun warbecke counterfet, 781, a 40

Compiegne surrendered to the English by a policie, recouered from the French, 587, a 60, b 30.

Complaint out of England to Rome against Henrie the third, 222, b 30. Made to the pope by the monks of Christs church of their archbishop, 153, a 20. Of Becket to the pope, 72, b 50. Of Iustine to the pope against William Rufus, 26, a 10. ¶ See Clergie.

Compremise. ¶ See abitrement.

Compulsion voluntarie, 1015, a 30

Conan the sonne of Alane earle of Britaine, married to a kings daughter, 7, b 30

Concubine of the duke of Lancaster married vnto him, 485, b 60, 486, a 10. Of the duke of Glocester, whom he marieth, 590, a 60. Three of Edward the fourth, 725, a 10. ¶ See Shores wife, Perers, and Priests.

Concubines loue to hir paramour, notable, 149, b 60

Conduit at Walbrooke new built, 1221, a 60. In Holburne founded and finished, 1311, b 60. In Cheapside builded, 704, b 10. At Bishopsgate builded, 792, b 10

Confession of the duke of Suffolke at his beheading, 1100, b 60, 1101, a 10. Of sir Thomas Palmer on the scaffold at Tower hill, 1090, a 60. Voluntarie of Francis Throckmorton the traitor, written to queene Elisabeth, with his letters of submission: note, 1373, b 60, 1374, &c. Voluntarie of Parrie the notable traitor that ment to haue murthered the queene, 1384, b 60, 1385, 1386, 1387. Of the ladie Jane at hir beheading, 1099, b 60, 1100, a 10. Of sir Thomas Wiat, before iudgement passed against him, 1104. Of the duke of Northfolke, when he should be executed on Tower hill: note, 1229, b 20, &c, 1230. Of Richard the first his lewd life: note, 126, b 10. Of Jack Straw at the time of his death, 438, b 10. Of the duke of Summerset at his death on the Tower hill, 1068, a 10, b 50. Of the lord Cromwell when he was beheaded, 951, b 20. Of Elisabeth Barton the holie maid of Kent, at hir execution, 937, a 40. Particular spoken against, and how the same was punished: note, 968, b 30

Confirmation of children by the bishop, 1003, a 40

Coniers knight, a capteine of Durham tower, 101, a 20. Of rare valiantnesse, 672, a 50

Coniunction of Iupiter and Saturne, 484, b 40. Prophesied, but the prophesier deceiued, 1356, b 30, &c.

Coniuror suddenlie dieth when a case of his should haue beene tried in law: note, 1271, a 20. Punished: note, 348, a 50, 60, b 10. Hanged, 1314, b 60

Connagh in Ireland how seated, 81, b 60. A kingdome, 96, b 40. The king thereof entreth into the marches of England, he and his are banquished, 212, b 59, 60. The king is taken and committed to prison, 213, a 10

Conquest and diuerse other places burnt by the lord admerall of England, 814, b 10. Taken and burned, 1151, a 10

Conrade duke of Austrich. ¶ See duke.

Conscience guiltie of an offendors banquet: note, 1228, b 50, 60. Guiltie in extremitie of sickenesse pincheth sore, 541, a 40. Grudging and accusing what a torment, 735, b 50. Troubled for offence of rebellion: note, 18, a 30. Guiltie. ¶ See Suspicion.

Consecration of bishop Samuell: note, 22, a 40. Of Richard archbishop of Canturburie disturbed by pope king Henrie, 85, b 60, 86, a 10. Of churches in what respect allowed, 30, b 50. Of Thomas archbishop of Yorke vpon his submission, and recouereth his pall 36, b 40. Of the archbishop of Yorke deferred: note 35, all. Of bishops denied because of their investiture by the king: note, 31, a 60, b 10. Of the archbishop of Canturburie by pope Calixtus, 40, a 50. Of Eadmer, whereabout was contention, 41, a 20. Of the Lords bodie, 1003, a 50, &c. Of an Irish bishop, 22, b 60

Conspiracie against king William Rufus, to put him beside the crowne, 17, a 10, 20. Of Robert earle of Northumberland, and whie, 21, b 30. In Northfolke towards, and how extinguished: note, 1221, b 60, 1222, a 10. Of the lords against Henrie the third, 209, a 50, 60, &c, b 10. Of Foukes de Brent, against Henrie the third, and his foule end, 206, a 40. Against the lord cheefe iustice, 205, a 40. To set prisoners at libertie, 333, a 30. Of lords against king Iohn, 184, a 10, 185, a 30, &c. Of lords banding themselues against king Iohn, 185, a 10. Of great men against king Stephan, 48, b 60. Disclosed, and the discloser slaine, 531, b 40. What an ill euent it hath, 539 a 40, 60, b 30, &c. A fresh against Henrie the fourth, by the earle of Northumberland and others, 529, a 60. Of the Persies with Owen Glendouer, 521, b 50, 522, 523. Deuised, but not practised, and yet punished: note, 520, a 10, &c. Against Henrie the fourth & the partias executed, 516, a 50, 60, b 10, &c. Of the noblemen strangelie disclosed: note 515, a 10, 20. Of the abbat of Westminster against Henrie the fourth: note, 514, b 20. Betweene the duke of Glocester and the abbat of saint Albons, their purpose, & is disclosed, 488, b 10, 40, 50. Of Richard the second against the duke of Glocester, 489, a 60. Of Frenchmen against the English, 568, b 60. Of nobles against Edward the fourth: note, 670, b 20, 30, 671 672, &c. Of the Parliens against the duke of Bedford punished punished with death, 86, a 60

At Excester against Richard the third, some of the parties executed, 746, a 10, 30. Of the duke of Buckingham against Richard the third, had ill successe: note, 743, a 10, &c, 744, a 10, &c. Against Henrie the seauenth, and what an ill end it had, 765, 766, 767, a 10, &c. Against the prince faileth out alwaie to the cõfiderators shamefull death, 790, a 30, 40.
& rautõzous: note, 941, vpon a malcontentment. ¶ See Lincolnelhiremen. Against the ladie Elisabeth whiles she was in trouble, 1137, a 50, 60, b 10, &c. Against quéene Marie, sozting to an euill end: note, 1132, a 20, 40, 60. Of quéene Maries death, and the offenoors executed, 1117, a 60. ¶ See Duke of Buckingham, Noblemen, Rebellion.
Conspiratozs ouerthzowne and discomfited: note, 18, a 10, 20. Extreamlie punished, and that diuerslie, 21, b 60. Vanquished and punished: note, 188, a 30, 40. In league, and inuade Henrie the seconds dominions, 87, b all. Against Henrie the first, to put him beside the crowne, 29, b 20
Constable. ¶ See France.
Constables of England, called high constables, the office ending in the duke of Buckingham, 865, b 60, 866, &c.
Constance the mother of duke Arthur. ¶ See Duke.
Constance wife to Eustace sent home, 61, a 30
Constancie of the archbishop of Yozke, 256, b 40. Of the earle of Carlill at his death, 334, a 60. In martyzdom, 536, a 60. Of a good Jew in christianitie, 27, a 60
Constantia the daughter of Margaret countesse of Bzitaine, how married, 7, b 30
Constantinople the emperoz thereof commeth into England, 222, a 60
Contention betwixt the earles of Leicester and Glocester, 261, b 10. Betweene the two pzinces of wales pursued: note, 226, b 20, &c. Betwixt pzelats, 244, b 10. Betweene Henrie the third, and the bishop of Lincolne, 228, b 40. Betwixt Frederike the emperour and pope Innocent, 224, b 30. Betwixt two welsh pzinces foz the pzincipalitie, 224, b 10. Betweene the archbishop of Canturburie and the earle of Kent, 213, a 40, &c. Newlie broched by the archbishop of Canturburie, 204, b 60. Betwixt the earles of Leicester and Glocester, 259, a 60. About the chosing of the emperoz, 155, a 20. Betweene bishops foz superiozitie, 133. a 60. Betwixt two ambitious bishops, 121, a 50. Betweene Henrie the second and Thomas Becket, 68, b 20. Betweene bishops, 36, b 60, 37, a 10. About the election of the maioz of London, 445, a 60. Hot betweene William Rufus & Anselme, 24, 25. ¶ See Discozd, Dissention, Variance.
Contracts of marriage to be void without witnesses, 30, b 60. ¶ See Mariage.
Contribution appointed by Henrie the second, 74, a 60
Controuersie betwixt king Henrie the third, and the bishop of winchester, 231, b 60, 232, a 10. About the crowne of Scotland, 285, b 60, 286, a all. Betweene the archbishop of Canturburie & the monks 120, b 10. Betwixt the nobles and peres appealed by Henrie the first, 38, a 60. ¶ See Combat and Contention.
Conuocation at westminster called by bishop Longchamp, 129, a 20. ¶ See Councell and Synod.
Coke Anthonie. ¶ See Iustis triumphant.
Copland refuseth to deliuer his pzisoner the king of Scots to anie except to the king of England, 376, a 60
Copsti slaine by Osulfe, 13, a 30
Cozdes lozd a Frenchman maketh aduantage of occasion, 770, a 60. his malicious and foolish wozds, 771, a 20
Coznuthuien strong archers, 982 b 10. Rebell against Henrie the seauenth, their shamefull end, 781, b 20, 30, &c. 782, a 10, &c.
Cozonation solemne and statelie of Richard the second, 416, a 60, b 10, &c, 417, a 10, &c. Of Richard the first roiall, 118, a 30
Corpus Christi college in Oxford, by whome and when founded, 839, b 50, 60
Colneie besieged by the Dolphin, & relieued by the duke of Bedfozd, 582, b 40, 60
Cottelhold sheepe transported into Spaine, 668, b 10
Couentrie the quaines Hastis the sixts wife secret harbour, 654, a 30. She is a better capteine than the king her husband, 654, a 50. The church when and by whom ioined to the see of Chester, 19 b 60
Couetousnesse of Henrie the first: note, 37, a 60 Of Cardinall Vitiano noted, 100, a 10, b 10. Of the emperoz, hauing Richard the first his pzisoner, 137, a 30 Of the emperoz notable against honestie and honour, 141, a 20, 30, 40, 50. To be noted in Richard the firsts demands, 124, b 40. Of king John, 184, b 20. Of cardinall Gualo, 187, b 20. Of Guala notable, 193, a 20. Of duke William, 8, a 40, b 50. Of William Rufus, 18, b 10, 20, b 10. Purchased Henrie the seuenth hatred among his people, 791, b 20, 30, 40. Of two monks, 18, b 50. Of officers in a collection, 139, a 60. Inueighed against, 213, a 60, b 10. Of monie the cause of murther: note, 1228, b 20, &c. Cloaked with an excuse, 37, b 10. ¶ See Flemings, and Rome.
Councell held at Rockingham castell: and white, 25, a 10. Held at London, 204, b 60. Generall summoned by the pope, 236, b 20, 237, a 10, &c. In Edward the thirds ship, 368, a 10. Of the cleargie called by the cardinall, 181, b 40. At Yozke, 322, a 60. At Westminster by the archbishop of Canturburie, 162, a 10. At Winchester and traitoz pzoclamed, 143, b 10. At Canturburie, 110, b 20. At Pipewell, 139, a 60. At London by king Henrie the first, and white, 34, a 30. At Oxford, 68, a 60. At Clarendon, 70, a 30. At Tours, 69, a 60. Generall at Rome, 102, b 20. At Westminster, 85, a 60. At Gillington, 111, b 60. Of bishops, 71, a 20. At Carlill, called by K. Henrie the second, 82, a 40. Of lozds at Clarkenwell, 108, b 30. Generall at Pisa, 535, a 20. Pzouinciall, 535, a 20. At Stamford, 477, b 30. At Nottingham, and who pzesent, 456, a 60. Generall at Constance, 547, a 40. Generall the pzerogatiue of the English nation, 558, a 60. Of Henrie the first, most spirituall persons: note, 622, b 60. ¶ See Assemblie, Folkmote, Parlement, & Synod.
Counsell good, the want wherof a cause of committing foule sinnes: note, 18, b 10. Euill of nobles to duke Robert, to put king William his brother from the crowne, 17, b 10, 20. Good of Lanfranke to William Rufus, to win and keepe fauour of people, &c, 16, b 10. Of strangers followed, honestie refused, 231, a 30. Good giuen, and safetie followed: note, 215, a 10, 20, 30. That hzed grudge and mislike betweene Henrie the third and his nobles, 205, b 40. Euill turneth to the hurt of the counsellor, 205, a 40. Euill of a bishop to his souereigne, against the commonwealth, 204, b 60. Euill falleth out ill to the counsell giuer: note, 204, a 40, 50. Euill and lewd companie how mischeeuous, 321, b 10. Good giuen, ill rewarded, 332, a 40. Good not to vse reuenge, 188, a 30. Good ill requited, 184, b 20. Giuen foz the which the counsellors were curssed, 168, b 50, 60, 169 a 10. Of euill persons to the soone against the father, dangerous to a state, 86, a 50, b 10 Euill sozteth ill to the counsellor, 112, a 50. Lewd faileth out ill to the counsellor, 28, b 30. Euill and dangerous, 430 b 20. Good neglected, 447, b 50. Euill and what inconuenience followeth it: note, 507, b 50. Taken how to deale with the lozds that conspired against Richard the second, 458, b 20. Euill how pzeualent and mischeeuous, 670, b 30, 50, &c. Of the lozd Hastings to his acquaintance: note, 675, b 10. Of a damsell to the duke of Clarence, 675, a 10, 20. Good regarded of a king: note, 852. Ill giuen to a king, 248, a 60. Euill giuen & followed: note, 12, a 40. Couetous & mischeeuous of the earle of Hereford pzactised, 8, b 60. ¶ See warnings.
Counter in woodstreet not ancient, 1129, b 40
Counterfet of Richard Plantaganet, 775, a 60
Counterfet earle of warwike, 785, a 30
Counterfet king Edward the sixt, whipped, and executed as a traitoz, 1127, a 40, and b 10
Counterfet king Richard the second, 515, a 50, 525, b 10
Counterfet duke of Yozke. ¶ See Perkin Wardecke.
Counterfet Christ whipped, 1194, a 10
Counterfet to be possessed with the deuill, punished by doing open penance, 1259, b 60
Counterfet spirit in a wall without Aldersgate, 1117, b 60. ¶ See Dissimulation and Dissemblers.
Counterfetting of licences, and antedating them, 953, a 20 ¶ See Antedating.
Counterfetting of quæne Elisabeths hand, punished as an offense treselonable, 1227, b 60, 1315, a 40
Countesse of Wierne a woman receiueth soldiors paie, 230, 30. Of Broughardir punishment foz setting the crowne on Robert Bzuse his head: note, 314, a 10. Of Oxford pzactise to bzute that Richard the second was aliue, 525, a 60. Committed to pzison, 525, b 20. Deceaseth, 702, b 40, 237 b 20
Countesse of Pzouance commeth ouer into England, 231 b 50, 240, b 20. Dealeth vntiuilie with Henrie the third his sonne in law, 238, a 40
Countesse of Richmond and Derbie, &c, mother to Henrie the seauenth, 678, a 60
Countesse of Salisburie beheaded, being the last of the right line and name of Plantagenet, 953, a 60
Countesse of Warwike taketh sanctuarie, 685, b 50
Court, certeine lozds, ladies, and others put out of Richard the seconds court, 463, a 50, 60
Court misliked, 496, a 60
Courtneie lozd, pzisoner in the Towze, he hath pziue enimies, 1101, b 10, &c, 1102, a 10, &c.
Courtneie earle of Deuonshire goeth ouer into Italie, deceaseth, descended of the bloud roiall, 1129, a 20, 30.
Couper. ¶ See Follie.
Coz doctoz the duke of Summersets ghostlie father at his death, 1069, a 40
Cranmer arreigned of treason, 1093, a 30. Nominated archbishop of Canturburie, 929, b 30. He, Latimer & Ridlie sent to Oxford to dispute, 1102, b 60. Committed to the tower, 1090, b 60. Examined, condemned, burned, described, 1131, b 20, 30, 60
Credulitie how mischeeuous, 780, a 40, 50, &c: 781, a 10, &c.
Creichton a Scot apzehended with diuerse plots foz inuasion of this realme, 1387, b 60
Creplegate builded, 705, b 40
Crispine William taken pzisoner, 33, a 40. ¶ See earle.
Crokes knight, generall of Hadington, 996, b 60 Examined touching the ladie Elisabeth, 1154, a 60. Went to talke with the quéene of Scots, 1188, a 10. His militarie seruice in Scotland, 1187, a 30
Crotoie besieged by the duke of Burgognie, & relieued, 616, b 10
Crome at Pauls crosse recanteth, 973, b 30, 40
Cromwell sometimes cardinall Wolseis seruant, aduanced to Henrie the eights seruice, 913, b 20. Maister of the iewell house, 929, b 50. Created lozd lord and keeper of the priuie seale, 941, a 10. Made knight of the garter, 944, b 20. Lord earle of Essex, & great chamberleine of England, 950, b 50, 60. Committed to the Towre, 951, a 10. The words he spake at his death, 951, b 20. A description of him by sundrie circumstances, b 60, 952, a 10, 20, &c.

Crosse called the blacke crosse, 347, b 30. Of the bishop of Elie and the priut thereof, 131, b 60. The signe thereof solemnlie vsed by the duke of Lancaster, 505, b 30. And the priuiledge of those that tooke vpon them the same, 191, a 60. Preached against Mankred, 252, b 10. Seene in the aire long and large, with a crucifix, 113, b 30. In Cheape defaced: note, 1321, b 30.

Crosses red, white, and greene differences of nations: note, 111, b 10

Crokbie knight his gift to the citie of London, 702, a 50

Crowne established by act of parlement: note, 937, a 60. And what king John did for feare to be deprived thereof, 7, b 30. Intailed, 514, a 20. ¶ See Oth, Parlement, Succession.

Crowne of sedges and bulrushes set vpon the duke of Yorkes head in derision, 659, b 50

Cruelties paid with sudden mischefe, 664, b 20. Of the Britans and Flemings, 525, a 50. Beastlie and barbarous, 528, a 30. Restreined by Gods iudgment, 147, a 40, 50. Without direction of iustice, 173, b 30 Of king John by the preching of Cementarius a preacher, 173, b 60. Of duke William against the English, 14, a 20, 8, a 30, 40, b 50. Of the Scots, 299, a 60. Of king Malcolme against the English, 10, b 10. Of the papists in queene Maries time toward the martyrs, 1363, a 40, 50. Ioined with victorie, 23, a 50. And extremitie shewed vnto gentlemen by rebels, 1052, b 20. ¶ See Frenchmen.

Culpepper vndermarshall of Calis, 819, b 30

Culuerings seauen, called the seauen sisters, taken from the Scots, 829, a 60. ¶ See Guns.

Cumberland sore spoiled by the Scots, 447, b 40

Cumin Robert captein against the Northumbers in a rebelion, 6, b 10

Curcie Iohn winneth Dun in Vlster, 100, a 30. His valiantnesse, 100, b 40

Curcie Robert slaine, 67, a 10

Curfue, or couer fue, when and whie first instituted, 6, a 50

Cursse of duke William against Robert his rebellious sonne, 12, a 40. Of archbishop Geffrie of Yorke, 170, b 50. Of Thomas Becket for curtailing his horsse, 79, b 60. Of the pope against the archbishop of Yorke: note, 256, b 40. Against the troublers of peace, 273, a 40. Vpon the people of the south parts of England, 214, b 30. Against the breakers of Oxford statutes, 262, a 10. For oppressing of the poore, and how feared: note, 171, a 40. Of a legat to Lewis the French kings sonne, 200, a 10. A great peece of ecclesiasticall discipline in old time: note, 35, b 60, 36, a 10. Euerie sundaie to be read, 31, a 20. ¶ See Pope.

Cursses of the oppressed heard and reuenged: note, 1066, a 50

Curthose Robert, Henrie the first his brother, dieth for greefe, 44, b 50

Custome that the kings of Englands eldest sons were euer made dukes of Normandie, 38, a 30. Of buieng and selling of men like oxen & kine, 31, a 10. Of woll, and the augmentation thereof grudged at: note, 304, b 10. Raised to an higher price, 303, a 40

D.

Dacre lord knight of the garter, generall of a power sent against the Wrzes, 808, b 60. His companie readie at Plimmouth, honourablie received of the king of Aragons councell, discontented at a bishops declaration, 809, b 10, 40, 60. His returne out of Spaine. 810, a 40

Dacres lord arreigned, but found cleere to his great honor, 937, b 60. Arreigned for murther, executed at Tiburne: note, 954, a 40, 60. Rebelleth, 1213, a 20. Flieth into Scotland, 1213, a 50

Dale pewterer his fault and releasment after long imprisonment: note, 968, b 30

Damiets, 202, a 40. ¶ See Saracens.

Dampfront yelded to Henrie the fift, 563, a 20

Dampost one of the gard hanged for robbing, 953, a 60, b 10

Danes rob the English merchants, and win great prises, 485, a 10. Arrived in England to ioine with the rebels against duke William, and returne doing nothing, 11, b 30. Winter betwixt Dale and Trent, 7, a 40. Wasted and ruinated religious places in the north parts, 11, a 20. Vnder the conduct of Canute, &c preuaile mightilie in the North, 6, b 50, 7 a 30. ¶ See Normans, Sweine.

Darlington knight, lord gardian of London, renowned, 478, a 60, b 10

Daubeneie lord with others sent against the French king, his feats of armes, 770, b 10, &c. Henrie the seauenths chefe chamberleine, 779, a 60. Deceaseth, 795, b 10

Dauid of Wales reuolteth, and becommeth a rebell, 280, b 60. Condemned of treason, & executed, 282, a 60, b 10

Debate betwixt the dukes of Lancaster and Wtnswike, 381, a 10. Betwixt the townsmen and scholers of Oxford: note, 381, b 20. And how it was ended and taken by, 382 a 50, 60, b 10, &c. ¶ See Contention.

Debt of Henrie the third, three hundred thousand markes, 252, a 20. Henrie the thirds sparing to bring him out of it, 242, b 20. Maketh foes of freends: note, 312, a 20

Dedication of churches. ¶ See Church.

Deed of gift with the forme thereof in duke Williams time, 7, b 10

Delaies did not William Rufus vse, but exceeding speed: note, 23, b 20. Breedeth losse: note, 17, b 60

Demands of the pope of a large tenth, 210, b 60. Out of spirituall liuings in England, 208, a 40, 50. In a treatie of peace, 160, b 20. Moderated, 480, a 60. Hard, that hindered the peace betweene England and France, 410, a 60, b 10. Too large, & hinder the concluding of peace, 362, a 60. Verie large for a dowzie of gold and siuer, 124, b 40. Vnreasonable, 233, a 50, 60. Presumptuous of the French king concerning peace, 388, b 10

Denie Edward. ¶ See Iusts triumphant.

Denmarke king arriueth in England, the citie of London banket him, he departeth into Flanders, 878, a 60, b 10. Inuested into the order of the garter, 1348, a 50

Derision of the Englishmen in a rime, 347, a 40. Of queene Ione, called Ione Makepeace, 347, b 50. Of the duke of Yorke aspiring to the crowne, 659, b 50, Lewis his faire, 200, b 10

Derth, 381, a 50. Of corne, 473, a 20, 204, b 30, 292, b 40. Increaseth, 323, a 30, 260, a 10. By means of raine, 404, b 60, 58, a 60. By extreame cold weather, 217, b 50. After a wet season, 898, b 40. Of victels: note, 959, b 50, 616, b 10. 237, b 50. For space of three yeares, 156, b 60. Made markers deere, 284, b 20. Throughout all England, 150, b 30. Exceeding great, 257, a 40. In Henrie the thirds campe: note, 248, b 50

Derth and plentie, 1133, a 30. Without scarsitie and plentie to them that had monie, 1259, b 10. Where none needed, 476, b 40

Derth and death, 323, b 50, 258, a 30, 97, a 50, 323, a 10, 351, a 40. ¶ See Scarsitie.

Desire hard to be brideled: note 576, a 10

Desmond Iohn his miserable end: note, 1366, a 10, &c. ¶ See more in earle of Desmond.

Desperation, 677, a 10

Destinie cannot be auoided, 639 b 10

Deth of great personages, 312, b 30, 295, b 60, 263, a 10, 247, a 20, 236, a 50, 239, a 60, 241, a 50, 240, b 10, 352, b 10, 20, 231, b 10, 244, b 40, 230, b 50, 228, b 50, 223, b 30, 514, b 10, 1171, b 50, 60, 795, b 10, &c, 30, 791, a 10, 950, a 60, 944, b 60, 108, a 30, &c, 481, a 20, 30. In Spain through heat of that countrie, 450, a 60, b 10, 395, b 30, 237, b 30. And multitudes of people, 410, a 30. Of learned bishops, 249, a 10. In one yeare, 778, b 20. Of seauen aldermen in London within the space of ten moneths, 1209, b 60. ¶ See Aldermen.

Deth preferred before losse of monie, 252, b 40. Great by the flix, 537, a 20. Of people, 21, a 30. Desperate of Summertuile, 1366, a 20. In Winter, 892, b 30. Of much people in London, &c, 825, a 60. By strange diseases: note, 1332, b 10. By the sword preferred before famishment, 166 b 20. Of old people, 1142, a 50. After a great derth, 97, a 50. Of horsse and men in the English host, 445, b 30. In the North countries, with spoile done by the Scots, 422, b 60. In Yorke and sundrie other places, 475, b 10. Of men and beasts, called the third mortalitie, 404, b 20. After a sort sudden, 397, b 50. Most men, few women, 395, a 50. Of people betwixt Candlemas and Easter, 379, b 30. Lamentable, 323, b 50. It endeth discord: note, 395, a 60. ¶ See Buriall.

Death sudden of sir Thomas Cresham, 1310, b 50. Of a woman that forsware hir selfe. ¶ See Periurie. Of a sorcerer: note, 1271, a 20. Of queene Anne, the wife of Richard the third, 751, a 40. Sudden and dreadfull of a blasphemous preacher, 1128, b 60, 1129, a 10. Of a mercilles & tyrannicall bishop, 1130, a 60. Of the erle of Suffolke: note, 440, a 10. ¶ See Abbat.

Deth and derth, 323, a 10, 258, a 30, 217, b 50, 953, a 10: note, 1049, a 10, 404, b 60, 378, b 20, 30. ¶ See Mortalitie, Plage, Pestilence, & Sweating sicknesse.

Deuotion superstitious of Henrie the yong prince: note, 107 a 20. ¶ See Monke knight.

Dikes about London cleansed, 789, b 40, 50

Diet of free cost: note, 1425, b 60 Moderated by an ordinance made by the maior and aldermen, 959, b 60, 960, a 10. Excessiue restreined, 111, b 40 A statute concerning it: note, 396, a 50

Digbie Edward. ¶ See Iusts triumphant.

Digeon. ¶ See Gun.

Dimmocke knight his challeng at Richard the thirds coronation, 734, a 40. The kings champion, the manner of his tenure at a coronation, 802, a 20. His championlike office, 1180, a 40

Dinham esquier high treasuror of England, 650, b 30. Valiant, 651, a 20. He and baron Carew with their powers come to Excester, 676, a 40.

Diram and Culpepper queene Katharins paramors, arreigned at Guildhall, executed, 954, b 30, 60, 955, a 10

Discord what commeth of it, 406, a 10. Vnnaturall of brethren abhorred, 30, a 10. Betweene the French king and his nobles, 103, b 40. Betweene Henrie the second and the French king, 107, b 30. Causing ciuill warre that might haue beene forseene 83 a 10. Maintened betweene sonnes by the mother, 86, b 60 87, a 10. Sowne betwixt Henrie the father and Henrie the son, 84, a 20. Increseth betweene Henrie the second and Thomas Becket: note, 69, b 40. Enuious among the christians, 134, a 20. Betwixt the pope and the emperor, 75, b 10, b 10. Betwixt the cardinall and the archbishop of Canturburie, 182, a 40. Betwixt king John and his barons, with the causes, 184, b 20. Jt and concord with their differing effects, 1054, b 20. What it bréedeth, 672, b 40. In an armie the hinderer of all profitable enterprises, 126, a 30. Ciuill, & inconueniences thereof, 636, a 30, b 20. &c, 60. Among the French nobles, 557, a 60. Giueth opportunitie to the enimie: note, 19, b 10. Offereth occasion of inuasion: note, 21, b 20. How inconuenient, 1, a 40, 50. About trifles, and how vnhappie it fell out, 13, b 30, &c. Betwixt Sauerie de Mauleon and the earle of Salisburie, 206, a 20. Betwixt the Normans mariners and them of Baion, 288, b 30. Betwixt Edward the firsts men and the Gantners, 306, a 50. Betwixt préests and friers, 392, a 20. Of three or foure yeares ended by the death of one man, 395, a 60. ¶ See Contention and Malice.

Disme granted of the clergie, 409, a 10. To Edward the first and his brother, 277, b 10. To Henrie the third by the pope, for one whole yeare, 271, b 10

Disobedience of the bishop of Norwich to Richard the second punished, 445, a 20. Of the archbishop Thurstane against Henrie the first, 38, b 10. To Richard the firsts commandement, 140, b 50. 10. Maintained, 86, b, all, 87, a 50. Of erle Robert of Leicester, 89, b 50. In Henrie the sonne to Henrie the second his father, 76, b 10, &c. 77, a 20. To the prince, a sinne most abhominable, 1044, a 40. To the king, is disobedience to God, 1004, b 60. Of a subiect against his king sending for him, 21, b 30. Of the nobles to Edward the first: note, 302, a 60, b 10. Jtand presumption of the bishop of Durham against Edward the first: note, 315, a 60, 99, b 10. ¶ See Rebellion.

Dispensation. ¶ See Mariage, and Pope.

Disputation of grammar schoolers, 1129, b 10, &c.

Dissemblers punished, 203, b 40, 50

Dissention among the Noblemen, 451, b 40. Betwéene Richard the second and the parlement house, 452, b 10. And his nobles, 458, a 30. The fruites thereof, 1012, b 40. In France made the earle of Richmond renew his sute, and put him to his shifts, 752, a 60. He hath men and monie of the French king for hostages, he is greeued at the newes of king Richard the thirds intended marriage with his neece, 752, b 30, 50, Ciuill among Noblemen, prosecuted with sword and slaughter: note, 672, a 10, 60, b 10, &c. Betwixt the duke of Glocester and the bishop of Winchester, 590, b 60, 591, a 10, &c. Order taken by the lords for the pacifieng thereof, 594, b 30, &c, 595, a 10, &c, 620, a 30, 50, &c. Ciuill and the inconuenience thereof, 645, b 20. Among the Scotish nobilitie, 531, b 40. Betwixt prince Edward and the earle of Glocester, 262, a 60

Dissimulation of Edward the seconds wife, 336, b 30. To auoid danger: note, 498, b 60, 490, a 10. Of yong king Henrie: note, 106, b 30. Notable of a wench counterfetting a spirit, 1117, b 60. Of Wolsie, 909, a 10. Of the French king, 774, b 40. Of the duke of Glocester dangerous, 715, b 40. To auoid imminent danger, 124, a 20. Of Richard the first did him no good: note, 135, b 50. Most profound and notable, 721, a 40. Singular of duke Richard the third, 731, b 10, 732, a 30, 40. Of the erle of Warwike, 667, b 20. Of the king of Cipres, 128, a 10. Of Edward the fourth, to passe the countries without danger, and bring his purpose to passe, 679, a 40, &c, b 10, &c. Of the duke of Clarence, 681, b 60. Of the high constable of France, 695, a 50. Of the French king vpon a naughtie meaning, 698, b 30. With other ill qualities: note, 600, b 10, &c. Notable, 548, b 10. Of Parrie notorious, 1393, b 20, 1382, b 10. ¶ See Flatterie and Policie.

Diuell appeareth in the likenesse of a frier, 520, a 50

Division in a realme, and the mortall mischéefe thereof, 630, b 60

Diuorse sought betwéene honorable personages, 458, a 10. Betwéene Henrie the eight and quéene Katharine. ¶ See Quéene Katharine.

Dog in a rochet vnder the name of Gardiner. 1143, a 20

Dolphin of France commended, 560, b 20. Fleeseth his old mother of hir treasure, and what mischéefe rose thereof, 560, b 30. Causeth solemne iusts to be proclamed at Paris, 833, a 10, &c. He is hurt in the hand, b 50. His secret malice, 60. Commeth before Bullen with a great power, 969, b 60. Causeth himselfe to be proclamed king of France, 585, b 50. He is tempering with the English, 586, a 10. Sentence against him for the murther of John duke of Burgundie, 578, b 30. Pursued by Henrie the fift, 580, b 60. Whie called king of Berrie, 581, a 10. Calling himselfe king of Sicill, 552, a 40. Deceaseth, 556, a 60. Whie the sunne and heire of euerie French king is so called, 1141, b 60

Dolphins taken in the Thams 1083, a 50. At London bridge 477, a 40

Douer robbed by the French, 295, b 10. A conuenient and perpetuall harborough for ships: 1545, a 10, &c. The castell inuincible, 191, b 50. Deliuered to Henrie the third, 271, b 60. ¶ See Castell.

Dowrie verie large demanded: note, 124, b 40

Drake sir Francis. ¶ See Voiage.

Drake sir Barnard knight, deceaseth, 1547, b 60, 1548, a 40

Drake burning séene in the aire 277, b 40.

Dragon fierie séene in diuerse places, 484, b 30. Two séene fighting in the aire, 216, b 30.

Dreame of a knight that had long haire: note, 46, a 10. Of Richard the thirds, foretelling him of his end, 755, a 50. Of William Rufus: note, 26, b 10. Of a monke concerning William Rufus, 26, b 20

Dreames of Henrie the first, strange and troublesome, 43, b 60. Horrible that vexed Richard the second, after the execution of the earle of Arundell, 492, a 20. Import somewhat to befall, 44, a 10. And prognosticat the true euent of an action, 723, a 30

Dreux besieged and rendred to the Englishmen, 580, b 30

Drie wednesdaie, 818, b 20

Drinke more than ordinarie taken, causeth forgetfulnesse of good aduise, 26, b 30

Dronkennesse the ouerthrow of right and manhood: note, 626, b 20

Drought, 284, a 40. In the spring, 249, a 30. At Michaelmas, 249, a 30. Great, 245, b 40, 785, a 30. Exceeding great 381, a 40. ¶ See Summer.

Drowning of a lad in a kenell, 1260, a 10. Of people, castell, &c, by the breaking in of the sea, 220, a 60. Of aboue a thousand men in one place, and more in others: note, 423 a 60, b 10, &c.

Drurie captcine his good seruice at the rebellion in Norfolke, 1038, a 40. Knight, his militarie seruice, his aduancement, 1216, b 10, 40

Duchesse Katharine. of Suffolke hated of Stephan Gardiner: note, 1142, a 60, b 10, &c, Hir trouble, persecution, and voluntarie banishment, 1143, 1144, 1145. Of Glocester deceaseth, 514, b 10. Of Yorke mother to Edward the fourth, deceaseth, 779, b 10. Of Salisburie beheaded, 703 b 10. Of Bedford deceaseth, 607, b 50. Of Burgogne hir appeale, 578, a 30. ¶ See Margaret. Of Saxonie deliuered of a child, 106, a 10, 107, b 60. Of Sauoie, sends for aid to king Henrie the eight against the duke of Gelders, 810, a 50 Besteweth new cotes on the English souldiors, 810, b 60. Of Angoleme meet about a tretife of peace, 909, b 60

Duchmen come into England holding a contrarie opinion to the Romish church, 68, a 50 Two of strange and monstrous stature, 1322, a 10

Dudleie chosen speaker for the commons at the parlement, 791, b 60. ¶ See Empson.

Dudleie knight lord admerall setteth forth from London towards Scotland, 961, b 40. Went into France to receiue the French kings oth, his interteinment, 975, a 10, &c. Lord Howard impeacheth the French power, 1140, b 60. Lord Henrie slaine at the besieging of saint Quintans, 1134, b 10, 20. Bishop of Durham of honorable descent deceaseth, 761, b 40. Robert, the creation of him baron of Denbigh, and earle of Leicester, 1207, a 60, b 10. ¶ See Earle.

Duke Alan of Britain, 52, b 10, 51, b 60. Of Albanie leuieth an armie to inuade England, 875, b 20. Albert of Holland commeth into England, 556, b 60. In earnest mediator for peace, entreth in league with Henrie the fift, 557, a 10, b 20 Albert of Saxonie his policie to get the towne of Dam, he sendeth for aid to Henrie the sauenth to win Sluis, 772, a 20, 50

Duke of Alanson commeth into England, 1322, a 40. Departeth out of England with all the nobilitie and gentlemen attending vpon him, 1329. Attempteth diuerse exploits vnfortunatlie falling out, 1349, b 60. His ambition spreading like a canker, glad to retire notwithstanding a confident clamor, he sickneth, 1350, a all. Arriueth at Flushing, 1331, a 20. Received at Middleborough, 40. Refuseth to ride on horsebacke, b 60. Goeth to see the towne of Ermwiden, 1332, b 10. His ships painted with his owne colours, 20. He prepareth to make his entrie into Antwerpe, 40. His roiall interteinment: note, 50. Created duke of Brabant, the states promise their loialtie, an offer of the marquesship of the sacred empire, &c: 1336, all. His posie, & strange habilements, the order of his entring into Antwerpe, 1337, a 10, &c. Sailleth towards Antwerpe, landeth at a village in Brabant, a theater erected for him, kissing of his hand, his chaire of estate, obeisance done to him, 1334, all. The states loialtie vnto him, his answere vnto an oration made in their behalf, his promise euen to the shedding of his blood, he is content to sweare to articles agreed vpon 1335, b 10, &c. Reies of Antwerpe presented to him, a canopie caried ouer his head, 1338, a 10, 60. Readie to take his oth of the magistrats and people, it is read in French, he casteth largesse of gold & siluer among the people, 1342, a 10, &c. The manner of his diseale, 1351, a 10. His resolutenes to die, 50. Great hope conceiued of him if he had not beene preuented with death, b 20. Falleth into an extremitie of his maladie and past recouerie, 40. His words vpon his death bed, 1352, a 10, 30. His departure out of this world like a lampe, whose light faileth for want of oile, 30. His death greeuouslie lamented, 50, 60, 1353, a 10

Duke Alphonse of Calabrie made knight of the garter, 775, b 20

Duke Arthur of Britaine made knight, 160, a 10. His mistrust in his vncle king John, 160, b 60. Doth homage to K. John, 162, a 20. Proclameth himselfe earle of Anion, &c: 164, b 10. Taken prisoner, 164, b 60. His mother accuseth K. John for the murther of hir sonne, 166, a 10, 20. Committed to streict prison, 165, a 50. His death verie lamentable, 165, b all

Duke of Aumarle constable of England, 495, b 50. Accused 512, a 10. His answere vnto Bagots Bagots bill, he is appealed of treason, chalengeth triall with the lord Fitzwater, 512, a 10, &c.

Duke of Austrich white he bore king Richard no goodwill, 136, a 10. Thze atneth the English hostages with losse of life, 147, a 40. He catcheth a fall beside his horse, & dieth of the hurt, a 60
Duke Beaufort of Summerset son vnto him that was slaine, 645, a 10. Conan of Bzitaine deceaseth, 75, a 10. Geffrey of Bzitaine his homage, 75, b 60. Guidebald of Urbin in Italie made knight of the garter, 795, b 10. John the second & Philip the second aduancers of the state, 1343, a 30. Philip of Burgognie surnamed the Hardie, 1343. Hiward. ¶ Sée Siward. William of Aquitaine his feined freendship, 67, b 20. William of Normandie his politike conquest of England, 1, a 10. ¶ Sée William.
Duke of Bauier commeth to K. Henrie the fift with a number of horsemen, 577, a 50. He & his troupe departeth with king Henrie the fifts fauor, 578, b 10
Duke of Bedford against the lord Louell in armes, 764, b 10. Regent of England, 558, b 10. Calleth a parlement, 581, a 60. He rescueth Colnie 582, b 60. Giueth the French a great ouerthrow by sea, 557, a 40. Returneth into France, 596, a 60. His endeuors in France where he was regent, 585, a 40, b 20, &c. His decease: note, 612, a 50
Duke of Bzitaine pretendeth a right to the earledome of Westmerland, 513, b 60. Sendeth ambassadors to Henrie the fift, 582, b 60. His loue to the erle of Richmond and care of his safetie, 748, b 20. In armes against the French K. 767, a 10, &c: 768, a 10, &c. The battell is tried, he dieth, a 60. Restored to his dukedome 422, b 20. A freend to the Englishmen, 444, a 60. His dissimulation, he & the French K. accorded, 427, b 50, 60. Commeth ouer into Bzitaine, 408, a 40. Deceaseth, 367, b 40
Duke of Buckingham highlie commended, 737, b 40. Rich arraie, 801, a 10. Enuied & hated of cardinall Wolsele, 855, b 10, &c. Meanes to wind him out of Henrie the eights fauor, 855, b 40, 40, 60. Bils of complaints exhibited to him, he deprriueth Kneuet of his office, 856, a 10. He & his companie ioine with Henrie the seuenth against Perkin Warbecke, 784, a 50. His words to Q. Elisabeth, 717, b 40. His oration to the maior, aldermen, and commons at Guildhall, 728, a 60, &c. He & Glocester fall out, and whie, 376, a 30. They mistrust one an other, 736, a 50. Conspired against Richard the third, he is a professed enimie to him, his power of wild Welshmen (faint harted) do faile him, a great water his vndoing, his adherents & their power dispersed, 743, a 30, 50, b 10, 30, 60. The principall cause whie he conceiued such inward grudge against duke Richard the third, 739, b 20. His imaginations to deprriue Richard the third, 739, b 40, 60. Rewards promised by proclamation for the attaching of him, betrayed of his owne seruant, beheaded without arreignment or iudgement, 744, a 20, 50, b 10. Conuinced with others to worke mischiefe, 715, a 30. His resolution not to meddle in seeking to obteine the crowne, but by deposing Richard the third to preferr the earle of Richmond thereto, the summe of his purpose, 747, a 60, b 40, 60. Is sent to the duke of Yorke to know the cause of his being in armes, 643, a 40. Destruction deuised and practised, 862, b 50, 60. He is accused & indicted of treason, 863, a 10, &c: 864, a 10, &c. Areigned at westminster, conuinced of hie treason, iudgement giuen vpon him, beheaded on Towre hill, the last lord high constable of England, 865, a 20, 40. ¶ Sée Duke of Glocester.
Duke of Burbons practises to make the Englishmen reuolt from their owne king, 517, b 50. Incampeth neere Rone, slaine at the assait, 895, b 30, 60. Dieth at London, 610, a 40
Duke of Burgognie chiefe doer in France, 560, b 40. Prepareth to beliege Calis, 528, b 40. Enuieth the glorie of the English, 616, b 10. His oth to Henrie the fift, 572, b 40. Prepareth an armie against Calis, 613, b 40. His armie of 40000 men, b 60. Beliegeth it, his enterprise to bar the hauen, his bastile taken, he breaketh vp his siege, & flieth, 614, all. He & Charles of France at peace, and what mischiefe insued it, 611, a 50, 60, 612, a 10, &c. Commeth to king Edward the fourth, 695, a 20. He departeth suddenlie to the kings discontentment, a 60, b 10. Departeth from Edward the fourth in a rage, 698, a 30. Commeth in hast to Edward the fourth, 697, a 50. His behauiour and speech, a 60, b 10, &c. Sendeth ambassadors to Calis, 678, a 60. He inuadeth Edward the fourth, &c: 678, b 60, 679, a 10. Deceaseth, 690, a 60, 702, b 20. Murthered, 571, a 60
Dukes of Burgognie issued out of the house of France, 1342, b 60, 1343, a 10, &c.
Duke of Clarence lord Lionell, 395, b 50. Sent to aid the duke of Orleance, 539, b 60. Marcheth towards Guisnes, 540, a 20. Made a rode into Anjou, 579, b 60. He is betraied by Fergule a Lombard, 580, a 10. He and diuerse nobles slaine, a 20, 30. Before Paris with his armie, 570, b 20. Seeketh to make peace betweene Edward the fourth and the earle of Warwike, 682, a 50. Weighing the inconuenience of discord, wareth wise, & slow to aid the earle of warwike, his dissimulation, 681, a 60, b 1050, 60. He and the earle of warwike sojourned at Excester to passe ouer the seas, they arriue on the English coasts, 676, b 10, 60. A conspirator against his brother Edward the fourth, he taketh the seas, 674, a 40. His promise to a damsell persuading him to peace, 675, a 10, 20. Drowned in a but of Malmeseie, 703, a 40
Duke of Excester, his pithie saieng, 546, a 60. Uncle to Henrie the fift, 560, a 30, 40. Captein of Harflue, 556, a 60. His ouerthrow by the French, b 10 with a power at Newarke, 680, b 60. Left for dead but recouered: note, 685, a 60. Deceaseth, 596, b 60, 598, b 50. Found dead in the sea, 694, b 10
Duke of Gelderlands letters to Richard second, 475, b 50. Cõmeth into England, disuadeth Richard the second from peace with the French K. 477, b 30
Duke of Glocesters protestation vpon his oth, 458, a 16. Arested, 489, a 30. Confesseth all wherwith he was charged, he is smothered to death: note, 489, a 60, b 10. He & Richard second at priuie grudge, talke betweene them, 487, b 40, 50. Accused to K. Richard second by the duke of Lancaster & Yorke, he & the abbat of S. Albons conspire, 488, a 40, b 10, &c. Made duke of Ireland, his iournie thither vnluckilie stated, 479, b 50, 60. His iournie into Pruzenland, in great fauour with the commons, 475, a 60. A seuere man, 464, a 40. His death, the doers therein exempted from king Henrie the fourths pardon, 514 a 50. In question, 525, b 40. His death in part reuenged, 513, b 20 Much adoo about it: note, 512, a 50, 60, 513, a 10. His complaint to Henrie sixt against the cardinall of Winchester, 620, a 50. Liketh well of the kings mariage with the earle of Armenaks daughter: note, 624, b 60. Winneth Rockelburgh castell, 657, a 60. His death, & what mischiefe followed it, 627, a 60. He is commended: note, b 10, &c. Discharged of all gouernment, the faint quarell piked against him, he is suddenlie murthered, 627, a 10. Ill practises against him vnder faire countenances, 622, b 60. Spoileth Flanders, 614, b 60. Calleth a parlement, Henrie the sixt in France, 607, b 10. Articles against the bishop of Winchester, 591, a 60. Marriage in question, he wareth werie of his wife, 590, a 60 He and bishop of Winchester at dissention, 590, a 60, 591, a 10, &c. Murthereth Henrie the sixt in the Towre, 690, b 60. Inenimie to peace, 697, a 10. Proclamation against the lord Hastings, &c: 724, a 20. Marieth another mans wife: note, 586, a 30. His behauiour in the assemblie of lords, 722, b 10. His oration to the lords against the queene, 717, a 10. His resolution to go through with his diuelish enterprise, 721 b 20 Solicitations tending wholie to trouble and bloudshed, 714, a 60. His & Buckinghams practises, 715, a 30. Made protector, 716, b 50. ¶ Sée duke of Buckingham.
Duke of Guise with a great armie commeth towards Calis, entreth the English frontiers, his policie, 1135, a 20, 40, b 10. His proclamation to bring in monie, plate, &c, 1136, a 10. Marcheth to the towne and fort of Guisnes, 1137, a 40. And monsieur Dandelot with their powers, in a rage with his souldiors, a trumpetter from him to the lord Grete, they haue communication one whole houre, 1139, a 10, 30, b 30 Appointed to be a principall leader and executor of forren inuasion, 1371, b 30, 40, &c, b 60
Duke of Hereford appealeth the duke of Northfolke of treason, 493, b 20. Beloued of the people, honourablie interteined with the French king, 493, b 30
Duke of Irelands passage stopped by the lords, his souldiors reuolt from him, he flieth from his armie, getteth him into Holland, letters found in his trunks, 421, a 10, 50, 60. He and his associats attainted of treason by parlement, 463, b 30
Duke of Lancaster and the Londoners submit their quarels to the kings order, 416, a 20. He & Yorke excuse the duke of Glocester to king Richard the second, 488, a 40. High steward of England at an arreignment, 491, a 60. He & Yorke assemble their powers to resist Richard the seconds dealings, 490, a 10. Returneth into England out of Gascoigne, 467, a 60. Created, 380, b 50. Debate betwixt him and the duke of Brunswike, 381, a 10. Goeth ouer sea with a nauie, and two of Edward the thirds sonnes with him, 382, a 30. Is sent to aid the king of Nauarre, 386, b 30. Perswadeth Edward the third to peace with the French king, 393, b 50. Maketh a iournie into France, 404, a 50. Sent into France with an armie, fortifieth his campe, 403, b 30, 50. Commeth to Burdeaux, 408, a 50, &c. In danger by the Londoners: note, 412, a 20. Goeth into Spaine with an armie, 448, b 60. He landeth at Brest, and winneth two bastides from the French, landeth at Groigne, 449, a 50, 60. He & the king of Portingall aied, they inuade Castile, he returneth out of Portingale into Gascoigne, 450, a 20. Reconcileth the king and the lords, 467, b 10. Made duke of Aquitaine, 473, a 10. Commeth to Chester citie, the countrie submit them selues vnto him, Holt castell deliuered vnto him, 500, a 10, 30. He and Glocester sent into France to treat of peace, 480, a 30. The grant of the duchie of Aquitane vnto him reuoked 485, b 10. He marieth a ladie of meane estate, whom he kept as his concubine, b 60. Calleth a parlement in Richard the seconds name, 502, a 10. His behauiour to the king, their meeting, his demand, & receiuing into London, 501, b 10, 20, 50. His bastards made legitimat, 487, b 10. Imbassador for the K. into France, 475, b 30. A prince of great renowme, 477, a 60. Saileth into Aquitaine, 481, a 60. Solicited to expell king Richard the second, b 60. And to take vpon him the regiment, 497, b 60. The duke of Britain his great freend, the commons bene to resist the duke, he landeth in Yorkeshire, his oth to the lords that aided him, the harts of the commons wholie bent vnto him, he marcheth to Bristow, 498, a 10, 50, 60, b 10, 30, 60. Feastly strangers, 474, a 20. Enuied of the rebels: note, 431, a 20, &c. Not suffred to enter into the towne of Werwike, 439, a 10. Chargeth the erle of Northumberland with manie crimes, commeth to the parlement with a great troupe of men, 439, a 20, 60, b 10. Sent into France to treat of peace, 446, a 40. Misliking the manners of the court getteth him-seike to Killingworth castell, 419,b 20. He & the erle of Cambridge apointed protectors, 418,a 20. Saileth to Britaine with a great power, 420, a 60. Getteth him to his castell of Pomfret and fortifieth it, 446,b 60. Laieth challenge to the crowne, 505, b 40. He is placed in the regall throne, b 60. King elect, his words to the lords, 507, a 60. His coronation, proclamed by the name of Henrie the fourth, 507, b 10, 30. Inuaded Scotland with an armie, 445, b 10. Appeached of treason, 445, b 40. His decease, 395, b 10, 496, a 20. ¶ See Edmund.

Duke of Normandie commeth downe into Britaine, 364, b 10

Duke of Northfolke in armes against Wiat, ariueth at Stroud 1094, b 50. He with the capteine of the gard put to their shifts, 1095, a 10. He and Suffolke elected into the order of S. Michaell, 929, a 10. Ambassador into France, 950, a 50. Henrie the eights lieutenant, 942, b 60. Cõmeth with a power against the rebels in Suffolke, 891, b 40. He & the earle of Surrie on Richard the thirds side, 755, b 20. His constancie & allegiance to Richard third, he is slaine, 759, b 10. Accused of treson, 493 b 20. Obiections against him, 494, a 30. Committed to the Towre, atteinted, and the atteindor reuersed, 976, b 10, 50. Deceaseth, 514, a 60, b 10, 891, a 60, 1121, b 30. Inuested into the order of S. Michaell, 1209, a 20. Sent to the Towre, 1211, b 60. Remoued from the Towre to the Charterhouse, 1222, a 20. Cõmitted to the Towre, 1226, b 30. Arreigned, condemned, and iudged, 1227, b 60. Beheaded, foren nations write therof, his attire, behauior & speech at his execution: note, 1229, a 50, 60, b 10, &c: 1230

Duke of Northumberlands enterprise against the ladie Marie incouraged, 1085, b 50, 60. His words to the lords of the councell about quéne Jane, who adhered vnto him, he setteth forward with all speed, 1086, a 10, &c: b 10, 20. Writeth for more succours, 1087, a 30. His sons released out of the Towre, 1127, a 10. Arrested by the earle of Arundell and committed to the Towre with his adherents, 1088, a 60, b 30. Arreigned, his request to vnderstand the opinion of the court in two points, 1089, b 40, 50. His foure requests after his iudgment to die, he with others are executed at Towre hill, 1090, a 10, 50

Duke of Orleance partaker with the duke of Britaine against the French king, 768, b 10. How long prisoner in England, his ransome and release, 618, b 20, 50. Chalenge, 524, b 60 He besieged Vergi in Guien, 525, a 20. Besiegeth townes in Gascoigne, 533, a 50. Commeth to the English armie, 540, b 30. Murthered, 537, a 60

Duke Richard his singular dissimulation, 731, b 10. He speaketh otherwise than he meaneth, 731, b 20. His electiõ hard to be preferred, 730, b 20. Preferred at last by voices of confederacie, 730, b 60. Aduised by bishop Morton, their conference, he openeth himselfe and his secrets to the bishop, complaineth of lacke of preferment in K. Edwards daies, 738, all. His title to the crowne, with the office and dignitie of a king, he is commended to the people as worthie and sufficient, 730, a 20, 30. ¶ See Duke of Gloucester and Richard.

Duke of Richmond a martialist or warrior Henrie the eights base sonne, 929, a 10. Henrie Fitzroie Henrie the eights base sonne deceaseth, 941, a 10

Duke of Saxonie in disfauour and exile, 105, b 60. Commeth into England, his godlie stature, 212, b 40. Pardoned and reuoked out of exile, 108, a 10

Duke of Suffolke created, 627, b 30. Winneth the goodwill of the quéen Dowager of France 836, b 10. They married togither, b 30. Entreth France with an armie, 879, a 50. Breaketh vp his armie & commeth to Calis, 881, a 40. Chiualrie & valiant seruice in France, he knighteth diuerse gentlemen, 879, b 60, 880, all. Hope hindered by cardinall Woolsey, 839, a 60. And others sent into France to fetch the French quéne into England, 836, a 50. Incountereth with a strong and tall Almaine, 833, b 60. He foileth the Almaine, 834, a 10. Deceaseth, his iust commendation, 969, b 30. The commons exclaime against him, 631, a 10, 20, 40. Committed to the Towre, his wretched deth, 632, a 10, 50. He with others brought to the Towre, 1099, a b 10. Committed to the Towre and released, 1088, b 40. Goeth downe into Leicestershire, is a fauourer and furtherer of Wats practises, he is kept out of Couentrie, apprehended, 1095, a 40, 60, b 10. Arreigned, condemned, beheaded, 1100, b 20, 40, 50. What words he spake to the people at his death, b 60.

Duke of Summerset made regent of Normandie, and the duke of Yorke discharged, 625, b 30. Made capteine of Calis, 650, b 60. His valiantnesse, 619, a 30. Reuolteth from Edward the fourth, taken & beheaded, 666, a 40, &c: b 20, &c. Made lord protector, 979, a 40, 50. His returne from Scotland, 992, a 60. Not desirous of slaughter, 988, b 20. With his power against Scotland, 980, a 30, &c: b 30. Sendeth an herald to summon a castell, 981, a 10, 20. Answer to a Scotish herald at armes, 983, b 60. His diligence to further the fortification to Rockesburgh, 991, b 10. His statelie stile with his epistle exhortatiue sent to the Scotish nobles, &c: 998, b 10, &c. He & the earle of Warwike outwardlie freends, 1062, a 50. And others submit themselues to Edward the fourth, 665, b 60. Againe apprehended and committed to the Towre, 1066, b 60 Charged sir Peter Carew with the rebellion, 1022, b 30. He and the earle of Deuonshire comfort quéne Margaret, 685, b 60. Politike & puissant, 687, b 60. More hardie than wise, 687, b 60, 688, a 10, &c. Striketh out the lord Wenlocks braines, 688, a 50. His infortunatnesse, 615, b 60. Arested, 642, a 20. Set at libertie, made deputie of Calis, 40, 50. Accuseth the earle of Yorke of high treason, 639, a 50. Burthened with all things that happened amisse, 643, a 40. He is slain, b 10. His displacing out of his protectorships consulted on, remoueth in hast with K. Edward sixt to Windsore, his letter to the lord priuie seale 1057, a 20, 50, 60. His letters to the lords, 1058, a 30. Proclamation with articles against him, b 20, 30, &c. Prisoner, committed to the Towre, articles obiected against him, 1059, b 10, 30, 40, 1060, a 10, &c. Released & restored, 1060, b 10, 20. Deliuered out of the Towre, 1062, a 50. Arreigned both of feilonie & treason, condemned of feilonie, people murmur at his condemnation, deliuered to be executed, his behauior at his death, 1067, a 10, 30, 40, 50, b 40, 60. His words at his death, a sudden noise & feare among the people assembled, 1068, a 10, &c: 50, b 19, 1069, a 60. Described, b 10. Beheaded, 688, b 60

Duke of Surris marshall of England, 493, b 50

Duke of Yorke lieutenant generall of England, 497, a 10. Misliketh the court & goeth home, 496, a 60. Noted for crueltie, what maner of man he was, his end, 712, a 10, 20. Plantagenet afterwards Richard third, 595 b 40. Made regent of France, enuied of duke of Summerset, 612, b 10, 617, b 10, 619, a 30. Appointed againe to be regent of Normandie, 625, b 50. Persecuting enimie to the duke of Summerset: note, 630, b 20. Assembleth an armie, his words in writing sent to the K. 642, a 50, b 20, &c: 643: a 10. His comming against the K. iustified, he is made protector of the realme, 644, b 20. Discharged of his office, 645, a 10, 20. Assembleth an armie, 649, b 30. Cõmeth out of Ireland, his strange demeanors bold speech and oration to the lords of parlement, 655, a 30, &c. Crowned with sedge or bulrushes in derision, 659, b 50. He and his complices flie, 650, b 20. He and others atteinted, 652, a 10, &c. Articles that he and the other earles sent to the archbishop of Canturburie and the commons, 652, b 10, &c. Articles of peace and agreement betweene him and Henrie the first, his claime to the crowne, 657, b 20, &c. Proclamed heire apparant to the crowne, he is slaine, 659, a 30, b 10. Tempering about his title to the crowne, 627, b 40. Reconciliation to Henrie the first, he accuseth the duke of Summerset of treason, 639, a 40. Set at libertie and whie, his submission to king Henrie the first vnder his oth, 639, b 50. Maketh claime to the crowne, 637, a 50. Raiseth a great power to recouer it, his letter to Henrie the first, 637, a 50, b 10, 50, 638, a 10, &c. Fauourers executed and spoiled, 653, b 20. Seeketh the destruction of the duke of Summerset, banded himselfe with Neuils, 641, b 60. Slaine in Agincourt field, 555, b 60. Buried at Fodringhaie castell, 556, a 20. Calleth indenture tripartite of the conspired noblemen out of his sonnes bosome: note, 515, a 20. Deceaseth, 520, b 30. Accused by his sister the ladie Spenser, 527, b 30. His head set on a pole at Yorke, 659, b 60. ¶ See Richard the third.

Dukes of Gloucester infortunate: note, 627, a 50. Of Normandie were the kings of Englands eldest sons, 38, a 30. Of Yorks honorable emulation, 776, a 50

Dukes and earles, &c: created, 537, b 60, 546, b 30, 625, a 10, 702, a 60, 1081, a 60, b 10, &c, 1066, b 60, 492, b 40, 448, a 60, 395, b 50. Deprined of their titles, 513, b 10. Of England from the first to the last, all set downe in a collection, 1230, b 30, &c, to 1238, a 10.

Duncane a Scot wasteth Kendall, 91, b 10

Dunkirke sworne & sacked by the English, 442, b 50. Taken and burnt by the French, 1150, a 40

E.

Edmer. ¶ See Archbishop.

Eclipse of the sunne strange, 102, b 50, 348, b 30, 212, b 40, 229, a 10

Eclipse of the moone, 241, a 50. At thirténe daies old, 212, b 40. Of foure houres continuance, 251, a 50. Of the sunne and moone extraordinarie, 44, a 40. Verie strange: note, 128, b 50.

Eclipses foure in a yere, 961, a 60

Edenburgh castell besieged, 353, b 40. Entred forceablie by the English, 962, a 60. Deliuered to Edward the first, 300, a 60. Burnt by Richard the second, 447, b 10. Left desolate, 445, b 10

Edgar Etheling where borne, 6, a 30. Pursueth the Normans, 6, b 40. Flieth into Scotland, 7, a 50. Ioineth forces with Osborn against the Normans 6, b 50. Should haue bene made king of England, 1, a 40. And whie he was not aduanced to the crowne of England, 1, a 50. Sent into Scotland with an armie, and whie, 23, a 30. The sonne of king Malcolme to be placed in the kingdome, 23, a 30. In seruice at the warres vnder the Scotish king, 19, b 30. In great account with Robert duke of Normandie, 19, b 50. Deprined of his honor by William Rufus, 19, a 50. Obteineth licence of duke William to depart the realme, 14, b 10. Groweth in fauour & honor with duke William, 10, b 60, 11, a 10. Capteine in rebellion against duke William after a reconcilement and pardon, described: note, 9, b 60. Second flight into Scotland, 10, a 40. ¶ See Edwin.

Edgar the K. of Scotlands sister wife to Henrie the first, 29, a 10

Edmund son to Henrie the third, 236, a 60. Shewed in parlement as K. of Naples, 255, b 10 Inuested king of Sicill & Naples, 252, b 60. Created duke of Lancaster, 249, a 10

Edmund of Longlie borne, afterwards duke of Yorke, 363, a 30

Edmund the great, sonne to Harold, his exploits, 6, a 60

Edrike Syluaticus rebelleth in the absence of duke William, 5, a 10

Edward the first proclamed king of England, his coronation and beginning of regiment, 477, all. He entreth into to Wales to reſcue his people againſt the Welſh, 281, a 20. Goeth ouer into France, 279, b 20. His fauour and good-will to the princes of Wales, 279, a 10, &c. Dauid of Wales preferreth him in marriage, 279, a 20, &c. Commeth to Cheſter, 278, a 20. Surnamed Longhanke (and why) borne, 223, b 40. Sendeth an armie into Scotland, 314, a 20. His prouiſion for his iournie into France, 303, a 50. Putteth prince Edward in priſon, 313, b 30. Anſwer to pope Boniface proouing the right of Scotland to belong to him, 309, b 60, 310, a 10, &c. Entreth into Scotland to reuenge the death of his people, 322, a 40. Goeth with an armie into Scotland, 309, a 50. Vexeth them, &c: b 30. Goeth to Scotland, 311, a 50. Married to the French kings ſiſter, 309, a 10. His liberalitie towards his nobles, 308, a 40. Eſcries Marſhall and Hereford refuſe to go ouer with him into Flanders, 304. Gardians appointed ouer his ſonne in his abſence, he palleth ouer into Flanders, b 20. Taketh vpon him the croſſe, 284, a 20. Palleth ouer into France, 283, b 30. Recogniſed for ſuperior lord of Scotland: note, 286, all. Summoned to appeare at Paris, 290, b 50. Condemned in the French court, 291, b 20. His requeſt made to the Scots denied, 296, a 30. Entreth into Wales 293, b 30. Shift to get monie, 280, a 50. Goeth about to purchaſe his peoples good-will, 277, b 50. Renounceth the French king, his ſhift for monie, an excuſe that he vſed, 292, b 10, 60. Concludeth a league with the erle of Flanders and the earle Bar, 296, b 50. Fortifieth Berwike, 299, a 30. Summoneth and winneth Berwike, 298, a 20, 50. Planteth his ſiege about Edenburgh caſtell, 299, b 60. Palleth forth through Scotland, bringeth the marble ſtone from thence, the nobilitie ſubmit themſelues vnto him, the forme of their homage, his words accepting it, 301, a all. Meant to haue made a full conqueſt of Scotland as he had done of Wales, 317, a 10. The forme of ſeaſtie that Baliol king of Scots did to him, 289, b 60. Appointeth wardens for the realme of Scotland, reſereth ſwaine in the election of their chancellor, the nobilitie ſweare fealtie to him: note, 288, a 30, &c. Sickeneth, dieth, is buried at Weſtminſter: his iſſue, his ſtature and forme of bodie, his vertues and vices, 316, a 60, b 10, &c.

Edward the ſecond borne, 282, b 20. When he began his reigne, 318, a 10. Hee the erle of Lancaſter made friends, 324, a 40. Goeth into Scotland, what he did there, his entrance, 320, b 10. Hath his nobles in no regard: note, 318, b 10. Depoſed by act of parlement, 340, b 20. Saileth into Wales, 338, b 60. His fauour to the Welſhmen, 339, a 10. Sought vnto to reſigne his crowne, his griefe therat, 340, b 50, 60. Betraied into his enimies hands, brought to Killingworth caſtell, 339, b 50. Withſtood in armes by his wife, 336, 337, 338. Sendeth for his wife and ſonne home out of France, 336, b 10, 20. Writeth to the duke of Britaine, 335, b 30. Like to be betraied, the traitors executed, 333, 334. Goeth to Scotland with an armie, 332, b 50. Subdueth his barons, 330, 331, 332, a 10. In armes againſt his enimies, his proclamation, 329, b 60. Paſſeth by a ford, commeth to Tutbury, cauſeth hue & crie to be made, 330, a 30, 50. Durſt not but yeeld to his nobles requeſt, 327, b 10. He goeth to Canturburie, talketh with lord chamberleine, beſiegeth the caſtell of Leeds, 327, b 10. Affection and loue to Piers Gaueſton, 320, a 10. His requeſt for his life, his diſpleaſure for his death, 321, a 30, 60. Palleth ouer to France, 318, b 50. Doth homage to the French king, marrieth his daughter, returneth, is receiued into London, crowned, 318, b 60, 319, a 10. Goeth to Berwike, 324, b 50. Palleth into Scotland, what iſſue his armie had there, he eſcapeth danger of death, 322, a 20, 40. Murthered, 341, b 60. His nature and conditions, his iſſue, 342, a 10, &c

Edward the third borne, 321, b 10. Beginneth his reigne, 343, a 60. Palleth ouer into Calis, inuadeth France, returneth for want of victels, the conſtable of France demandeth battell of him, 383, a 10. Lodgeth his armie neere Berwike, the Scots yeeld vnto him, the realme of Scotland reſigned vnto him, 386, a 50, 60. Three kings come vnto him about buſineſſe, 396, a 50. Aduanceth his ſons to degree of honor, 395, b 50. Prepareth to make a iournie to France, arriueth at Calis, 392, b 10, 30 Draweth towards Paris, 393, a 60. Returneth out of France into England, 394, b 30. His foure ſons take part with the lord maiors, &c: challenge at iuſts, 392, a 50. Hee afflicteth the Scots, 386, b 20. His honorable hart to his enimie, 379, b 10, Hath Calis ſurrendred vnto him. ¶ See Calis. His pitie towards the poore: note, 375, a 20. His voiage, inuaſion, and victorie againſt the French ſummarilie ſet downe in a letter miſſiue, 373, b 30, &c. His words & behauior to his ſon the young prince after his victorie againſt the French, 372, b 60. Palleth ouer into Normandie, his armie, landing, & ordering of his ſoldiors, 369, b 40, &c. His enterpriſes and atchiuements againſt townes & people, his ſpoile & booties, he is in danger, 370, all. Beginneth his enterpriſe againſt the enimie with prair to God, his demeanor before the battell, 371, a 10, b 30. Hath townes reſtored him, 360, a 60. Taketh into his hands all the profits that the cardinals, &c: held within his realme, 369, b 30. Goeth ouer into Flanders, 367, b 60. Palleth ouer into Britaine, 364, a 40. Returneth by ſea out of Britain, he is in danger of drowning, 365, a 30. Feaſted by the erle of Flanders, he goeth into Zeland, arriueth at the Towre, deleth roundlie with his officers, 360, b 10, &c. Is offended with the archbiſhop of Canturburie, 361, a 10. Taketh ſea, ſetteth vpon his enimies the French, getteth the victorie, goeth to Gaunt, couenants betwixt him & his confederats, 358, a 50, 60, b 50 359, a 40. Signifieth his right to crowne of France, taketh vpon him the title and armes thereof, 357, a 20, 30. Taketh vpon him the name of K. of France, 356, b 30, and by what right he clamed it, 42, &c. Beſiegeth Cambrie, 355, b 20. He raiſeth his ſiege, b 40. Hath Flanders at commandment, he ſaileth to Antwerpe, 354, b 60. His confederats, 355, a 10. Practiſeth to alienat the Flemings harts from obedience to their earle, 353, b 50. Entreth into Scotland with an armie, 351, a 10. Maketh ſpoile by fier and ſword, the Scots ordeine a ſtatute in fauor of him, towns fortified by him there, he ſtudieth to gather monie to mainteine his wars, 352, all. Rideth the K. of Scots and why, 350, a 10. Palleth the ſea apparelled like a merchant, 348, b 40. Waxeth feeble & ſicke, 411, a 20. Deceaſeth, his iſſue, praiſe, proportion of bodie, and vertues, 412, a 40, &c: 413.

Edward the fourth borne, 623, a 30. Feaſteth the maior and aldermen of London, 705, a 10. He and the French king their interview, the manner thereof: note, 699, a 30, 40, &c. His ſhift to get monie: note, 694, a 40, &c. He palleth ouer into France, and ſendeth a defiance to the French king, 694, b 10, 40. Returneth into England, 701, a 10. Without interruption palleth forward to Yorke, marcheth to the citie gates, receiueth the ſacrament & an oth, the marqueſſe Montacute ſuffereth him to paſſe by, he cometh to Northhampton, 680, a 30, &c. Diſpraiſed and fowlie ſpoken of by the earle of Warwike, 671, a 20. His communication with the duke of Burgognie: note, 697, a 50, 60, b 10, &c. Shamefull and ſlanderous words againſt him, 698, b 30. His politike foreſight, 688, a 20. Commeth to Leiceſter, pronoſticth the earle of Warwike to fight, commeth to Warwike, he and his brother the duke of Clarence reconciled vnwitting to the earle of Warwike, 681, a 10, &c. His victorie, and the offering vp of his ſtandard, 685, b 10. Lodgeth with his armie before his enimies, 684, a 10. Set forward againſt his enimies the nobles of England, 686, a 40. His painfull march with his armie, the ordering of his battels, 687, b 10, 30. Palleth to London, 682, b 30. The Londoners reſolue to receiue him, the Towre recouered to his vſe, he entreth into London, 683, a 60, b 10. Arriueth on the coaſt of Northfolke, then at the head of Humber, landeth at Rauenſpurgh, the people let him paſſe hearing the cauſe of his comming into the countrie, he palleth towards Yorke, 679, a 10, &c. Iudged a diſurper, 678, a 10. His freends take ſanctuarie, 677, b 10. Receiued verie honorable into the citie of Excester, 676, b 30. The citizens beneuolence to him, how long he continued there, b 30, 50. Commeth to Lin, taketh ſhip to paſſe ouer ſea, the number that paſſed ouer with him, he arriued at Alquemarle, 675, b 10, 20, 40. Taken priſoner and brought to Warwike caſtell, 673, a 60. He is deliuered out of captiuitie, commeth to London, b 10, 20. His proclamation to ſuch as were aſſembled vnder him, 664, b 10. His title to the crowne, 663, b 664, a 10. Proclamed king, 725, b 10. Notablie ſlandered and ſpoken againſt in the duke of Buckinghams oration, 728, a 50, 60, &c, 729, a 10, &c. His words to his mother about marriage, 726, b 30. Slandered in a ſermon, 727, b 50. His flight into Holland, 727, a 50. The cheefeſt deuiſe of the conſpirators to depoſe him, 725, b 60. Deſcribed, his qualities, 711, a 40, &c. His three concubines, 725, a 10. His laſt words vttered on his death bed, 708, b 30, 50, &c. Deceaſeth, his iſſue male and female, 710, a 20, &c.

Edward the ſift his comming to London, 716, b 50. He and his brother murthered in the Towre: note, 734, b 20, &c, 735, all.

Edward the ſixt borne, 944, a 10 Proclamed king of England rideth through London to weſtminſter, crowned, 979, a 10, b 10, 30. His letter to the citizens of London, 1059, a 10. He rideth through London, 1060, b 40. His princelie ſpeech to doctor Ridlete after his ſermon made of mercie & charitie, 1081, b 60. His meſſage to the rebels of Cornewall and Deuonſhire, 1003, b 60, 1004, a 10. Founder of the hoſpitals in London, 1082, b 30. His victories againſt the Scots, 1161, b 10. His feare and miſtruſt of three mariages which fell out to be true, he falleth ſicke & dieth, 1083, b 20, 30, 60. His praiſeworthie qualities, and death reuealed, 1084, a 30, &c, b 10. His buriall, 1089, a 50. Counterfeited, and the partie executed, 1127, a 40, &c, b 10

Edward created prince, 365, a 40. Made knight, 660, b 60. Setteth forward into the Holie land, 274, b 60. Traitor-rouſſie wounded, 275, a 20. Getteth diuerſe caſtels, 266, a 60. Eſcapeth a danger, 269, b 50. He and the earle of Glocester not ſuffred to come within the citie of London, 262, b Exiſt intreated in manie places, 262, b 60. Goeth againſt the Welſhmen, 264, a 10. Receiueth the croſſe, 274, a 40.

40. Taketh monie out of the treasurie of the temple, 264, a 60. Arriueth at Acres, in danger to be slaine by treason, 275, a 20. Hath the rule of London, he appointeth the maior & shiriffes, 274, b 20. Sent to the king of Castile, 249, b 50. He marrieth the ladie Elenor daughter to king Alfonse, b 60. Created prince of Wales, 250, a 10. His wife commeth to London, 252, a 50. Pursueth the Londoners, 268, a 10. Imprisoned for riot, 313, b 30. Made knight, and sent into Scotland, 314, a 30. Goeth ouer into Gascoigne, 382, b 50. His proceedings in Aquitane, 383 b 20, &c. Two bishops sent vnto him from the pope, 383, b 50, &c: 384, a 10, &c. His first sonne borne, 397, a 60. And duke of Aquitaine, 332, a 40. Sent into France, 336, a 60. Inuadeth the French dominions, 387, a 10. His order where he came, his feats of armes, the passages stopped against him, he returneth, lodgeth in the towne of Remorentin, he is followed by the French king, 387, all. Contented to come to a parle, his offer, his exhortation to his soldiors when he saw he must needs fight, 388, a 60, b 10, 60. Noblemen that were with him, the number of his armie, both powers ioine issue, 389. He obteineth the victorie, his meeke oration to the French king his prisoner, he returneth to Burdeaux, bringeth the French king ouer into England, 390, a 10, b 20, 60. Made lord warden of the realme, 339, b 20. Setteth forward into Spaine, 398, a 20. He passeth into Guien, 395, b 60. Put to his shifts for default of monie, he returneth into Gascoigne, constreined to burden his subiects with a sore subsidie, 400, a 10, 30, b 30. Appealed to appeare before the French king, 401, a 10. His answer, a letter published by him to appease the Gascoignes, b 40. Diseased with sickenesse, 402, b 20. Deceaseth, buried at Canturburie, his death grieuously taken, 410, b 50, 60. Returneth out of France into England, 406, a 60. Married to the erle of Warwikes daughter, 674, b 60. Taken in sight, he is murthered, 688, a 60, b 20

Edward called the Blacke prince borne, 348, b 20

Edward the third, son of Henrie the seuenth christened, 788 a 10

Edwin earle of Northumberland withdraweth from the battell against duke William, 1, a 30. His lands giuen to Alane earle of Britaine, 7. Reconciled to king William, 9, b 40. He and Edgar Etheling resist duke William and his Normans, 6, a 10. He & Marchar submit themselues to duke William, 1, a 50. Slaine of his owne soldiors, 10, a 50. ¶ Sée Marchar.

Egelsin abbat. ¶ Sée Stigand.

Egelsin abbat of S. Augustine his martiall mind, impatient of forced seruitude, 1, b 50, 2, a 10

Egelwine abbat of Euesham a warrior, 11, a 50

Egelwinus bishop of Durham flieth from Durham: note, 7, b 60. In armes against duke William, taken prisoner, and famished to death, 10, a 40, 50

Egmond countie lieutenant generall for king Philip in the low countries, his valiant onset vpon the French, 1150, a 60, b 20

Egremond knight a captaine rebell, 769, b 50. Flieth into Flanders, 770, a 10

Egremond lord Perlie, 647, b 30 committed to Newgate, his escape, 645, b 60

Election & choise of three things 284, b 60

Elenor countesse of Britaine deceaseth, 228, b 60

Elenor prince Edwards wife commeth to London, 252, a 60

Elenor K. Henrie the seconds daughter married to the king of Castile, 98, b 30

Elenor Cobham accused of treson: note, 622, b 60, 623. a 10. ¶ Sée Marriage, and Quéene.

Elephant sent to Henrie the third from the French king, 252, a 30. Two presented to the pope: note, 837, b 10

Elie held against Henrie the third, 273, a 50. Spoiled & the church: note, 190, a 40

Elisabeth second daughter to king Henrie the eight prisoner in the Towre, she hath heauie enimies of the clergie, 1101, b 10, &c: 1102, a 10, 20, &c. Hir blood thirsted after by Gardiner, hir life preserued by maister Bridges lieutenant of the Towre, 1130, b 20, 30. The whole storie of hir troubles in the daies of queene Marie, and how she was preserued, notable to read, 1151, b 50, 60, 1152, 1153, 1154, 1155. Deliuered out of the Towre, hir words to Beningfield knight hir keeper in the time of durance, 1117, b 40. Proclamed queene the same date that Marie died, 1160, a 40. And the ladie Anne of Cleeue ride togither in a rich chariot, 1091 a 30. ¶ Sée Queene.

Elisabeth wife to Henrie the seuenth hir birth, 668, b 50

Elisabeth Barton hir practises discouered with hir adherents, she is attainted, becommeth a nun, 936, a 20, b 10, 60. Bishops giue credit to hir hipocriticall doings, she is executed, hir confession at hir death, 937, a 10, 20, 30

Emmanuell college at Cambridge founded, 1396, a 10, &c.

Emperor Adulfe breaketh promise with the king of England and the earle of Flanders, 304, b 60

Emperor of Constantinople commeth into England, 239, b 60, 519, a 20

Emperor Ferdinand deceaseth, foretelleth the vttermost date of his death, his godlie issue male and female, 1208, a 10, 20, 30

Emperor Charles, preparation for receiuing of him into England, 853, a 50. Landeth in England, meeteth with Henrie the eight at Douer, labureth to hinder the purposed interview betweene Henrie the eight and the French K. setteth into Flanders, 856, a 40, b 60, a 20. Commeth to Calis to K. Henrie the eight, 861, b 20. His interteinment: note, b 30, &c. And the French king at wars, 781, a 10. Landeth at Douer, he and Henrie the eight sweare each to other to obserue the league interchangeablie made, 873, a 60, b 50. Moderation and temperance at the newes of victorie, 885, b 10, 30. And what the French kings mother offered him for the deliuerance of hir sonne, he hopeth to recouer more profit by the French king in peace than warres, 886, a 50, 60, b 60. Departeth out of England into Spaine, 874, a 10. Sendeth Henrie the eight a present, 882, a 40. His answer to the English ambassador, articles sent to them, he releaseth twelue preiudiciall articles to the French king, 898, a 10, 60, b 60. His answer to the English heralds and oration, 201, b 30. Commandeth that the French king, being his prisoner, should be receiued with honour in all places where he should passe, 887, b 10. A truce betweene him and the gouernors of France, 887, b 60. He diliteth the French king in durance, conenants of accord by him to be performed, 888, a 20, b 60. Commeth to heare what the English & French heralds had to saie, 899. He giueth them libertie to speke, a 40. His munificence: note, 921, a 20. Deceaseth, an obsequie kept for him, 1171, b 50

Emperor Maximilian & Henrie the eight meet royallie, 820, a 10. Weareth a crosse of S. George as souldier to the king of England Henrie the eight, 821, a 50. Inuested into the order of the garter, 1210, a 60. Deceaseth, a description of his qualities, 851, a 10

Emperor Sigismund cometh into England, the strange maner of receiuing him at Douer, 556, b 30, 40

Emperor concludeth a peace with the French king, 965, a 40. Answereth the French kings letters, 904, a 30. Gift to Philip prince of Spaine, 1120, a 20. Woone from the king of Englands freendship, 361, b 50. He offereth to be a meane to conclude a peace betweene the two kings of England and France, 361, b 60. Hath the electing and assigning of the pope, 24, b 20. Commandeth the English herald to leaue his oration behind him in writting, his words to the French herald, he giueth him his answer in writting, 902, a 10, b 10, 50

Emperors. ¶ Sée Popes.

Empire desired by the king of England and France, 905, b 40. ¶ Sée Spanish king.

Empson and Dudlie with their promoters, 791, b 30. Rauening wolues and caterpillers to the commonwealth, 794, b 20, 30. Attainted of treason, his words to the lords of the councell to find fauour, 803, b 40, 50, 60. Most of the lords of the counsell against him, sometime recorder of Couentrie, indicted and found guiltie, condemned, 804, a 30, &c. Committed to the Towre, 799, b 50. Beheaded, 809, a 10

Empson an obstinat monke, the last monke seene in that clothing in England till queene Maries daies, 952, b 60.

Emulation of the dukes of Yorke, 776, a 50

Engins to cast stones, 312, a 60

England & Scotland like to go together by the eares afresh, 785, a 60. How manie parishes it hath: note, 877, b 50. Pronision for the defense thereof, 946, b 60. It and Scotland made one by amitie, what able to do, 1001, a 50. Reconciled to the catholike church, and what ioie in Rome therfore, 1123, b 30. Gouerned by Normans & French kings one hundred twentie and two yeares after William Conquerors comming in, 116, b 40. Diuided into foure parts, and the gouernors: note, 103 a 60. It & France the armes quartered, 356, b 30. How grieuous to the court of Rome 171, a 40. Became tributarie to the pope, 177, b 10. Shrewsbirie besed, subdued, and spoiled in diuerse places by the French, 192, 193. A great naue of French ships purpose to inuade it, 451, a 20. Manie townes burnt and destroied on the coasts thereof by the French and Spanish. ¶ Sée Frenchmen, and French king, and Spaniards, 427. In a lamentable case in the time of duke William: note, 5, b 20. Guided by deputies in the absence of duke William, 5, a 10. Without a king and who towards it, 1, a 40. Furnished with armor and munition, 1193, b 60. Inuasion thereof by foren forces intended: note, 1371, a 10, &c, b 30, 40, &c. To be inuaded and diuerse plots taken by traitors and conspirators, for the practise thereof, 1387, b 60. The prosperitie thereof during the popes curses, 1366, a 40. To be inuaded by a Scotish power, 1386, a 10. In a short space brought from a troubled to a peaceable estate, 203, b 20. Subiect to foure and twentie gouernours: note, 259, a 20

Englishmen sore afflicted, 552, a 20. The order of their armie and archers at Agincourt battell, 553, a 50. Giue the onset to the French, both armies ioine battell, 554, a 50, 60. Three great victories within a short time togither, 566, b 10. Take diuers towns and castels in France, 568, b 30, &c. Discomfited vnder the duke of Clarence, 580, a 30. A sore conflict betweene them and the French, 556, b 10. Take castels and townes in Normandie, 559, a 50, &c. Campe greatlie hindered for want of beasts to draw their ordinance, & the king of Nauarre gentle offer to them, 813, a 30, 40, 50. Their nauie & the French incounter ter vpon the coasts of Britaine, their cruell fight, the French flieth, 815, a 60, b 10, 20. Vnruile behauiour being in soldiers seruice, 809, b 50. Manie purposing to set vpon the French in the hauen are defeated by a mischance, 816, a 50. Ouer rash hardinesse turneth them to hurt, 819, b 10. Shamefullie abused of Frenchmen and other strangers: note, 840, a 20, &c. Plate the corragious soldiers in France, 879, all, 880, all. Besieged Heding castell, win a gret botte from the French 875, a 40, b 10. Negligent for not putting their valiant doings in writing, 965, b 40. Gods arested in Burdeaux, 872, b 40. Good seruice at the taking of Leith in Scotland: note, 962, a 30, &c: 963, a 10. Burne. S. Iehans de Lucie, breake vp their campe at Biskaie, dispersed into sundrie villages, vnappeasable rage among them, they return out of Biskaie, 814, a 10, &c. Valiant seruice against the French & Scots, their horsmen discomfited, 994, a 20, b 40. Go by sea and land into Scotland, 980, a 30, &c. The order of the armie in marching forward, 980, b 60. Patient in suffering all wants of releefe, 995, a 40. Manerlie, French vnmanerlie, 699, b 30 In a mutinie & murmuring, 1140, a 20, 30. Lose all by Henrie the first, that they got by Henrie the fift. ¶ Compare both stories togither, 601. Shamefullie foiled by the French, 601, b 10. Gaine eightéene standards and one banner, 590, b 40. And French at hot skirmishes: note, 596, b 10, &c. Compassion to a Frenchman an enimie, 628, b 50. Lose all in France, 629, b 30, &c. In a mutinie committed to prison, 124, a 40. Ouerthowne at Fotmigut, 630, a 30. And Frenchmen fight vpon a small occasion, 126, a 30. Victozie against the French & their parties, 144, b 50, 60. Spoile Louthian, 89, a 60. God directeth their battell, fighteth for them, their valiantnesse: note, 372, a 30. Victozie at Halidon hill, 350, a 40. Derided in a time, 347, a 40. They & Genowaies meet & fight on the seas, 363, b 10. Win the passage ouer the water of Some against the French, 371, a 20. Make forrates and rodes into the borders of France, 374, b 60. Against the Scots, incouraged by the queene, 375, b 50, 60. Obteine the victozie, 376, a 10. Imbateled before Paris, 393 b 10. Lodge with their armie before Paris, 405, b 10. Victozie against the Flemings on the sea, 407, a 20. Burne townes in France, 356, a 10. Discomfited by constable of France, 408, a 20. Flie to saue their liues, a great slaughter of them, and all by the Scots, 312, a 40, &c. Seruice against the French at Leith in Scotland, 1186, a 40, 1187, all. They giue the French the repulse, 1188, a 50. A number of them slaine, 60, their hot skirmishes 1189, all. They fight a trench from the French, 1190, a 30, b 10. Giue them the repulse, b 60. Repelled by the policies of French, 1191, a 50. A number slaine & hurt, 60. Slaine in Scotland, 303, b 10. And Flemings vanquished by the French, 180, a 10. Assaile the French ships, 179, a 50. Spoil the Iles of Orkneie, 518, b 10 Plate the men, they besiege Ard & Slues, 528, a 60, b 10, Assalt Bzitake in Bzitaine, 534, b 30. The fortune of the earle of saint Paule against them, 538, b 40. Die in Spain by reason of the great heat of that countrie, 450 a 60. Prouision to resist the gret power of the French, 451, a 40. Subdue diuerse townes in Flanders and spoile the countrie. 443, b 10. Their armie iournie through France, 426, b 60. Driuen out of Flanders by the French K. 444, a 60. Name ouermatched & ouercome by the Spanish, 420, a 30. Cruellie abused vnder the pretense of peace, by duke William, 10, a 30. Host entreth into Bzitaine, 427, a 10. They besiege Maunts, breake vp their siege, 427, b 30. Atchiue an exploit against the French 422, a 30, &c. Sailing ouer sea scattered in a tempest, 423, a 60. Ouerthowne by Scots, 418, b 10. Ouerthowne by the French, 418, a 10. Cats, not to be caught without mittens 426, b 60. Weapons before the vse of the long bow, 15, b 50. Extremelie hated & handled of duke William & his Normans, 8, a 10, 20, 30, 40. Miserable estate in the daies of Malcolme, 10, b 10. Seruice in forren lands well liked of duke William, 10, b 60. Kept low by duke William and his Normans, 14, a 10, &c. Chyualdome in the seuere regiment of duke William, 1, b 10. Fairlie intreated at king William Rufus hands, & why, 17, b 30. Retire to Newhauen with honor, 1397, a 10. Much made of at Utricht, 1431, b 40. Win towns from the French, 207, b 10. Sent to Spaine against the Saracens, 213, a 10. Distressed by the Welsh, 214, a 20 How manie vnder Henrie the third against the French K. 329, b 40. Ouerthowne by the Welsh, 255, a 20. Distressed by the Scots, 297, b 50. And the French incounter, 229, b 60. And Welsh at grudge, 278 a 60. Distressed by the Welsh, 281, a 10. Taken by French, 294, b 10. Victozs by sea against the French, 290, b 30, 40. Stand in doubt of the Welsh, 307, a 60. Vanquished by the Scots, 311, b 60 English gentlemen manteined by the French warres, 480, b 10. Lightie toteth behauiour in the French court, 850, a 10. Discharged of their places & offices vnder queene Marie the French kings wife, 833, a 10. ¶ See Flanders, Flemings, French and Scots. Enimie battelled by the enimie, 426, b 20

Enimies domesticall verie rotten deuit withall: note, 419, b 30, 40. ¶ See Forgiueneesse.

Enuie, and that persons indued therewith are readie to forge matters of suspicion, 95, b 10. Of the lords against the Spensers, 325, a 30. Borne for a ladie bestowed in marriage, 164, a 60. Of queene Elenor against Arthur, 158, a 60. Of the Flemings, 64, a 30 At anothers prosperitie, 37, a 50. Of the earle of March at Henrie the fourths aduancement, 511, a 30. The pursuer of vertue and prowesse, 455, a 30. Issue and fruits thereof: note, 422, b 60. Against anothers honorable aduancement, 451, b 60. And spite betweene the lords spirituall & temporall, & what mischiefe insued, 1, a 50. How mischieuous: note, 708, a 50, 60. ¶ See Discord and Spite.

Equalitie in a land how inconuenient, 1043, a 60. How hurtfull and vnconscionable to with, b 30

Erle Aimer of Penbroke arrested, 332, a 50. Slaine. ¶ See Alan. Aliericke de Vere an eloquent pleder for K. Stephan, 51, a 30. Slaine in a seditious tumult, 54, a 60. Arundell. ¶ See Iusts triumphant. Auberie de Vere of Oxenford, 480, a 10

Erle Baldwin de Riuers of Ile of Wight, 224, a 60. His nation to king Stephans armie, 52, b 50. Beleeme of Shrewesburie a factious man: note, 32, a 60. Subdued and banished, 30, a 60. Beauchampe of Warwike protector of England, 424, a 40. Of Warwike deceaseth, 519, b 60 405, a 10. Beaufozd of Surrie deceaseth, 536, b 10. Bigod of Northfolke a valiant chiefetaine, 47, b 60. Accorded with king Henrie the second, 92, a 60, 51, b 60. Bolinbzoke of Derbie afterwards king, 448, a 90. Bourchier of Essex deceaseth, 950, a 60

Erle Charles of Westmerland, sore iudgements of God vpon him: note, 1359, a 40. Charles of Flanders murthered and issuelesse, 43, a 50. Clinton of Lincolne ambassadoz into France, the maner of his interteinment, 1229, a 10, 20. Courtneie of Deuonshire the first best roter of Excester hauen, 1008, a 40. Created, 1089, a 20. Crispine of Eureux woundeth Henrie the first, and is taken prisoner, 40, a 60

Erle de Gaunt of Lincolne, 192, b 60. Dudleie of Warwike sent into Normandie with an armie, 1195, a 60

Erle Edmund of Lancaster sent into Gascoigne, his seruice in armes, his death, 296, a 50, &c, b 50. Edmund of Suffolke fleeth ouer into Flanders, his discontented mind, 780, a 10 Beheaded 816, a 10. Edword of Warwike, sonne & aire to George duke of Clarence, beheaded, 703, b 10. Edwin of Northumberland. ¶ See Edwin, 1, a 30. Eustace. ¶ See Eustace.

Erle Ferreis of Derbie commeth to Chester with twentie thousand men, 269, a 60. Fitzolbozne. ¶ See Fitzosbozne, Fitzpeter created erle of Essex, 159, b 20. Decreeth 181, b 10. Foulke of Anion quarrelleth with Henrie the first, and why, 42, a 50. Accords the kings of England and France, 40, b 60. An enimie to Henrie the first: note, 37, a 50, 60. Became alied to Henrie the first, 40, b 20

Erle Geffreie Plantagenet, of Anion married the daughter of Henrie the first, 43, b 10. Putteth awaie his wife, and taketh hir againe, 44, a 40, Had a sonne by Mawd the empresse, afterwards king of England, 44, b 10. Put to flight by king Stephan, 48, a 30. Raiseth commotions in Flanders, 48, a 20. Dealeth vnfaithfullie, 106, a 60 Dieth 110, a 30. Gerald of Kildare deputie of Ireland, apprehended, examined, & released, 779, b 20. George of March flieth into England, 518, a 60. Gospatrike. ¶ See Gospatrike. Guido. ¶ See Guido.

Erle Hastings of Penbroke, as he was learning to iust, is wounded to death, 467, b 20. Helias. ¶ See Helias. Henrie of Essex dishonoured, 67, a 10. Henrie of Huntington his valiantnesse, 50, a 10. Herbert of Penbroke prepareth against the earle of Warwike, 672, a 60, b 10. Holland of Huntington, 465, b 60. A great exploit done by him against the French, 558, b 50, &c. Holland of Kent in fauour with Henrie the fourth, he marrieth a daughter of a lord of Millain, 532, a 40, 50. Sent to the sea with an armie, 534, b 20. Hugh of Chester deceleth, 105, b 10. Hugh of March commeth ouer to Henrie the third, and offereth him seruice, 209, a 10. Worketh to induce the Normans and Poictouins to fauour king Henrie the third, 210, a 40. Hugh of Montferrat taken prisoner, 42, b 20. Hubert de Burgh created earle of Kent, and why, 209, b 60. In Henrie the thirds displeasure: note, 211, b 10. Escapeth out of prison, and taketh sanctuarie, 217, a 30, &c. He is brought backe, restored to sanctuarie, rescued, conueied into Wales, discharged of his office of cheefe iustice, taks sanctuarie, releeued by the Londoners, apprehended, cast in prison, and banished, 215, a 50, &c. Hubert of Moyenne and his daughter sold for monie, 84, a 60, b 10

Erle Iasper of Penbroke, 678, a 60. Beheadeth Roger Vaughan, passeth ouer into Bzitaine with his nephue, 693, a 50, 60. John of an ambitious nature, 132, a 40. No freend to the bishop of Elie, 132, a 10. In armes to vsurpe the kingdome, 137, b 60. Purposed to seize vpon the kingdom in his brothers absence, 134, b 50. Submitteth himselfe to his brother Richard the first, and craueth pardon for his offense, 146, b 60. Pardoned of all his rebellions, 147, a 10. John Scot of Chester poisoned by his wife, his foure sisters, 220, b 60. John of Montaigne licenced to returne into England, 121, b 10

Erle Lambert. ¶ Sée Lambert.
Lacie of Lincolne deceaseth, his buriall, his requeſt on his death bed, 320,b 30
Erle Mandeuill of Eſſex licenced to go into the holie land, 101,a 10. William of Eſſex taken, 56, a 20. Marchar of Mercia. ¶ Sée Marchar.
Marſhall of Penbzoke his ozation in the aſſemblie of peeres, 197,a 40. Recouereth his caſtciles taken by the pzince of wales, 205,a 30. Killed with a fall from his hozſe, 228, b 60. Deceaſeth, his burtiall, 262,a 60, 213, b 60
Mathew of Bullongne, 87, b 10. Wounded and dieth, 88, b 40. Montacute of Salisburie a politike man and valiant, 598, b 60. Miles of Hereford, 51, b 10. Deceaſeth, 56, a 10.
Mozttimer of March his good ſeruice in Ireland, 440, a 30. Slaine by the wild Iriſh, his iſſue, 448, b 10. Laſt erle of March of that name deceaſeth without iſſue: note, 590, a 10.
Montgomerie. ¶ Sée Montgomerie. Mowbzaie. ¶ Sée Mowbzaie. Mulbzaie. ¶ Sée Mulbzaie.
Erle Neuill of Weſtmerland, &c: Pzepareth to reſiſt the kings enimies, his ſubtill pꝛacticꝛ, 529, b 40, 50. Perſuadeth king Henrie the fift vnto the conqueſt of Scotland, 546, a 40. Neuill of Salisburie his iſſue, 641, b 60
Erle Patrike of Salisburie ſlaine, 75, b 30. Perſie of Mozthumberland created, 1133, a 60. Warden of the whole marches, 875, b 50. Sent to the ſeas, 455, a 50. Lieutenant of Calis, 475, b 10. Conſpireth with Owen Glendouer, 521, b 50, 522, 523. Reſtozed, 545, a 20. Beheaded at Yozke, 1257, a 20. Murthered himſelfe in the Tower, 1403, b 50
Inqueſt of inquirie vpon the fact, 50, 1404, all. Buried in the Tower, b 20. The whole manor of killing himſelfe, b 40, &c: to. 1419, a 10.
Perſie of Wozceſter leaueth the king and flieth to the duke of Lancaſter, 500, a 10. Sent ouer into Galcoigne to appeaſe the people, 518, a 10, 20.
Petwike of Perch, 67, b 10. Philip of Flanders, 87, b 10. Ameane to make peace betweene the kings of England & France, 114, a 60. His deuotion at Thomas Beckets towne, 100, b 60. Doth homage to the king of England, 103, b 60. His releaſe made at Henrie the ſeconds requeſt, 95, a 60. Plantagenet of Warwike ſon and heire to George duke of Clarence committed to the Tower, 762, a 10
Erle Rale. ¶ Sée Rale. Raimond of Barzelon, 67, b 10. Of Tripolis, 129. Ranulph of Cheſter taketh his wife the ducheſſe of Bzitaine pziſoner, 150, b 20. Laieth ſeege to Montfozell caſtell, 199, a 60. He raiſeth his ſeege, 199, b 20. Returneth from the hozie land, 202, b 20. Goeth into the holie land, 202, b 40. Deceaſeth, thzife married, the partition of his lands, his exploits, 215, b 40. Reinold of Cozniwall baſe ſonne to king Henrie the firſt departed this life, 95. b 40. Reinold Gzeie of Kent. 1227, b 40. Deceaſeth, 1258, a 20. Richard obeieth his father Henrie, 109, a 60. Seizeth vpon his father Henrie the ſeconds treaſure, 111, a 30. His rebellion againſt, he inuadeth the earle of Tholous lands, 112, a 60. Reuolteth from his father vnto the French king, 113, a 50. Richard of Cheſter vnder king Henrie the firſts tuition, 32, b 10. He & his wife dzowned, 41, b 10. Richard of Clares ſubmiſſion, 92, b 20. Richard of Cozniwall returneth out of Galcoigne, 209, a 40. Departeth from the court ſecretlie, ioineth himſelfe with the erls of Cheſter and Penbzoke, 209, a 60. King of Almaine, deceaſeth, his burtiall and iſſue, 275, a 60. His ſonne murthered, b 20. Richard of Eſſex, 961, a 60. Richard of Glocesters ſubmiſſion, 92, b 20. Richard of Glocester dieth, 95, b 50. Richard of Poitow king Henrie the ſeconds ſon, his victozie againſt the Bzabanders, 98, b 50. His ſharpe aſſait of Calburgh, 104, a 10. Robert of Derbie, 92, a 20. Robert of Glocester Henrie the firſts baſe ſonne, 37, a 50. An enimie to king Stephan, 48, b 50. Deſcribed, 53, a 10. Commeth to Glocester, 51, a 60. Father in law to John king Richards bzother, 117, a 30. Taken pziſoner, 54, a 50. Dieth, 56, b 50. Robert of Leceſter famous and valiant, 134, a 50, 60. Put to flight, 89, a 30. Taken pziſoner, 144, b 40, 90, a 40. Diſer foz his ranſome, 146, b 40. Robert Dudleie created baron and erle, 1207, a 60, b 10. Inueſted into the ozder of ſaint Michaell, 1209, a 20. ¶ Sée Erle of Leiceſter. Robert of Mellent rebelleth againſt king Henrie the firſt, 42, b 10. Robert of Richmond againſt the Frenchmen, his martiall acts, in danger to be ſlaine, 359, b 10, &c: 60. Robert de Beleſme of Shzewelburie rebelleth, 30, a 30. Robert de Uere owner of Hidingham caſtell, 190, b 50. Robert paſſeth ouer into Mozmandie, 55, a 20. Roger Fitzmiles of Hereford, 66, a 10
Erle Sater de Quincie of Winchester 199, a 60. Seimoz of Hereford lieutenant of the Mozth goeth againſt the Scots, 961, b 30. His anſwer to the pzouoſt of Edenbozough, 962, a 30. Simon of Hampton, 51, b 60, 52, b 20. Dieth, 60, b 10. Simon of Huntington dieth, 108, a 20. Simon of Leiceſter maried with Henrie thirds ſiſter, 222 b all. Maketh his poſſeſſions into monie and goeth into the holie land, 224, a 60, b 10, 225, b 40. Fled ouer into France, 223, b 30. Stanlie of Derbie deceaſeth, his life, death, and qualities, 1257, a 60, b 10. Stephan of Bullongne ſwozne to the ſucceſſion of the crowne, 43, a 10. ¶ Sée Stephan. Strangbow mazieth Dermmitus his daughter, 81, a 50. Confined, ſeeketh king Henrie the ſeconds fauoz, and is pardoned, 81, a 50, 60. He maketh ſurrender to king Henrie the firſt, b 20. Strangbow of Stzaguill, 81, a 10. Summerſet of Wozceſter ſent into France robbed vpon the ſea, 1257, b 40, 50, 60
Erle Talbot of Shzewesburie and his ſon manſullie ſlaine, 639, a 60, b 50. Sent into France with an armie, 817, a 40. Theobald of Champaigne his deſcent in armes againſt the French king, 39, b 20. His countrie inuaded by the French king, 40, b 20. Theodozike of Flanders, 66, b 60. Tiptoft of Wozceſter beheaded, 678. Turketullus. ¶ Sée Turketullus.
Erle Valeran of ſaint Paule put to flight, 528, b 20. Uere of Oxford, his charge to his bands of men, his valiantneſſe, 759, a 10, 20. Yeldeth himſelfe to king Edward the fourth, ſent ouer ſea, and kept pziſoner twelue yeares, 693, b 20. Made marqueſſe of Dublin, 448, a 60. Created duke of Ireland, 451, b 60. Duke of Ireland, to be ſafelie conducted to the kings preſence by the ſhiriffe of Cheſhire, 460 b 60. Deceaſeth in miſerable neceſſitie: note, 479, b 60. His cozps conueied from Louaine into England and there roialtie buried, 485, a 60. Sée keth to be diuozced from his lawfull wife: note, 458, a 10. Sent ouer into Galcoigne, 294, b 60. His valiantneſſe, 684. b 20. Getteth out of pziſon, and he with others go to the erle of Richmond, 749, a 10, 20. He ſuileth a power & commeth into England, his valoz and chiualrie, a 50, 60. He ſubmitteth himſelfe and yeldeth to the king, b 50. The erle of Richmond is glad of him and his companie, b 60. Deceaſeth, 950, a 60.
Erle Walter of Eſſex ſailleth into Ireland, 1258, b 60. Deceaſeth, 1263, a 40. The place of his birth, 60. His praiſe in ſundzie reſpects, b 20. Diſpoſed to inlarge his nobilitie, 60 ¶ Sée Erle of Eſſex. Waltheof. ¶ Sée Waltheof. Warren, 51, b 60. Warren of Surrie his wozds to Edward the firſt, 280, b 10. Of Shzewſburie warden of the welſh marches, 42, a 40. William of Arundell ambaſſador to the French king, 72, a 60. Dieth, 98, b 20. William of Kent, William de Yzeſſe, 54, a 30. William ſonne to duke Robert erle of Flanders, 43, a 50. Dieth of wounds, 43, b 20. Duke Robert of Mozmandies ſon by Sibill, 34, a 10. William named de Longſpee with others go into the holie land, 241, b 50. William of Mozteigne and Bullongne, 68, a 20, 66, b 50. A factious man, 32, a 60. His ſtilfulneſſe and malecontentment, b 10. William of Sarliburie inuadeth the countries about London, 89, b 30.
Erle of Albemerle, 52, a 10, 52, b 10. Whie ſuppoſed to beleeue the zowne, 88, b 30. Of Alnergnes lands ſpoiled, 75, a 40
Of Anion, 55, a 20. ¶ Sée Mozmandie. Departeth this life, 58, b 20. Of Armanacks daughter affied to Henrie the firſt. he, his ladie, ſonne & two daughters taken, 624, a 10. An open enimie to England: note, 636, b 10. Of Arundels freendlie ſpeech to ladie Eliſabeth, 1154, a 50. His exploits in France: note, 609, a 10. His death, 610, a 20. Goeth to ſea with fiue hundzed men of armes and a thouſand archers, 454, a 50. His liberalitie: note, 454, b 50. Saileth into Bzitaine with a great power, 455, a 10. Returneth into France, 465, b 10. Sent to the ſea with a great naule in aid of the duke of Bzitaine 465, a 50. Ioineth with the lozds in conſpiracie, 458, a 60, To be appzehended by the earle of Mozthumberland, 60. Anſwer to his indictment, he is condemned, 491, b 10, 50, 60. Executed, 492, a 10, 20. Duerthzowne in the middeſt of a water, 56, a 30. Pzokeſieth himſelfe ſozie that he goeth not with the duke of Mozthumberland againſt the ladie Marie, 1086, b 10. Appzehended, 489, b 20. Arreigned, 491, a 60
Erle of Bedfozd and his ſonne the lozd Ruſſell deceaſeth, 1413, b 10. Of Blois his ſon made biſhop of winchester, 42, a 60. Of Bzitaine aſſiſted againſt the French king, he ſubmitteth himſelfe, 219, a 10, 20. Of Buckingham ſent into Bzitaine to aid the duke againſt the French king, 425, b 60. He maketh knights at his entrance into France, 426, a 30. Diſpleaſed with the duke of Bzitaine, returneth into England, 427, b 60. Of Bullogne pzepareth ſix hundzed ſhips to inuade England. 75, a 50
Erle of Cartleill raiſeth an armie, put to death foz treaſon, 333, a 10, b 20. His iudgment and conſtancie at his death, 334, a 60. Of Cambzidge returneth out of Pozttingale, 441, b 20. His ſonne affianced to the king of Pozttingals daughter, 441, b 20, 40. He and other lozds appzehended foz treaſon, 548, b 10. Executed, 50. The effect of his indictment, 549, a 30, &c. Of Cheſter deſcribed, 53, a 10. His exploits being the kings lieutenant, 212, b 20. Withſtood the gathering of tenths foz the pope, 211, a 50. Ware S. Edwards ſwozd before Henrie the third at his mariage, 219, b 40. His ozation to the erle of Glocester, 52, a 10. His right and title thereto, and pziuileges, his foure barons vnder him: note, 20, a 20. Dieth, 60, b 10. Of Cozniwall marrieth the counteſſe of Glocester, 213, b 50. Elected emperour, 254, b 10. Stands againſt the K. his bzother foz grant of a ſubſidie, 251, b 40. He lendeth the king monie, 252, a 20. Elected king of Almaine, taketh his leaue of the king his bzother, 256, a 20. And king of Almaine, his pzotеſtation to the Engliſh ambaſſadozs, he commeth ouer into England, receiueth an oth not to infringe the ſtatuts of Oxford, 261, a all. An intercessor for peace to be had betwixt the pope and the emperour, 226, b 10

Erle of Derbies exploits in France and his taking of townes, 368, b 40, &c: 369, a 10, &c. Assembleth an armie, winneth townes, and is victorious, 375, a 30, &c. His exploits against the infidels, 473, b 10. Repeth Newland bridge, 377, b 20. Imbassador into France, his intertainement, 1380, a 50, 60, &c: 1381, all, 1382, a 10, &c. Of Desmond a rebell and others brought to order by the erle of Surrie & his power, 855, b 60. His strange and miserable end, 1365, b 60. His head set on London bridge, 1356, a 20

Erle of Ellex capteine generall of Ulster, in Ireland, 1259, a 20. How he spent his youthfull yeares, 1264, a 10. Perfect in the scriptures, 1264, a 30. A favourer of preachers, 40. Expert in chronicles, histories, &c: 50. Indued with martiall knowledge and prowesse, b 20. His humanitie, affablenesse, &c: 1265, a 10. His equanimitie, 40. He could not awake with swearing, chasing, &c: 50. His devotion in sickenesse, 60. Heauenlie contemplation toward his death, b 10. How his seruants were affected at his speeches, 30. Eternallie blessed, 60. His epitaph geneologicall, 1296, a 10. His death much lamented, b 20. Quéene Elisabeths testimonie concerning him, 60. Why his epitaph geneologicall was added to the sermon, 1267, a 10. His counsell to the young earle his sonne now alive, 20. Goeth to Leger, 1431, b 20

Erle of Ew. ¶ See William.

Erle of Flanders his oth, 91, a 10. Assisteth king Sweine to inuade England, 14, a 50. Wounded and dead, 40, b 10. Allured from Richard the first to the French K. 126, b 50. His deuotion vnto Thomas Beckets shrine, 152, a 60. Winneth townes, 151, b 50. In armes against the Turkes, 164, a 20. Flieth into Gant, 354, b 40. He returneth and ekiowes flieth, 354, b 50. Forced to a promise of marriage, 376, b 30. Dishonorable abuling of Edward the third & his owne people, 376, b 40. He & his wife arrested, inforced to agree with the French king, released, & returned home, he defieth the French king, till he is accursed, his sonne appealeth from an interdiction, 297, a 10, &c. Pacifieth his people, 306, b 40. Fealteth the king of England, 360, b 10. Sendeth to the bishop of Norwich to know the cause of his inuasion, 442, b 60

Erle of Glocesters answer to the earle of Chesters oration, 52, a 30. Maketh warre on the welshmen, 281, b 10. Raiseth a commotion, 272, b 60. Confederateth with the earle of Leicester, 262, b 50. Admonished to obeie Henrie the third, the Towre defended against him, 273, a 10. Sworne to the peace by Henrie the third on his death bed, 276, a 40

Erle of Henault defieth the French king, 357, b 60. Of Herefords euill counsell to duke William, 8, b 60. He & Lancaster come, 329, a 40. They flie, come to Pomfret, the one slaine the other taken, 330, a 40, b 60. Of Hertford forraieth the middle marches of Scotland, 969, b 10, 60. Of Huntington politike & wise, 616, b 60, 617, a 10

Erle of Kent a bishop, 18, a 60. Dispossessed of his lands, but pardoned of life, but excluded from libertie, 216, a 60, b 10. ¶ See Odo. Of Kildare restored to his deputiship in Ireland, 878, b 10, 20. Made deputie of Ireland, 883, b 30. Committed to the Towre by cardinall woolseis meanes, 855, b 20. Executed, 943, b 50. Of Kime otherwise Angus beheaded, 666, b 40

Erle of Lancaster vntrulie fained to be surnamed Crookebacke, 511, a 50. Canonized for a saint, 472, b 50. A great strife whether he should be reputed a saint or no, 331, b 60, 332, a 10. Arreigned, found guiltie, and beheaded, 331, a 40, 60

Erle of Leicester brother to the earle of Wellent, 58, b 60. Offered to strike the king. 89, b 50. In armes against the French king, 138, a 52. Put to flight by the French, his valiantnesse at a fresh assault, 154, b 20. Put to a hard shift by the Gascoignes, 246, b 60. Seruite in Gascoigne, 242, a 60. Threateneth the earle of Penbroke, 252, b 40. Resigneth his gouernment of Gascoigne, 247, b 60. Danteth his enimies, 245, b 10. Slain, 270, a 60. His sonne raiseth an armie, winneth Winchester, his armie is discomfited, 270, a all. His pride bringeth the barons to confusion, b 10.

Erle of Leicester baron Denbigh, passeth ouer sea to the low countries as the queens lieutenant, 1419, a 20. Arriueth at Flushing, 1424, a 20. Hasteth towards Middleborough, b 40. His intertainment there, 50. Honourable feasted in Christmasse time of the states, 1425, a 20. He feasteth them againe, 40. Landeth at Williamstat, 60. Entreth into Dort, b 10. Commeth to Rotherdam, 50. Entreth into Delfe, 60. Magnificent intertainment of the quéene, and the bountifull fare he kept for his attendants, in progresse, 1299, a 30. On the right hand of the prince Dolphin, 1337, b 30. Keepeth saint Georges feast solemnlie at Utricht, 1433, b 20. Inuested with the robes of the order, 60. Commeth to Utricht, and how received, 1431, a 60, b 10. A placard conteining the authoritie giuen him by the states of the low countries, 1428, b 10, &c, 1429, a 10, &c. Lodgeth in the house where the prince of Orange was slaine, 1426, a 10. Remoueth to Denhage, and worthilie intertained, 30. Intertained at Leidon, he rideth to Skeueling, titles of honor ascribed vnto him, 1427 b 60. Commeth to Harlem, and how he was received, 1429, b 40, &c, 1430, a 10, &c. Goeth to Amsterdam, and how intertained, 40

Erle of Leicesters onelie sonne & heire deceaseth, 1375, b 40.

Erle of Lincolne proclaimed heire apparant, 747, a 30. Sonne to John de la Pole, duke of Suffolke, a conspirator, 766, a 10. His flight into Flanders, doubted of Henrie the seuenth, he entreth Yorkshire with his power, trieth battell with the king, he is slaine, 766, b 60, 767, a 10. Deceaseth, 1378, b 60, 1379, a 10. ¶ See Lacies.

Erle of March duke of Yorke, 659, b 60. The great hope of the people conceiued of him, he is elected king, he taketh vpon him the regiment, 661, a 60, b 10, 40. His badge: note, 660, a 20

Erle of Wellent, 51, b 60, 52, b 10. Discontented with the bishops in an assemblie, 36, a 60, b 10, 20. A councellor to Henrie the first, to hold the title of inuestitures of prelats, 32, a 30. Taken prisoner, 42, b 20. His sonnes praised for their learning: note, 44, a 60. Of Mortaigne taken prisoner, 33, a 40. Mortimer. ¶ See Mortimer.

Erle of Northumberland charged by the duke of Lancaster with sundrie crimes, the Londoners are his frends, they are accoyed, 439, a 60, b 10. Sent to apprehend the erle of Arundell, 458, a 60. His words to the king, in behalfe of the lords iolaitie, 459, a 20. His message to Richard the second, 500, b 20. Cleereth himselfe of much suspicion, 525, b 20, 30. Flieth, 530, b 40. Against Westmerland, he is restored, 524, a 10, b 10. His returne into England, 534, a 30 Slaine, 534, a 60. Murthered by the northerne rebels, 769, b 30, 40. His rich arraie, 791, a 60. Committed to prison by the cardinall Wolseis meanes, 855, b 60. Arresteth Wolsei, 915, b 20, 30, 40. He and Westmerland rebell, and what ill successe it had: note, 1212, 1213. ¶ See Conspiracie, Erle Persie.

Erle of Ormond high treasuror of Ireland, 883, b 30. Of Oxford. ¶ See earle Vere.

Erle of Pearth slaine, 200, a 60, Of Penbroke passeth ouer into Ireland, he is taken prisoner, his death, 218, a 60, b 10. In danger of taking, he is rescued, 217, b 40. Lord warden of Scotland, 312, b 10. Diligent: note, 201, a 20. Valiant manhood, 672, b 60. Discontented, waiteth for aduantage, 667, a 60. Conductor of the earle of Richmonds companie, 748, a 20. Generall of quéen Maries armie against Wiat and his companie, they incounter. 1098, a 30, 60. Deceaseth, his epitaph, 1213, b 10

Erle of Richmond causeth his men to put on armor, he setteth them in order, and appointeth chieftens, 755, b 20, 40. His person described, his cause iust and right, a great motiue to the nobles to assist him, incouragements to his armie to plaie the men, 757, a 50, b 20. His oration by Richard the third to the chieftens of his armie, 755, b 60. Politike, 758, b 60. Preparation of ships and souldiors to the sea, disparkled by tempest, he saeth all the English banks furnished with souldiors, 744, b 50, 60. Sendeth to know whether they were with him or against him, arriueth in Normandie, and passeth by land into Britaine, in favour with the French king, he lamenteth and reioiseth, the lords giue faith and promise each to other for his furtherance, he sweareth to marrie Elisabeth the daughter to Edward the fourth after possession of the crowne, diuerse of his faction apprehended and executed, 745, a 10, 30, 40, 60, b 10, 20, 50, 60. Arriueth at Milford hauen, his power made strong by accesse of the confederats, he sendeth secret word to his mother & frends that he ment a direct passage to London, and desired their conference, he is aided of the welshmen, 753, a 60, b 20, 40. At Lichfield, remoueth his power to Tamworth, and of a strange chance that happened to him, put to a hard shift, 754, b 10, 30, 50, 60. Informed of his roiall preferment, &c. He maketh the duke of Britaine priuie to the matter, preparation to bring in, receiue and erect him to the kingdome, 742, b 10, 40, 60. Attainted in parlement, and all other that fled ouer sea to take his part, 746, a 40. Smal traine for a politie, apparelled like a page, he attendeth vpon one of his men, he is fauored of footeine and horsebone, he goeth to the French king and requireth succour to recouer the crowne, 748, a 30, 40, b 10, &c, 50. Diuerse Englishmen submit themselues vnto him in France, 750, a 10. Prosecuteth to incounter Richard the third bodie to bodie, 759, a 40. Deuout behauiour after the victorie, 760, a 30. Crowned by the lord Stanlie in the field, by the name of Henrie the seuenth, 760, a 40, 50. ¶ See Henrie the seuenth. Of Rutland put the French armie in danger of an ouerthrow, 1240, b 30. Employed in martiall affaires about Scotland, 1061, a 10. Deteresth the nobles conspiracie to king Henrie the fourth, 515, a 40. Sent ouer ambassador into France, 519, a 40. His folie the cause of disclosing the noblemens conspiracie, 519, a 10, 20. Being yong cruellie murthered: note, 659, b 30, went against the rebels in the north, 1212, b 20 ¶ See Manners.

Erle of Salisburie gathered a power, 649, a 20. Charged with treason, his request, he is maie prised, 513, a 50, b 50, 60. Slaine by the Saracens, 243, a 10. Deceleth, 150, b 30. Healicke, deceaseth, 207, b 10. Deceaseth, buried at the iulls, tuſts,366,b 60. Slaine,599, b 30. Of Shrewſburies great diligence, policie and and true ſeruice againſt the northerne rebelles, 942,a30. His loialtie, what he ſaid to them that talked lewdlie of him,prouided of ill ſouldiors, his oth in preſence of the people neceſſarie, 942,a36,60,b 10,30,50. Generall of an armie againſt the Scots and French,994,b60. Commeth to Hadington, and of his doings againſt the enimie, 995, a10,20,60,b10,&c. Of Southampton deceaſeth, 1062,b 20. Of Suffolke in great fauor with K. Richard the ſecond: note, 454, a40. Put to his ſhifts and diſtreſſed, 790, a60,b10. Grieuouſlie charged by the parlement houſe for ſundrie offenſes,453, a60. Fleeth ouer into Calis diſguiſed: note, 460, b30. Sudden death, 440, a10. Of Surreie entreth Scotland, defacing caſtelles and towers,his valiant heart, reioiſing at his hap likelie to fight hand to hand with the king of Scots, ambaſſadors to treat a peace betweene both nations, 783,a 20,40. High treaſuror of England, 781,b 60. Sent with a great power againſt the northerne rebels, 769,b60. Valiant determination to incounter the Scots, the ordering of his armie,828 a10,20. And his ſonne the lord admerall with toined powers againſt the Scots,825, b 50,60. Their meſſage to the king of Scots,826,a60,b10. They remoue their camps to and fro as occaſion moueth 827,b20,50. High admerall, his attire at the receiuing of the French kings ambaſſadors,848,a40. His ſeruice againſt certein rebels,855,b50 High admerall and his companie come vnto Hampton court,873, b 60. Entereth Scotland,306,b60. His maner of winning Morleis in Britaine,he maketh knights 874,a30, 40. Sent with an armie to inuade France,commeth with his power to Calis,returneth into England, 875,a10,60,b10. Inuadeth Scotland and preuaileth againſt them,881,a60,b10,&c. And Southampton ſent to Calis,953,a40. Committed to the Tower notwithſtanding his ſubmiſſion, 759,b50. Beheaded,976,b40,50. Of Suſſex maketh a roade into Scotland, his valorous ſeruice,1122,a40,&c. Inuadeth Scotland,1213,b60. Vieweth Hume caſtell, 1214,a40. Went againſt the rebelles in the north,1212,b10. Gentle to ladie Elizabeth, 1153,a50, Viſiteth madam de Parma, 1210,a60. His roomes during his abode beyond ſeas,b 10. Interteined of the emperor,20. Saluted of the duke of Auſtria, 40. Departeth from Vienna,60. Deceaſeth, 1353,b50. His honorable funerall,60,1354,a10. ¶ See Fitzwater. Of ſaint Giles accorded with king Henrie the ſecond,85,a20. Otherwiſe Tholouze, 67,b30. Of ſaint Paule reuolteth to the French,619,b10.Conſedered with the duke of Burgognie, 694,a30. His counſell vnto king Henrie the firſt,488,a10 Came out of France to ſee a chalenge performed at Couentrie,495,a20. Aſſaileth the caſtell of Guiſnes, 538,b 40. His fortune againſt the Engliſhmen,538,b40.Landed in the Ile of Wight,he maketh ſpoile,521,a60. Deceaſeth, 608,b50

Erle of Tholouze landeth inuaded by earle Richard, 112, a 60

Erle of Warwike made gouernor of king Henrie the ſixt, 596,a50. And others ſent to the generall councell, 547,a 50,60. Denieth that euer he acknowledged himſelfe guiltie of treaſon,513,a30. Aſſaulted,648,b20. Lord admerall and lieutenant of Calis, he ſcowreth the ſeas and taketh a rich pray,648,a10,&c. Regent of France,616,a20.His entrance thereinto,a60. Anſwer to the duke of Clarence his meſſage, 682,b10. And Edward the fourth incounter, his manfull courage,684, a10,&c:b40. He is ſlaine, 685,a10. Followeth king Edward the fourth to foile him, 683,b40. And the duke of Clarence tooke the ſeas, he is kept out of Calis, landed at Diepe,674,a50,b30. The ſong which the people ſong vnto him, 675, a40. In a chafe becauſe of king Edward the fourths deliuerie, 673,b30.In Couentrie,prouoked to fight by king Edward the fourth,681,a10.His houſekeeping, inſtituted gouernor of the realme, his badge worne in euerie mans cap: note,678,a30,40,b40. Diſcourageth king Edward the fourth, and maketh him flie for feare out of England, 675,a60,b10,&c. His ſtandard, what enſigne it bore, 673,a10. The fruits of his malice,673,a30. Beareth a continuall grudge vnto king Edward the fourth, his perſuaſions to his two brethren againſt him,670,b20,50,671, b10,&c:b50. Offended with king Edward the fourths marriage, 668,a60. He keepeth his greeſe ſecret, b20. Sent ouer into France about K. Edward the fourths marriage,667,b60. His courage, a truſtie friend to king Edward the fourth, 664,a60 b10. The right one, order taken for the ſhewing of him abroade,765,b30. Had in feare of gelouſie an forren regions, 787, b60. Shewed openlie in proceſſion, 766, a10. His manlie cotage,982,a50. His preſence, greatlie incorageth the Engliſh ſouldiors, 987,a 10. His requeſt and meſſage to the erle of Huntlie, 984, a 20. Arreigned of treaſon, Confeſſeth it, ſubmitteth himſelfe, is pardoned,492, a 50,60,b10. In higheſt authoritie,1061,b10. Commended, he is ſlaine, 727,a60. Sent againſt the rebelles in the north, 1212,b40. Commended,1205,a50. Deceaſeth,404,b20. His valiantneſſe,1204,a60. Shot thorough the thigh with an harquebuſe,b50. Noble men of France ſent vnto him from the admerall about conference,1199b30. Landeth at Newhauen,1196,a20.An oth taken by him and his officers 30. He and the Rheingraue talke togither,b10. He appointed to go againſt Norfolke rebels,1034,b30. Commeth to Cambridge,b40. He ſendeth an herald at armes to the rebels offering pardon, &c:1036,a10,&c. Counſell giuen him to abandon Norwich, goeth forth to giue the enimies battell, 1038, a60, b 70. The rebels yeld to him, & ſheweth them mercie, 1039, b20,Counterfet of Warwike ¶ See Simeneli. Of Wiltſhire and others ſpoile Newberie,he faileth ouer ſeas,653 b20,30. The duke of Buckinghams brother 803,b20. Of Wincheſter beſieged by his owne tenants, 240,b10. Reprochfullie executed,339,a 50. Of Worceſter gouernor to the prince ſlipperth from him, 522,b30. And others beheaded, 523,b60

Erles of Cheſter the true and famous genealogie,221,a10 Cooke end in John Scot, 221,a10. Of Leiceſter from the firſt to the laſt by ſucceſſion,ſet downe in a collection, 1419,a40,&c: vnto 1424,b10. Of Richmond line that firſt bare their title of honor of the ſaid ceſtle and towne, 7,b20

Erles created,332,a20,568 a60 347. b60. 892, a50.912 b50. And dukes created,395,b 50. And barons, 960,a20. And lords,1061,a40, 1228, a60,b 10.At a parlement, 353,a30. Three taken and beheaded, 183,b10

Erledome of March purchaſed, 102,b50.

Erminfred biſhop of Sion or Sitten a cheefe commiſſioner from pope Alexander, 8,b60.

Ermingard bicount Beaumonts daughter married to William king of Scots, 130, a60

Earthquake,217,b50.In Kent, &c:1313,a10. Ouer all England, 109,a40. Generall in England.11,b50. In H. the firſts time,39,b10. Senſible and viſible,44,b40. That did much hurt, 440,b40. In the fourteenth of duke Williams reigne,14, a30. Anuerſall how frightfull and hurtfull, 1311,a20,&c:. That ouerthrew buildings,a39. b20. At ſaint Albons counted ſtrange, and white, 243,a60. That ouerthrew houſes,241, a60. Generall, did much hurt,278,a30.In diuerſe places of England,1206,a20,30 In ſundrie places of England, and what harme was thereby done,1260,b10. After a thunder,204,b40. With lightening and thunder,&c: 277,b40: note, Earth lifted vp it ſelfe like a huge towre,102,b 60. Remoued in Dorſetſhire,1353, a20. And trees ſonke and ſwallowed vp in Kent: note, 1413,b20,30. Strangelie moouing in the countie of Hereford, 1224,b10

Eſcuage demanded: note,213,a 20. Granted,233,b40,248,a 40,262,a10. Paid,203,a60. Gathered,twentie ſhillings of euerie knights fee, 230, b 50. Termed the great, 229, a50

Eſpeke walter, the firſt that brought the order of white monks into England,26,a60

Eſſexmen beginners of a ſhrewd rebellion,429,b60. They proſecute it, 430,&c.

Eſter date fell at the higheſt, namelie on ſaint Marks date 167,a60

Eſterlings. ¶ See Riot.

Eſtouteuille Robert taken priſoner. 33,a40

Euill Maie date. ¶ See Rebellion of Lincolne.

Euers, conſtable of Douer caſtell,&c,480,a 20. Lord that now liueth, his noble anceſtrie 412,b50. Knight his good ſeruice in the North, 942, b 30.His proweſſe and valiant ſeruice,962, b 30. Slaine, 968,a60

Eureux citie yelded vnto the Frenchmen,386,b50. Taken by treaſon, 619, b60

Euſtace earle of Bullongne, againſt William Rufus, 17, b 60. Sonne to king Stephan duke of Normandie,48,a40. Angrie with his father, 60,a 60. His death. ¶ See Monke.

Exactions cauſe commotions, 626,b10. Great, 145, a40. with ſhifts of extortion practiſed, 146, a10. New and ſtrange: note,496,a20. Intollerable, 239,b10. ¶ See Couetouſnes, Subſidies,&c. Taxes, Tenths, and Tributes.

Example euill how it preuaileth,430,a60. Of great ones what it doth for imitation, 845,b60

Execution without iudgement vpon noblemen,673,a30,693, a50. Of the duke of Buckingham without arreignment or iudgement, 744,b10

Exceſter rebelled againſt duke William, and is ſubdued, 6, b 10. Preſerued from fier,784, a10. Beſieged,the loialtie of the citizens, 1002,b 40, 60. Citie deſcribed,with the ſundrie aſſaults of the ſame,1007 b10,1008, 1009,1010,1011, 1012,1013,1014.Commended for loue and loiall ſeruice to the king and ſtate: note,1047 b40,50. Noble & true,1048, a10. Great practiſes to procure the citizens thereof to ioine with the Deuonſhire rebels: note, 1020, a 30, &c. The antiquitie, foundation, and building of the cathedrall church of ſaint Peters in Exceſter,1027,a20,&c.¶ See Clergie,Edward the fourth, and Richard the third.

Excommunication denounced againſt the rebellious barons in king Johns time,188,b60 Of Romiſh pluirers, and the excommunicator called to his anſwer,219,b10. A dart that made both king and people to quaile,223,b60.Of preeſt for incontinencie,242,a60. And ſuſpenſion threatned againſt the Engliſh clergie,239,a40. Thretned to ſuch as aſſiſted king John,181, a 50. Of Lewis the French kings ſonne by name, 192,a20. By name and in particular,190,a 20, 10. Of king John when it was to be releesed, 178, b 40. Of Gme de Montfort, 277, a 40. Of duke Leopald for imprisoning of Richard the fourth, 147, a 50. Extended to the dead & buried: note, 392, a 10. Flashed and thundered out against the wicklemists: note, 484, a 10, &c: Threatened against attempters of tumults, 205, b 60. The feare thereof construmed a contribution, 211, a 10. Of pope Sixtus quintus esteemed as nothing: note, 1401, a 40, &c: ¶ See Legates, Popes, and Priests.

Exchequer, and the officers vnto the same by whome instituted, 8, a 60. Removed from Westminster to Northhampton, 173, a 10. It and the kings bench removed vnto Shrewesburie, 278, b 10.

Excuse of Edward the first to avoid an inconuenience, 308, a 60. Of the clergie to be free from subsidies, &c: 301, b 40. ¶ See Conetousnesse.

Exham field. ¶ See Battell.

Exton knight a murtherer of king Richard the second 517, a 10. His late repentance and sorrow. a 20. Extortion of William Rufus made him euill spoken of amongest his subiects, 23, b 10. An ordinance against it, 260, b 10. ¶ See Oppression & Vsurie.

F.

FActions of Yorke and Lancaster vnpossible to be mingled without danger of discord, 647, a 40

Faire kept at Westminster at saint Edwards tide, 241, a 30

Fifteene daies togither, 247, a 20. Of Lewis the French kings sonne in derision, 200, b 10. At Brikstow robbed, 263, b 50

Faleis beleeged and rendered vp to king Henrie the fift, 561 b 10, 60. ¶ See Arbet.

Falkwod betwixt brethren, 32, a 60

Familie of Ione, sine of that sect stood at Paules crosse, 1261, b 30. Proclamation against them: note, 1314, a 60, b 10.

Famine extreme within Rone, 566, b 20. Richard the second died therof, 516, b 60. Sudfred, 68, b 20. The cause why Rone was surrendred, 167, b 60. Refused, and death by the sword chosen, 166, a 20. The punishment of witchcraft, 204, a 10. Lamentable, 323, b 40. ¶ See Pestilence.

Farrer an haberdasher of London a sore enimie to the ladie Elisabeth, 1159, b 20, 30, &c:

Fast generall proclamed and deuoutlie obserued, 1427, b 50

Fasts & processions vsed, 260 a 10

Fauour. ¶ See People.

Feckham. ¶ See Abbat.

Fées. ¶ See Annuities.

Feare causeth want of speech, 659, b 30. Made king Edward the fourth forsake his kingdome, 675, a 60, b 10. what it forceth men vnto, 293 a 20. Causeth restitution of wrongfull detained townes, 311, b 20. Forceth agreement: note, 114, b 20. Among the people assembled at the duke of Summerlets execution, 1068, a 50, b 10. ¶ See Suspicion.

Fergals a Lombard betraieth the duke of Clarence, 580, a 10

Felton ¶ See Bull seditious.

Ferdinando archduke of Austrich made knight of the garter, 882, a 60

Ferrers lord of misrule at a Christmas at the court, his behauiour and port, 1067, a 60, b 10, &c:

Ferrers knight William taken prisoner, 33, a 40

Ferrers a traitor. ¶ See Treason.

Fescampe William, his deuises of a plaine song whereabout was strife, 13, b 30

Feast rare and roiall, 1332, a 60 At queene Katharins cozonation, 579, a 10, &c: Sumptuous and full of rare deuises, 1434, a 30

Fetherston, alias Constable. ¶ See Counterfet of king Edward the sixt.

Feuersham abbeie by whome founded, 58, a 20

Fifteenth granted vnto king Henrie the third by the temporaltie, 213, a 10. Of the sixt penie after the rate of mens goods, 312, b 20. Of all the moueables to be found within the realme, 207, a 30. Three granted, 402, a 60. ¶ See Subsidie.

Fight among sparows, 397, b 50

Finch knight drowned, 1202, b 10

Fine for misdemeanor, 704, a 60 Of fiue thousand markes paid to king Henrie the third by the Londoners, 208, b 40. For murther, 122, b 30. Of a keeper for a prisoners escape, 152, a 20

Fines set on prisoners for their ransoms, 144, a 50. Paid for licence to exercise turnements, 145, b 60. Set on the nobles by king John for not aiding him against the French king, 167, a 20. For not comming to the church, 1322. Of priests that had wiues, 26, a 30. Extreme leuied vpon the clergie: note, 201, b 60, 202, a 10. Set on the maior of London and the shiriffes, 256, b 30: note. Set on shiriffes heads, 254, a 60. Of foure hundred pounds set vpon aldermens heads of London by king Henrie the seuenth, 795, b 60, 796, a 10. Setled vpon them, that fauored the Cornish rebels, 785, a 10. ¶ See Eleuage, Forfeits, and Nobilitie.

Fire bursteth out of the earth, 44, b 40. It & the sword Gods angrie angels, 1001, b 10

Fish monstrous taken in Norfolke, 1355, b 60. Of twentie yards long, &c: note, 1259, b 30. Driuen to the English shore, 1206, a 40. Like vnto a man, 168, a 10

Fishes of the sea fight, 225, b 60 115, a 10. Monstrous at Downam bridge in Suffolke 1211, a 50. In Westminster hall after the fall of an high flood, 1271, b 50.

Fishmongers bound to find foure scholers at the vniuersities, &c: note, 792, b 10. Sore troubled by the maior of London, 440, b 30. An act against them within the citie of London, 441, a 50. The statute against them repeled and they restored to their liberties, 442 a 60. Wrested by iustice Randolph, 1354, a 40, 50.

Fitzalan William a conspirator 49, a 10

Fitzarnulfe a Londoner procureth the citizens to reuenge their cause by rebellion, he is apprehended and executed, 204, a 40

Fitzbaldrike shiriffe of Yorke, 10, a 10

Fitzempresse Henrie, his returne into England 58; a 20. and is knighted, 40

Fitzhergus Gilbert killed his brother: note, 98, b 40

Fitzgeffrie chamberleine vnto king Richard the first, 128, a 60. His death, b 60

Fitzhammon Robert his tale to William Rufus, 26, b 20

Fitzjohn Eustace a conspirator, 49, a 10. Slaine, 67, a 10

Fitzleo Peter an vsurping pope, 44, a 50

Fitzmiles Roger. ¶ See Erle.

Fitzmoris his miserable end, 1365, b 60

Fitzosbert his vnnaturall ingratitude, and complaint to K. Richard the first against the citie of London, 149, a 40. Whie he ware his long beard, his oration to the people, he is called before the archbishop of Canturburie lord cheefe iustice & president of the realme, he flieth into the church of saint Marie Bow, he is attached, his concubines, 149, all. Is executed, the archbishop of Canturburie euill spoken of for his death, an old whoremonger and new saint 150, a 10, 20

Fitzosborne William earle of Hereford, &c: gouernor of England in duke Williams absence, 5, a 10

Fitzroie Oliuer sonne to king John, 202, a 20

Fitzscrope Richard in armes against Edzike the rebell, 5, a 10

Fitzwalter lord deceaseth in Spaine, 450, b 10. Appealeth the duke of Iumerie of treason, 512, a 60. He is mainprised, 513, b 60. Earle of Sussex, his seruice against the Scots, he is in great danger: note, 986, a 20

Fitzwilliams recorder of London his wisedome in a dangerous case, 730, b 30

Flanders spoiled by the duke of Glocester, 614, b 60. Wholie at the deuotion of Edward the third, 354, b 60. Interdicted, 358, a 10. Diuerse rodes made thereinto by the English, and great spoile done, 454, b 60. Inuaded by the bishop of Norwich, 442, b 60. a great part drowned by an exundation, 34, a 60. ¶ See Erle of Leicester, & League.

Flatterie impudent of sir John Bushie to king Richard the second, 490, b 60. Vsed in a sermon: note, 725, b 40 Notable, 727, b 50, 60, 728, a 10, &c. ¶ See Dissimulation.

Fleetwood recorder of London made sargent at law. ¶ See Sargents at law.

Fleming bishop of Lincolne, founder of Lincolne college in Oxford, 604, a 20

Fleming knight maister of the ordinance, 991, b 50

Fleming lord required to come to parle with the generall, 1217, b 20. His dishonorable dealing, 30. His double dealing, 1218, a 10. His letter to sir George Carew, 1218, a 60

Flemings three score thousand came to the aid of the earle of Henault, 359, a 10. Released of debts and interdiction, 360, a 50. Besiege Aire, and doo much mischefe the French 377, a 60. Doo what they might to indamage the French in behalfe of English, 376, b 20. Their hearts alienated from the obedience of their exle, 353, b 50. Sweare fealtie to Edward the third, 357, a 40. Vanquished by the earle of Arthois, 303, a 60. Set vpon the Englishmen in their lodgings, 306, b 10. Banished the land, 313, b 50. Their fleete loseth the victorie to the English naue, 454, b 20. Kill an English herald of armes, 443, a 10. Discomfited by the Englishmen, 443, a 40. Sent home into Flanders, 92, b 10. Their enuie, 64, a 30. Comming ouer into England, haue places appointed them to inhabit, 34, a 60. Motion to haue Edward the third take vpon him the title to the crowne of France, 356, b 10. Slaine throughout their owne couetousnes, 1151, a 20

Flies in Februarie the number strange, 1260, a 60. Marie seene in a yeare, a prognostication naturall of a plague like to follow, 1050, b 30

Flint castell built, 279, b 50

Flix great death thereby in the English host, 550, b 50. By vnwonted diet, and thereby on death, 813, b 10. Gotten by excessiue eating of frutes, 476, b 10. Causing a great death, 537, a 20

Flodden field, 826, a 40, &c. 427, a 10, &c, 428, a 10, &c.

Flozen. ¶ See Caine.

Floods and high waters doing much hurt, 1129, b 50. Foretold by astronomie, but failing sut false, 882, b 20. Drowning the marishes on Essex and Kent side, &c, 914, b 40. That hindered a great and bloudie conflict, 943, a 30. That did much hurt, 480, b 60. In the riuer of Thames, 1207, a 50. High by means of a great thaw, 1208, a 60. High that did much hurt, 1310, b 30. Three without ebbe betweene, 540, a 50. High that drowned Westminster hall, 1271, b 50. Great and violent, 161, a 10, 355, b 10. That did great hurt, 220, b 50. In the night, 284, a 30. ¶ See Bridges, and Riuers.

Floure deuices three, and how they came annexed vnto the armes of England, 15, a 10

Flushingers trouble the English passengers, 1262, b 40, 50

Folkmote at Paules, 262, a 20, 263, a 30, 264, a 50

Follie of a couper, 819, b 60

Forfeits, 312, b 60. For breaking peace concluded betwixt Richard the first, and the French king, 148, b 50. ¶ See Fines.

Forgerie of William Rufus to get monie, 20, b 10

Forgetfulnes of dutie in young men aduanced to dignitie, 76,

Forgiue-

Forgiuenesse of an enimie, a notable example, 156,a30
Forrest called New forrest, and what waste & desolation was made to make it, 14, a30. Of Shirewood pleased king Richard the first verie greatlie, 142, b 10. ¶ See Frier.
Forrests to be seuered the new from the old, 207, a 50. The perambulations of them appointed to bishops, 308, b 30. Seized into duke W. hands, 14, a 20. Their gouernement diuided, 108, a 30. And ordinances for them, 153, b 50. King Johns commandement against the white monks concerning them, 162, a 40
Forster doctor of phylicke & reader of surgerie lecture in London, 1349, a 20, 30, &c. his faithfull and freendlie epitaph vpon doctor Caldwell deceased, 1370, a 20
Forswearing. ¶ See Periurie.
Fortescue, and the reason of the name, 749, b 30
Fortresse. ¶ See Castell.
Fortune. ¶ See Walden.
Fouks de Brent a man of great stomach and rashnesse, 202, a 10. An enimie to rest and quietnesse, 206, a 40. His fowle end. 206, b 40, ¶ See Erle.
Founteine flowing with blod, 23, b 20
Fowles tame leaue houses, and waxing wild get them to the woods, 14, a 60, b 10. Wild forbidden to be taken, 173, a 10
Fouquier Rafe a valiant man, assistant to prince Henries rebellions, 886, b 60. Taken by sir Francis surnamed the Arragonois, 628, b 60
Fox, his practise to deliuer certeine christians from the Turks, 1310, b 20
Foxleie slept more than fourteene daies & as many nights: note, 972, b 20
Fraie at Oxford betwixt legat Othos men and the scholers, 222, a 20. Betwixt the English archers and the Henuiers, 347, a 20. In saint Dunstans church in the east, 562, a 20. Neere Clerkenwell where the maior of London, &c. was resisted, 641, b 10. In Fleetstreet betweene the streetdwellers and gentlemen of courts, 646, b 60: note. Betweene Spaniards and Englishmen about whores, 1126 b 60. On Clift heath two miles from Excester, 644, a 30. In London against the maior, 636, a 20. Great by night in Fleetstreet, 623, a 30. Whereby insued murther and execution: note, 954, a 20, &c: Betweene the Almans of king Henrie the eights camp and the Englishmen, 821, a 60. Betweene the Englishmen and the townsmen of Sancta Maria, 813, b 60. Betweene the Englih and townesmen of Calis vpon a small occasion, 810, a 10. Betweene goldsmiths & tailors of London, 274, a 50. Betwixt the monks & citizens of Norwich, 275, b 60. Betwixt the Welsh and English, 307, a 60
France interdicted by the popes legat, 160, a 60. A diuision in it selfe by ciuill warres, 1195, a 20. The troubles thereof touch most the K. of England, 1195, b 30. Disquieted with two factions, 537, a 50, 60, b 10, &c: Inuaded by duke William, and what waste he made there by fire, &c: 14, b 30. The yoke of the English armie throughout it, 426, a 60. Their whole puissance vanquished by the English archers, 373, a 60: note and read the order and proceeding of that battell two pages before. The frontiers thereof full of men of warre, 357, b 50. And how king Edward the third tooke vpon him the name of king thereof, 356, b 30. And by what right he claimed it, 40, &c: 357, a 10, 20, &c: And great preparation made in England for wars against it, 547, a 60. Ciuill discord amongest the nobles thereof, 557, a 60. The oth of the three estates, 578, a 30. Henrie the fift taketh vpon him to be regent there, 578, a 50. And what townes and castelles king Henrie the fift got. ¶ See the historie of king Henrie the fift, 563, 564, 565. All lost there through ciuill discord at home 636, b 30, &c: 60. The English lose all there, 629, b 30. The duchie of Britaine incorporated vnto it, 769, b 10. The constable thereof a deepe dissembler, 695, a 50. His offer to king Edward the fourth, 698 a 40. All aliant in whose time, 748, b 60, 749, a 10. It is concluded in parlement that king Henrie the eight should personallie inuade it, 815, b 50. An armie leuied to inuade it, three battels appointed with their seuerall lieutenants, 963 b 30, 40, &c: Afflicted by the Englishmen and their aids, 879, a 10, &c: It is agreed among the lords of England to annoie and infest it, 1061, b 30
Francis knight slaine in Deuonshire rebellion, 1024, a 20, 60
Francis de Valois, &c. ¶ See Duke of Bianson.
Fratricide, 1270, a 10. ¶ See Murther.
Frederike abbat of saint Albons a rich & a puissant prelat: note, 9, b 60, 10, a 10
Frederike the emperor aided to king Henrie the third, 219, a 60. ¶ See pope Alexander.
Freendship, 395, and 394. ¶ See Peace. Interteined by affinitie, 586, a 40. Feigned of duke William of Aquitane, 67 b 20. Found in a forren countrie, 6, a 30. Betweene the erle of Cornwall and the erle of Penbroke, 209, a 60. Sold for gifts and bribes: note, 361 b 50
Freemen of London, 120, a 20
Free schole at Wuluerhampton 796, a 10. ¶ See Schole.
French king maketh warre against the duke of Normandie, 58, b 60. Open warres proclaimed against him by Q. Marie, 1133, b 10, 20, &c: His son trauelleth in vaine to take Boner, 193, a 30. Sendeth to the pope, commeth vnto Calis, taketh the sea, landeth in Kent, the lords do him homage, 191, b 10, &c: Goeth to visit Calis, 1141, b 20. His sonne maintaineth his pretended title to the crowne of England, 191, a 50. Alleadgeth that king John is not lawfull king of England, 191 a 20. His sonne came to fight with king John, 183, a 60. Returneth into France, 179, b 40. Burneth his ships, 180 a 20. Inuadeth Flanders, 179, a 10. Displeased for the reconciliation of king John with the pope, he meaneth to proceed in his iourneie against England, 178, b 50, 60. Prepareth to inuade England, 176, b 20. Winneth diuerse things from the king of England, 169, b 40. Will not accord to peace with king John 166, b 30, 40. Inuadeth Normandie, 160, a 10. Demands in a treatie of peace, 160, b 20 Maketh warre against king John, 164, a 60. Inuadeth Normandie, 166, b 10. Winneth towns from king John, 167, b 10. Almost drowned being pursued by king Richard the first, 153, b 10. Pursued by king Richard the first in danger of drowning, 148, a 40 Raiseth his siege from Vernuell, 144, b 20. Inuadeth Normandie, 141, b 30. His and earle Johns offers to haue king Richard the first kept still in prison, 141, a 20. His euill dealing and promise breaking with king Richard the first, 133, b 60. Entereth Eureux, 151, b 60. Confesseth earle John to vsurpe against his brother king Richard the first, 137, b 50. Setteth from Messina towards the holie land, 127, a 40. Maketh an ouerture for peace, he leaueth his siege, 93, b 50. Soweth sedition betweene Henrie the father and Henrie the sonne, 84, a 30. Commeth a madding to pilt Beckets tome, 103, a 60. Entereth the towne of Mauns and maketh spoile, 114, a 20. Hideth his head at the arriuall of Henrie the second, 112, b 30, 40. His subiects arrested in Normandie, 110, b 20. Troubled with a frenzie, 519, a 50, 60. Picketh a quarrell against England, 551, a 30. Inuested with the order of the garter, 1382, a 10. Francis the great his court a vniuersitie: note, 1343, a 60 b 10. Deceaseth, an obiequie for him in Paules, 1259, b 50. Commeth to the camp before Newhauen, 1205, a 60. Deceaseth, an obiequie kept for him, the cheese mongers, 1185 a 40, 50. Procureth a peace betweene duke Robert and William Rufus, 19, a 30. His policie against the English, 426, b 50. For monie raiseth his siege, and forbeareth to aid duke Robert, 19, a 20. Restoreth townes in Gascoigne to king Edward for feare, 311, b 20. With an huge armie driueth the English out of Flanders, 444, a 60. The order of seruice at his table, 487, a 20, 30. Giueth his daughter to king Richard in marriage, 487, a 10. His priuie practises disclosed by the popes nuntio, 475, a 10. Two of his ships taken with a great prise in them, 453, b 40. Aideth the Scots against the English, 447, a 20. Inuadeth Flanders, 393, a 50. His vniust dealing, he renounceth what he had said, 292, a 40. Sendeth out a fleet against England, 295, a 50. Deceaseth, 427, a 10. ¶ See Normandie, & Philip. Arbitrateth a matter betwixt Henrie the third and his nobles, and giueth sentence against the barons, 265, b 60. Requested by the pope to make warre against England, refuseth so to do, 238, a 20. His brother named Charles made earle of Poictiers, 238, a 50. Inuadeth the earle of Marches lands, 229, b 30. To whom the earle of Britaine submitteth himselfe, 219, a 20. His carriages distressed by the earls of Britaine & Chester, 214, a 40 Deceaseth, 205, a 60. His sonnes armie discomfited, and his gentlemen taken prisoners, 200, a 60. Answer to Henrie the third, requiring restitution of his right, 203, b 10. Assembleth an armie, commeth to Calis, his lords request to Edward the third, he returneth into Bone, 377, a 40, 60, b 30, 60. Licenced to depart, goeth ouer to Calis, 394, b 10 His oth of peace, hostages deliuered for him, prisoner in England foure yeares, 395, a 10. Prisoner, & comforted by the prince, whom he thanketh for his bountie, he is brought ouer into England, 390, a 30, b 20, 60. He is sorowfull, he is remoued to Windsore, 391, a 10, 40. Remoued from the castell of Hertford to Somerton, his allowance, 392, a 60. His ransome, 394, a 60. Followeth the prince of Wales, 387, b 40. His presumptuous demands, 388, b 10. Commeth to giue the duke of Lancaster battell, 386, b 60. Taken prisoner, 389, b 40. Departeth out of the field by constraint: note, 372, b 40. His great armie, and the seruice done by them, 360, a 10. Prepareth a great naule against Flanders, 358, a 40. Not of sound memorie, 557, b 10. Consulteth how to deale with the Englishmen, sendeth defiance to Henrie the fift, the number of his armie, 552, a 40, &c. Deceaseth, 584, a 60. Turneth the ciuill dissention of England to his aduantage: note, 636, a 30, &c. Practiseth with a witch, 602, a 20. Armed, fled in the night, 602, a 60. Deceaseth, 795, b 40, 50. Described both for person and qualitie, 775, b 40. Dissimulation, a motion for a treatie of peace with the English, 774, b 40, 60. Request for aid against the duke of Britaine, 768, a 20. Feedeth Edward the fourth with faire words and promises, 704, b 30. Large offers to Edward the fourth, 704, a 20. Buieth peace with tribute of Edward the fourth: note, 700, b 10. Nothing precise in outward shewes of honor, 695, b 20. His speech to the English herald that gaue him defiance, 694, b 60, 695, a 10, &c. Dissimulation vpon purpose and ill meaning, 698, a 10. Promiseth the erle of Richmond assistance to recouer the crowne, 748, b 50, 60. His beneuolence vnto the earle of Rich-

Richmond,745,a40. Francis the firſt comes to the crowne, his praiſeworthie properties, 836, a60. His royall ornaments at an interuiew, the deſcription of his perſon, his rich araie at a iuſts,858, a50, 60,b50. His and his partners attire at a chalenge,859, a60. His furniture and deuiſe vpon his ornaments, 860,a40. Afflicted with foren power on all ſides,965,a30, &c. An emmie to all chriſtian princes, his power againſt king Henrie the eight and the emperor, he retireth backe with his armie,960. His children deliuered when the ranſome of their father was paid,914, a20, 40. His ſitting in his royalties with his great eſtates about him,&c: with an oration made to the aſſemblie, 904,a30,40, &c: b40. His oration before an honorable aſſemblie at Paris wholie concerning the emperor, and ſauoring of malcontentment, 902,b60. A writing from him directed to the emperor,903,b 20. Receiueth the order of the garter, 898,b20. With the viceroie imbarked,not a little glad of his libertie, not verie haſtie to ratifie the accord, complaineth of the emperor to the popes ambaſſadors,896 a30,50,b10,30,50. His roialtie reſtreined,889,a20. The manner of his deliuerie out of priſon,990,a10. Taken priſoner,whie he deſired to fight in plaine field, the manner how he was vanquiſhed and taken, 884,a40, 60,b30,50. Led priſoner to the rocke of Palqueton, his letter to his mother the regent of France, 885, a50, b30. Marrieth the emperor Charles his ſiſter, 889,b40. Led priſoner into Spaine, extremelie ſicke in the caſtell of Madrill, 887, a50,b60. In durance,is viſited by the emperor,his ſiſter the ladie Alanſon treateth for him, he is carefull ouer the crowne of France, a treatie touching his deliuerie, 888,a 20, 50, 60, b20. He and king Henrie the eight at variance: note, 872,a60,b10, &c. Attacheth the Engliſhmens goods in Burdeaux,872,b40. He & the Spaniſh begin to aſpire to the empire, in hope to be emperor as well as the Spaniſh, builded his hope vpon the humors of the princes of Germanie, reſteth vpon the fauour of the pope,851,a40, b 10,&c: His coiefh and light behauiour abrode: note,850,a 10, &c: Deceaſeth, the variablenelle of his fortune,835, b 60,838, a10. Procureth the pope to be a meane to Henrie the eight for peace, 831, b50. Hath his hands full of trouble 812,b40. Writeth to cardinall Wolſelie, 848, a20. Prepareth an armie in aid of the Scots, 993, a60, b10, &c: Purpoſeth to ſurpriſe Gernſeie and Jerſeie, but is repelled, aſhamed that anie report ſhould paſſe of his euill ſucceſſe, perſeuereth in his former martiall action,1055,b 30, 50, 60. The cauſes that made him to breake vp his campe, b30. Proceedeth againſt prince Edward in iudgement of appeale, 402,a 20. Sent to defie the king of England,the countie of Ponthieu taken by him, 402, b 10. Prepareth a nauie, 403, b 20. Deceaſeth, 396, a 60

Frenchmen fall to ſpoiling and riſling of Calis,1136,a10, &c: Neiled with the loſſe of ſaint Quintines, they take Newnam bridge, and Rie banke, diſappoint the Engliſhmens deuiſe, they demand a parlee, 1135, a10, 50, b10, 30,60. Shew themſelues in their kinds, 192, b30. In king Johns time ouerrun, take, ſpoile,and ſubdue diuers places of England, 192, 193. Sent ouer to aid the rebellious barons, 190, b10. Vncommanded of the king, aſſait Rouen,93,a60. They & Normans fight, 60, b50. Do much hurt in wales, burne townes, are ſlaine, returne home, 531,a30,&c: Their demand of the Ile of wight,524 b40. Inuade the Ile of wight,524,a60. Demand a dower for queene Iſabell,519 a60. Their practiſes to make the Engliſh reuolt from their owne king,517,b60. Breake the law of armes, 1204, b50. Spoile diuers Engliſh ſhips 1195,a60. Gather cockles to their loſſe and vndoing,1192, a20,50. Their policie in womens apparell: note, 1188, b 40,50. Repelled by the Engliſh,1188,a50,numbers ſlaine 60. Driuen into Leith, b10. Win a trench, 50. Repelled & ſome ſlaine, 60. A trench wonne from them, 1190, b10. Repelled by the Engliſh, 50, Sent into Scotland to aid the queene Dowager, 1186,b 40. Ships taken by the Engliſhmen, 445,a10. Burne the towne of Rie, 417, b50. Spoile the Ile of wight, burne Portſmouth, Dartmouth,and Plimmouth, 417, b60. Their gallies chaſed from the Engliſh coſtes and vanquiſhed,427,a20. They & Spaniards burne and deſtroie diuerſe townes on the Engliſh coſtes: note, 427, a 40,50,&c: Vittell the Engliſh for feare: note, 426, b20. Spoile and burne diuerſe townes in the weſt countrie, 425,b40. Their admeral perſuadeth the Scots to fight with the Engliſh, 447,b 20. Subtiltie, 480, b20. Fleet ſetting forward towards England is driuen backe by contrarie winds, 454, a10. Purpoſe an inuaſion of England with their ſhips, 451,a 20. Foure hundred ſlaine beſides diuerſe taken,304,b 50. Their bloudie victorie, 294,b 10, Slaine handſomelie by the Engliſh,295, a60. Rob Douer,chaſed to their ſhips, diſcomfited and ſlaine, 295,b 10,&c. Forced to retire by the Engliſh,296,a 60. Die thorow peſtilence & other waies, 230,a60. Their ſpite toward the Engliſh, 241, b60. Taken at aduantage, 207, b10. Put to flight at Lincolne, 200,a60. Their ſouldiors in a poore eſtate,199,b40. Their pride procureth them hatred, 198,a10. Fleet aſſailed and vanquiſhed, 201, a50, 60. Meant not to fight with the Engliſh,408,b 30. Proſperous ſucceſſe in Poictou, 407 b30. Withdraw themſelues into their fortreſſes and chiefe townes,405,a60. Take the king of Nauarre, 398, a 40. And Engliſh ſkirmiſh, the French flie, & ſubmit themſelues, 387, a60, b10, 30. Diſtreſſed, the ordering of their battell, 388, a10, 40. Seeke to ſaue themſelues by flight,389,b30. Forſake their hoſtles and fight on foot, 379, a50,60. Slaine the daie after the battell,373, a30. Diſcomfited and ſlaine, 369,a60. Slaine in great numbers, 372,b50. Loſe the paſſage ouer the water of Some, diſorder amongeſt them, 371, a 20,b50. Diſtreſſed and diſcomfited,368,b40. Their armie diſcomfited by a few Engliſh, 364, a50. Set vpon the Flemings in ſkirmiſh, 359,b30. Inuade the coſtes of England, 355,a50. Diſcomfited, 554, b10, 10. Incountred by the earle of Huntington, 558, b 50,&c. Repelled,996,a10. Harts diſcouraged with the loſſe of Rone, 568, b 60. Their voluntarie ſubiection, they yeeld diuerſe caſtels and townes, 561, a 30. Received a great ouerthrow by ſea by the duke of Bedford, their nauie vanquiſhed,557,a40. Rob Henrie the ſikts campe, 554, b 50. The order of their armie,553, a10. Six to one of the Engliſh, a30. Take occaſion to inuade the Engliſh, 645, b 20, Sowne wearie of the French gouernement, 639, b 20. Diſcomfited, ſlie: note, 619 a20. Ouerthrowne, ſlaine, taken priſoners and ſlaine, 608, a60. Breake the peace, and take the town of S. Valeran, 608,a10. Faith and honeſtie, not to be truſted: note, 607, a 60. Recouered in Henrie the ſixts time all that they loſt in Henrie the fifts daies: note the courſe of the ſtories and compare them together, 601, Commit a foule murther by negligence of the watch at Montargis,597,b60. When inuincible, 769, a 60. Their loue,699,b 60. Ouerthrowne to their greefe and ſhame, 822, a 20. Land in Suſſex,in the Ile of Wight, diſtreſſed, the number of their nauie, 969, a 10,40,60. And Engliſh haue manie ſkirmiſhes, 972, 973. Dogged nature for a matter of nothing, 894;b20. In London all arreſted & put to their fines,873, a 20. Failing in force make ſupplie by policie,880,a60. Scoured of the Engliſh, and foiled of the Welſh,874,b20. Inſolent ſaucineſſe againſt the Engliſh, 840,a40. Their diueliſh nature,a50. Foiled at iuſts of their challenge and proclaiming: note,833,834,a10,&c. Nauie diſcomfited by the Engliſh,fleth,815,b20 Armie approching againſt the power of Henrie the eight, they get the great gun called the red gun by Kwith hardineſſe of the maiſter capteine, 818,a50,b40. Gallies ſand in Suſſex and burne certeine cotages,817,a 20. Crueltie reported by their owne writers,1056,a60. Aſſaile Bullogneberg,the number of pikes and bils broken vpon them, repelled,fifteene wagons laden with their carcaſes,997, a60,b 10, 40, 50. They & the Scots do reſolue to beſiege Hadington, 993, a 60,b10. Remoue their campe, 994, b 50. Diſlodged frō before Hadington, incamped at Muſkelburgh, chaſed, durſt not come forth of their campe, 995,a 10,b10. Of name taken priſoners,1150,b 50. Their deſperat aduenture and baſtardlineſſe, 1139,a 20, b10. ¶ See Bullen, Engliſhmen, and Normans.

French gentlemen weare armour vnder their garments, 1350,a50. Taken priſoners and ſlaine, a 60

Frier Forreſt ſeditious,his execution,945, a 20,&c. One of Ireland that accuſed the duke of Lancaſter of treaſon, tormented and cruellie put to death,445,b40,60, 446,a 10.

Patchull. ¶ See Patchull.

Patrike. ¶ See Patrike: note. Randoll committed to the Towre,he is ſlaine by the perſon of the Towre,568,b20

Friers beggers, an order for them,521,a 40. Greie about London change their habits, 789,b 40. Minors when they began and increaſed, 170, b 60. Obſeruants impugne cardinall Wolſeis authoritie, 884,a10. Preachers inhabit Dunſtable, 261,b10

Friers ſubborned to treat a peace betwixt Henrie the third and his lords,268,a50. Executed for treaſon, 220,a 15, &c.

Frieries ſuppreſſed, 938, a 10, 946,a30. ¶ See Abbeis and Religious houſes.

Frith martyr burned, 937, b 60

Frobiſhers firſt voiage for the diſcouerie of Cataia, 1262, a 40. A rumor that he was caſt awaie,50. His ſecōd voiage to Cataia,1270,a40. His third voiage to Cataia, 1271, a 60

Froſt extreame,58,a 60. Bitter and nipping,881,a 10. Great and long: note, 612, a 60. Of continuance, 11, b 50. Hindering huſbandrie: note, 396,b 60,168,b30. After a foule cloud,20,b 50. With ſnow on S. Marks daie, noiſome to trees and plants, 238, b 60. With a ſharpe winter, 1257, b30

Froſt, called the great froſt, 1208,a 60

Fuage. ¶ See Subſidie.

Fugitiues practiſes to execute pope Pius his bulls, ſeditions and nouriſhed in ſeminaries beyond ſeas,1359,b10 20,30,&c. ¶ See Practiſes ſeminarie. Seditious labour to bring the reame into a war externall and domeſticall, 1360,a 60. Furtherers of treaſons,1382,b20. ¶ See Barrie and Treaſon.

Fulco a French prieſt his admonition to Richard the firſt: note, 156,b10.

G.

Gaine. ¶ See Gift.

Game. ¶ See wreſtling.

Games prohibited as vnlawfull, 111,b40
Ganteners and king Edward the firſts men at debate,306,a 50. Mainteine warre againſt the erle of Flanders,448,b30
Gard of the prince. ¶ See yeomen.
Gardens. ¶ See Mozefield.
Gardiner biſhop of Winchester made lord chancellor, 1089,a 10. An enimie to the ladie Eliſabeth,examined of him,1154 a30,40. Derided: note, dog in a rochet,1143, a20. The talke betweene the ladie Eliſabeth and him,1158,b 20,40. Crowneth queene Marie, 1091,b30. His tale in the ſtar chamber againſt the ladie Eliſabeth,1102,a 20,&c: Preacheth at Paules croſſe: note, 1126, a 60. His practiſe againſt ladie Eliſabeth,1101,b 40. His old hatred againſt the dutcheſſe of Suffolke: note 1142,a 60,b 10,&c: 1143,a 10, &c: His death,viſited with the ſudden ſtroke of God, a hunter for the life of ladie Eliſabeth, 1130,a 40,60,b 20: note,
Garriſons placed in wales by king Henrie the firſt, 38,a 10
Gaſcoigns refuſe to receiue the king of England for their ſouereigne 481,b 10. Send to Richard the firſt, ſignifieng to him that they ought not to be diuided from the crowne, 485, a60. Begin to humble themſelues, 249,a 10. Complaine of their ſtreict handling,247,b 60. Make warre againſt the Engliſh ſubiects, they are banted,245,a 60,b 10 they meane to complaine of the earle of Leiceſter,their allegations diſproued,246,a 20 40. Ceaſe not to make warre againſt the earle of Leiceſter, 246,b 60. Rebell, and white, 248,a 30. Purſue the Welſhmen,282, a 20. They and other nations how they take the death of Richard the ſecond, 517,b all Gaſton de Wierne noted for vnthankfulneſſe,240, a30. Attempteth to take the citie of Baion,250, a30. Submitteth himſelfe vnto king Henrie the third, 242,a 60
Gauaro and others executed for murther, his deſperat end, 1061,a 50,60
Gaunt beſieged by the French king, 179,a 10
Geffreie ſonne to king Henrie the ſecond, 7,b 30
Geffreie king Henrie the ſeconds fourth ſonne borne, 67, b10. Marrieth the ducheſſe of Britaine, 75,a 20
Geffreie biſhop of Conſtance in armes againſt the earle of Camber, 11,a 50
Geffreie biſhop. ¶ See Biſhop.
Geffreie a kings brother rebelleth, 66,a30
Gelderland ¶ See Duke.
Geloufie and crueltie: note,115, b40
Genowais ſtratagems to abaſh the Engliſh: note, 372,a30, 40. Reteined in the French kings wages, they meet the Engliſh on the ſeas & fight, 362,b 10,20
Gentlemen more truſtie than the commons, more worthie than yeomen. 1052,b 10,60
Gerald. ¶ See Erle Gerald.
Gerard de Cambill charged with felonie and treſon. 143,a 10
Gernſeie. ¶ See Jerſeie.
Gilford William biſhop of winchester commended, 28,b 20
Gilford doctor of phyſicke preſident of the college of phyſicians, 1349,b40
Gift of king Henrie teight vnto the citie of London, 976,b40, 50. Of king Henrie the ſecond to Hugh Lacie, 82,b20. Large and bountifull refuſed, 255, b30. Of the new peare,249,a50. Of erle Edwins lands to earle Alane: note the ſame, 7,b 10. ¶ See Croſbie. Large refuſed being an vngodlie gaine, 147,b 20.
Gifts great giuen for the fauor of Edward the fourths councellors and lords: note, 700,b 20. They pacifie anger,procure fauor, 478, b 50, 60. And obteine loſt liberties: note, 479,a 10. Of roiall magnificence beſtowed by the French,1382, a20. Meane bled to win the fauour of the nobilitie,16,a 10. Not reſpected, but the mind of the giuer: note, 1179,b 20, 30. Giuen king Henrie the eight in his progreſſe into Yorkſhire, 954, b10, 20. ¶ See Bribes, Preſents, and Rewards.
Gilbert de Gaunt taken priſoner and put to his ranſome,7, a20
Gilbert murthered by Liulfus, 12,b30
Gilbert capteine of Tunbridge caſtell, 17,b40
Gilbert knight his votage to Mozimbega, it hath not wiſhed ſucceſſe, he is ſeuered from his companie, dead, and neuer heard of, 1369,a 50,60,b10
Gilford knight, his meſſage of thanks from king Henrie the ſeuenth to the Kentiſhmen, 780, a10. Maiſter of the horſe vnto king Henrie the eight, 822,b60
Gilford lord Dudleie executed on the Tower hill, 1099,b30 ¶ See Sands.
Gilors beſeged by king Richard the firſt,151,b 60. Beſieged by the Engliſhmen, 570,b50
Gita the ſiſter of Sweine king of Denmarke eſcapeth into Flanders, 6,b20
Glaſſe houſe burned, 1261,b50
Glendowers rebellion in wales, what he was,518,b60. The occaſion that moued him to rebell,ouerthrowne, 519,a 19 Reputed a conturor: note,520 b20. Conſpireth with the Perſis,521,b 50. His daughter married vnto the earle of March, 521, a20. He with his welſhmen full of miſchef 519,b20. He and his Welſh in armes againſt the lord Grete of Ruthen, preuaileth, 519,b 60. Taketh the erle of March priſoner, 520, a60. Waſted the Engliſh marches 525,a40. Aided by the marſhall Montmerancie, 531, a 10. His craftie entring the caſtell Abrutſcwith,533 , b40. He & fifteene hundred Welſhmen taken and ſlaine, 528,a 10. Endeth his life in great miſerie, 536,a10
Glocester recouered & put to fine 266,b 10. Why it was not aſſaulted by quéene Margaret & hir power,686,a 40. ¶ See Duke.
Goche his valiant ſeruice, 587, b50, 60. Taken priſoner by the foundering of his horſſe, 611, b30. A Welſhman, his eſcape, 630,a 40. Slaine vpon London bridge, 635,a30
Godwine. ¶ See Edmund.
Gozing George. ¶ See Iuſts triumphant.
Goſpatrike earle of Northumberland is ſent againſt king Malcolme of Scotland: note, 10,a 60, From whome duke William taketh the erle dome of Northumberland, & white, 10,b 50. How he came to be earle of Northumberland,13, a30. ¶ See Malcolme.
Goſpell, the ſhamefull end of a contemner thereof: note.935,a 60
Grace of God, words miſconſtrued by the Scots : note, 423,a 20,&c.
Graſton Richard ſlandered by a Scot and defended, 112,a 30. Defended againſt Buchanans ſlander,298,b 10,&c.
Granado is wone from the Turks or Saracens, 772,b 30, The ſtate and pompe of the ſame, b60
Grandmeſnill Hugh ſet all vpon the ſpoile, 17,a50
Grant of king Henrie the third to his brother,209,b 20. ¶ See Patents.
Grantham church in Lincolneſhire out of which the people were frighted, 264,b20
Grafing inconuenient vnto the commonwealth : note, 862,a 60,b10
Graſſe. ¶ See Mice.1315,a60
Granelin fortified by French for a countergarriſon to Calis, 444,b10
Graueſend burned by the French and Spaniſh, 427,a 60
Greeke killeth an archbiſhop,6,b 60. Of king John turned into rage, 183, b 10. Cauſe of a ſore and dangerous ſickneſſe in king John,194,a60, Of mind doubled the cauſe of king Johns death, 194,b 50. Killed Dauid the prince of Wales,238,a 60. Killed king Henrie the ſeconds heart, 114,b50. For loſſe of boties, 194,a60. For an ouerthrow the death of a king, 958,b 40. The cauſe of death, 18,a 30, 44,b60,50, b 30,728,a30,40: note, 1151, b10.20,797,a 10. For vnkindneſſe, 88,b 50
Greie lord committed vnto the Tower,952, b 10. Indicted and beheaded, 953, b 60
Greie lord of Wilton deputie of Bullen, the letter of king Henrie the eight vnto him, 875,b 40,50,60. His ſeruice here honorable accepted of the king,976, a 40. His requeſt vnto the duke of Sommerſet, 985,a 20. Recetueth poſſeſſion of Hume caſtell,990 b60
Greie lord John duke of Sukfolkes brother arreigned, condemned, pardoned, releaſed, beheaded, 1117,b 60
Greie lord capteine of Guiſnes, taketh the French at a ſlepie aduantage, commendeth his ſoldiors, 1137, a50,60,b50 The danger that he eſcaped ſitting vpon a fome with two gentlemen, hurt by miſchance, he conſulteth with the Engliſhmen, 1138, a30, b40,50,60. His words to his ſoldiors, being aſhamed of their timorouſnes, agreeth with the enimie vpon articles, 1140,a20,40
Greie lord generall of the quéenes armie in Scotland, 1187,a30. His meſſage to the Frenchmen. 1188
Greie Arthur hurt in the ſhoulder by ſhot, 1189,a10
Greie lord of Wilton deceaſeth, 1198,a50
Greie Henrie. ¶ See Iuſts triumphant.
Greies familie aduanced, 668, a30,40
Greene, one of Richard the thirds merciles inſtruments to murther two innocent princes, 734,b50
Greenfield knight, ſir Walter Raleighs lieutenant for the voiage to Virginia, 1401,b 50. Singled from his companie, arriueth in Hiſpaniola, 60. His valiantneſſe againſt the Spaniards, 1402, a 10. In danger of ſhipwracke,20. Chaſeth and ſurpriſeth a Spaniſh ſhip, 50
Greenwich repared, 788,a10
Gresham knight ſuddenlie deceaſeth: note, 1310,b50
Gret Harrie. ¶ See ſhip.
Gret Oncale. ¶ See Oncale.
Grenill Fulke. ¶ See Iuſts triumphant.
Griffin ap Res doth much hurt on the marches, 38,a 60
Griffin king of Wales departeth this life, 152,a 60
Griffin of Wales breaketh his necke, 228,b20
Griffin beheaded at Towre hill, 928,a10
Grotes and halfe grotes. ¶ See Coines.
Ground. ¶ See Earth.
Guido earle of Britaine his father and his three ſonnes erle of Britaine, 7,b20
Guenhera and the nobles of wales make a league with Henrie the third, 226,b50
Guie of warwike deceaſeth, 323,a10
Guildhall inlarged, the chappell, 540,b10
Guines. ¶ See Guiſnes.
Guiſnes, Henrie the eights palace roiall there deſcribed: note,856,b40,b50,&c,857,all. ¶ See Greie lord capteine of Guiſnes.
Guiſe. ¶ See Duke.
Gun called Higeon, 614, b 50, Called the red gun ouerthrowne, & recouered of the French, 818,b30,40
Gun ſhot into the court at Greenwich, 1132, b 50. By caſualtie diſcharged at the queenes paſſing barge, ſhe being therein, and ſome hurt done: note, 1310,b 10,&c.
Guns of how ancient an inuention,453,b50. Of iron when firſt made, 960,a 20. Gained from the French, 968, a 10. Called handguns and bearing of weapons forbidden by proclamation, 1117, b 60. ¶ See Culuerings.
Gunpowder blowes vp a houſe and killeth fifteene perſons, 1081,a 60. Shaketh houſes in Buckinghamſhire, 1208,a 50. Strangelie ſet on fier both much hurt, 1348,b 10
Gurguint builder of Norwich caſtell, 1288,a 10. His ſpech, touch-touching antiquitie, 1289, a 40, &c.

H.

Hale at a double price, 785, a 30
Hailstones which made men amazed, 39, b 10. Of the bignesse of hens egs, 166, a 60. Of sundrie strange shapes, 1313, b 60. Great, the like not seene, 284, b 20. A mightie storme that did much hurt, 250, a 50. That slue both men and hotses: note, 393, b 60, 394, a 10. Square and of sixteene inches about, 1258, b 50. Fashioned like mens heads, 968, b 50
Hales blood and who brought it into England, 275, b 10. Shewed at Paules crosse, 946, a 40
Hales knight will not assent to the new succession of the crowne, 1083, a 40, 50, 60. In trouble for religion, 1092, b 10. Grieuously tempted, drowneth himselfe, 1092, b 10, 30, 40
Hambleton castell lost, summoned, rendered vnto the French king, the number that came forth thereof, 1057, a 30, 50, b 10
Hambleton hew fortified by the Englishmen, 972, b 60
Hamont burned. ¶ See Heretike.
Hangman hanged, 945, b 40
Harding Stephan monke of Shirborne, 26, a 60
Hardlo sands, 967, b 60
Harflue besieged, 549, b 60. The people desire a parlee, yeelded and sacked, 550, a 30, b 10. Besieged by the French, & rescued by the English, 557, a 10, 60. Wonne by the English, 615, b 50. Besieged, 629, b 60. Yeelded to the French king, 630, a 10
Harleston knight his notable exploit: note, 422, a 20
Harlots cause manie murthers, 953, a 10. ¶ See Murther and Whore.
Harold king of Man knighted, 238, b 60. ¶ See Canutus.
Hatred of the English against the Normans, and contrariwise, 14, a 10. Borne to the Iewes, 121, b 50. Irreconciliable betweene the dukes of Summerset and Yorke: note, 630, b 20. Great betweene the duke of Buckingham and cardinall Wolsey, 855, b 20. Against Richard the third, 738, b 10, &c: 739, 740, 741. Of the earle of Gloucester against king Stephan, 48, b 50. ¶ See Enuie and Malice.
Haruest sore hindered by continuall raine, 210, b 50, 322, b 50. Wet and raine, 249, a 30, 397, b 50. Late, 348, b 30: note, 260, a 10
Haruie de Yuon his surrender to king Henrie the second, 75, b 60. ¶ See Bishop.
Hastings, the originall of the name, the manner of their armes, 467, b 60. Their grant for exchange of lands, the record by which they executed the office of panteler, 469, a 10, 60. The order and number of clothes laid at the kings table, and how the Hastings had them in fee, 469, a 20. Record wherbie the said office of panter is claimed, the petition for the second sword, which the earle of Arundell also claimed, the bill exhibited for the golden spurs, 471, a 10, b 10, 50
Hastings lord his counsell to all his acquaintance, 675, b 10. Chamberleine maligned of the king and queene, 713, a 30. Described, 723, b 60. His life and deeds laid open, 724, a 40, &c. Beheaded. 723, a 20
Hastings lord discharged out of the Towre, 1088, b 30
Hastings castell, 6, a 40
Hauke lord knight his praemise to kill himselfe, 677, a 10, &c.
Hed of wax wrought by necromancie speaketh, 484, b 20
Heding castell besieged by the Englishmen, 875, a 40
Hedgecote field, 672, b 30. ¶ See Battell.
Heitas the pretended earle of Mans his bold words to William Rufus, 23, b 60
Henrie the first when he began his reigne, 28, a 10. Glad to seeke the peoples fauour, and why, 28, b 10. Wone the fauour of the people from his brother Richard, 28, a 20. His wifes, concubine, and children, his vertues, & vices, 45, a 50. In danger of drowning, 44, b 10. His promises to purchase the peoples fauour, 28, b 40. Reconciled with his brethren Robert and William, 19, a 60. Besieged by his two brethren Robert and William, 19, a 40. His base sonne to whome married, 37, a 40. Passeth ouer into Normandie and taketh diuerse cities, 32, b 30. Perswaded to renounce his title to the inuestiture of prelats, 32, a 40. Consulteth with his nobles where to get him a wife, 28, b 30. Hurt in battell against the French king, his valiantnesse, 40, a 60. Against the consecration of archbishop Thurstane of Yorke, 40, a 50. He and pope Calixtus come to an interuiew at Gisors, 40, b 30. Passeth ouer into Normandie to aid and assist the earle of Champaigne against the French king, 39, b 40. Placeth garrisons in Wales, 38, a 10. He and pope Innocent meet at Chartres, 44, a 50. His sonnes and daughters drowned by shipwracke, 41, b 10, Without issue, he marrieth againe, 41, b 60. Goeth ouer into Normandie and createth his sonne William duke, 38, a 30. His passage into Normandie and neuer returneth aliue, 44, b 30. Departeth this life of a surfet, 45, a 10
Henrie the second crowned king, where and by whome, 65, a 10. Offended with the bishops, 70, a 30. Knighteth the king of Scots, 76, a 30. Inuadeth the earle of Aluergnes land, 75, a 40. Inuadeth Wales, 73, b 10. He and the French king haue an interuiew at Coicie, 69, a 40. His & Thomas Beckets first falling out, 68, a 20. He and the French king meet at Gisors, 95, a 50. He and his sonnes are accorded vpon conditions, 94, a 40. Returneth out of Normandie, 93, a 20. His offer to his sonnes, 89, b 10. Knoweth not whom he may trust, 86, b 50. Purgeth himselfe of Beckets death, 83, b 60. Seeketh to appease the quarell betwixt his sonnes, 106, a 60. Passeth into Normandie, he and his sonnes reconciled, 105, b 40. He and the French king come to an interuiew at Vadum S. Remigij, 104, b 50. Rideth all night to meet the French king at Douer, 103, a 60. He and the French king meet at Yurie, 101, b 40, 60. His sonnes wife is brought to bed of a sonne, 101, b 20. Against the Scots, 66, b 30. Goeth into the north, 66, a 20. Negligent in aiding the Christians against the Saracens, 116, a 10. Not so fauourable to the church as he might haue beene, 115, b 60. His vices, 115. b 20. His sonnes and daughters, his base sonnes, the constitution of his bodie, his stature, his qualities of mind and bodie, 115, a 20, &c. He and the French king at strife, they talke together, 107, b 20, 40. His words of displeasure to his sonne earle Richard, 114, a 40. He and the French king come to a treatie of peace, 113, a 20. Inuadeth France and maketh wast and spoile, 112, b 60. He and the French kings interuiew betwixt Trie and Gisors, 111, b 10. Passeth into Normandie to talke with French king, 110, b 40. His subiects arrested in France, 110, b 20. Nothing sorie for the death of Hugh Lacie, 110, a 30. He & the patriarch passe ouer into France, 109, a 50. Message to his sonne earle Richard, 109. His gift to Hugh Lacie, 82, b 20. Sorie for Thomas Beckets death, 80, a 30. Laieth his crowne on the altar, 67, a 40. Landeth in Ireland and what he doth there, 81, b 10. Becommeth seruitor to his sonne, 76, b 10. Made his last will, 77, a 10. His sonne crowned at seuenteene yeares old, 76, a 60. He and the French kings interuiew at Gisors, 74, a 60. Whie called Shortmantell, 115, a 10. Sickeneth and dieth, 114, b 50. His dead bodie late naked a long time, 114, b 60, 115, a 10. His epitaphs, 116, a 40
Henrie the third borne at Winchester, 171, b 60. The beginning of his reign, 197, a 10. His coronation and annointing, b 20. The presumptuous proceedings of the barons against him, 263, a 50. Asked counsell how to proceed in his warres against the French king, 232, b 20. Maketh hard shift for monie to hire soldiors to assist him, he remooueth towards Windsore, commeth to Stratford, 273 a 60, b 10. Laie at Cambridge, 273, a 50. He & the lord wardens of the cinque ports reconciled, 271, b 50. The barons that rose against him, their cheefe captens, 264, b 20. Aided by his two halfe brethren, he incampeth at Lewes, the barons send him letters, his answer, he defieth them, the battell betweene them, 267, b all. The scholers of Oxford fight against him, 267, a 10. His protestation against the articles at Oxford, 265, b 30. Licenced to passe ouer into France, 263, b 20. Hee falleth sicke of a feuer quertane, 263, b 20. In his time manie gouernours ouer the land pernicious to the commonwelth, 263, a 60, b 10. Asketh licence to passe ouer sea, 262, a 30. Saileth into France, compoundeth all differences with the French king, 262, a 40. Sore sicke and in despaire of life, 208, a 40. His charges and wastfull expenses, 255, b 60. Passeth himselfe into wales, 255, a 30. Lacketh monie, 254, b 40. Assaieth to get monie of the lords temporall, 246, b 60. Maketh great shift for monie to send vnto the pope, and sendeth the pope a warrant to take it by, 250, b 40. His charges to Gascoigne, 250, b 10. Demandeth a subsidie, 249, b 20. Offended with them that refused to helpe him with monie, b 40. His debts three hundred thousand marks, 252, a 20. Purposeth to go himselfe into Gascoigne, taketh the sea, ariueth at Burdeaux, 248, b 10, &c. Inuadeth Wales, buildeth a castell at Gannoke, 236, b 10. Returneth out of Wales, 237, b 40. Flat against the pope his demands and decrees, his proclamation inhibiting monis to be sent to the pope, 238, b 60. 239, a 10. His halfe brethren come to see him, 239, b 60. Being in solemne procession at Paules: note, 240, a 30. Disgraced by his nobles in a solemne parlement, 240, b 50. His eldest sonne created duke of Aquitaine, 246, b 10. Goeth into wales with an armie, 226, b 40. Rather hindered than helped by the countesse of Wierne, 230, a 40. Spareth to set himselfe out of debt, 242, b 10. Driuen to sell his state for lacke of monie, 241, a 20. Procureth an inhibition to the pope, 242, b 10. His mother departeth this life, 239, a 50. Taketh vpon him the crosse, 242, a 40. Highlie offended with the bishops, 246, b 60. Euill spoken of, 231, a 30. Passeth ouer into France against the French king, 229, b 20. His sundrie meanes of impositions to gather monie: note, 229, a 50. His halfe brethren depart the realme, 258, a 50, b 50. They are pursued, and send to the French king for safe conduct, 258, b 60. His seuere sentence against a bribetaking iustice, 243, b 50, &c, 244, a 10. Goeth with an armie towards Scotland, 233, b 40. He and the king of Scots made friends, b 60. Lieth in wait for mens goods, 253, a 10. Fauoureth not the citie of London, 274, b 20. ¶ See London. Put to night, 268, a 20. Returneth into England through France 250, a 60. Goeth ouer vnto the French king, 266, a 40. Like to haue beene destroied at Woodstocke in his bed: note, 223, a 40. Crowned the second time, and whie, 202, b 30. His marriage, 219, b 30. Entreth into Wales with an armie, hath but sorie successe, returneth, 217, a 60, b 10, 20. Goeth against the Welshmen but with ill successe, 214, a 10. Gathereth monie towards his iornie into France, 211, b 60. Saileth ouer into France, hee taketh diuerse townes and castels, getteth the victorie, returneth into Britaine, saileth home into England his owne realme, 211, b 60, 212, all. Prepareth to passe ouer into France, 211, a 60.

Is constreined to agree with the Welshmen, 210, b 30. In fauor with Normans & Britons, 210, a 50. His grant to his brother, 209, b 10. Glad to appoint a date of treatie for pacification betweene him & his nobles, 209, b 10. And while he would not admit Walter de Hamelsham archbishop of Canturburie, 210, a 10. Will in no wise bind & indanger his laie fee to the church of Rome, 208, b 20. Demandeth restitution of parcels of inheritance belonging to the crowne, 205, b 60. Purchaseth a bull of the pope for his sufficiencie to gouerne, 205, b 10. Deposeth all the magistrats of the citie of London, &c: 204, b 10. His summons to raise him an armie, the capteins of the same, 199, b 50, 60. He requireth restitution of his right of the French king, 203, b 10. But in full possession of the realme, 201, b 60. His practise to get monie, 241, b 20. Sickneth, 275, a 10. Extreame sicke, his death, burieall, issue, proportion of bodie, conditions good and bad, 276, a 40, &c.

Henrie the fourth duke of Lancaster, proclamed king, 507, b 30 Plantagenet his stile or title, the beginning of his reigne, 509 a 40. His coronation, 510, all. His title to the crowne, 511, a 10 Went to haue made a iournie against the infidels, he is vexed with sickenesse, 540, b 60. Of an apoplexie, his death, burieall, issue, nature, &c: 541, a 10, &c. His suspicious gelousie toward his son prince of Wales, 539, a 10. Taketh vpon him to defend the Orleanciall faction, 538, b 30. The faction of Orleance sue to him for aid, 537, b 60. Articles of couenants which they offered him, the conditions which they requested of him, 538, a 10, 60. A fauourer of the clergie, 536, a 50. In danger to be taken by the French pirats, 525, b 10. His comming to Berwike, he preuaileth against the Scots, he passeth into Wales, loseth his cariages, returneth, 530, b 50, 60 Wanteth monie & can get none of the lords, 527, b 60. Goeth to Yorke, 524, a 10. Charged with periurie, his answer to the messengers that brought the lords articles, he offereth pardon to his aduersaries, his manhod against them, 523. His answer to the Perlies libell, his spedie diligence against his enimies, he troubleth them with his sudden comming, 522, a 60, b 40. In armes against the Welshmen, he loseth his labour, 520, b 20, 30. His suspicion grounded vpon a guiltie conscience, his daughter maried into Germanie, 520, b 10 In danger to haue been destroied in his bed: note, 519, b 20. Inuadeth Scotland, making great waste, 518, b 20. Causeth Richard the second to be put to a violent death, 516, b 50. Commeth to the Towre of London, the lords make towards the citie against him, he goeth forth against them, 515, a 60, b 10, &c. A plot laid for his destruction, at a solemne iusts, 514, b 60. In his time inualeth the crowne, 514, a 10, 20. Suspected not to be well affected towards the church before his coming to the crowne, 511, b 50, 60. His funerals kept at Canturburie, 543, b 50

Henrie the fift, his title, the beginning of his reigne, his coronation done verie tempestuous, he altereth his life & maners, 543. His iustice in a progresse, 579, b 40. The king of Scots in his armie, 577, a 10. The duke of Bauier cometh to him with a number of horsemen, he and monsieur Baubalon fight hand to hand, 577, a 50, 60. The bishop of Winchester lendeth him 20000 pounds, 580, b 10. He saileth into France againe, the Scotish king seuereth him, he pursueth Dolphin, b 20, 30, 60. Returneth into England with his new wife, 578, b 50, 60. Received into Paris, 578, a 10. Taketh vpon him the office of regent of France, 578, a 50. He & the French king at peace, the articles of the same, 572, a 20, &c: 573, a 40, &c. The effects of his oration to the French king, 576 a 10. Condescendeth to a treatie of peace with the French king, 572, a 20. Commeth to Trois to the French king, affieth the French kings daughter, b 20, 30. Plaieth the porters part, 570, a 20. Accursed, his enimies deliuered into his hand, executed, his entrance into Rome, his behauior & others, a legue betweene him and the duke of Britaine, remaineth at Rome, sendeth his capteins abrode to subdue castels & townes, he remoueth to Vernon, 568, a 30, 40, 60. A rare & worthie example of equitie in him, 560, b 60. His iustice and charitie, 566, a 60, b 40. His wise answer to a presumptuous French orator, 567, a 60. Aided by the king of Portingale, 566, a 20. Towns in Normandie yeelded vnto him, 562, b 50. His exploits in France, his victories, & surrenders to him, 561, a 10, &c: 562, 563, 564, 565, 566, 567. Arriueth in Normandie, how he preuailed against his enimies, and taketh castels and townes, 559, a 10. His roiall modestie: note, 556, a 40. Wise and valiant chalenge, an example in him what is to be done after victorie, 555, a 10, 20. His valiantnesse in slaieng the duke of Alanson, 554, b 20. His campe robbed, b 50. His policie against the French horsemen, his oration to his men, his wilie & noble courage, 553, b 30, 40, 50. Passeth the riuer of Some with his host, the number of his armie, his iustice in warre, his answer to the French kings defiance, he riueth forth to take view of the French armie, 552, all. His standard recouered from the French, 551, b 10. Saileth ouer to France with his host, 549, b 20. His charitable proclamation, his besieging of Harflue, 30, 60. He taketh and fortifieth it, his mercifull dealing with the French prisoners, 550. all. His words to certeine traitors of the nobilitie, 548, b 30. Wise answer to the archbishop of Bigneslie, 547, b 60. His policie in the time of a commotion, 544, b 10. His roiall port, he falleth sicke. 582, b 30, 50. Is brought sicke to Bois de Vincennes, 583, a 10. His aduise vpon his death bed, his decease, his commendation in diuerse respects, 583, all. The maner of his burieall, 584, a 10, &c.

Henrie the first borne, 581, a 60, b 10. Crowned in Paris, 606, a 40. His coronation at Westminster, 662, b 60. The beginning of his reigne, 585, a 20. Goeth against Kentish rebels with a power, 634, a 50. The maner of his burieall, a description of his person, his canonization to be a saint laboured for, his qualities, 691, a 10, &c. Sheweth himselfe to the Londoners, he is deliuered vp to the hands of Edward the fourth his enimie, 683, a 30, b 10. Fetched out of the Towre and restored to his regiment, 677, b 50. His saieng concerning Henrie of Richmond, after king Henrie the seuenth, b 10. Commended by the earle of Warwike: note, 671, a 10. Assembleth an armie against Edward the fourth and his adherents, 664, a 20. His power exceeded king Edwards, b 30. His part discomfited, he withdraweth to Berwike, 665, a 10, 40. Maketh a solemne feast at the reconcilement of the nobles that were at strife: note: createth dukes and knights, 595, b 40, 50, In person goeth with an armie into France, 605, b 20. Returneth out of France into England, 607, b 40. His receiuing into Excester, the clergie there against him, 637, a 20, 90, &c. Practises to put him beside the crowne, letters interchangable betwixt him and the Burper, 637, a 60, b 10, &c. 638, 639. In armes against the duke of Yorke, his answer to the dukes letters, 642, a 60, b 10, 50. The armies ioine, the kings part vanquished, 643, all. Part discomfited, he is taken, 654, b 30, 40. Articles of peace and agreement betweene him & the duke of Yorke, 657, b 20, &c. Letters kept from him of purpose, 644, a 60. He to reigne in name, but not in rule, he to reuoke certeine grants agreed vpon: note, 644, b 20. His power discomfited, flie, 660, b 10. Raiseth an armie against the duke of Yorke, 649, b 50. Parlent in habit roiall at a solemne procession in Paules, 648, a 60. Flieth, 666, b 20. He is taken, and laid vp in hold, 667, a 30. His deposition described, 1234, b 40. Set vp against as king, 727, a 60. Sticke, 642, a 20. Murthered in the Towre, 690, b 60. And by whome, 712, b 20.

Henrie the seuenth, his birth, age, descent, bringing vp, and port that he bare, & king Henrie the first his saieng concerning him, 678, a 60, b 10. One of the bloud of Henrie the first, his life a greese to Edward the fourth, 701, b 10. He taketh sanctuarie, note, 70, b 10, &c. His wife the ladie Elisabeth when borne, 668, b 50. Crowned by the lord Stanlie in the field, 760, a 50, 60. Doth some honour to Richard the third after his death, in respect of his burieall, 761, a 20. Banisheth all Flemish ware out of his dominions, 778, a 20. He and Maximilian agree to plague the French men, 774, a 50. Desireth the king of Castile to haue Edmund earle of Suffolke deliuered into his hands, 793, a 30. His progresse into Lancashire, 779, Wanted policie, 790, a 20. His chapels at Westminster built, 790, b 30. His policie against sir Robert Clifford, 778, b 20. Weigh in a quandarie, 779, a 10. Purposeth warres against France, and openeth the iust cause in parlement, 771, b 50. Sendeth espials into Flanders for a subtill policie, 777, b 30. He & the queen dined at sir Geants feast kept at Elie house, 779, a 40. Requesteth a yeeld of six thousand marks, & goeth into the north, 764, a 30, 50. Maketh out a power against Perkin Warbecke 784, a 20. His gratious pardon to a great number of miserable rebels, 784, b 30. Couetous in his old age, 791, b 20. Saileth to Calis, he and the duke of Burgogne meet at saint Peters church without the towne, 788, a 10, 30. Is loth that the French king should marrie the duchesse of Britaine, 771, a 60. Sendeth the lord Daubnie and the lord Mozleie against the French, 770, b 10. Borroweth a great summe of monie of the chamber of London, 770, a 20. Sendeth forth his armie against the French king, 769, a 40. His returne out of the north countrie, his offer to make an attonement betwixt the French king and the duke of Britaine, his loue to queene Elisabeth, 768, a 10, 40, 60. Assembleth an armie, his power some increased, his encounter with the conspirators, he ouercommeth, 766, b 10, 20, 30, 60. All the capteines against him slaine, he giueth thanks to God after the victorie, 767, a 20, b 30. Commeth to London, he is crowned king, 762, a 30, b 10. He aduanceth his freends, redeemeth his hostages, performeth his promise touching the mariage of Edward the fourths daughter, 763, a 20, 60, b 30. His decease, what children he had, he is described, his qualities roiall, his sepulture, executors of his last will, 797, a 20, 30, &c. Roiallie buried, a description of the whole pompe: note, 800, a 30, &c.

Henrie the eight, duke of Yorke, and afterwards king, his birth, 775, b 60. Proclamed king, his councellors, and riches, 799 a 20, 30. His coronation with the pompe thereof, 801, a 30, 40, &c. God at tennis plaie, 809, a 10. He and the duke of Suffolke defendors at tilt against all commers, he receiueth a cap of maintenance from pope Julie, 836, a 60, b 10. A notable good horsseman, 837, a 20. He rideth westward in progresse, a 20. Sendeth for the queene of Scots & hir husband to his court, 838, a 40, &c. Buildeth a castell at Tornaie, 838, b 40. Sitteth in the starchamber in iudgement, 852, b 60. Intituled defendor of the faith, he writeth against Luther, at variance with the king of France, 872, a 30, 50, 60. His minions remoued out of the court, 852, b 10. Glad of the French kings deliuerie out of prison, 889, b 60. Procurer of his libertie, 890, a 60. Alledged by the French king as a president of humanitie in case of a captiuated king, 890, b 40. Borroweth 20000 pounds of the citie of London, 874, a 20. Receiueth

Receiueth a golden rose for a present from pope Clement, 883, a 60. What moued him gratiously to receiue the ladie regents ambassadors of France, 887. Passeth ouer to Calis, an interuiew betweene him & the French king, 928, b 40, 60. His base son made erle and duke in one date, 892, a 40 Sworne to performe the league concluded, 893, a 10. His articles for the reformyng of religion, 940, b 60. His supremasie confirmed, 938, a 10. Proclamed K. of Ireland, 955, a 60. Taketh a lone of monie, 957, a 10. His munificence to the earle of Angus, archbishop of S. Andrews his debtie to, 959, b 10. Sent a power ouer against French king, 960, a 60, b 10. His message to the lord Grete by sir Thomas Palmer: note, 975, b 50. Passeth the seas to Bullen, 964, a 60. Entreth into the towne, returneth to England 965, a 10, 20. Goeth in progresse into Yorkeshire, gifts giuen him, 954, b 10, 20. A good archer and full of nativenesse: note, 806, a 40, 50, 60, b 10, 20, &c. Wake more staues at iusts than the rest, & had the prise giuen him, 809, a 50. Runneth at tilt, diuerse passimes therin he was a principall actor, he runneth at the ring, 805, a 10, &c: b 60. Forced to take armes against the Scots, 957, b 30. Magnificent and munificent to the French kings ambassadors, &c: 848, a 10, 20, &c. 849, a 10, &c. Purposeth in person to passe the seas to see the French K. his brother, 835, b 60. Receiueth the order of S. Michaell, 898, b 10. He commeth to westminster hall & there sitteth in iudgement himself vpon the rioters at Shrouetide, his gracious & generall pardon, he and the duke of Suffolke runne at tilt, 844, a 20, 30 50, b 30. Lying to Portesmouth, appointeth captains ouer his ships, &c. 841, a 40. His name letteth dur concluded in parlement that should personallie inuade France, 815, a 50, b 10, 50. Taketh the popes part against the French K. 611, b 10. Taketh French K. their fat, cutter in the dale of Andren, they two make challenge to all commers at tilts, his sumptuous furniture at the said iusts, 838, a 30, b 30, 60. He runneth against monsieur Grandemill, the partners of his challenge, 859, a 30, b 10. His band of men with their deuise on their apparell, his intertainment of the French queene, 860, b 20. He departeth from Guisnes to Calis, and from thense to Grauelyng to visit the emperor, his statelie maske, himself a spectatl actor, 861, b 10, 60. He returneth into England, 863, a 40. In person passeth ouer to France, 817, b 60. The order of his armie, 817, a 10. Incampeth at Arkes, commeth to the siege, 819, a 20, 30. His power ioined with the emperor Maximilian his soldiors against Terwine: note, 821, a 50. Entreth into Terwine, the citizens are sworne vnto him, marcheth on with his armie to Tournaie, goeth to Lisle to visit the young prince of Castile, 822, b 40, 50, 60. His pompe & port, 823, a 10 Maketh certeine gentlemen knights for their good militarie seruice, 824, b 50. Falselie reported to be dead, he & his traine ignorant of the bruit to his campe by means of a mill he beseigeth Tournaie, 823, a 60. Returneth to England, 825, a 60. Meeteth the emperor Maximilian, his harnesse and furniture, his speech to a Scotish herald, his answer to the Scotish kings letter, 820, a 20, 50, &c. Intituled Christianissimo by the pope, 831, a 10. His gift to the citie of London: note, 976, b 40, 50. First named supreme head, 923, a 30. And what thereupon followed, his voluntarie inclination to pardon the premunire of the clergie, 923, b 10. His marriage in question, & how determined by diuerse vniuersities, b 30, 40, &c. His oration in the parlement house: note, 971, a 20, &c. He & his queen at Hanering in the Bowre, 852, b 30. Setteth forward into France, he and the emperor Charles meet at Douer castell, keepe their Whitsuntide at Canturburie, landeth at Calis, lodgeth in his palace at Guisnes, 856, a 20, 50, 60, b 30, 40. His affabilenes with his young courtiers made them too saucie & bold: note, 851, a 60 Thankfulnes to his militarie seruitors, 829, b 50. The portion intended to be giuen with his daughter Marie in mariage, 850, b 10. His mariage by consent of all vniuersities iudged vnlawfull, 912, b 60. 913, a 10, His mariage with his brothers wife in question, 897, a 60. Is desirous to be resolued by the opinions of the lerned touching his mariage, 906, b 50. Confesseth that the sting of conscience made him mislike of the mariage, 907, b 60. Submitteth himselfe to the censures of the learned, mistrusteth the legats of seeking delaies, his affection to the ladie Anne Bullen, 903, a 20, 50, 60, b 60. Marrieth the ladie Anne Bullen, 929, a 60, Marieth the ladie Jane Seimor, 940. Commeth to see the ladie Anne Cleeue at Rochester, 948, b 10. Welcommeth hir to Greenewich, 949, b 60. He marrieth hir, 950, a 10, &c. His mariage with the ladie Anne of Cleeue iudged vnlawfull, 952, a 60. Marrieth the ladie Katharine Parr, 960 a 30. Maketh his last will & testament, his executors, 976, b 60. Deceaseth, described, commended, 977, a 10, 20, &c.
Henrie the prince is sent against Robert of Northumberland, 15, b 40. His discouer of life, 77, a 20. Seeketh to seize vpon the gouernment out of his fathers hands, 86, a 60, b 10. New practises to put his father beside the crowne, 99, b 10. Falleth sike, 106, a 60. He sendeth to his father, his repentance before his death, his death & buriall, 107, a 10. Accused to his father, 539, a 10. Goeth to the court with a great traine, his strange apparell, his comming to the kings presence, the words they both vsed, his request to haue his accusors answer their wrongfull accusations, 539, all. Taketh awaie the crowne before his father was dead, he is blamed of his father the king, his answer, 541, a 30
Henrie, the first sonne to Henrie the eight deceaseth, 802, b 50
Henrie Fitzroie, K. Henrie the eights base son: note, 892, a 40
Henrie the empresse hir son lord Henrie came into England to see his mother, 55, b 59. Knighted in England, 58, a 40. Marrieth the duchesse of Aquitain, 58, b 60. Returneth into England, he beseigeth Malmesburie castell & is forced to raise his siege, 59, b 40. Passeth into Normandie, his puissance, a peace betweene him and the French king, 54, a 60, b 10
Henrie son to the erle of Cornwall, and king of Almaigne murthered, 275, b 50
Henrie the emperour dead at Utrecht, 42, b 60
Hearie grace de Dieu, a great ship, otherwise called the great Henrie, 815, b 40
Here long how it was to be worne, 30, b 60. In the court reuersed, 42, b 30. The abuse thereof, 44, b 60: note, 46, a 10
Heraclius patriarch of Jerusalem, 108, b 10
Herald at armes words from the Scotish king to Henrie the eight, & how courteouslie vsed 820, a 40, 50, 60, b 10. Of Scotland richlie rewarded of Henrie the eight, 821, a 30. From the K. of England & France to the emperor, the speeches & behauiors, 898, b 60, 899, all, 900, all. Defiance intimated, 901, b 10. Killed, & the deed doer executed as a traitor, 390, a 10. Not suffered to enter in France: note, 960, a 60, Scotish his message to the duke of Summerset. 983, b 40, &c. English his intimation to the Edenburghers, 707, b 20, &c: 708, a 10, &c. His office, & how the French king rewarded an English herald giuing him defiance, 695, a 10. Insufficient from the French king to the king of England & his speech, 695, b 30, 40, &c. well rewarded at Henrie the fourths hands, 518, Slaine, 443, a 10
Herbert bishop of Thetford why deposed of his bishops staffe 21, a 40. He came to it by simonie, 26, a 30
Herbert knight of great power among the welsh: note, 752, b 60
Hereford castell deliuered vnto Lewis the French king his sonne, 198, a 50
Heremit of Pomefret or Wakefield his prophesie to king John: note, 180, a 30
Heretike burned at Norwich, & what opinion he held, 1299, b 20, 30, 1354, b 60
Hereward partaker with the English rebels against duke William, 10, a 50
Herlowin a noble man in Normandie husband to William conquerors mother, 20, a 10
Hertfordshire men sworne vnto Ee ij.
Richard the second, 438, a 30
Historie writers blamed, 112, a 20
Holie land otherwise called Palestine, 20, a 40. In danger, 104, b 50. whereto Richard the first goeth like a pilgrime, 123, b 10. Aid granted to the people thereof, 111, b 20. & See Jerusalem, and Saracens.
Holie maid of Kent. & See Elizabeth Barton.
Holland in Lincolneshire spoiled and made tributarie vnto the French, 193, a 10
Holland beyond seas commended, 1426, a 30
Holland knight killeth the lord Stafford, 447, a 50. Made earle of Huntington, 465, b 60
Hollocke countie his secretarie hanged, 1431, b 30
Homage done to king Henrie the second by his sonnes, 94, b 40. Of a thousand pounds yearelie, 87, b 20. Done vnto king Henrie the third by the archbishop of Rouen, 241, b 40 By the earle of Sauoie, 238, b 50. Of rebels to a forren prince intruding himselfe vpon the crowne of England, 191, b 30. Of king Henrie the second vnto the French king, 107, b 50. Of king John to the French king, 161, a 60, b 10. By king Edward the first vnto the French king, 283, b 30. Of the Scotish king, &c: vnto the kings of England, 69, a 60, b 10, 20, 95, b 60, 162, a 60, 254, a 40, 50, 290, a 20, 245, a 40, 350, b 20, 587, a 20. Of the Scotish lords vnto king Edward the first, with words of his accepting it: note, 301, a 30, &c. Of the nobles of Scotland vnto king Edward the first set downe in expresse words: note, 287, b 60, 288, a 10. & See Erle of Flanders, Malcolme, and Scots.
Homilies, when and whie instituted to be read in churches, 979, b 50. Commanded to be had in churches, 992, a 60
Honors change maners: note, 543, b 10, 76, b 10
Hope vaine & fruitlat, 193, b 50
Horne. & See Bishop.
Horsse flesh powdered and serued in at a banket, 1192, b 60.
Horsse stealers, ten hanged at once in Smithfield, 1356, a 10
Hose. & See Apparell.
Hospitall of saint Leonards in yorke whie and by whome founded, 27, a 10
Hospitals builded by archbishop Lanfranke, 18, a 50, & See Sanoie.
Hospitalitie of Richard the second: note, 508, a 10. Of the erle of warwike: note, 678, a 40
Hostages English threatned to lose their liues, 147. Executed for promise broken, 597, b 10. Of France had great loue and libertie shewed them, 396, a 20. For the assurance of the French kings ransome, 394, a 60. Their number, 395, b 60 Deliuered by the Scotish lords on the kings side, 1217, a 10. During the time of a parlee betweene enimies, 1139, b 50. French for the deliuerie of Tournaie, &c: in heauines and sorrow counteouslie dealt with and rotalie: note, 850, a 30. & See Pledges.
Howard knight lord admerall, 811,

812,b 60. Goeth to Biſkaie, his arriuall,813,a 10. Abuſed of the Engliſh ſoldiors, goeth to Wzitaine, warneth diuerſe places, knighteth diuerſe gentlemen, the lozds of Wzitains requeſt vnto him, 814,a 50,60, b 10. He would haue Henrie the eight preſent in perſon at the incounter and is rebuked, he commeth into the baie where as pꝛioz Jehan laie, 816, a 60, b 60. Dꝛowned, 817,a 10

Howard knight made lozd admerall in his bꝛothers ꝛowme, 819,a 10, 20. Incountereth with the earls of Leneux and Argile, 828, b 20. Attainted of treaſon, dieth pꝛiſoner, 940, b 50. In the Towze, 944, b 60.

Howard lozd gentle and kanourable to the ladie Elizabeth, 1158, b 10. Wziue ſeale deceaſeth, 1257, b 40. ¶ Sée Earle of Surꝛie.

Hubert de Burgh ſaileth the French fleet, 201, a 50

Hugh earle of Chester his exploits againſt the welſhmen, 23, a 40. Deſpaireth of life, 28, a 10

Hugh earle of Shꝛewesburie & Arundell his exploits, 23, a 40. Slaine by a rouer: note, 23, a 50

Huidozne capteine rebell executed, 672, a 30

Hums caſtell beſieged, yelded by, poſſeſſed of the Engliſh, 990, b 10, &c.

Hun hanged in the Lollards towze, his death lamented, & why, 835, a 10, 20

Hunger when people did eat hozſſes, 1022, a 60

Hungerfozd lozd executed foꝛ buggerie, 952, b 20

Hunſdich paued, 792, a 10

Hunſdon lozd his deſcent, he pꝛeſenteth the ozder of the garter to the French king, 1206, a 60. He with others go againſt the rebels in the nozth, 1212, b 20. Made lozd chamberleine, 1413, a 50

Hunting fatall of William Rufus, 26, b 30, 40. Pꝛieſts were not to vſe it, 97, a 60. A ſtatute made concerning it, 238, b 20

Hunting roiall, 473, a 20, 30

Huntington earldome by whom and to whom giuen in dowrie, 11, b 20. Scottiſh, 66, b 50. The caſtell wowne, 92, a 60

Huſbandrie hindered by froſt, 396, b 60. Diminiſhed wherebie, and how remedied: note, 862, a 60, b 10. ¶ Sée Froſts, and Raine.

I.

IAcke Cads rebellion in Kent, 632, a 60. Is at his wits end, diſguiſeth himſelfe, is foꝛſaken of his adherents, pꝛoclamation out to take him, he is apꝛehended and executed, 635. Slaieth the Stakfozds, 634, a 60

Jacke Straw & his adherents executed, 436, a 50. His confeſſion at the time of his death, 438, b 10

Jane the daughter of K. John married to the erle of March, 182, b 60

Jane de Valois ſiſter to the French K. treateth foꝛ peace, 360, a 30

Jane ladie Gilfozd pꝛoclamed quéene, 1084, b 10. Hath the keeping of the keies of the Towze, 1087, a 40. Committed to the Towze with hir huſband the lozd Gilfozd, 1088, b 50. Hir behauiozr at hir execution, the wozds which ſhe ſpake on the ſcaffold, 1099, b 40, 50, 60, 1100, a 10, &c.

Jaques Arteneld purpoſeth the deſtruction of Gerard Denle, his houſe beſet, & he ſlaine, 368, a 30, &c.

Idleneſſe & meat of other mens charge what they dw, 1049, b 20

Jennie a notozius knowne tꝛaitoꝛ & conferrer with Francis Thꝛockmoꝛton, 1371, b 10

Jerdeie. ¶ Sée French king.

Jeruſalem taken by Saladine pꝛince of the Saracens, 110, b 50. With moꝛe part of all other townes taken from the chꝛiſtians, 111, a 60. The king thereof doth fealtie to Richard the firſt, 127, b 60. The king thereof commeth to England, 265, a 50. ¶ Sée Holieland.

Jeſt of Philip the French king at duke William lieng ſicke: note, 14, b 20. Of Richard the firſt at the caſtell of Chateau Galliard builded, 155, b 10. Of king John concerning the maſſe, 196, b 20. Of Edward the fourth and a widow that gaue him monie, 694, a 60. Pleaſant concerning the ſtrict keeping of ladie Elizabeth, 1156, b 40. Merie at the rood of Paules, 1121, a 60. Of a cat hanged in Cheape, and of a dog clothed in a rochet called by the name of Gardener, 1143, a 20. Againſt ſcripture, iuſtlie rewarded, 1223, a 50. ¶ Sée Deriſion and Mocke.

Jeſuits & maſſing pꝛieſts pꝛoclamed againſt, 1315, a 40. Sent ouer ſeas and baniſhed the realme: note well, 1372, a 30, &c: 1380. ¶ Sée Pꝛieſts ſeminarie.

Jew, and of a good Jewes anſwer to William Rufus, 27, a 60, b 10. Stꝛiken by a chꝛiſtian, 118, b 50. Hath his teeth dꝛawne out, 174, a 40. At Tewkeſburie faileth into a lakes: note, 262, b 60

Jewes and chꝛiſtians diſpute, 27, b 20. Burnt to death, 119, a 10. Sute to William Rufus againſt Jewes become chꝛiſtians: note, 27, a 40. Bꝛought into this land by duke william, 15, a 10. At Lincolne ſlaine and ſpoiled, 272, a 20. Inhabiting London ſlaine foꝛ treaſon, 267, a 60. Slaine at London, & why, 263, b 40. Accuſed & executed foꝛ cꝛucifieng of a child, 253, a 50. Charged on paine of hanging to paie Henrie the third 8000 marks, 252, a 10. Robbed in Oxfozd, 238, b 10 Cõſtreined to helpe Henrie the third with monie, 242, b 30. Releaſed out of pꝛiſon, 254, a 20. Puniſhed by the purſe foꝛ a murther committed, 224, a 30. Meant to cꝛucifie a child in ſpite of Chꝛiſt, 219, a 30. Generallie impꝛiſoned thꝛough out all England, hated: note, 283, b 20. Baniſhed out of England, and why, 285, a 50. Dꝛowned, b 10. Giue Henrie third, the third part of all their moueables, 211, b 60. Indicted and puniſhed foꝛ abuſing the kings coine, 279, b 30. Cꝛucifie a child, 56, b 20. Grieuouſlie taxed, tormented, and impꝛiſoned, 174, a 30. And where they buꝛied their dead, 101, b 20. Appointed to inroll all their debts, pledges, &c: 145, b 20. Excéedingile hated and murthered: note, 121, b 50, 122, all. Houſes ſet on fier at London, 118, b 60. Beaten & abuſed by the people, 118, b 60. Meant to pꝛeſent king Richard with a rich gift, 118, b 40

Jewell John. ¶ Sée Biſhop.

Iland diſcouered. ¶ Sée Sebaſtian.

Images taken awaie & remoued from their places: note, 945, b 10, &c. Remoued out of churches, 979, b 50. Thꝛough out the realme pulled downe and defaced, 992, b 20. Taken downe & burned in the ſtréets 1184, b 60, 1185, a 10

Impoſt. ¶ Sée Cuſtome and Subſidie.

Impꝛecation: note, 248, a 60

Inceſt of king John, 184, b 20

Incloſures of the fields about London caſt downe and ouerthꝛowne by archers of London, 830, a 10. A pꝛoclamation foꝛ the laieng of them open, 1002, a 10

Incontinencie of Henrie the ſecond, 115, b 30

Inuenture ſextipartite of conſpired noble men: note, 514, b 60, 515, a 20. Tripartite touing conſpiracie, 521, b 60

Indulgences biennals & trienals liberallie granted, 428, b 60

Infection. ¶ Sée Murren.

Infidelitie ſuſpected in William Rufus, 27, b 20

Ingratitude: note, 862, b 60. Shꝛewdlie pꝛactiſed and ſeuerelie puniſhed, 743, b 50. 744, a 50. A notable example thereof, 605, b 40. Of Fitzoſbert vnnaturall, 149, a 50. Stꝛiketh dead, 50, b 30. In all eſtates towards Richard the ſecond, 508, a 50, 60. Foꝛ good ſeruice vnrewarded, and what followed, 21, b 30. Of Odo foꝛ his reſtitution: note, 17, a 20. Of cardinall Poole to Henrie the eight that bꝛought him vp, 1165, a 10

Iniurie done and no reuenge ſought: note, 1117, b 40. ¶ Sée reuenge.

Iniuſtice, 173, b 30

Innocencie no barre againſt execution, 1066, a 10

Innocent hanged foꝛ the nocent 173, a 30

Inquiſitions taken of diuerſe matters: note, 153, b 30. Taken by a iurie of lundzie matters, 145, a 60. Of the loſſes euerie biſhop had and ſuſteined, &c: 180, b 60. Calld Traile baſton, 312, b 60. Taken of the miſdemeanozs of iuſtices, 312, b 40. Foꝛ abuſozs of the kings coine, 279, b 30. Foꝛ the ſeparating of foꝛeſts, 207 a 50. What were the liberties in times paſt of K. Henrie the thirds grandfather: note, 205, a 10. Foꝛ waſhers & clippers of monie, 241, a 10. Foꝛ the baluation of benefices pertening to ſtrangers, 236, b 40. Foꝛ offendozs abuſing clergie men ſtrangers, 214, b 40

Inſurrection about the taking vp of cozne, 944, a 60. Of wiſt, 1693, b 10. wherein note what miſchefous hurliburlies do chance in a commotion oꝛ rebellion, 1094. ¶ Sée Rebellion.

Intердiction, 175, a 10. Threatned by the pope againſt the king & his clergie, 171, a 10. Of the land ſolemnite releſed 183, a 20, 360, a 50

Interteinment vnfit bꝛeedeth malcontentment, 20, b 60. Of the emperoꝛ Sigiſmund ſtrange: note, 556, b 40, 50. ¶ Sée Frendſhip and Hoſpitalitie.

Interuiew. ¶ Sée Edward the fourth & other kings of England, as French king, &c.

Inuaſions puniſhed and other offenſes againſt the kings peace, 312, b 60. ¶ Sée England and Scots.

Inueſtitures of churches thꝛée dates togither argued vpon, 34, a 30. Of pꝛelats. ¶ See Biſhops and Conſecration.

Iohannes Cremenſis alecherous legat: note, 42, b 40

John of Gaunt borne, 357, a 60 Maꝛied, 392, a 20. Duke of Lancaſter, 395, b 30. Buꝛied, and his daughter Blanch, 405, a 10

John the king pꝛoclamed king of England, 157, a 20, b 40, 158 a 10. Made king of Irꝛeland, 109, a 20, 101, a 30. Maꝛried 117, a 30. His impatiencie to ſee himſelfe diuided by his ſubiects, 186, b 20. Taketh diuerſe caſtels, 189 all. Aided by foꝛren ſouldiozs againſt his barons, 187, b 60. Diſquieted, departeth into the Ile of Wight, 186, b 50. Crowned K. of England the ſecond time, 165, a 60. From whome the Poictouins reuolt, 164, b 10. Commeth vpon his enimies vnlokes foꝛ, 164, b 40. Diuers wales moleſteth the white monks, 163, a 10. Diuoꝛſed from his wife Iſabell the daughter of earle Robert of Gloceſter, 161, b 60. He & the French king come to a paꝛle 160, b 10. Palleth ouer into Nozmandie, 160, a 40. Returneth out of Nozmandie, 161, a 40. Inueſted duke of Nozmandie, 158, b 20. Commeth out of Nozmandie into England, 158, b 50. Wanting aid againſt the French K. commeth backe to England, 166 b 60. Pꝛepareth an armie to go into France, 168, b 40. Goeth to the ſea, returneth, chargeth certeine of his nobles with treaſon, 169, a 10, 20, 30. Taketh the ſea, maketh waꝛ againſt the French king, 170, a 10, 20. Repareth Angiers, 170, b 30. Wꝛiteth to the pope touching the archbiſhop of Canturburies election, 171, a 40. Threatned with interdiction, he & his realme put vnder the popes curſſe, 171, a 10. Palleth into Irꝛeland, 174, a 50. Goeth into wales with an armie, 174, b 60. Puniſheth diuerſe that refuſed to go with him into wales, 175, a 40. His deſtruction put in pꝛactiſe by means of the popes legat & the French king, 175, b 40. Deliuereth his cꝛowne to Pandulph, and hath it againe reſtoꝛed, 177, a 60, b 10. His wozds of fealtie made to the the pope,178,a60. what cauſed him to agree with the pope,180,b10. His lords refuſe to follow him into France 181,a10. Commended to the pope for an honorable prince, 182,a10. Remoueth to Angiers, 183, a60. Inuadeth Britaine,183,a40. Taketh vpon him the croſſe to go into the holie land, 184. Subſcribeth to his barons notwithſtanding his oth, 186. b10. Cõmeth to his lords to talke of ſome pacification,185;b50 Left deſolat of frends, 185,b 30. Maketh hauocke on the poſſeſſions of his aduerſaries 193;b50. His noblemen reuolt from him to K. Lewes,192,a 10. His children male and female, the deſcription of his perſon, his fortune, his eatings & doings, 196, a10,&c. Inceſtuous & courteous:note, 184,b20. The popes ballail, 191,a10. Aſſembleth a great armie againſt the French K. 176,b40. Kneeleth downe to the archbiſhop of Canturburie,& beſought him of forgiuenes,810,b40. His ſon named Oliuer Fitzroie, 202, a50 By whoſe means his nephue Arthur loſt his life,& lyhie,7, b30. Falleth ſicke of an ague, his raging,194,a50, 60. His death diuerſlie reported by writers,194, a60,b all. Reported to an ill purpoſe, 190,b 20. His bartail,and corpulencie, 194,b60

John Bail. ¶ Sée Bail.

John a Chamber a notorious northerne rebell,769, b40,&c. 770,a10,&c. Hanged like an archtraitor, 770,a10

John Tiler. ¶ Sée Tiler.

Ione de Arc puſcll de Dieu, 600, 20,&c, 603,b50. Taken priſoner,&c:note,604,a50,60,b10,

Zoie immoderat the cauſe of death, 955,b20

Ipſwich beſeged, 60,b40

Ireland diuided into ſeuerall eſtates,or kingdoms,80, a50. Moſtlie conquered by Henrie the ſecond,109,b60. Foure Iriſh kings ſubmit themſelues to Richard the ſecond, 481,b 30. The pearelie reuenues thereof in Edward the thirds dais,481, a50. Engliſhmen ſent thither to inhabit the Ards in Vlſter, 1257, a20 Soldiors tranſported thither 1314, a30. Inuaded by the popes meanes, 1366, b60 ¶ Sée John and Soldiors.

Iriſh dõ deſtroie Angleſeie, 237,b50. Rebelling, kill the Engliſh,275,a10. Frier appeacheth the duke of Lancaſter of treaſon,445, b40. Miſerablie tormented and put to death,446;a10. Conuoid into their owne countrie by proclamation,481;a40. With the lord of Kilmaine arriued at Harſlue, 565, b60. Their good ſeruice, 566,a10. Wild ſpoile the earle of Kildars countrie, 914,a10. Nobilitie ſubmit themſelues to Henrie the eight in England, 957, a 10. Seuen hundred in warlike manner paſſe thorough London,& muſter before king Henrie the eight:note, 963,b 20,30. Bowes,bagpipes,and darts among them, 1259,a10.

Iron great want within Scotland, 323,a20

Iſabell daughter to the earle of Glocester maried vnto Iohn K.Richards brother,117,a30

Iſabell the ſecond wife of king Iohn,& what iſſue ſhe brought him,161,b60. Crowned,162,a 30

Iſabell Henrie the thirds mother deceaſeth, 239,a50

Iſabell counteſſe of Cornwall deceaſeth, 225,b60

Iſabell wife to emperor Frederike, deceaſeth, 229,a10

Iſabell de Boulbec. ¶ Sée Counteſſe.

Iſac. ¶ Sée Cipriots.

Iſleie knight, all his apparell not worth foure ſhillings, 1099,b20

Iſoldune where ſeated, 146,b10

Iudge Morgan fell mad:note, 1099,a60. ¶ Sée Iuſtice.

Iudges and other officers committed to the Tower : note, 360,b40,&c. ¶ Sée Iuſtices.

Iudgement raſh in an holie father, 109,a20

Iudgement ſecret of God vpon Baniſter & his children after the attaching of the duke of Buckingham, 744,a50,60 ¶ Sée Renenge.

Iudith, duke Williams neece, whoſe daughter & to whome married,& how indowed, 11,b 10

Iurie of twelue men ancient, when inſtituted, & how matters by them ſhould be tried, 8 b20. That went vpon ſir Nicholas Throkmorton, appeare in the ſtarchamber, excellentlie fined, 1121,b40. Extremelie dealt withall, 1122,a 10. ¶ Sée Throckmorton knight. At Exceſter affliſe eleuen dead:note, 1548,a60

Iuſtice chiefe of England gineth ouer his office & becommeth a canon,103,a50. An office impoſed vpon prelats. ¶ Sée Archbiſhop.

Iuſtice of Henrie the firſt : note, 560,b60,566,a60. A notable example of Edward the firſt vpon his ſon,313,b30. Mingled with mercie, 797, a60. And the commendable care of K. Henrie the ſecond thereof : note, 115, a60. Without regard of kinred,315,a20. And what followed vpon the neglect of the ſame,13,a10. Partlie pretended,734, a60. Peruerted when one is hanged for another, 1007, a20. In Swarre: note the force thereof, 552,a30. Corrupted. ¶ Sée Bribes.

Iuſtices of peace when & whie inſtituted,8,a60. Itinerants the diuiſion of their circuits, 97,b60. Their oth,98, a10, Die of infection, 1547, b40. 1548,a40. Chefe of England elected & others depoſed,119,b 10. Itinerants cauſe inquiſitions to be made in their circuits, 145,a60. Vnluſe iuſtice: note, 225,b20. Keepe the terme for pleas at S. Saluors, 259,b30. Begin to go their generall circuits, 282,b 20. ¶ Sée Sickneſſe at Exceſter and Oxford. Complained of to Edward the firſt, & puniſhed: note, 284,b60,285, a10,&c. Fined,312,b50. Sat neither in the tower nor elſewhere for a whole yeare, 361, b20. Reſtreined from fees, briberie,& gifts,&c:note,369, b20. Iurors, &c: brought to blockhom feaſt by the rebels, 430,a60. Compelled to ſubſcribe, 458, b10

Iuſts at Blie where K. Edward began to ſhew proweſſe of his chiualrie, 254,a20. At Bzackleie, 242, a10. In Cheapſide,348,b50. At Chalons where prince Edward behaued himſelfe worthilie, 276, a20. At Dunſtable, where king and queene were preſent,363,a40. At Grenewich with goodlie ſhews,815 a10. At Grenwich before the emperor Charles, 873,b10. Where ſir Francis Brian loſt one of his eies, 892,b60. At London, the maior and aldermen chalengers, &c,392,a40, 50. In the Tower of London & Grenewich,646,b60. Roiall in Tuthill field for the ſpace of eight daies,220,a10. Deuiſed to be holden at Oxford where Henrie the fourth ſhould haue bene murthered, 514,b50,60. Within the kings palace of Shine for the ſpace of a moneth, 774, a30. In Smithfield,366,a10,395,b60 Roiall, 473,b30,40,&c:474,a 10,&c. 535,b60. At Weſtminſter with the ſhews and triumphs there,807;a50,60,&c: And ſome hurt done,940,b60 1225, a30. And much hurt done among the people, 1315, a60. By gentlemen of name, to delight nobles of France note,1316,1317,1318,1319,1320 1321. At Windſore, 366,a50. Againſt all commers,497,a10 It & turnie appointed by the lords and by Henrie the third diſappointed,236,b60. Handled in a rougher manner than in theſe daies,245,a10. Wherat ſir Arnold Montenſie was ſlaine:note,246,b20. Prohibited by proclamation,311,b10. Betwixt the baſtard of Burgogne & the lord Scales,669, a20. With manie a proper deuiſed ſhew,802,b10,&c: 803,a 10,&c. Solemne wherin Henrie the eight himſelfe was a chalenger,835,b10. Kept for honor of his ſiſter the French queene,838,a60,b10,&c: Betweene Henrie the eight and others,844,b10,950,a30,850 a60. Proclamed in ſundrie nations,950,b60,951,a10,&c Roiall in France:note,858,a 60,b10,&c:859,a10, &c:860,a 10,&c. At Paris, the nobles go thither, decrees for the ſame, how long they laſted, with the maner thereof:note, 833,all. At Tournaie for diſport of the prince of Caſtile & the duchеſſe of Sauoie,825,a 20,¶ Sée Tilt and Turnies.

K.

Kalendar. ¶ Sée pope Gregorie.

Katharine daughter to the earle of Huntleie maried to Perkin the rebell,780, a40. Preſented to Henrie the ſeuenth, 784,b10

Katharine the daughter of Ferdinando ſent ouer into England out of Spaine,788, b40, &c. Married to king Henrie the eight, 801, a10. ¶ Sée queene Katharine & Henrie the eight.

Kelwaie Thomas. ¶ Sée Iuſts triumphant.

Kendall waſted, 91,b10

Kentiſhmen do lie in wait in woods for the comming of duke William, 2, a10, Cannot await with bondage, and determine to fight with duke William for their lawes and liberties, 2, a10. The kete of England, 2, b10. Send a meſſage to duke William, 2, b10. Had duke William at aduantage, 2, a20, b10, &c. Make an hurlie burlie and commit much miſcheefe, 677,b10. Executed for rebellion,693,a60. Haue thanks of Henrie the ſeuenth for their good ſeruice,780, a10. Rebellion vnder John Tiler. ¶ Sée Tiler.

Ket, his rebellion, a capteine there,1028,b50, 60, to 1042, &c. He meant to haue talked with the earle of Warwike, 1037,a60. Power increaſeth, 1032,b60. Apprehended, examined,1039,50,60. Both hanged executed,1240, a50, 60.

Killingworth caſtell beſeged, deliuered to Henrie the third, 272,b10. Fortified againſt Henrie the third, 272, a30. Holden againſt Edward the ſecond, 329,b10

King of Armenia. ¶ Sée Armenia. Of Cipriots. ¶ Sée Cipriots. Of France. ¶ Sée French king. Of Ireland. ¶ Sée Ireland. Of Portingall. ¶ Sée Portingall. Of Spaine. ¶ Sée Spaine, &c.

King can abide no peere in his owne realme : note, 25, a50. In name but not in fame : note,465,a40. What kind of perſon he is or ſhould be, 910, b40. Office hard to diſcharge 740,a40. Beſt kind of gouernment,1052,b30. Iuriſdiction abſolute in their owne realmes, & that the pope hath nothing there to do, 24,b20, &c. Election & aduancement referred to the people, 1, a40. Oth at his coronation,1, b30.

Kings college in Cambridge founded : note; 691,b40,&c.

Kingdome to obteine what promiſes are made, but not kept. ¶ Sée Promiſes & People.

Kingſton knight is ſent to fetch vp Woolſeie arreſted of treaſon to Henrie the eight, talke betwixt the ſaid ſir William and him, 916, b 30, 50. Pronoſt marſhall, execution of marſhall law : note, 1006, b 60, his ill iuſtice, 1007, a10. Accuſed of treaſon, his decеaſe, 1132, a40.

Kiriell ſir Thomas, a valiant capteine, 630, a20.

Kiſſe the pax would not the K. with Becket, 78, a10. ¶ Sée Reconciliation.

Knenet ſurueior deprined of his office: note, 856, a10. An inſtrument to bring the duke of Buckingham to deſtruction, 862, b60

Knenet knight arreigned for ſtriking in the court, iudged to loſe his hand, he is pardoned, 953, b10, &c.

Knenet ſir Henrie knight deceaſeth, 974, b60.

Knenet Edmund knight, his ſeruice in Norfolke rebellion 1031, b30.

Knewſtub. ¶ Sée Sermon.

Knights of the Bath, 511, a10. 733, a20. 931, a50.

Knights order of the Rhodes diſſolued, 951, a40.

Knights

Knights of the round table first founded. ¶ See Order of the garter.

Knights templers apprehended, and what laid to their charge 319,a 10,&c

Knights three hundred of men of armes to be found,153,a 10 Two hundred fiftie and two besides demilances taken prisoners by king John, 165, a 20. Made by Henrie the third,240,a 60. According to the value of their lands,248,a 10. To be made according to their reuenues, 254, a 30. Fees, how manie in England in king Henrie the third his time, 262,a 20. Foure score made at once, 263,a 20. Made by the duke of Buckingham at his entrie into France, 426, a 30, 40,b 30 Made of captens for good seruice in warre, 551,a 40

Knighthod,595,b 50. To dalorous gentlemen in seruice of warres,814,b 20. For good militarie seruice, 824, b 50, 874,a 50,880,b 40. Urged,for eise to make fine,929, b 40. For seruice done against the enimie,962,b 40,&c. 991,b 40 992,a 20,1216,b 40,1222,a 60

Knolles knight sent with an armie into France, 405,a 20. Borne in Chelshire, his counsell not followed, 405, b 60. The feare that the enimies had of him, 406, b 50. His seueritie,445, b 10. Deceaseth, remembrances of him, 533, b 40

Knolles Francis knight sent ouer to view the state of Newhauen, 1202,b 30. His foure sonnes in a triumphant shew, 1319,b 60. ¶ See Auxerre, and Iusts triumphant.

L.

Labrers, an act of parliament for the drawing of them in order, 835,b 20

Lacie Hugh, and of king Henrie the seconds gift vnto him, 82, b 30. Slaine in Ireland,109 b 60. His puissance and contempt, his diligence to inlarge his possessions in Ireland, 110,a 10

Lacie Robert constable of Chester hangeth two for spite,133 b 40

Lacie Roger a Norman, 17,a 60

Lacie walter in armes against the rebels, 11,a 50

Lacies constables of Chester by inheritance, their estimation and credit,215, b 60,217,a 10,20,&c. Erls of Lincolne of whense they had their original, 20,a 30

Laignie on the riuer of Maine besieged, 608,a 10

Lambe esquier, a good common wealths man, deceaseth, his acts and deeds full of charitie: note, 1311,a 60,b 10,&c:1312, his epitaph, 1313,a 40

Lambert earle of Lens, 11,b 10

Lambert Simenill. ¶ See Simenill.

Lampedeusa castell builded, 279,b 10. Taken, 281,a 10

Lancaster and Yorke house, and the uniting of them in one intended,740,b 40: Furthered 741,a 10,&c: 742,a 10,&c:743, a 10, &c. Some matter concerning both worthie the reading, 761,a 20,30

Lancaster house, and how malicious Margaret the duchesse of Burgogne was thereunto,765,b 10. Enuied 776,a 10

Land,and how manie acres an hide conteineth, 13,b 10

Lands let out for pearelie rent in duke Williams time,8,a 40 Morgaged for monie, 17, a 30. Of the church defended and recouered by archbishop Lanfranke: note 18, a 60,b 10

Landoise corrupted with rewards betraieth the earle of Richmond into Richard the thirds hands,747,b 10,20,30, 40, 50, 60. His expectation disappointed by the priuie and vnknowne departing of the earle, 748,a 60

Lanfranke an Italian three and thirtith archbishop of Canturburie,9,a 20. His authoritie great among all the lords of England, 16, a 30. His counsell to William Rufus to winne the nobles fauor, 16,a 10. Diligent care for the safetie of William Rufus,17,b 20. In fauor with pope Alexander,9,a 40. Assisteth duke William in armes against the rebelles, 9, b 50. Calleth a councell of the clergie,11,b 60. Praised for holding with the monks,18,b 10. Enuied for his prosperities sake,17,a 10,20. His death,18 a 40,with a description of certeine his qualities, and diuerse of his acts and deeds,18 40,a 50

Largesse of William Rufus at his coronation: note, 16,a 40

Law marshall a burthen intolerable, 1052, b 10, Executed, 1199, a 50. 566,a 60, 1007,a 10, &c. ¶ See Soldiors.

Law salike, 836, a 60, 545,b 40

Law of armes: note, 669,a 60, 577, b 40. Violated by the French,1204,b 50. Touching heralds violated, 984, a 40

Law of duke William against such as forced anie women, 15,b 50

Law to be quite abolished at the rebelles request, 432,a 50

Law against buieng and selling on the sundaie, 624,a 20

Lawes penall of duke William: note,14,a 20. Confessed to be vnequall,8,b 40: note. Of S. Edward supposed most equall and indifferent,10, a 20. Of William Rufus sharpe, rigorous, and peremptorie, 20, b 10. Of king Henrie the first commanded to be vniuersallie obserued, 181,a 30

Lawes written in the Norman tong not vnderstood of the English: note, void of conscience and equitie,8,b 10. Of England ancient abrogated and established, 8,a 60. Remaine in Kent onelie, 2,b 30

Lawes and liberties fought for, 2,a 10

Lawiers to plead their cases in English,&c:396,a 20. Brought to blockham feast by the rebelles,430,a 60. Fraudulent punished, 950,b 30

Lectyre. ¶ See Surgerie.

Leeds castell besieged,327,b 60, And yeelded, 328,a 10

Legat Anselme with his authoritie from Rome, 39,b 60

Ferentino gathereth much monie in England, 170,b 10

Gualos practises to get monie,193,a 20. John de Anagnia from Rome to procure peace betweene kings, 113, b 60. Otho cardinall, and what dutie he gathered of the clergie, 208, a 30. Pandulph, ¶ See Pandulph: note.

Legat from the pope about reformation,a bawdie knaue,42 b 40. With the archbishop of yorks pall, 36, a 50. ¶ See archbishop: note,29,a 40. A shift by forbearing the name, 239, b 50. ¶ See Cardinall.

Legats from Rome to reconcile the bishop of Elie and the archbishop of Rouen,137,a 50 They practise for their owne aduantage,100,b 10. Authorised to celebrate a marriage, 98,a 50. Not regarded, they excommunicate, 37, b 30. From the pope about Beckets death, 82,b 50

League betwixt England and Flanders,354,b 30. Concluded,296,b 50. Renewed,160, a 50. Betweene England and France,897,b 50. Renewed,193,b 60: note, 768,b 60 Confirmed,1229,a 40,1238,a 30. Betweene England and Scotland, 1402, b 30. with the Scots and French to annoie the English, 296,a 10. Betweene the emperour and king Henrie the fift, 557, b 20,&c. Betweene king Henrie the eight and the emperor 998, b 60. Betweene king Henrie and the duke of Britaine, 568, a 60. Betweene king Henrie the fift and the duke of Burgogne, and how articulated, 575, b 30. With king Henrie the third and the Welsh nobilitie vpon certeine articles, 226,b 50,&c. Secret betwixt the pope and certeine states of Italie, 893, a 10

League of peace to breake, an euill deed, 820, b 60. ¶ See Peace and Truce.

Leicester swone by force, 89, a 40. The Wals and the castell raced, 98,b 20

Leigh knight. ¶ See Iusts triumphant.

Leith burned,990, a 30. More riches found there than was looked for in anie towne of Scotland,962,a 30. Entred by the English armie, and by them pollested and spoiled: nott,962,a 30. Assailed on the seuenth of Maie, 1191, a 20. The great skirmishes betweene the English & French there in queene Elisabeths time,1186,b 40,&c.1187,1188. 1189. The French men driuen into it,1188,b 10. A fire in it, and augmented with shot of ordinance and windie weather,1190,a 50. Mainpoles set by therein on Maie daie, b 10. While the describing of the siege thereof is so largelie set downe,1193, a 20. Peace concluded thereabouts, a 40, &c. Burned to the ground, 963,a 20

Leofwins malicious mind against Lituus: note, 12, b 30

Leolin prince of Wales summoned to come and do his homage,278, a 10. And the Welsh rebels accursed, 281,a 20. His wife taken from him, he beginneth to make warr, maketh sute for peace,278, a 50, 60. Restored to his husband,279,b 10. He sueth for peace, 278, b 10. Beginneth new warres, 279,b 60. Inuadeth Edward the first's freends,281,b 10. Discomfited,205,a 30. Inuadeth the English borders, 213, b 60. His courage,214,a 10. Spoileth the marches of England,217,a 20. Made cuckold and how he reuenged it, 211, b 60. Wasteth and spoileth all the marches betwixt Wales and Shrewesburie, 218, a 30. Deceaseth,224. Slaine,his head presented to Edward the first,281,b 40,60

Leopald. ¶ See duke of Austrich.

Lerning in the earle of Mellents sonnes: note, 44,a 60

Letter of king John to his nobles of England, touching his victories, and taking of duke Arthur prisoner,165, a 10. Of the proud bishop of Elie to the shiriffe of Kent,130, b 30. Of the pope to the clergie of England for the celebrating of a holie date, 85, b 10. Of king Richard the first to the states of England for the deposing the bishop of Elie,132,a 30. Of the emperor to the states of England, touching his deliuerance, 140,b 20. Of Richard the first to the archbishop of Canturburie, touching his deliuerance out of prison, 140, a 50. To the duke of Austrich,clearing Richard the first of the death of the marquesse of Montferrat, 136, a 50. Of Henrie the fourth to pope Gregorie and the cardinals, 535, a 40, &c. Of William Northbourgh the kings confessor describing the kings voiage into France,373,b 50, &c. Seditious of a priest, 437, b 30. Of E. W. concerning the earle of Essex Walter Deuereux,1266,a 60,b 10,&c. Of cardinall Como to Parrie for resolution to kill queen Elisabeth, 1388, b 10. Of Creitchton to sir Francis Walsingham touching Parries intended murthering of the queene, 1388, a 10. Of Boner vnto cardinall Pole, concerning persecution, 1164 a 10. Of the councell to Edmund Boner as touching queene Marie conceiued with child, 1123,b 60. Of the ladie Marie, touching hir chalenge vnto the crowne, 1084, b 50, with an answer of the lords, 1085, a 40. Of the king to the lord Cheinie, at his going into France: note,1123.Right excellent of the duke of Somerset to the Scotish nobilitie touching the marriage betweene Edward the sixt and the queene of Scots,998,b 10 &c. 999, 1000,1001,a 10. Of defiance from the Scotish K. to Henrie the eight, 820. Of the French king prisoner to his mother the regent of France,884,b 50,60. Of Gefferie the kings base sonne to Richard archbishop of Canturburie, turburie,104,b 10. Of Gardiner to Boner,touching the celebrating of pope Iulies funerals,1128,a 60,b 10. Of yong king Henrie touching the disappointment of archbishop Richards consecration,86,a 10. Of Henrie the second touching the pacification betweene him and Thomas Becket,78,a 20. Of the popes. ¶ See Pope.

Letters of the duke of Summerset and the lord Russell, 1057,a 60,b 20. Of Henrie the sixt to the duke of Yorke, 638, a 60. Of the duke of Yorke to Henrie the sixt,637, b 60,638, a 10,&c. Of the duke of Gelderland to Richard the second: note,475,b 60,&c. 476,a 10, &c. Concerning prince Edwards doings and proceedings beyond sea,384,a 10, &c. Of Parrie to queene Elisabeth & lords of the counsell after his voluntarie confession: note, 1387, a 20,b 10. Of submission and sute of one Francis Throckmorton traitor against queene Elisabeth and the realme, 1373, a 60,b 60,1374. He is executed, 1375, b 30. Missiue taken from the queenes ambassadors seruants, 1195, b 20. Seditious of a bishop sent into a forren realme: note, 17,a 10. Treasonable, 428, a 60. Of protection from the French king to the king of England, 102,a 60

Letters intercepted, 329, b 10.

Letters patents reuoked, 526, b 50

Lewin a Welshman hanged: note his treacherie,299,b 60, 300,a 10,&c.

Lewis the French king inclineth to peace with Henrie the third,201,b 10. Deceaseth 208,b 60,209,a 10. His sons intituled to the kingdome of England,201,b 20. Sendeth to his father for aid,200,b 60. An armie prepared in France to succour him,201,a 10 His faire,200,b 10. Maintaineth his title pretended to the crowne of England,191,a 50 ¶ See French king.

Lewis le grosse, 34,b 60

Lewis. ¶ See Phylician.

Libell against cardinall Woolsie, 895,a 30. Seditious against Henrie the seuenth, and the libellous executed, 778, a 60. Causing losse of life,746,b 10 Set on the duke of Northfolks gate forewarning him of treacherie against Richard the third, and of his owne falsetie, 759, b 10. Against the queene and realme are false,1363,a 40. Published in Italian against queene Elisabeth, and the same answered, 1418,a 40. Printed against queene Elisabeth, 1379,b 60. Against the clergie, 558,b 20. ¶ See Bookes seditious.

Liberalitie of Richard the first wonderfull,126,b 30. Of the earle of Arundell: note,454,b 50. Of Edward the first to his nobles,308,a 40. Of sir Thomas Hackuill to the French,1224,b 60,1225, a 10. Of William Rufus,27, a 20. Repented: note,20,b 10. In a prince commended, 16, b 10

Libertie preferred before a kingdome,726,b 60. Obteined by gentle language,673,a 60,b 10. Bought with monie, 140,a 20, b 60. ¶ See Ransome. Obteined by great words and proud braggs,23,b 60,24,a 10. Desired aboue all things: note, 1046,a 30,60

Liberties. ¶ See Lawes, Londoners, Priuileges, and Southwarke.

Licence to build castels, 47,a 30 Of king Richard the first to gather riches,120,a 60. For the English iusts and turnie: note,145,b 60. Asked of Henrie the third of the commonaltie to passe ouer sea, 262,a 30. To burie the bodies of the rebels,335, a 60. And that without it none should depart the realme,20,b 40. To depart the realme,sought and obteined, 14,b 10

Lie, & how dangerous to credit: note, 587,a 50

Life to saue what shifts noblemen can be content to make, 460,b 30

Lightening. ¶ See Thunder.

Limerike a kingdome, 101,b 10

Limoges besieged, taken by force, 406,a 10,40. Rendered to king Henrie the second, 107,b 20

Lincolne besieged,56,b 10. Taken, 272, a 10. Wonne by the French, 192,b 60

Lincolne castell, 6,a 40

Lincolne John the author of the insurrection on ill Maie daie, the grieues particularised in his bill for the cities behoofe, a great enimie to strangers,prosecuteth his information of greeuances by specialities, 840, b 10, 20, 40, 50,60. Indicted, & what laid to his charge, he is executed in Cheaplide, 843,b 40,60

Lincolnshiremen throw awaie their cotes the lighter to run awaie,674,a 20. In armes against Henrie the eight, 941, a 50,&c. They giue ouer their rebellious enterprise, 941, b 10. Submit themselues and receiue a new oth of fealtie, 941,b 20,30

Lisle yeelded vnto the French king, 304,b 40

Litleton a iudge of the common pleas, 702, b 10

Lizlus slaine, and what mischiefe thereof insued, 12,b 30

Loialtie of the citizens of Rouen vnto king John: note, 167,b 40. ¶ See Oth.

Loiterer described, 1050, b 20

London the onelie place for the Jewes to burie their dead, 101,b 20. When their burgesses were chosen commonlie called their councell,164,a 40. The bailiffes thereof committed to prison, and why, 171, b 40. Bridge repared, 172, b 10. Consumed with fier,176,b 10. Bridge on fier, 791. The kings especiall chamber,729,b 20. Wall part thereof newlie built,702,b 60. Sore vexed, assalted, & in sundrie places spoiled, & burnt, 689,b 10,&c 690,a 10,&c. when it first began to receiue the forme and state of a commonwelth,120,a 20. Of how manie wards it consisteth, 120,a 30. Men of armes & archers lie round about it twentie miles compasse as it were in campe,451,b 50. The armes thereof augmented by addition of a dagger, 436, b 20. Liberties seized into king Edward the firsts hands, 282,b 60. Confirmed, the rent of the farme of the shiriffes increased,274, b 40. The liberties thereof seized into Henrie the thirds hands, the shiriffes imprisoned,251,b 40,&c. Walls decaied and newlie repared, 256,a 40. The custodie thereof committed to the constable of the Towre: note, 256,b 20. Vnder the rule of prince Edward,&c: he appointeth the maior and shiriffes, 274,b 20. In charge of the bishop of Excester, 338, a 40. Bridge and the towre there taken downe, 1270, a 30. Serued with Thames water by pipes brought into seuerall houses, 1384, b 50. Where much hurt was done with wind,19,b 10. A great part of it burned to the ground, 14,b 10. And of the charter granted vnto the citizens by duke William, 15,a 60

Londoners prouident and pitifull in the time of scarsitie, 476,b 60, 477,a 10. Pursued by prince Edward, 268, a 10. Refuse to lend the king a thousand pounds, 477, b 50. Reuolt from the duke of Northfolke going against Wiat,1094,b 60. Take Wiats part, 1095. b 40. Receiuing of the duke of Summerset at his returne out of Scotland, 992,a 60. Keepe S. Barnabees daie holie daie, 1062,b 10. Redinesse to assist Edward the sixt in a motion & woorke of charitie, 1082, a 10, 40. They & gentlemen of courts by the eares,623,a 30. Skirmish with Jacke Cade and his rebels vpon London bridge,635,a 10. Prouidence for safegard of peace,647,a 50 Loiall and disclosers of treasons,428,a 60. Are spited and enuied at,421,a 20,30. Abused of strangers whereof followed the riot of ill Maie daie, 840,a 20,&c: b 10,&c: 841,842, 843,844. Interteine and banket the king of Denmarke, 878,b 10. Hated of cardinall Woolsie, 895, a 30,40. Set forth a power into France, 969,b 10. Lend Henrie the eight 20000 pounds,874,a 20 Glorious receiuing of Henrie the eight, and the emperor Charles,873,b 10,20. Stately and gorgious muster before Henrie the eight: note, 947,a 40,&c: b 10,&c. Conspire to take the empresse Maud, 53,b 60. Sue to king John for a maior and two shiriffes, 172,b 30. Sore afraid of the Cornish rebels,782,a 50. Resolue to receiue Edward the fourth, and reuolt from Henrie the sixt, 683, a 60. Grant fiue thousand marks to Edward the fourth, which were seized of the fiue and twentie wards, 704, b 60. Loiall to Edward the fourth: note, 689, b 20. Riot against the Jewes at king Richard the firsts coronation, 118, b 10,&c: 119,a 10, &c. Valiantnesse, & among them of two aldermen,690, a 50, b 20. Present monie to king Richard the first, 119, b 60. Large priuileges and liberties. 119,b 60. And the priuileges of their communaltie by whom granted, 131, b 30. Triumphant receiuing of king Richard the first into the citie, 141, b 60. Hardlie reported of by an Almaine lord, 141, b 60. Serue Richard the first in his buttrie at his coronation: note,143, b 40. Fowle disorder noted, and complained of to Richard the first, 149,a 40. Refused to fight against the lords, 459, a 10,60. Speciallie affraid of the French forces,451,b 30. In perplexitie whether to take part with Richard the second or with the nobles, 462,a 60. They incline to the lords,462 a 60. Receiuing of the duke of Lancaster, 505, b 40,50. Fauourers of wicklifes doctrine,440,b 20. Meet the K. and queene on Blackheath, 487, a 60, b 10, &c. Seale to blanke charters,&c: to win Richard the seconds fauour, 469, a 10. Euill reported of for their vnstablenesse, 457, b 20. Commended themselues to the fauour of Richard the second before the death of Edward,415,b 40. They submit their quarell with the earle of Lancaster to the kings order,416,a 10. Friends to the earle of Northumberland, 439,b 10. Riders of the rebels of Kent and Essex, 430, b 60. The lords of the land stand in doubt of them, 426, b 30. Pretitle confened of a thousand markes by king Henrie the third, 247, b 50. Gift to the duke of Bedford at his returne from beyond sea,491, a 40. Sued vnto to make choise of two to be their king, 1. a 40. Appointed to keepe the subsidie granted by the parlement, 418, b 50. Banished the citie, 283, a 60. Their magistrats deposed & new ordeined in their roome, 204,b 10. Haue free warren granted them of king Henrie the third, and other liberties,208,a 10. They & the constable of the towre at variance, 263, b 60. Outrage whetted with ill counsell,204 a 40. Haue free libertie to passe toll free through all England,208,b 30. Paie Henrie the third 5000 marks for a fine,208,b 40. Haue a grant to vse a common seale, 210, a 40. God deuotion towards the earle of Kent, 215, a 60. Terrified with thunder,216, b 10. Seruice at the mariage of Henrie the third, 219, b 40, 60. Cast in prison and depriued of their liberties, 270, b 50,60. Sworne to be true to Henrie the third and his heirs,264,a 30. Riot vpon the bishop of Salisburies men, 478, a 20. Grieuously complained of to the king, their liberties seized vpon, a gardian appointed to gouerne them, their liberties in part confirmed in part condemned, gifts presented by them to pacifie the kings displeasure, 478, all. More gifts giuen by them to the king, their liberties ratified,479,a 10,20. In great disorder, 265, a 60. Crueltie handled, their citie com-committed to a gardian or custos: note, 271, a 30, 40. Pardoned by Henrie the thirds charter, 271, b 20. Pardoned for receiuing the earle of Glocester into their citie, 273, b 40. Goldsmiths and tailors togither by the eares, 274, a 50. Rob the house of the lord Grete, 264, a 60. Wate Henrie the thirds plate to his great losse, 241, a 20. They and the abbat of Westminster at strife, 242, b 60. Receiuing in of the countesse of Pembroke, 231, a 50. Paie a tallage and are grieued, 238, b 10 Fined at fifténe hundred marks for receiuing a banished man into their citie, 236, a 30. Helpe Henrie the third at a pinch, 247, a 10, 20. Haue their liberties restored vnto them, 252, a 60. Called barons in derision, 247, b 60. Grédie dealing to the hurt of the commonwelth, 257, a 60 Agrée with the barons, 266, b 20. Spoiled at Croidon, 269, a 30. In an vprore chose new officers, 273, a 30. Glad to submit themselues to Henrie the third, put to their fine, 271, a 10. Game of wrestling, and what tumult followed, 204, a 10, &c. Take part with the quéene & hir adherents, 338, all, 339, a 10. Vnrulie & giuen to sedition: note, 338, b 10. Set prisoners at libertie out of the Towre, 338, b 50. Lotaltie, auouching to kéepe traitors out of their gates, 338, a 10. Behead a citizen & a bishop in a riot, 338, b 10, 30 Will not permit king Edward the thirds iustices to sit within the citie, 361, b 20. Haue their franchises confirmed, 343, a 40. Lent Edward the third monie to be paid againe out of the subsidie monie, 357, b 40. In armes against the duke of Lancaster, ment to haue slaine him, 412, a 20. Outrage for words spoken to their bishop, 412, a 20. Commended, 1402, b 10. Foure thousand trained by for seruice in the field, 1402, a 60, b 10. Muster before quéene Elisabeth at Grénewich, 1184, b 10. Their threefold plague, 1208, a 20. Houshold stuffe sold by a common crier or belman, 1207, a 50. Trained vp in the field, 1228, a 50, 60. Loue and hartie goodwill towards quéene Elisabeth, 1377, a 20. withstand duke William, 1, b 10. Loue to quéene Elisabeth manifested on the daie of hir coronation: note & obserue it well, 1172, 1173, &c: Their farewell vnto hir, going out at Templebar 1178, b 60. Hir last words to them by waie of promise, 1179 a 30

Lone of monie taken by Henrie the eight, 957, a 10

Longchampe. ¶ Sée Bishop of Elie.

Longland doctor misliketh of Henrie the eights marriage with his brothers wife, 906, b 20

Lords created and made, 480, a 20. Conspiring against Richard the second. ¶ Sée Noblemen.

Lords and ladies put out of the court, &c. 463, a 50, &c.

Lords of misrule. ¶ Sée Ferrers.

Losange. ¶ Sée Herbert.

Losecote field, 674, a 20

Lotterie at London called the great lotterie, 1211, a 60, b 10

Lou Hugh how he became earle of Chester, 20, a 10, His death and what issue he had, 20, a 40

Loue that Edward the second bare Piers Gaueston, 320, a 20. ¶ Sée Piers Gauestion, and Edward the second. Of the people to the lord Cobham: note, 544, b 30. Of Henrie the seuenth to his wife ladie Elisabeth, 768, a 60. Of a mother naturall and kind: note, 717, 718, 719, 720, 721. Of the duke of Britaine to the earle of Richmond incorruptible, 747, b 10, &c: 748, b 20. Vnlawfull of Richard the third towards his neece, 751, a 50. Of naughtie men conuerted into deadlie hate, 739, b 10, &c. Wanton misleadeth and bréedeth discord, 672 b 40, 50. Of the people to the earle of warwike: note, 679. ¶ Sée Earle of warwike in Henrie the sixts time, & Edward the fourth. Of a concubine to hir paramour, 149, b 60. Of king Richard the second to the earle of Oxford, & earle of Suffolke: note, 454, a 10, 20, 30, 40. ¶ Sée more in Earles. Of the father to the children, preferment to the mother, 486, a 10. Betweene man and wife exemplified, 481, a 20. Of a Jewish woman made a decon, plaid the apostata, 203, b 60. Gotten by liberalitie and prodigalitie, 414, b 60 Blind & brgodlie, 586, a 30. And lust with the danger & mischiefe of both, 545, a 40, 50, &c. Vnlawfull, with the shamefull end thereof, 937, b 40. Therein is losse euen of life: note, 41, b 30: note, 423, b 20

Loue French, 699, b 60

Louell William held the castell of Carle, 48, b 60. Lord, his rebellion, he escapeth, 764, a 60 b 30. Arriueth in Flanders, continueth conspirator against Henrie the seuenth, 766, a 20. Knight, sent ouer to Calis with a power, 831, b 40, 50

Louiers besieged, 609, a 20. And yeelded vp, 564, a 60, b 10

Louthian spoiled by the English, 89, a 60

Low countries. ¶ Sée States.

Lucie Richard lord chiefe iustice of England deceaseth, 103, a 50

Ludlow swone by king Stephan, 50, b 10

Lumlete lord founder of surgerie lecture in London: note, 1349, a 20

Lupus. ¶ Sée Lou.

Lust of william Rufus, 18, b 10 ¶ Sée Loue.

M.

MAgdalen counterfeted to be king Richard the second, 515, a 50

Magistrats authoritie great & peremptorie, 1042, b 10. Are to be honored both in speech & maners, 1043, a 50

Magna charta, 308, b 10, 306, a 40, 185, b 60. Promised to be maintained, 248, a 40. Confirmed, 207, a 40, 312, b 20

Magnanimitie. ¶ Sée Quéene Elisabeth.

Magnus, admerall of rouers his exploits, 23, a 50

Maid smiteth a maior in the face, 1021, b 10

Maie daie the euill. ¶ Sée Rebellion of Lincolne.

Maidstone, esquire, offereth to fight in his ladies quarell, 527, b 40

Maigame rotall, 806, a 30, 809, a 20, &c.

Mainprise, 144, a 50, 513, b 60

Maior or Maire, and what the word signifieth, 172, b 50

Maior of London sworne to be true to Henrie the third, 264, a 30. In information against him to king Henrie the third, 256, b 10. Discharged of his place for a while, 256, b 20. Condemned to prison and all his goods confiscat, 446, a 50. A seuere punisher of adulterie in his time, 440, b 10. Fiue aldermen knighted, 436, b 10. His words at the rebellion of Wat Tiler, 432, b 60. And thirtéene imprisoned at Windsore, 478, a 50. Commended for his carefull prouision of corne from beyond the seas in the time of dearth, 476, b 10. His rash and vnaduised answer, 458, b 60. Iustlie commended, 452, a 40. And his brethren challenge all commers at tilts, 392, a 40, 50. Forced to take an oth, 338, b 10. And what order he tooke to see the kings peace kept: note, 326, b 60. Sworne, and went home in a grete cloke, 795, b 60. He and aldermen feasted by Edward the fourth: note, 705, a 30. Accused of treason: note, 670, a 40. Departeth from sargeants feast discontent because he sat not highest in the hall: note, 667, b 30. His office and authoritie, 120, a 40. One for the space of twentie and one yeares, 172, b 40. And thirtéene the first that were chosen, 172 b 20. And bailiffes chosen out of the number of fiue and thirtie burgesses, 164, a 40. And thirtéene resisted at Clerkenwell, 641, b 10. And welcomming home of Henrie the fift out of France, 556, a 30. That first ware a rich collar of gold and of whose gift, 961, b 10. Of councell vnto Henrie the eight, 961, a 60, b 10. In a gowne of crimson veluet, 931. And aldermen of London in blacke mourning arraie come to Henrie the eight with a heauie sute of ill Maie daie, 843, b 60, 844, a 10. Sometime an officer: note, 764, b 60. Feast first kept at Guildhall, 789, b 30. ¶ Sée Contention, London, and Soldiors.

Maiors feast none kept at Guildhall, 1206, a 30, 1211, b 60, 1260, a 10, 1262, a 10

Maior of Bodmin in Cornewall hanged, 1007, a 10. Of Excester smitten on the face by a maid, 1021, b 10, 20. Of Norwich his order of receiuing the quéene Elisabeth, 1287, a 30, 60, 1288, a 10, &c. Oration in English which he made to the quéene, 1288, a 50, 60, b 40, &c. His gift presented vnto hir 1289, a 10, 20. Purposing to make another oration to the quéene, is willed to forbeare, & while, 1198, b 20. He is knighted, 30.

Malcolme king of Scots destroieth manie places in the north parts, 10, a 60. Sendeth to duke William to treat of peace, 10, b 40. Doth homage to duke William for Scotland, 10, b 50. Marieth Edgar Ethelings sister, 6, a 30. Commeth to Glocester, 20, b 60. Did fiue times waste Northumberland: note, 21, a 10. Enioieth the earldome of Huntington, 66, b 50. Inuadeth England, sueth for peace, 19, b 20, 20, b 60. He and his sonne slaine, 21, a 10.

Malcontentment, 738, b 60, 790, a 10. Grew to a conspiracie, 941, a 20, 30, &c. Of the earle of Montague: note, 32, b 10. Of Parrie because he might not haue preferment to his liking 1383, b 60. ¶ Sée Counsell, Parrie, and Rebellion.

Malcus made and consecrated bishop of Waterford, 22, b 60.

Malice of duke william against the English, 9, a 10. ¶ Sée William. of Leofwin bzeketh into murther, 12, b 30. Betweene the two dukes of Burgogne and Orleance, and the cheefe cause thereof, 529, a 40. Of the earle of Cornwall to the citie of London, 251, b 50. Betweéne king Richard the second, and the duke of Glocester, 487, b 40. Of cardinall Powle against king Henrie the eight, 1134, b 60. A fresh betwixt Edward the fourth and the duke of Clarence, brethren, 703, a 30. Of the earle of Warwicke against Edward the fourth: note, 670, b 10, 50, &c. Of Richard the first and the French king one against an other, 146, a 60. Of the French king against Richard the first: note, 141, a 20. Betweéne dukes of Summerset and Yorke: note, 625, b 40, 50. Of the duchesse of Burgogne to the line of Lancaster, 776, a 10. ¶ Sée Margaret. Betweéne the duke of Summerset and the duke of Yorke: note, 612, b 10, Of the cardinall Wolsete mortall against the duke of Buckingham, 855, b 10, 66. Of the Frenchmen and their dogged stomachs, 840, a 20, &c. Against Henrie, breaking out into an intent of murther, and the partie executed, 223, a 40, &c. Of the lords against the earle of Cornewall increased: note, 319, b 10. Betwixt great estates about matters of marriage, 774, a 60.

Malice inconuenient vnto the malicious: note, 17, a 10. Cloked bursteth out, 264, a 40. Inferreth murther: note, 489 a 60, b 10. Thirsteth after reuenge: note, 304, b 30. And the nature thereof, 1418, b 60, 1419, a 10. Bursteth out into murther: note, 673, a 30. Wherevpon arise slanders, 63, b 60. Trancleth still to reuenge, 641, b 60. To appeale, a labour dangerous, 646, b 60. In a realme, the mortall mischiefe thereof, 630, b 60. Notable dissembled: note, 622, b 60. How mischiefe soulie it worketh to reuenge, 962, b 40, &c: note, 590, b 60, 591, a 10, &c.

10,&c. Content with no reuenge,431,a 20,&c. ¶ See Enuie, Hate, and Reuenge.
Man Ile taken by Robert Bruse,318,b 10. ¶ See Harold.
Manners knight lord Ros created earle of Rutland,892, a 50
Manners Thomas knight his militarie seruice in Scotland, 1216, b 40,&c. ¶ See Erle, and Rutland.
Manwod lord cheefe baron of the exchequer a good commonweiths man: note his deeds, 1377,1378
Mallet William shiriffe of Yorke and his familie taken prisoners and put to ransome,7, a 20
Marble stone wherupon kings of Scots sat at their coronation, translferred to Westminster, 301,a 10,20
Marchades a valiant capteine, 154,b 30.155,b 40. A good seruitor in warres, 158,b 30
Marcher earle of Mercia flieth into Scotland,6,a 30. Imprisoned by William Rufus, 16, a 30. Reconciled vnto king William,9,b 40. Withdraweth from the battell against duke William,1, a 30. Flieth into Elie for defense against duke William, 10,840.
Margaret Dowglasse prisoner in the Tower, 940, b 50. Pardoned, released, 945, a 10
Margaret the wife of K. Henrie while not crowned,76,b 60
Margaret sister to earle Hugh of Chester, married to John Bohune, 20,a 40
Margaret and Christine, the sisters of Edgar Etheling,6, a 30
Margaret the daughter of king William of Scotland maried to erle Conan, 7,b 30
Margaret daughter to the queene of Scots and of the earle Angus borne, 838 a 10
Margaret daughter vnto the French king affianced vnto Henrie the kings sonne of seuen yeres old,68,a 50. Crowned queene, 82,b 60
Margaret duchesse of Salisburie beheaded, 703,b 10
Margaret sister to Edward the fourth, sent ouer to the duke of Burgogne: note, 669, b 30,&c.
Margaret countesse of Leneux sent to the Towre,1208,b 20, Deliuered out of the Towre, 1209,b 60
Margaret duchesse of Burgogne, sister to Edward the fourth, malicious to Lancaster house,765,b 10. Hir malice against the line of Lancaster,776,a 10. Hir new counterfet of Richard Plantagenet, 775,a 60
Margraue of Baden and his wife great with child come to London,1208,b 40. She is deliuered of a child, b 50. The queene giueth the name, 60. ¶ See Marquesse.
Marie the eldest daughter vnto Henrie the eight borne,838, a 30. Remoueth to Fremingham castell, 1085, b 40. To Keninghall in Northfolke, hir letters to the councell, with hir chalenge vnto the crowne by right of succession, 1084,b 30,40. with their answer, 1085,a 40. Assembleth hir powers against the duke of Northumberland, 1086,b 40,50,&c. Wind and wether helpe hir 1087,a 20. Proclaimed queene by the nobilitie, for feare of afterclaps,1087,a 50. ¶ See Queene.
Marie queene of Scots. ¶ See Queene of Scots.
Marie countesse of Derch, Henrie the first his daughter, drowned, 41,b 10
Marriage of kings, and first of king John after his diuorse, 161,b 60. Of Edward the first to the ladie Margaret, sister to the French king,309, a 10. Of Edward the second and the French king his daughter, ladie Isabell,318,b 50. Of Edward the thirds sister to the duke of Gelderland, 354,b 60. Of Edward the fourth to Elisabeth Grete being an offensiue mariage: note,667,b 60. 668, a 10,&c. Of Henrie the third with Elenor daughter to the earle of Prouance,219,b 30. Of Edward the first and the yong Scotish queene Marie, 959, a 40. Newlie moued, proceedeth not,980,a 10,20 &c. Written of to the nobles of Scotland: note,999, a 20, &c. Of Henrie the fift to ladie Katharine, the French kings daughter, crowned queene, 578, b 50, 60. Solemnitie thereof,579,all. Of Henrie the first to the earle of Armenaks daughter concluded, note,624,a 10.624,b 60. To the ladie Margaret daughter to Reiner king of Sicill and Jerusalem,625,a 40. Of Henrie the seuenth vnto the daughter of Edward the fourth,764,b 40. Of Henrie the eighth and the duchesse of Alanson the French kings sister reported,897,a 60. With his brothers wife yet againe in question,906,b 20. Thought vnlawfull, and commeth vnto iudgement, 908, a 60, b 50, Common argument in sermons,928,a 20. Yet againe in question with the determinations of diuers vniuersities concerning the same, 923, b 20,50,924,925,926. Debated 906,b 60. By consent of all the vniuersities in christendome iudged vnlawfull: note, 912,b 60,913,a 10,&c. With the ladie Anne Bullen, 929,a 60. With the ladie Anne of Cleeue concluded,947,b 60. Solemnised, 950, a 10,&c. Iudged vnlawfull,952,a 60. With the ladie Katharine Par, 960,a 30. Of Richard the second to the French kings daughter, 487,a 10. With the emperors sister,439,b 50. And the Emperor of Germanies daughter,428,b 50. Of Richard the third vnto the ladie Anne, daughter to Richard earle of Warwike,733,b 60. Betwixt Richard the third and the earle of Richmonds neece, offensiue, 752,b 50.
Marriage of princes, and first of Edward the first his eldest sonne and Philip daughter to the earle of Flanders, offensiue,296,b 60 297,a 10. Of Edward prince of Wales and the ladie Marie daughter to the earle of Henault, 337, b 30. To the earle of Warwikes daughter,674,b 60. Betwixt Henrie the kings sonne seuen yeares old,&c. 68,a 50. Of Richard, Henrie the thirds brother to the ladie Bonaria, 231,b 50. Betwixt Henrie the thirds sonne and the king of Spaines daughter,248, b 40. Of Edward, Henrie the thirds sonne, vnto king Alfonsus daughter,249,b 60. Of Edward the thirds second sonne, lord Lionell, vnto the duke of Millans daughter, 400,a 60. His intertainment at Surrie, his receiuing into Millan, b 10
Marriage of honourable men, and first of the erle of March and the daughter of Owen Glendouer,521,a 20. Of the lord Monchenlies daughter, to william de Valence Henrie the thirds halfe brother, 240,a 20. Of the lord William Grete with the wife of Paule Penier,244, b 60. Of earle Thomas of Flanders, and Jone the widow of Ferdinando, 224, a 60. Of earle Rafe of Chester vnto three wiues,215, b 40. Betweene the emperor Frederike, and Henrie the thirds sister,219,a 50. Of the earle of Cornewall and the countesse of Glocester,213,b 50. Of the duke of Lancaster with a ladie of meane estate: note,485, b 60. Of the duke of Lancasters daughter to the king of Portingall,450,a 10,20. Of earle Bolinbroke of Derbie to the daughter of earle Bohune of Hereford,448,b 20. Betweene the prince of Spaine and the duke of Lancasters daughter,450, b 40. Of Imbrole Dudlie earle of warwike to the earle of Bedfords eldest daughter,1208,b 60. Of Edmund earle of Cambridge to the ladie Constance daughter to the king of Spaine,406, b 60. Of John of Gant duke of Richmond, to the duke of Lancasters daughter, 392,a 30, Promised by constreint of the earle of Flanders and king Edward the thirds daughter, 379, b 30. Of Piers de Gaueston and the daughter of the earle of Glocester, 318, b 40. Of the lord Courtneie with king Edward the fourths daughter, 790,a 40. Betwixt prince Arthur and the ladie Katharine daughter to Ferdinando not fullie concluded, and whie 787,b 60,788,b 30. ¶ See Katharine. The solemnitie of the same, 789, a 30. Of the lord Courcie and the king of England king Edward the third his daughter, 397,a 60. Betwixt the king of Castile and the ladie Marie the king his daughter of ten yeres old, 795,b 50,60. Moued betwixt the king of Scots and Margaret the eldest daughter of king Henrie the seuenth,785, b 60. Of the earle of Kent to a daughter of lord Barnabe of Millane: note, 535,a 40. Betwixt the earle of Glocesters sonne and the daughter of the lord Gue of Angolisme, 247, b 30. Purposed for the earle of Richmond with Walter Herberts sister, but disappointed,752,b 60. Concluded betwixt the prince of Rothsaie and the duke of Suffolks daughter,747,a 40. Of the king of Scots and king Edward the fourths second daughter treated vpon, 705,a 40. Betweene the king of Scots sister and the yong prince of wales, 665, a 60. Betwixt the duke of Burgognes sonne and heire with ladie Margaret sister to king Edward the fourth,668,b 10, 669,a 10,&c. Of the duke of Clarence with the earle of Warwikes eldest daughter, 671,b 60. Of duke Arthurs mother to Guie de Towers by a dispensation, 160, b 60. Of the duke of Bedford with the erle of S. Paules daughter,607,b 60. Of the duke of Glocester with the wife of the duke of Brabant, he alue: note,586, a 30. Betweene the earle of Richmond and king Edward the fourths daughter accorded vpon by oth,745, b 20. Betweene the duke of Bedford and the sister of the duke of Burgognie,586,a 40.
Marriages of queenes and honorable women, and first of the countesse of Kent of hir owne chosing: note, 534, b 30,&c. Of king Henrie the fourths daughter to the king of Denmarke,532, a 10, 20. Of queene Isabell to king Richard the second, widow to the duke of Orleance his son, 519,b 20. Of king Henrie the fourths sister vnto sir John Cornwall,518,b 50. Of king Henrie the fourths daughter Blanch to the duke of Bauier,520,b 10. Of the countesse of Penbroke sister vnto king Henrie the third to Simon Montfort,222,b 10. Of ladie Jone king Henrie the thirds sister vnto Alexander king of Scots,203, b 30. Of queene Isabell Henrie the thirds mother to the earle of March in France,202,a 60,b 10. Of the ladie Jone de Courtneie king Richard the second his halfe sister to the earle of saint Paule, 424, a 60. Of two of Edward the firsts daughters to two noble men, 285, a 50. Of Elisabeth countesse of Holland king Edward the firsts daughter and the erle of Hereford,311,b 10. Of the ladie Elen king Edward the firsts daughter, to the duke of Bar a French man; 290,a 60. Of Elisabeth king Edward the firsts daughter vnto the earle of Holland,301,b 50 Of the countesse of Glocester with sir Rafe Monthermer, 295 b 60. Of Marie queene of Scots with Henrie Stuard eldest sonne to the erle of Leneux, 1208, b 10. Of the countesse of Arthois married to the duke of Burgundie 401,b 60. Of the countesse of Kent a widow and the prince of wales: note,395,a 50. Betweene the ladie Jane sister vnto king Edward the third and the king of Scots,347,b 50. Of an earles two daughters to two brethren,322,a 10 Of the ladie Margaret daughter to king Henrie the seuenth to James the fourth king of Scots, 788,b 30,789, b 10. Of an earles daughter to an errant rascall and traitorous rebell, 780, a 40. Of the duchesse of Britaine and Charles the French king 771, b 40. Of the ladie Margaret vnto duke Charles how beneficiall to king Edward the fourth, 676, a 10. Of the French ladie Bona to the duke of Millain, 668, a 50. Of queene Marie with Philip prince of Spaine, of some liked, of most misliked: note, 1093, a 40, &c: b 10. Agreed vpon in parlement, 1102, b 10 Solemnised, with an abstract of the conditions of the same, 1118, b 10, 40, &c: 1119, a &c: 10, 1120, a 10. Of king Johns daughter ladie Jane vnto the earle of March, 182, b 60. Of Isabell to king John got him ennie, 164, a 60. Of queen Katharines mother to Henrie the sixt, with Owen Teuther, 615, a 60. Of the ladie Elisabeth vnto Edward the fourth, 615, b 30. Of the queen of Scots and the Dolphin of France, 1056, b 60. Betweene the ladie Marie Henrie the eights daughter, and the king of Scots, purpoled, 883, b 50. Betweene the ladie Marie eldest daughter to Henrie the eight, and the Dolphin of France pretended, 848, b 10. Of queene Katharine and Henrie the eight, 801, a 10. Of the ladie Elisabeth, now queene, to a Spaniard solicited, 1157, b 10. Moued in the parlement, and how answered by hir selfe, 1181, a 20, 40, &c: Sued vnto out of Denmarke, 1185, b 10, 20. Of a gentlewoman in slight to a king, 6, a 30

Mariage forren, and first betweene the king of France and the ladie Margaret, eldest daughter to Henrie the seuenth, 791, b 10. Betweene the French kings daughter and Richard the second treated of, 485, b 30. Betweene the Dolphin of France, and Edward the fourths daughter treated vpon, 703, b 60. 704, all. Betweene the French king and the ladie Marie sister to Henrie the eight, who should haue beene wife to the prince of Castile, 832, a 60, b 10, 20, 30, 40, 50, 60. Betweene the French kings daughter and the king of Englands sonne, 94, b 30. Betweene the Dolphin, and the princesse of Scots, 1141, b 40, 60. Of Lewes the French kings sonne and Blanch the neece of king John, 161, b 10. Of the French king and the emperor Charles his sister, 889, b 40. Made alliance betweene the pope & the French king, 847. b 30

Mariage in generall, and first of one offchsiue: note, 222, b all. Fatall, 211, b 60. Confirmed from Rome with monie, 222, b 60. Within the degrees of consanguinitie, dispensed withall by the pope, 392, a 30. Not to be forced: note, 376, b 40. Malice betwixt great personages as touching the same, 774, a 60. One intended, another begun and ended: note 667, b 60, 668, a 10, &c. A spirituall thing, and how it should be made, 726, b 30. Purchased with monie, 84, b 10, within the seuenth degree of consanguinitie dissolued, 30, b 60, 31, a 40. Broken off & reuenged, 636, b 10. Infortunate and vnprofitable to the realme of England, 625, a 60. Betweene children to compose strife, and establish amitie betweene the parents, 1062, a 50 Of princes is not a matter to be trifled in, 980, a 10, 20, &c. Vndertaken without the kings assent, maye treasonable: note, 940, b 50

Mariages two royall, 788, b 30. Three betweene honourable estates: note, 1803, a 60. Mistrusted to sort to an euill end: note, b 10. ¶ See Contracts.

Mariners of the cinque ports at deadlie debate: note, 304, b 30. Commended, 281, a 40. Curste the archbishop of Canturburie and the earle of Penbroke, 169, a 10. ¶ See Seafaring men.

Marisch the traitor executed: note, 230, b 10

Marlelwine and Gospatrike nobles of Northumberland, flie into Scotland, 6, a 30

Marquesse of Baden returneth into his owne countrie, 1209, a 30. Valiant in chiualrie, 833 b 60. Henrie the eight and he make a chalenge at iusts, 835, b 10. Entreth into Scotland, and burneth diuers townes, 875, b 60. Receiueth the emperour Charles at Graueling, 873, a 60. Forsaketh the earle of Richmond, 752, b 10. Committed to the Towze, 766, a 50. Deliuered out of the Towze, 768, a 60. Of Excester condemned, executed, 946, a 20, 50. Montacute suffereth Edward the fourth to passe by him, 680, b 20. Slaine, 685, a 20. Of Northampton sent into Norfolke to represse the rebels, 1033, a 20. Maketh shift to escape danger, 1034, b 60. Of Suffolks request, 625, b 60. Chefest in fauour with king Henrie the sixt and the queene, 626, b 40. Created duke, 627, b 30

Mart of all English commodities kept at Calis, 778, a 20.

Martine Sward a baliant captaine of the Almans assistant to the erle of Lincolne against Henrie the seuenth a peerles warrior, 766, a 60, b 50. Is slaine, 767, a 10

Marton college in Oxford built, 282, b 60

Martyrdome, marke the causes thereof, 253, b 20

Martyrs in queene Maries time, the number great that were executed, 1363, a 40

Martyrs fit for the popes kalendar, 1363, b 50, 65, 1366, a 10, &c.

Masse, 848, b 60. Royall, 806, b 60. 812, a 40. 835, a 40. Both the kings of England and France, 861, a 40. With intended mischefe, 515, b 50. Before queene Elisabeth, at hir being in Norwich, 1296, a 40. In the French court of English lords, 860, b 30. Of graue and ancient courtiers, and likewise of youthfull, 852, b 40, &c. Of lords and ladies, 850, a 50, &c. And a banket, Henrie the eight in person present at the cardinals house, 921, b 60. Stately to solace the emperor and his companie, 861, b 60

Maston knight, his friendlie part towards the duchesse of Suffolke, 1144, b 60. Secretarie vnto the French king, 1184, a 30

Masse, from the which a bishop and his deacon could not be feared by a tempest, 211, b 50. whereat king John gaue a pretie deuise iest, 196, b 20. Concerning the celebrating of the same, &c: note, 484, a 40, &c. Abolished, 996, b 10. ¶ See Iesuits and Priests.

Mathyd. ¶ See Maud.

Matreuers lord, captaine of Bateux, 560, b 60

Maud borne, afterward empresse, 30, a 30. Besieged in Oxford, 55, a 60. She escapeth, b 10. Flieth by night out of London, 54, a 10. Armie put to flight, 54, a 30. Goeth to Bristow, 51, b 30. Followeth the victorie, she commeth to London, 53, b 40. Besieged in Arundell castell, 51, b 10. Landed in England, and what power she brought, 51, a 50. Married to the earle of Anion, 43, a 50. True to the crowne of England, 43, a 10. Counselleth hir selfe to be naught of hir bodie, 63, b 50. Hir decease, 75, a 60

Maud duke Williams wife, the daughter of earle Baldwine, earle of Flanders, 15, a 60. Crowned queene, 6, a 60. Hir decease, 15, a 40

Maud daughter and heire to Robert Fitzhammon, Henrie the first his base sonne, 37, a 50

Maud the wife of Henrie the first, a professed nun, 29, a 10

Maud Henrie the first his daughter affianced to the emperor Henrie, 35, a 10

Maud queene deliuered of a daughter after hir own name, 30, a 30. ¶ See Queene.

Maunes a citie in Normandie besieged and deliuered, 23, b 20. Besieged and taken, 158, b 10. Lost by treason of the citizens, recouered, 598, a 50, b 30 Yelded to the French king, 114, a 40

Maunt citie in France burnt by duke William, 14, b 40

Maupasse. ¶ See Vernon.

Maximilian king of Romans, prisoned at Bruges by the townesmen, 770, a 40. He and Henrie the seuenth agree to plague the Frenchmen, the cause of his malice, he dealeth dishonestlie with the king of England to his great vexation, breaketh promise with him, 774, a 60, b 20, 30. Incourageth his men to plate the men, 822, a 40

Meaux besieged by the English men, taken by assault, 581, a 50, b 50. The conditions of the surrender thereof vnto Henrie the fift, 582, a 50

Meking burnt in Smithfield, 953, a 40

Meilent. ¶ See Erle.

Melune vicount discouereth the purpose of Lewis and the English barons, his death, 193, b 10

Melune besieged by king Henrie the fift, 576, b 60. Yelded vp to Henrie the fift, 577, b 20

Men barbarous brought from the new found Iland, 789, b 60

Mendmarket. ¶ See Umfremill

Mendoza the Spanish Ambassador. ¶ See Throckmorton Francis.

Mercia an earldome, 1, a 30

Mercie in a warrior, note, 549, b 20. 550, b 60. ¶ See Charitie.

Merchant of London hanged at Nottingham for murthering a merchant stranger of Genoa: note, 428 b 30

Merchants of England received into Antwerpe with generall procession, 783, b 40. Haze hindered by a restreint, 778, a 20. Restreined out of Spaine, 1206, a 10. Cuillie intreated in Dutchland, 1263 a 10. Suffeine great losse by sea, 1262, b 20. Complaine vnto queene Elisabeth of their wrongs, 1262, b 40. Proclamation for their free traffike as before, &c: 1267, b 10. Robbed of the Danish pirats, and haue great prises taken from them, 485, a 10. Murther a stranger Genoa, 422, b 60 Staied in Spaine, 905, b 60

Merchants strangers fauoured of king Richard the second, their goods restored, 453, b 60. A proclamation concerning them, 927, a 50. Staied in England, 905, b 60. Two of the stilliard dw penance for hereste, 892, b 60. ¶ See Strangers.

Measure of one length vsed through out England, 28, b 30 ¶ See weights.

Meta incognita. ¶ See Frobisher.

Meulane a strong towne yelded to the English, 571, b 60

Meutes Hercules. ¶ See Iusts triumphant.

Mice deuoure graile in Danske hundred, and how deuoured: note, 1315, a 60, b 10

Michaels mount how seated, a great fortification, 19, a 40

Middleton knight proclameth himselfe duke, 323, a 60

Midsummer watch, 1206, b 10, 1208, b 30. Wanteined, 1210 a 50. ¶ See watch.

Mildmais knight founder of Emanuell college in Cambridge: note, 1396, a 10

Mile end greene white so called, 1271, b 60

Miles Couerdale preacher in the time of Denonshire rebellion, 1023, b 60

Miles, vicar of saint Budes slaine, and the partie executed, 914, b 30

Milnain sworn and raised by Richard the first, 146, b 50

Millers man hanged for his maister, 1007, a 30

Milnall in Suffolke burned, 1210, a 20

Mines of gold & siluer in England, 413, a 40. ¶ See Siluer.

Ministers more fauoured than other men, 1201, a 40

Minsterworth knight executed as a traitor, 411, b 10.

Miracles of Fitzolbert wherby he was thought to be a saint, 149, a 20. Whereby Robert duke of Normandie was made king of Jerusalem, 29, a 60, wrought by Wallsane to his aduantage, 12, a 10, Sean (for soth) in the date of Campians execution, 1329, a 60

Miracles of the holie maid of Kent. 936, b 50

Mirth

Mirth, & that after it commeth heauinesse: note 26, b 40, 50 41, b 10.
Miserie vpon miserie, 422, b 60 423, a 10, &c. ¶ See Derth and Deth.
Mist thicke and blind, 373, a 20 Made Henrie the eight and his souldiers vnable to find the waie to his campe, 823 a 60
Mistrust in murtherers one of of another, 1063, b 60. Causeth carefull custodie, 586, a 60 b 10. On all sides, of all estates and degrees: note 173 a 20. An enimie to peace, 457, b 10, 60. Of king Henrie the third in his officers, 216, b 40 That the earls of Hereford & Marshall had of Edward the first, 307, a 30. Of the Flemings in the earle of Richmond, 359, b 20. That the dukes of Buckingham and Glocester had in each other, 736, a 50. Of duke Arthur in his vncle king John, 160, b 60. ¶ See Suspicion.
Mocke of Henrie the first against his brother Robert Curthose, 44, b 60. At the maior of Norwich, 1032, b 60 ¶ See Derision and Iest.
Mohineux constable of Chester castell, 460, b 60. Knight slaine: note, 461, b 10
Monasteries erected in the north parts at the late & trauell of three monks, &c: 11, a 20. When none left in all the north parts, 11, a 20. ¶ See Abbeies and Religious houses
Monie, two falles thereof, 1066, b 50. Henrie the sixts prime seales for some, 653, b 30. Refused to be lent purchaseth displeasure and reuenge, 162, a 40. Largelie giuen to maintaine war against the Turks, 164, a 20. Carried out of the realme by a legat: note, 170, b 10. Sutes preferred for it, 187, b 20. And what practises Gualo vsed to get it, 193, a 20 A perpetuall order of an hundred and foure pounds lent pearelie by course to certeine townes: note, 1092, a 60, b 10 Taketh liberties and priuileges, 119, b 60. And what shifts king Richard the first made for it, 120, b 40. And of inquisitions to get it: note, 153, b 40. Gotten with extortion to procure Richard the first his ransome, 139. a 60, b 10. To make it, offices set to sale by Richard the first, 142, b 40. Great summes gotten by Richard the first without making of recompense, 143, b 60, 144, a 10. The practises of Richard the first to get it: note, 144, a 10, 20. Much gotten for licences and grants of toll and turnie, 145, b 60. The meanes practised to get it: note: 145, a 60. Purchaseth fridoms, 102, a 50. Maketh marriages betweene great states, 84, b 10. Purchaseth fauor to a murtherer, 98, b 40 what shifts Edward the fourth made for it, 694, a 40, 50. The want thereof procureth peace, 696, b 50. The desire thereof an occasion to offend against dutie and honestie, 743, b 50, 744, a 50. The meanes that Henrie the seauenth practised to get it, 792, b 20. Scant, but bittels abundant, 353, a 10. Lent Edward the third by Londoners, 357, b 40. Imploied vpon the commonwealth, 1354, a 40, 50. Wast and fall thereof, 1193, b 50. Well imploied, 1311, b 40 Gathered by cardinals, 295, a 20. Edward the first his shifts for it, 280, a 50. Forren forbidden to go as currant, 309, a 20, 30. Edward the first his shifts for it, 292, b 50. Purchaseth the princes fauor, 496, a 10. Of practises to get it by Henrie the third, 208, b 60. what conseming shifts the pope vsed to get it out of England, 211, a 40. Gathered to confirme a marriage, 222, b 60. To get it, practise against practise, 243, a 50. And what indirect means to get it practised by the Romish clergie, 226, a 10, 20, &c. What shifts Henrie the third made to get it, 241, b 20. Procured to the procurers losse, 241, a 20. What shifts Henrie the third made to send it pope Innocent, 250, b 40, &c. Of the bishop of Herefords deuise to get some of the bishops, 251, b 10. More esteemed than like, 252, b 40. For lands mortgaged to haue it, 22, a 60, b, 20. Purchaseth fauor when nothing els would: note 25, b 40. Received to inforce an abiuration of christianitie, 27, a 40, Giuen and taken of the French king to raise his seege, 19, a 20. The shamefull shift of william Rufus to get it, 20, b 10. Purchaseth peace, 21, b 10. ¶ See Cardinall of Prayed, Couetousnes, Gifts, Inquisitions, Riches.
Monsieur. ¶ See duke of Alanson.
Monsieur Thermes capteine of Calis, his seruice, his determination to spoile king Philips countries, sicke of the gowt, 1150, a 10, 30, 50
Monmouth castell taken, 270, a 30
Monster borne of a woman, 1083, a 40. Maried, 1314, a 40 Of fourscore yeres old, 1313, b 60, 1314, a 10. Of a sow that brought out a pig of strange shape, 37, a 40
Monsters bred and brought forth in diuerse places of England, 1195, a 10
Monstreau beleged and taken, 576, a 50
Montargis recouered by the English, 606, b 10, ¶ See Frenchmen.
Monument. ¶ See Antiquities.
Mone in eclipse seene of king Henrie and his traine, 103, a 60, Mew appeered before his time, 247, b 40, A strange wonder touching the same, 245, b 30. Turned into a bloudie colour, 39, b 10. Strange fights about it, 102, b 30. Fiue seene in yorke, 163, a 50
Monke Eustace what he was, 201, a 60, Taken prisoner and beheaded, 201, a 60. Malcus. ¶ See Malcus. Samuell. ¶ See Samuell. When a wonder among the northeren people, 11, a 30. Carthusian apprehended, and an enimie vnto the pope: note, 225, a 60. Conference with the duke of Buckingham his erronsable practises, 863, a 60, b 10, &c. The last that was seene in monks clothing till queene Maries daies, 952, b 60
Monks, when and how they should inioin penance, 30, b 50. Should not be godfathers, 30, b 50. Should not hold nor occupie farmes, 30, b 60. At whose hands they should receiue parsonages, &c, 30, b 60. Hindered by the comming of the friers preachers, 26, b 30. Presumptuous stoutnesse, 154, a 60. Displace the secular priests at Durham, 13, a 50. Life, order, and profession what it should be, 18, b 60. Supported by Lanfranke, 18, b 10. Two striuing for preferment dismissed by a third, 18, b 60. Three purposed to restore religion in Northumberland, 11, a 10. Tilleux to whom the emperor was bountifull, 147, b 20. Couened by Richard the first, 144, a 10. Of Glastenburie dispersed into diuerse religious houses, 13, b 50. Plate the men against the abbat and his adherents, 13, b 40. Of Couentrie displaced, 129, a 20. Placed in the church and secular canons displaced, 152, b 50. Of Canturburie without knowledge of king John chose a new archbishop, 169, a 60. Banished, 171, a 30. Of the Charterhouse executed, 938, a 60. Of Christs church complaine to the pope of their archbishop, 153, a 20, Called Monachi de charitate, 27, a 10 white when and by whome begunne and brought into England, 26, a 60. Not priuileged as other churches conuentuall were, 173, a 60. Delt hardlie withall by king John, 162, a 40. Molested by king John diuerse waies, 163, a 10. Of Norwich. ¶ See Friers.
More knight late vndersheriffe of London, now of Henrie the eight his priuie councell, 841, b 50, The paines he toke to appease ill Maie daies riot, 842, a 10, 20. Speaker for the commons, his oration and behauiour in parlement, 876, a 50, 60. Answereth the oration of Faber in Henrie the eights behalfe, 895, a 10. Lord chancellor, his oration in the parlement, 910, b 10, &c. In enimie to protestants, 913, b 60. Deliuered by the great seale, 928, b 10. Beheaded, a iester and scoffer at the houre of his death, 938, b 10, 30. In some sort commended, deuoutlie giuen, in his kind, 939. a 20, 40.
More Edward. ¶ See Iusts triumphant.
More fields, ¶ See Archers.
Morgage of a dukedome for monie, 22, a 60. ¶ See Lands
Morgusion the midwaie betweene Bullen and Calis, 1061, b 20
Moris his deuise for conueiance of Thames water, &c. 1348, b 50
Morlis lord appeareth the erle of Saltburie, 513, a 50. He is mainprised, b 60. Slaine in battell against the French, 770, b 50
Morlets in Wetsaine sown by the earle of Surrie, 874, a 30.
Mortaigne. ¶ See Erle Mortaigne.
Mortalitie of people verie grieuous: note, 157, a 10. ¶ See Derth and Deth.
Mortmaine statute established, 280, a 10. Required to be repealed, 293, a 30
Morton doctor an old English fugitiue, a stirrer vp of rebellion in the north, 1361, b 30. His secret ambassage from Rome, 1362, a 30. ¶ See Bishop Morton, & Archbishop.
Mortimer and Iudeie banished, 269, b 10
Mortimer Hugh against Henrie the second, 66, a 10
Mortimer king Henrie the thirds lieutenant in Wales, 255, a 30. His reuenge against the Welshmen, 263, b 50
Mortimer lord of Wigmore proclamed traitor, 338, a 30. In what fauour with Edward the seconds wife, 340, a 50
Mortimer earle of March proclamed heire apparent to the crowne, 448, a 60, b 10. He ruleth all things at his pleasure 347, b 60. Enuieth Henrie the fourths aduancement, 511, a 30. His good seruice in Ireland, 440, a 30. Apprehended in Nottingham castell, 348, b 50. Beareth the blame of euill counsell, 347, b 20. Attainted, and fiue articles obiected against him, 349, a 40. Committed vnto prison in the Towre, 349, a 10. Breaketh out of the Towre: note, 334, b 60. Shamefullie executed, 349, a 60
Mortimers restored to the title and possessions of the earledome of March, 381, b 60
Mowbraie earle of Northumberland, 17, a 40
Mountacute. ¶ See Erle.
Mountcastor, now Newcastell, 11, a 10
Mountfort Robert, combatant, 67, a 20
Mountgomerie Roger earle of Shrewsburie, his wasting and spoiling, 17, a 50, 60. Reconciled to K. William Rufus, 17, b 30. Knight passed ouer the sea vnto the French king, his reward. 701, a 50, 60
Mountiole lord made generall of Tournai, 837, b 40. His stratagem, 965, b 50
Mountsorell betwixt Leicester and Lughburrow, 189, b 10. the castell beleged, 199, a 60
Mulbraie Robert earle of Northumberland highlie commended, 13, a 40, 50
Mummerie rotall, 806, b 60. ¶ See Maske.
Munition for warres, and of king Henrie the second his ordinance in that behalfe, 104, a 40. ¶ See Armour.
Murcherdoch king of Ireland, 22, a 30. His reuerence to Henrie the first: note, 45, b 30
Murren of cattell, 14, a 60. 21, a 30. 324, b 30. 249, a 60: note, 245, b 60. Vniuersall, 43, b 60. Made sicke beere, 323, a 40
Murther committed in Sussex by certeine gentlemen, and they executed: note, 954, a 10, 20. Of two captains, notablie punished by iustice in the deed doers, 1061, a 60. Most shamefullie Shamefullie committed by the meanes of a gentlewoman whoze being a wife: note, 1062, b 40, &c. Mercifullie vpon the yong erle of Rutland: note, 659, b 30. Most lamentable of the lord Scales, 654, b 60. Shamefull committed by the lord Sturton, & he hanged: note, 1133, a 10, 20. Intended against quéene Maries person, and the offenders executed, 1117, a 60. Of the marquesse of Montserrat, 134, b 40. Cruell of prince Edward, and how iustlie plagued and afterwards reuenged vpon the murtherers, 688 b 20. Of Henrie the sixt by the duke of Glocester, 690, b 60. Of the yong princes Edward the fift and his brother in the Tower, how dispatched, and how reuenged: note, 734, b 20, &c: 735, a all. Done vpon the prior of Sheene, 790, b 60. An earle arreigned for the same, 790, b 60. Committed vpon the king of Scots, 1209, b 60. Of a man by his prentise, 1213, a 10. Mercifullie done vpon a merchant, and the offenders executed: note, 1228, b 20, &c. Committed on the gaoler of Horsham, and the offender hanged in chaines, 1258, a 10 Most horrible committed by Anthonie Browne vpon George Sanders merchant, and the offenders executed: note, 1258, a 20, &c. Iet & other mischéefes by Peter Burchet, and he hanged, 1259, a 30 &c. Committed on a prentise & the offenders hanged, 1353, b 20 Of an vnnaturall brother committed vpon his brother naturall, 1270, a 10. Committed vpon a sargent, & the offender hanged vp in Cheape, 1310, b 60. Another at Tiburne for the like offense, 1311, a 10. Committed vpon a sargent and the partie hanged in Fléetstreet, 1348 a 10. Of one coll manie liues, 263, b 40. Heinous of a merchant stranger, 422, b 60. Done vpon Richard the second how abhorred of forren nations, 517, b all. Of Liuius how infortunatlie it fell out: note, 12, b 30. Committed at the high altar by an Italian: note, 275, b 30. For the which a yeoman of the gard was hanged vp, 812, b 10. Through couetousnes committed and punished, 937, b 50 Most vnnaturall: note, 605, b 40. Without mercie vpon a light cause, 118, b 40, &c. 119, a 10, 20. Punished with a fine, 122, b 30. Iet & fellonie combined, 1228, b 30. Committed and the partie hanged on Miles end, 1271, b 50. Punished by the purse, 224, a 30 Most cruell committed in Westminster church, 420, b 10 &c, 60. Wilfull, & an act against mediation for the same, 472, b 60. Reuenged with murther, 13, a 30. Punished with hanging in chaines, 914, b 30. Will not be concealed: note, 944, a 30. Reuenged by women: note, 605, b 60. Cannot be concealed: note, 1065, a 60, b 10, &c. Not redéemable with monie: note, 1121, b 30. Henrie the eight refused to heare it, but put it ouer to triall by common law, 853, a 10. ¶ Sée Slaughter and Burning in the hand, Reuenge, Temptation.

Murther of ones leige to preuent iustice: note, 1356, b 10, Desperat of the earle of Northumberland vpon himselfe being prisoner in the Tower: note, 1403, b 50, 60. The whole storie of the manner and order thereof, 1404, b 40, &c, to 1419. Desperat of ones leife. ¶ Sée Hankelloyd: note.

Murthers cõmitted by priests, 69, b 60.

Murtherer of his brother receiued into fauour, 98, b 40. Notorious. ¶ Sée Blacke Will.

Murtherers to be hanged by law, 115, b 10. Of Thomas Becket came to an euill end, 79, b 40.

Muscleburrow field. ¶ Sée Battell, Leith.

Muscouie a cold countrie: note 1083, a 60.

Musgrane a rebell, 943, b 60.

Muster of horsemen before king Edward the sixt at Greenewich: note, 1081, a 60, b 10, &c. Of Pensioners before quéene Elisabeth, 1211. a 60 Of Londõners before quéene Elisabeth at Greenewich, 1402, a 60, b 10. 1228, a 60. Merie triumphant before Henrie the eight, 947, a 40, &c, b 10, &c. At Greenewich before Q. Elisabeth, 1184, b 10

Mutinie in the English armie 250, a 40 973, a 40, 880, b 50, 837, b 50. Towards, among seruingmen, 1017, a 40. Of souldiors against their capteine, 1140, a 30. Betwixt the Englishmen and the townsmen of Lisbone, 124, a 40, Betwéene the English souldiors and the people of Wellins, 124, b 60. 125, a 10. Among souldiors with outragious disorder procuring execution, 1431, b 30 ¶ Sée Fraie, Riot, and Souldiors.

Muttrell besieged by the English, 965, a 30, 60, The siege thereat broken vp, 966, b 20.

N

NAuar, the king thereof his gentle offer to the English, 813, a 40. His kingdome gotten to the K. of Spaine, b 40. King without a realme, and white, 821, a 10. Hath Cherburg restored vnto him that was ingaged, 480, b 60. Taken by the Frenchmen, 398, a 40. Commeth ouer into England, his constancie suspected, 406, a 10. His roiall answer to the excommunication of pope Sixtus quintus: note, 1401, a 40, &c.

Naule roiall sent forth, 814, b 60 815, a 30. ¶ Sée Englishmen.

Naunts besieged by Edward the third, 364, a 60. By the Englishmen, 427, b 20.

Nauntwich in Cheshire burnt, 1356, a 30

Neal baron. ¶ Sée Mawpasle.

Necromancie. ¶ Sée Hed.

Neuill bastard Faucombridge, 689, a 50. A maister of mischéefe, 60. b 10, &c. Beheaded, 693, a 30

Neuill knight executed for rebellion, 953, a 60

Neuill discourreth the intended treasons of Parrie against quéene Elisabeth, 1383, a 10, b 50, &c: 1384, a 10, &c

Newes of heauinesse to Henrie the first, 41, b 10. That cast duke william in a furie, 6, b 30. That made the people in a great feare, 6, b 60. From the east, 111, a 60

Newarke castell built by the bishop of Lincolne, 50, b 20. Restored to the bishop of Lincolne, 202, a 30

Newberie spoiled by the earle of Wiltshire and others, 653, b

Newbolt a yeoman of the gard hanged, 812, b 10

Newcastell vpon Tine when founded, 12, b 10, Burnt by casuall fire, 241, a 60. ¶ Sée Montcaster. 11, a 10

Newgate builded, 540, a 60. Set on fire, 1132, a 10. The keeper whereof a stranger would haue murthered: note, 1132, b 30.

Newhall in Essex called Beaulieu, 852, b 30

Newhauen, the English fleete commeth afore it, 960, b 60 The French appoint to go out of it, 1200, a 60, b 10. A supplie of souldiors out of Essex arriue there, 1197, a 60, b 10. And out of Deuonshire, b 30. Greatlie infected with the plague, 1204, a 50. Articles of agrement touching the surrender, b 60. A new supplie of souldiors out of Northfolke, Suffolke, Wiltshire, and Glocestershire, 1203, a 10, 50. A fresh supplie of souldiors arriue there, 1202, b 20. An alarum thereto. 1196, a 60. Prises taken & brought thither, 1197, a 10, 20. A proclamation forbidding resort of souldiours thither without licence, 1202, b 40. The French king commeth to the campe lieng before it, 1205, a 60. The chéefe cause why it was péelded, b 10. Speciall persons that died of the plague there, b 20, 30. Pestilence transported thense to London, b 50

Newport besieged by Frenchmen, 771, a 10. Sacked and burnt by the Englishmen, 444, a 10.

New yeares gift. ¶ Sée Gift.

Nicholson alias Lambert burned, 946, a 10

Nigell. ¶ Sée Neal.

Nightingale parson of Cronball in Kent, his blasphemie in the pulpit, punished by God: note, 1128, b 60. 1129, a 10

Noble. ¶ Sée Coine.

Nobilitie of England rooted out and beggered by duke William, 9, a 10. Faine to flie, because of duke Williams tirannie, 10, a 40. Their liuings taken awaie by duke William, 5, b 10. In arms against him and his Normans, 6, a 10. Hated of him and his people, 6, a 20. Forsake their natiue countrie, 6, a 20. In seruitude to the Normans, 1, b 50. Greeuouslie fined by William Rufus, 20, b 10

Nobilitie true described, 1266, b 10 Compared vnto a riuer or flood, &c: note, 1263, b 30

Noblemen and king Richard the second at debate, 458, a 30. Indicted of diuerse offenses, 457, b 20. Speake one another of treason, 512, 513. That conspired against K. Henrie the fourth, 514, b 30, They come to Cicester, the battaile setteth vpon them in their lodgings, they set fire on their lodgings, their discomfiture and shamefull end, 515, b 10, &c. They doo yeeld themselues, 516, a 30, 40. Beheaded for conspiracie, 516, a 50, 60. Conspiracie, namelie of the Persies against Henrie the fourth, 521, b 10, &c. 522, 523. Executed, 530, b 30. Complaine to king Henrie the third of the popes collections, 232, b 10. Reuolting from Lewis the French kings sonne, 199, a 30. Taken prisoners, 200, a 60. That rebelled, in what perplexitie they were, 198, b 40, Their minds drawne from Lewis the French K. sonne, 197, b 40. Offended at Henrie the third, and not without cause, 216, b 60. That tooke part with and against Henrie the third, 264, b all. Proclamed traitors by Henrie the third, 217, a 10. That reuolted from Henrie the third, 266, a 20. Disgrace Henrie the third in a parlement, 240, b 50. Of rare qualities, 1257, b 10. What fort and the wals of a reaime, 1263, b 10. That went with the duke of Alanson ouer sea, 1329, b 50, 60, 1330, a 10, &c. Their vantgard distressed, they discomfited and executed, 688, a 40, &c, b 10. Diuers that stood against them executed, 464, a 20. At diffention, 451, b 40. Appointed to come in warlike maner to the parlement, 489, b 60. Apprehended imprisoned, and also indicted, 489, a 20, &c. At variance come to the parlement in armour, 439, b 10. Roughlie handled by Richard the second, 489, 490, 491, 492, 493. Against the duke of Summerset to displace him, 1057, a 20. 1058, b 10. Consult and also practise to diuert the succession of the crowne, and how euillie it proued, note: 1085, a 60, b 10, &c. 1086, 1087. Imprisoned for eating flesh in lent, 960, a 10. At daggers drawing and bloudshed within the Towre note, 722, b 10, &c. 723, a 10 Conspirators executed, 688, b 60. In armes against Edward the fourth vnder quéen Margaret, the place of their incamping, the ordering of their hoast, 687, a 60, b 40, &c. Conspire against Edward the fourth: note, 670, b 30, &c: 671, &c. At deadlie malice in Henrie the sixts time: note the whole storie, called to a treatie, brought to agree, 647, a 20. Proclamed traitors, 650, b 60. Their letters excusatorie to Henrie the sixt, 651, a 60, b 10, &c. Atteinted, 652, a 10. That continued true and loiall to king John, 175, b 60. Begin to mislike the match which they had made with Lewis, 193, b 40. Dealing with Richard the second as touching his deposing, 502, a 20, &c. ¶ Sée duke of Lancaster. Reuolting from king John to king Lewis, 192, a 10. Mistrusted and charged with treason, treason,457,b 10,60. Counsell how to preuent the perils pretended against them, counsell taken how to deale against them, their messengers to the king, 458, a 40,60, b 20,50 The Londoners refuse to fight against them, the lords take an oth togither to prosequute their purposed enterprise, seeke the fauour of the Londoners, come before the kings presence in westminster hall, their answer and grieues, 459, a 10,50,60, b 30, 40, 60. The king reprooueth their doings, cleered of treason by proclamation,460, a 10, 20, 30. Temper too far with the kings matters, and impeach his royalitie, 452, b 10, &c. Thirteene lords appointed to haue the gouernement vnder the king, 453, a 10,60, b 10. Come to London with a great armie, 461, a 40. Sent to the maior and citizens of London to vnderstand their meaning,462, a 50. Enter into London, the kings words touching their proceedings, they refuse to come vnto the Tower, but after serch made they come before the kings presence, they open their greeues to the king, 472, b 10, &c. Drowned, 41, b 10. Die, 108, a 20, 230, b 50, 228, b 50 ¶ See Death, Shipwracke.

Noise, ¶ See Sound.

Norham castell besieged by the Scots, relieued by the English,782, b 50,60. Deliuered vp to the Scotish kings hands, 825, b 40,50

Norimbega, ¶ See Raleigh.

Normandie mortgaged to William Rufus and for what, 22, b 20. Townes therein yelded to Henrie the fift, 562, b 20 Brought into Henrie the fift his subiection, hauing bene a long time from him detained, 571, a 30. Wone by the earle of Anion, 55, a 20. Inuaded by the French king, 39, b 50 Subdued vnto England on that day fortie yeres past that William Conqueror subdued England to Normandie, 33, b 10. Intermixed, 160, a 60 137, a 60. By the archbishop of Normandie, 151, a 60. Recouered by the French king after three hundred and sixteene yeares keeping: note, 167, b 60. Lost, the state thereof, and the causes of the losse, 630, b 50

Normans that came with William in the conquest of England, 2, b 40. Rebell, but are subdued to their smart, 612, b 30. Willinglie sworne English, 561, a 10. Afraid at Henrie the fift his arriuall, 559, a 40. Vnder duke Robert vanquished, 33, a 20, 30. Inclined more to Henrie the first than to D. Robert, 32, b 20. Their rule and the Frenches once England ceaseth, 116, b 40 Hit vpon by the English admerall, 290, b 10. Their possessions confiscated, 232, b 40 Wiue disherited, 232, b 50 Write to Henrie the third to take their part against the French, 210, a 50. Preferred to clergie mens rowmes and liuings, 9, a 10. Rebell against duke William beyond the sea and some subdued, 10, b 60 Their fashion and guise taken vp of the English, 5, b 10 They hate the nobles euen in the time of peace, 6, a 20. Lieng in garrison at Yorke and their dismall date, 6, b 60, 7, a 10. Pursued and slaine by the English, 6, b 30. Giue the Danes the discomfiture, 7, a 40. Haue the nobilitie & communaltie in bondage, 1, b 50 Plaie the diuels in wasting & spoiling, 17, a 60. Slaine by the English at Worcester, 17, b 10. Their line touching the heires male in whom ceased, 46, b 10. ¶ See William duke of Normandie.

Norris generall with three and twentie enlignes, 1350, b 20 Taketh the sconse of Lire, 1431, b 60. Other exploits by him done against the enimie, 1432, a 10, &c. b 30

Northhampton besieged, 185, a 50. Taken by force, 266, b 50

Northcountries pitifullie wasted by duke william, 7, b 40

Northerne men discomfit the Welshmen, 672, b 20. Spoile the towne of saint Albons, their valiantnes: note, 660, a 50. Rebellion and how suppressed, 942, a 10, &c. 943, a 10

Northerne pickers plaie the men, 818, a 60

Northumberland an eriedome, 1, a 30. Rebelleth against duke William, & is subdued, 6, b 10 Taken in possession of the Scots, 53, b 30. ¶ See Malcolme.

Northumbers ouer whom duke William placeth and displaceth diuerse nobles, 13, a 20 Kill Robert Cumin and his companie, 6, b 30

Nortons. ¶ See Rebels of the north.

Norwich how ancient, 1289, a 40. Besieged by the Normans, 11, b 30. Sacked, 272, b 10. Sorelie defaced with fire, 796, a 10. In commotion, their liberties seized into the kings hands, 626, a 60, b 10

Nottingham taken by the erle of Derbie, 92, a 20. The castell, 6, a 40. How seated, 60, b 50

Nouencourt yelded to Richard the first, 146, b 10

Nowell Henrie. ¶ See Iusts triumphant.

Nun. ¶ See Christine.

Nuns incontinencie, and displaced out of their house, 100, a 10. Not to be godmothers, 30, b 50

Nunries. ¶ See Abbeis and Religious houses.

O.

OBedience and what rigorous means duke William vsed to reduce the English thereunto, 5, b 10, &c. 6, a 40

Oferie Richard to his father Henrie the second, 109, a 60. Of the church of Scotland to the church of England, 97, b 10

Occasion taken to inuade England: note, 19, b 10. Taken of an inuasion, 212, b 40, 50

Odo bishop of Baieux, gouernor of England in duke Williams absence, 5, a 10. In armes against the earle of Cambridge, 11, a 50. Conspireth against his nephue William Rufus, 17, a 20. Erle of Kent, 13, a 60. 18, a 60. In armes against king williams frends in Kent, 17, a 30. Is sent into Northumberland to reuenge Walkers death, 12, b 20. Glad to submit himselfe for lacke of vittels, 18, a 10 Lost his liuings in England and returneth into Normandie, 18, a 10

Offendors couer their faults with contrarie causes, 1358, b 60

Offense. ¶ See Punishment.

Officer of the maior of London chosen shiriffe and lord maior, 764, b 60. ¶ See Portreue, Sargent.

Officers called to accounts, and of their fraudulent dealing, 149, a 10. Go beyond their commission: note, 139, a 60 Of king John oppresse the people, 183, b 50. About Henrie the seuenth abuse the common people extremelie, 792, b 10. The cause of manie mens vndoing and other trouble, 794, b 10. Changed throughout the realme, 645, b 60. Chosen by sound abuse, 543, b 40. Of the king of Spaine full of tyrannicall lordlinesse & villanie, 1335, a 50. New made, 509 b 40. Called to accounts, and restitution made out of hand with interest, 215, a 30. In displeasure with king Henrie for their deceit, 216, b 40. Called to accounts how they had spent the kings treasure, 218, b 50. Punished for negligent loking to prisoners, 228, b 30 Appointed in an vprore, 273, a 30. Displaced and others placed, 466, b 40, 60. Committed to the Tower, and new made in place of old discharged: note, 369, b 40, 50, 60. Complained of to king Edward the third and punished, 369, b 10. ¶ See Exchequer and Iustices.

Offices set to sale for monie, 142, b 40. Claimed at the coronation of Henrie the fourth, 510, a 20

Oldcastell knight accused of heresie, escapeth out of the Tower, 544, a 20, 50. Shifteth from place to place, he is laid in wait for to be taken, 560, a 60. Taken and wounded, executed, 561, b 20, 40

Oneile the great of Ireland made knight, 808, a 50

Opportunitie taken by the Welshmen to inuade England, 21, b 10. Not to be neglected, 694, a 30. ¶ See Occasion.

Oppression punished: note, 256, b 20. Of the poore communaltie whereto it grew. ¶ See Curates, Empson, Extortion Officers.

Orange prince commeth into England, 1126, b 20. Taketh order for the interteinment of the duke of Alanson, 1330.

Oration of the earle Baldwine to king Stephans armie, 52, b 50. Of the French king to a great assemblie he sitting in his royalties, 904, b 40, &c. Of the duke of Yorke made vnto the lords of parlement, 655, b 20. Of prince Edward to the French king taken prisoner, 390, a 30. Of the archbishop of Canturburie after the deposing of Richard the second, 506, a 10, &c. Of the bishop of Elie lord chancellor to the lords of the parlement house: note, 419, b 40. Of earle Marshall of Denmarke in the assemblie of peeres, 197, a 40. Of queene Elizabeth which she made to the parlement house: note, 1396, a 50, &c. Of the deputie of the states of the low countries vnto queene Elizabeth: note, 1411, a 60, b 10, &c. 1412, a 10, &c. In Latine and English of a Dutch minister to queene Elizabeth being in Norwich, 1293, a 40, b 50. Of queene Elizabeth to the vniuersitie in Latine, 1206, b 60, 1207, a 10, &c. Of queene Elizabeth by waie of answer in the parlement house touching a motion of marriage, 1181, a 40, &c. Of Henrie the fift to the king of France, 576, a 10. Of the duke of Buckingham to the maior of London, aldermen, and commoners in the Guildhall, 728, a 60, b 10, &c. Of Henrie the seuenth to his armie, 757, a 60. Of king Edward the fourth lieng on his bedhed: note, 713, a 50, &c. 708, b 50. Of a French herald to Edward the fourth vttered with boldnesse of face and libertie of tong, 695, b 40 Of the French king to an English herald, giuing him defiance, 695, b 60, 696, a 10, &c. Of Faber summarille set downe, 894, b 50. Of Empson to find fauor, 803, b 60. Of Henrie the eight in the parlement house, 971, a 20, &c. Of the French king before an honorable assemblie, and sauoring of displeasure, 902, b 60. Of sir Thomas Mowze in the parlement house, 910, b 10, &c. Of two heralds to the emperor Charles, 899, a 50. Of sir Thomas Mowze in the parlement, 876, a 50, 60. Of Cunstall made to the parlement, 876, a 20. Of the archbishop of Canturburie in the parlement summarilie touched, 812, a 60. Of Perkin Warbecke the counterfet vnto the king of Scots, 780, a 50. Of cardinall Pole in the parlement house 1122, a 60, b 10, &c. Of queene Marie in Guildhall to the Londoners, 1096, a 60, 1097, Is touching the restitution of abbeie lands, 1127, b 10, &c. Of archbishop Hubert of Canturburie vnto the lords at the crowning of king John, 158, b 60, 159, a 10 Of the bishop of Durham to his souldiors, 49, a 60. Of the earle of Chester to the earle of Glocester, 52, a 10. In Latine & English of Stephan Limbert schoolemaister in Norwich to queene Elizabeth at hir being there, 1294, b 40, &c. 1295, a 10, &c. The same highlie commended by the queene, 1296, a 20

Orator proud & presumptuous, 567, a 40

Order of the round table, the feast kept, 280, b 60. Of the garter founded: note, and the cause thereof, 366, a 50, &c.

Ordinances. ¶ See Clergie Ex officio.

Orkenie. ¶ See Englishmen.

Orleance besieged, a bulwarke there taken, 599, a 20, 40. The siege broken vp, 601, a 50

Osborne with a naule out of Denmarke

Denmarke arriueth in England, and whie, 6, b 50. He is proffered great kindnesse of duke William to depart out of the north countries, 7, b 40, 50

Dsmond bishop of Salisburie, made the seruice after Salisburie vse, 15, b 50

Dsneie abbeie when founded: note, 1080, b 20

Dsseltrie town in Wales burnt thrise in three yers, 1210, a 10

Dsulfe strangelie slaine by a theefe, 13, a 30

Oth for the confirmation of peace betweén the two kings of England & France done by proxe: note, 675, a 10, &c. b 10. Of obseruing the leage interchangablie made and taken of Henrie the eight and the emperor Charles, 873, b 50. Most wicked and disloiall of noblemen against their king, 674, b 60. Falsified by the lord Granuill, 586, a 10

Of fealtie to prince Edward, 226, a 10. Not to infringe the statutes of Oxford, 261, a 50

Cozozall receiued vpon the holie mysteries and sword of Thomas Becket, 303, b 40, Of fidelitie to Edward the third taken of the Flemings, 357, a 40. Concerning the peace betweéns the king of England and France, solemlie taken in parlement of the states: note, 395, b 10. Solemn of the second K of England to sée peace performed, 394, b 40. Of the nobles to be true to prince Richard after his fathers decease, 411, a 30

Of rebels ministred vnto all passengers, 430, a 50. Of the commons of Herifordshire to Richard the second, 438, a 30

Of the gentlemen of Northfolke forced by the rebels, 435 a 30. Of the duke of Lancaster & Herefozd combattant touching the iustnesse of his quarrell, 495, a 10. Taken of the two kings of England & France for the assurance of both their faithfull meanings 486, b 40. Of Richard the second to perfozme the noblemens ozders, 465, a 40. Of the lozds banded against the king, 459, a 50. Received of Leoline prince of Wales to Edward the first: note, 279, a 10. Of Edward the first in his anger to one of his nobles: note, 302, b 10. Of the French king to aid the sonne against the father, 87, b 10. Forced vpon the lozd maioz of London, 338, b 10. Of Edward the second at his cozonation, which hée said hée would not vnkwear, 326, b 50

Nothing regarded of Edward the second: 321, b 30, Exacted of Henrie the third by his nobles, 258, b 20. Of Henrie the third at a parlement with an imprecation: note, 248, a 60. Of Thomas Becket wherof he repenteth him: note, 70, b 10. Of the earle of Flanders. 91, a 10, Of a cardinall not to preiudice the realme, 239, b 60. Giuen to the earle of Glocester by Henrie the third on his death bed, 276, a 40. Of the maioz, aldermen, and communaltie of London swozne vnto Henrie the third, 264, a 20, &c.

Nothing regarded of the French king, 205, b 10. Of Lewes bzged vpon him by Henrie the third, 205, a 60. Of the traitoz Parrie in a treasonable action, 1586 b 40. Interchangeable of the duke of Mansion and the people, 1342, a 50; 60 b 10. Of the duke of Mansion read openlie to the people, 1337, a 10. Of K. Richard the first at his cozonation, 118, a 60. Received of the earle of Warwike and other officers at Newhauen, 1196, a 30. Taken of the bishops & barons for their loialtie, 1, b 20. Of duke william at his cozonation, 1, b 30. Of duke William solemnlie taken and cruellie broken, 10, a 20. Of William Rufus by saint Lukes face, 27, a 60. Of the three estates of France, 578, a 30. Of the duke of Burgoigne with others to Henrie the fift, 572, b 40, &c. 573, a 20. It and submission of the duke of Yozke to Henrie the fift, 639, b 60. Of the duke of Northfolke kept with the losse of his life, 759, b 10. Cozpozall of the earle of Richmond to marie Edward the fourths daughter, 745, b 20

Of the French king at an interuiew, 699, b 60. Taken of the nobilitie in Henrie the firsts time for their fealtie, 38, a 60. Taken of the lozds touching the succession of the crowne, 43, a 10. Of Lewes the sonne of the French king when hée laboured to get the crowne of England, 191, b 60

Of pope Innocent vsed vpon a complaint, 187, b 10. Of allegiance to be true to K. John against all other persons, 184 b 10. Of diuerse erls and barons of France to K. John to assist him, 160, b 30. Of K. John when his nobles were vp in armes against him, 185, a 40, 50. Of the earle of Poicton Richard the first his nephue, 150, a 40. Of allegiance receiued of the people to Richard the first in his absence, 137, b 40. Of allegiance to K. Richard the first at a councell, 120, b 20. Of Lodoners to be true to king Richard the first and his heires, 131, b 30

Of the king of Cipres to Richard the first, and broken: note, 128, a 10. Of king Richard the first, the king of France and their barons, 125 a 40. Of iustices of itinerants 98, a 10. Taken about a place of meéting, 113, a 20. A dispensation for the same, 66, a 60. Of purgation taken solemnelie: note, 83, b 30. Quer all the realme to obserue the kings peace, 148, a 20. Of fealtie, Saluo semper ordine suo 85, a 60. Of allegiance newlie taken, 173, a 50. Taken and broken for preferment: note, 43, a 10. Touching an act of establishing the crown taken of euerie person of lawfull age, 937, a 60, b 10. It & the sacrament taken but not ment to be obserued, 680, a 60. Cruellie made and cruellie kept: note, 723, a 10. Of allegiance broken and notablie punished by God: note, 659, b 60. Indeed to a promise and the same perfozmed, 14, b 30. Taken to be true to the king and his heires, 14, a 60. Of a noble man by his honoz: note, 1214, b 30. Upon the euangelist to stand to the iudgement of holie church, 201, b 30. Foz restitution of heritages, rights, liberties, &c. 201, b 40. Inforced, absolued, 313, b 60. Made, broken, and punished, 418, b 50. With protestation in a case of innocencie: note, 458, a 10

Of allegiance confirmed by writing, 496, b 20

Oths that the dukes of Brabant were accustomed to take 1336, a 10. Cozpozall received for perfozmance of agreements, 30, a 20. Of obedience willinglie taken to K. John, 157, b 30. Outragious ozder & discipline for them, 111, b 30

¶ Sée Periurie, Promise, and Vow.

Otho the emperoz commeth ouer into England, 170, b 60

¶ Sée Odo.

Otuell an earls sonne, tutoz to K. Henrie the firsts children 20, a 40

Ouse riuer: ¶ Sée Trent.

Owen Glendouer: ¶ Sée Glendouer.

Owen prince of Wales slaine, 39 b 10

Owles deuoure mice: note a wonder, 1315, a 60, b 10

Oxford forsaken of the scholers 173, b 30. Uerie forward in preferring quéne Maries religion, 1102, b 10. Quéne Elizabeths progresse thither, 1209, a 60, b 10. The strange sickenesse there at the assise, whereof iudges died, &c. 1270, a 40, b 10. Their maner of interteining Albertus de Lasco, 1355, all. The maisters of the vniuersitie summoned to the parlement about the conclusion of a peace, &c, 255, a 60

The scholers thereof fight against Henrie the third, 267, a 10 ¶ Sée Debate, Frate, Statutes, Treason, & Uariance.

P

Packinton strangelie murdered, 944, a 20

Pagenels: ¶ Sée Painell.

Pagents and shewes sumptuous and sightlie, 849, a 10, &c. At quéne Annes cozonation 930, a 60, b 10, &c. Upon the sudden at a Candlemas tide, 853, a 60. At the cozonation of Henrie the eight, 802, b 40, &c 803, a 10. Of neat deuise, 835, a 40. At quéne Maries cozonation, 1091, a 10, &c: In London at the comming of Philip and Marie through the citie, 1120, b 60 1121, a 10

Of pleasant inuention, 808, a 60, b 10, &c. At the receiuing of quéen Elisabeth into Norwich, 1289. 1290, 1291, vnto 1299. In Antwerpe at the receiuing of the duke of Mansion, 1332, &c. to 1344, a 10. Of triumph at the cozonation of quéne Elisabeth. 1172, 1173, 1174, 1175, 1176, 1177, 1178, 1179. At a triumphant iusts holden at Westminster, 1316, 1317, 1318, 1319, 1320, 1321. at Christmas, 816, a 20. 812, a 20 807, a 40, &c. 839, b 40. On a maibate, 809, a 20, &c. ¶ Sée Sights.

Paget lozd. ¶ Sée Throckmozton Francis, and Erle Persie of Northumberland.

Painell kept the castell of Ludlow, 48, b 60

Palace of Henrie the eight at Guisnes described: note, 856, b 40, 50, &c: 857, all.

Palatine of Siradia, ¶ Sée Albertus de Lasco.

Palestine. ¶ Sée Holie land.

Palmer knight beheaded, his wozds at his death, 1090, a 50 60

Palmesandsie field. ¶ Sée Battell.

Palsgraue of Rhene, his traine come to receiue Henrie the eight, 823, a 20. He and others come ouer into England, 947 b 60

Pandulph the popes legat, a practiser of much mischiefe against king John, 175, a 10, b 40. 177, a 10. Made bishop of Norwich, 202, a 60

Papists cruelties against the martyrs in quéne Maries time, 1363, a 40, 50. Their obiections that priests executed are but scholers and vnarmed, 1367, a 40, 50. They call the protestants heretikes and enimies to the crosse of Christ euen as Achab called Elias the disturber of Israell, himselfe being the onlie disturber 1125, a 60. Their praiers, & of what little effect they be, 1125, a 10. Animated by rebellion, 1054, a 10. By rebellion haue an ill opinion of Gods holie truth, 1054, b 10. Such as were neuer charged with capitall crimes, 1360, b 60. 1361, a 10, &c.

Paraphrase of Erasmus commanded to be had in churches 992, a 60

Pardon offred to conspiratoss and traitoss, 650, a 10. Upon mistrust refused, 650, a 10. Offered to rebels: note, 431, b 60

At a parlement 396, a 10. Of six peares and one hundred daies preached, 240, a 60. To Appletree hauing the halter about his necke, 1310, b 20. With exceptions at quéne Maries cozonation, 1091, b 30. Generall to all rebels conditionallie published, 1056, b 50. To the liuing, pitie on the dead, 688, b 30, 40. Generall proclamed, 942, b 20. No offense excepted, 765, b 20. By proclamation dispersed the Kentish rebels, 635, a 60. At a pinch for treason: note 627, a 50. Upon submission, 146, b 60 147, a 10. For prisoners at a womans sute obteined, 378, a 20. ¶ Sée Forgiuenesse and Parlement.

Pardoners two set on the pillozie: note, 774, 840

Parrie sueth for licence to trauell beyond sea, 1385, a 30. Iustificth himselfe in religion before the inquisitoz of Millan, 40. Resolued in the vile plot of his trecherous deuise 60. With what enimies vnto God he linketh himselfe, b 10. He voweth to vndertake the killing of the queene, 30. And resolued himselfe so to do, 60. Committed vnto the custodie and examination of sir Francis Wallingham, 1383, a 40. Denieth with protestations whatsoeuer was demanded of him, 60. Examined before certeine lozds of the councell, b 20. Committed to the Tower, 40. His discontentment because he might not haue preferpreferment to his owne king,60. Confelleth himfelfe guiltie of all things conteined in his indicment,1389,b 20. His confeffion of treafons openlie read by his owne affent,1390,a 30. Judgement giuen againft him, 40. He chargeth the lords of the councell with vntruth, b 50. Reproued,60. His exclamation of outrage and vnpatiencie,1391,a 40. Abuſeth the aſſemblie with termes and words vncouth, 60. The forme of iudgement pronounced againſt him,b 60. Deſperat,1386,a 60. How long his practiſe was in handling per it was detected,b 10. His oth in that ill matter,40. He chargeth Meuill with greeuous ſpeeches of curſſed diſloialtie, 60. What moued him to attempt the murthering of the queene,1384,a 10. He counteth it a deed meritorious, 20. His peſtilent humor of malice againſt hir, 50. How his traitorous practiſe ſhould haue beene done,b 10. His reſolutenеſſe to do it, 40. His voluntarie confeſſion in the hearing of certeine lords, 60. Certeine obſeruations out of his words and writings: note,1394,all. A dilemma proouing that hee died a pertured traitor,1395, b 10. An epigram of ſir Deniſe for ſo vile a wretch,b 30, &c. Rageth at the iuſtice barre without all reuerence,1392,a 10. Euen at his execution hee ſeeketh to cleere himſelfe,20,30. A deſcription of him by linage and life verie lewd: note,50,60,b 10,&c.1393. His letters vnto queene Eliſabeth and to the lords of the councell, after his voluntarie confeſſion, 1387, a 20,b 10. His treaſons practiſed againſt queene Eliſabeth at full declared,1382,a 50 Deſcribed, reconciled to the pope,60. His malice groweth to an extremitie of miſchiefe againſt queene Eliſabeth, b 60. Saith and vnfaith, to ſhift of the heauie charge of his treaſons, 1388, a 60. Conuicted,b 60. Arreigned,1389, all.

Paris, where Henrie the firſt was crowned,606,a 40. Henrie the fift received in there, 578, a 10. Edward the third draweth neere it with his power, the Engliſhmen lie before it, the ſuburbs burned, 393,a 50,b 10,30. For multitude of people it paſſeth, 1333, b 50. The duke of Bedfords entrance thereinto, and executing certeine conſpirators, 586,a 60. The treaſon of the inhabitants,613,a 40. Yeelded to the French king, 613,a 60

Paris garden. ¶ See Slaughter.

Pariſhes. ¶ See England.

Parker afterwards archbiſhop of Canturburie, preacheth to the rebels of Northfolk,1030 b 30,40,50. They threaten him, he conueieth himſelfe from among them, 1032,a 10 ¶ See Archbiſhops of Canturburie.

Parkin. ¶ See Perkin.

Parlement holden at Blacke-friers, 876, a 10. At Cambridge,465, b 40. At Couentrie,652,a 10. Made fruſtrate 659,a 30. At Gloceſter, 421,a 30 In Ireland,481,b 40. At Lambeth,215,b 40. Leiceſter 591,a 40. London, 261, a 50. 251,b 30. 257,b 10. 250,b 60. Adiorned,251,a 20. 248,b 40. 238,b 20. 240,b 30. 246,b 30, 265,b 20. 274,b 10. 220,a 10. 202,b 10 308,a 60. 289,b 40. 321,b 20,351,a 10. 43,b 40. 54, b 20. At Marleburrough,274 a 20. At Merton in Surrie, 220,a 50. At Northampton, 97,a 60. 318, b 30. 428,b 20. 347,b 20. 143, a 40. At Nottingham,142, b 30. At Oxford,101,a 30,209,b 50. 167,a 20. At Rone by the duke of Bedford,603, a 30. At ſaint Edmundſburie,301,b 30,627 a 20. At Saliſburie,445,b 30. 302,a 60. At Shrewſburie, 282,a 60. At Weſtminſter,278 a 10,283,a 60,210,b 60. 220,a 60,214,b 60 229,a 50,233,a 40 1225,a 20,270,b 60. 208,a 20. 262,a 10. 207,a 30. 272,b 40. King Richard the ſecond being in Ireland,481,b 40, 50. Crownes of England and France intaled to Henrie the firſt, &c.1678,a 20. With an attendor and a pardon generall 762,b 20. Whereunto queene Eliſabeth and hir lords did ride,1377,a 20. 1315,a 50. At Winchester,259,b 30 480,a 10 270,b 50. At Windſor, 96,b 40. 103,a 50. At Yorke,309,a 10. 332,a 10. 306. 350,b 10. Called by the duke of Bedford, Henrie the fift being in France,581,a 60. It and Richard the ſecond at diſſention 452,b 10 Called, Richard the ſecond being priſoner in the Towre, 502,a 10. Called by the duke of Gloceſter, Henrie the firſt being in France, 607, b 10. Diſſolued, queene Eliſabeth making an oration to the whole houſe,1396,a 50, &c. Wherein church liuings are reſtored: note, 1130, a 20. Whereat Philip and Marie are preſent, 1122, a 10. Of white bands,326, b 60. Parlamentum inſanum, 258,a 60. Iniurious and offenſiue,493, a 50,60. Determination concerning the intaling of the crowne,657,a 60. Of ſeuen weekes continuance,521,a 30 Called the laimens parlement,526,a 10. Long,536,b 10. That wrought wonders, 463,b 10. Of three eſtates of the realme,781,a 60. Whereto noble men are appointed to come in warlike maner,489,b 60. Summoned, and new lawes for the common welth enacted,764,a 40. Called the great parlement, 490, a 60. Called mercileſſe, & of a head that ſpake then, 484, b 20. The lords ſit in the houſe in their armour,439,b 10. Held on that time fiftie yeares that Edward the third was borne, 395,b 60,396,a 10. For the order of knighthood, 254, a 30. Proroged,258,a 10. Marie bee deceiued,1124,b 60. And that the king of Scots came thither,97,b 60. Adiorned from place to place,631,a 30. At diuiſion: note,911,a 30,&c. 912, a 20. Great and ſolemne, 255, a 60. Called the mad parlement,258,a 60. The firſt vſe thereof in Henrie the firſt his time,38,a 60,b 40,39. The authoritie thereof, 1005, b 30, The cauſes and conditions theres: note, 452, b 20,30. The authoritie of both houſes granted to certeine perſons,493,a 20. ¶ See Burgeſſe, Councell, Priuiledge.

Parſonages with a decree touching the ſame, 30,b 60

Paſe doctor deſcribed, 871,b 60. His oration in praiſe of peace 848,b 40. Falleth out of his wits, 907,a 10

Paſſport giuen to Anſelme to depart the land,26,a 10. ¶ See Safe conduct.

Paten. ¶ See biſhop wainfleet.

Patents reſumed into Richard the firſts hands by act of parlement, 143,b 50

Pate ſhull a frier Auguſtine & a wickleuiſt, forſaketh his profeſſion, preacheth openlie againſt his order, publiſheth a libell againſt his brotherhod, his fauourers,455,a 60, b 10.

Patience of the Engliſhmen in ſuffering all wants of releefe, 995,a 40

Patriarch of Jeruſalem commeth into England, 108,b 10

Patrike an Auguſtine frier, ſeditious, and an enimie vnto Lancaſter houſe, 787, a 20

Pauia beſieged, and how the battell was tried, 884,a 40,50 60,&c.10, &c.895,a 10

Panier a contemner of the goſpell and his ſhamefull end: note, 935,a 60

Paule abbat of S. Albons commended, 18,a 60

Paules church in London dedicate,225,b 50. The gates blew open with a tempeſt,1209,a 20 Church ſteeple finiſhed, 204,a 10. It laie at anchor, 979 b 30. Upon the weathercocke whereof ſtood a Duchman holding a ſtreamer, &c. 1091, a 60. It is burnt by lightning: note,624, a 50, 14, b 10. Meanes made to repare it,1194,a 40,&c. Ten thouſand pounds inſufficient to repare it as it was at firſt, b 10

Paulet ſir Hugh knight his anſwer vnto the conſtable of France, at the ſiege of Newhauen, 1203,b 10

Paulet William lord treaſurer deceaſ th, his ancient & honorable ſeruice, bleſſed in his children, 1228,a 30

Peace betweene England and France, 1206,a 50. Concluded, 261,a 60, 832,a 60,b 10 Difficulties about the practiſe thereof, the French councell accord for it, the contents of the capitulation for it, 834, a 60,b 10,&c. Proclamed,892, b 10. Concluded & proclamed, 973,b 20. Mewed,774,b 60 Commiſſioners ſent ouer to Calis about the ſame, while the Engliſh preferred it before war, a concluſion thereof betweene both nations,775,a 10,30,60. Treated of at Towres,624,a 60. Treated but not concluded, 568, b 10, &c. Conditionalie concluded: note, 1061,b 40,50,60. With a mariage, 161,a 50. After werre wars,146,b 50,60 40,b 60 480,a 40. In memorie whereof the chapell of our ladie of peace was builded: note,486, a 50,&c. b 20, 60. Perpetuall treated, 474, b 40. 445, a 40 Treated but not obteined, 362,a 50,60. Treated by the ladie Jane de Valois, 360,a 30. And articles drawne, 391, b 50 Commiſſioners appointed to treat thereabouts, 409, a 30. Concluded for one whole yeare,379,b 40. Conditionall at the moderation of the queene of England, 336,a 30. 40. Treted by a cardinall, 295,a 10. Decreed by the pope, 308, b 40. Treated vpon by two duchelles: note,909,b 60 910,a 60,&c. Betweene the French king and the emperor treated but not concluded, 1129,a 50,60. Procured betweene the king of Spaine and France at the ſute of the duchelle of Lorrane, 1151,a 60. Broken by the French king,&c. 402,a 60. Hard to be made betwixt Henrie the ſecond and the French king, 113,b 60. Concluded betweene Henrie the ſecond and the French king with much adoe, 114,a 60. Treated betweene Henrie the eight, and the French king, by a legat from Rome, 882,b 40. Betweene Edward the fourth, and the French king, the ſame articulated,696,b 30,50,&c. Said to be made by the Holie ghoſt: note, 700,a 60. Betweene Henrie the firſt & the French king ſolemnelie treated at Paris, 611,a 20. Betweene Henrie the fift & the French king, & the articles of the ſaid peace, 572,a 20, 60. 573,a 40, &c. Betweene king John and the French king after war, 160,b 40. Said to be moued by the popes Nuncios, 166,b 30. Betweene Richard the firſt and the French king, 121,a 30. Betweene Edward the third and the French king, after manie bloudie ſkirmiſhes, and vpon what articles, 394,a 10,&c. Betweene William Rufus and his brother Robert for mone, 21, b 10 Treated and proclamed after long troubles betweene Henrie the third and his barons: note,268,a 60,b 10,&c. Painefullie procured by the counteſſ of Wales betwixt the king and the duke of Lancaſter,446,b 60. Betweene Robert and Henrie the firſt, brethren, 30,a 10. Of brethren, namelie Edward the fourth and the duke of Clarence, 682,a 10. Betweene Henrie the ſecond and his ſonnes, 89, b 10. Betweene the king of England and Scotland, 47, b 30.50,a 60. With king John compounded for by the king of Scots,173,b 10. With the Scots, 607,b 10. Betwixt Edward the firſt and Leolin prince of wales vpon articles, 278, b 20,&c. 279,a 10 Betweene the king of England and the Scots with the charters of the ſame, 96,a 10 Sought by king John, but withſtood of the French king, 167,a 40. Betweene the king of France and the king of Spaine ſolemnelie celebrated,850,b 40. Betweene Lewis and Henrie the third after ſharpe wars,201,b 10. Of queenes by them procured: note, 291, b 50. Betweene the king of France and the duke of Britaine, with the articles thereof, 427, b 50 betweene king Stephan and Henrie Fitz empzelle, after their long warres, 61, a60. Betwixt the twó factions of Burgogne and Orleance, 538, b 60. Sought foz of Soldan Saladin to Richard the first, and concluded, 135, a 0, Betweene Charles of France & the duke of Burgogne, 611, b 50. And what mischéefe came thereof, 612, a 10, &c. Betweene the emperor Charles and the French K. 888, b 20, 30, &c. Henrie the eight, & the prince of Orange included in the same, whie it set all Christendome in a woondering, 889, a 40, 60, b 10 20. Treated vpon betweene the emperor Charles and the French K. 870, a 60. Betwixt the K. of Spaine & France, treated of, 1183, b 50. The articles thereof, 1184, a 10. Betwéene France & Scotland proclamed, 1192, b 10, 20, 30. Articles of the same peace, the end thereof, with the commendation of the same, 1193, a 20, 40, 60. The praise and benefits thereof, 1054, b 60. A treatise thereof before an encounter, 10, b 40. Granted vpon mutuall conditions, 10, b 50. Made a pretense to execute inward malice, 10, a 30. Concluded to one partie dishonourable, 19, a 20. Sought but not wrought, 226, b 10. Contemned, and reuenge pursued, note, 204, a 40, 50. Concluded after much trouble, 273, b 40. And what a foule end an enimie thereto had, 206, b 40. Hindered by hard demands, 410, a 60, b 10. Solemnitie made, and rechlesse broken, 402, b 20, Wrought by the grace of the Holie ghost: note, 393, b 60. Dishonourable, 347, b 20. Hindered with stoutnesse, 352, a 20. Offensiue, 427, b 50, 60. Sought for but not admitted: note, 494, b 20. Sought but not obteined: note, 32, b 40. Persuaded, nothing preuailed, 146, b 10. Disaduantageable, 161, b 10. Displeasant, 30. After sharpe wars, and victorie: note, 572, b 20, &c. Sought for the supplanting of ciuill discord: note, 657, b 10. Procured by want of monie, 696, b 50. Begun betweene two, an occasion thereof betweene manie, 682, a 20. Sought after much malice & bloudshed betweene persons of great honour, 681, a 50. Called the womens peace: note, 909, b 60, 910, a 10, &c. Treated vpon at Cambrie, executed: note, 914, a 20. Concluded vpon articles, 98, a 40. After great troubles vpon conditions: note, 94, a 40, b 30. Broken of set purpose: note, 112, a 10. ¶ Sée Parlement.

Pars Alice is banished the realme: note, 418, b 50. ¶ Sée Perers.

Peers Gaueston earle of Cornwall, 318, b 40. Edward the seconds lewd companion, 318, 50. Married, 318, b 40. Accursed, 319, b 60. Hated of the noble men, and whie, 319, b 10. Banished the realme, b 60. The king his fauour towards him, made deputie of Ireland, placed in Wanborgh castell, banished into Flanders, 320, a 10, 40, b 60. His lawcie abusing of the nobles, they assaut and take him, hée is brought vnto Warwike and beheaded, the king displeased at his death, 321, a 20, &c.

Penance at Pauls crosse, note, 943, b 40 936, a 40. Of Anabaptists, 946, a 40. 1260, b 20. Of a most horrible offendor: note, 1558, b 50. Of fiue persons of the familie of loue, 1261, b 30. At Paules crosse by a spirit in a wall without Aldersgate, 1117, b 60. Of two wenches counterfeiting themselues to be possessed with the diuell, 1259, b 60, Of b shop Herbert, 26, a 50. That the regents and rulers of Oxford did at cardinall Otho his curse, 222, a 50. Inioined vnto the burgesses of Oxford: note, 181, b 40. Of the ladie Cobham for hir intended treason against Henrie the first, 623, a 10. Of doctor Barnes and two merchants of the Stilliard for heresie, 892, b 60. That a wrongfull iustice did, 284, b 60. With penaltie for murder: note, 562, a 52. Ridiculous: note, 484, a 30

Penbroke conuror. ¶ Sée Sorcerer.

Pendleton doctor preaching at Paules crosse hath a gun shot at him, 1117, b 50

Penker doctor lost his voice in his sermon, &c: note, 725, b 40

Pensioners muster before the quéene Elisabeth, 1211, a 60

Peoples fauour tried when it is once gotten: note, 149, all. 150, a 10, 20. Is Henrie the first glad to séeke, and whie, 28, b 10. Great vnto the duke of Summerset, 1068, b 40. Sought by faire words, 17, b 30. Their furious reuenge for the death of one whome they loued: note, 12, b 60: what promises to purchase it, 8, b 40. ¶ Sée Commons.

Perers Alice Edward the third his concubine: note, 410, b 20 Banished the realme, 418, b 50

Perkin Warbecke was a long time taken for the ponger of the two princes whome Richard the third murthered, 734, b 10. The counterfet duke of Yorke, his redie wit to learne all that made for his preferment vnto honour, hée arriueth in Ireland, faileth into France all aslant, returneth vnto the ladie Margaret his first founder, named by hir the white rose of England, 776, a 10, &c. Counterfeteth the duke of Yorke verie cunninglie, his true linage, his conspiring fautors, 777, a 20, 40, b 50. Sir William Stanlie his fauourer, 778, b 40. He attempteth to land in Kent, his men discomfited, his capteins taken and executed, he reculeth into Flanders, 779, b 40, 60. Saileth into Ireland, and is in sundrie opinions, hée marrieth the earle of Huntlies daughter, saith that he is Edward the fourth his lawfull sonne, telleth the Scotish K. how he was preserued & kept aliue, calleth the ladie Margaret his aunt, craueth aid of the Scotish K. toward the recouerie of the crowne of England from Henrie the seuenth 780, a 20, &c. His counterfet compassion, 781, a 40. Hée is faine to packe out of Scotland, his three counsellors, hée assaileth Exceter, 783, b 50, &c. He taketh sanctuarie, his wife presented to Henrie the seuenth, all his partakers in their shirts with halters about their necks apéere before Henrie the seuenth, he is assaulted in sanctuarie, submitteth himselfe to the K. and is strictlie séene vnto, 784, a 60, b 10, &c. Escapeth from his keepers, his confession as it was written with his owne hand, and read openlie vpon a scaffold by the standard in Cheape 786, a 10, 20, &c. 787, a 10. Hée corrupted his keepers, he is executed at Tiburne, 787, a 10, b 30

Perturie punished, 46, b 20. 680, a 60. By God 1262, a 20. Laid to William Rufus charge by his brother Robert, 21, a 40. ¶ Sée Oth & Promise. Laid to Henrie the fourths charge, 524, a 10. ¶ Sée Bassuling.

Perot sir Thomas knight. ¶ Sée Iusts triumphant.

Persecution in England ceaseth, and the protestants returne out of exile, 1181, b 50. ¶ Sée Martyr, Religion, Priests seminarie.

Persis lord sent against the Scots, 303, b 60. Put to flight by the king of Scots, 315, a 10. ¶ Sée Conspiracie and Erle.

Persuall ¶ Sée Maior and Officer.

Peson. ¶ Sée Weander.

Pestilence. 473, a 20. In Calis, 803, b 30. Followeth famine, 1049, b 49. In manie places, specialliе in London, 787, b 60. In diuerse parts of the realme, 704, a 60, That deuoured woonderfull multitudes: note, 703, b 20. Hot in London, 1211, b 60. In London, 961, a 40. 525, a 60. Among the soldiors at Newhauen, 1204, a 50. The cause that Newhauen fell into the hands of the French, 1205, b 10, 20, 30. Transported from thense to London, 1205, b 50. And what a consumption of people it wrought in the citie and suburbs: this was called the great plague, b 60. Like to haue increased, 1260, a 10, 20. In Germanie whereof three hundred thousand died, 1206, b 10

Peterburrough spoiled, 194, a 30

Peter pence forbidden to be ante more gathered in England, 397, b 20

Peter Landoise. ¶ Sée Landoise.

Peters William knight deceaseth, his charitie, 1227, b 50

Petitions three that quéene Philip made to hir husband on hir death bed: note, 404, a 20, 30, &c. ¶ Sée Demands and Requests.

Peto cardinall became a begging frier: note, 1365, b 10

Peuerell William disherited, 65 b 40

Philip his preparation to come into England, the English ambassadors méete him at saint James of Compostella, his arriuall in Southhampton, receiued of the nobilitie, interteined of quéene Marie, married vnto hir, what nobles were attendant on him, the conditions of their marriage, 1118, all. Installed at Windsor, he and she go through London to Westminster, 1120 b 50, 60. Passeth ouer into Flanders to incounter the French king, 1133, b 20, 1129 b 40. His returne into England, 1133, a 40.

Philip the hardie and whie so surnamed, 401, b 60.

Philip of Austrich, afterwards K. of Castile or Spaine, landeth in west parts of England, 792, b 40. His honorable interteinment, his vow inuiolablie kept, his death and description, 793, a 10, 50, 60

Philip the French king bided to procure peace betweene William Rufus and Robert, 21, b 10 Setteth Robert the sonne against his father William, duke of Normandie, 12, a 30. His iest at duke William lieng sicke, 14, b 20. His death, 34, b 60, 205, a 60. ¶ Sée French king.

Philip king Richard the firsts base sonne, slue the vicount of Limoges, 160, b 60

Philip quéene of England: ¶ Sée Quéene.

Philpot a worthie citizen of London and alderman, 419, b 60. Discloseth treasons, 428 a 60

Physician Lewes sheweth to quéene Elizabeth the whole conceit and deuise of burning the house of Lancaster and Yorke in one, 741, b 50

Physicians counsell neglected dangerous to the death, 45, a 10, 20

Piemount prince commeth into England, 1126, b 10

Piers Exton. ¶ Sée Exton.

Pilgrime his scrip and staffe, 123, b 10

Pilgrims robbed and the théefe hanged: note, 122, a 20

Pilgrimage cloked, 183, b 50 The holie pilgrimage, 942, a 20

Pilgrimages. ¶ Sée Images.

Pipes of lead vnder the ground to conuei water, and when the casting of them was inuented, 944, a 60. ¶ Sée Water.

Pirat Warton. ¶ Sée Warton, Campbell.

Pirats on the west seas taken and executed, 1258, a 10. Hanged at Wapping, 1258, b 40 1271, a 60, 1354, b 10, 20 ¶ Sée Clinton, &c.

Pirats had like to haue taken Henrie the fourth, 533, b 10 Followed so that they durst not peepe out, 537, a 30. To the number of twentie and two condemned and iudged to die, 1262, a 10

Pittie of Henrie the second to the poore: note, 115, a 50. Of Henrie the seuenth on a companie of haltered rebels, 784, b 40

b 40. Of Henrie the sixt notable: note, 691. b 20. Of king Henrie the fift: note, 560. b 60
Of Hubert de Burgh toward duke Arthur of Britaine in prison, 165. b 10. Of Edward the third towards the poore notable, 375. a 20. Of a quæne of England vnto six burgesses of Calis: note, 378. a 20. Of captaine Ranuell notable, 1205. b 10. Foolish in bearing with pardoning offendors: note, 1049. a 60. Of one the casting awaie of another: note, 41. b 30. On the dead, pardon to the liuing, 688. b 30. 40. Procureth perill. 423. b. 10. 20. ¶ See Charitie.

Plage called The great plage, asswaged in London, 1262. a 10. Threefold to the poore citizens. 1209. a 20. A natural prognostication therof, 1050. b. 30 Great in Essex, 480. b 60. In diuerse places of England great, 805. a 10. ¶ See Pestilence.

Plaie publike, and conference there to further the rebellion in Northfolke, but note the issue, 1028. b 20. 30. 1029. 1030. Of a tragedie in Oxford with misfortune. 1209. b 10.

Plaies and enterludes forbidden for a time, 1184. a 50.

Planets superiors coniunction, 484. b. 40.

Plantagenet the true earle of Warwike, a verie innocent, he is executed: note 787. b 20. 50

It: ight deceaseth in the tower, the cause of his trouble, 955. a 60. b 10. &c. The last of the right line and name, 953. a 60. In whome that name rested, 703. b 20. A counterfet of the ladie Margarets imagining, 775. a 60. ¶ See Arthur and Earle.

Pledges that duke William led ouer with him into Normandie, 5. a 10. Scotish appointed to passe into England 1187. b 40. ¶ See Hostages.

Plentie and abundance: note 284. a 40. And dearth, 1133. a 30. Of vittels, but scarsitie of monie, 353. a 10. See Vittels.

Plimmouth burnt, 355. a 60.

Pocks wher of manie died. 397. b 50.

Poer Ranulfe slaine, 106. a 20.

Poictiers battell When it was, 390. a 10

Poictouins reuolt from king John, 164. b 10. Send king Henrie the third word of their readines to reuolt from the French king, 207. a 10. Suspected to haue poisoned the English lords, 259. b 50 Discomfited, 217. b 40

Pennings knight lieutenant of Turnaie, 825. a 10. Discharged of keeping it, 837. b 40 A valiant captaine sent into Flanders, 772. a 60. Sent into Ireland with an armie, his valiantnes and successe, 779. a 60. b 10. &c. His decease 969, b. 20.

Poisoning, a woman burnt for it at Tunbridge. 1262. a 60. And also at Maidstone, 1226. 40. Punished with boiling to death in hot water. 926. b 60. Practised, and the parties punished with standing on the pillorie, 1258. b. 40. For the which a wench was burnt in Smithfield. 1434. b 10. And execution for the same, 259. b 60. 260. a 10. Bewraied by the sweating of pretious stones, 194. b 20. Of earle Scot of Chester with his wife. 220. b 60. Of the earle of Deuonshire, 646. b 60. In Italie practised: note 795. a 10. &c.

Polander, ¶ See Albertus de Lasco.

Policie whereby Compiegne was surrendered to the English. 587. a 60. Of the Parisiens to outreach the duke of Bedford, 586. a 6. Of the French in taking Pont de Larch, 629. a 20. In buieng peace of the English, 700. b 10. &c. Of Edward the fourth against his enimies, 684. a 50. Of Richard the third mischiefous and incestuous, note. 350. a 60. Ungratious & tending to the slaughter of princelie innocents, 739. a 20. Of the earle of Richmond in getting the sun at the backe of his souldiers, 758. b 60. To auoid a danger 748. a 38. Of Henrie the seuenth against sir Robert Clifford, 778. b 20. In sending forth espials into Flanders. 777. b 30. To preuent an intended mischefe: note 536. b 20 Of duke Albert of Saxonie to get the towne of Dam, 772. a 20. Of the English archers against their enimies shot, 770. b 40. Of Henrie the seuenth to match suspected persons especiallie if they fled, 780. a In surprising the towne of Pont Meulan, a 10. b 10. For a bridge, 617. b 60. Of sir Francis the Arragonois. 619. b 10. Of Henrie the fift in the time of a commotion, 544 b 10. Oftentimes passeth force, 648. a 60. Of the earle of Huntington 617. Of Henrie the fift against the French horsemen, 553. b 10: note 564. b 50. For redie bridges, 571. b 40, Of a priest fauoring conspirators: note 516. a 40. Of the earle of Westmerland, 529 b 40. 50. 530. a 10. Of the English against the Flemish 454. b 10. Of the French king against the English, 426. b 50. 422. a 60. Dastardlie of the French king to make Edward the third raise his siege from Calis, 375. b 30. Of the Scots discomfiting the English, 324. b. 60. Of a captaine against the welshmen, 236. a 60. a 60. Of the English, 295. a 60. Of the duke of Guise against the English, 1135. b 20. Of the French to make bridges 1138. b. 60. To restraine the people at the duke of Summersets execution, 1067. a 60. b 50. Of a yeoman of the gard a rebell whereby he gat pardon. 844. Of Scattergood a guner to deceiue the French 1192. a 60. Of Frenchmen disguised in womans apparell, 1188. b 50. Of warre by the Kentishmen, 2. a 20. Of the French to giue the English a repulse, 1191. a 50. Of duke William in making a part of England waste, 11. a 40. Of the French king to get possession of Vernueil. 8. 88. a 50. ¶ See Dissimulation, Stratagem.

Pomfret castle rendred to Edward the second, 331. a Pontoise surprised by the Englishmen, 570. a 30. Recouered by them, 17. a 40. Besieged by the French king but valiantlie defended, b 20. Gotten by French, 618. a 30

Pont Meulan surprised by entrance of a common priuie, 610. b 10

Pontoyson rendered vnto the Englishmen, 895. a 30.

Poole Cardinall. ¶ See Cardinall Poole and Pope.

Pope Adrian, 274. a 40. An Englishman borne. 66. a 50. His election to the popedome wondered, and why, he commeth to Rome, 871. b 50. 50. His creation, corruption of the cardinals in his election corrupted with manie bicces, 767. a 40, 50. b 21. His pride: note, 69. a 40. His grant to make John king of Ireland, 101. a 30. Maketh profit of his great pardon or heauenlie grace, 788. a 60. Letters for the releefe of the Holie land, 704. b 50. Fatherlie words to archbishop Lanfranke: note 9. a 50. Depriueth bishops and restoreth them, 9 a 40. Heareth the contention for the primasie betweene the archbishops, 9. a 30. Sent commissioners into England, 8. b 60. He and the emperor Frederik at debate, 75. b 10. His answer to Beckets complaint, 73. a 30.

Pope Boniface prohibiteth Edward the first further to vex the Scots, 309. b 30.

Pope Calixtus held a councell at Reimes, and consecrateth the archbishop of Canturburie with his owne hands. 40 a 50. A suter for archbishop Thurstane. 40. b 40. His curse against both archbishops of Canturburie and Yorke. 42. a 10.

Pope Celestine a friend to archbishop Geffreie of Yorke, 130. b 20. Maketh an archbishop of Canturburie legat of all England, 147. b 50.

Pope Clements reformation in England, 315. b 40. And what summes of monie are had of the archbishop of Yorke: note 315. a 30. Procureth a peace for one yeare betwixt the two kings of England and France, 379. b 40. Sent two cardinals to accord the two kings of England and France, 377. b 50. Letters in fauor of the bishop of Elie, and how he defendeth his chapleins, 132. a 60. Sendeth Henrie the eight a golden rose, 883. a 60. Pretended a title to the realme of Sicill, 124. b 60. Requireth Henrie the eight personallie to appeare at a generall councell, 930. a 10. Taken prisoner by the emperors armie. 1365. a 30. Deceaseth, more infortunat than fortunat, 935. b 10. His death prejudiciall, 131. b 60

Pope Eugenie sendeth a legat to treat a peace betweene the two kings of England and France. 607. a 50

Pope Gelasius the second his death. 40. a 10

Pope Gregorie sendeth the bishop of Rauenna to treat a peace betwixt England and France, 408. b 50. Messengers sent to him about reseruations of benefices, b 60. 409 &c. Denied to be true pope: note, 225. a 60. Sendeth cardinall Otho into England, 221. b 30. His meanes to moue the people to a iorney against the Saracens, 209. b 40. Disgraced by the cardinall of Burges, 514. b 60

His plaine song, where about was great strife, 13. b 30. His bull against the hearing of a married priests masse, 11. b 60 Deposed by king Henrie the seuenth, 1364. b 10. His faculties granted to Parsons and Campian for England, 1362, b 60. Parries letters to him, & wherto they tended, 1389. a 50. A lewd sermon and full of papisticall adulation made at his funerals, 1397. b 40. &c. 1398. &c. vnto 1400, Deceaseth, 1397. a 20. His new kalendar touched, 30. 40. &c.

Pope Honorius, his legat a bawdie knaue sent into England about reformation, 42. b 40. His legat to king Henrie the third, 208. a 10. Maintainer of king Johns cause, 193. b 50

Pope Hildebrand the first that made warre against the emperor, 1364. a 40

Pope Innocent summoneth a generall councell, 236. b 20 His request for maintenance of the warres against the Turks, 164. a 20. Offereth to king Henrie the third the kingdome of Sicill, 250. b 20. And hath England tributarie, 177. b 20. Would not confirme archbishop Reignolds of Canturburies election, and why, 169. a 60. His answere to the English ambassadors, 187. a 60. b 10. His licence to king Richard the first to gather riches, 120. a 60. Commandeth that the church of Lameth should be raced, 154 a 30. His councell held at Cleremont, 44. a 50. He findeth fauor at king Henrie the first his hands, and is thankfull, 44. a 50. Sendeth cardinals about a treatie of peace, 391. a 30. Aided with monie by king Henrie the third against the emperor, 224. b 30. Deceaseth, 193. b 50. 274. a 30

Pope Julies election, a description of his qualities, and how he came to the popedome, 811, b 30. &c. Sendeth king Henrie the eight a cap of maintenance, &c. Compared to Anteus, his purposes and death, a malcontent, 830. b 10. &c. Intituleth king Henrie the eight Christianissimo, his daughters request, a description of his properties, 831. a 20. 50. 60. Saue cardinall Poles authoritie apostolike, 1123. b 10. Dieth, a potkish pope, his monstrous blasphemie against God about a pecocke. 1128. a 10. &c. 50.

Pope Leo the tenth his creation, 831. b 60. His coronation, a poore prisoner on the same dale twelue moneth of his election and inthronization, 832. a 10. 30. He solliciteth all the princes of christendome against the Turke, 846. a 10. Receiueth two elephants for a present: note, 837. b 10. His craftie feare, 845. b 30. His decease supposed by poison, the maner and order of his death. 871. a 40. &c

Pope Martine legateth the bishop of Winchester & vnlegateth him againe, 602. a 60. b 60

Pope Othobone named Adrian the fift. 274. a 40

Pope Paschall his bulles vnto Anselme of Canturburie, 27. b 60. Grieued because his authoritie is not regarded in England, 37. b 20. Courteouslie receiueth the English ambassa-ambaſſadors, 31. b 20. Authoriſeth Anſelm to order things to his owne liking, 34. a 10. His ſtout words to biſhop Warlwalt touching the inueſtiture of churches, 31. b 50. Hath the determining of the ſtrife about biſhops inueſting and conſecrating, 31. b 10. Writeth moſt courteouſlie to king Henrie the firſt in Anſelms behalfe, 32. a 10. Sticke at Beneuento, dieth, 40. a, 10

Pope Paule a Romane borne created, 935, b 60

Pope Pius, an ambaſſage to him out of England, certeine notes concerning him, 794. b 50. 60. His bull againſt queen Eliſabeth, the effect thereof, 1359, a 60. The practiſes of traitors to execute it, b 10. 20. Harts confeſſion of the interpretation thereof, 1363. a 10. His bull ſeditious hanged on the biſhop of Londons gate, 1221. a 20. &c. A treſonable action, 1366. b 20

Pope Sixtus Quintus ſucceſſor to Gregorie the thirteenth, excommunicateth princes, and is by them defied, 1401. a 10

Pope Urban in miſlike with king William Rufus, and why: note, 24. b 30. His legat for the crowning of erle John king of Ireland, 110. b 20. Why he could not redreſſe the Engliſh enormities, 18. b 40. Calleth a councell at Clere-mont and why, 22. a 40. Giueth faculties to a frier Carmelite, 455. a 60. His beneficiall pardons to ſuch as would fight againſt Clement antipape: note, 441. a 60. b 60. 442. a 40. Sendeth to Richard the ſecond for aid againſt an antipape, 421. a 50

Pope Wibtech aduanced by the emperor againſt pope Urban, 24. b 20

Pope ſendeth a frier minor into England to reſtore Henrie the thirds halfe brethren to their poſſeſſions, 261, b 50. His nuncio commanded to auoid the realme, & ſent awaie, 237. a 10. 30. Allowed eleuen thouſand marks among them of the ſpiritualtie, 239. b 50. Out of fauour with the lords temporall of England, 211. a 10. Sendeth his legat to pacifie Henrie the third and his nobles, 271. a 20 Complaineth to Henrie the third and blameth him, and commandeth offendors to be curſſed, 214. b 20. Requireth maintenance for his warres againſt the emperor, 210. b 60 His demands out of ſpirituall liuings in England, 208. a 40 50, &c. Lacketh monie to maintcine his eſtate: note, 208 a 40. His chapleine inhibited to leuie monie, 315. b 30. Exhorteth king Edward the firſt to make war againſt France, 311. a 60. His decree of peace betwixt the king of England and France, 308. b 40. His requeſt for the releaſing of John Baliol, b 40. Intermedleth in princes matters, 297. a 10. 20. Deſirous of peace betweene the kings of England and France: note, 388. b 40. His pretended right to be iudge for the title of the realme of Scotland anſwered: note, 309. b 60. 310. a 10. &c. His letters & the deliuerers of them hanged, 392. a 20. Sendeth two biſhops to the prince of Wales, 383. b 50. Interdicteth Flanders, 358. a 10. Taketh vpon him to beſtow and deale in benefices at his pleaſures: note, 365. a 60. b all, 366. a 10. Sendeth a bull for the appꝛehenſion of Wicliffe, 419. a 20. Two at diuiſion for the dignitie of S. Peters chaire, 484. b 50. Sendeth his nuntio to Richard the ſecond: note whie, 474. b 60. A diſputation betwixt diuines of Oxford and Cambridge for their obedience to him, 534, b 50. 60. Weareth out the monks againſt the king & the archbiſhop of Canturburie, 155. a 50. Offended at king Richard the firſts impriſonment, 138. b 40. Into what a lamentable caſe he brought king John and his nobles, 186. b 20. 30. 40. His meſſengers to perſuade the K. of England & the French king to peace, 146. b 10. Sendeth to take awaie the interdiction vpon conditions, 181. b 20. He & king John reconciled, 178. b 40. His decrees and inhibition contemned, 187. b 30. Threateneth interdiction againſt king John and the clergie, 171. b 60. 172. a 10. Diſmiſſeth two archbiſhops at ſtrife, and electeth a third, 170. b 60. His diſpenſation for a marriage: note, 160. b 60. Giueth ſentence with the monks of Canturburie againſt the biſhops, 170. b 10. 20. Interdicteth France and Normandie, 160 a 60. Sendeth his nuncio to France, 166. b 30. He diſpenſeth for an oth of allegiance broken by the duke of Yorke, 659, b 60. Sendeth Lionell biſhop of Concordia to the French king, 771. b 10. Poiſoned with the wine that his owne ſonne had ſent to poiſon another, 795, a 40. He and the ſtates of Italie in a league, abandoned of all hope, compounded with the imperials a hard article and to be marueiled how he might; broke it, the caſtell where he was priſoner infected with the plague 893. a 20. 50. 60. b 20. He & the emperors agents at accord, a heaute paiment for him to diſcharge, the manner of his going out of priſon, 902. a 20. 30. 60. He by the inſtigation of cardinall Poole intendeth miſchæfe againſt England, 946. b 60. His ſupremacie denied in ſermons, 937. b 10. Curſſeth Henrie the eight & the realme: note, 936. a 60. His authoritie baniſhed out of England by proclamation, 914. b 40. He with certeine cardinals flie to the caſtell of S. Angelo, 896. a 50. His legats ſcrape and rake monie togither for him: note, 226. a 30. &c. Hath Henrie the ſecond in a ſeruile ſubiection: note, 83. b 50. 84. a 10. His forces vanquiſhed in Ireland, 1367. a 40. The cauſe of rebellions in England and of treaſons: note, 1366. b 10. His curſſes no hinderance of Englands proſperitie, 1366. a 40. Not to be ſuffered to make rebellions in England, 1365. b 40. Kings of chriſtendome neuer ſuffer him to abridge their titles or rights though they ſuffer him to haue rule ouer their people, 1365. b 10. And that kings of France, Spaine, and England haue beene againſt him: note, 1365. a 40, 50. 60. Haue cruellie perſecuted emperors: note, 1364. a 60. His title of vniuerſall biſhop is a preamble of antichriſt, 1364. b 60. His authoritie not warranted by Chriſt or his two apoſtles Peter and Paule, 1363, b 60. His bull & the maintainers thereof onelie condemned of treaſon, 1361. b 20 Supremalie, no perſon for the onelie maintenance thereof charged with capitall crime 1361, b 10. Sendeth aid to the earle of Deſmond, his banner erected: note, 1314. b 40. His bull, a full proofe that the maintainers thereof are directlie guiltie of treaſon: note the words of the bull, &c. 1362 a all. His dutie what it is not, and what it ſhould be, 24. b 40 His decree for confirmation & benediction, 256. a 50. Weng deuotion to him wareth cold, 253, b 50. He is liberall of another mans purſſe, 250. b 60. Offereth the kingdome of Sicill to earle of Cornwall, 247. a 40. Complained of to Henrie the third, the king writeth vnto him, 232. b 10. A collect to be ſaid for him, another for his election, a woman impriſoned for not praieng for him, 1128. b 20. 40. 50. An enimie to peace except he might haue his owne will, 226. b 10. Sendeth for monie to maintaine his wars againſt the emperor 233. b 20. His letters intercepted & ſtaied, 236, b 30. He & French king allied, 847. b 30. His decree that all ſpirituall men dieng inteſtat their goods ſhould remaine vnto him, 238 b 60, 237. &c. Requireth the French king to make war againſt England, the French king refuſeth ſo to do, 238, a 20 Sendeth for the third part of one yeares profit of euerie beneficed man reſident, 239, b 10. Maketh void the election of archbiſhop Meuill, 213, b 30 Sueth to Henrie the third for licence to ſoiorne at Burdeaux 243. a 60. His preſence more like to impaire than amend things, b 10. His bull read at Paules croſſe, 263. a 10. His grant authoriſing the biſhop of Lincolne to inſtitute vicars in churches impropriat 246. a 40. 50. Hath ſix thouſand marks giuen him for a moderation: note, 244. a 40. Conſecrateth William Raleigh biſhop of Winchcſter, 231. b 60. He and king John at ſtrife, and why, 171. all. Two die in one yeare, 229. a 10. Sueth vnto Henrie the third for his good will in benefices to beſtow on his friends, 238. b 40. ¶ See Antipape, Cardinals, Legats, Mariage, Rome.

Poore of three degrees, which to be cherished, & which to be puniſhed, 1082. a 50. &c. And in what places, b 10, &c. Their neceſſitie relieued by Gods prouidence, 1129. a 60. b 10. Prouiſion of corne for them, 1092. a 50. Prouided for in time of ſcarſitie, 381. a 50. 60

Portingall prince commeth to London, 589. b 60

Portingall king ſendeth aid to Henrie the fift, 566. a 20. Aided with an armie out of England againſt the king of Caſtile, 429. a 40. He with duke of Lancaſter inuade Caſtile, 450. a 30. Sendeth ſix gallies to king Richard the ſeconds aid, 448. a 10. Deceaſeth, an obſequie for him, 1134. a 10

Portgreeues, and the reaſon of the name, 120. a 10

Poſie of the duke of Bianſon, 1337. a 10. &c. Interpreted, 1340. a 10

Prayer and inuocation to God before battell enterprized: note 371. a 60. Of queene Eliſabeth as ſhe went to hir coronation, 1180, a 10. Superſtitious of the Scots in a time of mortalitie among the Engliſh. 423. a 20

Prayers vſed by houſholders in the ſuſpicious & troubleſome time of duke William, 5. b 50. 6. a 10. For queene Marie being with child that ſhe may be ſafelie deliuered, 1125. a 20. 50. &c. 1126. a 40. ¶ See Collect, Papiſts, and Saints.

Preacher at Paules croſſe hath a dagger throwne at him, defended by the gard, 1089, a 60. b 10. 20, 1090. a 20. Hath a gun ſhot at him, 1117. b 50 Popiſh blaſphemie in the pulpit, and how ſeuerelie puniſhed by God, 1128. b 60.

Preaching of pardon at the ſhew of a relike, 240. a 60. To moue chriſtians to make a iorneie againſt the Saracens, 209, b 40. Of a cardinall, 316, a 10. Of the archbiſhop of Canturburie at the depoſing of Edward the ſecond, 340. b 10. Of Clementarius incenſing K. John to crueltie, 173. b 60. Gods wanting, was the cauſe of rebellion in Deuonſhire, 1015. a 10. ¶ See Recantation and Sermon.

Preferment without looking or ſeeking obteined, 18. b 60

Premunire ſtatute begun, 409. a 60. Whereof followed ioſſe of goods, 951. a 50. A cauſe of malcontentment: note, 927. b 60, 928. a 10. ¶ See Woolſeie.

Prentiſe hanged in London for killing his maiſter, 1213. a 10 Killed, & the offendors hanged, 1353. b 20. ¶ See Riot.

Preſent of Camvpidge vniuerſitie to queen Eliſabeth, 1299 a 10. Of a Dutch miniſter to queene Eliſabeth at Norwich, 1293. b 30, 1294. a 60, b 10. Of white kine and a bull offered to king John, 174. b 10. Sent by the Rhengraue to the earle of Warwike, 1197, b 50. That the emperor Charles ſent to Henrie the eight, 882, 840. ¶ See Gift.

Preſents rich & ſumptuous ſent to Henrie the third, 212. a 30

Preſt excommunicated for incontinencie, 242. a 60. Committed a ſhamefull murther, 173. a 30. Killeth a frier being priſoner, 568. b 20. Executed for treaſon, 947. b 50. Hanged for fauouring of rebels, 943. a 60. b 10. Murthered, and the murtherer hanged in chaines, 814, b 30. A valiant ſoldior, 988, a 10. Mailing ridiculouſlie ſcorned, 1102, b 50. Superſtitious. ¶ See Simon.

Preſts that were hunters an act againſt them, 97. a 60. Their concubines forbidden chriſtian buriall, 207. b 30. 40 &c. Religious men harde ſouldiers, 443. a 60. Their ſonnes not to ſucceed in their fathers benefices, 30. b 30. Marriage forbidden & why, 30. b 10. 20. Prohibited to marrie and to keepe women, 37. a 20. Sequeſtred from their wiues, 34. b 20. Married in what reſpect to be excommunicated, 30. b 30.

Should

Should not haunt alehouses, and of their apparell, 30.b 30. To weare crownes, 30. b 40. All in Normandie excommunicated and whie, 37.b 30. Unchast how punished, 43.b 40. Of Rome taken in bed with a whore: note 42.b 60. Fauoured by the establishment of a statute, 54.b 50. To be arrested offending in forrests, 153. b 60. Used for priuie messengers, 68. b 40. Hated of king Iohn: note, 172.a 60. Their children legitimated by parlement, 1062 a 60. ¶ See Ball, Clergie, Monks, and Policie.

Priests seminarie, as Campian, Sherwin, Kerbie, Rishton & others indicted of high treason: note well, 1322. a 50. 60. Condemned, 1326. Their behauiors at their execution, 1328.b 60, 1329. a 10. Of a miracle (forsooth) on the daie of their death. ¶ See more of them, pag. 1357. a 60. &c. to 1368, 1413 a 50. Banished, and how courteouslie vsed, by their owne report, 1413.b 50. 60. Executed at Tiburne, 1434.b 50. 1559.b 60. Died for treason and not for religion, 1361.b 40. Not to be compared to the martyrs that died in Q. Maries time in number, 1363. a 40. 50. Their practises to execute the popes bull, nurseries erected for them, their secret comming into the realme to induce the people to obeie the said bull, 1359. Ball, Ford, Short, and Johnson, arrained and condemned, with their behauiors and speeches at their death. 1344. 1345. Of Kirbie, Filbie Cotteham and Richardson, 1345. 1346. 1347. ¶ See Iesuits, Scholers & Treason.

Priest monie demanded of the citie of London for queene Maries behoofe, 1090, b 50. Of twentie thousand pounds to queene Marie out of London, 1142.a 30.

Presumption of the archbishop of Yorke, 98.a 10. Of Anselme 24. And of Ranulfe bishop of Chichester, 26.a 20. Of cardinall Otho, 224.a 10. Of an oration in French to Henrie the fift: note, 567, a 40. Of a cardinall, 182.a 20. Punished in posteritie, 41.b 40. ¶ See Pride.

Pride of Henrie, crowned and serued of his father, 76, b 10 Of prelats misliked by king Edward the first, 316. b 20. Of the erle of Leicesters sons bringeth the barons to confusion, 270.b 10. Of the French procureth them hatred, 198. a 10. Of the duke of Orleance, 524. Of Hugh Cressingham, 305.a 20. Of Pandulfe the popes legat notable, 177,a 10. Of pope Alexander, 99,a 40. Of great ruffes reproued and reformed in a seruingman, 1315.a 20. 30. Hath a fall, 147.b 40: note, 132.a 10. ¶ See Ambition, Contention, 133. a 60. Presumption, Wolsele.

Primate. ¶ See Archbishops.

Prince of Wales alwaies the kings eldest sonne, 1141.b 60

Printer executed for seditious books, 1357.a 40.

Printing first inuented, 648. b 60

Prior Iehan bringeth aid to the French king, 815.b 40. Lieth in Blanke sable baie with his power, he loseth one of his best foists, a consultation about the assaulting of him, the admerall roweth into the baie where he lieth, 816.a 60. b 30 40. 50. 60. Landeth in Sussex with the French gallies, he is driuen to his gallies, 817.a 10. Driueth on the borders of Sussex, burneth the towne of Brighthemstone with other mischiefes, he is shot into the eie with an arrow, 831.b 20. 50.

Priors executed for treason, 938. a 30. ¶ See Abbats.

Priories suppressed, 948. a 10.

Prise rich taken by the erle of Warwicke, 648. b 50. Of wines to the quantitie of two hundred tun, 1196.a 50. More 1197.a 20. Of foure hundred tun of Gascoigne & French wines, 1211.a 20

Prises taken by Frenchmen of about fiftie thousand crownes value, 1199. a 10. 30. 40. Of French goodes taken by the westerne ships, 968.a 20. ¶ See Greenfield.

Prisoner shifting to escape breaketh his necke, 228.b 20. Escaped and the shiriffe of London is punished, 251.b 60 Rescued by an officer, and the rescuers punished: note, 260.a 50. Carefullie seene vnto: note, 376. a 60. Faithfull, a notable example, 423. a 50. Chained in gieues made of siluer, 128, a 10. That should haue bene hanged his good seruice, 770. b 30. Brake from the sessions house: note, 906.b 10

Prisoners French mercifullie vsed: note, 550. 60. Pittifullie slaine, 554.b 60. Taken in wars and slaine, 608.b 60. Discharged, 1088. b 60. Slaine by French as they were taken, 601.b 10. Of the Marshalsee breake out, 792. a 10. Sold in open markets: note, 819. b 40. Scottish of name taken by the English, 989. a 40. Deliuered out of the tower, 1127, a 10. Released, 95. a 20. Set at libertie by duke William before his death, 14. b 50. Released in an vprore, 273. a 30. Arraigned for not comming to the church, 1322. a 40. Proclamations for the lawfull taking of them in warre, 1200. b 10. 40. Set at libertie at William Rufus coronation. 16. b 10. Taken diuers nobles & gentlemen of France, 200. a 60. Beheaded, 133. a 30. Released without ransome, 201. b 10. Set at libertie out of the tower by the Londoners, 338. b 50. 60. A conspiracie to set them at libertie, 333. a 30. Honorablie intreated by the prince of Wales: note, 390. a 10. &c. Taken in the warres how honorablie intreated by Edward the third, 379. b 10. 20. Set at large by rebels, 430. b 50. Saued from the gallowes at a womans sute, note, 378. a 20. ¶ See Fines.

Priuilege of the parlement. ¶ See Burgesses.

Priuileges and freedomes reuoked by duke William, 8. a 20. Ecclesiasticall defended against Henrie the sixt & his nobles, 637. a 20. 30. ¶ See Liberties.

Procession in English, 963, b 30

Proclamation against the popes authoritie in England, 914. b 40. &c. Traitorous read and the reader apprehended, 1132. b 60. Heauie and grieuous, 664, b 40. Of Henrie the sixt for the taking of Jacke Cade the rebell and his followers, 635, b 10. &c. For the lawfull assise of bread, 166, a 20. That all English beneficed men in Rome should returne into England, 474. b 50. 60. Clearing the lords of treason, 460. a 40. For the auoiding of Irishmen, 481. a 40. Touching monie: note, 309. a 20. To auoid strangers. 202, b 40. Against purueiors, 259. b 20. That none should depart out of the reime 20. b 40. Against the familie of Ioue, 1314. a 60, b 10. For the free traffike of merchants as before, &c. 1267, b 10. ¶ See Inclosures.

Prodigalitie of duke Robert of Normandie: note, 32. b 20. Of William Rufus, 26. b 10. noted .27, a 10.

Progresse of queene Elisabeth. ¶ See Queene Elisabeth.

Promise to purchase the peoples fauor, 8. b 40. In sicknesse broken in health, 20. a 50. And what slacknes in performance thereof procured: note, 19. b 40 Of Edward the first urged by his nobles: note, 308. a 50. 60. b 10. Verie dishonorable broken, 304. b 60. Made against loialtie, & withstood by casualtie, 295, a 30. Made to a request and performed: note, 320, b 40. Made solemnelie, wickedlie broken by the K. king, 133. b 60. Broken, and the hostages executed, 597. b 10. Of Edward the fourth made by proclamation broken 688. b 10. Broken with Henrie the seuenth by Maximilian verie dishonorable: note, 774. b 20. 30. Breaking punished with great forfeture, 765 b 40. Of queene Marie made to the gospellers broken, 1161 a 50. Of queene Elisabeth in the parlement house, howsoeuer God inclined hir heart, 1181. b 20. Of queene Elisabeth to the citie on the daie of hir coronation: note, 1175. a 20. b 60. 1179. a 30. Of the duke of Alanson, euen to the shedding of his blood, 1335. b 40

Promises of William Rufus to the English clergie, but not kept: note, 17. b 30. Large proue light in performance, 28 a 40. Faire of king Stephan 47. a 10. Great and mountenlike, 704. a 20

Promoters cause of murmuring &c. among the people, 794. b 10. &c. Troublesome braules, 791. b 40. Punished, 800. a 10

Prophesie of death naturall fell out true in proofe, 1208. a 10. Of a cardinall: note, 388. b 50 Of Ball a seditious preest. 437 a 50. Of the reuolting of the subiects from their prince. 493 b 60 Of the decay of the Persies stocke. 534. a 60. Of an heremite of Wakefield to king Iohn, 180. a 30. Of Henrie the fift touching Henrie his sonne the first: note, 581. b 10, Of winning France, 546. a 50. Betokening the translation of the crowne, 655. a 40. Concerning the duke of Clarence his name beginning with a G, 703. a 40. The memorie whereof appalled Richard the thirds spirits: note, 746. a 10. Of a monke vnto the duke of Buckingham false 863, a 30, 864. a 30. Fantasticall and kallible of the northerne men, 1240. b 60. Touching Calis, 1141. b 20: note, 314. b 20. Fulfilled, 281. b 60 282, a 10, 945. a 50. 678. b 10. Vaine: note, 521. b 60

Prophesies of astronomers false in euent: note, 1356. b 10. 20. &c. Diuelish fantasies, 703. a 50. Deceitfull to the Norfolke rebels: note, 1038. b 40. ¶ See Dreames, Signes, and Tokens.

Prophet false serued right, 440 a 60

Protection. ¶ See Letters, Pasport, and Safe conduct. 102, a 10

Protectors of England from the first to the last collected, 1069. b 30. &c. 1070. to 1081.

Prosperitie persecuted with malice, 17. a 50. 20. Vnstable, 412. b 40. 413. a 10. Of king Henrie enuied, 37. a 50

Prouerbe, Ill will neuer said well, verefied, 626. b 60. 627. a 10. &c. Man purposeth but God disposeth, verefied, 230, a 60. 316. a 60, 317 a 10. 541. a 10, 835. b 60. Actus piscator sapit applied, 113. a 50. The more knaue the better lucke, verefied in a bucher: note, 113. Proffered seruice stinks, verefied, 1331. b 60. Hast makes waste verefied, 1202. b 10. He falleth into the fire that flieth fro the smoke, verefied, 228. b 20 When I lend I am a friend, when I aske I am a foe, verefied, 312. a 10. 20. It is good sleeping in a whole skin, verefied, 444. b 40. Necessitie hath no law, verefied, 426. b 20. Soone hot soone cold, verefied, 444. b 40. One mischiefe asketh an other, verefied, 446, a 30 Wit or cunning dearlie bought, verefied, 467. b 20. One loweth but an other reapeth, verefied, 36. a 40. Hast maketh waste, verefied: note, 41. b 30. As good neuer a whit as neuer the better, verefied, 538. b 40. Pitch and paie, verefied, 532. a 40. 50. Looke per you leape practised: note, 519. b 30. Set a beggar on horsse backe and he will ride full gallop, verefied, 192. b 30. He is an ill cooke cannot licke his owne fingers, verefied, 193, a 20. He makes a rod for his owne taile, verefied, 193. b 10. 20. Plaine fashion is best practised, 695. b 20. Marriage for pleasure repented by leasure, proued true, 667. b 60. &c. Marriage goeth by destinie verefied, 667 b 60. Ill will neuer said well. verefied, 727. b 10. 729, &c. The lambe betaken to the woolfe to keepe 716. b 50. To giue roseme at and beat with the spit, verefied, 715. b 40. Crooked of bodie crooked of qualitie, verefied, 712. a 60. b 10. One ill turne requireth another, verefied, 778. a 20. After mirth commeth mone, 808. b 50. Proffered seruice stinkes, verefied, 852. b 50. 853, a 10. He that gapeth after other mens goods loseth his owne, verefied, 819. b 60. What the eie vieweth the hart rueth, verified, 975. b 20. Too much familiaritie breeds contempt, verefied, 852 a 60. b 10. Delaie breedeth danger, verefied, 1086. b 40. To come a date after the feire verefied, 1136, b 20. Truth purchaseth hate, verefied, 332. a 40. In trust is treason, verefied, 743. b 50. 60. 744 a 50.

He

He hath made a rod for his owne taile, vereſied, 464. a 10. Faire words make fooles faine, vereſied, 191. b 60. 144. a 20.
Pulpit at Paules croſſe all beraſed and beaſtlie, 1182, a 20
Puniſhment ſeuere vpon Welſh men, 73. b 10. Of Thomas Louell for counterfetting letters: note, 1556. b 60. &c. Ridiculous for a great offenſe: note, 314. a 10
Puniſhments according to the offenſe, 115, b 10
Purſeuant of Henrie the third had his hand cut off, 272. a 30
Purueior of king John for wheat reſiſted, and the reſiſters puniſhed: note, 171. b 40
Puruciors puniſhed, 369. b 20.
Proclamed againſt, 259. b 20. A ſtatute againſt them, 396. a 10. Set in the pillorie: note, 1181, b 60

Q.

QVarrell betwixt the biſhops and monks of Canturburie about the archbiſhops election, 169. b 30. That the French king picketh againſt England, 518. a 30. Faint picked againſt the duke of Gloceſter, 627, a 10. Upon a ſmall cauſe, 126, a 30. Proſecuted vnto great miſchæfe: note, 304. b 30. Ended with murther, 568. b 20. ¶ See Debate, Fraie, Mutinie, Riot and warres.
Quæne Adelicia ſecond wife to Henrie the firſt, deſcended of the dukes of Lozaine, barren, 41. b 60
Quæne Aldgitha ſent to Cheſter, and whoſe ſiſter ſhe was, 1. a 30
Quæne Annes cozonation proclamed, & the ſame celebrated with great pompe, 930. a 40. &c. 931. 932. 933. 934. With child. 929. b 40. Brought a bed of quæne Eliſabeth, 934. b 20. Committed to the tower, hir imprecation at the towre gate, ſhe is arreigned, hir words at hir death, 940. a 10. 20, 60
Quæne Anne wife to king Richard the third and daughter to Richard earle of Warwike, 733. b 60
Quæne Anne wife to king Richard the ſecond deceaſeth, 481. a 20
Queene Berengaria crowned, the wife of Richard the firſt, 128. a 40
Quæne Elenor Richard the firſts mother returneth home into England, 127. a 50
Quæne Elenor king Johns mother an enimie to hir nephue Arthur, 158. a 60. Brought a bed of a daughter, 69. a 40. Sendeth for ſpædie ſuccour to king Iohn, 164. b 10. Studieth to mainteine the ſtrife betwixt hir ſonnes, 86. b 60. 87. a 10. Committed to cloſe priſon, 92. b 50. Set at libertie after long impriſonment, 117. a 50. Deceaſeth, 167. b 60
Quæne Elenor the wife of Henrie the third, 219. Paſſeth into Normandie, 158. b 10. Forſaketh the world, and becommeth a nun, 283. b 50. Deceaſeth, hir praiſe, 285. b 30. Hir buriall, 288. b 20
Quæne Eliſabeth crowned and annointed queene, 768. a 60. Deliuered of hir firſt ſonne, 769. b 10. Forward and redie to further the writing of the two houſes of Lancaſter and Yorke, 742. a 10. 20. 30. Taketh ſanctuarie, 715. b 60. Hir deſolat eſtate, 716. a 30
Quæne Eliſabeth, late wife to Edward the fourth, 615. b 30 Adiudged to forfeit all hir lands for promiſe breaking. 765. b 40. She liueth a miſerable and wretched life, ſhe erected a college in Cambridge, b 50. 60. Inconſtant, ſhe allureth hir ſonne the marqueſſe Dorſſet home out of France, 750. b 20. 30. The cardinall thought the fitteſt man to deale with hir for the ſurrendring of hir ſonne, reaſons whie it was thought meet to fetch him out of ſanctuarie, the duke of Buckinghams words vnto hir, 717. a 40. b 10. 40. Hir anſwers to the perſuaders, ſhe is loth to part with hir ſonne, hir miſtruſt of the lord protector, ſhe faleth to a reſolution touching hir ſonnes deliuerie, 719. a 60. b 10. 30
Quæne Eliſabeth Greie, wife to Edward the fourth, 668. a 40. Hir father and brother beheaded: note, 673. a 30. Deliuered of a prince, the ſame chriſtened like a poore mans child, 677. b 10
Queene Eliſabeth ſurnamed the good deceaſeth, 791. a 10
Quæne Eliſabeth of Caſtile dieth with iſſue male, 792. b 20
Quæn Eliſabeth ſecond daughter to Henrie the eight, borne and chriſtened, the ſtatelie order thereof: note, 934. b 20. Proclamed queene, the beginning of hir reigne, hir remoue from Hatfield, the flouriſhing eſtate of this land vnder hir reigne, 1170, b 10. 20. 40. 50. Hir remoue to the Tower, to Sommerſet houſe, 1171. a 10. 20. Hir prayer as ſhe went to be crowned, 1180. a 10. Crowned, 1180. a 30. Deſirous to know the meaning of the repreſentations of the pagents, 1173. b 30. Liſteneth to a childs oration, 1174. b 40. Hir promiſe with thanks to the citie of London, 1175. a 20. b 60. Remooueth from Weſtminſter to the Tower by water, from thenſe to Weſtminſter through London, ſaluteth them that ſalute hir, pagents and ſhewes of reioiſing, 1172. all. Hir words vnto the lord maior of London, 1176, a 30. She receiueth Verbum Dei, kiſſeth it, and laieth it in hir lap, b 50. She thinketh vpon the cities charge, how willing ſhe was to heare a childs ſpeach, 1177. b 20. The cities farewell vnto hir, going out at Temple barre, 1178, b 60. Hir laſt words to the citie by waie of promiſe, 1178, a 30. Notes of hir mercie, &c. a 60. Hir humilitie in receiuing verie trifles thankfullie, b 30. Not forgetfull to glorifie God who glorified hir. b 60 A motion made to hir in the parlement houſe touching marriage, with hir anſwer therto, hir promiſe, 1181, a 20. 40. &c. b 20. Determineth to aid the Scots ſuing for aid, 1186, b 40. 1187. a 10. Sued vnto out of Denmarke about marriage, 1185. b 10, 20. Furniſheth hir land with armor and munition, 1193. b 60. Greeued with the loſſe of Paules ſteeple, hir beneuolence towards the repairing thereof, 1194. a 40. And what cauſes moued hir to ſend a power into France, 1195. a 30. b 10, 30, 40. Hir progreſſe to & through Cambridge, hir oration to the vniuerſitie, 1206. b 20: &c. To Oxford, ſhe maketh an oration to the vniuerſitie, 1209. a 60. b 10. Hir owne words importing how deerelie ſhe loueth hir people, 1221. b 30. Hir manifold vertues, b 50. Goeth to the Burſſe being finiſhed, nameth it the Roiall exchange 1224. a 60. Hir deſtruction deuiſed vpon to be practiſed. ¶ See Prieſts ſeminarie, and note it well. Hir anſwer to the maior of Norwich his oration, 1289. a 20. Incouraging words vnto Stephan Lambert redie to make an oration vnto hir, 1294. b 30. She highlie commendeth it, 1296. a 20. Hir behauiour after all hir welcomming, 1297. a 20. Hir departure from the citie beautifie taken, 1298. a 10. 20. Hir words at hir parting with water in hir eies, b 40. Hir progreſſe into Suffolke and Northfolke, with the whole manner of the ſumptuous ſights, and whatſoeuer elſe was deuiſed for pleaſure and delight, 1287. a 30, 1288. &c: to 1299. In danger of gunſhot being in hir priuie barge, 1310. b 10. The place of hir abode during the time of hir tarriance in Norwich, 1291. a 60. Accompanieth the duke of Alanſon to Canturburie, 1330. a 30. 50. An intention to murther hir, and the partie executed, 1356. a 50. She giueth aid to the defenſe of the low countries, & why ſo moued to do, 1414. a 50, &c. to 1419. a 10. Shamefullie ſlandered by hir enimies, and the ſame anſwered: note, 1418. a 30. &c. Hir oration to the parlement houſe note, 1396. a 50. &c. Hir magnanimitie knowing Parries bowed treaſons againſt hir & yet concealing it, 1391. a 60. Parries treaſonable practiſes to kill hir and vndoo the whole realme: note well 1382. a 50. 60. &c. to 1385. Hir magnanimitie in ſuffering a knowne and ſworne traitor againſt hir to haue acceſſe vnto and talke with hir, 1383. a 20. Conſpired againſt, and hir depriuation ſought by traitors: note, 1370. a 40. 50. 60. b 10. &c. to 1375. ¶ See Eliſabeth and Babington.
Quæne Jane proclamed with ſound of trumpet quæne of England, 1084. b 10. ¶ See Jane.
Quæne Jane deceaſeth, 544. b 40
Quæne Jone late wife to king Henrie the fourth arreſted by the duke of Bedford and committed, 568. b 10
Quæne Iſabell the wife of king Edward the ſecond, 318. b 60 319. a 10
Quæne Iſabell the ſecond wife of king John. 162. a 30
Quæne Iſabell wife vnto king Richard the ſecond tranſported into France, 519. a 60. And conueied to Paris, hir ſecond marriage, b 10. 20
Quæne Iſabell married vnto Hugh Brune erle of March 202. a 60
Quæne Katharine, hir cozonation, the wife of king Henrie the ſixt, 578. b 60. Solemnitie thereat, 579. a 10. Saileth into France, 581. b 60
Quæne Katharines cozonation, traine, and ſumptuouſneſſe, 801. b 20. &c. Deliuered of hir firſt ſonne named Henrie. 807. a 20. Chooſeth lawiers in hir behalfe to iuſtifie hir marriage, hir lamentable ſpæch in preſence of the court, ſhe auoucheth the coniunction good, ſhe departeth out of the court & is called againe, 907. a 10, 50, 60. Procureth a curſſe againſt king Henrie the eight and his realme from the pope, 936. a 60. Hir words vpon the motion of a diuorſe, ſtandeth ſtiffe in the lawfulneſſe of hir mariage, 927. a 10. &c. b 60 Accuſeth cardinall Woolſeie, hath communication with the cardinall in hir priuie chamber, refuſeth to make ſudden anſwer to a diuorſe, 908. a 30. b 10. 20. Is diuorſed from king Henrie the eight, 929. b 60, 930. a 10. Princeſſe Dowager, 929. b 30. Deceaſeth, 939. b 20
Quæne Katharine, hir paramors detected of incontinencie liuing, 954. b 30. 40. &c. She is atteinted by parlement, ſent to the Tower and beheaded. 955. 30. 40 &c. 50
Quæne Marie commeth vnto London, 1088. b 50. Proclamed quæne, 1088. a 30. Hir cozonation, pompe, and traine 1091. a 20. Hir mariage, diuers diuerſlie affected therabout, and what they did, 1120. a 60. b 10. A report that ſhe was with child, 1123. b 40. And what curious order is taken for the yong prince yet vnborne: note, 1124. all. Talke betweene hir and hir ſiſter the ladie Eliſabeth: note 1159. a 10. Hir ſtout courage and kind of manhood, 1099. a 10. Hir death conſpired, and the parties executed, 1117. a 60 She & cardinall Poole reſiſted the pope, 1365, a 60. Hir oration in Guildhall to the Londoners, 1096. a 60. Is compared of the papiſts to quæne Judith, 1125, b 20. Hir oration touching the reſtitution of abbeie lands, 1127. b 10. &c. Great preparation & triumph for hir lieng in childbed, 1130. b 50. 60. What became of hir child no man can tell: note, 1131. a 10. &c. Proclameth open wars againſt the French king, the capteins of hir forces, 1133, b 10. 30. With what indignation ſhe tooke the loſſe of Calis, 1149. b 40. Penſife for the loſſe thereof, ſickeneth and dieth, 1151. b 10 20. Had neuer good ſucceſſe in anie thing ſhe went about, 1161. a 10. How long and when ſhe proſpered, hir promiſe to the goſpellers broken, 50. 60. Hir ill lucke in the loſſe of Calis, b 10. In hir childbirth, 20. With hir huſband, 50. Hir finall end and death, 60. The time of hir reigne, 1161. a 10. Hir death, the maner thereof, thought to be for the loſſe of Calis, more bloud ſpilt in hir reigne than in anie kings daies before, how vnproſperous it was vnto hir and hir realme in all reſpects, 1160. b 10. &c. Buried, and the maner thereof, 1178. b 40
Quæne Marie king Henrie the eights ſiſter crowned quæne of France: note, with what pompe, 833. a 60. b 10. &c.

Dowager of France. ¶ Sée Duke of Suffolke.
Quéene Maric Doweger of Scotland deceaſeth, 1192, a 10
Quéene Margaret the wife of Henrie the ſonne of Henrie the ſecond, 82, b 60. Brought a bed, 101, b 20
Quéene Margaret wife to Edward the firſt, deliuered of Thomas Burtherton hir firſt ſonne, 309, a 50
Quéene Margaret Henrie the firſt his wife lieth at Conentrie, ſhe is a better capteine than hir huſband the king, 654, a 50. Deſcribed, ſhe taketh vpon hir the gouernement, & diſchargeth the duke of Glocester, 626, b 40, 60 with hir ſonne goeth into Wales, 665, a 60. She returneth out of France, 666, a 10 Fortunat in hir two battels: note, 660, b 50. Sendeth to the maior of London for victels, ſome ſent by the maior & ſtaid by the commons, ſhe returneth northward, 661, a 10, 20, &c. Hir flight, ſhe is robbed, 655, a 10. Commeth to Ambois to ſée the earle of Warwike, 674, b 50. She with his ſon prince Edward land with a power out of France, 685, b 20. She is comforted by the nobles of England, b 60. The feare which ſhe had for hir ſonne, 686, a 10. Taken priſoner, 688, b 60
Quéene Maud deliuered of a ſonne called William, 31, a 30
Departeth this life, 39, b 10
Quéene Maud wife to king Stephan ſueth for the releaſe of hir huſband to the emperor, 53, b 50
Quéene Philip wife to king Edward the third, 348, b 20
Deliuered of John of Gaunt hir fourth ſonne, 357, a 60
Brought a bed of Edmund Langleie afterwards duke of Yorke, 363, a 30. Deceaſeth, hir three petitions of the king, hir praiſe, 404, a 20
Quéene of England with hir ſonne goeth into Heinault, 337, b 10. They both arriue in Suffolke, ſhe is aſſiſted by the prelats, hir proclamation, 338, a 10, 30. She followeth the king to Oxford, the biſhop of Hereford maketh an oration to hir armie, ſhe goeth to Glocester and Briſtow, the lords cleaue to hir, 339, all. In danger of drowning, 265, a 10
Deliuered of a daughter, 249, a 40, 230, b 10, 378, a 50 362, a 30. Deliuered of Edmund, 236, a 50. Hir requeſt & letters withſtood by a ſubiect: note, 376, a 60. Hir liberalitie towards king Henrie the third, 249, a 50. Out of fauour with Edward the ſecond hir huſband, 332, a 40. Sent ouer into France to talke with hir brother, 336, a 30
Quéene of Denmarke was the daughter of king Henrie the fourth, 513, b 10. She is ſent ouer to hir huſband, 532, a 20
Quéene of Scots and the erle of Angus hir huſband come into England, 838, a 20. She commeth vnto the Engliſh court, how intertcined, 50, 60, &c. Returneth to Scotland, 844, a 20. Conueied into France and maried vnto the Dolphin, 1056, b 60
Quéene Dowager of Scotland doth what ſhe can to procure war againſt England, 1142, a 10. ¶ Sée Agatha, Francis Throckmorton, Margaret, Maud.
Quéene mother gouernor of the realme, 548, a 40
Quéenes of France and Hungarie deceaſe, 1171, b 60
Quéenes three in the Engliſh court at once, 838, a 60
Quéenes college in Cambridge founded by the ladie Eliſabeth wife to king Edward the fourth, 765, b 60
Queſtions in law demanded of the iuſtices: note, 456, b 20 457, a 10, &c.

R.

RAdington knight lord warden of London, 478, b 10
Rafe earle of Cambridge or Northfolke marieth erle Rogers ſiſter, 11, a 40
His wife beſieged in Norwich, 11, b 20
Rafe the kings collector or proctor his extortions or pollings of the people, 24, a 20
Rafe biſhop of Durham committed to the Tower & white, 28, b 30. Brake out of priſon, and his perſuaſion to duke Robert, 29, b 40
Rafe Wilford. ¶ Sée Wilford.
Rafer founder of S. Bartholomews by Smithfield, 31, a 30
Raine whereof grew a dearth, 58, a 60. 284, b 20. And death, 404, b 60. That did hurt harueſt, 322, b 50. That hindered ſéed time, 355, a 50. Corne from ripening, 348, b 30. Continuall for a long time: note, 239, b 30. From midſummer to chriſtmaſſe, 378, b 20. That did hurt vnto houſes, trées, corne and other things, 241, b 40. Of great continuance and no leſſe abundance, 220, a 30
For the ſpace of foure moneths togither, 224, a 10
Continuall cauſing a verie wet ſeaſon, 895, a 20. Gluttring and continuall in the ſpring, 163, a 50. Exceſſiue. ¶ Sée Floods.
Raine of bloud, 101, a 30. 278, a 30. 649, a 10
Raine artificiall of roſe water, and haile of ſugar confects, 1355, a 60. ¶ Sée Floods.
Raleigh eſquire in danger of the Deuonſhire rebels, 1016, b 40
Raleigh knight his voiage for the diſcouerie of that land which lieth betweene Norimbega and Florida, 1369, a 20. His preparation for a ſecond voiage, 40. He ſailed as far as Cape de Verde, and arriueth in ſafetie at Plimmouth, 60. His chargeable voiage to Virginia, 1401, b 40 &c. In Engliſh colonie eſtabliſhed there, 1402, a 50. His reſolution vpon an other voiage for the ſupplie of thoſe that were left there, 50
Ramelius ambaſſador out of Denmarke honorable interteined both in court and elſewhere: note, 1561, b 20
Randoll a pitifull capteine, 1295, b 10
Randolph iuſtice. ¶ Sée Charitie.
Ranſome of Richard the firſt out of the emperors hands, 138, b 60. Amounted to the ſumme of an hundred and ſixtie thouſand marks, 140, a 20
Three thouſand marks therof giuen to the white monks and white, 147, b 20. Of Robert earle of Leiceſter, 146, b 40. Of the king of Scots Dauid, 391, a 60. For the monke Euſtace would not be receiued, 201, a 60. Of Q. Margaret, 684, a 10. Of the French king paied and his children deliuered, 914, a 20, 40. Of the French king, 394, b 60. Of a lord by exchange, 606, b 30
Ranſoms ſought for gaine, 7, a 20. For townes, 193, a 60. ¶ Sée Fines.
Ranulfe biſhop of Chicheſter onlie held with Anſelme againſt the king: note, 26, a 20
Ranulfe de Meſchines how he came to be earle of Cheſter, 20, a 10
Ratcliffe knight a fauorer and coadiutor of Richard the third, 725, a 60
Ratcliffe Thomas. ¶ Sée Juſts triumphant, and Erle of Suſſex.
Rauiſhment of anie woman how puniſhed in duke Williams time, 15, b 50
Rebellion of Henrie the ſonne againſt his father to put him from the crowne, 99, b 10. Of nobles againſt erle Richard, 112, a 50. Of Welſhmen, 66, b 60. Of Richard againſt his father Henrie the ſecond, note 94, a 10. Of Geffreie, 66, a 30
Of the Welſhmen againſt king John, and the ſucceſſe thereof, 176, a 30. Of lords banded againſt king John: note, 185, a 10, &c. Of the lords againſt king John, notwithſtanding the popes decree, 187, b 30. Of the earle of Shrewesburie Robert de Beleſme, 30 a 30. In Yorkſhire, and what euent it had, 672, a 20. In the north pacified, 689, a 30. In Northfolke further ed at a publike plate, 1028, b 10, 20. In Deuonſhire, & capteines names, their number, their hope in others failed, their end: note well, 1002, a 50, 60, b 10, 30 vnto 1026. In Yorkeſhire the cauſes thereof, 1240, b 40, &c. Afreſh in Suffolke and Eſſex, and the principals executed, 1062, a 40. In Kent and the cauſers executed, 1062, a 60. Of Jacke Cade in Kent, verie miſchekous: note, 632, a 60, b 10, &c. 633, 634, a 10, &c, And what end it had, 635, a 50, 60, b 60. In Ireland, 629, a 30. Of Owen Glendouer in Wales, 518, b 60, 519 a 10. In the north for a tax or ſubſidie granted by parleament, 769, b 50. In Flanders, 770, a 30. In Cornwall for the paiment of a ſubſidie, 781 b 20. Of the lord Loucll, and the end thereof, 764, a 60 b 30. Of John Lincolne, the cauſe of til Maie date: note, 840, b 10, &c. 841, 842, 843, 444 In the north proceeded from the pope, 1366, b 40 In Suffolke by the greeuouſneſſe of a ſubſidie, pouertie and neceſſitie capteines therof, it is ſuppreſſed and the offendors puniſhed, 891. b 10, 20, 30, 40, &c. New in Northfolke intended and bewraied by one of the conſpiracie before it burſt out, 441, a 20. In the North notable, 942, a 10, &c. The ſame ſuppreſſed, 942, a 10, &c. Of the Lincolnſhire men, 941, a 20, 30, &c. In Weſtmerland, and the capteines executed, 943, b 60. Practiſed in Yorkſhire, & the offendors executed, 953, a 60. Of the earle of Aubemarle, 202, a 60. Of the Galcoignes and the cauſe thereof, 248, a 30. Of the Welſhmen, & what cauſed it: note, 254, b 30 Of the earles of Northumberland & Weſtmerland, 1212, and what euill end it had: note, 1213. Of Normans againſt duke William, ſome ſuppreſſed, 10 b 60. Of two earles againſt duke William puniſhed: note, 11, a 50, 60 Of the ſonne againſt the father procured by the French king: note, 12, a 20. Of Exbike Siluaticus in the abſence of duke William, 5, a 10 Of lords with their adherents executed, 330, b 60, 331, a 40, 60, b 30. Of the Welſhmen chaſtiſed, 284, b 10. Of Dauid, 280, b 60. He purſueth his enterpriſe, 281, a all. Condemned, executed, 282, a 60, b 10. Of the Iriſh againſt earle Mortimer, 448, b 60. In Scotland by meanes of one William Wallaſe, 303, a 60, b 10. In England 1358, b 60, 1359, a 10. In diuerſe parts of England by reaſon of a great ſubſidie and other oppreſſions, 429, a 60, b 10, &c. vnto 435. Note the whole courſe of the ſtorie of Henrie the ſecond, 94, What it procureth vnto rebels: note the words of vicount Melune, 193, b 10. The hurts which it doth: note in the ſtorie of king John, 190, 191, 192, 193, &c. The benefit thereof in one reſpect, 1051, b 10. What inconueniences flow from it, 1053, a 10, &c. b 10, &c. Bringeth the braders of it to a ſhamefull end, 777, b 50, 60, ¶ Sée Perkin Warbecke. The fauorers thereof executed: note, 942, a 60, b 10. That it is all princes duties to repell the practiſes thereof, 1360 b 10. Attempted but with euill ſucceſſe: note, 9, b 50. What a miſchefous reuenge it wrought vpon the innocent, 5, b 10. The reward thereof, 281, b 40, 60: note, 534, a 20, 30, &c. Note in Robert Bruſe 314, a 10, &c. It and execution 316, a 20, &c. 315, a 10. Orders taken to preuent it, 439, b 60. ¶ Sée Acton, Commotion, Exceſter, Glendouer, Inſurrection, Ket, Neuill baſtard, Normans, Northumberland, Rebels, Riot, Sedition, Wiat.
Rebels would giue awaie the crowne from their ſouereigne to a ſtranger, 190, a 50, 60. Excõmunicated by name, 190 a 10. How rewarded, 693, a 30, 60. Their bodies buried by a licence obteined, 335, a 60
Of Eſſex by a freſh, ſcatered and ſlaine, 436, b 10, 20. Executed in euerie lordſhip, b 60
Of ſaint Albons and Suffolke their outragious behauiors, 434, a 40, b 10. Of Kent

Kent by againe, 436, a 40. Of Northfolke and their outrages, 435, a 20, 30, 40, &c. In Kent and Essex, 429, b 20, 60, They minister an oth to all passengers, they kill lawiers, iustices, &c: an huge number of them, their capteines and ringleaders, they send to Richard the second to come and speake with them, they spoile Southwarke & set prisoners at large, aided by the Londoners, they pretend a reformation, 430. They burne the Sauoie, their strange deling, their iustice, they put lords to death, make a statute to kill men, respect no place, but spoile all, the K. offereth them their pardons, 431. They would haue all lawes abolished, the K. perswadeth them to be quiet, 432. Quite discouraged, throw downe their weapons, 433. Seuerelie executed & punished by duke William, 6, b 40. Of the North executed at Tiburne, 1221, b 60. In Ireland their strange & miserable end, 1365, b 60, 1366 a 10, &c. Most dangerouslie couer their faults, 1358, b 60. Vanquished by the queenes power, fled into forren countries, pretend religion for a defense, their ringleaders, 1359, a 10, &c. Of the North, Hall and Wilkinson executed at Tiburne, 1257, b 20. Executed at Durham, 1213, a 10 At Yorke, a 60. Disherited by parlement: note, 270, b 60 Against their prince in a perplexitie, 198, b 40. Notable pardoned and to well rewarded, 942, b 20. Of Suffolke pardoned after their appearance in the starchamber, 892 a 20. How miserable and yet mercifullie pardoned, 784, b 40. Fauorers fined, 785, a 10. Of Deuonshire their articles sent to Edward the sixt: with an answer therevnto, 1003, a 30, &c. Executed: note, 944, a 50, b 10. ¶ See Conspirators, Fugitiues, Noblemen, Sandwich and Traitors.

Recantation of certeine Anabaptists at Paules crosse, 1260, b 50. Of Cranmer how detested of him at his death, 1131, b 60. ¶ See Barnes, and Crome, Smith & Sermon.

Reconciliation signified by kissing of the pax, 78, a 10

Rees king of Wales slaine in battell, 20, b 50

Rees ap Meridoc accused and executed, 288, b 30

Reformation ought to be no priuat mans, but the princes action, 1051, b 20, 60

Register for christening and buriens, &c, in euerie church to be kept, 945, a 40

Religion altered, 1090, b 40, 1123, b 30. Trouble & persecutions for it, 1127, a 20. Professors therof persecuted, 1132, a 10. It goeth not by age but by truth, 1143, a 60, Auanced: note, 992, a 60. Beareth the blame & is counted the cause of rebellion: note, 1054, a 10, 20. Reformed in Edward the sixts daies, 979, b 40, 50, &c. A booke touching the reformation therof published, 940, b 60. Laid open to great danger, 256, a 50

A conference thereabouts with the clergie on both sides 1182, a 40, &c: 1183 a 10, &c. Restored into the English tong, 1172, a 10. Commissioners sent abrode to establish it, 1184, b 50. None charged with capitall crimes being of a contrarie religion, and professing to withstand forren forces, 1360, b 30, 50, 1361, a 10, &c. Of Rome established by act of parlement: note, 519 a 30. ¶ See Monks, Treason.

Religious houses giuen Henrie the eight in parlement, 992, b 10. Giuen to Henrie the eight, 939, b 40. Visited, 939, a 60. Henrie the eights promises for the well disposing of them, 971, a 60. Suppressed, 1184, b 60. ¶ See Abbeies.

Reliks, ¶ See Becket, Christ, Hales.

Remes besieged, 392, b 60. The citizens therof saue their corne fields from destroieng, by sending bittels to the English host, 426, b 10

Remelie, ¶ See bishop.

Remelins. ¶ See Ramelins.

Remigius bishop of Worchester deprined of his crosier & ring 9, a 40.

Remission of sins granted to as manie as would fight against Clement the antipape: note 441, a 60, b 60, 442, a 40

Rent for a mans owne lands by the yeare paied, 8, a 40

Repentance of yong king Henrie before his death, his superstitious deuotion, his death & buriall, 107, a 10. Of rash aduancement: note, 76, b 30. Of an act past, 128, a 10 Of a deed done not foreseeing losses to insue, 170, b 30. Too late, 193, b 40: note 32, a 60, 1104, a 30, 517, a 50. Of William Rufus in his sicknesse: note, 20, a 50. Of duke William for his cruelitie against the English, 14, b 60. Despised of a desperat malefactor at his death, 1061, a 60.

Report that Richard ment to yeld vp Calis to the French kings hands, 462, a 10. False of Henrie the eights death, 823, a 30. Occasion of rebellions, 941, b 40. Of great disquietnesse, 777, a 10. How hurtfull and troblesome, 1006 b 10. 47, b 50. In the starre-chamber, against ladie Elisabeth, 1102, a 10, 40 Request granted vpon necessarie constraint, 2 b 20. Of the commons denieng a subsidie, 410, b 10. ¶ See Demands and Petitions.

Reuenge of the Londoners, 338, b 50. Of the people for the death of one whome they fauoured, 12, b 60. Against the dead bodie of duke William for iniurie past, 15, a 50. Of the duke of Austrich vpon king Richard the first, 136, a 10, 20. Of king John vpon the white monks, 162, a 40. Of Richard the first a bastard for the death of his father being a king: note, 160, b 60. Sought by the French king for the death of duke Arthur, 167, a 60. Of sir Robert de Ewing vpon the Romans, 214, b 60. Of the lord Mortimer against the Welshmen, 263, b 50. Of Edward the first vpon the Scots, 312, a 40. Of duke William for the losse of his subiects, 10, b 30 Of a bishop in a riotous manner, 247, a 60. Of Henrie the third vpon the bishop of Elie, 247, a 10 Of wrongs & iniuries multiplied, 170, a 10, 20, Of iniuries, 137, b 10. Of remembred grudge, 1089, a 40. A notable example to forbere it: note 1117, b 40. Of an old grudge: note, 636, b 10. Vpon reuenge: note, 840, a 20, 841, a 10, &c. Counselled and pursued: note, 204, a 40, 50, Of an old grudge, 210, a 10 Interchangeable, 204, b 10, For cuckoldrie, 211, b 60. For wast, 257, a 10. Noble taken: note, 447, b 60. Vpon reuenge 446, a 30. With murther, 447, a 50. Neglected where it might haue bene executed: note, 459, b 30, 40. Of murther with murther, 368, a 50, Taken as occasion serued, 340, a 30. Sought for murthering a bishop, 12, b 20. Of almightie God vpon lasciuious & disordered liuers: note, 424, a 10. ¶ See Enuie, Malice, and Murther.

Reseruations and prouisions apostolike, 365, a 60

Resignation by compulsion recompenced, 1134, b 40

Restitution of townes to king Edward the third by the French king, 360, b 60

Rewards how they preuaile and worke with a wicked mind, 747, b 30, 40. Verie large offered to the duke of Britaine to betraie the earle of Richmond into Richard the third his hands, 747, a 60 b 10. Corrupt a keeper of a prisoner, 152, a 20. ¶ See Bribes, Gifts, Monie.

Rhods taken by Soliman Ottoman the Turke, 876, b 10, &c: Rendered vp vnto him, 877, a 10, 20

Rice ap Thomas sweareth fealtie and seruice to the earle of Richmond, 753, b 40. ¶ See Rees.

Rich lord saileth into Ireland, 1258, b 60

Richard the first crowned king of England, 117, a 10. In armes against the French king, 146, a 60. His bastard sonne Philips reuenge: note, 160, b 60. His practises to get monie, 143, b 60. 144, a 10, 20 Marieth the ladie Berengaria, 128, a 40. His letter to the states of England for the deposing of the bishop of Elie, 132, a 30. Like to haue bene deliuered into the French kings hands, 140, a 10. He & the French king in armes, they talke togither, the emperor disuadeth Richard from peace, the war is renewed betwixt them, they talke togither againe, a peace conditionall concluded, 148, all. Offended with the bishop of Elie lord chancellor, 145, b 30 He transporteth ouer into France, 144, b 10. Crowned king anew, 143, b 30. His grant of allowance to the king of Scots when he came to England, 143, a 50. His commandement not obeied, 140, b 50. Winneth Nottingham castell, 142, a 60. Released out of captiuitie, 141, a 10. Returneth into England, his triumphant receiuing into London, 141, b 40, 50. Raiseth his siege from Gisors, 152, a 10. He and the earle of Tholouse agreed, 151, b 30 His lands wasted by certeine Gascoignes, 137, a 60. Setteth things to rate for his going to the holie land, 120, a 40 His three daughters and how he bestowed them in mariage, 156, b 20. Charged by the emperor with iniuries done to the Sicilians, 138, b 20. His wisedome in making his answer, 30. Cleared of the murthering of the marquesse of Monferrat: note, 136, a 40, 50. Is deliuered to the emperor, he is committed close prisoner, 137, a 30. And the cause of displeasure betwixt him & the duke of Austrich, 136, a 20 The confession of his leud life in a chapell, 126, b 10. Vanquisheth the Cyprians & chaseth them out of their campe, 127, b 60. His nauie setteth forth towards the holie land, 123, a 20. Returneth home out of the holie land, 135, b 20 Slandered for the death of the marquesse Monferrat, 30 He commeth to Vienna, 50 Submitteth himselfe to the duke of Austrich, 136, a 10 Discomfiteth the Saracens neere to port Japh, 134, a 30 Fell sicke at Cephas and recouereth, 135, a 50. His talke with king Cancred, 126, b 50 His expenses out of reason & measure, 126, b 30. What were the causes of grudge betweene him and the French king, 126, a 30, &c. He and the king of France receiued a solemne oth, 123, a 40, His demands for the dowrie of his sister, wife to king William, 124, b 40. Arriueth at Messina, 124, b 10. Blameth the court of Rome for couetousnes, 123, b 50. Setteth forward to the holie land, his fleet staied by contrarie winds, 123, b 10, 20 Taketh a castell and hangeth the owner, 123, a 20. Passeth ouer into Normandie, 121, a 20. Desirous of monie, and of his shifts, 120, b 40. Findeth his fathers treasure, the order of his coronation, 118, a 20 30. He and the king of France determine to go into the holie land, 117, b 30. Besiegeth Chalus, he is wounded, despaireth of his life, ordeineth his testament, 155, b 30, &c. His bequests and legacies, his death, his stature & shape of bodie, his disposition of mind, the vices that were in him, 156, all

Richard the second borne, 397, b 60. Counterfeited: note, 515, a 50. Created prince of Wales, 411, a 10. Prince of Chester, 492, b 40. Beginneth his reigne, the Londoners commend themselues to his fauour before the death of king Edward, 415, a 40, b 40. The solemne maner of his coronation: note, 416, a 60. &c. Married, the solemnitie therat, 487 a 10, 50, 60. &c. His euill gouernement, 493, a 60. The emperor agreeth with him for his ransome, 139, a 10. Lands assigned vnto him, 30. Order taken taken for leuieng of monie for his ransome, 50. Leaueth Conwaie castell and betaketh himselfe to his enimies, 500, b 30. His cognisance or badge, 500, b 60. The parlement house at dissention, he absenteth himselfe for the space of fortie dates: note, 452, b 10, 50 Loued earle de Være of Oxford exceedinglie, 453, b 20 ¶ See Earle Være. His inordinat affection towards the duke of Ireland and the earle of Suffolke, 454, a 20. Retrineth souldiors on all sides against the lords, 457, b 60. His maner of greeting and speaking to the lords that were banded against him, 459, b 30, 40, 50, 60. 460, a 10. A report that he ment to yeeld vp Calis into the French kings hands, 462, a 10. Keepeth his Christmas in the Tower of London, 462, a 50. Brought to his wits end, 462, b 60. His inconstancie, he is compelled to the nobles request, 463, a 10 30. Ruled not but was ruled: note, 465, a 40. His question to his lords in the councell chamber, taking vpon him the gouernment of all things, he displaceth diuerse officers, &c, 466, b 10, 40. Kept open houshold in the bishop of London his palace, 474, a 10. Passeth ouer into Ireland with a mightie armie, 481, b 20 Knighteth the foure Irish kings and others, 481, b 30 482, a 20. Openeth his greeuances in the parlement, 490, b 10. Saileth ouer into Ireland with a great armie, 497, a 10. Letteth the realme to farme, 496, a 60. A gard of Cheshire men about him, 489, b 50. Roiallie received into London, and his fauor recouered with gifts, 479, b 50, 60 479, a 10. Taketh the death of queene Anne his wife. greeuoustie, 481, a 20. Goeth ouer to Calis, the interuiew betweene him and the French king, both their oths, 486, a 60 b 20, 40. Expenses at the interuiew betweene him & the French king, 487, a 40, 50. He and the duke of Glocesters priuie grudge, 487, b 40. Conspireth the death of the duke of Glocester, 489, a 60. He and the dukes of Lancaster and Yorke reconciled, 490, a 50 He beareth saint Edwards arms, 492, b 60. Greatlie vexed in his sleepe after the execution of the erle of Arundell, 392, a 20. Procureth the popes bull against the breakers of his statutes, 493, a 50 His dome betweene the dukes of Lancaster & Norfolke, 495, a 60. Affianced and maried to the emperors sister, 439, b 50. Sumptuous in apparell, he is committed to the Tower, 501, b 40, 60. Articles obiected against him, wherby he was counted worthie to be deposed, 502, a 20, &c. He is persuaded to resigne the crowne to the duke, 503, a 50. A copie of the said voluntarie renunciation, b 10, 504, a 30. His resignation is confirmed, 505, a 10. The publication of the same, a 30. Returneth out of Ireland and landeth in Wales, 499, a 60. He despaireth of his safetie, stealeth awaie from his armie & taketh the castell of Flint, b 20. 30. He and his queene in progresse, 444, b 30. Appointed to be kept in perpetuall prison, 513, a 10, 20. He and his nobles at dissention, 458, a 30. Goeth with an armie against the Scots, 447, a 30 Burneth Edenburgh castell, b 10. Returneth out of Ireland, his dealing against the Wickleuists and their fauorers, 482, a 20, 40, b 30. 483, a 50, &c. Remoueth to saint Albans to see execution done vpon the rebels, 437, a 20 Calleth in his letters of infranchising granted vnto the bondmen, 437, a 10. Calleth in all such letters of manumission as the abbat of saint Albans had granted vnto his bondmen, 438, a 10. He and the duke of Lancaster accorded, 446, b 60. Maketh an agreement betweene the duke of Lancaster and the earle of Northumberland, 439, b 20 Deposed, he deliuereth to king Henrie the fourth all the goods that he hath, his dearh, personage, fortune, 507, b 50 60. His noble housekeeping, and excesse in apparell, the state of the reime in his time, 508, a 10, 20. The commons request against him, 513, b 30 His desperat manhod in prison, he is murthered, he is brought to the Tower, he is buried at Langlie, forren princes abhor to heare of the shamefull murthering of him, how the Gascoignes take his death, 515, all. The sundrie reports of his death, 516, b 50, 60. Reported to be aliue againe, 525, a 60, b 10. 520, a 10 533, a 60. 522, b 20. And what harme it did, 525, a 60

Richard the third described, the maner of his nativitie, his qualities, 712, a 60, b 10. Dispraised, 737, b 60. Beginneth his vsurped reigne, 732, a 20, b 20. He createth seuentéene knights of the Bath, what péeres and estates were attendant on him at his coronation, the solemne ceremonies vsed thereat, his wife queene Anne and hir traine, 733, all. Practiseth the murthering of his nephues, 734, b 20, 30, &c. Proclameth promises of rewards for the apprehending of the duke of Buckingham, sendeth forth a nauie to scowre the sea ouer against Britaine, 744, a 10, 40. Commeth to Excester and is receiued with presents, 746, a 10 Attempteth the duke of Britaine to deliuer the earle of Richmond into his hands, 747, a 60. His deuise to infringe and defeat the earle of Richmonds purpose, his leud practise to beguile him, 750, a 20. Casteth his loue on his neece purposing to marie hir, 751a, 50, 60. What noble men he most mistrusted, why he gaue licence to all in Hames castell to depart in safetie with bag and baggage, b 30, 50. His offenses and euill qualities summarilie touched, a notorious tyrant, 758, a 10, 20. Contemneth the erle of Richmond and his power, sendeth to his freends for chosen men, the ordering of his armie, 754, a 20, 50, b 10 His forged complaint against his wife to be rid of hir, 751, a 10. His purpose in the case of conuiration against him, his drift in disposing his armie, he preuaileth, 743, a 10, 60, b 10, &c. Calleth home his ships of war from the narrow seas, his pretended mariage offensiue to the erle of Richmond, 752, a 10, b 50. The principals of his power fall from him, his dreame foretels him of his end, bringeth all his men into a plaine, his oration to the chiefteins of his armie, 755, a 30, 40, b 10. His vaine confidence and bootlesse courage, 757, a 10. His armie discomfited, sleeth, what persons of name were slaine on his side, he himselfe taken and how he might haue escaped, 759. The shamefull carriage of his bodie to Leicester, his badge and cognisance euerie where defaced, the description of his person and certeine of his behauiors, 760, b 20, 40 50. Honor done him after his death by the erle of Richmond his enimie, 761, a 20

Richard the second sonne of K. John, 173, a 10

Richard the base sonne of king John beheadeth monke Eustace, 201, a 60

Richard Henrie the second his sonne affianced to earle Raimonds daughter, 67, b 20. Prepareth to resist his father, 94, a 10. Despaireth of good successe, 94, a 10. Submitteth himselfe to his father, 94, a 10

Richard, king Henrie the third his brother maried, 231, b 50 ¶ See Archbishop of Canturburie.

Riches, and what means king Richard the first had to gather them, 120, a 50, 60. Of London great, what then of all England? 141, b 60. They and inheritance, from whom, to whom, and to what end giuen, 1043, b 10. The right waie therunto, b 50. Of Henrie the eight, 799, a 50. ¶ See Monie.

Richmond built, and why so named, 788, a 10. On fire, 792, b 20

Richmont castell neere Gillingham when built, 7, b 10. ¶ See Erle.

Ridlie doctor perswadeth the people in a sermon at Paules crosse in the title of queene Jane, 1087, a 40. He and Latimer examined for their doctrine, 1129, b 60. 1130, a 10. Whie he was more rigorouslie handled than the residue of the bishops, 1089, a 40. His sermon of mercie and charitie before Edward the sixt how effectuall: note, 1081, b 20

Rie burnt by the Frenchmen, 417, b 50. The ships thereof win a good prise, 440, a 60

Riot at king Richard the first his coronation, 118, b 40, &c. By the Suffolkmen: note, 343, b 10. 344, all. 345. Of the people against the Iewes: note, 121, b 50. 122, all. Of the Kentishmen: note, 677, b 30. In the citie of London betweene strangers of diuers nations and the Londoners 645, a 30. Made on the Easterlings by the Londoners, 778, a 40. Of prince Edward punished by imprisonment, 313, b 30. Of the Londoners vpon the bishop of Salisburie his men, 478, a 20. Betwixt the earle of Warwike, and the tenants of the abbat of Euesham, 411, a 30. At Calis vpon the cutting of a purse, 879, b 10. Committed vnder pretense of wrestling, 204, a 20. Toward in west Smithfield, and the principals punished, 1321, b 30, 40. Wrought within the compasse of treason by a statute, 842, b 50, &c. ¶ See Fraie, Rebellion.

Rithwall king of Wales partaker with a rebell, 5, a 20

River that suddenlie ceased his course, 493, b 60

Riuers that ebbed and flowed became shallow, 38, a 40. Ouerflowing and drowning the land, 20 b 30. ¶ See Thames.

Riuers lord and others beheaded, 715, b 40. 725, b 10

Riuers Richard. ¶ See Welent.

Robert generall of the Normans slain by the Northumbers, and whie, 6, b 30

Robert rebelleth against his father duke William, and how it came to passe, 12, a 20. Duke of Normandie, solicited to come into England to claime the crowne, 29, b 20. Arriueth at Portlmouth, his mild nature, 29, b 60. Commeth into England to visit his brother Henrie the first, 32, a 50. Proclamed after the decease of his father, 16, b 20. Arriueth at Southhampton 17, b 50. How he might haue easilie recouered England from his brother, 17, b 60. Returneth out of the holie land, and indeuoureth to recouer England from Henrie the first, 29, a 60, Ingageth a part of his dukedome for monie, and whie, 17, a 30. His valiantnesse in fight, 33, a 10. Maketh earnest sute to his brother Henrie for peace, 32 b 40. Prisoner in Cardiff castell and there dieth, 33, b 30 More credulous than suspicious, 30, a 20. In disfauour with the English nobilitie and commons, 28, a 20. Chosen K. of Jerusalem by reason of a miracle, 29, a 60. Mortgageth his duchie of Normandie to his brother William Rufus, 22, a 60. It was he whome the nobles would haue had for king being the elder brother, 16, a 30. Returneth into Normandie displesed with his brother William Rufus, 19, b 40. At discord afresh with his brother William, 21, a 40. His deuise and desire to bereaue William Rufus his brother of the kingdome of England, 16, b 40. To whome married, and his issue, 34, a 10. Taken prisoner, 33, a 40 Described, and his lamentable end, 33, b 40. 60

Robert earle of Northumberland refuseth to come to king William Rufus, 21, b 30. Inuironeth king Malcolme, 20, b 60. Taketh sanctuarie, 21, b 60. Prisoner in Windsor castell, ſtell, and the cauſe of his conſpiracie, 22, a 10

Robert the baſe ſonne of Henrie the firſt married, & made earle of Glocester, 37, a 50. ¶ Sée Erle.
Robert the oneſte ſonne & heire of Robert earle of Leiceſter deceaſeth, 1375, b 40
Robbers. ¶ Sée Theeues.
Roch knight ſent to the Fléet: note, 968, a 40
Rochester beſieged, 267, a 60. The caſtell fortified, and by whom, 17, a 30. Beſieged by K. Rufus, 18, a 10. Beſieged & yéelded to king Iohn, 188, a 10 40 Reſtored to the archbiſhop of Canturburie, 186, b 10. The bridge when builded and by whom, 1377, b 60. How it began to decaie, meanes to kéepe it repared by act of parlement 1378, a 10, &c.
Rochford lord condemned and beheaded with others, 940, a 50
Rockesburgh, and the ſituation thereof, in what ſort to bée fortified, 991, a 10, 30, b 10. The ſame burned by the Scots, 420, a 50
Rodorike king of Vlſter banquiſhed, 100, a 30
Roger earle of Herefoord conſpireth againſt duke William. 11, a 40
Roges burnt through the eare, 1228, b 10. ¶ Sée Vagabonds Roiall exchange. ¶ Sée Burſſe.
Roiſton ſet on fire, 531, b 20
Rood of grace ſhewed at Pauls croſſe, 945.
Rood of Pauls erected: note, 1121, a 50, 60
Rokeſbie ſhirifſe of Yorkeſhire, his hardie courage to fight, 534, a 40
Rome blamed by Richard the firſt for couetouſneſſe, 123, b 50. What gaines it had out of England, 171, a 40. Henrie the third would in no wiſe bind and indanger his fée to it, 208, a 20. Beſieged 895, b 60. Taken and ſacked, 896, a 30, 50. Compoſitions with the ſoldiors to ſaue certaine places vnſpoiled, b 60. The ſpoile verie rich, 897, a 50. Sacked, 1364, a 30. Beſieged by the duke of Alua and king Philips armie, 50. ¶ Sée Pope and Legats.
Romans. ¶ Sée Triumphs.
Rone beſieged by Henrie the fift, 565, a 20. Inuironed with enimies and ſuccourleſſe, the number within the towne, extreme famine within it, 566 a 20, 30, b 20. They within the towne demand parle, a truce for eight daies, articles concerning the yéelding vp thereof, 567, b 60. King Henrie the fift his entrance thereinto, 568, a 40. A conſpiracie of the Frenchmen againſt the Engliſhmen, 568, b 60. The caſtell like to be taken by treaſon of the capteine, 608, b 20. Yéelded vnto the French king, 629, b 50
Roſamund the faire, concubine to Henrie the ſecond, where buried, 196, a 30. Hir cofer, hir death and epitaph, 115, b 50
Ros lord reuolteth vnto the Scots, his brother continueth faithfull vnto the king of England, 297, b 40
Ros a noble man of France accuſed, 251, a 30, &c.
Rouen beſieged by the king of France, 92, b 60. Through famine ſurrendred vnto the king of France, 167, b 50
Round table. ¶ Sée Windſor caſtell.
Rous knight, a valiant capteine, 421, b 30
Routs ¶ Sée Brabanders.
Rufus William his promiſes to purchaſe the peoples fauour, 8, b 4 ¶ Sée William Rufus.
Rugemont caſtell: note, 1007, b 60
Rulers ſundrie in a land weke-nethit, 81, b 30
Rumors falſe ſpread to worke an alteration, 190, b 20. ¶ Sée Report.
Running at the quintine, 247, b 50. At the ring, 805, b 60. At tilt, 805, a 10
Ruptarij, 99, a 10. ¶ Sée Brabanders.
Ruſſell knight his ſober and diſcréet déale in ſeruice commended, 879, b 50
Ruſſell lord deliuerer of the citie of Excéſter: note, 1022, a 60, b 10. Diſtruſteth himſelf and is vpon departing out of Deuonſhire, he marcheth againſt the rebels towards Excéſter, 1023, a 20, &c. 1024, L. primate ſeale his letters to the L. protector, 1057, b 20, a 10 He ſueth for peace betweene the lords, 1058, a 10. ¶ Sée Erle of Bedford.
Rutland earle lord Edward ambaſſador into Scotland: note, 1562, a 40
Rutland caſtell built, 279, b 50 Beſieged, 280, b 60. Taken, 278, b 10.
Rutters, 99, a 10

S.

Sabboth, a ſuperſtitious and hurtfull obſeruation thereof, 262, b 60
Sacrament of baptiſme how the rebels would haue it miniſtred, 1003, a 40
Sacraments forbidden to bée vſed of the clergie, 76, b 10. Contemned, and how the offendors puniſhed, 203, b 60
Sacrilege and no ſacrilege, 22, b 10. Seuerelie puniſhed, 704, b 50
Sackuill knight ambaſſador to the French king, 1224, b 30. His interteinment verie honorable, 40. The firſt place of his audience, his liberalitie, 60. His return into England 125, a 10, 20. ¶ Sée Buckehurſt.
Safe conduct ſued for of the king of Armenia, and denied him, 453, b 30. Granted vnto ſoldiors, 21, b 10. And the force thereof, 459, b 30. Preuaileth not, 103, b 20. ¶ Sée Licence, Protection, 104, Cardinall Viuiano.
Sadler ſir Rafe knight, treaſurer of the Engliſh armie, 980, b 40. His ſeruice againſt the Scots commended, 988, b 30
Sale lord treaſurer beheaded at the ſtandard in Cheape, 634, b 30
Saint Albons deſtroied, 199, a 10
Saint Anthonies. ¶ Sée Church.
Saint Bartholomewes by Smithfield when builded, 31 a 30. The hoſpitall builded in part, 540, a 60
Saint Marie Oueries made a pariſh church, 950, a 60, Burned, 176, b 10. Repared. 172, b 10
Saint Quintins beſieged and taken by the Engliſh, 1134, a 60, b 10
Saint Thomas hoſpitall erected, 1082, b 10
Saints, and praieng to them miſliked by William Rufus: note, 27, b 20
Saladine cauſeth the chriſtian priſoners to be beheaded, 133, a 30. ¶ Sée Jeruſalem, Saracens, Turks.
Salike. ¶ Sée Law.
Salisburie made a citie, 202, b 60
Salisburie the traitor. ¶ Sée Babington.
Salt called Baie ſalt, déer, 1260 a 50
Salute. ¶ Sée Coine.
Samſon. ¶ Sée Biſhop.
Samuell monke of ſaint Albons made biſhop of Dublin, 22, a 30
Sanctuarie and of ſuch as flie for ſuccour therevnto: note, 33, b 60. No ſafe harbour for rebels, 784, a 60. For for traitors: note, 764, b 40. ¶ Sée Robert of Northumberland, 21, b 60. and Weſtminſter.
Sanctuaries their vſe and abuſe: note, 718, a 10, &c. Reſtreined, 790, b 10
Sanders murthered. ¶ Sée Murther.
Sanders doctor & maintener of the popes bull, 1361, b 30. His miſerable end, 1365, b 60
Sands knight a whip vnto the Frenchmen, 874, b 10
Sands doctor his trouble, perſecution, and voluntarie baniſhment, 1145, b 50, &c. 1146, 1147, 1148, 1149
Sandwich kept by rebels, they ſue for pardon, 693, a 10. Spoiled by the French, 645, b 30
Saracens diſcomfited by Richard the firſt, 134, a 30. Vanquiſh the chriſtians and kill the earle of Salisburie with others, 243, a 10. Called Arſacides, their generation and dealing with prince Edward, 275, a 30, &c. Againſt whom went diuerſe nobles of England, 225, b 30. Make fore war vpon the chriſtians in Spaine, and are banquiſhed, 213, a 10. Had the whole land in poſſeſſion, 205, a 60. Beſeege the citie of Damieta, 202, a 50. Win the ſame from the chriſtians, 204, b 50. A iornie againſt them, 473, a 40. Out of whoſe hands the whole land was to be recouered, 22, a 60. Win lands from the chriſtians, 108, b 10. Traitorouſlie kill the marqueſſe of Montferrat, 134, b 40. Yéeld Acres into the chriſtians hands, 132, b 50. Make war againſt the Portingals, 124, a 10. ¶ Sée Chriſtians, Granado.
Sargent murthered, and the offendor hanged in Cheapſide, 1310, b 60. Slaine, & the murtherer hanged in Fléetſtreet. 1348, a 10. ¶ Sée Officer.
Sargents at law their feaſt kept at Elie houſe, wherat Henrie the ſeuenth and his queene were preſent, 779, a 40. In the archbiſhop of Canturburies palace, whereat were preſent Henrie the ſeuenth with all his nobles, 791, b 50. At Gréeſ inne, 1210, a 10. At the new temple, 1314, a 60
Saturne and Iupiter. ¶ Sée Planets.
Satisfaction that Henrie the ſecond ſware to make for the death of Becket, 83, b 50
Sauage knight ſlaine at the ſiege of Bullongne, 775, a 50
Sauage the traitor. ¶ See Babington.
Sauerie de Mauleon, and the earle of Salisburie at diſcord, 194, a 40. 206, a 20. He reuolteth to the French king, 40. An aſſiſtant of king Iohn againſt his rebels, 187, b 60, 188, a 30, 190, b 10. Sore hurt and wounded, 190, b 60
Sauoie burnt by the rebels, 431, a 20. The hoſpitall, 796, a 50
Sawtrie a prieſt burnt for religion, 519, a 30
Scales lord his chiualrie, 669, a 20, &c. Slaine moſt cruellie: note, 654, b 60
Scaliot a blacke ſmith. ¶ Sée Workmanſhip.
Scarſitie, proniſion thereagainſt for the poore behoofe, 476, b 60. ¶ See Dearth.
Scattergood. ¶ Sée Policie.
Schiſme betweene two popes for the dignitie of ſaint Peters chaire, 484, b 50. In the church, and whereupon, 24 b 20
Schoole of ſaint Anthonies in the citie of London, 779, a 50 At Tunbridge, 1062, b 20. At Drayton in Shropſhire, 1060, b 60. At Briſtow and Reading, 1092, a 30. At Holt in Northfolke founded, 1131, b 10. At Sandwich erected, 1377, a 60, b 10. At Sutton Valens in Kent, 1311, b 10. Founded by archbiſhop Parker, 1261, a 40. In Bedford founded by William Harper, 1194, b 40. Of the merchant tailors erected, 1194, a 10. At Ratcliffe builded, 945. b 60. At Walthamſtow builded, &c. 830, a 40
Scholers diſputations, 1129, b 10, &c. Tried from traitors by ſix queſtions: note, 1368, a 10, &c. ¶ Sée Oxford.
Schoolemaiſters to teach ſcholers to conſtrue their leſſons in Engliſh, 396, a 20
Scot ſir Thomas knight, of Kent, a good politician, excéedingly beloued of the people, Fo: note, 1539, b 30. 1541, a 20. 1546, b 40, 50
Scot. ¶ Sée Erle of Cheſter.
Scotland, Henrie the fift is counſelled to the conqueſt of it, 546, a 40. Inuaded by the lords Ros and Dacres, 874, b 50. Sore ſpoiled by the erle of Surrie and his power, 878, b 30. Inuaded, and diuerſe townes burned by the Engliſh, 875, b 60. If and England at wars, the cauſes of the ſame, 957, a 20, &c. And what townes, villages, &c: the Engliſh armie burned and ſpoiled, 963, a 50, 60. The midle marches therof forraged, 969

ed,969,b 10. The countrie inuaded by the erle of Hertford, 969,b 60. An English armie goeth against it, their number arriueth in the land,961,b 40, 50, 60. An harbour for rebels and malcontents: note the whole storie of duke William & page, 10,b 20. Trouble there. Frenchmen sent thither, the lords thereof that were confederd against the French; 1180, b 30, 40, 60 The earle of Sussex maketh a tournie thereinto, wasted by fire and sword, 1222, a 40, 50. Inuaded by the erle of Sussex, 1213,b 60. Wasted and spoiled by fire and sword,1214,1215,1216,1217, 1218,1219,1220. Wonne fiue times by one king of England, 999, a 10, Diuerse places therein burned, besieged and otherwise dealt withall by the English, 990,a 10, &c. Inuaded on the west side, 992, a 30. Places gained there by the English, 992, b 10, 20, &c. An English power both by sea and land sent thither, chiefteins of the armie,980, a 30,40,&c. The borderers of England make a rode thereinto, 446, a 20 Inuaded, 445, b 10. ¶ See Duke of Lancaster. Inuaded by the earle of Warwike, 353, b 20. Countries subdued therein by the Englishmen, 376, a 50. Resigned into the hands of king Edward the third, 386, a 60. when it had great want of men, 323, a 20. Controuersie there, about the crowne thereof: note, 285, b 60, 286, all. The kings fealtie set downe in forme, 289, b 60 And his homage, 290, a 20 Edward the first appointed wardens for the same, 288, a 30, &c. That the right and title thereof belonged to Edward the first, note, 309, b 60, 310, a 10. The lord Segraue sent with an armie thither, 311, b 30. ¶ See Britaine, Church, Henrie the fourth.

Scots, their king inuadeth Northumberland, 87, b 60 His thought at the view of the English armie, the order of his host, French capteins among them, the Scots are put to the worst in the right wing, the left wing discomfited, 828, all. The kings magnanimitie, he fighteth himselfe verie valiantlie, the stoutnesse of his stomach, he is slaine, his bodie found hauing diuerse woonds, 829, a 10, &c. b 30 Serueth king Henrie the fift, 580, b 30. In Henrie the fift his armie, 577, a 10 His letter of defiance to king Henrie the eight, 820. Commeth to the English parlement, 97, b 30. He with other deliuered out of prison, 95, a 10. Doth homage to king Henrie the second, 73, b 60. Knighted by king Henrie the second, 76, a 30 Slaine by his owne subiects, 771, a 20. Inuadeth England with a great armie in Perkins behalfe, 781, a 20, b 10, &c. Desireth the ladie Margaret eldest daughter of Henrie the seuenth to wife, 785, b 60. Doth homage to Henrie the fift, 587, a 20, Fled from his siege at Rockelburgh, 615, a 20 James is murthered: note, 616, a 10. Besiegeth Rockelburgh, and is slaine, 657, a 60. Taken prisoner, 91, b 60. Inuadeth Northumberland, 89, a 40. Inuadeth England, 91, a 60. Prisented to the king of England, 92, b 10. Deliuereth by tastels, 95, a 30. Doth homage to the king of England, 95, b 60. Knight of the garter, 939, a 60. Murthered, 1209, b 60. Proclameth open warre against England, 518, b 10. Inuadeth England, the lords assemble a power to fight against him, the queene present in person, 375, b 40, &c. He is taken prisoner, 376, a 10. Resigneth the realme of Scotland into the hands of Edward the third, 386, a 60 Ransomed and set at libertie, 391, a 60. Sueth for peace vnto king Edward the first, and submitteth himselfe, 300, b 10, &c. would serue two masters, 297, b 20. Concludeth a league with the K. of France, 296, a 10. Renounceth his homage vnto the king of England, 245, a 40. Doth homage vnto the king of England, 299, a 40. Kept Christmas with the king of England at Yorke, 211, b 30. Commeth vnto London, 263, a 10. Warden of the English marches, 229, b 10. His allegiance to K. Henrie the third, testified by a charter, 233, b 60. Inuadeth England, 233, a 30. Commeth into England, 254, a 40. His oth of allegiance vnto Richard the first, 120, b 20, Commeth vnto king John at Lincolne, 162, a 60. Doth homage, 69, a 60. 193, a 60. Compounded with king John for peace, 173, b 10. Honoured with the order of knighthood, 176, a 30. Commeth to see king Richard the first, 143, a 30. His allowance by the grant of king Richard: note, 143, a 50. Hee beareth the sword before the king, b 30. Maketh sute vnto king Richard the first for Northumberland, 144, a 30. Interteined honorablie at Canturburie, 120, b 20. ¶ See Bishop of Durham.

Scots inuade the English marches, 47, b 10. 48, a 60. Inuade Northumberland, 49, a 40. They & the English dw bicker, the Scots put to flight, 49, b 50, 60. Pursued, retire, 48, b 40. Inuade the English borders, 782, b 40. 645, b 40, 50. Ouerthrowne by sir Robert Umfreuill, 548, a 30. Inuade the English borders, 560, a 30. They recule home for feare, 560, a 50. With the aid of Tuidalemen did much hurt in England, 892, a 30. Inuade the bishoprike of Durham, 332, b 10, &c. Prisoners in the archbishop of Yorke his place, 811, a 40. Inuade the borders of England, assailed, discomfited, slaine and put to flight, 825, b 10, &c. They and the Englishmen haue a sharpe conflict, two battels fought not, but gaue the woorse on, they flie at the peale of guns, 829, a 10, 50, b 40. Enter into England and pob. the market folkes going vnto Berwike, put to flight and slaine, 383, a 20, 40. Discomfited by the Englishmen, 929, b 10. Wone warre, and at last sue for peace, 936, &50, 60. Inforce Henrie the eight to warre against them, their double dealing in a negotiation of an agreement, 957, b 30, 50. Inuaded by the Englishmen, put to flight, taken prisoners, before the councell in the starchamber, 958, all. They depart into their owne countrie, 959, a 50 Their king dieth for greefe, 958, b 30. A great power gouerned by noble men goeth against them, 961, b 40, 50, 60, They offer to impeach the English mens passage, flee vnto Edenburgh, 962, a 10, 20, 30. Spoile the English marches, they lose more than they win, assait the castell of Warke 881, a 60, b 60. Chased and driuen awaie, 862, a 10. All in England apprehended and fined, 873, a 30. They and the Englishmen incounter, 969, b 50, 60. An ouerthrow on both sides, 970, a 10, &c. Their crueltie against the Englishmen, 10, b 10. Inuade England, 19, b 10. Ouerthrowne and slaine, and put to flight, 21, a 10. Sue vnto queene Elisabeth for aid against the French, 1186, b 40. For respit of war, 1214, b 20. Their breach of couenant, 1214, a 50. And common fault, 1217, b 60 They muster foure thousand men, 1219, a 20. Their vaine doubt, they meete the English armie, 984, a 60, b 30, Slaine, the maner and the number, 988, a 10, 20, Why so few were taken, their bow, apparell, number of prisoners, spoile of their campe, the feature of their personages, 988, a 10, Such as came to king Henrie the eight, their obeisance: note, 991, a 50, Submit and yeeld themselues to the English power: note, 981, b 20, Their subtile practise, 982, a 20, 30, They flie and are sharplie pursued, 987, b 10. Cast awaie their munition and furniture, the lighter to be gone, 987, b 30, Charged with ill dealing in the contract of marriage betweene king Edward the first and the queene of Scotland, 999, a 20, &c. Reiect all the benefites proffered in the duke of Summersets exhortation: note, 1001, b 60, Aided by the French king, go to the worst, 993, a 60, &c. They are set at a staie vpon the sudden, their order both in respect of furniture and disposition, an hot encounter betweene the English and them: note, 985, b 10, &c. 40, &c. 986, a 10, &c. Persons wounded & slaine, b 10, &c. Hampered for their disloialtie in king Edward the sixts time, 980, 981, 982, Smothered in a caue, discomfited, and put to flight, slaine and taken prisoners, 982, a 10, 50, 60, Preparation for warre against them, 705, b 10, Enter into Ireland, hard hold betwixt them and the enimie, Berwike is betraied vnto them, they winne castels, spoile and burne, they come into Yorke, 324, all. Accursed by the pope, they inuade England and returne at their pleasure, 325, a 60, b 10, 20. Inuade Northumberland, 329, a 10. Inuade Ireland, 322, a 60. Great slaughter of them, they spoile the bishop of Durham, and raise their siege, b 20, &c. Take Warke castell, 514, a 60. Burne and spoile in Northumberland, 518, b 40. Ouerthrowne, banquished at Hameldon, the number slaine, prisoners taken, 520, b 30, 40, 50, 60, Their crueltie verie barbarous, 465, b 20. They gaue the English an ouerthrow, b 20. In the time of treatie they spoile Northumberland, hauing prounded an armie to inuade England: be hardlie persuaded to accept a truce, 466, a 50, 60. Aided against the English by the French, they inuade the frontiers of England, they spoile Cumberland, assault Carleill, 447, a 20, 40. Burne Warke castell, 444, b 60. Spoile the north parts in the time of dearth, 422, b 60, 423, a 10, &c. Inuade the English borders, spoile whole countries, and carrie awaie great bootes, 428, a 10. Their nobilitie at dissention, their prince staid in Scotland, 531 b 50, 60. Inuade England, 346, b 60. Disloiall to king Edward the third, he assaileth them, they submit themselues, 351, all. Their stoutnes hindereth the conclusion of peace, a statute ordeined by them in fauor of king Edward the third, 352, a 30, &c: b 40. Fight with aces, 376, a 10. Sore afflicted by king Edward the third, 386, b 20. Enter into England, and doo much hurt, compounded withall for monete, 323, a 10. Discomfit the lord Beaumont, 323, a 40. Accursed and interdicted, 323, b 10. Inuade the English borders, 295, a 40. Their crueltie, the castell of Dunbar rendered to them, put to flight and slaine, 299, b 10, 20, &c. 297, b 60. They raise their siege from Carleill, 298, a 10. Disloiall in dealing, 296, a 40. Thir nobles fealtie vnto king Edward the first set downe in expresse words, 287, b 60, 288, a 10. Their vnfaithfull dealing, 303, b 30. In armes, 303, b 40, 60. At discord, they sue for peace, discomfited, 304, a 10, &c. Promisebreakers, they assaile the English, discomfit them, enter into Werwike, inuade Northumberland, spoile the countrie, returne home, discomfited and slaine, 305, a 10, 50, 60, b 10, 50, 60. Besiege Rockelborough, 306, b 60. Summoned moned vnto the parlement at Yozke, 307, a 10. The ozder of their battels, their hozsemen slie, their archers slaine, 307, b 30, 60. The slaughter of them, 308, a 10. Vexed by king Edward the first, fozbidden so to dow by pope Bonifface, 309, a 10. Flie from king Edward the firsts power, hide themselues, fall to submission, 312, a 40, &c. In armes vnder Bzuse, discomfited, 314, a all.

Scripture abused: note, 1223, a 50

Scrowpe lozd by king Richard the thirds commission kept a session against diuerse indicted of high treason, 746, a 20

Sea decreaseth, 38, a 40. Ouerflowne, and dowing much hurt by breaking into the land, 526, b 60: 350, b 50. With huge tides that did much hurt, 220, a 60. Seemith to burne: note, 243, a 20. Riseth higher than the naturall course gaue, 244, b 40. Ceased from ebbing and flowing three moneths, 236, b 20. Riseth with verie high tides, 252, a 50. Extraozdinarie, 204, b 40.

Seafaring men, and of certeine ozders to be obserued amongest them, 123, a 30

Sebastian Gabato his voiage, 1083, a 50. His discouerie of an Iland of rich commodities, 785, a 30. Bzingeth strange men from the new found Ilands, 789, b 50

Secrets disclosed, 511, b 40, 50. Not to be discouered: note, 299, b 60, 300, a 10. Of princes disclosed by a craftie knaue, 812, b 20

Sedition to what issue it commeth, 787, a 30, 40. Sowers thereof taken, conuented and executed, 1360, a 10. Condemned by ancient lawes made two hundzed yeares ago, 20. Some condemned, and yet spared from execution, and why, 30. The mischiefe spzinging from the same, 1054, b 30. Punished by imprisonment and confiscation, 446, a 50. Sowen by a seditious preest, and by a counterfet earle of Warwike, 765, a 20, &c. How greeuous vnto a commonwealth, discoursed by sir John Cheeke knight, 1042, 1043, vnto 1055: note it well, it is worth the reading. ¶ See Bookes, Counsell, and Letters.

Segraue lozd in armes against the Scots, taken, wounded, and rescued, 311, b 30 &c.

Sele common granted vnto the Londoners, 208, a 10. Roiall old made void, and a new confirmed, 208, b 60. Newlie made, 277, a 20. And the old, with all things sealed therewith annulled, 145, b 50

Selim prince of Turkes his ambition and tyrannie against his father and affines, he murthzoweth the Sophie of Persia, 846, a 10, 20, 30. Deceaseth, and Soliman dwth succeed, 847, b 20. ¶ See Saracens.

Selling and bueing of menlike oxen and kine, 331, a 10

Semoz knight sent vnto the Tower, attainted and beheaded, 996, a 60

Sempzingham William deceaseth, 1131, b 20

Senena. ¶ See Guenhera.

Sens belieged and taken, 976, a 50

Sentlow knight sent vnto the Tower, 1452, b 60

Sequestration of benefices: note, a shift to get monele, 193, a 20

Serle maior of London in certi- ot not esteemed or regarded, 204, a 40

Serle one of king Richard the second his chamber, with- leth abode that king Richard is aliue, he is apprehended, examined for the duke of Glocester his death, drowne through euerie good towne, executed at London, 975

Sermon of George Cloke at Paules crosse offensiue, for the which he was inioined submission: note, 1558, b 10. Of Stephan Gardiner: note, 1126, a 60. Of Peter Pateshull, 455, a 60, b 10. Of Ball a seditious preest vnto certeine rebels, 437, a 60. Of the bishop of Rochester at king Richard the second his coronation, 417, b 40. Full of slander against king Edward the fourth: note, 727, b 10, &c. That turned the preacher to shame and losse of life: note, 728, a 30, 40. Undiscreet and seditious, 841, a 10, 20. Inuectiue against bishop Gardiner, and the preacher asketh forgiuenesse, 950, b 10, 20. In Paules church for victozie against the Turkes, 1226, b 40. The assemblie thereat, b 50. Made by John Knewstubs, at Vtricht in the low countries, in a Dutchie assemblie, 1433, b 60. Of doctoz Ridleie before king Edward the sixt, what effects it wzought touching charitie, &c: note, 1081, a 20, &c. That procured rigozous handling to the preacher: note, 1089, a 40. At Paules crosse wherein the people were persuaded vnto the title of queene Jane, 1087, a 40. At the Spittle without Bishopsgate, and the house of the maioz and aldermen by whome built, 702, b 50. Full of papisticall adulation made at pope Gregozie the thirteenth his buriall, 1397, b 40, &c. 1398, &c. to 1400. ¶ See Oration, Preacher, Shaw, Submission.

Sermons perpetuallie founded at Norwich, 1261, a 60. At Paules crosse none for the space of a quarter of a yeare: note, 1182, a 10, 20. Made to and for the marriage of king Henrie the eight, with queene Katherine, 928, a 20. That brought the preacher vnto losse of credit, honestie and life: note, 725, b 30, 40

Sernant constant and trustie: note, 500, b 60. Trustie and loiall vnto the ladie Elisabeth, 1159, b 40. Murthering his maister is hanged, 1213, b 10. Deceiueth his maister, and commeth vnto an vtter vndoing: note, 1647, b 20. Beggarly his maister for reward: note, 1743, b 59, 60, 60. 744, b 60. ¶ See Wantsters.

Seruants wages rated by statute: note, 380, b 30, &c.

Seruice old remembred, 293, a 40. God in vaine by swearing and breeding conspiracie: note, 521, b 30

Sessingman reproued, and reformed: note, 1315, a 20

Seruitude none in England before duke Williams coming in, 61, b 50. d Sournesh et pesse sole, 5, b 10. Reason for taking of native countrie preserued before it, 6, a 10. Under the Normans signified vnto the world by outward ceremonie, 5, b 10

Sessions. ¶ See Shirnesse.

Sessment refused to be paid as it was leuied, and how punished, 968, a 40. ¶ See Subsidie.

Sforce duke of Millan by vsurpation, 761, a 50

Shandois lozd his false report in the Starchamber against ladie Elisabeth, 1102, a 20. Deceaseth, 1258, a 20

Shane Oneale of Ireland discomfited by the English power, 1209, b 39. Mangled and hackt in peeces, 1210, a 30 50

Shaw maioz of London a proud man and a fauourer of king Richard the third, 725, b 40

Shaw doctoz his sermon that lost him his honestie and his life: note, 725, b 40. Commended by the duke of Buckingham, 729, b 40. He was taught his lesson per he came into the pulpit, 727, b 10, &c. 40

Sheene the kings manour burnt, 788, a 10

Sheepe. ¶ See Cotesholde.

Shepherd called the holie shepherd, 606, b 40

Sheffeld lozd is lamentable slaine in the Nozfolke rebellion, 1034, b 30. Laid to the rebels charge, 1046, b 60 1047, a 10

Shellie how he was affectioned to Throckmoztons treasons, 1372, b 20. In actoz in the conspiracie of the earle of Nozthumberland, 1407, b 10

Shews of dispozt with Robin Hood, &c: before king Henrie the eight, 836, b 40, &c, 837, a 10. Of estate on the Twelfe night, 837, b 60. At tilts at Grenewich, 815, a 10. Of delight wherein great personages were actozs, 805, a 10, &c. 806, a 10, &c. Triumphant of proper deuise at the receiuing of the earle of Leicester into the low countries, note well, 1424, b 10, &c. to 1430. ¶ See Pageants and Sights.

Shift. ¶ See Policie.

Ship roiall called Henrie grace de Dieu, 815, b 40

The Marie rose drowned through negligence: note, 969, a 30. The barke Asgar recouered from the French, 972, a 60. The Regent burnt, 815, b 10

The Greihound cast awaie, 1202, b 10. The great Harrie burnt, 1090, b 50

Ship scene in the aire, 249, a 60

Ships English spoiled by the French, 1195, a 60. Of queene Elisabeth sent forth into the narrow seas, 1211, a 10. Scowze the narrow seas, 1247, b 50, 60. Their seruice in Ireland, 1314, b 50. Three of name wone from the Scots, 989, b 60

Set on fire by the English, 1225, b 30. Two of the French kings taken with a pzize in them, 453, b 50, 524, a 50. Of Rie sum a good prize, 440, a 60. Of a strange mold and forme driuen on the coasts of England, 250, a 10

Ships and cables seene in the aire, 1313, a 60, b 10

¶ See French and Flemish, Thames.

Shipwracke, 562, b 10. 365, a 30. Wherein two hundzed persons were dzowned, 1202, b 19. 423, a 60, b 10 Lamentable, 41, b 10. ¶ See Noblemen.

Shiriffes of shires when instituted, 8, a 60. Of all shires sent foz to the court, 457, b 40. Ozders deuised foz their appearance and bringing of accounts, 254, a 60, Of London put awaie their officers, 961, b 10. ¶ See London.

Shirewood fozrest. ¶ See Fozrest.

Shoes long piked fozbidden, 668, b 30

Shoomaker called the cocke of Westminster, his gifts to the hospitals, 1083, a 20

Shooting in the long bow when first it came into England, 15 b 50

Shoze wife king Edward the fourth his concubine: note, 722, b 60. Moze sued vnto than all the lozds in England, 729, a 40. Spoiled of all that she had, put to open penance, described, 724, b 10, &c.

Shozditch knight his wozds to the pope, and the popes to him, 365, b 40, 50

Shzewsburie towne partlie burnt, 218, a 30

Sickenesse extreame among people in all places, 14, a 60 Strange at Oxford assise, whereof iudges &c, died: note, 1270, a 40, b 10, &c. Strange in Excester, at a sessions there held, like that of Oxford: note, 1547, b 30, &c.

Sidneie sir Henrie knight sent ambassadoz into France, 1195, a 40. The historie of his life and death, 1548, b 10, &c.

Sidneie sir Philip knight dead of a wound, right honourable repozted of beyond and on this side the seas: note, 1554, a 60, &c.

Sidneie ladie, the said knights mother deceaseth, hir godlie end, 1553, b 30

Sights in the aire fearefull and and ſtrange,1270, a 20. 1313, a 60. 484, b 10, &c. 395, a 60. 210. b 50. 249, a 60

Of fierie impreſſions in the aire, 1208, a 40. 1260, a 30 1261, b 60. Out of the earth, 220, a 10. ¶ Sée Mone, Pagents, Shews, & Wonders.
Siluer mines found in Deuonſhire: note, 316, b 30
Simon a fraudulent and ſeditious prieſt, 765, a 10
Simencll the counterfeit earle of Warwike, 763, a 20. He is honourablie receiued into Ireland, a 60. Proclamed king of England, 766, a 10 He with all his adherents landeth in England, b 10 He is taken, pardoned, and in place of homelie ſeruice vnder Henrie the ſeuenth, 767, a 10, 30
Simonie, wherein note Anſelmes opinion, 24, a 50. A practiſe in William Rufus his time, 24, a 30. A thouſand pounds for a biſhoprike, 26, a 50. Greatlie abhorred by an archbiſhop of Canturburie: note, 213, a 60. ¶ Sée Abbaſies and Biſhoprikes.
Simplicitie abuſed, 1063, b 30
Siward duke of Northumberland, 5, a 10
Six articles ſued for to be renewed, 1003, b 10. ¶ Sée Statute.
Skinks valourous ſeruice againſt the Spaniards, 1431, a 10, &c. Taketh the towne of Warle, 1429, b 10. Whie he burned it, 30. Knighted, 1434, a 10. His good ſeruice againſt the enimie, 60, b 10, &c.
Skipwith Richard. ¶ Sée Juſts triumphant.
Slander that went of king Richard for the death of the marqueſſe of Montferrat, 135, b 30. Againſt king Edward the fourth confirmed: note, 729, b 50, 60. ¶ Sée Sermon.
Slanders deuiſed by malicious heads againſt quéene Eliſabeth. ¶ Sée Bookes ſeditious, Libell, and Quéene Eliſabeth.
Slaughter of fiue or ſix people by the fall of a wall, 1413, a 60 Of eight perſons by the fall of a ſcaffold at Paris garden, 1353, a 30. ¶ Sée Murther.
Sleepe of foureteene daies and as manie nights, 972, b 20
Smith Thomas eſquire and cuſtomer, a good commonwealth man: note, 1539, a 20
Smith doctor his recantation. 980, a 10
Smith embroderer. ¶ Sée Charitie.
Smithfield ſometimes a common laiſtall and place of execution, 31, a 30. And to that vſe ſince oftentimes applied. ¶ Sée Arden and Horſleſtealers.
Snow great in Aprill, 1272, a 20, In Maie, 290, a 50
Sodomitrie puniſhed in clergiemen and laiemen, 31, a 10
Soldan king of Surie and Egypt his ſtate, by whoſe election they were choſen, two of them ſlaine, and all Surie & Egypt ſubdued, 846, a 60, b 10, &c.
Soldiors forren arriue to aid king Iohn againſt his barons, 187, b 60. Set altogither vpon the ſpoile, 192, b 40
Of certeine ordinances deuiſed by them to be obſerued, 125, a 50. Engliſh inriched, 770, b 60. Trained vp in turnies, 145, b 60. Make a fraie againſt the lord maior of London, 636, a 20. Commended with words, and rewarded with ſpoiles, 560, a 10 Engliſh haue new cotes beſtowed vpon them by the ducheſſe of Sauoie, 810, b 10 Their vnrulie and drunken behauiour noted, 809, b 30. 810, a 10. Their miſbehauiour againſt the L. admerall, 814, a 50. Of Tornaie rewarded of K. Henrie the eight, 850, b 10. Euill vnder a good captaine, 942, b 30. Slaie their captaine 10, a 50. Their wages borne by the lords and peéres of the realme, 14, a 60. How well affected William Rufus was to them, 27, a 10. Pzeſt and releaſed for ten ſhillings or twentie ſhillings a man: note, 21, a 60, b 10. Their outrage, a proclamation to reſtreine it, 1197, a 60. Good orders proclamed to be kept amongſt them, 1196, b 40. Hanged for reuolting, 1201, a 10. Executed for drawing vpon their captains, &c, 1202, b 30. Tranſported into Ireland to vanquiſh Shane Oneale, 1209, b 30. Yong trained vp in the field at the citie of Londons charge, 1228, a 50, 60. Tranſported into Ireland, 1314, a a 30. Sent ouer ſea to aid the low countries, 1413, b 10. To what ſhifts they fall after diſcamping, 1050, a 60. Reteined on all ſides by king Richard the ſecond againſt the lords, 457, b 60. Hardie of preſts and religious men, 443, a 60 A great abuſe in the choiſe of them, 454, a 60. Called the croſſed fouldiors, 441, a 60 442, a 20. Incouraged by hope of gaine, 443, b 40. Out of wages by meanes of peace doo much hurt in France, 395, b 10. Defrauded of their wages and the partie executed as a traitor, 411, b 10. Of the French in a poore eſtate, 199, b 40. Doo much hurt, they ſpoile Weſtminſter, they are ſacked and are throwne into the Thames, 273, b 20 Their paie, a thing preferred before race of men: 229, b 20 ¶ Sée Aduentures, Law marſhall, Mutine.
Soliman Ottoman beſiegeth and taketh Rhodes, 876, b 20. It is yeelded vp vnto him, his contempt of chriſtian religion, 877, a 10, 20. Succeſſour after Selims deceaſſe, 847, b 20.
Sophie of Perſia. ¶ Sée Selim.
Sorcerie and inchantment. ¶ Sée Coniuror, and Elenor Cobham.
Sound moſt ſtrange and wonderfull heard, 226, a 10
Southhampton burned, 355, b 50
Southwell knight his words in the parlement houſe touching quéene Maries child yet vnborne, 1124, a 50
Southwell the archbiſhop of Yorke his manor, 35, b 30
Southworke in the iuriſdiction of an alderman, 1062, a 60, b 10. Liberties purchaſed for it, 1062, a 40
Spaine a deadlie bane vnto the Engliſh ſoldiors, 450, a 60, b 10. The king therof his armie vnder the conduct of the duke of Alua, & the kingdome of Nauarre ioined vnto his, 813, b 30, &c. His clame to the empire, 851, a 56, 60. He is choſen emperour, 852, a 30. Philip his proclamation againſt Engliſh merchants, 1206, a 10. His officers full of tyrannicall lordlineſſe and villanie, 1335, a 50. Chaſed and driuen out of his realme, 397, b 10, 60. His egernes to be reuenged, his diſſimulation, 399, a 50, 60. Sendeth an herald vnto prince Edward of Wales, 398, a 60
Spaniards ioined with the Engliſh armie againſt the French, 879, b 60. Aſſalt Rome, take it, ſacke it, kill and ſlaie without exception: note, 896, a 10, &c. 897, a 20. Enter into Antuerpe, ſpoiling, wounding and killing, 1263, a 10. They and others in Ireland ſlaine, 1314, b 50, 60. Diſcomfited, 1432, b 10, &c. They bite their fingers for anger, 1433, a 30. They and Engliſhmen togither by the eares about whores, 1126, b 60. Their manhood againſt the French, 1138, a 60. More fauourable vnto ladie Eliſabeth than ſome Engliſhmen, 1157, b 20. Hanged for murther, 1121, b 30. Their gallies chaſed from the Engliſh coaſts, and vanquiſhed. 427, a 20. Their Fleet ouermatch the Engliſh, 420, a 30. Vanquiſhed by king Edward the third vpon the ſea, 379. b 60. Their order of battell, 398, b 60. Their number, 399, a 10, Put to flight, the number ſlaine, 399, a 60, b 10. ¶ Sée Frenchmen, Grenefield, Granado.
Spenſer the yonger ſhamefullie executed, 339, b 50
Spenſer ladie committed vnto ward: note, 527, b 20, 30
Spenſers notable inſtruments to bring king Edward the ſecond to the liking of all kind of miſrule, 321, b 10. Enuied of the nobilitie, 325, a 30. Variance betweene them and the lords, b 50. The lords in armes againſt them, their lands inuaded, 326, all. Baniſhed by the decree of the barons, articles wherewith they were charged, 327, a 10, &c: Yeeld themſelues vnto the law, ſauoured of king Edward, and reſtored to peace and quietneſſe, 328, a 20, b 10, Reſtored to all their inheritances and aduancements, 332, a 10.
Spirit in a wall without Aldersgate, doth penance at Paules croſſe for abuſing the people, 1117, b 60
Spirits in likeneſſe of birds ſeene in the aire, 166, a 60.
Spite of the French king at Richard the firſt, and why, 133, b 50. Of Roger Lacie in hanging two men, 133, b 40. ¶ Sée Enuie, Malice, and Reuenge.
Spoile rich and honourable, 201 b 10. Diuided among ſoldiors: note, 560, a 10. ¶ Sée Soldiors,
Spring hindered, 258, a 20, Seemed to be changed into winter, 239, b 30
Stafford waſted, 30, a 40
Stafford knight taken out of ſanctuarie and executed, 764, b 40
Stafford lord ſlaine by ſir John Holland: note, 447, a 50. Beheaded, 673, a 40
Staffords ſlaine by Jack Cade 634, a 60
Stamford taken by duke Henrie, 60, b 30
Stanhope knight committed to the Towre, 1066, b 60. He and others beheaded, 1081, a 60
Stanelis knight, a fauourer of Perkine Warbecke, coniectures of his alienated mind from Henrie the ſeuenth, 778, b 40, 50, 60. He is beheaded, 779, a 10. He and his archers breake the Scots arraie, 828 b 50
Stanelie lord his deuiſe to auoid ſuſpicion of king Richard the third, and to ſaue his owne life, 754, a 10. He and others meet, embrace and conſult, 755, a 20. Setteth the crowne on the earle of Richmond his head, his bold anſwer to king Richard his purſeuants, 760, a 50, 60 His faithfulneſſe, 673, a 10 674, a 30
Staple of woolles remoued to Calis, 395, b 60. Out of Flanders into England, 381 a 20
Starre ſtrange appeered euerie morning for a time: note, 223, b 40. In the conſtellation of Caſſiopeis, 1257, a 20
Stars falling after a ſtrange maner, 231, b 40. Seene at the verie time of an eclipſe, 44, b 40. ¶ Sée Blaſing ſtarre.
Starch. ¶ Sée Wheat.
States of the low countries, their deputies arriuall in London, their meſſage vnto quéene Eliſabeth, 1411, a 40. &c. 60, b 10, &c. 1412, a 10, &c. Their ſute granted, 1413, b 10 1414, a 50, to 1419, a 10: note.
Sworne vnto the quéene of England, and what authoritie they gaue the earle of Leiceſter by placard, 1428, all. ¶ Sée Quéene Eliſabeth, Duke of Alanſon, and Earle of Leiceſter.
Statute of the ſix articles, with the extreame proceeding therein, 946, b 30, 50, Spoken againſt to the loſſe of life, 953, a 40. Repealed, 992, b 10. Deſcribed, 1005, b 10. Ex Officio reuiued, 1126, b 60. Of premunire begun, 409, a 60. For ſeruants wages and labourers, 380, b 30, 40. For making of clothes and other things, 380, b 40. Of Mortmaine, 280, a 10
Statutes of Weſtminſter ordeined, 278, a 10. Eſtabliſhed, 285, a 50. Of Gloceſter, 279, b 10. Called Additamenta, 283, a 60. Of Quo warranto, 280, a 50. Of Eltham, 892, b 50. Of Oxford: note, 262, a 10 Proteſted againſt by king Henrie the third, 265, b 30. Repealed, 270, b 50. ¶ Sée Apparell.
Stephan when and by whome hee was crowned king, 46, a 40, 50,

40, 50. His valiantnesse: note, 53, a 60. Ordering of his armie redie to giue battell, 51, b 60. Besiegeth Wallingford, 51, b 30. Winneth Lincolne, 51, b 50. His power put to flight, 53, a 60 Taken prisoner and led vnto Mawd the empresse, 53, b 20. He and the earle of Gloucester deliuered by exchange, 54, b 20. Entreth Lincolne with the crowne vpon his head, 56, b 60. With an armie commeth to Yorke, 58, a 60. Incampeth neere his enimies the Scots, 47, b 20. Agreeth with the erle of Anion, 48, a 50, Inuadeth Scotland, 50, a 60. Maketh hast to rescue the north parts, 48, b 40. Burnt the south parts of Scotland, 48, b 50. Hee and Henrie the fourth meet at Dunstable about a peace, they come to Canturburie, 64, a 10. His promise to purchase the peoples fauour, 8, b 40. Doubteth whome to trust, 51, a 10. Raiseth his siege 51, b 10. Beginneth to incline his mind vnto peace, 61, a 40. Falleth sicke, 47, b 50. Departeth this life, 64, b 40. A description of his person, qualities and actions, 64, b 40, 50

Stephan earle of Britaine, 7 b 20. ¶ See Erle.

Stephan Gardiner his oration to the councell touching queene Marie hir mariage, he commendeth the Spanish king, 1093, a 50, 60. ¶ See Bishop Gardiner.

Stigand archbishop of Canturburie hated, and why duke William refused to bee crowned at his hands, 1, b 20. His stout message vnto duke William, 2, b 10. Flieth into Scotland, 8, a 30. His martiall mind, and vnpatient of forren seruitude, 1, b 50, 2, a 10. Capteine of an armie of Kentishmen, 2, a 10. Deprized for three speciall causes, 8, b 60. Kept in perpetuall prison and there ended his life, 9, a 20

Stinke noisome after a thunder: note, 204, b 20. Filthie after a tempest, 211, b 40. Most horrible in Winchcombe church, 19, a 60. Of Henrie the first his dead bodie odious, 45, a 20

Stoke battell. ¶ See Battell.

Stozie doctor impudent and sawcie, his words in the parlement house, 1180, b 20, 40. An enimie vnto ladie Elizabeth, 1159, b 60. 1160, a 10. Executed for treason, his education and birth, a persecutor and exquisite tormentor of Gods seruants, apprehended, conueied himselfe ouer seas, continuing there a persecutor, a commissioner to search for English bookes, intended the ouerthrow of England, searched the English ships, apprehended by a Swile, conueied into England, indicted, arreigned, executed as a traitor: note, 1225, a 40, &c.

Stradiotes, 821, b 60. 822, a 10. Described and incountred of the English horsemen, 819 a 60

Strangers resort to serue king Stephan, 47, a 50. Courteousnesse prouided for by king Henrie the firsts intertenment, 34, a 60. Outface Englishmen against all honestie and conscience, 840, b 10. Iniuriousnesse eshued of diuerse vonkers, 841, b 10, 20, &c. Appointed to depart the realme, 65, b 10. Greatlie grudged at for procuring licences to sell wood, 893, b 40. Ouer sawcie lewd and knauish in dealing with Englishmen, 841, a 60. b 10. Skirmish with the rebels of Norwich, 1033, b 10. Went against the Deuonshire rebels, 1003, b 30. Feasted by king Richard the second, and so doth the duke of Lancaster, 474, a 10. Sent for by king Henrie the third to serue him in his wars, 217, a 20. A great complaint exhibited for that they got the best benefices, 365, a 60. In fauour with king Henrie the third, alwaies odious vnto the homeborne, 216, b 50, 60. Valuation of their benefices taken, 236, b 40. The value of spirituall liuings in their hands, 247, b 20. Keepe the castell of Windsor, 265, a 40. Merchants a new order for them, sent to the towre, 283, b 10. ¶ See Proclamation.

Stratagem of the lord Montioie, 965, b 50, 966, a 10. ¶ See Policie.

Stratford bridge vpon Auon builded, 776, b 50

Strife amongst the English subiects on the other side the sea, 157, a 60. Ielousie & emulation in sumptuous apparelling of seruants, 163, a 60. Betwixt the two archbishops, 142, b 20, Betwixt the lattie and spiritualtie, 526, a 20, Betwixt the Londoners and the abbat of Westminster, 242 b 60. Betwixt king Henrie the third and his barons, 216, b 40. Betweene the archbishop of Canturburie and the bishop of Winchester, 247, a 50. One ended, all ended: note, 591, b 30. ¶ See Quarell and Variance.

Stues suppressed, 972, b 10

Stukelie a defamed person and faithlesse beast: note, 1359, a 50

Sturton lord committeth a shamefull murther, hee is hanged, 1133, a 10, 20

Subsidie demanded and denied 215, a 10. 251, a 10. To king Henrie the third by his brother the earle of Cornewall, 251, b 30. Of the richer sort, 236, a 30. Causeth a commotion and insurrection in the realme: note, 429, a 60. Granted by the parlement, appointed to be kept of two citizens of London, 418, b 60. For the state of parlements, 424, a 60. Greeuous cauling manie a bitter curse and much mischiefe, 428, b 40. To be paid by the great men and fat backes, but the poore to go free, 422, a 10, Granted and appointed to be spent according to the discretion of the nobilitie, 452, a 50. Of surcharge, 524, b 20, 30, Pardoned, 1090, b 60. Of the lattie 1130, a 30. Verie sore and intollerable laid vpon his subiects by William Rufus, 22, a 60. Called the great: note, 815, b 60. To be paid by anticipation, 882, a 50. Granted to be paid in three yeares: note, 960, a 40. Raised by K. Henrie the first to dotow with his daughter, 38, a 20. Granted of euerie knights fee and clergie, 167, a 30. The collectors thereof complaine to the earle of Northumberland that they cannot get it: note, 769, b 30, &c. Raised of wools, 292, b 20, Called chimnage, 401, b 20. Of knage for the space of fiue yeares, 400, b 40, Disliked, 401, b 10. Of wooll, 355, a 30. Of tunnage and poundage, 589, b 60. Of three shillings for euerie plowland, 161, a 50. Of the thirtith part of all moueable goods granted vpon condition, 220, b 10 Of the fortith part of euerie mans goods towards the discharge of the kings debt, 215, b 40. Of two shillings of euerie plowland, 202, b 10. Of the ninth part of the peoples goods granted to king Edward the first, 306, a 20. Of an eight part of the peoples goods granted, 301, b 30. Of the twentith part of euerie mans goods, 279, b 10. Of foure pense and fiue pense out of euerie marke, 332. Of the one halfe of wools throughout the realme, 354, a 60. Of fiftie thousand pounds demanded of the clergie, 406, b 20. Of fiftie shillings of euerie sacke of wooll transported ouer sea, 383, a 60. Of foure pense of euerie person aboue fortie yeares of age, &c, 410, b 30 Of six and twentie shillings eight pense of euerie sacke of wooll, &c, 396, b 10. For euerie last of lether fortie shillings, 357, b 10. For euerie sacke of wooll fortie shillings, 357, b 10. Of a new kind granted by the clergie, 531, b 30. Of the moitie of a tenth and of a fifteenth, 445, a 10, 20. Of twentie shillings of euerie knights fee, 524, b 10. Of six shillings in the pound, &c: 1225, a 20, 30. Of moueables and vnmoueables granted, 1184, a 60. Of six shillings in the pound, granted of the spiritualtie, 971, a 10. Of the sixt part of euerie mans goods demanded, and what cursing and rebellion followed, 891, a 40 50. Of two shillings of euerie plow land, 142, b 60. Of fiue shillings of euerie hide of land, 153, a 10. Called the great subsidie, about the grant whereof there was hard hold, 877, b 20, 30, &c.

Subsidies, an enimie to them was bishop Hugh of Lincolne, 162, b 50. Of sundrie sorts repeated, 229, a 50 ¶ See Contribution, Custome, Fifteenth, and Rebellion.

Subdeacons admission not without profession of chastitie, 30, b 30

Subiection most vile and vnbeseeming a king: note, 83, b 50 84, a 10. For ren how abhorred of a valorous mind: note, 192, a 50. Of Yorke vnto the archbish. of Canturburie. ¶ See Archbishop.

Subiects bridle their king to his great impatience, 186, b 10

Submission of the Londoners to Henrie the third, 271, a 10 Of Dauid of Wales to Henrie the third conteined in articles, 227, b 60. Of the duke of Yorke to king Henrie the first vnder his oth, 639, b 60 Of king John to the pope testified in a charter, 177, b 20, &c. Purchased the peace and pardon, 203, a 40. By constraint, 186, b 50, 167, b 50. Of George Cloise preacher for a sermon. ¶ See Sermon.

Succession to the crowne consulted vpon to be diuerted: note, 1083, b 40, 50, 60. ¶ See Crowne.

Sudburie hill, 686, b 40

Suffolke men the first that resorted to the ladie Marie against the duke of Northumberland. 1086, b 60

Summer drie, 780, b 60. Extreme: note, 336, b 10. For the space of foure moneths, 220, a 40. From March vntil Julie, 381, a 40. Wet with manie flouds, 216, b 10 Deere, 381, a 50

Summerset. ¶ See Herald.

Summerualle. ¶ See Traitor.

Sunne appeareth like blood, 332, b 10. Counterfeit seene, 220, a 40

Sunnes two appeared, 157, a 10. Three seene at once, 793, b 40. Foure beside the accustomed, 216, b 20

Sundaie prophaned and how punished by God: note, 1353, a 30. Buieng & selling a law against it, 624, a 20

Superstition. ¶ See Religion.

Supremasie of king Henrie the eight denied and the parties executed, 952, b 50. 961, a 60 950, b 10. 938, a 10, &c. ¶ See Pope, Traitor.

Surgerie lecture founded in London, and how to be exercised: note, 1349, a 20, &c. An excellent institution and for common benefit: note, 1369, b 10, 20.

Suspension of the archbishop of Yorke by the archbishop of Canturburie, 35, b 60. 36. a 10 Of Ranulfe bishop of Chichester: note, 26, a 30. Pronounced by a legat in a synod holden at Paules, 271, a 60

Suspicion in a prince how mischeifous, 738, a 30. Sometimes good and aduantageable, 1087, a 50, Cause of apprehension and execution: note, 259, b 60. 260, a 10. Of Henrie the fourth grounded vpon a guiltie conscience: note, 520, b 10. That he had in his sonne prince Henrie, 539, a 10. ¶ See Enuie, and Mistrust.

Sutors what shifts they made to be heard, 799, b 30

Swanescombe in Kent where the Kentishmen met against duke William, 2, a 10

Sward. ¶ See Martine.

Sweine king of Denmarke maried earle Godwins widow, 6, b 20, Reported to intend an inuasion of England, 14, a 40. Sendeth his sonnes into England for recouerie of his right, 6, b 50

Sweting sickenesse, 794, a 60 The maner thereof, 765, b 60 And the remedie therefore, 764

764.a 10. Sweate and deadly, 844. a 50. Whereof died both mariners and others, 906, a 60.b 10. And remedie against it, 1066,a 60.b 20
Synod called by the archbishop of Canturburie, 256. a 30. Held by Anselme, present therat Henrie the fourth with earles and barons, 34, b 10. At Dunstable, 182.a 40. At Lambeth,280.b 30. At London, 95. b 50. 58. b 40. 224.a 40. 11. b 60. At Northampton, 271.a 60. At Oxford, 203 b 40. At Reading, 280.a 10. Of bishops held at Westminster.30. a 60. At Winchester and what was there decreed, 8.b 60. At Windsore about the archbishops primatie, 9. a 10. b 10. At Yorke by the archbishop of Canturburie. 148.a 10. ¶ See Assemblie and Councell.

T.

TAxes their malapertnesse at the election of an alderman.623. a 40. They and the Goldsmiths of London togither by the eares, 274. a 50. They had six kings of England brethren of their companie, 790.b 60
Talbot William defendeth Hereford in Wales, 48.b 60
Talbot knight with his six score archers, 770.b 30.
Talbot lord saileth into France 608.b 60.609.a 10. A valiant captein.597.b 10. Ransomed by exchange,606.b 30. Created erle of Shrewesburie,623. b 10 ¶ See Erle.
Tallage of an eight thousand marks leuied vpon the Iewes, 252.a 10
Tame lord of Tame his gentle hart to the ladie Elisabeth, 1156,a 10.20.50
Tartas besieged, 619.b 60
Tax or tribute leuied on the cõmons by duke William,8.b 50 Leuied throughout the reame, 144.a 20. Of fiue shillings of euerie plough land.155.a 60 Leuied of the thirteenth part of euerie mans goods, 170. b 40. Leuied of an hundred thousand pounds, 174. b 60. Taxes and subsidies raised in duke Williams time, 5. b 10. Grieuous of K. William vpon the English,8. a 30. ¶ See Lone, Subsidie, and Toll.
Teemen toll, or Theyme toll. ¶ See Subsidie.
Teeth, men borne with fewer than in times past, 379.b 50.
Tempests that did much hurt, 473.a 20.204.b 20.480.b 50. 60.793.a 60.b 10. Grislie and hideous 166. a 60. The like neuer seene procuring peace, 393, b 60. That made great wast,395.a 40. That stroke manie high buildings. 252. a a 50, Wonderfull, 164.a 40. Most terrible with a stinke, 19.a 60. Of wind and raine verie hideous,60.a 10. That did exceeding much hurt: note, 254.a 30. Verie sore, & that lasted sixteene hours, 239. a 30. Boisterous vpon the seas, 1136. b 30.40. That scattered Richard the first his ships sailing into the holie land,127.a 60.423.a 60. &c. Generall,424. a 20. By sea and land doing harme in most shires of England, 1222, b 10, &c. 1223. 1224. a 10, &c. Great on Easter date in the morning, 282. b 30. Sore of lightening and thunder, &c.82. a 60.b 10.46. a 30.231. a 10. Of raine and thunder with an eclipse: note,372, a 30. Few the like: note,244, b 20. Verie wonderfull: note, 1142.a 30. That did much hurt 1185 a 10.20. In December,260. b 30. At Chelmesford, 1208.b 30. Great in Leicester townes note, 1198. b 40. Strange at London, 211. b 40. By lightening and thunder. With sore hurt done, 1205. b 10. In Northfolke strange, vehement and hurtfull: note, 1348,b 20. In Richmondshire 1270. a 20. In Suffolke that did much hurt: note, 1270, b 40. ¶ See Wind.
Temple gatehouse newlie builded, 918.a 10.
Templers, lands belonging to them, 335. a 40. Three knights of this order in the French kings displeasure,68 b 60. ¶ See Knights.
Temptation great with large offers.747.b 10. Perswasion euen to violent death: note, 1092. b 10. 30. 40. ¶ See Murther.
Tenants rebell against their landlord, the erle of Winchester: note, 240.b 10
Tenths leuied for Henrie the seconds behoofe, 111, b 60. Three granted, 402.a 60. Of spirituall mens liuings for the space of three yeares, 405. a 20. For three yeares space granted of the clergie vnto Henrie the third, 248, a 40. Granted vnto king Henrie by the cleargie, 213. a 10. Of the spiritualtie granted to the pope, 211. a 10. Of all the moueables in England, Wales and Ireland, required by the pope, 210. b 60. Of ecclesiasticall liuings granted to Edward the second by the pope, 325. a 50. Demanded of the cleargie by Henrie the third, 246.b 40. To the pope withstood by the earle of Chester, 211. a 50. They and first frutes restored to the crowne, 1180. b 10. ¶ See Subsidie.
Terme kept at Hereford castell, 1206. a 40. 1348. b 40. Begun at Oxford and adiorned to Westminster, 844. b 60. Adiourned, 1260. a 10. Adiorned because of the plague, 1211, b 60
Termes foure yearlie kept by whome instituted, 8. a 50
Terrouan woone by force by the English, 374. b 60
Terwin besieged, 817, b 20. By the English, Henrie the eight being present. 821. all. Sore beaten with the English ordinance, 819. a 50. Yeelded vp to Henrie the eight, the citizens sworne vnto him, it is burnt and spoiled, 822, b 10. 40. 50.
Testament new translated into English, 913. b 60. ¶ See Gospell.
Tewkesburie field, 687, b 60.
Teuther with others taken and beheaded, 660. a 30. ¶ See Marriage.
Thames frosen ouer, 1208. a 60 Exceedinglie: note, 274. a 60. 262. b 60. 58. a 60. And not passable, 942. b 20. Ships and vessels could not come vp the riuer. 612. a 60. Rose with an high tide, 220. a 30. Swolne with high spring tides, &c: note. 26. b 10. So high that Westminster hall was on a flood. 1271. b 50. Ouerfloweth and doth much hurt, 274. b 10. Drowneth all the countrie for the space of six miles about Lambeth, 231. a 10. Passable from London bridge to the Tower, it was so shallow, 38. a 40. 50. The water thereof coloured ouer saint Magnus steeple, 1348, b 50. ¶ See Tides.
Thankfulnes for old seruice, 203 a 40. Of H. the eight to his good militarie seruitors. 829. b 50. Of queene Elisabeth vnto hir subiects, &c: note, 1566. b 40 &c.
Theater erected for the duke of Manson to stand vpon and shew himselfe to the people, 1334 a 50
Theefe that robbed pilgrims taken and hanged, 123, a 20. ¶ See Murtherer, Outlaw.
Theeues and robbers verie few or none in England in duke Williams time: note, 15. b 40. An ordinance against them, 248. a 20. Notable, and their whole nest broken, 241. b 20. Appointed to be hanged, 45. b 10. They and murtherers saued by their books and committed to the bishops custodie, 791. b 10. Sacrilegious seuerelie executed, 704, b 50
Theobald. ¶ See Erle.
Therines. ¶ See Monsieur.
Thetford, a bishops see remooued to Norwich, 26. a 50.
Thomas archbishop of Yorke, white deprined, 9. a 60. A canon of Baieux the fiue and twentith archbishop of Yorke, 9. a 20. Deprined of his crosier and ring, ibid.
Thesebers malking: note, 214. b 20
Threatning procureth submission: note, 21. b 60
Throckmorton sir Nicholas knight arriueth at Newhauen, 1199. b 40. Arreigned of high treason, the whole manner thereof, with his purgations: note, 1104. b 10. &c, 1105. to 1117. Eight of his iurie appeare in the starchamber, hard iudgement against them, 1121. b 40. Extremelie dealt withall, b 60. 1112. a 10. Fiue of his iurie released, 1126. b 40
Throckmorton Francis esquire, some great secrets betweene the Scottish queene and him, 1373. a 10. What moued him to denie his confessions at his arreignement, 30. His letter of submission to queene Elisabeth 60. With a declaration of all his practises treasonable against hir, b 50.60. 1374. a 10, &c. Surprised and put to a narrow shift, 1372. a 40. What mind he carried towards queene Elisabeth, b 60. His treasons communicable to the erle of Northumberland, 1406. all. Arreigned and condemned of high treason, the whole declaration thereof, with the manner of proceeding against him, 1370. a 40. 50. 60. &c. 1371. &c, to 1375
Throckmorton John of Norwich a conspirator, executed as a traitor, 1222. a 10. ¶ See Traitors.
Throng, certeine thrust to death on London bridge, 487, b 10. ¶ See Blackwell, Iusts, and Paris garden.
Thunder in winter, 249. a 40. 46. a 30. With lightening in December, 220. a 40. 1206. a 40. At Chrismas, and on Chrismas date, 243. b 10. 220. a 60. Verie terrible and fearefull: note, 114. a 60. That made men amazed, 39. b 10. For the space of fifteene daies togither, 236. a 50. 216. b 10. With an earthquake, 217 b 50. Generall and hurtfull, 204. b 20. With wonder, 284. a 50. ¶ See Tempest and Wind.
Thurstan abbat of Glastenburie, and the monks of that house at strife, and white, a lewd man: note, 13. b 30. Deposed, returneth into Normandie, 13. b 40. Wueth his place againe for fiue hundred pounds. 13. b 60. Refuseth to obeie king Henrie the seconds pleasure, 38. b 10
Tiberio an Italian, his valiantnesse, 965. b 10
Tiburne, called The elmes in Edward the thirds time, 349 a 60.
Tichborne and his fellow traitors. ¶ See Babington.
Tides two in one houre, 1260. a 10. ¶ See Floods. Raine, Sea, and Thames.
Tiler beginner of the rebellion in Dertford in Kent: note, 429. b 20. &c. His proceedings, 430 &c. A periecraftie fellow, his proud sawcinesse, he is thrust through and slaine, 432. a 30. b 10. 40.
Tineie. ¶ See Tichborne.
Tilt roiall, with proper deuises thereat, 830. a 60. ¶ See Iusts.
Tindall burned, his painfulnes in writing and translating, 939. b 50. 60. ¶ See Testament new.
Tirrell sir Walter killeth William Rufus with an arrow in hunting, by chance: note, 26. b 30
Tirrell knight deserthed, 734. b 60. He receiueth the keies of the Tower, purposeth to destroie the two princes, dispatcheth the action, theweth the whole maner thereof to Richard the third, the murther confessed, he is beheaded for treason, 735. all.
Tithes none to be giuen but to the church, 30. b 40. ¶ See Tenths and Clergie.
Tokens foreshewing Wolseis ruine and fall, 915. a 50. b 10. Of victorie: note, 660, a 20. Of things falling out in euent, 793. b 10. Of imminent misfortune to the lord Hastings, 723. a 40. 50. 60. &c Prodigious: note, 655, b 20 ¶ See Signs and Wonders.
Toles of the Hound: note, 928. a 60. ¶ See Tax.
Tonque castell taken by the English, 559. a 50
Torments extreme, 445. a 60
Tornate furnished with a strong power of men, besieged, the great number of people at the siege thereof, 359. a 50. 60. b 10. Besieged by the emperor Charles his forces, deliuered to him 871. a 10. Summoned by Garter king at armes, the prouost & words to the distressed townesmen, it is besieged. 823. b 10. 20. 60 On all sides besieged, and the prouost with eleuen more submit themselues, and yeeld vp the cutie to Henrie the eight, 824. a 10. &c. Articles of agreement betwixt the kings of England & France for the deliuerie of the crosse to the French &c: note. 848. b 10. &. The maner how it was deliuered to to the French king. 849. b 50

A caſtell builded there by Henrie the eight, 838. b 40
Townes in England burnt by the Frenchmen, 417. b 60. In old time how fortified, 443 b 30. In France taken by the earle of Derbie, 368. b 50
Tower on London bridge taken downe, 1270. a 30. Newlie builded, 1271. a 10
Towre of London new walled about by William Rufus. 23. a 60. Beſieged, 54. a 10. Demiered to the earle of March, 654. b 60. Yeelded vp to Lewis the French kings ſonne, 192. b 20. At the Lonſoners commandement. 338. b 60
Traile baſton, 312. b 60. ¶ See Inquiſition.
Traitor Shummeruile his miſerable and deſperat death, 1366. a 20. Carter executed at Tiborne, 1357. a 40. Elks for counterfeiting the quenes ſignet manuell, 1563. Waine executed for denieng the M. ſupremaſie, 1271. a 10. Nelſon and Sherwood executed for denieng the queenes ſupremaſie, 1271. a 50. Paine executed at Tiborne, 1344. a 40 Thomas Woodhouſe preeſt executed, 1258. b 60
Traitors, Varnete, Wather, and Rolfe executed, 1227. b 60. Fen, Haddocke, Munden, Nutter, and Somerford executed at Tiborne, 1369. a 10. Arden & Shommeruile executed for treaſon, 1356. a 50 Slade and Bodie executed, 1356. a 10. Babington, Ballard, to the number of foureteene, their wonderfull conſpiracie and ſharpe execution: note, 1563, &c.
Traitors to the crowne proclamed, 143. b 10. King Henries nobles, 217, a 10. Care not for their itues, ſo they may atchiue the end of their treaſons: note, 223. a 40. 50. Scholaſticall: note, 1367. a 40. &c. Six queſtions to trie them from ſcholers, 1368. a 10 &c. Manie though they haue no armor nor weapon: note, 1367. b 10. 30. Their rebels, and fugitiues practiſes to execute pope Pius bulles againſt queene Eliſabeth, 1159. b 10. Forren continue ſending of perſons to moue ſedition in the realme, 1360. a 40. Five, all of one linage executed, 943. b 50. They & rebels what ignominious ends they come to 782. b 20. Put to flight and proclamed, 650. b 20. 50. Attainted, executed, 652. a 10, &c. Their heads removed from the tower on London bridge, & ſet on the gate at the bridge foot, 1270. a 30. For a time may eſcape but at length come to the gallows, 223. b 60. 224. a 10. Executed, wherein note the ancient kind of puniſhment, 230. b 20. Executed for denieng the queenes ſupremaſie, 1322. a 30. A declaration of queene Eliſabeths commiſſioners their favourable dealing for their examining, 1357. a 60. &c. 1358. to 1368 Executed in Lincolnſhire and Yorkſhire, 767. b 40. 50. ¶ See Preeſts ſeminarie, Fugitiues, Allen, Felton, and Stozie.
Travelling comm[illegible]nd diſcommended, & [illegible]rie and vnneceſſaries [illegible].b 50, &c.
Treipoet ſuburbs [illegible] burnt by the Engliſh, [illegible]79. a 30
Trenchuile lord William, a man of great power, 67. b 60
Trent river where duke William pitched his tents againſt the Danes, 7. a 40. Hoiſed out of the chanell with a tempeſt, 1142. a 40. Dried vp for the ſpace of a mile, 37 a 40. See Chanell.
Treſham knight made lord of ſaint Johns of Jeruſalem, 1134. b 60
Treſham William. ¶ See Juſts triumphant.
Treſilian, chiefe iuſtice deſcried by his owne man & executed at Tiborne, 463. b 50
Treſon againſt king Henric the fourth to haue deſtroied him in his bed: note, 519. b 20. Againſt Edward the ſecond the traitor executed: note, 333. 334 Againſt Henrie the third by a clerke of Oxford, 223. a 40. Of Thomas Becket, 69. b 10 Of noble men iuſtlie puniſhed, 515. b 10. &c. Of a Saracen againſt prince Edward, 275 a 20. Laid to the duke of Aumerle, and how he challenged triall, 513. a 60. Of ſir Thomas Turberuile, & he executed, 295. b 40. Of a meſſenger diſcloſing the ſecrets of Edward the firſts letters, 299. b 60, 300. a 10. Of Foulks de Wzent how puniſhed, 208. a 20. Of certeine Jewes, and how reuenged, 267. a 60. Notable of Francis Throckmorton, ſet downe in full diſcourſe with the maner of proceeding againſt him: note, 1370. a 50 60, &c. 1371. to 1375. Notorious of Parrie to haue murthered queene Eliſabeth ſet downe at large: note, 1382. a 50, &c. to 1395. Of erle Perſie of Northumberland ſummarilie ſet downe: note, and vnto what foule end he came, 1404. b 40, 1405. &c. to 1419, a 10. Of the duke of Buckingham. ¶ See Duke. Of nobles for the which they were apprehended, 548. b 10. And executed, b 40. Of erle John moued in the parlement, and iudgement denounced againſt him, 142. b 60. Laid vnto the archbiſhop of Canturburies charge by the ſpeaker in parlement, 490. b 40. Laid to the duke of Northfolke by the duke of Hereford, 493. b 10. Laid to the duke of Lancaſter, he cleared, and the accuſer extremlie tormented, 445. b 40, &c. In great men, and they executed: note, 946. a 20. &c. 50. Practiſed againſt the erle of Richmond, but preuented, 747. a 60. b 10, &c. 60. Of the citizens that loſt Wens, 598. a 60. Laid to the biſhop of Winchelſter, with his anſwers, 591. a 60. b 60. Wherewith the dukes of Yorke and Summerſet mutuallie charge each other, 639. a 50. 60. Againſt the duke of Clarence, 580, a 10. He is ſlaine. a 30. Laid to the nobles charge by king John 169. a 30. Laid to ones charge, and pledges ſent to and fro to follow the ſute, 143. a 20. Of two ſorts puniſhed with death: note, 1227. b 60. Purpoſed at a maſke againſt Henrie the fourth his perſon, 515. b 50. In letters written by ſir Walſe Ferrers to certeine French lords, arreſted, releaſed, 428. a 60. b 10. For miſgouerning the king and realme, and the parties executed, 498. b 60. Tried by a combat: note, 424. b 10, &c. 425. a 10, &c. Suſpected among the nobles, and inquiſition for the ſame, 457. b 20. Intended and preuented, 295 a 30. Will euer come to light by one meane or other, 333. b 10. It and not religion the cauſe of the popes fauorers execution, proued: note, 1366. b 10, &c. 1368. a 40, &c. The fauorers thereof puniſhed, 951 a 50. 60. Puniſhed in honorable perſonages of both ſex, 703 b 10. To defraud ſouldiors of their wages, 411. b 10. Puniſhed by death, though diſcloſed, 11. a 60. It and execution, 945. a 10. b 10. 952. b 30. 60. Of two perſons two waies: note, 928. a 10. 313. b 40. 598. a 60. b 40. Vpon clergie men, 520. a 10, &c. Moſt ſeuerelie puniſhed, 1575. b 60, &c. ¶ See Charters, Conſpiracie, Elenor Cobham, Eureux, Noble men, Paris, Parrie, Preeſts ſeminarie, Rebellion, Rone caſtell, Scotiſh king James, Serle, Traitors, and Wolſeie.
Treſurer lord ſitteth aboue the lord maior at the ſargents feaſt, 667. b 20
Treſurers of England from the firſt to the laſt ſet downe in a collection, 1238. a 1239. vnto 1257. a 10. ¶ See Cicill.
Treſure great of Richard king of Almaine, 254. b 20. Of Richard the firſt where it late, and deliuered to king John, 157. a 20. Of Henrie the ſecond found at Salisburie, 118. a 20. ¶ See Officers.
Tributs of ox hides, 96. b 50 Of twelue penſe for euerie hoſſe or poke of oxen, 98. b 10 Of three thouſand marks by yeare releaſed, 32. a 50. Leuied throughout all England, and how: note, 13. a 60. b 10. Denied vnto the pope with oths and proteſtations, 236 a 60. To be paid vnto the pope moued for the maintenance of his eſtate, 208. a 40. Of the French king to king Edward for peace and amitie: note, 700 b 10, &c. For Tholouſe, 85. a 30. ¶ See Exactions, Subſidies, Taxes, Tenths, and Toll.
Truer knight: ſlaine with a fall from his hoſſe, 465. b 50
Triumphs of the Romans excelled all their other ſhews, 1333. a 10. ¶ See Pageants.
Trimuike a noble ſeruitor in the French affaires, 850. b 60
Trollop forſaketh the rebellious lords, his eſtimation, 650. a 60
Truce for three yeares betwixt ſix kings, 466. a 40. Betwixt England and France, 445. a 50. 230. b 10. For fiue years, 231. Treated 466. a 10. For three yeares, 214. a 50. Generall, 198. b 10. For three years expired, 219. a 10. For foure daies, 892. a 60. For a moneth, 304. b 60. For eighteene moneths, 624. b 10. For ſix yeares, 607. a 60. For two yeares, 391. a 40. 381 a 60. 378. a 50. 183. b 20. For three yeares, 364. b 30. 40 With the conditions of the ſame, 50 60. 365. a 10. For a yeare at the mediation of a woman, 360. a 30. 409. b 10, 93. b 50. Conditionall for two yeares, 170. a 50. For foure yeares, 480. b 40. For ſixtie daies, 160, a 40. 154. b 50. For fiue yeares, 155. a 10. For thirtie yeares, 486 &c. 850. Betwixt England and Scotland, 875. b 30. 439. a 10 At requeſt of the French king 311. a 60. 352. a 10. 405. a 30. 89. a 60. With a treatie of aliance, 747. a 20. For ſixteen yeares, 767. b 60. 668. b 60. After much miſchiefe and trouble, 334. b 30. Betwixt the emperor Charles and the gouernors of France, 887 b 60. Betwixt Henrie the fift and the duke of Burgogne, 558 a 10. Betwixt Henrie the ſixt and the dutcheſſe of Burgogne, 615. a 30. Betwixt Henrie the fift and the duke of Britaine, 561. a 50. 60 Betwixt Henrie the eight and ſundrie forren princes, 843. a 20. Betwixt the Engliſh and the Ezirons for ſix daies, 814. b 60. Prolonged for a yeare, 477. b 10. Tripartite, 572. 840 Taken for a moneth, 68. a 40. The benefits inſuing from the ſame, 906. a 60. ¶ See Legue and Peace.
Truſt in treſon: note, 743 b 50. 744. a 52. ¶ See Treſon.
Truth purchaſeth hatred, 513. b 60
Tunſtall, doctor, maiſter of the rolles, 849. a 10. Made biſhop of Durham, 909. b 50. Made biſhop of London, 872. a 10. His oration and ſermon in the parlement houſe, 876. a 20. Deſcribed and commended, his armes, the offices he bare. 1185. b 30. 40. 50. 60. Buildings by him founded, 1186. a 10. Depriued of his biſhoprike, 30. Reſtored, 40. His death, 50. He and Lurbeus compared, b 20
Turke is mortallie hated of the pope. 847. a 10, &c. His victories againſt the Soldane, his ambition hath no bounds 846. a 60. b 10, &c.
Turks warred againſt by the earle of Flanders and others, 164. a 20. At the ſiege of Vienna how manie ſlaine, 913. b 40. Ouerthrowne and vanquiſhed by the chriſtians, principall men ſlaine, 1226. b 40. 60. 1227. a 10, &c. ¶ See Ottoman, Rhodes, Saracens, Soldman.
Turketillus guider of the Danith armie againſt the Normans. 7. b 40
Turnaments. ¶ See Charter, and Turnies.
Turnham Stephan committed to priſon, 117. a 20
Turnies, wherein earle Marſhall of Penbroke was hurt and died, 228. b 60. Exerciſed for the training vp of ſouldiors, 145. b 60, At Lis betwixt the ſoutherne and northerne men, 221, b 60. ¶ See Juſts.
Tweed a troubleſome and dangerous ſtreame. 992. a 10
Tyrannie of duke William againſt the Engliſh: note, 8. a 10, 40, 15. b 30. Of Richard the ſecond, 489. a 10, &c. ¶ See Cruelties and William duke of Normandie.
Tyrant. ¶ See Richard the third, or Duke of Glocester.
Tyrants eſtate vnquiet: note, 735. b 50

V.

VAgabonds and rogues by proclamation to auoid the citie of London, 1121. b 10. 10. Increaſed by rebellions, 1050. a 40. ¶ See Roges.
Waldois profeſſion, their examination, nation, protestation, stoned to death, 68. 60. b 10. ¶ See Dutchmen.

Maltmanneke and manhood, 534 a 40, &c. Of king Stephan, 53. a 60
Vandement besieged. 606. b 50
Vanoolme taken by king Henrie, 90, b 10
Vannes besieged by king Edward the third, 364. a 40
Variance betweene the lord chamberleine and the ladie Elisabeths seruants, 1154. b 50. Betweene one John Courtnet and Philip Duffeld, 1021. a 10. Betwixt the lords and the Spenlers, and white, 325. b 50. 326. 327: note all. Betwixt the students of Oxford, 260. b 40. Betwixt the earle of Penbroke and others, 257. b 30. Betweene the duke of Lancaster and the earle of Arundell, 481. a 10. Betweene the lord Latimer, and two esquires, and to what a bloudie issue it grew, 420. b 10, &c. Betwixt the bishop of Durham and earle Patrike, 161. a 10. Betweene sir John Hollands seruants, and the lord Richard Stafford, 447. a 40. Verie notable debated: note, 459. b 30. 40. 50. Betwixt the scholers of Oxford, 466. a 30. Betwixt the Londoners and the constable of the Towre, 263. b 60. Betwixt Henrie the third and the earle of Penbroke, 223. b 20. Betweene the two kings of England and France, 872. a 60. b 10. Betweene the Lord Dame Tiptoft and Rice ap Meredoc, 283. b 60. Betweene the bishop of Elie and the ladie Wake, 392. a 10. ¶ See Archbishop, Contention, Debate, Discord and Strife.
Veere Henrie constable of Glosors, 110. b 10
Veere brother to the earle of Oxford, slaine, 772. b 10. ¶ See erle Veere of Oxford.
Venlow besieged by the English, 810, b 40
Vernueill besieged and obteined by the French, 88. a 10. 60. Gotten from the English by crediting a lie, 588. a 60
Vernon sir Warren baron of Shipbroke. 20, a 30
Victorie of the English against the French at the battell of Agincourt, their reioising: note, 555, a 20, &c. Against the Turks by the Christians: note, 1226. b 40. 60. 1227. a 10, &c. Of king John against his rebels, 188. a 40. Of the English at the battell of Sluise, 358. b 10. Bloudie gotten by the Frenchmen. 294 b 10. Against the Irish and others in Ireland, 1314. b 40. Gods of them of Calis against the French king, 448. a 30. 40, &c. Of the English naule against the Flemish fleet, 454. b 10. Of the English against Scots signified with a great shout, 988. b 50. Against rebels, and what is to be done after the same, 1023. b 60. 1024. a 10. Of the English against the French: note, 997. a 60. b 10, &c. What is to be done after the obteinment thereof, 760. Consisteth not in multitude but in manlinesse, 758. b 10. Rich and honourable against the French, 201. b 10. What is to be done after the getting thereof, 885. b 30. Obteined, and God praised: note, 153. b 10. Without bloudshed, 33. a 60. Used with rigor feared: note, 167. a 10. To whome the same is to be ascribed: note, 373. a 10. What is to be done after the obteinment thereof, 767. b 30. The Spanish manner of thanksgiuing after the getting thereof, 773. a 60. Generall processions after it, 589, b 50. Three within a short time falling to the English, 566. b 10. Of Edward the first against the Scots, 1161. b 10. ¶ See Battell, Cruelties, and warre.
Vinticlme (a kind of collection) gotten in Ireland for the pope, 226. a 40
Virginia an English colonie. ¶ See Raleigh.
Vision of Richard archbishop of Canturburie, 108. a 40. Of a Jew become a Christian, 27. a 50. Strange appearing to Henrie the second, 85. a 10. Of diuerse likenesses, 484. b 10. ¶ See Dreames.
Visions of admonition are to be esteemed, 83. b 10
Vittels plentie sold good cheape, 778. b 10. ¶ See Derth.
Vlster in Ireland a kingdome, 100. a 30.
Vmfreuill knight, his exploits in Scotland, 536. b 10. Surnamed Mendmarket, 536.
Vniuersitie college in Oxford, when founded, 13. a 50. ¶ See Cambridge & Oxford.
Vnthankefulnes a vice vnnaturall and abhorred. 1576. a 20. Noted in earle Stephan, 43. a 10, 20. Of Gaston de Bierne, 240. a 20.
Voiage venturous of sir Hugh Willoughbie, to the losse of his owne and his peoples liues, 1083. a 60. Of sir Francis Drake atchiued with extraordinarie honor and successe: note, 1567. a 50. &c. ¶ See Frobisher, Gilbert, Greenfield, Raleigh, Sebastian.
Vow inuiolable kept: note, 793 a 50. Professed of a nun broken, 29. a 10. Of chastitie broken: note, 222. b 30. Of king Henrie the first whereof the pope offereth to discharge him, 40. b 50. Of Parris the traitor, to murther queene Elisabeth, 1385. b 30. And of other traitors to the same end: note, 1483, a 60. Of the Scots noisome to themselues: note, 988. a 40.
Vowes absoiued, 257. b 60. ¶ See Oth and Promise.
Vrswike, king Henrie the seauenths chapleine ambassadour into France, 768. a 30. &c.
Vsurie for the lone of monie forbidden: note, 1062. a 60. Of the Jewes the cause of hating & killing them: note, 122. all.
Vsurers goods seized, 145. b 10. Came from Rome into England vnder the name of merchants: note, 211. a 40. Called Caursini: note, 211. a 50. Excommunicated, but to no purpose, 219. b 10. Accused & committed to prison, 244. a 60
Vsurpation: note the whole storie of Richard the third, and Edward the fift: hath no good end. ¶ See Vzurpe. 314, 315, 316. Commeth to an euill end, 323. a 60.

W.

Wallingford. ¶ See Paten.
Wales inuaded by king William Rufus, and wasted, 22. b 10. Subdued by duke William, 12. a 20. Diuided into shires, 282. a 40. The marches thereof sore impouerished, 257. a 40
Walden his variable fortune: note, 532. a 10
Walon lord came to serue Henrie the eight, 818. b 60
Wallop knight his martiall acts in Normandie, 831. b 40
Walkhelme bishop of Winchester 9. a 20
Walkeher bishop of Durham had the whole rule of Northumberland, 13. a 40. A further order of monasteries to be erected, 11. a 20. Slaine by the Northumbers, & why: note, 12. b 20
Walteof sonne to Siward, 5. a 10
Valiant, reconciled into the kings fauor, 7. a 50. Earle of Northumberland, Northhampton and Huntington, 11 b 20. Maried duke Williams neece, and his issue, 11. b 10. He and Gospatrike deprined, 10. b 40. Beheaded as a rebell though he disclosed the same: note, 11. a 60. Described, and where he was buried. 11. b 10
Walter bishop of Hereford submitteth himselfe to duke William, 1. a 50.
Walter, knight. ¶ See Wildmate, and Raleigh.
Warre betweene two brethren, kings sonnes, 106. a 50. In Normandie betwixt king Rufus and his brother Robert, 21. a 50. 60. Of barons against king John: note, 185. b 10, &c. Proclaimed against England by the king of Scots, 518. b 10. Prepared against France, 812. a 60. Betwixt England and France, 290. a 60. b 20. Proclamed betwixt England and France, 353. a 10. Prosecuted with egernesse, 354, 355 Vpon a light occasion, 39. b 20. Renewed, 229. a 20. Betweene diuerse nations in one peare ended, 1192. b 60. Ciuill and the miserie of England then, 60. b 60. Maketh no difference of time: note, 1188. b 30. &c. Certeine ordinances deuised for that time, 125. a 40 The fruites thereof, 610. b 10. Foren better than sedition at home, 1054. b 50. Open not so ill as ciuill, the occasion of manie great inconueniences, 729. a 10. 20. Cannot be maintained without monie. ¶ See Armie, Battell, Beneuolence, Frenchmen, France, Monie, Munition, Scots, & Subsidie.
Warbecke. ¶ See Perkin warbecke.
Ward Richard. ¶ See Iustis Triumphant.
Wards. ¶ See London.
Warham doctor of lawes, the sum of his speach to the archduke of Burgognie, 777. b 10
Warke castell burned by the Scots, 444. b 60
Warlwast William taketh from Anselme all that he had: note, 26. a 10
Warning of amendment of life, 44. b 10. Reiected both by wonders and dreames, and iested at, 26. b 10. 20. Neglected cause of inconuenience: note, 83. a 10. 20. 30. 40. Of a French preest giuen to Richard the first: note, 156. b 10 ¶ See Visions.
Warren. ¶ See Erle
Warwike castell taken and rased: 167. a 50. 60
Waste. ¶ See Northcountrie.
Wat Tiler. ¶ See Tiler.
Watch appointed to be kept by night in cities and burrowes, 248. a 10. Iron and ward from foure till six, and from six till foure, 327. b 10. The mischiefe that groweth by the negligence of them, 597. b 60. In steepe what aduantage to the enimie, 380. a 60. Found sleeping in the seruice. 819. b 20. At Midsummer discontinued, 1062. b 10. ¶ See Midsummer.
Water conueied from out the Thames by pipes into seuerall houses, 1348. b 50. ¶ See Tides and Thames.
Waters executed for Treason, 313. b 40. ¶ See Traitors.
Waterquake, 440. b 50. 1311. a 50. 439. b 40
Wednesdaie, 818. b 20. ¶ See Dzie.
Weights and measures, 152, b 10 Reformed after one standard. 209. b 60
Weiland lord cheefe iustice of the kings bench, his storie, 284. b 40
Well. ¶ See Fountaine.
Welshmen vnder their kings, waste Hereford, 5. a 20. Cruelitie handled in their ouerthrow, 23. a 50. Inuaded by William Rufus, flie into the woods, 23. a 10. Vanquished at Brecknocke by William Rufus, 20. b 40. Inuade England. 21. b 20. They dare not fight in open field, but worke all vpon aduantage, 22. a 20. Prouoke greatlie against the English, 217. Besieged the castell of Montgomerie, 210. a 60. They are discomfited, b 10, &c. Put to flight, 214 a 10. Sent ouer to the aid of the earle of Britaine, 219. a 10 Warre against the lord Mortimers tenants, 263. b 50. Subiect to the English lawes, 244. a 50. Take castels, 329. 10. Wastfull without remorse, 351. b 20. Appointed to Jaques Arteueld for a gard against Gerard Dentle, 368. a 20. Molest the English subiects. 524. a 20. Rebell by the setting on of Owen Glendouer, 518. a 60. Waste Cheshire 56. b 40. Up in armes, they sue for peace to Henrie the first, 42. a 20, 30. Fickle and by what meanes allured to Henrie the firsts side, 30. a 60. Moue rebellion, discomfited, and punished, 176. a 30. Not well dealt withall, 95. b 30. Their good seruice against the French, 113. a 10. Slaie the shiriffe of Glocestershire, 106. a 20, Their good seruice, 93. b 20. Make war on the English marches, seuerelie punished, 73. b 10. Vanquished and slaine, 154. b 20. Win Cardigan, 73. b 40. Rebell, inuaded & subdued, 66. b 60, &c Their valiancie against the French, 874. b 20. Make a riot at Calis, 879. b 10. Discomfited by the Northerne men, 672. b 20. Inuade the English marches, 37. b 60. Slaine and discomfited by Henrie the first, on all hands: note, 38. a 10. Subdued. 203, & 60. Flie, 270. a 60. Submit themselues, 67. a 30. Slaine, 673. b 10. Drowned within an ambush: note, 136. a 60.
Welshwomens villanie against the English dead corples, 520 a 60. Their beastlie and barbarous cruelitie vpon the dead carcases carcases of the Englih, 528. a 30. See Frait, and Lewin.

Wentworth lord deputie of Calis sendeth to the French to demand parlee, 1135. b 50. Taken prisoner, 1136 a 50. Arreigned and acquited, 1184. a 50
Westminster spoiled by soldiors, 273. b 20. The palace of the king burned 815. b 60. The new church there begun, 202. b 10. Inlarged and repared, 237. a 40. Of a cruell murther there committed, 420 b 10. 60. The sanctuarie confirmed by parlement 421. b 60 The hall founded: note, 23 a 60. b 10. Ouerflowne with waters: note, 1129. b 50. Full of water and not to be gotten into but on horsseback, 231. a 10. Where botes might haue bene rowed vp and downe, 220. a 40. The new worke there begun, 282, b 60. A new house made within the palace for the arreignment of the lords, 490. b 20
Wrisell in Cleueland a free towne note, 1144. a 40
Weston doctor the duke of Suffolks ghostlie father, 1100, b 50. Against the ladie Elisabeth, the lord maiors iudgement of him, 1101, b 40. 50. resigneth the deanrie of Westminster by compulsion, and is recompensed, 1134, b 40
Wether intemperat by coniuring as was thought, 520. b 20. ¶ See Tempest.
Wharton lord Thomas deceaseth, 1238. a 50
Wheat and other corne scarse, with politike orders to redresse it for the poore peoples releefe: note, 1588, &c.
Whitegift John. ¶ See Archbishop.
Whittington college erected, 540 a 50
White meates licenced to be eaten in Lent, and noblemen punished for breaking the law, 960. a 10
Whose the cause of a notorious and shamefull murther: note, 1062. b 40, &c. ¶ See Concubine, Shores wife, Spanards, Whordome repressed, and the repressers taken in the deed doing, 42. b 50. Strangelie punished by the iust iudgement of God, 1353, a 60. b 10
Whordome and murther go together. 953, a 10, 937. b 30, &c.
Whorlepooles taken in the Thames, 928. a 20
Wiat knight his insurrection, his proclamation at Maidstone, he commeth to Rochester, marcheth with his adherents, causeth much trouble, 1093. b 10 30. 40. 50. 60 Soliciteth certeine gentlemen to adhere vnto him, an herald of armes sent vnto him, the lord warden desirous to be tempering against him, 1094. a 10. 40, &c. A proclamation that none should keepe in his house anie of his faction, he is sent to the Tower, hardlie dealt withall at the lieutenants hands, the furniture of his bodie, 1099 a 60. b 10. Marcheth with his power and executeth feats of armes against the aduerse parts, preuaileth against the lord Cobham, 1095. b 40. 50. 60. His requests, 1096. a 20. Marcheth to Detford Strand, suffereth his prisoners to go abrode vpon their word, commeth to Southwarke, his desperat attempt, he and his complices fall to consultation, at his wits end, 1097, all. He marcheth to Kingstone, commeth vnto the parke corner, and skirmisheth with the queenes power, marcheth alongst the wall of S. Iames toward London, submitteth himselfe to the queene, 1098. all. Arreigned, the effect of his indictment, he answereth not directlie to the question guiltie or vnguiltie, his exhortation to loialtie, altereth his mind touching the marriage, his answers to diuerse speaking at his arreignment, 1103, all. His confession, and execution, 1104. a 20. 60
Wicliffe a secular preest his conclusions, the cheefest articles that he preached, 411, b 40, &c. He and his fellowes maintened by certeine lords, 412. a 10 His doctrine, 428. b 50. 440. a 30. Fauoured of the Londoners. 440. b 20. Maintened by the learned, sentence pronounced against his books 535. b 50. 60. Euill spoken of, and his followers reproched, 419. a 20
Wiclimists increase. 467. a 40. 486. a 20. Popes letter to Richard the second against them, a 60. Bewzaid by some of their owne sect, 521. a 10. Wrote against the clergie, 481 b 60. They are complained of, they increase, the lords seeke that they might be surprised, 482. a 10. 40. 60. Richard the seconds commission against them and their sectaries, 483. a 50, &c. Excommunicated. note, 484. a 10, &c. ¶ See Pateshull.
Widow without Aldgate murthered 605. b 40. ¶ See Iesu and Benevolence.
Widowes prouided for and releeued by the charitie of Dauid Smith: note, 1375. b 50 60. 1376
Wie riuer, 5. a 20
Wife put a paie and taken a game 44. a 40. Robbed by hir husband and he hanged: note, 1561
Wilford the counterfet earle of Warwike, he is executed, 787, a 30 40
Wilford knight taken prisoner, 996. b 30
Wilfulnesse in opinion of Thomas Becket, 77. b 20
William duke of Normandie, when he began his reigne, 1. a 10. Crowned king on Christmas date, 1. b 20. Sworne at his coronation, with the sum of his oth, 1. b 30. Wise he refused to be crowned at archbishop Stigands hands, 1. b 20. Tooke an oth and hostages of the nobles and lords of England, 1. b 10. His conditions and qualities, 15. a 20. His deuise to disburthen himselfe of soultours wages, 14. a 60. What he beareth to his armes. 15. a 10. His descent, 1. a 10. Vanquisheth the English power, 1. a 10. And wasteth certeine countries, a 20. 30. Seizeth vpon the Englishmens lands, and renteth them out by the peare, 8. a 40. His couetous dealing and exactions: note, 8. b 50. Maketh a lamentable waste of the north countries, 7. b 40. 50. 60. Hateth the Englishmen more than euer he did before, 8. a 10. Subdueth certeine rebels that fled to Elie for defense, 10. a 40. 50. Glad to deale with the Danes by promises and faire proffers, 7. b 40. 50. Present at a synod, wherein note his malice against the English, 9. a 10. Saileth ouer sea, and besiegeth Doll castle in Britaine, 11. b 40. Fighteth his truns and fighteth against the Danes, and putteth them to flight. 7. a 45. In a perplexitie and glad to creepe in fauour with the English: note, 10. a 10. His oth and promise, with his crueltie and abusing of peace, 10. a 20. Goeth with an huge armie against Malcolme king of Scots, and wasteth. 10. b 30. His iustice in restoring the right heire, 10. b 50. Taketh awaie from the English their armor, 6. a 40. Subdueth the rebels of Excester. 6. b 10. And Wales. 12. a 20. Goeth ouer into Normandie, leauing guides ouer England, 5. a 10. Forced to paid to the Kentishmens request, 2. b 20. Hateth the English nobilitie euen in the time of peace, 6. a 20. His three sonnes, their names and places of their birth. 6. a 60. His foure sons, and what he bequeathed to them, 15. a 60. And fiue daughters, b 10. Returneth into England and waxeth rigorous against the English 5. a 30. b 10. In possession of London and his promised courtesie, 1. b 10. What strangers came in with him at the conquest, their names, 2. b 40. His charter granted to the citie of London, 15. a 60. He is politike, painefull, and tyrannicall against the English, 6. a 10. Diuerse wone and wounded in battell by his son Robert, 12. a 40. 50. 60. Falleth sicke in Normandie: note, 14. b 20. In despaire of his life by the Kentishmen, 2. a 40. Departeth this life, in what peare of his age, 14. b 40 His sepulchre opened, his stature and epitaph. 15. b 60.
William Rufus when he began his reigne, 16. a 10. Crowned king, and of his munificence, 16. a 40. What meanes he vsed for to purchase the noble mens fauour. 16. a 10. Giuen to sensuall lust and couetousnesse, 18. b 10. In armes against the Normans, 17. b 20 Inuadeth Wales but to little effect 23. a 10. Goeth ouer into Normandie, 23. b 20. A bitter enimie to the popes of Rome, 24. b 20, &c. Renounceth archbishop Anselme for his subiect, 25. a 60. Farmeth archbishoprikes, bishoprikes, and abbeies, 26. a 40. Passeth into Normandie, and wone, 19. a 10. Against his brother Robert, 21. a 50. Depriueth bishops, 21. a 40. His great courtesie to the English to win their fauours, 17. b 30. In armes against the Welshmen but with little successe, 22. a 20. Suspected of infidelitie, 27. b 20. Falleth sicke at Glocester, 20. a 50. Where buried, his conditions, proportion and no issue, 26. b 60, 27. all.
William the sonne of Henrie the first made duke of Normandie. 38. a 30. Drowned, and how he might haue escaped, 41. b 10, 30
William king of Scotland abed to the earles of Britaine, 7. b 30
William bishop of Durham the kings houshold chaplaine in armes against the king, 17. a 60. Founder of vniuersitie colledge in Oxford, 13. a 60. Besieged at Durham, forced to paid and exiled, 18. a 10. Restored, and dieth for sorrow, and whie, 18. a 30
Willia earle of Ew renounceth Robert, and becommeth king William Rufus man, 22. a 10
Willoughbie lord ambassador into Denmarke, his oration in Latine to the king, mustereth the king into the order of the garter, returneth and arriueth in England. 1348. a 20, &c.
Willoughbie knight found frozen to death in his ship: note, 1083. a 60.
Willoughbie captaine honourablie buried, 1428. a 60
Wincelester, an eris sonne bishop there, 42. a 60. ¶ See Bishop.
Wind monstrous and big, and doing much harme, 170. b 50. Full of annoiance. 914. b 30. 245. a 60, 1310. b 30. 1579. a 20, &c. That troubled the skie 226. a 10. Extreme & terrible, 243. a 20. Big and boisterous that blew open Paules gates, 1209. a 20. Tempestuous out of the south, 1260. a 40. That ouerthrew houses, 348. b 40. 220. a 60. In diuerse places of England: note, 19. b 10. Continuing six or seuen daies, 395. b 40. For three moneths space hindering the spring, 250. a 50. Prognosticating trouble, 861. a 10. Vpon the seas, 1211. a 50
Windsore castell repared, 392. a 50. And of the chamber there built called the round table, 366. a 20
Windsore lord. ¶ See Iusts triumphant.
Wine prised at a rate, 161. a 20. Sold for thirteene shillings & foure penie the tun, 455. a 10
Winter sharpe following a drie summer, 1210. a 60. With great frost, 1257. b 30. Inclemme to warlike enterprises, 7. a 30. Extreame: note, 38. a 50. More than ordinarie, 163. a 50. Neuer the like, 166. a 60 That killed all kind of small foules, 534. a 10. With a death, 892. b 30
Winter sir William knight, and bicradmerall, saileth towards Scotland, 1187. a 10.
Wisedome of Richard the first in making his answer, 138, b 40
Witch hanged at Feuersham: wherein note the indirect course of iustice, 1560. a 10. Of one that allured the Dolphin of France to take vpon him the title of K. of France, 602. a 20
Witchcraft punished with fame. 203. b 60, 204. a 10
Wood knighted. ¶ See Maior of Norwich.
Woodstocke manour by whome builded. 45. b 30
Wooduile lord aideth the duke of Britaine without Henrie the seauenths consent, 768. a 40. Slaine, 768. b 40
Wooll sold dog cheape by the stone 476. b 50. Selled at a certeine price. and what for the transporting out of the realme, 365 a 40. Transporting ouer sea, an act against it, 353, a 60. What K. Edward the third might spend a daie there by that which was transported, 383. b 10

Granted

Granted in subsidie by the merchants,440,a 20. ¶ See Subsidie, Staple.
Wollen cloth at two shillings the yrode yard, 789,b 40
Wolues wife a notable harlot, hir shamefull end,937,b 30,&c.
Wolsele described,829, b 60.830, a 10. Made bishop of Durham, hr demandeth a great subsidie, his obstinat answer to the motion of the commons, 877, a 50, 60, b 10. Taketh it in scorne to be called yrother by the archbishop,848,a 10. Reproued by Henrie the eight, dissolueth the archbishop of Canturburie his conuocation,878 a 20,40. His princelie port at a banket and other recreations:note,846,b 50,60. He will haue euerie man sworne what he is worth, 874, b 60. Deuiseth the destruction of the duke of Buckingham, 862,b 50. Imboldeneth Kneuet against him, b 60. Accuseth him to Henrie the eight, 863, b 10, 20. What foren chronicles report of him,886 b 30. Altereth the state of Henrie the eight his household, 892,b 40. Erecteth two new colleges, he excuseth himselfe touching the streict commission for the tax, 891, a 10,40,60. His authoritie impugned, 884,a 10. Offended at a plaie, and punisheth the author and actors of the same, 894, a 50. Goeth ambassador into France, his pompe, the maner of his receiuing by the French king, 897, b 10,20,40 Suspected to be against Henrie the eight his marriage with queene Katharine his brothers wife,906,b 30. Articles exhibited against him, 911, b 20. At his manor of Cawood keepeth a good house, was to be arrested of treason, prognostications of his fall, arrested, taketh the action in good part,915,a 10,30,b 50,60 His commissions to take by monie by anticipation, 882,a 50. His ambitious humor, the ordering of the two kings of England and Spaine, their interuiew committed to him, 853,a 20,&c. b 10, 20,&c.854, all. 855,a 10,&c. His great pompe, put in great trust by the king of England and France, 858,a 20, 30. His liberalitie by vertue (forsooth) of his spirituall power, 872, b 50. He hateth the duke of Buckingham, causeth the earle of Kildare to be committed to ward, 855, b 20, 30,&c. His crueltie, 894,b 30. His excessiue pride, 845,a 60,b 10 847,b 50. A caueat giuen him by a libell set vp in London, he cannot abide the citizens, 895, a 30,40,50. His pompe when he receiued the emperor Charles at Douer, his pride at high masse, 873,a 50,b 40 Returneth out of France, 898,a 60. Is sent ouer to Calis, the emperor receiueth him, carrieth the great seale with him, and there sealeth writs and patents, 870,a 40 b 10,20,40. Maketh means to be elected pope,871,b 10. Singeth masse before the two kings of England & France, 861,a 20. Desireth to see the commission of the arrest, committed to the custodie of certeine gentlemen, sickneth sitting at the table,falleth into a flix that cost him his life,916 a 20. In displeasure with Henrie the eight, articles exhibited against him, sued in a premunire, loth to part from the great seale, but yet discharged, calleth all his officers to accounts, goeth to Asher and hath his pientie turned into penurie, condemned in a premunire,909,a 10,20,30,40,60 b 30,50. Archbishop of Yorke, cardinall, chancellor of England, his cardinals hat receiued by Kentish gentlemen with great solemnitie, iustice executed by him vpon offendors, he erecteth new courts by Henrie the eights commission,838,b 50,60. He taketh vpon him to determin causes, diuerse peeres offended at him,he hindereth the duke of Suffolks hope, an enimie to peace,839,a 50,60,b 10. His aduise to the maior of London at Ill Maie daies riot, 841, b 30,40. Licenced to repaire into Yorkeshire,his college lands seized vpon to the behoofe of Henrie the eight, 913,b 10. Remoued to Richmond,prepareth for his iournie into the North, 914,a 60 b 10. Auouchеth that he cannot liue, ascribeth his fall to the iust iudgement of God, the complet historie of his behauiors, life, and death, 917, 918,919,920,921,922
Wolstan bishop of Worcester and others resist the erle of Herefoord rebelling,11,a 50. Refuseth a place of safegard against the Normans, 17,a 60 b 10. Like to haue bene deposed for his insufficiencie of learning, 12, a 10. His miracle whereby he kept his bishoprike,12,a 10. Submitteth himselfe to duke William, 1,a 50. Dieth, 27,b 60.
Woluerhampton, and how to be rightlie called:note, 796,a 40
Womans request preuaileth in a great matter with a great personage, 32,a 50. Pitifull: note,378,a 20. Their dissimulation, 336, b 30. Hanged, drawne and quartered, 944, a 60. Ones request denied occasion of much broile, 327,b 40 328,a 10. One treateth for peace, & preuaileth betweene two kings: note, 360, a 30 One brought to bed of a monster: note,1314,a 40. One of fourescore peres old brought a bed of a monster, 1313,b 60 1314,a 10. One brought to bed of foure children at one burthen, 1261,b 60
Women will hardlie be of one mind, 158,a 60. Their boldnes in ecclesiasticall matters: note,484,a 50,60. That to be seuere against them is dishonorable: note,314,a 10. Causers of mischeefe: note, 562, a 20. Counterfeiting themselues one our Ladie the other Marie Magdalen, 203, b 50. Their matter what mischeefe it bredeth: note, 626,b 60,627,a 61. Reuenge a murther done vpon one, 605, b 60. Hard to be reconciled,378, a 60. Their peace, 1151,a 60 Wonders,37, a 40,38,a 40. 39,b 10.44,b 40.82,a 60,b 10. 101,a 30.102,b 30.166,a 60.204,b 60 &c.210,b 50. 216, b 10,20,30. 225,b 60.226,a 10. 239,b 20. 245,b 30.252,a 50,&c. 277,b 40.395,a 40.439,b 40,484,b 10 &c.493,b 60.645,b 10.793,b 10 &c,40. Of a Dutchman standing on Pauls wethercocke, note,1091,a 60,b 10. Of peason without tilth growing vpon hard stone & pible,1129. a 60,b 10. Of a man preserued from drowning, 1223, b 10. Of a lad drowned in a kennell 1259,b 60,1260, a 10. Of a child speaking strange speeches,1315,a 10, &c. Of mice deuouring grasse, 1315, a 60. Of the ground swallowed vp 1413,b 20,30 Strange esteemed to be warnings: note, 26,b 10. Strange in heauen and earth,21,a 30. In the aire or element,142, a 10. Great, and whereof they were tokens,204,b 50.What they betoken.156,b 60.157, a 10,b 10. Of baie trees,496, b 60. Of a fish like a man: note, 168, a 10. Of fighting fishes, 115, a 10. Of Rosamunds coler,115 b 60. In the sunne,moone,and the earth,102,b 40,50,60. Of a dead carcase,1066,a 30. To be noted in a dead corps that late long in the ground,779,a 40. ¶ See Fish, Miracle, and Monsters.
Worcester assaulted, 58,b 20. By the Normans,17,a 60. With the valiantnesse of the people, b 10. Besieged and taken,266, a 60. The citie burnt by casualtie, 37,b 50
Words malicious and fowle of a French lord: note, 771, a 20 Of Henrie the second that cost Becket his life, 78,b 30 Of displeasure bittered by the father to his sonne, 114, a 40 Stout of a prelat to a peere, 458,a 20. Of a graue gentleman spoken on his death bed, dw good,197,b 40. What Henrie the third vnto warre,209, a 10. Faire ouercome,32,a 50. Make fooles faine, 191,b 60. 144,a 20. Preuaile not, 112,a 20. With fraud: note,111,a 30 Smooth how mightilie they preuaile euen in the entimie, 673,a 60,b 10. Faire with ill meaning: note, 136, a 10. Procure wounds and death, 954,a 20. Procure wounds and bloudshed, 447, a 40. Wounds and slaughter: note, 13,b 40. Shamefull & slanderous against Edward the fourth,698,b 30. Obscure and doubtfull to be opened, 480, b 40. Unadui sedlie spoken against the prince the price of life: note,703,a 10. Vndecent to the lord chancellor punished in the speaker, 1081, a a 50. Gentle appeased strife, 880,b 50. That kindled heat and indignation to reuenge, 172,b 10. Of wrath kindle displeasure and warre,32,b 10 Faire and gentle with like behauiour how forceable,518, a 10. Purchase displeasure, though truelie spoken, 513, b 40,50,60. Misconstrued by the Scots: note, 423, a 20. Multiplied kindle displeasure,487,b 50,60. Rciall and well beseeming a king to rebellious lords: note, 460,a 10 Wiselie uttered, appease the wrath of a king: 458,a 10,&c, 50. Opprobrious procure ill will: note, 421,a 20. Of respect how mischeefous in issue: note,412, a 20. Great with little manhod,23,b 60,24 a 10. Of disdaine breeding mischeefe: note,645,a 30. Punished with standing on the pillorie, and losse of both the eares,1084,a 20. Mixed with dreadfull allegation preuaile much: note,143, b 60. ¶ See Gifts, Oth, and Promises.
Works good of duke William before his death,14,b 50. Of king Henrie the first to win the peoples fauour, 28,b 20
Workemanship verie cunning, of compiling much matter in a little rome,1262,b 10. Of a locke and a kete weighing but one wheatcorne, 1299, b 50, 60
Worship to creatures not permitted to be done without the bishops authoritie, 31, a Wotton embassador into Scotland, of an ancient familie: note,1402, b 30,&c. 1403,&c.
Wrecks by sea pardoned by K. Richard the first,through all his dominions, 126,a 60
Wrestling at the hospitall of S. Iames, betwixt the Londoners and all commers,204, a 10,20,&c. At Clerkenwell a great frate there, 641, a 60, Writhesleie lord. ¶ See Erle of South hampton.
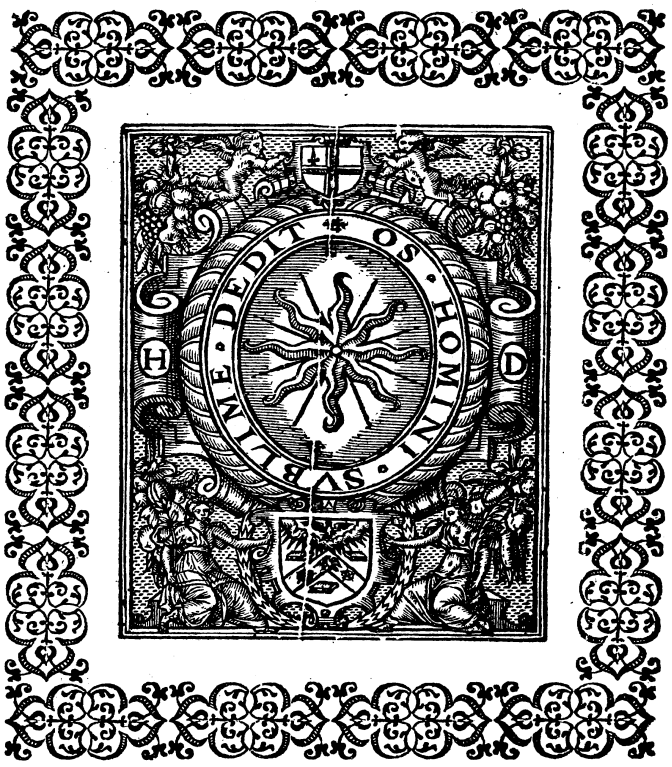
Writing of much matter within a penie compasse, 1262, b 10



Y.

Yard. ¶ See Measure.
Yeoman of the gard his shift to saue himselfe from hanging,844. One hanged, 812,b 10. Two hanged for robbing, 953, a 60, b 10. Their institution or first bringing in, 763,b 50. Defend the preacher at Pauls crosse, 1089, b 30,1090,a 20
Yeare of Iubile,788, a 60. Of wonders, 1588: note,1356, b 60. More talked of than feared, 1357,a 10,20
Yorke besieged by duke William 7,a 60. Burned by the Normans and Whie,6,b 60,7,a 10 The shire subdued to Lewis the French kings son, 193, a 10. The people in a perplexitie by the means of two aduerse parties,6,b 60. The castell, 6,a 40
Yorke place infeoffed to Henrie the eight, 923,a 10
Yorkeshire. ¶ See Commotion.
Ypres William warlike,43,b 30 52,a 10. A Fleming,earle of Kent,54,a 30. Departeth the realme, 65,b 20
Ypres besieged,443,b 20. The siege broken by, 444,a 10

These faults to be amended. For sir Iohn Perot, read Pollard, pag.1551,b 20. For sealed read seldome, 1555,b 50 For Henrie the first, read the second.1548,b 50
The rest good reader, as iudgement shall lead thee, reforme.

FINIS propositi laus Christo nescia FINIS.

Finiſhed in Ianuarie 1587, and the 29 of the Queenes Maieſties reigne, with the full continuation of the former yeares, at the expenſes of Iohn Hariſon, George Biſhop, Rafe Newberie, Henrie Denham, and Thomas Woodcocke.

AT LONDON
Printed in Alderſgate ſtreet at the ſigne of the Starre.

Cum priuilegio.

THE
First and second volumes of Chronicles,
compriſing

1 The deſcription and hiſtorie of England,
2 The deſcription and hiſtorie of Ireland,
3 The deſcription and hiſtorie of Scotland:

Firſt collected and publiſhed by Raphaell Holinſhed, William Harriſon, and others:

Now newlie augmented and continued (with manifold matters of ſingular note and worthie memorie) to the yeare 1586. by Iohn Hooker alias Vowell Gent. and others.

With conuenient tables at the end of theſe volumes.

Hiſtoriæ placeant noſtrates ac peregrinæ

¶ The names of the Authors from whome this Historie of England is collected.

A.

Aelius Spartianus.
Aelius Lampridius.
Asserius Meneuensis.
Alfridus Beuerlacensis.
Aeneas Syluius Senensis.
Auentinus.
Adam Merimouth with additions.
Antoninus Archiepiscopus Florentinus.
Albertus Crantz. Alexander Neuill.
Arnoldus Ferronius.
Annius Viterbiensis.
Amianus Marcellinus.
Alliances genealogiques des Roys & Princes de France.
Annales D. Aquitaine per Iean Bouchet.
Annales de Bourgoigne per Guilamme Paradin.
Annales de France per Nicol Giles.
Annales rerum Flandricarum per Jacobum Meir.
Antonius Sabellicus.
Antonius Nebricensis. Aurea Historia.

B.

Biblia Sacra. Beda venerabilis.
Berosus. Brian Tuke knight.
Blondus Forliuiensis.
Berdmondsey, a Register booke belonging to that house.

C.

Cæsars Commentaries.
Cornelius Tacitus.
Chronica Chronicorum.
Chronica de Dunstable, a booke of Annales belonging to the Abbey there.
Chronicon Io. Tilij.
Chronica de Eyton, an historie belonging to that colledge, although compiled by some Northernman, as some suppose named Otherborne.
Chronicles of S. Albon.
Chronica de Abingdon, a booke of Annales belonging to that house.
Chronica de Teukesburie.
Claudianus.
Chronicon Genebrard.
Chroniques de Normandie.
Chroniques de Britaine.
Chroniques de Flanders published by Denis Sauage.
Continuation de Historie and Chroniques de Flanders by the same Sauage.
Couper. Cuspinianus.
Chronica Sancti Albani.
Caxtons Chronicles.
Carion with additions.
Crockesden, a Register booke belonging to an house of that name in Staffordshire.

D.

Diodorus Siculus.
Dion Cassius.
Dominicus Marius Niger.

E.

Edmerus.
Eusebius. Eutropius.
Encomium Emmæ, an old Pamphlet written to hir, conteining much good matter for the vnderstanding of the state of this realme in hir time, wherein hir praise is not pretermitted, and so hath obteined by reason thereof that title.
Enguerant de Monstrellet.
Eulogium.
Edmund Campian.

F.

Fabian. Froissart.
Franciscus Tarapha.
Franciscus Petrarcha.
Flauius Vopiscus Siracusanus.
Floriacensis Vigorinensis.

G.

Guiciardini Francisco.
Guiciardini Ludouico.
Gildas Sapiens.
Galfridus Monemutensis, aliàs Geffrey of Monmouth.
Giraldus Cambrensis.
Guilielmus Malmesburiensis.
Galfridus Vinsauf.
Guilielmus Nouoburgensis.
Guilielmus Thorne.
Gualterus Hemmingford, aliàs Gisburnensis.
Geruasius Dorobernensis.
Geruasius Tilberiensis.
Guilielmus Gemeticensis de ducibus Normaniæ.
Guilielmus Rishanger.
Guilielmus Lambert. Georgius Lillie.
Guilamme Paradin.

H.

Higinus.
Henricus Huntingtonensis.
Henricus Leicestrensis.
Hector Boece. Historie Daniou.
Historia Ecclesiastica Magdeburgensis.
Henricus Mutius.
Historia quadripartita seu quadrilogium.
Hardings Chronicle.
Halles Chronicle. Henricus Bradshaw.
Henricus Marleburgensis.
Herodianus. Humfrey Luyd.

I.

Iohannes Bale.
Iohannes Leland.
Iacobus Philippus Bergomas.
Iulius Capitolinus. Iulius Solinus.
Iohannes Pike with additions.
Iohannes Functius.
Iohn Price knight. Iohannes Textor.
Iohannes Bodinus. Iohannes Sleidan.
Iohannes Euersden a Monke of Berry.
Iohannes or rather Giouan villani a Florentine.
Iohannes Baptista Egnatius.
Iohannes Capgraue.
Iohannes Fourden. Iohannes Caius.
Iacob de Voragine Bishop of Nebio.
Iean de Bauge a Frenchman wrote a pamphlet of the warres in Scotland, during the time that Monsieur de Desse remained there.
Iohn Fox. Iohannes Maior.
Iohn Stow, by whose diligent collected summarie, I haue beene not onelie aided, but also by diuers rare monuments, ancient writers, and necessarie register bookes of his, which he hath lent me out of his own Librarie. Iosephus.

L.

Liber constitutionum London.
Lucan. Lælius Giraldus.

M.

Marianus Scotus. Matthæus Paris.
Matthæus Westmonaster. aliàs Flores historiarum.
Martin du Bellay, aliàs Monsr. de Langey.
Mamertinus in Panegyricis.
Memoires de la Marche.

N.

Nicephorus. Nennius.
Nicholaus Treuet with additions.

O.

Orosius Dorobernensis.
Osbernus Dorobernensis.
Otho Phrisingensis.

P.

Pausanias. Paulus Diaconus.
Paulus Aemilius.
Ponticus Virunius. Pomponius Lætus.
Philip de Cumeins, aliàs M. de Argenton.
Polydor Virgil. Paulus Iouius.
Platina. Philippus Melancthon.
Peucerus. Pomponius Mela.

R.

Rogerus Houeden.
Ranulfus Higeden, aliàs Cestrensis the author of Polychronicon.
Radulfus Cogheshall. Radulfus Niger.
Register of the Garter.
Records of Battell Abbey.
Richardus Southwell. Robert Greene.
Radulfus de Diceto. Robert Gaguin.
Rodericus Archiepiscopus Toletanus.
Records and rolles diuerse.

S.

Strabo. Suetonius.
Sigebertus Gemblacensis.
Sidon Appollinaris. Simon Dunelmensis.
Sextus Aurelius Victor.

T.

Trebellius Pollio.
Thomas More knight.
Thomas Spot. Thomas Walsingham.
Titus Liuius de Foroliuisys de vita Henrici. 5. Titus Liuius Patauiensis.
Thomas Lanquet. Thomas Couper.
Taxtor a Monke of Berry. Theuet.
Thomas de la More. Tripartita Historia.

V.

Vlcatius Gallicanus.
Volfgangus Lazius.

W.

Whethamsted, a learned man, sometime Abbat of Saint Albons a Chronicler.
William Harrison.
William Patten of the expedition into Scotland. 1574.
William Proctor of Wiats rebellion.

Besides these, diuers other bookes and treatises of historicall matter I haue seene and perused, the names of the authors being vtterlie vnknowne.

FINIS.

To the Right Honorable, and his ſingular good

Lord and Maiſter, S. William Brooke Knight, Lord Warden of the cinque Ports, and Baron of Cobham, all increaſe of the feare and knowledge of God, firme obedience toward his Prince, infallible loue to the common wealth, and commendable renowme here in this world, and in the world to come life euerlaſting.

HAuing had iuſt occaſion, Right Honorable, to remaine in London, during the time of Trinitie terme laſt paſſed, and being earneſtlie required of diuers my freends, to ſet downe ſome breefe diſcourſe of parcell of thoſe things, which I had obſerued in the reading of ſuch manifold antiquities as I had peruſed toward the furniture of a Chronologie, which I haue yet in hand; I was at the firſt verie loth to yeeld to their deſires: firſt, for that I thought my ſelf vnable for want of skill and iudgement, ſo ſuddenlie & with ſo haſtie ſpeed to take ſuch a charge vpon me: ſecondlie, bicauſe the dealing therein might proue an hinderance and impechment vnto mine owne Treatiſe: and finallie, for that I had giuen ouer all earneſt ſtudie of hiſtories, as iudging the time ſpent about the ſame, to be an hinderance vnto my more neceſſarie dealings in that vocation & function wherevnto I am called in the miniſterie. But when they were ſo importunate with me, that no reaſonable excuſe could ſerue to put by this trauell, I condeſcended at the length vnto their yrkeſome ſute, promiſing that I would ſpend ſuch void time as I had to ſpare, whileſt I ſhould be inforced to tarie in the citie, vpon ſome thing or other that ſhould ſatisfie their requeſt; and ſtand in lieu of a deſcription of my Countrie. For their parts alſo they aſſured me of ſuch helps as they could purchaſe: and thus with hope of good, although no gaie ſucceſſe, I went in hand withall, then almoſt as one leaning altogither vnto memorie, ſith my bookes and I were parted by fourtie miles in ſunder. In this order alſo I ſpent a part of Michaelmas and Hilarie termes inſuing, being inforced thereto I ſay by other buſineſſes which compelled me to keepe in the citie, and abſent my ſelfe from my charge, though in the meane ſeaſon I had ſome repaire vnto my poore librarie, but not ſo great as the dignitie of the matter required, and yet far greater than the Printers haſt would ſuffer. One helpe, and none of the ſmalleſt that I obtained herein, was by ſuch commentaries as Leland had ſomtime collected of the ſtate of Britaine, bookes vtterlie mangled, defaced with wet and weather, and finallie vnperfect through want of ſundrie volumes: ſecondlie, I gat ſome knowledge of things by letters and pamphlets, from ſundrie places & ſhires of England, but ſo diſcordant now and then amongſt themſelues, eſpeciallie in the names and courſes of riuers and ſituation of townes, that I had oft greater trouble to reconcile them one with an other, than orderlie to pen the whole diſcourſe of ſuch points as they contained: the third aid did grow by conference with diuers, either at the table or ſecretlie alone, wherein I marked in what things the talkers did agree, and wherin they impugned ech other, chooſing in the end the former, and reiecting the later, as one deſirous to ſet foorth the truth abſolutelie, or ſuch things in deed as were moſt likelie to be true. The laſt comfort aroſe by mine owne reading of ſuch writers as haue heretofore made mention of the condition of our countrie, in ſpeaking wherof, if I ſhould make account of the ſucceſſe, & extraordinarie cõming by ſundrie treaſures not ſuppoſed to be extant, I ſhould but ſeeme to pronounce more than may well be ſaid with modeſtie, & ſay farder of my ſelfe than this Treatiſe can beare witnes of. Howbeit,

I re-

I refer not this succesſe wholie vnto my purpoſe about this Deſcription, but rather giue notice thereof to come to paſſe in the penning of my Chronologie, whoſe crums as it were fell out verie well in the framing of this Pamphlet. In the proceſſe therefore of this Booke, if your Honor regard the ſubſtance of that which is here declared, I muſt needs confeſſe that it is none of mine owne: but if your Lordſhip haue conſideration of the barbarous compoſition ſhewed herein, that I may boldlie claime and challenge for mine owne, ſith there is no man of any ſo ſlender skill, that will defraud me of that reproch, which is due vnto me for the meere negligence, diſorder, and euill diſpoſition of matter comprehended in the ſame. Certes I proteſt before God and your Honour, that I neuer made any choiſe of ſtile, or words, neither regarded to handle this Treatiſe in ſuch preciſe order and method as manie other would haue done, thinking it ſufficient, truelie and plainelie to ſet foorth ſuch things as I minded to intreat of, rather than with vaine affectation of eloquence to paint out a rotten ſepulchre; a thing neither commendable in a writer, nor profitable to the reader. How other affaires troubled me in the writing hereof manie know, and peraduenture the ſlackneſſe ſhewed herein can better teſtifie: but howſoeuer it be done, & whatſoeuer I haue done, I haue had an eſpeciall eye vnto the truth of things, and for the reſt, I hope that this foule frizeled Treatiſe of mine will proue a ſpur to others better learned, more skilfull in Chorographie, and of greater iudgement in choiſe of matter to handle the ſelfe ſame argument, if in my life time I doo not peruſe it againe. It is poſſible alſo that your Honour will miſlike hereof, for that I haue not by mine owne trauell and eyſight viewed ſuch things as I doo here intreat of. In deed I muſt needs confeſſe, that vntill now of late, except it were from the pariſh where I dwell, vnto your Honour in Kent; or out of London where I was borne, vnto Oxford & Cambridge where I haue bene brought vp, I neuer trauelled 40. miles foorthright and at one iourney in all my life; neuertheleſſe in my report of theſe things, I vſe their authorities, who either haue performed in their perſons, or left in writing vpon ſufficient ground (as I ſaid before) whatſoeuer is wanting in mine. It may be in like ſort that your Honour will take offenſe at my raſh and retchleſſe behauiour vſed in the compoſition of this volume, and much more that being ſcambled vp after this maner, I dare preſume to make tendour of the protection therof vnto your Lordſhips hands. But when I conſider the ſingular affection that your Honour dooth beare to thoſe that in any wiſe will trauell to ſet foorth ſuch profitable things as lie hidden, and therevnto doo weigh on mine owne behalfe my bounden dutie and gratefull mind to ſuch a one as hath ſo manie and ſundrie waies benefited me that otherwiſe can make no recompenſe, I can not but cut off all ſuch occaſion of doubt, and therevpon exhibit it, ſuch as it is, and ſo penned as it is, vnto your Lordſhips tuition, vnto whome if it may ſeeme in anie wiſe acceptable, I haue my whole deſire. And as I am the firſt that (notwithſtanding the great repugnancie to be ſeene among our writers) hath taken vpon him ſo particularlie to deſcribe this Ile of Britaine; ſo I hope the learned and godlie will beare withall, & reforme with charitie where I doo tread amiſſe. As for the curious, and ſuch as can rather euill fauouredlie eſpie than skilfullie correct an error, and ſooner carpe at another mans dooings than publiſh any thing of their owne, (keeping themſelues cloſe with an obſcure admiration of learning & knowledge among the common ſort) I force not what they ſaie hereof: for whether it doo pleaſe or diſpleaſe them, all is one to me, ſith I referre my whole trauell in the gratification of your Honour, and ſuch as are of experience to conſider of my trauell, and the large ſcope of things purpoſed in this Treatiſe, of whome my ſeruice in this behalfe may be taken in good part, that I will repute for my full recompenſe, and large guerdon of my labours. The Almightie God preſerue your Lordſhip in continuall health, wealth, and proſperitie, with my good Ladie your wife, your Honours children, (whom God hath indued with a ſingular towardneſſe vnto all vertue and learning) and the reſt of your reformed familie, vnto whom I wiſh farder increaſe of his holie ſpirit, vnderſtanding of his word, augmentation of honor, and continuance of zeale to follow his commandements.

Your Lordships humble ſeruant and houſhold Chaplein. W. H.

A Table of ſuch Chapiters as are conteined in the firſt booke of this Deſcription.

1 Of the diuiſion of the whole earth.
2 Of the poſition, circuit, forme, and quantitie of the Ile of Britaine.
3 Of the ancient denominations of this Iland.
4 What ſundrie nations haue dwelled in Albion.
5 Whether it be likelie that anie giants were, and whether they inhabited in this Ile or not.
6 Of the languages ſpoken in this Iland.
7 Into how manie kingdoms this Iland hath beene diuided.
8 The names of ſuch kings and princes as haue reigned in this Iland.
9 Of the ancient religion vſed in Albion.
10 Of ſuch Ilands as are to be ſeene vpon the coaſts of Britaine.
11 Of riuers, and firſt of the Thames, and ſuch riuers as fall into it.
12 Of ſuch ſtreames as fall into the ſea, betweene the Thames and the mouth of Sauerne.
13 The deſcription of the Sauerne, and ſuch waters as diſcharge themſelues into the ſame.
14 Of ſuch waters as fall into the ſea in compaſſe of the Iland, betweene the Sauerne and the Humber.
15 The deſcription of the Humber or Iſis, and ſuch water-courſes as doo increaſe hir chanell.
16 Of ſuch fals of waters as ioine with the ſea, betweene Humber and the Thames.
17 Of ſuch ports and creeks as our ſea-faring-men doo note for their benefit vpon the coaſts of England.
18 Of the aire, ſoile, and commodities of this Iland.
19 Of the foure high waies ſometime made in Britaine by the princes of this Iland.
20 Of the generall conſtitution of the bodies of the Britons.
21 How Britaine at the firſt grew to be diuided into three portions.
22 After what maner the ſouereigntie of this Ile dooth remaine to the princes of Lhoegres or kings of England.
23 Of the wall ſometime builded for a partition betweene England and the Picts and Scots.
24 Of the maruels of England.

REGVM ANGLIÆ SERIES & catalogus.

Wil. Conqu.
Wil. Rufus.
Henricus 1.
Stephanus.
Henricus 2.
Richardus 1.
Ioannes.
Henricus 3.
Eduardus 1.
Eduardus 2.
Eduardus 3.
Richardus 2.
Henricus 4.
Henricus 5.
Henricus 6.
Eduardus 4.
Eduardus 5.
Richardus 3.
Henricus 7.
Henricus 8.
Eduardus 6.
Phil. & Mar.
Elisabeth.

CONqueſtor, Rufus, prior Henricus, Stephanúſque,
Alter & Henricus, Leonino corde Richardus,
Rex & Ioannes, Henricus tertius inde:
Eduardus primus, Gnatúſque, Nepóſque ſequuntur:
His infœlicem Richardum iunge ſecundum:
Henricus quartus ſoboles Gandaui Ioannis,
Præcedit Gnato quinto, ſextóque Nepoti:
Eduardus quartus, quintus, homicida Richardus,
Septimi & Henricus octauus clara propago:
Eduardus ſextus, regina Maria, Philippus:
Eliſabeth longos regnet victura per annos,
Seráque promiſſo fœlix potiatur olympo.

CARMEN CHRONOLOGICON Thomæ Newtoni Ceſtreſhyrij.

GRamine, fluminibus, grege, principe, fruge, metallis,
Labe, feris, armis, vrbibus, arte, foris,
Quæ viget ac floret generoſa Britannia, quæque,
Obruta puluereo ſqualluit ante ſitu:
Exerit ecce caput, genuinum nacta nitorem,
Et rutilum emittit cum grauitate iubar.
Et quod blæſa hominum mutilarat tempore lingua,
Illud habet rectum pumice terſa nouo.
Loydus in hac pridem gnauus proluſit arena,
Lelandus, Priſius, Stous, Holinſhedius,
Lambardus, Morus, Camdenus, Thinnius, Hallus,
Vocalis, Grafton, Foxius, Harriſonus,
Hardingus, Gildas, Staniherſtus, Beda, Neuillus,
Doctáque Flemingi lima poliuit opus:
Nec te cane ſenex, magne ô Parkere, ſilebo,
Cui decus attulerat pontificalis apex.
Omnibus his meritò eſt laus debita & optima merces,
Quòd patriæ accendant lumina clara ſuæ.
Longa dies opus hoc peperit, longæua ſenectus,
Et libri authores perbeet, atque librum.

Loydus.
Lelandus.
Priſius.
Stous.
Holinſhedius.
Lambardus.
Morus.
Camdenus.
Thinnius.
Hallus.
Vocalis aliâs
Hookerus.
Graftonus.
Foxius.
Harriſonus.
Hardingus.
Gildas.
Staniherſtus.
Beda.
Neuillus.
Flemingus.
Parkerus.

An Historicall description of the Iland of Britaine, with a briefe rehersall of the nature and qualities of the people of England, and such commodities as are to be found in the same. Comprehended in three bookes, and written by W. H.

Of the diuision of the whole earth.

Chapter. 1.

WE read that the earth hath bene diuided into three parts, euen sithens the generall floud. And the common opinion is, that Noah limited and bestowed it vpon his three sons, Iaphet, Cham, and Sem, preserued with him in the Arke, giuing vnto each of them such portions thereof as to him seemed good, and neuertheless reteining the souereignte of the whole still vnto himselfe: albeit as yet it be left vncertaine how those seuerall parts were bounded, and from whome they toke such names as in our times are attributed to each of them. Certes the words, Asia, Europa, and Africa, are denominations giuen but of late (to speake of) vnto them, and it is to be doubted, whether sithens the time of Noah, the sea hath in sundrie places wonne or lost, added or diminished to and from each of them; or whether Europa, and Lybia were but one portion; and the same westerlie regions of late discouered (and now called America,) was the third part (counting Asia for the second) or the selfe region of the Atlantides, which Plato and others, for want of traffike thither in their times, supposed to be dissolued and sunke into the sea: as by their writings appeareth.

Noah first diuided the earth among his sonnes.

The diuision of the earth not yet certeinlie knowne.

Not long before my time, we reckoned Asia, Europa, and Africa, for a full and perfect diuision of the whole earth, which are parcels onelie of that huge Iland that lieth east of the Atlantike sea, and whereof the first is diuided from the second by Tanais (which riseth in the rocks of Caucasus, and hideth it selfe in the Meotine mores) and the Ocean sea; and the last from them both by the Mediterrane and red sea, otherwise called Mare Erythræum. But now all men, especially the learned, begin to doubt of the soundnes of that partition; bicause a no lesse part than the greatest of the three ioined with those Ilands and maine which lie vnder the north and southpoles, if not double in quantitie vnto the same, are found out and discouered by the diligence of our trauellers. Hereby it appeareth, that either the earth was not exactlie diuided in time past by antiquitie; or els, that the true diuision thereof came not to the hands and notice of their posteritie, so that our ancestors haue hitherto as it were laboured in the Cimmerian darkenesse, and were vtterlie ignorant of the truth of that whereabout they indeuoured to shew their trauels and knowledge in their writings. Some peece of this confusion also is to be found amongst the ancient and Romane writers, who (notwithstanding their large conquests) did sticke in the same mire with their successors; not being able (as appeareth by their treatises) to deliuer and set downe the veritie. For Salust in his booke De bello Iugurthino cannot tell whether Africa be parcell of Asia or not. And with the same scruple Varro in his De lingua Latina is not a litle encumbred, who in the end concludeth, that the whole earth is diuided into Asia and Europa: so that Africa is excluded and driuen out of his place. Silius also writeth of Africa, (as one not yet resolued whereunto to leane,) that it is;

Aut ingens Asiæ latus, aut pars tertia rerum.

Wherein Lucane lib. 9. sheweth himselfe to be far of another iudgement, in that he ascribeth it to Europa, saieng after this maner:

Tertia pars rerum Lybia: si credere famæ
Cuncta velis, si ventos cœlúmque sequaris,
Pars erit Europæ, nec enim plus littora Nili
Quàm Scythicus Tanais primis à gradibus absunt.

Whereby (I saie) we may well vnderstand, that in the time of Augustus Tiberius, Claudius & Nero, the Romanes were not yet resolued of the diuision of the earth. For my part, as I indeuour not to remoue the credit of that which antiquitie hath deliuered (and yet loth to continue and maintaine any corruption that may be redressed) so I thinke good to giue forth a new diuision more probable, & better agreeing with a truth. And therefore I diuide the whole into fiue seuerall parcels, reteining the common diuision in the first three, as before; and vnto the fourth allowing not onelie all that portion that lieth by north of the Magellan streicts, and those Hyperborean Ilands which lie west of the line of longitude, of late discouered by Frobisher, and called by hir Maiestie Meta incognita: but likewise so manie Ilands as are within 180. degrées Westwards from our beginning or common line of longitude, whereby they are parted from those, which by this diuision are allotted vnto Asia, and the portion it selfe made equipollent with the same for greatnes, & far exceeding either Europa or Africa, if it be not fullie so much in quantitie as they both vnited and laid togither. The fift & last part is the Antartike portion with hir Ilands annexed, that region (I meane) which lieth vnder the South pole, cut off from America, or the fourth part by the Magellan streicts; & from Africa by the sea which passeth by the Cape of good hope; a countrie no lesse large for limits and bounds than Africa or America, and therefore right worthie to be called the fift: howsoeuer it shall please the curious to mislike of this diuision. This also I will adde, that albeit the continent hereof do not extend it selfe vnto the verie Antartike point, but lieth as it were a long table betweene two seas, of which the later is vnder the South pole, and as I may call it a maine sea vnder the aforesaid pricke, yet is it not without Variance among the writers about the diuision of the earth.

The earth diuided into fiue parts, whereas Belforrest hath but foure, in Prefat. lib. 4.

Cape di bona Speranza.

The forme of the fift part.

